2. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 624; State v. Cox, 65 Mo. 29.

3. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 683; Russell v. Miller, 26 Mich. 1; Readman v. Conway, 126 Mass. 374; McGrath v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 63 N. Y. 522.

In Nolen v. State, 14 Tex. App. 474, 484, the court said: "Suppose a prisoner charged with murder is asked the question 'Are you guilty of murder?' and instead of saying 'I am' he makes an affirmative movement of his head. Would this movement of the head be admissible evidence, while his confession by words would be inadmissible? Suppose he were told,

2. Ground of Admissibility.—The confessions of prisoners are received in evidence upon the same principle upon which admissions in civil suits are received, viz., the presumption that a person will not make an untrue statement against his own interest.<sup>1</sup>

"You murdered the deceased; you crushed in his head with an axe; you dragged him into yonder thicket and left him, after having robbed him," and in response to this charge the prisoner had not uttered a word, but had nodded his head in assent to the truth of the same; will it be contended that the act of nodding his head, because it is an act and not a statement or declaration, is competent evidence against him, when, if he had confessed the charge by words, such confession would have been excluded? We are unable to perceive the reason of the rule which admits the acts while it excludes the words. Acts, it is said, speak louder than words, and this being generally true, they should be regarded as confessions, as much so as words, and the law does so regard them. Acts are but a kind of language, expressing the emotions and thoughts of the person performing them, more forcibly and convincing sometimes than words, but still, like words, only a medium through which the inward feelings, thoughts, or intents of the person are outwardly indicated.

"In the case before us the prisoner pointed in the direction of where the body of deceased had been found, when asked what they had done with deceased. Instead of this response to the question, suppose he had said: 'We left the dead body of deceased on yonder hillside.' Would this answer have been admissible? We think not under the long line of decisions in this State. How, then, can it be said that his gesture is competent evidence? Upon what principle is this distinction founded? Can a confession be indirectly admissible which would not be directly so? Would not such a construction of the law defeat its purposes? Would it not probably lead to great evils? Under such a rule, extorted confessions of guilt, made by nods, winks, gestures, and other acts would be frequently paraded in cases to supply the absence of sufficient evidence to establish the guilt of the accused. Such evidence would be easily attainable in most cases, and would be as unreliable and objectionable in every respect as confessions by word. As said by Roscoe and Greenleaf: 'The influence which might produce a groundless confession might also produce groundless conduct.' Rosc. Cr. Ev. 51; 1 Greenl. Ev. sec. 232. In this case, for illustration, the same influences which might have prompted the defendant to confess by words that he committed the murder might have prompted him to point in the direction where the dead body of the murdered had been found. Both the above questions standard authors lay down the rule the acts of the prisoner are in such cases placed upon the same plane with his words, and where the one is inadmissible, so is the other."

1. 1 Phill. Ev. (9th Ed.) 397; Roscoe Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 40; Whar. Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) § 627; Greenleaf's Ev. (14th Ed.) 213; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; 18 Am. Dec. 404; Com. v. Knapp, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 477; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 181; Com. v. Galligan, 113 Mass. 202; Com. v. Sanborn, 116 Mass. 61; People v. McCall, 1 Wheel. C. C. (N. Y.) 108; People v. Harriden, 1 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 108; Smith v. Com., 10 Gratt. (Va.) 734; State v. Jefferson, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 305; State v. Huntley, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 418; Burns v. Com., 12 Bush (Ky.), 181; Campbell v. State, 23 Ala. 44; Morgan v. State, 11 Ala. 289; Elland v. State, 52 Ala. 192; Keithler v. State, 10 S. & M. (Miss.) 192.

"Degree of Credit to be Given to.—"As to the degree of credit which should be attached to a confession, much difference of opinion has existed. By some it has been considered as forming the highest and most satisfactory evidence of guilt. Per Grose, J., delivering the opinion of the judges in R. v. Lambe, 2 Leach, 1137. 'The voluntary confession of the prisoner, if made in the face of the law, and against his interest,' says Chief Baron Gilbert, 'is reckoned the best evidence; for, if a man swears for his own interest can give credit, he must certainly give most credit when he swears against it.' Gilb. 137. So it is stated by the court in R. v. Warwickshall, 1 Leach, 263, that a voluntary confession is deserving of the highest credit, because it is presumed to flow from the highest sense of guilt; therefore it is admitted as proof of the crime to which it refers. On the other hand it is said by Mr. Justice Foster (Discour. 243), that hasty confessions made to persons having no authority to examine are the weakest and most suspicious of evidence. Proof may be too easily procured, words are often misreported, through ignorance, inattention, or malice, and are extremely liable to misconstruction. Moreover, this evidence is not, in the u course of things, to be disproved by that sort of negative evidence by which the proof of plain facts may be, and often is, frustrated. This opinion has also been adopted by Blackstone. 4 Com. 357. It has been said that it is not to be conceived that a man would be induced to make a free and voluntary confession of guilt, so contrary to the feelings and principles of human nature, if the facts confessed were true. 1 Phill. Ev. (7th Ed.) 110. It cannot be doubted, however, that instances have occasionally occurred in which innocent persons have confessed themselves guilty of crimes of the gravest nature. Three men were tried and convicted of the murder of H. One of them confessed himself guilty of the fact, under a promise of pardon; the confession, therefore, was not given in evidence against him, and a few years afterwards it appeared that H. was alive. MS. case, cited 1 Leach, 264 n. See Boorn Case, 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th Ed.) 214 n; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107; 4 Western Law Jour. 25; Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 634.

"Mr. Phillips also, after stating that in criminal cases a confession carries with it a greater probability of truth than a confession in civil suits, the consequences being more serious and highly penal, and alluding to the maxim, habemus optimum testem confitentem reum, adds, "but it is to be observed there may not unfrequently be motives of hopes and fear, inducing a person to make an untrue confession, which motives operate in the case of admissions. And further, in consequence also of the universal eagerness and zeal which prevail at the detection of guilt when offences are of an aggravated character, in consequence also of the necessity of using testimony of suspicious witnesses for the discovery of secret crimes, the evidence of confessions is subject, in a very remarkable degree, to the imperfections attaching generally to hearsay evidence. See per Anderson, B., R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P. 1. Also 5 C. & P. 542. For these reasons the statements of prisoners are often excluded from being given in evidence in cases where they would be unobjectionable as to the admission of a party in a civil suit." 1 Phill. Ev. (10th Ed.) 12." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 41.

A confession, freely and voluntarily made, is evidence of the most satisfactory character. But the presumption upon which weight is given to such evidence, namely, that an innocent man will not impair his safety or prejudice his interests by an untrue statement, ceases when the confession appears to have been made either in consequence of inducements of a temporal nature held out by one in authority, touching the charge preferred, or because of a threat or promise made by, or in the presence of, such person, in reference to such charge. Hopt v. U. S., 110 U. S. 574.

A voluntary confession of one accused of crime, whether made before his apprehension or after his commitment, is admissible against him. State v. Suggs, 89 N. Car. 527; Adams v. Utley, 87 N. Car. 356; State v. Efler, 85 N. Car. 585; Com. v. Sanborn, 116 Mass. 61; State v. Brown, 48 Iowa, 553.

A confession of a defendant in a criminal action voluntarily made is competent evidence against him, although made when he was under arrest. People v. Druse, 103 N. Y. 655.

Where a crime has been committed, the admissions of a party charged with the crime, deliberately made, are admissible, and the jury may convict on such evidence, if they believe it sufficient. Andrews v. People, 7 N. East. Repr. (Ill.) 265.

A defendant, charged with the crime of burglary with intent to commit murder, consented to a mistrial and pleaded "guilty of larceny;" and he was thereupon sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary. Held, that his confession of being guilty of a crime not charged in the indictment warranted no judgment against him. State v. Queen, 91 N. Car. 659. See Fletcher v. State, 12 Ark. 169; State v. Symonds, 57 Me. 148; Sutton v. Johnson, 62 Ill. 209.

A confession is not rendered inoperative by a subsequent retraction of it. Jones v. State, 13 Tex. 168; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 550.

Defendant's declarations made after the commission of a homicide that he was sane when he committed it, are admissible against him for what they are worth. State v. Kring, 74 Mo. 612.

It being already in proof in a trial for theft of money that the defendant and her little daughter were arrested for the offence, and that disclosures made by the latter induced the officer to take the defendant to her house, with expectation of recovering the money there, the State was further allowed, over objection by the defence, to prove that the defendant, after reaching her home, and while still in arrest and uncautioned, voluntarily raised a plank and seemed to be searching under it for the money. Held, that there was no error in allowing this act of the defendant to be put in evidence. It was not a "confession." Rhodes v. State, 11 Tex. App. 563.

The State may prove any voluntary admissions made by the defendant, but the defendant has no right to prove admissions made by himself to another person at a different time. Butler v. State, 34 Ark. 480.

Evidence of confessions is the weakest and the least to be relied on of any evidence known to be competent in law. Vaugh v. Hann, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 341.

The State is not obliged to accept the confession of the accused, but may prove the case by other evidence. Com. v. Miller, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 243.

It is error to instruct a jury that an admission by the prisoner is as good proof of his guilt as would be the evidence of an eyewitness of the crime. Terry v. Farrell, 9 Pac. Repr. (Mont.) 536.

Innocence.—Confessions made in jest or without sincerity have no weight. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 626.

Sleep.—Words spoken in sleep are not admissible. People v. Robinson, 19 Cal. 40.

Mistake.—A confession made under a mistake of fact will be disregarded. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 625; Hall v. Huse, 10 Mass. 39; State v. Brown, 1 Mo. App. 86; State v. Welch, 7 Port. (Ala.) 463. Compare Blackburn v. Commonwealth, 12 Bush (Ky.), 181.

Statement by an Interpreter.—A statement to a third party, by an interpreter, of admissions by the accused, though made in their presence, cannot bind them, when it appears that they did not understand the language in which it was made. Evidence of a statement made by an interpreter as to admissions made to him is hearsay evidence, and inadmissible. Territory v. Big Knot, 11 Pac. Repr. (Mont.) 670.

Intoxication.—Where a prisoner made a statement to a constable in whose custody he was, but he was drunk at the time; and it was imputed that the constable had given him liquor to cause him to be so, and it was objected that what the prisoner said under such circumstances was not admissible, Coleridge, J., said: "I am of opinion that a statement being made by a prisoner while he was drunk is not, therefore, inadmissible against him; and that, to render a confession inadmissible, it must either be obtained by hope or fear. This is matter of observation from me upon the weight that ought to attach to this statement, when it is considered by the jury." R. v. Spilsbury, 7 C. & P. 187. In a note to this case, 1 Phill. Ev. 465, it is observed, "The facts of the case as reported do not warrant the marginal note, which is as follows: 'Sed, if a constable give him (the prisoner) liquor to make him drunk, in the hope of his saying something that will not render the statement inadmissible, but it will be matter of observation for the judge in his summing up.' It is not to be inferred from the case that a confession—so immorally, not to say criminally, extorted—would be received." The principle, however, on which the decision turned would seem to warrant the marginal note, as the mere giving liquor without any inducement in words could not operate as an inducement either by exciting hope of escape or fear of punishment. It is to be observed, also, that in all the cases where confessions have been excluded there has been an anticipation of benefit or injury after the confessing or non-confessing. Where liquor is given, the benefit (if it can be called any) is received already, and nothing further is in expectation. 3 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 369, note. See State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 278.

When the corpus delicti is proved, confessions made voluntarily, though the prisoner was intoxicated, if corroborated by circumstances, are sufficient to sustain a conviction. Williams v. State, 12 Lea (Tenn.), 211.

A confession made by a prisoner, under the influence of liquor furnished him with the consent of the officer having him in charge, but not influenced by anything said to him by the officer, held to be admissible in evidence. People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533.

Intoxication of the accused at the time when he may have made a confession would have affected the weight of the confession as evidence against himself, but would not go to exclude the confession from being put in evidence. State v. Grear, 28 Minn. 426; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 296; Whitney v. State, 8 Mo. 165; Eskridge v. State, 25 Ala. 30; Lester v. State, 32 Ark. 727; Com. v. Howe, 9 Gray (Mass.), 110.

Confessions made by one while intoxicated and suffering from delirium tremens are admissible; the weight to be given to such confession is for the jury. State v. Feltes, 51 Iowa, 495.

Confessions made by one so intoxicated as not to understand them are no evidence of guilt. Whether a party making confessions was so much under the influence of intoxicating liquor as not to understand what he was confessing, is a question for the jury. Com. v. Howe, 9 Gray (Mass.), 110.

Adultery.—A confession, to be entitled to any material weight as evidence of adultery, must not only be shown to be free from collusion, but, when made by the wife, must also be shown to have been made freely, without compulsion or undue influence on the part of the husband; and it must also appear that the husband has not caused it to be prepared as a means of formal proof. Summerbell v. Summerbell, 37 N. J. Eq. 603. In this case Barker Gummere, Esq., filed an opinion, in which the cases are thus reviewed:

"In Williams v. Williams, 1 Hagg. 299, the confession was contained in a letter from the alleged adulteress to her sister, and there was proof aliunde that she frequently visited her alleged paramour and was with him alone at his lodgings, yet a divorce was refused.

"In Mortimer v. Mortimer, 2 Hagg. 310, the confession was made by the alleged adulteress when in articulo mortis, as she supposed, both to her husband and her sister-in-law, and was set forth in the husband's complaint, which was excepted to on the ground that the confession alone was insufficient, and that no other acts or facts were averred which were sufficient to sustain it, and the exception was sustained.

"In Harris v. Harris, 2 Hagg. 376, it was proved that the wife had conducted herself with general levity, had been very attentive to her alleged paramour and jealous of his attentions to other women; and on the occasion of a picnic party had persuaded another lady to separate themselves from the party and go into the wood, and that on arriving in the wood the wife 'whooped' until the paramour joined them; her companion, who was gathering flowers, observing the pair reclining on a bank, he with his arm round her waist, called to the wife to come away, and upon her refusing to do so, she left the pair in that position. Subsequently, upon being told by a friend of her husband that the paramour had admitted that he on that occasion had sexual intercourse with her, she did not deny it, but exclaimed, 'He is a dirty scoundrel,' and then said she knew it was impossible to live with her husband after what had happened, and that she would leave his house if promised that there should be no further investigation of her conduct. The entire absence of other proof than the confession in Mortimer v. Mortimer; the absence of any proof of personal familiarities or of indications of illicit affection in Williams v. Williams, although imprudent conduct and abundant opportunities were clearly proved, and the presence of proof in Harris v. Harris of illicit affection, of rendezvous, and of familiarities, position of parties, and circumstances leading to the very brink of the adulteries, sufficiently indicate the reasons for the status assigned to the confessions in the respective causes.

"In Burgess v. Burgess, 2 Hagg. 223, the wife confessed her adultery to her husband, and afterwards admitted to a third person that she had so confessed, the proof aliunde was that her paramour, an inmate of her husband's house, paid her constant attentions; that she desired his attentions, and always wanted to sit next to him; that he sat so close to her as almost to be in her lap; that they took every opportunity to be alone together; that when on a fishing party they went off together to a spot a half-mile distant from the party; that when both were visiting a friend, she was seen coming out of her paramour's chamber, in which he was then present; that both left the drawing-room, and were absent about an hour, and on their return that both were flurried and a good deal heated. The confession was deemed to be sufficiently supported, and a divorce was decreed.

"In Noverre v. Noverre, 1 Rob. 428, the wife confessed her adultery to two persons other than her husband, and the proof aliunde was that the husband (a surgeon) left his house daily early in the morning, and was absent, generally, until evening; that the paramour, a pupil of the husband and an inmate of his house, sought the wife as soon as the husband left the house, and spent the time of his absence in her company in the drawing-room, walking in the garden, and sitting in the arbor, and that when the husband's return was announced they immediately separated; that she was often in the bedroom of her paramour when he was there sometimes for ten minutes at a time; that the wife and paramour retired for the night much earlier than the husband, who sat up to a late hour; and that the wife often came out of her room in her dressing-gown and stood on the stairs talking to the paramour until the servants went to bed, passing them and leaving them standing on the stairs, and that they behaved like lovers. The court held that extreme familiarity and ample opportunity being proved, and being convinced that the confessions were genuine, the spirit of the canon was not violated by pronouncing for a divorce.

"In Owen v. Owen, 4 Hagg. 261, the wife confessed her adultery in letters to a person other than her husband, and the proof aliunde was of great intimacy with the paramour; that on one occasion he passed the night at her house, while her husband was absent; that on two other occasions she was absent from her husband's house all night, and refused to say where she had been, although proved not to have been at the house of the friend to which she had said she was going; and that she had tried to suborn witnesses to testify that on those occasions she slept where no suspicion could attach to her. The court held that there was no collusion in the confessions, and as there was sufficient evidence to corroborate them, a divorce should be ordered.

"In Grant v. Grant, 2 Curteis, 16, the confessions of the wife's adultery were contained in her letters to her paramour, and the proof aliunde was that there was great intimacy between them; and on one occasion improper personal liberties on his part; and that on another occasion he passed the night at her house during the absence of her husband; and that this visit was concealed from the husband. The court held that the letters were sufficiently corroborated, and a divorce was decreed.

"In Tucker v. Tucker, 11 Jur. 893, the confession of the wife's adultery was contained in a letter from the wife to the husband's father; and the proof aliunde was that after her husband sent her from his house, she went with her alleged paramour to a distant city, and there took lodgings and passed the night; there was no proof of improper intimacy between them before the confession. The court, without advertg to the corroborating circumstances subsequent to the confession, decreed a divorce seemingly upon the sole ground that the confession was not collusive. This ruling, if so intended, is certainly a relaxation of the rule theretofore enforced, but it does not seem to have been followed in subsequent cases.

"Thus in Deane v. Deane, 12 Jur. 63, the wife, while on a visit to a friend, left her house and went to the house of a young unmarried officer, and stayed there with him for a fortnight, refusing to leave him when requested to do so by her friend. Subsequently she wrote to her husband expressing her remorse for her guilty conduct, and though the confession was plainly free from collusion, yet the divorce was decreed, not upon the confession alone, but upon the whole testimony.

"And in Shulldham's Divorce, 12 Cl. & Fin. 363, a letter from the wife to the husband, confessing adultery, was held not to be sufficient evidence of adultery; but upon a commission being issued, it was further proved that the wife had been very intimate with the paramour in India; that she went with some friends, with her husband's consent, to the Cape of Good Hope, was soon joined there by her paramour, and after a time returned with him to India, and there lived with him and gave birth to a child more than a year after leaving her husband, and upon a divorce was decreed.

"It is clear, therefore, that up to the time of the institution of the matrimonial court, no divorce was, in fact, granted in England solely upon the unsupported confession of the criminated party, as judged by the court to have been made without collusion. Although Dr. Lushington, in his later decisions, was inclined to magnify the importance of apparent non-collusive confessions, yet in No. v. Noverre he clearly states the fundamental difficulty in these words: 'The tribunal is to be trusted with the power to determine that which is impossible, namely, whether such a confession is genuine or not.'

"There are cases in the United States which seem to adjudge that a divorce may be decreed upon the confession alone, if the court be satisfied from surrounding circumstances that it was made without collusion. Tewksbury v. Tewksbury, How. (Miss.) 109; Matchin v. Matchin, 6 Pa. St. 332. But it is to be noted that in both of these cases there was, in fact, strong corroborative proof of the fact of adultery. The only case that I have found, in which a divorce has been granted solely upon a confession admitted to have been made without collusion, is Billings v. Billings, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 461.

"In our State the rigidity of the rule seems not to have been relaxed. The confession of the criminated party has not been uniformly required to be supported by proof of the fact of adultery; and the courts have treated confessions as only evidence of suspicion. Thus, in Clutch v. Clutch, 10 Sax. (N. J.) 474, the following language is used: 'In cases of this kind the court takes the confessions of parties with great caution, and they are never sufficient without strong corroborative circumstances.' In Miller v. Miller, 10 Green Ch. (N. J.) 139: 'These admissions are not to be received as a general confession with much faith, they are competent only when connected with other proof, but not otherwise. The reason assigned is, that there is great danger of collusion between the parties, or of confessions being extorted. And in Jones v. Jones, 2 C. E. (N. J.), 351, the present chief justice, acting as master, observes: 'Indeed, the approved rule of law appears to be that a divorce will not be granted where the admissions of the criminated party constitute the entire basis upon which the conclusion of guilt. Such evidence, it is said, may convince to a moral ity; but it does not fill the measure of al proof.' To these authoritative denunciations must be added the well-considered words of Chancellor Kent. He is in Betts v. Betts, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 197: 'The party's confession may and should aid other proofs, but the decree must rest alone, nor perhaps, essentially, on such confessions; for there is great danger of collusion between the parties, of confessions extorted, or made deviously to furnish means of evidence.' These confessions, therefore, are to be received in this case with jealousy, and to be weighed with caution, and to be supported with facts and circumstances tending to demonstrate the charge to the satisfaction of the court." See Hughes, 19 Ala. 307; Moyler v. Moyler, 11 Ala. 620; Buckholtz v. Buckholtz, Ga. 239; Woolfolk v. Woolfolk, 53 Ga. 661; Armstrong v. Armstrong, 32 N. J. 279; Stibbins v. Stibbins, 1 Met. 476; Latham v. Latham, 30 Gratt. 307; Matchin v. Matchin, 6 Pa. St. 36; Derby v. Derby, 21 N. J. Eq. 36; Clutch v. Clutch, 1 N. J. Eq. 474; Müller v. Müller, 1 N. J. Eq. 386; s. c., 2 N. J. Eq. 354; Callender v. Callender, 53 How. Pr. 364; Betts v. Betts, 1 Johns. Ch. 197; Roe v. Doe, 1 Johns. Cas. 25; Lyon v. Lyon, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 138; Billings v. Billings, 11 Pick. 461; Robbins v. Robbins, 100 N. H. 150; White v. White, 45 N. H. 103; Richardson v. Richardson, 50 Vt. 458; Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal. 103; True v. True, 6 Minn. 458; Brainard v. Brainard, Wright (Ohio), 354.

3. Nature and Effect.—Confessions may be divided into two classes: judicial and extrajudicial. They may also be divided into plenary and non-plenary. A plenary judicial confession, i.e., a confession made by the accused before a tribunal competent to try him, is sufficient whereon to found a conviction.<sup>1</sup>

A plenary judicial confession is in other words a plea of guilty. An extrajudicial confession is good evidence, but not conclusive, even though plenary. Whether or not a plenary extrajudicial confession, uncorroborated in any way whatever, is sufficient whereon to found a conviction, has been the subject of some discussion.<sup>2</sup>

Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 40; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 26 N. J. Eq. 497.

is said by Lord Hale that, where the prisoner freely tells the fact, and declares the opinion of the court whether it is felony, though upon the fact thus it appears to be felony, the court must not record his confession, but admit him to plead to the felony not guilty. 2 P. C. 225.

A confession of guilt in open court, in the presence of the jury, is evidence enough to sustain a conviction. Dantz v. State, 87 Ind. 398.

Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 40.

It is said to have been decided to be so in R. v. Wheeling, 1 Leach Cr. Ca. 311 n; but it seems doubtful whether the language is to be taken in the unqualified sense which, at first sight, it appears to bear. The subject is ably discussed by Mr. Greaves in a note to 3 Russ. on Cr. (4th Ed.) 366; and he is of opinion that it has never been expressly decided that the mere confession of a prisoner alone, and without any other evidence, is sufficient to warrant a conviction. He says: "In Greenleaf's Evid. § 217, it is observed, 'In each of the English cases usually cited in favor of the sufficiency of this evidence, there was some corroborative circumstance. Wheeling's case seems to be an exception, but it is too briefly reported to be relied on. In the United States the prisoner's confession when the corpus delicti is not otherwise proved, has been held insufficient for his conviction; and this opinion certainly best accords with the humanity of the criminal code, and with the great degree of caution applied in receiving and weighing the evidence of confessions in other cases, and it seems countenanced by approved writers on this branch of the law,' citing Guild's Case, 5 Halst. (N. J.) 163, 185; Long's Case, 1 Hayw. 524 (455); 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 46, s. 36. The statement in 1 Leach, 311, is that in R. v. Fisher, 'The facts of W.'s house having been broken open in the night time, and the goods mentioned in the indictment stolen therefrom, were clearly proved; but there was no other evidence to fix those facts on the prisoner than his confession made before the committing magistrate, and there being no evidence that this confession was not reduced to writing, viva-vox testimony of it was rejected. But in the case of Wheeling it was determined that a prisoner may be convicted on his own confession, when proved by legal testimony, although it is totally uncorroborated by any other evidence.' This statement may mean that where the commission of a felony is proved by independent evidence, a prisoner may be convicted on his confession, though there be nothing to corroborate that confession as to his being the party who committed such felony; and the manner in which Wheeling's case is introduced plainly shows that that is the meaning of the statement. In R. v. Eldridge, R. & R. 440, on an indictment for stealing a mare, it appeared that the mare was seen on the 9th of October in the afternoon in the possession of one of the prosecutor's servants, who was taking it towards one of his fields, but neither that servant nor the prosecutor were called as witnesses; the mare was not found in the prosecutor's possession on the 11th of October. The prisoner had the mare in his possession on the 13th, and sold her under her value. A full confession before a magistrate was proved, and the prisoner convicted. The judges held 'that there was sufficient evidence to confirm the confession.' It is to be observed that, independently of the confession, the case was complete, with the exception of proving that the mare was put in the prosecutor's field by his servant. See R. v. Yend, 6 C. & P. 176; and R. v. Fellows, 6 C. & P. 176. In R. v. Falkner and Bond, 1 Den. C. C. 517, on an indictment for robbing one H., he was called on his recognizances, but did not appear, and the prisoner, F., had been desirous to send a message to H. to keep him from appearing. The only other evidence was that B. had confessed the offence to the constable who apprehended him, and that both the prisoners, on hearing the depositions read over to them which contained the charge, had admitted that they were guilty; the depositions charged the prisoners with robbing H. of certain quantities of copper. The prisoners were found guilty, and the judges held the conviction right, but no reason is stated for the decision. It is clear that the depositions were read in evidence at the trial, for their contents are stated in the case; and they were admissible, 1st, as showing the charge of which the prisoners admitted that they were guilty; 2d, if there were, as there seems to have been, evidence that the prosecutor was kept away by means of the prisoners. In R. v. White and Langdon, R. & R. 508, on an indictment for stealing oats, the prosecutor proved that he had sometimes more, sometimes less, than 300 quarters of oats in his granary, the door of which had been fastened with a padlock, and was found by the prosecutor unhinged and drawn back on the 24th of December. At half-past two o'clock that morning two men were seen by a witness coming from the prosecutor's yard, each of them having a sack on his back, but the witness did not say that the men were the prisoners. White on the same day was in possession of some bags of black Irish kiln dried oats, of the same kind as those in the granary of the prosecutor, who could not, however, swear that he had lost any of his oats; each prisoner made an explicit confession of the offence, which was proved, and the prisoners found guilty; and the judges held the conviction right. In R. v. Tippet, R. & R. 509, which was an indictment for stealing oats from the same prosecutor, the same evidence was given as in the preceding case, with the addition that the prisoner was under-hostler in the prosecutor's stables, and a confession by the prisoner of his having stolen the oats in company with the prisoners in the preceding case was put in, and the prisoner convicted; and seven of the learned judges (all who met on the occasion) were of opinion that the conviction was right, 'as there was not only the confession but the evidence of the prosecutor also, which made it probable that oats had been stolen, as it appeared from such evidence that the door of the granary had been broken open, and most of the learned judges thought that, without the owner's evidence, the prisoner's confession was evidence upon which the jury might have convicted.' See R. v. Burton, Dears. C. C. 282, and the dictum of Maule, J. In R. v. Tuffs, 5 C. & P. 167, the prisoner was indicted for stealing two heifers, which were not missed by the prosecutor or any person in his service, and the only evidence against the prisoner was his own statement, when questioned on the subject, that he had driven away two heifers from his uncle's premises, 'The World's End Dolver'; the prosecutor and another person proved that the prosecutor's farm was called by that name, but they could not undertake to say that there was not any other of that name; Lord Lyndhurst, upon this, told the jury that under the circumstances, there was not any evidence of a stealing as to the heifers of the prosecutor; though if it had been proved that his was the only 'World's End Dolver,' it would have been sufficient. It does not, therefore, appear that it has ever been expressly decided that the mere confession of a prisoner alone, and without any other evidence, is sufficient to warrant a conviction. In R. v. Edgar, Monmouth Spr. Ass. 1831. MSS. C. S. G., the prisoner was indicted for obtaining money of a friendly society by false pretences; the rules of the society had not been enrolled, but the prisoner, who was a member of the society, had acted under them, and it was contended that he had thereby admitted their validity, and the position in the text was cited as a stronger decision; on which Patterson, J., said: 'Could a man be convicted of murder on his confession alone, without any proof of the person being killed? I doubt whether he could.' In R. v. Sutcliffe, 5 Cox C. C. 270, where a robbery had been committed on a moonlight night, Cresswell, J., left the case to the jury on confessions of the prisoner, though the prosecutor swore the prisoner was not one of the men who robbed him. The remark on this case is that the prosecutor might be in error; the prisoner must know whether he was guilty or not."

In Law v. Merrills, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 268, Walworth, Chan., said, "Evidence to establish a fact by the confessions of the party should always be scrutinized and received with caution; as it is the most dangerous evidence that can be admitted in a court of justice, and the most liable to abuse. Although a witness is perfectly honest, it is impossible, in most cases, for him to give the exact words in which an admission was made. And sometimes even the transposition of the words of a party may give a meaning entirely different from that which was intended to be conveyed to the witness." See Malin v. Malin, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 625; State v. Gardiner, Wright (Ohio) 392; Fouts v. State, 8 Ohio St. 98; People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 663; Com. v. Galligan, 113 Mass. 202; U. S. v. Nott, 1 McLean (U. S.) 499.

The testimony of a witness called to prove a confession is inadmissible if he does not remember the substance of all that was said at the time. Berry v. Commonwealth, 10 Bush (Ky.), 15; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 272; People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 663. Compare Westmoreland v. State, 45 Ga. 225.

A conversation between a husband and wife may be proved by a bystander who overhears it. Com. v. Griffin, 110 Mass. 181.

Where a fellow-prisoner conversed with the accused through the soil-pipes, held, that a confession thus made was admissible. Brown v. Com., 76 Pa. St. 319.

A sheriff must give evidence of voluntary statements made by the prisoner after his arrest. People v. Rodundo, 44 Cal. 538.

Corroboration.—When the confession of the accused is corroborated by extraneous facts—as, in this case, by the discovery of a part of the stolen goods, in consequence of a statement made by him, in the possession of a particular person recently after the burglary—it is competent to prove to the jury his statement and the corroborating fact of the discovery; but this does not render competent his confession, at the same time, that he committed the burglary and larceny, if such confession was improperly procured by promises or threats. Murphy v. State, 63 Ala. 1. See People v. Jones, 32 Cal. 80. Compare Sampson v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 200; State v. Mortimer, 20 Kans. 93.

While confessions of guilt should be received with great caution, and will not, alone, justify a conviction, yet if they should be corroborated by circumstances, they would be sufficient for that purpose. Anderson v. State, 72 Ga. 98; Nesbit v. State, 43 Ga. 239; Pitts v. State, 43 Miss. 472; Johnson v. State, 59 Ala. 37; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 705; State v. German, 54 Mo. 526; Bergen v. People, 17 Ill. 426; People v. Ruloff, 3 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 401; Lyon v. Lyon, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 138; Terry v. McClint, 1 Mont. 394; Strait v. State, 43 Tex. 486; Laros v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 200; Sampson v. State, 54 Ala. 241; Territory v. Farrell, 6 Montana, 12; Berry v. State, 4 Tex. App. 492; Smith v. State, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 809; State v. Gardiner, Wright (Ohio), 392; People v. Hennessey, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 147; People v. Thrall, 50 Cal. 415; State v. Knowles, 48 Iowa, 598; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305. Compare State v. Cowan, 7 Fred. (N. Car.) 239; Stephen v. State, 11 Ga. 225.

But such suppletory evidence need not be conclusive in its character. When a confession is made, and the circumstances therein related correspond in some points with those proven to have existed, this may be evidence sufficient to satisfy a jury in rendering a verdict asserting the guilt of the accused. "Full proof of the body of the crime, the corpus delicti, independently of the confession, is not required by any of the cases; and in many of them slight corroborating facts were held sufficient." State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 705; People v. Badgley, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 53; People v. Hennessey, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 147, and cases cited; Bergen v. People, 17 Ill. 426; State v. Lamb, 28 Mo. 218; Daniel v. State, 63

Ga. 339; People v. Ruloff, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 401.

When upon a criminal trial there is, in addition to a confession of the defendant, proof of circumstances which, although they may have an innocent construction, are calculated to suggest the commission of the crime, and for the explanation of which the confession furnishes the key, there is sufficient "additional proof that the crime charged has been committed" to warrant a conviction, within the meaning of the provision of the Code of Civ. Proc. (§ 395) requiring such proof. A confession under said provision is competent proof both of the criminal agency of the defendant and of the body of the crime, but insufficient as to the latter to warrant a conviction without corroboration. People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182.

Where the fact of the commission of a larceny is shown by other and direct evidence, the defendant may be convicted of the same by proof of his admissions or confessions, deliberately made. Andrews v. People, 117 Ill. 195; Selvidge v. State, 30 Tex. 60.

Where, on a trial for murder, there is evidence to prove motive on the part of the defendant, as well as actual participation in the crime, admissions made by him to the effect that he was asked to take part in the murder, but declined, promising, however, to say nothing about the matter, are relevant and competent evidence, as they tend to show that the defendant was at any rate an accessory before the fact. Ettinger v. Commonwealth, 98 Pa. St. 338.

Proof of admissions by a prisoner, which, though they themselves do not involve his guilt, tend in connection with other facts to prove it, is competent, even without preliminary proof that they were voluntarily made. People v. Le Roy, 4 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 649.

Any circumstances tending to show the guilt of the accused may be proved, although brought to light by a declaration inadmissible per se, as having been obtained by improper influence. So evidence as to the condition of the prisoner's hand at the time of holding the inquest is admissible, although the prisoner was then compelled to exhibit her hand by the coroner, after objection on her part. State v. Garrett, 71 N. Car. 85. See White v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 338.

Declarations Accompanying the Delivery of Stolen Property—Whether Admissible.—Declarations accompanying an act done have been admitted in evidence. The prisoner was tried for stealing a guinea and two promissory notes. The prosecutor was proceeding to state an inadmissible confession, when Chambre, J., stopped him, but permitted him to prove that the prisoner brought him a guinea and a £5 Reading Bank note, which he gave up to the prosecutor as the guinea and one of the notes that had been stolen from him. The learned judge told the jury that, notwithstanding the previous inducement to confess, the prisoner might receive the prisoner's description of the note, accompanying the act of delivering it up, as evidence that it was a stolen note. A majority of the judges (seven) held the conviction right. Lurence and Le Blanc, JJ., were of a contrary opinion, and Le Blanc said that the production of the money by the prisoner was alone admissible, and not that the confession said it was one of the notes stolen. v. Griffin, Russ. & Ry. 151. And see v. Jones, Russ. & Ry. 152, where the statement of the prisoner, on producing some money out of his pocket, that it was all he had left of it, was held inadmissible, the prosecutor having held out inducements to confess. Speaking of declarations accompanying an act, Phillips observes, "It may be thought that the only ground upon which such declarations can be received is, that they are explanatory of the act of delivery, and not a narrative of a past transaction." Phill. Ev. (8th Ed.) 432. Yates v. State, 1 S. Westn. Rep. (Ark.) 65; Strait v. State, 43 Tex. 486; White v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 338; State v. Garvey, 28 La. Ann. 925; Laros v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 200.

Proof of Corpus Delicti.—An extrajudicial confession of murder, uncorroborated, is insufficient to authorize conviction. Williams v. People, 101 Ill. 3; May v. People, 92 Ill. 343; State v. Knowles, 48 Iowa, 598; Smith v. State, 17 Neb. 358; Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 3; Smith v. State, 22 N. W. Repr. (Neb.) 780; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; State v. German, 54 Mo. 526; s. c., 14 A. Rep. 481; State v. Scott, 39 Mo. 4; State v. Lamb, 25 Mo. 218; Yates v. State, 1 S. Westn. Rep. (Ark.) 65; People v. Lane, 49 Mich. 340; People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349; State v. Davidson, Vt. 377; Com. v. McCann, 97 Mass. 5; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; People v. Badgley, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 53; People v. Hennessey, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 147; People v. Ruloff, 3 Park. Cr. 401; People v. Bennett, 49 N. Y. 137; People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182; State v. Guild, 10 N. H. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 304; Com. v. Pettit, 8 Phila. 608; Com. v. Hanlon, 10 Brews. (Pa.) 461; Smith v. State, 21 Gr.

4. Must be Free and Voluntary.—A confession, in order to be admissible, must be free and voluntary: that is, must not be extracted by any sort of threats or violence, nor obtained by any direct or implied promises, however slight, nor by the exertion of any improper influence, because under such circumstances the party may

State v. Stringfellow, 26 Miss. 809; Brown v. State, 32 Miss. 433, 33 Miss. 347; Pitts v. State, 43 Miss. 472; Winkus v. State, 41 Miss. 582; Winslow v. State, 76 Ala. 42; Matthews v. State, Ala. 187; Mose v. State, 36 Ala. 211; Johnson v. State, 59 Ala. 37; People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565; People v. Ah How, Cal. 218; People v. Thrall, 50 Cal. 5; Butler v. Commonwealth, 2 Duvall 435; Tyner v. State, 3 Humph. 383; Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 631; Stephen v. State, 11 Ga. 225; Earp v. State, 55 Ga. 136; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 1; Daniel v. State, 63 Ga. 339; State v. Cowan, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 239; State v. Lewis, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) No. 1, 307; S. v. Williams, 1 Clif. (U. S.) 5.

Where the accused has expressly admitted that he did murder the deceased, it is unnecessary that the dead body be positively and directly identified. It is sufficient that there be such extrinsic corroborative circumstances as will, taken in connection with the confession, prove conviction of defendant's guilt in the minds of the jury. State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695.

Winslow v. State, 76 Ala. 42. In this case there was evidence tending to show a fresh track in the lane leading from the road to the house; that this track, and the track of the defendant, corresponded; that the track, when first discovered, was burning from the outside, about six feet from the ground, at a part of the house in which there had been no fire during the night; that the fire occurred about midnight, and spread so rapidly that only one bed and bedding were saved. While there was some conflict in the testimony, and there was evidence tending to show that the burning may have been accidental, the evidence tending to show the corpus delicti is sufficient to lay a foundation on which to rest the admissibility of the confessions.

At the trial of a capital case it was shown that the deceased, a woman of middle age, suddenly disappeared, under circumstances which tended to show that her disappearance was involuntary, and at a time during which the prisoner was known to have been in the vicinity. The prisoner had more than once been heard threaten the life of the deceased, and had several times visited her house. About a year afterwards a human skull and a jaw-bone were found near the residence of the deceased showing the marks of deadly wounds. A lock of hair still attached to the skull was similar to that of the deceased, while the jaw-bone was identified as hers by persons who recognized peculiarities in its structure. Held, that these circumstances constituted sufficient proof of the corpus delicti to render a confession of the prisoner admissible in evidence. Gray v. Commonwealth, 101 Pa. St. 380; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 733.

In a trial for the theft of a horse the only evidence inculpatory of the accused was a confession imputed to him by the prosecuting witness, who, being the half-brother of the accused, justified his unnatural attitude by a desire to separate the accused from evil associates. The testimony of this witness was contradictory in various particulars of his own deposition at the examining trial, and material statements which he ascribed to the accused were inconsistent with the evidence of other witnesses. Aside from the putative confession, the only proof of the corpus delicti was the fact that the animal was missed from a certain field; and, on the other hand, there was proof that it was repeatedly seen on its accustomed range soon after its disappearance from the field. Held, that evidence proved neither the corpus delicti nor the culpability of the accused. Hill v. State, 11 Tex. App. 132.

A conviction may be had upon a judicial confession without proof of corpus delicti. Anderson v. State, 26 Ind. 89; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404.

Confession alone will warrant a conviction of misdemeanors, such as selling liquor contrary to statute. State v. Gilbert, 36 Vt. 145.

Where a letter calculated to induce the purchase of counterfeit money was sent through the mail, held, that the mailing of the letter and the letter itself, showing its unlawful character, constitute the corpus delicti. That defendant was the sender may be proved by his admissions to that effect. U. S. v. Jones, 10 Fed. Repr. 469.

have been influenced to say what is not true, and the supposed confession cannot safely be acted upon.<sup>1</sup>

1. 3 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 367; State v. Grant, 21 Me. 171; State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510, s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510; State v. Phelps, 11 Vt. 116; State v. Carr, 37 Vt. 191; State v. Walker, 34 Vt. 296; State v. Howard, 17 N. H. 171; State v. Squires, 48 N. H. 364; State v. Wentworth, 37 N. H. 196; State v. York, 37 N. H. 175; Com. v. Nott, 135 Mass. 269; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Com. v. Cullen, 111 Mass. 435; Com. v. Cuffee, 108 Mass. 285; Com. v. Preece, 5 N. Eastn. Rep. (Mass.) 494; Com. v. Knapp, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 496; Lambeth v. State, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 322; Com. v. Morey, 1 Gray (Mass.), 461; Com. v. Tuckerman, 10 Gray (Mass.), 173; Com. v. Whittemore, 11 Gray (Mass.), 201; Com. v. Taylor, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 605; Com. v. Howe, 2 Allen (Mass.), 153; State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166; Ward v. People, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 395; People v. Burns, 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 34; People v. Thoms, 3 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 256; O'Brien v. People, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 384; People v. Phillips, 42 N. Y. 200; People v. Wentz, 37 N. Y. 309; Cox v. People, 60 N. Y. 500; People v. Mondon, 103 N. Y. 211; People v. Druse, 103 N. Y. 655; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; Derby v. Derby, 21 N. J. Eq. 36; Laros v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. St. 200; Fife v. Commonwealth, 29 Pa. St. 429; Comm. v. Hanlon, 3 Brew. (Pa.) 461; State v. Harman, 3 Harr. (Del.) 567; State v. Bostick, 4 Harr. (Del.) 563; Nicholson v. State, 28 Md. 140; Smith v. Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 734; Vaughn v. Commonwealth, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 576; Thompson v. Commonwealth, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 724; State v. Mills, 91 N. Car. 581; State v. Patrick, 3 Jones (N. Car.), 443; State v. Lowhorne, 66 N. Car. 538; State v. Whitefield, 70 N. Car. 356; State v. Freeman, 1 Speers (S. Car.), 57; State v. Gossett, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 428; Metzger v. State, 18 Fla. 481; Simon v. State, 5 Fla. 285; Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705; Garrard v. State, 50 Miss. 147; Jordan v. State, 32 Miss. 382; Simmons v. State, 61 Miss. 243; Dick v. State, 30 Miss. 593; Cady v. State, 44 Miss. 332; Owen v. State, 78 Ala. 425; Kelly v. State, 72 Ala. 244; Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Redd v. State, 69 Ala. 255; Murphy v. State, 63 Ala. 1; Porter v. State, 55 Ala. 95; Dinah v. State, 39 Ala. 359; Miller v. State, 40 Ala. 54; Aaron v. State, 37 Ala. 106; Mose v. State, 36 Ala. 211;

Levison v. State, 54 Ala. 520; Bristol v. State, 26 Ala. 107; Ward v. State, 50 Ala. 120; Wyatt v. State, 25 Ala. 9; Frazer v. State, 28 Ala. 9; Joe v. State, 38 Ala. 422; Byrd v. State, 68 Ga. 661; State v. State, 11 Ga. 225; Jim v. State, 15 Ga. 535; Rafe v. State, 20 Ga. 60; Dummett v. State, 63 Ga. 600; Frain v. State, 48 Ga. 529; Earp v. State, 55 Ga. 136; s. c., 46 Am. Cr. Rep. 171; Johnson v. State, 605; State v. Garvey, 28 La. 925; State v. Revells, 34 La. Ann. 805; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 436; State v. Nelson, 3 La. 497; Strait v. State, 43 Tex. 486; C. State, 18 Tex. 387; Barnes v. State, 11 Tex. 356; Grosse v. State, 11 Tex. 364; Nolen v. State, 14 Tex. App. 805; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 247; Massey v. State, 10 Tex. App. 645; Rector v. Com., 8 Tex. 468; Young v. Commonwealth, 8 (Ky.), 366; Rutherford v. Commonwealth, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 387; Hudson v. Commonwealth, 2 Duvall (Ky.), 531; Young v. Commonwealth, 8 Bush (Ky.), 366; v. Rigby, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 554; White v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 338; McGowan v. State, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 223; Boyce v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 57; Bryant v. State, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 635; Long v. State, 22 Ark. 336; Runnels v. State, 121; Yates v. State, 47 Ark. 556; Austin v. State, 14 Ark. 556; Flanagan v. State, 25 Ark. 92; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 696; State v. Hagan, 54 Mo. 566; State v. Brockman, 46 Mo. 566; State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 278; State v. Phelps, 128; Couley v. State, 12 Mo. 166; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 454; People v. Wolcott, 51 Mich. 612; Flagg v. People, 40 Mich. 584; Spears v. State, 2 Ohio St. 584; Prater v. State, 18 Ohio St. 418; Fouts v. State, 3 Ohio St. 98; Hamilton v. State, 3 Ohio St. 552; Smith v. State, 10 Ind. 106; State v. Freeman, 12 Ind. 100; Miller v. People, 39 Ill. 457; Austin v. State, 51 Ill. 506; State v. Brown, 91 Ill. 506; State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa, 435; State v. Ostrander, 39 Iowa, 179; State v. Sophers, N. Westn. Rep. (Iowa) 917; State v. Staley, 14 Minn. 105; People v. State, 15 Cal. 408; People v. Jim Ti, 33 Cal. 60; People v. Barrie, 49 Cal. 342; People v. Johnson, 41 Cal. 452; People v. Johnson, 49 Cal. 632; State v. Carrick, 16 Colo. 120; Beery v. U. S., 2 Colo. 186; v. Nott, 1 McLean (U. S.), 499; U. S. v. Pumphreys, 1 Cranch C. C. 74; U. S. v. Charles, 2 Cranch C. C. 76.

The object of the rule relating to the exclusion of confessions is to exclude all confessions which may have been procured by the prisoner being led to suppose that it would be better for him to admit himself to be guilty of an offence which he really never committed. In determining, therefore, whether a confession be admissible or not, "the only proper question is, whether the inducement held out to the prisoner was calculated to make his confession an untrue one." 3 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 367.

Evidence of threats made after the confession of accused is clearly inadmissible. Kollenberger v. People, 11 Pac. Repr. (Colo.) 101.

Where an express denial is made of any inducement being held out to the prisoner, it will avail nothing if, in introducing evidence of the confession, it appeared that inducements were really though unintentionally held out. Com. v. Taylor, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 605; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 705.

Although confessions obtained by threats or promises are not evidence, yet if they are attended by extraneous facts which show that they are true, any such facts which may be thus developed, and which go to prove the existence of the crime of which the defendant was suspected, will be received as testimony: e.g., where the party thus confessing points out or tells where the stolen property is; or when he states where the deceased was buried; or gives a clue to other evidence which proves the case. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 678; Murphy v. State, 63 Ala. 1; Aikin v. State, 35 Ala. 399; State v. Brick, 2 Harr. (Del.) 530; State v. Crank, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 66.

"No confession is deemed to be voluntary if it appears to the judge to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise proceeding from a person in authority and having reference to the charge against the accused person, whether addressed to him directly or brought to his knowledge indirectly; and (in opinion of the judge) such inducement, threat, or promise gave the accused person reasonable grounds for supposing that by making a confession he would gain some advantage or avoid some evil in reference to the proceedings against him. But a confession is not involuntary only because it appears to have been caused by the exhortations of a person in authority to make it as a matter of religious duty, or by an inducement collateral to the proceeding, or by inducements held out by a person not in authority. The prosecutor, officers of justice having the prisoner in custody, magistrates, and other persons in similar positions, are persons in authority." Steph. Dig. Evidence (May's Ed. 1877), 72.

It is a mistaken notion that evidence of confessions obtained by promises or threats are to be rejected from regard to public faith. Confessions are received in evidence, or rejected as inadmissible, under a consideration whether they are or not entitled to credit. A free and voluntary confession is deserving the highest credit, because it is presumed to flow from the strongest sense of guilt, and therefore it is admitted as proof of the crime to which it refers; but a confession forced from the mind by the flattery of hope, or the torture of fear, comes in so questionable a shape, when it is to be considered as the evidence of guilt, that no credit ought to be given to it, and therefore it is rejected. Warickshall's Case, Eyre and Nares, BB., 1 Leach, 263. Three men were tried and convicted for the murder of H. One of them, under a promise of pardon, confessed himself guilty of the fact. The confession, therefore, was not given in evidence against him, and a few years afterwards it appeared that H. was alive. 1 Leach, 263, note (a).

What Confessions are Not Admissible in Evidence.—Prima facie, as a matter of course, a confession by the prisoner is admissible as evidence against him. But there are certain grounds which may be shown by him sufficient to exclude the confession. The law, however, as it at present stands, is involved in considerable obscurity; and until it has received further discussion it is impossible to mark out precisely the limits of exclusion and admission. Thus much is certain, that no confession by the prisoner is admissible which is made in consequence of any inducement of a temporal nature, having reference to the charge against the prisoner, held out by a person in authority; and, on the whole, the tendency of the present decisions seems to be to admit any confessions which do not come within this proposition; but that this is so has not yet been distinctly stated, nor has the meaning to be attached to each branch of the proposition been as yet distinctly ascertained, as a perusal of the following cases will show. It is usual to speak of a threat or inducement as excluding the confession; and whether a man says, "If you do confess I will not do so and so," or whether he says, "If you do not confess I will do so and so," makes very little difference, if in substance the person accused is unduly influenced. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 42.

What is an Inducement.—The reported cases in which statements by prisoners have been held inadmissible are very numerous. Previous to the decision in R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 430; 21 L. J. M. C. 130, which will be noticed presently, they had gone a very great length. In R. v. Drew, 8 C. & P. 140, the prisoner was told "not to say anything to prejudice himself, as what he said would be taken down, and would be used for or against him at his trial." Coleridge, J., considered this to be an inducement to make a statement, and rejected the evidence. In R. v. Morton, 2 Moo. & R. 514, the constable said to the prisoner, "What you are charged with is a very heavy offence, and you must be very careful in making a statement to me or to anybody else that may tend to injure you; but anything that you can say in your defence we shall be ready to bear, or to send to assist you." Coleridge, J., said: "Upon reflection, I adhere to my decision in R. v. Drew," and rejected the evidence. In R. Furlley, 1 Cox Cr. Ca. 76, the prisoner was told by the constable that whatever she told him would be used against her at the trial; and Maule, J., referring to R. v. Drew, rejected the evidence; and the same learned judge pursued the same. All the cases, however, are reviewed in R. course in R. v. Harris, 1 Cox Cr. Ca. 106. v. Baldry, supra, where the constable had said to the prisoner, after telling him the charge, "that he must not say anything to criminate himself; what he did say would be taken down and used as evidence against him." Lord Campbell, C. J., at the trial received the evidence, but reserved the point for the consideration of the court of criminal appeal, on the authority of the above cases. All the judges (Pollock, C. B.; Parke, B.; Erle, and Williams, JJ., and Campbell, C. J.) were of opinion that the statement was admissible. Pollock, C. B., said: "A simple caution to the accused to tell the truth, if he says anything, has been decided not to be sufficient to prevent the statement being given in evidence; yet even in that case the person charged might have understood the caution as meaning that he could not tell the truth without confessing his guilt. It has been decided that that would not prevent the statement being given in evidence, by Littledale, J., in R. v. Court, 7 C. & P. 486; and by Rolfe, B., in a case at Gloucester, R. v. Holmes, 1 Car. & K. 248; Aaron v. State, 37 Ala. 106; King v. State, 40 Ala. 314; Kelly v. State, 72

Ala. 244; State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 278. But where the admonition to speak the truth has been coupled with any expression importing that it would be better for him to do so, it has been held that the confession was not receivable; the objectionable words being, 'that it would be better to speak the truth,' because they import that it would be better for him to say something. This was decided in R. v. Garner, 1 Den. C. C. 329; 2 C. & R. 920. The true distinction between the present case and a case of that kind is, that here it is left to the prisoner as a perfect matter of indifference whether he should open his mouth or not. With regard to the cases of R. v. Drew, 8 C. & P. 140, and R. v. Morton, 2 Moo. & R. 514, with the greatest respect for my brother Coleridge, I do not approve of the decision in the former, or the arguments used to support it in the latter. I think the statement in R. v. Drew, 8 C. & P. 140, ought not to have been rejected. With every veneration for the opinion of my brother Maule, I cannot agree with his view of the subject." Parke, B., said, "I have reflected on R. v. Drew, 8 C. & P. 140, and R. v. Morton, 2 Moo. & R. 514, and I have never been able to make out that any benefit was held out to the prisoner by the cautions employed in those cases." And Lord Campbell, C. J., said, "With regard to the decisions of my brother Maule and my brother Coleridge, with the greatest respect for them, I disagree with their conclusions."

"The case of R. v. Court, 7 C. & P. 486, above referred to, was this: The prisoner was taken before a magistrate on a charge of forgery; the prosecutor said, in the hearing of the prisoner, that he considered the prisoner as the tool of one G., and the magistrate then told the prisoner to be sure and tell the truth; upon which the prisoner made a statement. It was held by Littledale, J., that evidence of this statement was admissible. In R. v. Holmes, 1 C. & K. 248, the prisoner was before a magistrate on a charge of rape, and the magistrate said, 'Be sure you say nothing but the truth, or it will be taken against you, and may be given in evidence against you at your trial.' Evidence of the statement then made by the prisoner was held by Rolfe, B., to be admissible. In R. v. Garnar, 1 Den. C. C. 329, the surgeon told the girl, in the presence of her master and mistress (which, as we shall see presently, is the same thing as if the words had been used by the master or mistress themselves), that it was better for her to speak the truth; evidence of the statement thereupon made was unanimously held by the court of criminal appeal to be inadmissible. See also R. v. Jarvis, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96; 37 L. J. M. C. 3, per Willes, J., and R. v. Fennell, 7 Q. B. D. 147; R. v. Reeve, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96. As the principles laid down in R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 430, will doubtless now be considered conclusive, it is not considered necessary to refer at any greater length to a large class of previous cases which are of a similar character, and which are not altogether uniform; they will all be found in the elaborate argument of the learned counsel for the prisoner in R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 430.

"In R. v. Sleeman, 1 Dears. C. C. 249, the prisoner, a maid-servant, was taken into custody on a charge of setting fire to her master's premises. She desired to change her dress, and was permitted to do so, being given, for that purpose, into the charge of her master's daughter. While she was changing her clothes, her master's daughter said to her, 'I am very sorry for you, you ought to have known better; tell me the truth, whether you did it or no.' The prisoner said, 'I am innocent.' The master's daughter replied, 'Don't run your soul into more sin; tell the truth.' The prisoner then made a full confession. The evidence was admitted; and the court of criminal appeal, on a case reserved, held that there was no inducement or threat, and affirmed the conviction. In R. v. Upchurch, 1 Moo. C. C. 465, the prisoner, a servant girl, aged thirteen, was indicted for attempting to set fire to her master's house. After the attempt was discovered, her mistress said to her, 'Mary, my girl, if you are guilty do confess; it will perhaps save your neck; you will have to go to prison; if W. H. C. (a person whom the prisoner had charged) is found clear, the guilt will fall on you.' She made no answer. The mistress then said, 'Pray tell me if you did it.' The prisoner then confessed. The evidence was admitted, and the point reserved; but the judges thought that it ought not to have been received. See State v. Hagan, 54 Mo. 192; State v. Whitefield, 70 N. Car. 356. In R. v. Hearn, 1 Car. & M. 109, a servant was charged with attempting to set fire to her master's house. It was proved that the furniture in two bedrooms was on fire, and a spoon and other articles were found in the sucker of the pump. The master told the prisoner that if she did not tell the truth about the things found in the pump, he would send for the constable to take her, but he said nothing to her respecting the fire. Coltman, J., held that this was such an inducement to confess as would render inadmissible any statement that the prisoner made respecting the fire, as the whole was to be considered as one transaction. Compare Yates v. State, 47 Ark. 172. Where the prisoner's master in the presence of two policemen said, 'I think it is right I should tell you, that besides being in the presence of my brother and myself, you are in the presence of two officers of the police; and I should advise you that to any question that may be put to you you will answer truthfully, so that if you have committed a fault you may not add to it by stating what is untrue,' it was held that these words did not make the evidence inadmissible. Kelly, C. B., said, 'The words that have been used import advice only on moral grounds.' R. v. Jarvis, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96; 37 L. J. M. C. 1. So also, where the mother of some little boys in custody said, 'You had better, as good boys, tell the truth,' it was held that a statement made thereupon was admissible, and that the cases to the contrary had gone too far. R. v. Reeve, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 362; 41 L. J. M. C. 92. Where the prosecutor said to the prisoner, 'The inspector tells me you are making housebreaking implements; if that is so, you had better tell the truth, it may be better for you,' and the prisoner immediately after made a confession to the prosecutor in the presence of the inspector, the confession was held not admissible in evidence. R. v. Fennell, 7 Q. B. D. 147; 50 L. J. M. C. 126. Where the prisoner was in custody of a policeman on a charge of arson, and she said to her mistress, 'If you forgive me I will tell you the truth,' and the mistress without cautioning her said, 'Ann, did you do it?' Williams, J., rejected her confession. Reg. v. Mansfield, 14 Cox C. C. 639." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 42.

So a confession induced by saying, "I am in great distress about my irons; if you will tell me where they are, I will be favorable to you," cannot be given in evidence. Cass's Case, 1 Leach, 293, note (a).

Where the prosecutor asked the prisoner, on finding him, for the money he, the prisoner, had taken out of the prosecutor's pack, but before the money was produced said, "he only wanted his money, and if the prisoner gave him that, he might go to the devil if he pleased;" upon which the prisoner took 11s. 6<sup>d.</sup> out of his pocket, and said it was all he had left of it; a majority of the judges held that the evidence was inadmissible. Jones' Case, R. & R. 152. Compare R. v. Griffin, R. R. 151.

Where also an attorney, who was endeavoring to discover some burglars for the purpose of prosecution, said to the prisoner, who had gone to him for the purpose of making some statements relating to the burglary, "I dare say you had a hand in it; you may as well tell me all about it;" it was held that this excluded a statement then made. R. v. Croydon, 2 Cox C. C. 67.

Nor does it matter that the feet of the prisoner were tied at the time. Franklin v. State, 28 Ala. 9.

While the prisoner was under arrest for murder, and in shackles, he was taken to the place of the homicide, and was asked what he had done with the body, and he pointed to the hill where the dead body had been found. He was not cautioned as to the effect of an admission. The court held that all evidence of such action on the part of the defendant was improperly admitted. Nolen v. State, 14 Tex. App. 474; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 247.

The confession of an accused person while in the hands of his captors, not officers, and with a rope around his neck, is not free and voluntary, and is not admissible as evidence. State v. Revells, 34 La. Ann. 381; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 436.

Witness testified that he, with other armed men, went to arrest the prisoner, and on finding him asked him, "What made you kill G.?" that the prisoner said, "Is he dead," and that the witness replied, "You ought to know he's dead when you killed him." Held, that the evidence of a confession thereupon made was not admissible. State v. Dildy, 72 N. Car. 325.

At the trial of a criminal case, an accomplice, who was a witness for the government, testified to the guilt of himself and of the defendant; and on cross-examination also testified that he made a confession of his guilt to the officer who arrested him; that such confession was induced by promises, on the part of the officer of protection and favor; and that the confession was true. Held, that the government might show, by the testimony of the officer, that the confession was voluntary. Com. v. Ackert, 133 Mass. 402.

It is no objection to the admission in evidence of statements made by the defendant in a criminal case, after his arrest, to the assignee in insolvency of his estate, that, at a former interview between them, the assignee held out inducements to the defendant to make statements, if, at the interview during which they were made, enough was done by the assignee to remove from the defendant's mind the impression caused by the former interview. Com. v. Howe, 132 Mass. 251.

While the defendant was in a bar-room violating a city ordinance, the marshal of the city was notified, and summoned a posse and confined the defendant in a neighboring crib. Held, that notwithstanding the marshal's testimony that he did not "consider" that he had the defendant under arrest, the arrest was complete, and statements made by the defendant under such circumstances were not admissible as evidence against him. Grosse v. State, 11 Tex. App. 364.

A statement made by defendant to two of his bondsmen that he was short in his accounts, at a time when he was not charged with crime or under arrest, when no proceedings were threatened or any promise made to shield him from a criminal prosecution, held, admissible in evidence. State v. Carrick, 16 Nev. 120.

The confession of a prisoner of the locality of stolen property, though induced by threats, is admissible when verified by finding the property where he locates it; and all he says in conveying the information which is directly connected with or explanatory of the discovery is also admissible, but his confession that he stole it is not admissible. Yates v. State, 47 Ark. 172. See Davis v. State, 8 Tex. App. 510; Strait v. State, 43 Tex. 486; White v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 338; State v. Garvey, 28 La. Ann. 925; Laros v. Com., 84 Pa. St. 200.

In a trial for horse-theft the State was permitted, over objection by the defence, to prove that the defendant, while in legal custody and not warned that his statements might be used against him, said, in substance, that one S. got the animal at a certain locality and in the night, and brought it to him, the defendant, and that he took a bell from around its neck and rode it off. The State proved that the animal was taken in the night and from a locality corresponding with that described by the defendant, and that, when last seen before it was stolen, it had a bell around its neck; but, aside from the defendant's statement, there was no proof that he took the bell off the animal and rode it away. Held, that, assuming that these latter circumstances would, if shown to be true, conduce to establish the guilt of the defendant, the disclosure of them by the defendant, while he was in custody and uncautioned, was not evidence against him; and their admission over his objection was error. Kennon v. State, 11 Tex. App. 356.

It was held in the case of People v. Wentz, 37 N. Y. 303, where the defendant was in custody upon a charge of arson, that a confession drawn out by questions, and preceded by the statement made by the officer to the prisoner, "that he was in a bad fix, and had got caught at last," was "wholly voluntary, and made uninfluenced by any threat, menace, promise, or other influence." See People v. McGloin, 91 N. Y. 241; Cox v. People, 80 N. Y. 500.

Three boys were arrested upon a charge of arson. One of them was taken into the presence of three officers, and made a confession. At the trial, one of the officers testified: "I did not tell him he had better tell about it. I think W. [one of the other officers] said he had better." W. testified that "he did not say to the boy that he had better tell the truth, but that he might have told him to tell the truth." The other boys denied their guilt; but, upon being confronted with the first boy, and hearing his statement, they confessed. Held, that it could not be said, as matter of law, that the confessions were not admissible. Com. v. Preece, 140 Mass. 276.

In Hawkins v. State, 7 Mo. 190, the sheriff observed to the prisoner that "it would be better in the long-run to tell the truth about the matter, and not any lies," but gave no reason why it would be better, and the confession made to a third person in the presence of the officer and occurring a few minutes thereafter, was held admissible. So in Fouts v. State, 8 Ohio St. 98, where the accused, being placed in custody, was told by his custodian, "if he was guilty it would not put him in any worse condition, and he had better tell the truth at all times," held, no ground for excluding the confession.

To say to the prisoner that "an honest confession is good for the soul," is not a promise of temporal benefit or discharge from punishment for the crime charged as will render a confession inadmissible. Matthews v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.). 128.

The witness in this case, testifying to the prisoner's confessions while in custody, said that he used no promises nor threats to induce a confession, but added: "I said to him, 'You have got your foot in it, and somebody else was with you; now, if you did break open the door, the best thing you can do is to tell all about it, and to tell who was with you, and to tell the truth, the whole truth, and noting but the truth.' I wanted to produce the impression on his mind that it was best for him to tell all about it, and I did produce that impression before he would tell me." Held, that the confession ought to have been excluded. Kelly v. State, 72 Ala. 244.

Two brothers, F. and J., being indicted for a murder, and F. being put upon his trial, a witness testified that P., a third brother, said to F., "J. has determined to make a confession, and we want your consent." F. said he thought it hard that J. should have the advantage of making a confession, since the thing was done for his benefit. P. said, "If J. is convicted there will be no chance for him, but if you are convicted you may have some chance for procuring a pardon," and P. asked the witness if he did not think so. The witness said he did not know; he was unwilling to hold out any improper encouragement. Held, that a hope of favor was held out to induce him to give his assent; and that all subsequent confessions at the same interview should be excluded. Com. v. Knapp, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 496.

Whether the Inducement Must Have Reference to the Charge—Religious Inducement.—Upon this point there are but few authorities. In R. v. Sexton, Chetw. Burn, tit. Confession, the prisoner said: "If you will give me a glass of gin, I will tell you all about it, and two glasses of gin were given him. He then made a confession, which Best, J., refused to admit. This decision has been repeatedly doubted. See Deacon, Dig. Cr. Law, 424; Joy on Confessions, 17; 3 Russ. on Cri. (5th Ed.) 445. In R. v. Lloyd, 6 C. & P. 393, a man and his wife were in prison in separate rooms, on a charge of stealing and receiving, and the constable said to the man, "If you will tell where the property is, you shall see your wife." Patteson, J., held that a confession made afterwards was admissible. The report of R. v. Green, 5 C. & P. 655, which is sometimes cited on this point, seems too obscure to be relied on for any purpose whatever.

It is to be remarked that if it is necessary that the inducement should have reference to the charge against the prisoner, it is quite unnecessary to discuss, as was done in great length in R. v. Gilham, 1 Moo. C. C. 186, whether the inducement must be of a temporal nature. There the chaplain of the jail had had repeated interviews with the prisoner, and had strongly impressed upon him the religious duty of confession; coupling these exhortations with an expression of belief that the prisoner was a guilty man, as indeed the prisoner himself in general terms admitted. The jailer had also conversed with the prisoner on the subject, and had held, in briefer terms, similar language. The prisoner at length, after being cautioned that what he said would be used in evidence against him, made a full confession to the jailer, and afterwards to the mayor. Both confessions were received by Garrow, B., the question of their admissibility being reserved for the opinion of the judges. The judges, without stating any reasons, held that the confessions (both according to the report) were properly received; and it is said in 3 Russ., 5th Ed. 453. that the ground of this decision was that there were no temporal hopes of benefit or forgiveness held out; and that such hopes, if referable merely to a future state of existence, are not within the principle on which the rule for excluding confessions obtained by improper influence is founded. Two other points were taken by the counsel for the prosecution; namely, that neither the chaplain nor the jailer were persons in authority, within the meaning of the rule which excludes confessions; and that there had been ample caution given to render the confessions admissible, even if what had previously taken place were open to objection. But there is no indication of the opinion of the court on either of these points." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 45.

"In R. v. Wild, 1 Moo. C. C. 452, which is frequently quoted on this subject, a variety of confessions which had been made by the prisoner were received in evidence, and some of these, at least, are open to more than one objection. As it is said in the report that the confession was considered by a majority of the judges to be admissible, not saying which, and no grounds of the decision are given, no conclusion can be drawn from it. In R. v. Nute, Chetw. Burn, tit. Confession, 3 Russ. on Cr. (5th Ed.) 458, the question whether inducements not of a temporal nature coming from a person in authority are sufficient to exclude a confession, seems to have been considered by the judges, and by some, at least, to have been resolved in the negative.

"On the whole the authorities seem to be in favor of the proposition that the inducement must be of a temporal nature. Whether or no it must have reference to the charge, has scarcely been fully discussed. It is certainly possible to conceive cases in which a much stronger inducement might be held out to a prisoner than one having reference to an escape from a charge not involving any very serious consequences." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 46.

When the Inducement Relates to Other Persons.—Where the threats or promises held out affect other suspected persons, it is not relevant to inquire into them. Flanagin v. State, 25 Ark. 92.

Inducement held out with Reference to a Different Charge.—An inducement held out to a prisoner with reference to one charge will not exclude a confession of another offence, of which the prisoner was not suspected at the time the inducement was held out. The prisoner had been in the custody of several constables, one after another, and it was suggested on his behalf that one of them had improperly induced him to confess, and this constable was called and stated that whilst the prisoner was in his custody on another charge, and when he was not suspected of the offence for which he was then on his trial, he had made a statement in which he confessed himself guilty of a second charge. It was submitted that if a promise was held out to him, it was immaterial what the charge was. Little-dale, J., said, "I think not. If he was taken up on a particular charge, I think that the promise could only operate on his mind as to the charge on which he was taken up. A promise as to one charge will not affect him as to another charge." The confession was admitted. R. v. Warner, Glouc. Spr. Ass. 1832, 3 Russ. on Cr. (5th Ed.) 452. But where a threat was held out to a prisoner without the nature of the charge being stated, but subsequently the nature of the charge was stated, and thereupon a confession was made, it was held to be inadmissible. R. v. Luckhurst, 1 Dears. C. C. R. 245.

"Inducement must be held out by a Person in Authority.—In R. v. Spencer, 7 C. & P. 776, Parke, B., stated that there was a difference of opinion among the judges, whether a confession made to a person who has no authority, after an inducement held out by that person, can be given in evidence; and the learned judge intended, had the evidence been pressed, to have received it, and to have reserved the point. But on the last-mentioned case being cited in R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 733, Patteson, J., said, 'It is the opinion of the judges, that evidence of any confession is receivable, unless there has been some inducement held out by some person in authority.' And in R. v. Moore, 2 Den. C. C. 526, Parke, B., in delivering a carefully considered judgment of the court of criminal appeal, said that if the inducement was not held out by a person in authority, it was clearly admissible. This question may therefore be considered as settled." Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 46. See State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510; State v. Walker, 34 Vt. 396; State v. York, 37 N. H. 175; Com. v. Tuckerman, 10 Gray (Mass.) 173; Com. v. McCann, 97 Mass. 580; Com. v. Culver, 126 Mass. 464; People v. Wentz, 37 N. Y. 303; Vaughan v. Com. 17 Gratt. (Va.) 576; Smith v. Com., 10 Gratt. (Va.) 734; State v. Low-horne, 66 N. Car. 639; State v. Kirby, 1 Strob. (S. Car.) 155; Spicer v. State, 69 Ala. 135; Ward v. State, 50 Ala. 135; Wilson v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 232; Deathridge v. State, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 75; Young v. Com., 8 Bush (Ky.), 366; Rutherford v. Com., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 387; Boyd v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 39; Austine v. People, 51 Ill. 236; People v. Barrie, 49 Cal. 342; State v. Witzengerode, 9 Ore. 153.

Merely suggestions or advice to the accused to confess, or even solemn adjurations to do so, by one holding no official position, will not render the confession inadmissible. But in all cases the age, experience, and constitution of the person making the confession, and the circumstances under which it was made, should be taken into consideration in determining the question of its admissibility. State v. Fredericks, 85 Mo. 145.

Where a person in superior authority holds out an inducement to a prisoner to confess, a confession made to a person in inferior authority is not admissible, especially if such person do not give the prisoner any caution. Upon an indictment for arson, it appeared that the committing magistrate had told the prisoner that, if he would make a disclosure, he would do all that he could for him. The prisoner, after he was committed, made a statement to the turnkey of the jail, who had held out no inducement to him to confess, and had not given him any caution not to confess. Parke, J.: "I think I ought not to receive the evidence, after what Mr. Simeon (the committing magistrate) said to the prisoner, more especially as the turnkey did not give any caution to the prisoner." R. v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 833.

Confession in the Presence of the Police.—In Reg. v. Hatts, 48 J. P. 248, the prosecutor had taken the prisoner into his office, and there, in the presence of two police officers, said, "I presume you know who these gentlemen are." The prisoner said he did, and one of the officers then said, "We are police officers."

Thereupon the prosecutor, addressing the prisoner, said: "I know what has been going on between you and Culiffe for some time. You had better speak the truth." The prisoner then made a confession, and the question was whether it was admissible in evidence. The court held that it was not, the case not being distinguishable from Reg. v. Fennell, 7 Q. B. D. 147. In that case the confession was made under the following circumstances. Previously to being charged, the prisoner was taken into a room with the prosecutor and a police inspector. The prosecutor then said to the prisoner, "He" (meaning the inspector) "tells me you are making house-breaking implements; if that is so, you had better tell the truth: it may be better for you." It was held that the statement made by the prisoner upon this was not admissible. The court did not, in either of these cases, deliver judgment at length. The ground of the decisions must, therefore, be sought in previous cases.

In Reg. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 430, a number of old cases were overruled, and the law on the subject was fully discussed. In that case a police constable who apprehended a man on a charge of murder, having told him the nature of the charge against him, added that he need not say anything to criminate himself, but that what he did say would be taken down and used as evidence against him. The prisoner thereupon made a confession. It was held that the confession was rightly admitted in evidence. The ground of this decision was the general one, that a confession may be received in evidence so long as it is voluntary, that is to say, if it is not made in consequence of some inducement or threat held out or made to the prisoner by some person having authority over him in connection with the prosecution. As will be seen hereafter, a policeman is a person having authority for the purposes of this doctrine. It follows, therefore, that statements to a police constable, made voluntarily, or even in answer to questions by him, are, in general, admissible in evidence against the prisoner, but that they may be inadmissible if made in consequence of any inducement or threat made by the officer. In the case last mentioned, Pollock, C. B., pointed out that a simple caution by a constable to the accused to tell the truth, if he said anything, would not prevent the statement of the accused from being given in evidence; but that where the admonition to speak the truth was coupled with any expression importing that it would be better for the accused to do so, the statement could not be admitted, the expression amounting to an inducement to confess. It will be observed, on comparing this judgment with the two cases referred to supra, that words to the effect that it would be better for the accused to tell the truth were held to prevent the statement made in reply from being admitted in evidence.

In Reg. v. Sleeman, 6 Cox C. C. 245; 23 L. J. M. C. 19, a maid-servant, under a charge of setting fire to a farm building belonging to her master, was given into the temporary custody of a married daughter of her master, who did not live in the house and had no control over her as a mistress. She had been given into the custody of a policeman, and the officer had given her leave to change her dress, on the understanding that while doing so she was to be in the charge of the married daughter of her master, as already stated. While they were alone together the daughter said to the prisoner, "I am sorry for you, you ought to have known better; tell the truth whether you did it or no," and upon the prisoner replying, "I am innocent," added, "Don't run your soul into more sin, but tell the truth." The prisoner then confessed. Barke, B., admitted the confession in evidence. He held that the words used did not amount to a threat or inducement, nor were they used by a person in authority.

In Reg. v. Bate, 11 Cox C. C. 686, the prisoner was charged with having concealed the birth of her child. Being questioned by a police constable she gave an answer which caused the officer to say to her, "It might be better for you to tell the truth and not a lie." It was held by Montague Smith, J., that a further statement thereupon made by the prisoner to the constable was inadmissible in evidence against her.

In Reg. v. Doherty, 13 Cox C. C. 23, the prisoner was charged with murder. After he was taken into custody he was told by the police constable in whose charge he was that it would be better for him to tell the truth, and not to put people to the extremities he was doing. This happened at ten in the morning. At six in the evening of the same day another constable who was in charge of the prisoner in answer to a request by the prisoner to see his father, cautioned him not to say anything to criminate himself, for that anything he might say would come in evidence against him. A confession made to the latter constable was rejected by Whiteside, C. J. He said:

"If a person in authority—and it has been decided that a constable having a prisoner in charge comes within that definition—makes use of the expression, 'it would be better for you to tell the truth,' it is as clear as light that any admission or confession afterwards made, under the influence of that impression, should not be received." As it was considered that any subsequent confession such as had been given must be set aside to have had the effect of removing from the prisoner's mind all hope or expectation of gain or favor to be derived from the making of the confession. This was a very strong case, but it seems to be strictly in accordance with the principle laid down by the earlier decisions.

In order to exclude a confession made to or in the presence of a police constable there must have been something to the nature of an inducement or a threat held out or made by the constable in his presence. A mere exhortation to speak the truth has been shown not to amount to an inducement when made by a person not having any authority in connection with the accusation. And it seems that such an exhortation, even if made in the constable's presence, does not amount to an inducement. Thus in Reg. v. Jarvis, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96, the prisoner was called by his master and told, "You are in the presence of two police officers, and they should advise you that to any question that may be put to you you will answer truthfully, so that, if you have committed a fault, you may not add to it by stating what is untrue." The master afterwards added, "Take care, we know more than you think." The prisoner thereupon made a statement. It was held that the statement was receivable in evidence against him on his trial for larceny. Kelly, C. B., said that the words "had better tell the truth" seemed to have acquired a sort of technical meaning, importing either a threat or a benefit, if they had not been so used. All the other words had said consisted of warning or advice to speak the truth on moral grounds, which was not enough to exclude the statement made in consequence thereof. This case was followed in Reg. v. R. L. R. 1 C. C. R. 362. There the prisoner, two children, one aged eight and the other a little older, were charged with attempting to obstruct a railway line. It was proved that the mother of the prisoners and a policeman being present, after they had been apprehended, the mother of the prisoners said: "You er, as good boys, tell the truth," upon both the prisoners confessed, was held that the confession was admissible in evidence. From the fact that the court professed to follow Reg. v. Jar-

L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96, it would seem that they looked upon the words "as good boys" as showing that the whole of the advice given to the boys was in the nature of exhortation on moral grounds. The mere fact that two officers who arrested a boy 13 or 14 years old, without a warrant, upon suspicion of having committed a crime, after searching him, stripping him of his clothing, and locking him into a cell at the police station, took him from the cell late at night and questioned him for two hours, without warning him of his right not to answer, or offering him any opportunity to consult friends or counsel, does not render the confession in the conversation inadmissible. Com. v. Cuffee, 108 Mass. 285.
If an accused party has been made a prisoner, anything which may be said to him by the officer by whom he is held in custody will always be scrutinized with the greatest care, and slight promises or threats coming from him will be considered a sufficient reason for rejecting all subsequent confessions. Com. v. Luckerman, 10 Gray (Mass.), 173; St. v. Curtis, 97 Mass. 578.
In State v. Branham, 13 S. Car. 389, the court said: "It is especially necessary to guard with jealousy all confessions made by prisoners in arrest in the hands of the officers of the law; but it is impossible to lay down any rule that will determine every case. As is said in some of our cases, there is no difficulty in the principle itself, but its application is beset with difficulties. In practice, what is and what is not a violation of the principle must of necessity be left, for the first instance, to be determined by the circuit judge, whose situation best enables him to decide in each case whether the confessions are voluntary. The judge, being familiar with all the facts, ruled that the confessions were voluntary in this case, and, upon review, refused a new trial, and it is difficult to say, as a matter of law, that he was in error. The manner of the officer was compulsory, but no inducements were held out and there was some corroborating testimony. Some of the earliest cases held that all confessions of one in custody, made to an officer in authority, were assumed to be induced and were inadmissible, but that rule, if ever established, has certainly been modified." A confession made to an officer will not be excluded from the jury merely because it appears that the accused was previously in the custody of another officer; and the court will not, as a condition precedent to the admission of such evidence, require the prosecution to call the latter, unless the circumstances render it probable that the accused held a conversation with the first officer upon the subject of a confession, or justify the belief of collusion between the officers. Hopt v. U. S., 110 U. S. 574. See Com. v. Cullen, 111 Mass. 435, Walker v. State, 2 Tex. App. 326; Harris v. State, 6 Tex. App. 97; State v. Guy, 69 Mo. 430; Ballard v. State, 28 N. W. Repr. (Neb.) 271; People v. Abbott, 4 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 769; King v. State, 40 Ala. 314, People v. Rogers, 18 N. Y. 9; Cobb v. State, 27 Ga. 648.

Who is a Person in Authority.—The decisions are numerous and undoubted that the prosecutor, or the person who in the ordinary course of things will become so, the constable in charge of the prisoner, and any person having judicial authority over the prisoner, are persons in authority within the meaning of the rule. The rule also extends to the master or mistress of the prisoner, but only where the offence concerns the master or mistress. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 46; Austine v. People, 51 Ill. 236; State v. Tatro, 50 Vt. 483; Com. v. Sego, 125 Mass. 210; Vaughan v. Commonwealth, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 576; Shifflet v. Commonwealth, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 652; State v. Gossett, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 428; Ward v. State, 50 Ala. 120; Beery v. U. S., 2 Colo. 186; State v. Bostick, 4 Harr. (Del.) 564. This was decided in R. v. Moore, 2 Den. C. C. 526, where the prisoner was charged with killing or concealing the birth of her infant child, and had made a confession to her mistress after an inducement, which was held admissible. The previous cases were there discussed by Parke, B., and shown to be in conformity with that decision. In R. v. Luckhurst, 1 Dears. C. C. 245, the owner of a mare was held to be a person from whom a threat coming would exclude the confession of a prisoner that he had had connection with the mare. In R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387, Park, J., after conferring with Littledale, J., held that an inducement held out by a surgeon was sufficient to exclude a confession. This appears to be the only decision on this point. In R. v. Garner, 2 C. & K. 920, the inducement was held out by the surgeon, and the confession was made to him, but the master and mistress were present, and, as will be seen presently, that is the same as if the in-

Where there were three prisoners in custody on the same charge, and one said to another: "Well, John, you had better tell Mr. Walker (the prosecutor) the truth," and the prisoner addressed thereupon made a confession, evidence of this confession was received, and its admissibility reserved for the consideration of the court of criminal appeal: that court affirmed the conviction. No counsel appeared, and no reasons were given; but probably it was thought that though what is said in the presence of a person in authority may generally be considered as said with his sanction, yet that this did not apply to what was said by one prisoner to another, as it could hardly be imagined

Where a cons
in custody on a

in the custody of a woman whilst he was to the inquest, to prevent her going away, and the woman held out an inducement to her, it was held that a statement made in consequence was not admissible, as it was made after an inducement held out by a person who had her in custody. R. v. Enock, 5 C. & P. 539. A confession obtained by means of an improper inducement held out by a person who has no authority in the place of a person having authority, without his consent, it is not admissible. It is not necessary that the person holding such authority should express his consent in words; for if he be silent he may be presumed, as he did not express dissent, to have sanctioned the inducement. Where the constable who took the prisoner into custody was present, and had the prisoner in custody when a confession was procured by inducements held out by the innkeeper, and the constable being present did not caution the prisoner in any way, Lord B., said: "I have a very strong opinion against its admissibility; but there are opinions which I am bound to respect, opposed to my own, I had better receive the evidence; if it should become necessary, I will reserve the point for the consideration of the judges." The prisoners were acquitted. R. v. Pountney, 7 C. & P. 302. On an indictment for housebreak- ing it appeared that the prisoner resided with her husband, and that a constable went to their house and charged her with breaking into the prosecutor's house, which she denied; but her husband coming in shortly afterwards, he told her she knew anything about it to be the truth; the constable, though present, made no observation, except that she must take her to the station-house, and desired her to go upstairs and put her things on; while she was up she desired the constable to call her husband, and then made a statement about certain articles of dress, which she produced, as having been purchased with money which had been stolen. It was objected that what the prisoner said was inadmissible, as it was obtained by an inducement held out by her husband in the presence of the constable; and as evidence of the stolen property was found in the husband's house, he was facie liable to account for it, and the statement made by the wife in the presence of and under the coercion of the husband, by which she accused herself and exculpated him, was clearly caused by the undue influence on her mind; Pollock,

C. B.: "The fact of the constable being present and not dissenting from what was said places the expressions used by the husband on the same footing as if they had been used by the constable; and I think that, as the constable was a person in authority, such an inducement ought to be sufficient to exclude the admission. Besides, I think there is a great deal of weight in what is urged as to the effect of the prisoner's statement being to exculpate her husband, and that I ought to be careful not to admit anything which may have been said in consequence of his coercion." R. v. Laughter, 2 C. & K. 225.

So where two prisoners charged with murder were being conveyed in a cart, and the constable was in the cart with them, and could hear all that passed, and one prisoner said to the other: "You had better speak the truth," and the constable made no remark; Wightman, J., after consulting Parke, B., held that a statement then made was inadmissible, as the inducement appeared to have the sanction of the constable who was present, and apparently assented to it. R. v. Millen, 3 Cox C. C. 507.

So where, upon an indictment for setting fire to the house of L., it appeared that on the morning of the fire the prisoner, who was the servant of the prosecutor, was sent for into the parlor, in which Mrs. L. and W. were; and that W., who was not a constable, or in any office or authority, said to the prisoner: "You had better tell how you did it;" and that thereupon she made an answer,—Patteson, J., said: "It is the opinion of the judges that evidence of any confession is receivable, unless there has been some inducement held out by some person in authority; and in this case I should have received the evidence of the statement made to W. if the inducement had been held out by him alone. But here the inducement does not rest with him alone, because Mrs. L., who was the wife of the prosecutor, and also the mistress of the prisoner, was present with W., and must, as she expressed no dissent, be taken to have sanctioned the inducement. I think, therefore, that the inducement must be taken as if it had been held out by Mrs. L., who was a person in authority over the prisoner, and that therefore the evidence is inadmissible." R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 733.

On an indictment for a misdemeanor in attempting to set fire to her master's house, it appeared that the prisoner, a girl aged thirteen, was a domestic servant to the prosecutor, whose wife lived with him, and took her share in the management of the house. After the attempt to set fire to the house was discovered, the prisoner's mistress, in the absence of the prosecutor, said to her: "Mary, my girl, if you are guilty, do confess; it will perhaps save your neck; you will have to go to prison; if W. [another person suspected, and whom the prisoner had charged] is found clear, the guilt will fall on you." She made no answer. The mistress then said: "Pray tell me if you did it." The prisoner then confessed. It was contended on the part of the prosecution that the wife had no authority, real or apparent, over the prisoner, so as to hold out any hope which could influence the prisoner to make a false statement, in order that her life might be spared, and therefore that the confession was admissible. The confession was admitted, and the question as to its admissibility reserved for the consideration of the judges, who thought the confession ought not to have been received. R. v. Upchurch, R. & M. C. C. R. 465.

So where, upon an indictment for stealing the goods of two partners, the wife of one of the partners said, "I told the prisoner it would be better for him if he would tell how we had been robbed, and put us on our guard. I occasionally take the management of the shop. I manage the shop in my brother and husband's absence," for the prosecution it was urged that an inducement by the prosecutor's wife rendered a confession inadmissible only when it was held out in the presence of her husband. An inducement by the wife of a constable would not vitiate a confession. Parke, B.: "The wife of a constable has no control over the prisoner. This woman, being the wife of one of the prosecutors, and concerned in the management of their business, must be looked upon as a person in authority. I think this confession inadmissible." R. v. Warringham, 2 Den. C. C. R. 447, note.

Upon the trial of a prisoner for murder there was offered in evidence against her a confession made by her in the presence of her mistress to a surgeon, who was attending her, of her having strangled her child with a thread, and placed the dead body in a privy, where it was found with the string round its neck. Her mistress had told her before the surgeon came in that "she had better speak the truth," and in answer she said she would tell it to the surgeon. An objection was taken that any subsequent confession was inadmissible. After consulting Coleridge, J., Parke, B., received the evidence, being of opinion that in this case her husband, not being the prosecutor, nor the offence in any way connected with the management of the house, the prisoner's mistress could be considered as having any control over the prosecution so as to raise a presumption that the inducement held out to her would be likely to cause her to tell the truth. And upon a case reserved for argument for the prisoner, Parke, B. delivered judgment: "A rule has been laid down, that if the threat or inducement is held out actually or constructively by a person in authority, the confession cannot be received, however slight the threat or inducement; and the prosecutor, magistrate, or constable is such a person, and so the master or mistress may be. If not held out by one in authority, the confession is clearly admissible. But in reference to the cases where the master or mistress have been held to be persons in authority, it is only when the offence concerns the master or mistress that their holding out the threat or promise renders the confession inadmissible. In the present case the offence of the prisoner, in killing her child and concealing its dead body, is in no way an offence against the master of the house. She was not the mistress then, and there was no probability of herself or the husband being the subject of an indictment for that offence. In practice the prosecution is the result of the coroner's inquest. Therefore we are clearly of opinion that the confession was properly received." R. v. Moore, 2 Den. C. C. 522; R. v. K. 153. See R. v. Upchurch, 1 Den. C. C. 465.

The preceding cases clearly establish the position that, if a threat or inducement be held out in the presence of a person in authority, the effect is precisely the same as if it had been held out by a person in authority. R. v. Parker, 1 Den. C. 42.

A person who lives in the jailer's house and who sometimes has the keys of the jail, and when the jailer is absent has control of the jail, but is not a sworn officer of any kind, is not a "person in authority," whose persuasions or threats addressed to a prisoner will exclude a confession. Shifflet's Case, 14 Va. 652.

Where a detective, in the guise of a friend, induced a suspected party to make a confession of a crime, without any threat of any kind, except, at his request, he said that he had consulted an attorney for the prisoner, who said "he [the prisoner] had better tell the facts of the and that they would be likely to do him as much good as anything he could do; that there was no use of lying about it, and he had better tell the truth;" Held, that the alleged confession was admissible in evidence; (2) that the credibility of a witness who, by deceit, misrepresentation, and other disreputable means, has obtained an alleged confession from a prisoner, is for a jury, who should be specially instructed on that point. Heldt v. State, 20 Neb. 492.

A private detective employed by the owners, underwriters, and salvage company, with authority to collect, settle for, and recover all goods lost or plundered from a wrecked vessel, and to institute civil or criminal prosecutions necessary for that purpose, is not a person in authority so as to exclude confessions made to him, although there were promises or threats made to induce them. U. v. Stone, 8 Fed. Repr. 232.

Although the more recent authorities on the admissibility of confessions, unless they are shown to have been made under the influence of promises or threats on the part of an officer of the law; yet a court, constrained by its former decisions, holds a confession inadmissible, even induced by hope or fear excited in the mind of the accused, by the representations of any person connected with the prosecution, or with the accused himself, so, considering his relations and condition, may fairly suppose that such person has power to secure the performance of his promises or threats; and excludes confessions of the accused in this case, made while he was in jail under a charge of burglary, to a clerk in the warehouse alleged to have been broken open and entered, who was also a part owner of the goods said to have been stolen from it, and induced by his promises to prosecute the accused, and not to appear as a witness against him unless compelled. Murphy v. State, 63 Ga. 1.

Confessions of guilt are inadmissible when persons, apparently acting by authority, obtain them by making respondents believe that he will get off easier by making them. So held where the confessions were made to persons who were given access to the prisoner's cell after midnight. People v. Wolcott, 51 Mich. 1.

Acknowledgments of his presence by a defendant, without any promise or threat held out to him by the witness, are admissible, though the witness received the defendant from a detective who had held out the promise to him that he would protect him from all danger. Dumas v. State, 63 Ga. 600.

Where one of the company engaged in the apprehension of a prisoner, in the presence of the officer and the prosecutor, held out promises of benefit to him, under the influence of which he made a confession, it was held that such confession was not admissible in evidence. Morehead v. State, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 635.

M. accompanied the officer who made the arrest, and after the arrest was made and as they were riding together, M. said to the accused, "I know your father, and you had better tell me so I can tell him all about it, so that he can help you." Held, that a confession made at the time was admissible. Ulrich v. People, 39 Mich. 245.

Confessions to Persons Not in Authority.

—Mr. Russell says (3 Russ. on Cr., 9th Am. Ed. 393): "There has been a difference of opinion among the judges whether a confession made to a person who has no authority, after an inducement held out by that person, is receivable: some of the judges thinking it receivable, and others thinking it is not so. R. v. Spencer, 7 C. & P. 776. And several cases have occurred in which confessions made to persons without authority, in consequence of inducements held out by such persons, have been rejected. R. v. Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543. But it is said to be 'the opinion of the judges that evidence of any confession is receivable, unless there has been some inducement held out by some person in authority.' R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 733. The result of these cases seems to be, that a confession is not inadmissible, although made after an exhortation, or admonition, or other similar influence, proceeding at a prior time from some one who has nothing to do with the apprehension, prosecution, or examination of the prisoner: for a promise made by a person who interferes without any authority of this kind is not to be presumed to have such an effect on the mind of the prisoner as to induce him to confess that he is guilty of a crime of which he is innocent." See Cunningham v. Commonwealth, 9 Bush (Ky.), 149; Young v. Commonwealth, 8 Bush (Ky.), 366; State v. Fortner, 43 Iowa, 494; Com. v. Sego, 125 Mass. 210; State v. Darnell, 1 Houst. C. C. (Del.) 321; Ulrich v. People, 39 Mich. 245; Cady v. State, 44 Miss. 332; State v. Kirby, 1 Strob. (S. Car.) 378. Compare State v. George, 15 La. Ann. 145.

In Beggarly v. State, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 520, the court said: "In regard to the person by whom the inducements were

A confession can never be received in evidence if the prisoner has been influenced by any threat or promise, and the court cannot measure the force of the influence used, or the effect upon the mind of the prisoner, and therefore the confession is a declaration if any degree of influence has been exerted. It is a question for the court, and not for the jury, to determine whether, under the particular circumstances of the case, the confession is admissible. The general principle on which the courts have proceeded seems to be this: If, under the circumstances, there be reasonable ground for believing that the disclosure was made under the influence of a threat of a temporal nature, the evidence ought not to be offered there has been conflict in the authorities—some holding that the inducements held out by private persons, not being prosecutor, officer, or having any authority over the prisoner, are not sufficient to exclude confessions thus obtained; but the sounder rule manifestly is, that this is a mixed question of law and fact for the judge, and while it is proper to note the difference between confessions obtained by prosecutor, officer, or person in authority, and those obtained by private persons, yet if in fact the confessions were forced from the prisoner through hope or fear presented to his mind by a third person, it should be rejected."

In R. v. Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543, a witness proved that the prisoner wished to sell a stolen book to him, and that he told him he had better tell where he got it. Bosanquet, J.: "Any person telling a prisoner that it will be better for him to confess, will always exclude any confession made to that person. Whether a prisoner's having been told by one person that it will be better for him to confess, will exclude a confession subsequently made to another person, is very often a nice question; but it will always exclude a statement made to the same person." In R. v. Slaughter, 4 C. & P. 543, note (a), the same learned judge rejected a confession made by the prisoner to one of his fellow-workmen, who had told him it would be better for him to confess. In R. v. Arundel, Gloucester Summer Assizes 1830, the same learned judge ruled the same way, saying: "If an unauthorized person makes a promise, it will not prevent a statement made to another person from being received in evidence; but if the statement be made to the person who makes the promise, I think it ought not to be received." The same distinction is also adverted to in a note to R. v. Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97. For this distinction, however, is a sufficient reason. The inducement in every case is, whether it was such as to lead the prisoner to suppose that it would be better for him to confess himself guilty than to not commit. If it was, the confession made under its influence is inadmissible. If the party using the inducement is a person in authority, the same time it must exclude the confession, as it is deserving of consideration with others, that the inducement make the confession inadmissible. The inducement at the time, afterwards to another person, to show that he was influenced by the inducement, is not sufficient; and this is the rule in the court seems to have been established in Gibbons. See also J. & W. v. Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97.

1. 3 Russ. on Cr. 100; State v. Patterson, 7 Mo. 192; Hagan, 54 Mo. 192; Mo. 278; Hector v. State, 22 Am. Dec. 454; Mo. 128; State v. Campbell, 49 Ala. 520; Ala. 425; Redd v. State, 26 Ala. 54; Porter v. State, 95; Murphy v. State, 81; Commonwealth v. Rigsby, 6 Lea (Tenn. State, 61 Miss. 243; 24 Miss. 512; Jordan v. State, 63 Ga. 600; 70 N. Car. 356; State v. Cox, 563; Cox v. People v. Wentz, 37 Phelps, 11 Vt. 116; 672; State v. Walker, 135 Mass. 210; 108 Mass. 285; Com. v. Gibbons, 505; Com.

ray (Mass.), 190; Pife v. Commonwealth, 29 Pa. St. 429; State v. York, 37 N. H. 175; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 3, s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; People v. Polcott, 51 Mich. 612; Flagg v. People, Mich. 706; Smith v. State, 10 Ind. 6; Miller v. People, 39 Ill. 457; Spears v. State, 2 Ohio St. 584; Metzger v. State, 18 Fla. 481; Runnels v. State, 28 Ark. 121; Cain v. State, 18 Tex. 387; Watts v. State, 2 Tex. App. 588.

It is for the court to determine whether the circumstances attending such admissions or confessions are such as that they could be received as the deliberate and voluntary statements of an accused person. The usual practice is to make the inquiry before the admissions or statements are shown, but if this inquiry is made in advance it may be made at any time, and if it shall appear that the statements were not voluntary, or were induced by improper influences, the testimony should be excluded from the consideration of the jury. The true rule is that the circumstances under which the declarations or admissions were made should be shown, and if they appear to have been voluntary to submit the evidence to the jury, and if otherwise to exclude it. Metzger v. State, 18 Fla. 481; Simon v. State, 5 Fla. 285; Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 631; Murphy v. State, Ala. 1; King v. State, 40 Ala. 314; State v. Bob, 32 Ala. 560; State v. Vann, N. Car. 631; Com. v. Culver, 126 Mass. 464; People v. Soto, 49 Cal. 67; Watts v. State, 36 Tex. 350; Cain v. State, 18 Tex. 387; Harding v. State, 54 Ark. 359; Murphy v. People, 63 N. Y. 1; State v. Fildment, 35 Iowa, 541; State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa, 435; State v. Duncan, 64 Mo. 262; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; Young v. Commonwealth, 8 Bush (Ky.), 366; Hudson v. Commonwealth, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 531; Waley v. State, 11 Ga. 123; State v. Harvey, 28 La. Ann. 925. Compare Garland v. State, 50 Miss. 147; State v. Brite, N. Car. 26.

It is for the trial court, in each case, to determine, as a preliminary question, whether the confession was made with a degree of freedom which ought to justify its admission; and unless there is manifest error in the ruling, its admission should not cause a reversal of the judgment. State v. Patterson, 73 Mo.

The competency of confessions is a preliminary inquiry for the court, which should not admit them unless they clearly appear to have been made in such a manner as to be evidence, and should exclude them after they are admitted if it appears that they were improperly obtained. Simmons v. State, 61 Miss. 243.

Where the preliminary examination as to the admissibility of confessions was conducted in the presence of the jury, and being found competent, they were admitted, this was not such error as would require a new trial; aliter, had the confessions been inadmissible. Anderson v. State, 72 Ga. 98.

It is for the court to determine whether the confessions of a prisoner are voluntary or involuntary, and the court's decision of the question cannot be reviewed by the jury. Hence, a charge is erroneous which submits to the jury the decision of this legal question, and should, for that reason, be refused. Redd v. State, 69 Ala. 255.

The circuit judge having permitted evidence of a confession of guilt made by a prisoner to the committing magistrate to go to the jury, the appellate court will refuse to interfere upon that ground, although the manner of the officer was rude, and his caution to the prisoner not as explicit as it should have been. State v. Branham, 13 S. Car. 389.

After deciding that the evidence may be submitted, it is error without prejudice to defendant to charge the jury that they should decide whether or not the confession was voluntary. State v. Moorman, 2 S. East. Repr. (S. Car.) 621.

When confessions are admitted by the court, the jury must receive them as competent evidence. It is without their province to reject them as incompetent. But the credibility of the confessions, or the effect or weight to which they are entitled as evidence, it is the province of the jury to determine. In the consideration and determination of these inquiries, they must look to all the facts and circumstances under which the confessions were made—the facts and circumstances which were introduced before the court, if shown to them, and any other facts or circumstances which may be in evidence. State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107; Bob v. State, 32 Ala. 560; Redd v. State, 68 Ala. 492. Any act, declaration, or admission received as evidence, the jury should take and consider in connection with the circumstances under which it was done or made. If, in view of all the circumstances, the jury are not satisfied that the confessions were made freely, voluntarily, and intelligently; if they believe that they originated from fear of present peril, or hopes of personal benefit, excited by others, supposed—fairly and reasonably supposed—to have the authority to assure the benefit or to avert the danger; or the confessions are not harmonious and consistent with the other evidence,—they should reject them as wanting in credibility, or as not entitled to weight in passing upon the question of guilt or innocence. But although they may regard the confessions as springing from the hopes or fears of the accused unduly excited, yet if there is evidence corroborating them, or if they are harmonious and consistent with the other evidence, if of their truth they have no reasonable doubt, the confession should be accepted and acted upon by them. Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107.

In Com. v. Piper, 120 Mass. 185, the court says: "When a confession is offered in a criminal case, and the defendant objects that he was induced to make it by threats or promises, it necessarily devolves upon the court to determine the preliminary question whether such inducements were shown; and the finding of the court upon this question cannot be revised upon a bill of exceptions, unless it involves some ruling in matter of law, or the whole evidence is reported with a view of submitting its sufficiency to the appellate court. If the presiding judge is satisfied that there were such inducements, the confession is to be rejected; if he is not satisfied, the evidence is admitted. But if there is any conflict of testimony, or room for doubt, the court will submit this question to the jury, with instructions that if they are satisfied that there were such inducements they shall disregard and reject the confession." This seems to state the matter toxicating liquors were used to induce confession, the confession will not be rejected. State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 695; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128, Levison v. State, Ala. 520.

Mr. Taylor says (1 Taylor's Ev. Ed. § 807): "What language is sufficient to constitute such inducement or threat remains undetermined; and here the reported decisions certainly furnish an unsatisfactory guide. Some reason may be given for applying the rule to words as these: 'Unless you give a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a magistrate.' R. v. Thompson, 1 Lea, 291; R. v. Luckhurst, P. & D. 1; R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318. 'If you will tell me where my goods are, I will be favorable to you.' R. v. Cass, 1 C. & P. 293, n. 2; Boyd v. State, 2 Hu. & N. (Tenn.) 37. 'I only want my money, and if you give me that, you may go to the devil.' R. v. Jones, R. & M. 152. 'If you will not tell all you know about it, of course we can do nothing.' R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551. 'You are under suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know.' R. v. Henson, 4 C. & P. 387; R. v. Cheverton, F. & F. 833. 'The watch has been found, and if you do not tell me your partner was, I will commit you to prison.' R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 1; R. v. Upchurch, 1 Mood. C. C. 353. 'You had better split, and not suffer all of them.' R. v. Thomas, 6. C. 353. But when confessions have been rejected in consequence of such expressions as the following having been used: 'It will be better for you to speak truth.' R. v. Carr, 1 C. & P. 1.

in your defence we shall be ready to ear, or send to assist you.' R. v. Mor- n, 2 M. & R. 514,—in these and the cases it is only too apparent that sense and common-sense have been sacrificed on the shrine of mercy. Indeed, the judges themselves have of late years come to this conclusion, and after a solemn discussion of the subject in the court of criminal appeal, they have expressly overruled the last three decisions cited above, as cases which are discreditable to the law. So anxious was the court at the time to exclude evidence of confessions, that exhortations not to tell lies, or to speak the truth, have been deemed only to induce a false acknowledgment of guilt; and, consequently, admissions made after such exhortations have more than once been rejected. But this paradoxical opinion is now happily exploded.
 As to what shall be considered as a promise or inducement, saying to the prisoner that it would be better for him if he did confess, is sufficient to exclude the confession. 2 East P. C. c. 16, § 94,
659; Newman v. State, 49 Ala. 9; s. c.
1 Am. Cr. Rep. 173; People v. Bar- ber, 49 Cal. 342; State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510;
4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510. Compare Com.
Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431; Fouts v.
State, 8 Ohio St. 98; Kelly v. State, 72
Id. 341.

Where, on an indictment for robbery, a witness stated that he had said to one of the prisoners, "You had better split, and suffer for all of them," the statement of the prisoner was rejected. R. v.
Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. So where a person said to the prisoner in the police barracks, "If any other person had to do in your case, it is better you should tell;" the statement there made by the prisoner was rejected. Moody's Case, 2 Crawf. & D.
C. Joy, 12. So where on an indictment for larceny, a witness proved that he had said to the prisoner, "It would have been better if you had told at first;"
 the statement of the prisoner was rejected; Gurney, B., saying, "That is an inducement. It amounts to this, that if it would have been better then, it would be better now. I think it hardly safe to admit the evidence after that." R. v.
Wilkey, 6 C. & P. 175.

Where a constable, whilst he had a prisoner in custody on a charge of larceny, asked him whether he had committed the offence, which he denied, and then said,
 "It is no use for you to deny it, for there are the man and boy who will swear that they saw you do it;" Gurney, B., held that this was an inducement to say something, and therefore what the prisoner said was not admissible. R. v. Mills, 6

C. & P. 146. So where, on an indictment for administering arsenic, it appeared that the surgeon who was called in saw the prisoner, and said to her, "You are under a suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know," it was held that a statement made after this to the surgeon was inadmissible. R. v. Kingston,
4 C. & P. 387. So where it appeared, on an indictment for larceny, that the prisoner, being in the custody of a constable,
 the latter said to the prosecutor, "You must not use any threat or promise to the prisoner," and immediately after this the prosecutor said to the prisoner, "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, we, of course, can do nothing; I shall be glad if you will." The confession was held inadmissible; Patteson, J., saying, "I think this is a distinct promise; what could the prosecutor mean by saying, that if the prisoner would not tell, they could do nothing, but that if the prisoner did tell, they would do something for him?" R. v. Patridge, 7 C. &
P. 551.

The sheriff and State's attorney talked with the respondent while in jail. The sheriff first testified that no inducements to confess were held out, but afterwards said "that he presumed he and the State's attorney both told the respondent it would be better for her to tell the whole story, and the punishment would be likely to be lighter." Held, that his testimony was not admissible. State v.
Day, 55 Vt. 510; s. c. 4 Am. Cr. Rep.
510.

Where A, whose property was stolen, said to B, "You had better return that chair," and B replied he would do so,
held inadmissible. Lacey v. State, 58
Ala. 385.

A confession was obtained from a weak-minded person under arrest for crime, by telling him that the best thing he could do was to own up, giving him
 drink, and taking him in irons to a lawyer's office, where he was interrogated with bolted doors and in the presence of those who were hostile to him, and where his answers were taken down in writing and sworn to. Held, that the confession was not voluntary, and could not be used against him. Flagg v. People, 40 Mich.
706.

Where a prisoner was told by the committing magistrate, "If you do not tell the truth I will commit you," held, that the confession was not admissible. Com.
v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 260.

Where an officer said to a prisoner

others, supposed—fairly and reasonably supposed—to have the authority to assure the benefit or to avert the danger; or the confessions are not harmonious and consistent with the other evidence,—they should reject them as wanting in credibility, or as not entitled to weight in passing upon the question of guilt or innocence. But although they may regard the confessions as springing from the hopes or fears of the accused unduly excited, yet if there is evidence corroborating them, or if they are harmonious and consistent with the other evidence, if of their truth they have no reasonable doubt, the confession should be accepted and acted upon by them. Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107.

In Com. v. Piper, 120 Mass. 185, the court says: "When a confession is offered in a criminal case, and the defendant objects that he was induced to make it by threats or promises, it necessarily devolves upon the court to determine the preliminary question whether such inducements were shown; and the finding of the court upon this question cannot be revised upon a bill of exceptions, unless it involves some ruling in matter of law, or the whole evidence is reported with a view of submitting its sufficiency to the appellate court. If the presiding judge is satisfied that there were such inducements, the confession is to be rejected; if he is not satisfied, the evidence is admitted. But if there is any conflict of testimony, or room for doubt, the court will submit this question to the jury, with instructions that if they are satisfied that there were such inducements they shall disregard and reject the confession." This seems to place the matter upon the proper foundation, and properly guards and protects the rights of the accused. Com. v. Preece, 5 N. Eastn. Rep. (Mass.) 494; Com. v. Nott, 135 Mass. 269; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Com. v. Cuffee, 108 Mass. 285; People v. Barker, 27 N. Westn. Rep. (Mich.) 539.

It is by no means necessary that the confession be spontaneous, otherwise no confession ever made would be receivable. It is only where the confession may be said to be extorted, dragged reluctantly from the breast of the prisoner, through exciting his hopes or practising on his fears, by some promise or some threat, that the confession subsequently made is inadmissible, and a mere adjuration to speak the truth, no threats or promises being employed, or if it be apparent that there was no connection between the promise or threat and the confession, or that trick or artifice or intoxicating liquors were used to induce confession, the confession will not be rejected. State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 695; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128; Levison v. State, Ala. 520.

Mr. Taylor says (1 Taylor's Ev. Ed. § 807): "What language is sufficient to constitute such inducement or threat remains undetermined; and here the reported decisions certainly furnish an unsatisfactory guide. Some reason may be given for applying the rule to words as these: 'Unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a magistrate.' R. v. Thomas, 1 Lea, 291; R. v. Luckhurst, P. & D. 18. R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318. 'I will tell me where my goods are, and be favorable to you.' R. v. Cass, 1 C. & P. 293, n. 2; Boyd v. State, 2 Hu. (Tenn.) 37. 'I only want my money, and if you give me that, you may go to the devil.' R. v. Jones, R. & M. 152. 'If you will not tell all you know about it, of course we can do nothing.' R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551. 'You are under suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know.' R. v. L. Ston, 4 C. & P. 387; R. v. Cheverton, F. & F. 833. 'The watch has been found, and if you do not tell me your partner was, I will commit you to prison.' R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 106. R. v. Upchurch, 1 Mood. C. C. 106. 'You had better split, and not suffer all of them.' R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. But when confessions have been rejected in consequence of such inducements as the following having been given: 'It will be better for you to speak the truth.' R. v. Garner, 2 C. & K. 106. 'The inspector tells me you make breaking tools; if so, you had better tell the truth, it will be better for you.' R. v. Fennell, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 147. 'It is of no use to deny it, for there are a man and boy who will swear they saw you do it.' R. v. Mills, 6 C. & P. 106. 'Now, be cautious in the answer you give me to the questions I am putting to you about this watch.' Fleming, 1 Arm. M. & O. 330. 'Whatever you say will be taken down against you.' R. v. Harris, 1 C. & P. 106. 'Do not say anything to yourself, as what you say I shall take down, and it will be used for evidence against you at your trial.' R. v. Thomas, 8 C. & P. 140. 'What you are doing with is a very heavy offence, and I must be very careful in making an indictment to me or anybody else, and I don't intend to injure you; but anything in your defence we shall be ready to

ar, or send to assist you.' R. v. Mor-
n, 2 M. & R. 514.—In these and the e cases it is only too apparent that sue and common-sense have been sac-ced on the shrine of mercy. Indeed, e judges themselves have of late years
me to this conclusion, and after a sol-n discussion of the subject in the court riminal appeal, they have expressly erred the last three decisions cited ve, as cases which are discreditable the law. So anxious was the court at e time to exclude evidence of confess, that exhortations not to tell lies,
t to speak the truth, have been deemed ely to induce a false acknowledgment guilt, and, consequently, admissions de after such exhortations have more n once been rejected. But this para-tical opinion is now happily exploded." As to what shall be considered as a omise or inducement, saying to the soner that it would be better for him
he did confess, is sufficient to exclude confession. 2 East P. C. c. 16, § 94,
659; Newman v. State, 49 Ala. 9; s.
1 Am. Cr. Rep. 173; People v. Bar-
49 Cal. 342; State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510;
4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510. Compare Com.
Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431; Fouts v. te, 8 Ohio St. 98; Kelly v. State, 72
1. 244.

Where, on an indictment for robbery, a ness stated that he had said to one of prisoners, "You had better split, and suffer for all of them," the statement
the prisoner was rejected. R. v. omas, 6 C. & P. 353. So where a per-said to the prisoner in the police barrs, "If any other person had to do in case, it is better you should tell;" the ement there made by the prisoner was cted. Moody's Case, 2 Crawf. & D.
C. Joy, 12. So where on an indict-nt for larceny, a witness proved that ad said to the prisoner, "It would e been better if you had told at first;"
statement of the prisoner was reed; Gurney, B., saying, "That is an ncement. It amounts to this, that if ould have been better then, it would etter now. I think it hardly safe to it the evidence after that." R. v. kley, 6 C. & P. 175.

Where a constable, whilst he had a pris-
r in custody on a charge of larceny, ed him whether he had committed the ny, which he denied, and then said,
is no use for you to deny it, for there e man and boy who will swear that saw you do it;" Gurney, B., held this was an inducement to say someg, and therefore what the prisoner

said was not admissible. R. v. Mills, 6
C. & P. 146. So where, on an indictment for administering arsenic, it appeared that the surgeon who was called in saw
the prisoner, and said to her, "You are under a suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know," it was held that a statement made after this to the surgeon was inadmissible. R. v. Kingston,
4 C. & P. 387. So where it appeared, on an indictment for larceny, that the prisoner, being in the custody of a constable,
the latter said to the prosecutor, "You must not use any threat or promise to the prisoner," and immediately after this
the prosecutor said to the prisoner, "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, we, of course, can do nothing, I shall be glad if you will." The confession was held inadmissible; Patteson, J.,
saying, "I think this is a distinct promise; what could the prosecutor mean by saying, that if the prisoner would not tell, they could do nothing, but that if the prisoner did tell, they would do something for him?" R. v. Patridge, 7 C. &
P. 551.

The sheriff and State's attorney talked with the respondent while in jail. The sheriff first testified that no inducements
to confess were held out, but afterwards
said "that he presumed he and the State's attorney both told the respondent
it would be better for her to tell the whole story, and the punishment would be likely to be lighter." Held, that his testimony was not admissible. State v.
Day, 55 Vt. 510; s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep.
510.

Where A, whose property was stolen,
said to B, "You had better return that chair," and B replied he would do so.
Held inadmissible. Lacey v. State, 58
Ala. 385.

A confession was obtained from a weak-minded person under arrest for crime, by telling him that the best thing
he could do was to own up, giving him
drink, and taking him in irons to a lawyer's office, where he was interrogated with bolted doors and in the presence of those who were hostile to him, and where his answers were taken down in writing
and sworn to. Held, that the confession was not voluntary, and could not be used against him. Flagg v. People, 40 Mich.
706.

Where a prisoner was told by the committing magistrate, "If you do not tell the truth I will commit you," Held, that the confession was not admissible. Com.
v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 269.

Where an officer said to a prisoner

others, supposed—fairly and reasonably supposed—to have the authority to assure the benefit or to avert the danger; or the confessions are not harmonious and consistent with the other evidence,—they should reject them as wanting in credibility, or as not entitled to weight in passing upon the question of guilt or innocence. But although they may regard the confessions as springing from the hopes or fears of the accused unduly excited, yet if there is evidence corroborating them, or if they are harmonious and consistent with the other evidence, if of their truth they have no reasonable doubt, the confession should be accepted and acted upon by them. Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107.

In Com. v. Piper, 120 Mass. 185, the court says. "When a confession is offered in a criminal case, and the defendant objects that he was induced to make it by threats or promises, it necessarily devolves upon the court to determine the preliminary question whether such inducements were shown; and the finding of the court upon this question cannot be revised upon a bill of exceptions, unless it involves some ruling in matter of law, or the whole evidence is reported with a view of submitting its sufficiency to the appellate court. If the presiding judge is satisfied that there were such inducements, the confession is to be rejected; if he is not satisfied, the evidence is admitted. But if there is any conflict of testimony, or room for doubt, the court will submit this question to the jury, with instructions that if they are satisfied that there were such inducements they shall disregard and reject the confession." This seems to place the matter upon the proper foundation, and properly guards and protects the rights of the accused. Com. v. Preece, 5 N. Eastn. Rep. (Mass.) 494; Com. v. Nott, 135 Mass. 269; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Com. v. Cuffee, 108 Mass. 285; People v. Barker, 27 N. Westn. Rep. (Mich.) 539.

It is by no means necessary that the confession be spontaneous, otherwise no confession ever made would be receivable. It is only where the confession may be said to be extorted, dragged reluctantly from the breast of the prisoner, through exciting his hopes or practising on his fears, by some promise or some threat, that the confession subsequently made is inadmissible, and a mere adjuration to speak the truth, no threats or promises being employed, or if it be apparent that there was no connection between the promise or threat and the confession, or that trick or artifice or intoxicating liquors were used to induce confession, the confession will not be rejected. State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 100; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128; Levison v. State, Ala. 520.

Mr. Taylor says (1 Taylor's Ev., Ed. § 807): "What language is sufficient to constitute such inducement or threat remains undetermined; and here the reported decisions certainly furnish a very unsatisfactory guide. Some reason may be given for applying the rule to words as these: 'Unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a magistrate.' R. v. Thompson, 1 Lea, 291; R. v. Luckhurst, P. & D. 10; R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318. 'If you will tell me where my goods are, I will be favorable to you.' R. v. Cass, 1 C. & P. 293, n. 2; Boyd v. State, 2 Hum. (Tenn.) 37. 'I only want my money, and if you give me that, you may save your soul to the devil.' R. v. Jones, R. & C. 152. 'If you will not tell all you know about it, of course we can do nothing.' R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551. 'You are under suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know.' R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387; R. v. Cheverton, F. & F. 833. 'The watch has been found, and if you do not tell me your partner was, I will commit you to prison.' R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 100; R. v. Upchurch, 1 Mood. C. C. 100. 'You had better split, and not suffer all of them.' R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. But when confessions have been rejected in consequence of such expressions as the following having been used: 'It will be better for you to speak the truth.' R. v. Garner, 2 C. & K. 100. 'The inspector tells me you make breaking tools; if so, you had better tell the truth, it will be better for you.' R. v. Fennell, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 147. 'If you are of no use to deny it, for there are a man and boy who will swear they saw you do it.' R. v. Mills, 6 C. & L. 100. 'Now, be cautious in the answer; give me to the questions I am going to put to you about this watch.' Fleming, 1 Arm. M. & O. 330. 'Whatever you say will be taken down and used against you.' R. v. Harris, 1 Cox 106. 'Do not say anything to prejudice yourself, as what you say I shall take down, and it will be used for you against you at your trial.' R. v. Jones, 8 C. & P. 140. 'What you are charged with is a very heavy offence, and you must be very careful in making any statement to me or anybody else, that tends to injure you; but anything you in your defence we shall be ready to hear, or send to assist you.' R. v. Morris, 2 M. & R. 514,—in these and the like cases it is only too apparent that justice and common-sense have been sacrificed on the shrine of mercy. Indeed, the judges themselves have of late years come to this conclusion, and after a solemn discussion of the subject in the court of criminal appeal, they have expressly overruled the last three decisions cited above, as cases which are discreditable to the law. So anxious was the court at the time to exclude evidence of confessions, that exhortations not to tell lies, not to speak the truth, have been deemed likely to induce a false acknowledgment of guilt, and, consequently, admissions made after such exhortations have more than once been rejected. But this paradoxical opinion is now happily exploded. As to what shall be considered as a promise or inducement, saying to the prisoner that it would be better for him if he did confess, is sufficient to exclude the confession. 2 East P. C. c. 16, § 94, 659; Newman v. State, 49 Ala. 9; 31 Am. Cr. Rep. 173; People v. Barlow, 49 Cal. 342; State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510; 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510. Compare Com. v. Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431, Fouts v. State, 8 Ohio St. 98; Kelly v. State, 72 N. H. 244.

Where, on an indictment for robbery, a witness stated that he had said to one of the prisoners, "You had better split, and suffer for all of them," the statement of the prisoner was rejected. R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. So where a person said to the prisoner in the police barracks, "If any other person had to do in your case, it is better you should tell;" the statement there made by the prisoner was rejected. Moody's Case, 2 Crawf. & D. C. Joy, 12. So where on an indictment for larceny, a witness proved that he had said to the prisoner, "It would have been better if you had told at first;" the statement of the prisoner was rejected; Gurney, B., saying, "That is an inducement. It amounts to this, that if you would have been better then, it would be better now. I think it hardly safe to admit the evidence after that." R. v. Pickley, 6 C. & P. 175.

Where a constable, whilst he had a prisoner in custody on a charge of larceny, asked him whether he had committed the offence, which he denied, and then said, "It is no use for you to deny it, for there is the man and boy who will swear that they saw you do it;" Gurney, B., held that this was an inducement to say something, and therefore what the prisoner said was not admissible. R. v. Mills, 6 C. & P. 146. So where, on an indictment for administering arsenic, it appeared that the surgeon who was called in saw the prisoner, and said to her, "You are under a suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know," it was held that a statement made after this to the surgeon was inadmissible. R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387. So where it appeared, on an indictment for larceny, that the prisoner, being in the custody of a constable, the latter said to the prosecutor, "You must not use any threat or promise to the prisoner," and immediately after this the prosecutor said to the prisoner, "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, we, of course, can do nothing; I shall be glad if you will." The confession was held inadmissible; Patteson, J., saying, "I think this is a distinct promise; what could the prosecutor mean by saying, that if the prisoner would not tell, they could do nothing, but that if the prisoner did tell, they would do something for him?" R. v. Patridge, 7 C. & P. 551.

The sheriff and State's attorney talked with the respondent while in jail. The sheriff first testified that no inducements to confess were held out, but afterwards said "that he presumed he and the State's attorney both told the respondent it would be better for her to tell the whole story, and the punishment would be likely to be lighter." Held, that his testimony was not admissible. State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510; 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510.

Where A, whose property was stolen, said to B, "You had better return that chair," and B replied he would do so, Held inadmissible. Lacey v. State, 58 Ala. 385.

A confession was obtained from a weak-minded person under arrest for crime, by telling him that the best thing he could do was to own up, giving him drink, and taking him in irons to a lawyer's office, where he was interrogated with bolted doors and in the presence of those who were hostile to him, and where his answers were taken down in writing and sworn to. Held, that the confession was not voluntary, and could not be used against him. Flagg v. People, 40 Mich. 706.

Where a prisoner was told by the committing magistrate, "If you do not tell the truth I will commit you," Held, that the confession was not admissible. Com. v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 260.

Where an officer said to a prisoner

others, supposed—fairly and reasonably supposed—to have the authority to assure the benefit or to avert the danger; or the confessions are not harmonious and consistent with the other evidence,—they should reject them as wanting in credibility, or as not entitled to weight in passing upon the question of guilt or innocence. But although they may regard the confessions as springing from the hopes or fears of the accused unduly excited, yet if there is evidence corroborating them, or if they are harmonious and consistent with the other evidence, if of their truth they have no reasonable doubt, the confession should be accepted and acted upon by them. Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107.

In Com. v. Piper, 120 Mass. 185, the court says: "When a confession is offered in a criminal case, and the defendant objects that he was induced to make it by threats or promises, it necessarily devolves upon the court to determine the preliminary question whether such inducements were shown; and the finding of the court upon this question cannot be revised upon a bill of exceptions, unless it involves some ruling in matter of law, or the whole evidence is reported with a view of submitting its sufficiency to the appellate court. If the presiding judge is satisfied that there were such inducements, the confession is to be rejected; if he is not satisfied, the evidence is admitted. But if there is any conflict of testimony, or room for doubt, the court will submit this question to the jury, with instructions that if they are satisfied that there were such inducements they shall disregard and reject the confession." This seems to place the matter upon the proper foundation, and properly guards and protects the rights of the accused. Com. v. Preece, 5 N. Eastn. Rep. (Mass.) 494; Com. v. Nott, 135 Mass. 269; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Com. v. Cuffee, 108 Mass. 285; People v. Barker, 27 N. Westn. Rep. (Mich.) 539.

It is by no means necessary that the confession be spontaneous, otherwise no confession ever made would be receivable. It is only where the confession may be said to be extorted, dragged reluctantly from the breast of the prisoner, through exciting his hopes or practising on his fears, by some promise or some threat, that the confession subsequently made is inadmissible, and a mere adjuration to speak the truth, no threats or promises being employed, or if it be apparent that there was no connection between the promise or threat and the confession, or that trick or artifice or intoxicating liquors were used to induce confession, the confession will not be rejected. State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 106; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128; Levison v. State, Ala. 520.

Mr. Taylor says (1 Taylor's Ev., Ed. § 807): "What language is sufficient to constitute such inducement or threat remains undetermined; and here the reported decisions certainly furnish an unsatisfactory guide. Some reason may be given for applying the rule to words as these: 'Unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a magistrate.' R. v. Thompson, 1 Lea, 291; R. v. Luckhurst, P. & D. 11; R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318. 'If you will tell me where my goods are, I will be favorable to you.' R. v. Casa, 1 C. & P. 293, n. a; Boyd v. State, 2 Hurst (Tenn.) 37. 'I only want my money, and if you give me that, you may save your soul to the devil.' R. v. Jones, R. & C. 152. 'If you will not tell all you know about it, of course we can do nothing.' R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551. 'You are under suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know.' R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387; R. v. Cheverton, F. & F. 833. 'The watch has been found, and if you do not tell me your partner was, I will commit you to prison.' R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 106; R. v. Upchurch, 1 Mood. C. C. 106. 'You had better split, and not suffer all of them.' R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. But when confessions have been rejected in consequence of such expressions as the following having been made: 'It will be better for you to speak the truth.' R. v. Garner, 2 C. & K. 106. 'The inspector tells me you make breaking tools; if so, you had better tell the truth, it will be better for you.' R. v. Fennell, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 147. 'If you do no use to deny it, for there are a man and boy who will swear they saw you do it.' R. v. Mills, 6 C. & P. 106. 'Now, be cautious in the answers you give me to the questions I am going to put to you about this watch.' R. v. Fleming, 1 Arm. M. & O. 330. 'Whatever you say will be taken down and used against you.' R. v. Harris, 1 Cox C. C. 106. 'Do not say anything to prejudice yourself, as what you say I shall take down, and it will be used for you against you at your trial.' R. v. Dyer, 8 C. & P. 140. 'What you are charged with is a very heavy offence, and you must be very careful in making any statement to me or anybody else, that tends to injure you; but anything you in your defence we shall be ready to

ar. or send to assist you.' R. v. Mor- n, 2 M. & R. 514,—In these and the e cases it is only too apparent that justice and common-sense have been sacsified on the shrine of mercy. Indeed,
e judges themselves have of late years
me to this conclusion, and after a sol-discussion of the subject in the court criminal appeal, they have expressly erred the last three decisions cited ove, as cases which are discreditable
the law. So anxious was the court at e time to exclude evidence of confessions, that exhortations not to tell lies,
t to speak the truth, have been deemed ely to induce a false acknowledgment guilt; and, consequently, admissions
de after such exhortations have more n once been rejected. But this paraxical opinion is now happily exploded." As to what shall be considered as a omise or inducement, saying to the soner that it would be better for him
he did confess, is sufficient to exclude
confession. 2 East P. C. c. 16, § 94,
659; Newman v. State, 49 Ala. 9; s.
1 Am. Cr. Rep. 173; People v. Bar-
49 Cal. 342; State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510;
4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510. Compare Com.
Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431; Fouts v.
te, 8 Ohio St. 98; Kelly v. State, 72
A. 244.

Where, on an indictment for robbery, a ness stated that he had said to one of prisoners, "You had better split, and suffer for all of them," the statement
the prisoner was rejected. R. v. omas, 6 C. & P. 353. So where a per-said to the prisoner in the police barks, "If any other person had to do in case, it is better you should tell;" the ement there made by the prisoner was ected. Moody's Case, 2 Crawf. & D.
C. Joy, 12. So where on an indict-nt for larceny, a witness proved that had said to the prisoner, "It would
e been better if you had told at first;"
statement of the prisoner was reed: Gurney, B., saying, "That is an ucement. It amounts to this, that if ould have been better then, it would better now. I think it hardly safe to nt the evidence after that." R. v. lkey, 6 C. & P. 175.

Where a constable, whilst he had a pris-
r in custody on a charge of larceny,
ed him whether he had committed the oy, which he denied, and then said, it is no use for you to deny it, for there be man and boy who will swear that y saw you do it;" Gurney, B., held t this was an inducement to say some-
g, and therefore what the prisoner

said was not admissible. R. v. Mills, 6
C. & P. 146. So where, on an indictment for administering arsenic, it appeared that the surgeon who was called in saw
the prisoner, and said to her, "You are under a suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know," it was held that a statement made after this to the surgeon was inadmissible. R. v. Kingston,
4 C. & P. 387. So where it appeared, on an indictment for larceny, that the prisoner, being in the custody of a constable,
the latter said to the prosecutor, "You must not use any threat or promise to the prisoner," and immediately after this
the prosecutor said to the prisoner, "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, we, of course, can do nothing; I shall be glad if you will." The confession was held inadmissible; Patteson, J.,
saying, "I think this is a distinct promise; what could the prosecutor mean by saying, that if the prisoner would not tell, they could do nothing, but that if the prisoner did tell, they would do something for him?" R. v. Patridge, 7 C. &
P. 551.

The sheriff and State's attorney talked with the respondent while in jail. The sheriff first testified that no inducements
to confess were held out, but afterwards
said "that he presumed he and the State's attorney both told the respondent
it would be better for her to tell the whole story, and the punishment would be likely to be lighter." Held, that his testimony was not admissible. State v.
Day, 55 Vt. 510; s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep.
510.

Where A, whose property was stolen,
said to B, "You had better return that chair," and B replied he would do so.
Held inadmissible. Lacey v. State, 58
Ala. 385.

A confession was obtained from a weak-minded person under arrest for crime, by telling him that the best thing
he could do was to own up, giving him
drink, and taking him in irons to a lawyer's office, where he was interrogated with bolted doors and in the presence of those who were hostile to him, and where his answers were taken down in writing
and sworn to. Held, that the confession was not voluntary, and could not be used against him. Flagg v. People, 40 Mich.
706.

Where a prisoner was told by the committing magistrate, "If you do not tell the truth I will commit you," Held, that the confession was not admissible. Com.
v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 260.

Where an officer said to a prisoner

others, supposed—fairly and reasonably supposed—to have the authority to assure the benefit or to avert the danger; or the confessions are not harmonious and consistent with the other evidence,—they should reject them as wanting in credibility, or as not entitled to weight in passing upon the question of guilt or innocence. But although they may regard the confessions as springing from the hopes or fears of the accused unduly excited, yet if there is evidence corroborating them, or if they are harmonious and consistent with the other evidence, if of their truth they have no reasonable doubt, the confession should be accepted and acted upon by them. Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569; Brister v. State, 26 Ala. 107.

In Com. v. Piper, 120 Mass. 185, the court says: "When a confession is offered in a criminal case, and the defendant objects that he was induced to make it by threats or promises, it necessarily devolves upon the court to determine the preliminary question whether such inducements were shown; and the finding of the court upon this question cannot be revised upon a bill of exceptions, unless it involves some ruling in matter of law, or the whole evidence is reported with a view of submitting its sufficiency to the appellate court. If the presiding judge is satisfied that there were such inducements, the confession is to be rejected; if he is not satisfied, the evidence is admitted. But if there is any conflict of testimony, or room for doubt, the court will submit this question to the jury, with instructions that if they are satisfied that there were such inducements they shall disregard and reject the confession." This seems to place the matter upon the proper foundation, and properly guards and protects the rights of the accused. Com. v. Preece, 5 N. Eastn. Rep. (Mass.) 494; Com. v. Nott, 135 Mass. 269; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Com. v. Cuffee, 108 Mass. 285; People v. Barker, 27 N. Westn. Rep. (Mich.) 539.

It is by no means necessary that the confession be spontaneous, otherwise no confession ever made would be receivable. It is only where the confession may be said to be extorted, dragged reluctantly from the breast of the prisoner, through exciting his hopes or practising on his fears, by some promise or some threat, that the confession subsequently made is inadmissible, and a mere adjuration to speak the truth, no threats or promises being employed, or if it be apparent that there was no connection between the promise or threat and the confession, or that trick or artifice or intoxicating liquors were used to induce confession, the confession will not be rejected. State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 100; State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695; State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128, Levison v. State, Ala. 520.

Mr. Taylor says (1 Taylor's Ev., Ed. § 807): "What language is sufficient to constitute such inducement or threat remains undetermined; and here the reported decisions certainly furnish a very unsatisfactory guide. Some reason may be given for applying the rule to words as these: 'Unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a magistrate.' R. v. Thompson, 1 Lea, 291; R. v. Luckhurst, P. & D. 107; R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318. 'If you will tell me where my goods are, I will be favorable to you.' R. v. Cass, 1203, n. 2; Boyd v. State, 2 Hum. (Tenn.) 37. 'I only want my money, and if you give me that, you may go to the devil.' R. v. Jones, R. & F. 152. 'If you will not tell all you know about it, of course we can do nothing.' R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551. 'You are under suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know.' R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387; R. v. Cheverton, F. & F. 833. 'The watch has been found, and if you do not tell me your partner was, I will commit you to prison.' R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 100; R. v. Upchurch, 1 Mood. C. C. 100. 'You had better split, and not suffer all of them.' R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353. But when confessions have been rejected in consequence of such expressions as the following having been used: 'It will be better for you to speak the truth.' R. v. Garner, 2 C. & K. 100. 'The inspector tells me you make breaking tools; if so, you had better tell the truth, it will be better for you.' R. v. Fennell, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 147. 'If of no use to deny it, for there are a man and boy who will swear they saw you do it.' R. v. Mills, 6 C. & P. 100. 'Now, be cautious in the answers you give me to the questions I am going to put to you about this watch.' R. v. Fleming, 1 Arm. M. & O. 330. 'Whatever you say will be taken down and read against you.' R. v. Harris, 1 Cox C. C. 106. 'Do not say anything to prejudice yourself, as what you say I shall take down, and it will be used for evidence against you at your trial.' R. v. Dyer, 8 C. & P. 140. 'What you are charged with is a very heavy offence, and you must be very careful in making any statement to me or anybody else, that tends to injure you; but anything you in your defence we shall be ready to

ar, or send to assist you.' R. v. Mor- n, 2 M. & R. 514,—in these and the e cases it is only too apparent that justice and common-sense have been sac-ced on the shrine of mercy. Indeed,
e judges themselves have of late years
me to this conclusion, and after a sol-an discussion of the subject in the court criminal appeal, they have expressly eruled the last three decisions cited ove, as cases which are discreditable
the law. So anxious was the court at e time to exclude evidence of confessions, that exhortations not to tell lies,
t to speak the truth, have been deemed ely to induce a false acknowledgment guilt; and, consequently, admissions
de after such exhortations have more n once been rejected. But this para-ical opinion is now happily exploded." As to what shall be considered as a omise or inducement, saying to the soner that it would be better for him
he did confess, is sufficient to exclude
confession. 2 East P. C. c. 16, § 94,
659; Newman v. State, 49 Ala. 9; s.
1 Am. Cr. Rep. 173; People v. Bar-
49 Cal. 342; State v. Day, 55 Vt. 510;
s. 4 Am. Cr. Rep. 510. Compare Com.
Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431; Fouts v.
te, 8 Ohio St. 98; Kelly v. State, 72
s. 244.

Where, on an indictment for robbery, a ness stated that he had said to one of prisoners, "You had better split, and suffer for all of them," the statement
the prisoner was rejected. R. v. omas, 6 C. & P. 353. So where a per-said to the prisoner in the police barks, "If any other person had to do in case, it is better you should tell;" the ement there made by the prisoner was ected. Moody's Case, 2 Crawford & D.
C. Joy, 12. So where on an indict-nt for larceny, a witness proved that had said to the prisoner, "It would
e been better if you had told at first;"
statement of the prisoner was reed; Gurney, B., saying, "That is an ucement. It amounts to this, that if ould have been better then, it would better now. I think it hardly safe to nit the evidence after that." R. v. lley, 6 C. & P. 175.

Where a constable, whilst he had a pris-
r in custody on a charge of larceny,
ed him whether he had committed the ny, which he denied, and then said,
is no use for you to deny it, for there he man and boy who will swear that y saw you do it;" Gurney, B., held
t this was an inducement to say some-
g, and therefore what the prisoner

said was not admissible. R. v. Mills, 6
C. & P. 146. So where, on an indictment for administering arsenic, it appeared that the surgeon who was called in saw
the prisoner, and said to her, "You are under a suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know," it was held that a statement made after this to the surgeon was inadmissible. R. v. Kingston,
4 C. & P. 387. So where it appeared, on an indictment for larceny, that the prisoner, being in the custody of a constable,
the latter said to the prosecutor, "You must not use any threat or promise to the prisoner," and immediately after this
the prosecutor said to the prisoner, "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, we, of course, can do nothing; I shall be glad if you will." The confession was held inadmissible; Patteson, J.,
saying, "I think this is a distinct promise; what could the prosecutor mean by saying, that if the prisoner would not tell, they could do nothing, but that if the prisoner did tell, they would do something for him?" R. v. Patridge, 7 C. &
P. 551.

The sheriff and State's attorney talked with the respondent while in jail. The sheriff first testified that no inducements
to confess were held out, but afterwards
said "that he presumed he and the State's attorney both told the respondent
it would be better for her to tell the whole story, and the punishment would be likely to be lighter." Held, that his testimony was not admissible. State v.
Day, 55 Vt. 510; s. c., 4 Am. Cr. Rep.
510.

Where A, whose property was stolen,
said to B, "You had better return that chair," and B replied he would do so,
Held inadmissible. Lacey v. State, 58
Ala. 385.

A confession was obtained from a weak-minded person under arrest for crime, by telling him that the best thing
he could do was to own up, giving him
drink, and taking him in irons to a lawyer's office, where he was interrogated with bolted doors and in the presence of those who were hostile to him, and where his answers were taken down in writing
and sworn to. Held, that the confession was not voluntary, and could not be used against him. Flagg v. People, 40 Mich.
706.

Where a prisoner was told by the committing magistrate, "If you do not tell the truth I will commit you," Held, that the confession was not admissible. Com.
v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 260.

Where an officer said to a prisoner that "he could make him no promises, but if he made any disclosures that would be of benefit to the government, the officer would use his influence to have it go in his favor," held, that the confession was not admissible. Com. v. Taylor, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 606.

An acquaintance said to the prisoner, "Tom, this is mighty hard; they have got the deadwood on you, and you will be convicted," and at the same time said something about "owning up." The prosecutor said to the prisoner, "You are very young to be in such a difficulty as this; there must have been some one with you who is older, and I, if in your place, would tell who it is; it is not right for you to suffer the whole penalty, and let some one who is guiltier go free, it may go lighter with you." Held, that the confession was not admissible. Newman v. State, 49 Ala. 9; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 173.

While a confession induced by a promise made to the defendant by the prosecutor to dismiss the prosecution would not be admissible in evidence, yet if the confession was antecedent to, and therefore uninfluenced by, the promise, it is admissible. Murdock v. State, 68 Ala. 567. See Boyd v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 39.

Admissions by a prisoner charged with murder that he committed the crime are incompetent if fairly traceable as the inciting cause to a promise made by the chief prosecuting attorney that if the prisoner would confess he would do all he could to save him. Simmons v. State, 61 Miss. 243.

Any words spoken in the hearing of the defendant while in custody, which might generate hope or fear on his part, are sufficient to exclude his confessions thereby induced; and when a confession has been thus improperly obtained, any subsequent repetition of it must also be excluded, unless it is affirmatively shown that the effect of the improper influence had been entirely removed. Under these rules, as applied to the facts shown in this case, the defendant's confessions ought not to have been admitted. Owen v. State, 78 Ala. 425.

The mere dread of legal punishment is not such compulsion, nor the mere hope of immunity such persuasion, as destroys the voluntary character of a confession. But a confession obtained by an official promise to put an end to a prosecution is not admissible. Lopez v. State, 12 Tex. App. 27.

The words, "You had better own up," followed by, "I was in the place when you took it; we have got you down this is not the first you have taken have got other things against you no as good as this," spoken by one police officer to another in a police station, in the presence of the superior officer, the person addressed and of the speaker who has detected him in the act of stealing, will render a subsequent confession of guilt by the accused person inadmissible at the trial of an indictment against him for the larceny. Com. v. Nott, Mass. 269. In this case the court said: "The words, 'You had better tell the truth,' have sometimes been held to render a subsequent confession inadmissible, because they would probably be understood to mean that it would be better to say something, and that 'truth' in the mind of the speaker implied a confession of guilt. The Queen v. Vis, L. R. 1 C. C. 96, 99; R. v. Fen, 14 Cox C. C. 607; R. v. Doherty, 13 C. C. 23. But similar words, when implying that the speaker expected a confession, but only the truth, have been held or said not to render a subsequent confession inadmissible. The Queen v. Reeve, L. R. 1 C. C. 362; s. c., 12 C. C. 179; R. v. Baldry, 5 Cox C. C. 523, 529. In the present case, the words used were, in the first place, 'You better own up;' and these were equivalent to saying, 'You had better confess.' The words which follow imply that a denial would be useless, because the defendant had been seen to do the act. First there was an intimation that other criminal acts could be proved against him. These words were spoken before arrest, to be sure, but by a police officer at the police station, and in the presence of the officer in charge, who appears to have been the common superior of the speaker and of the defendant. They were simply an admonition to tell the truth, but they held out an inducement to make a confession of guilt. The confession, therefore, should have been excluded, and on this ground only the exception must be sustained."

While a person was under arrest for the larceny of two barrels of whiskey, the arresting officer told him "that they had evidence enough to bind him, that they had found one barrel of whiskey and the other would do him good, and that he had better tell, or not as well tell, him where the other barrel was;" and the accused person thereupon admitted that he took the whiskey, told the officer where the barrel could be found. On the trial of the person for larceny, at the close of all the evidence the defendant asked the judge to rule that the admission of the defendant to the officer should not be considered by the jury. The judge declined so to rule, but instructed the jury that, if they found that the officer said in substance, "We have found one barrel of the whiskey, and it will be better for you to tell where the other is," the jury should disregard the admission altogether. Held, that the defendant had no ground of exception. Com. v. Kennedy, 135 Mass. 543.

A confession of larceny of meat by an employee, induced by a statement from his employer that "if he would bring up the meat, there was a probability the whole matter could be settled," should not have been admitted. Byrd v. State, 58 Ga. 661.

R. testified that $393.50 in gold and $30 or $40 in paper were stolen from his bureau-drawer, and while the appellant and S. were under guard on their way to the county of K., where the money was stolen, and whence they had fled, that "both told him where the money was hid, and how they had divided it," and he found $3 and the sack his money was in when it was stolen where appellant said some of the money was hid, and that he found $300 in gold where S. told him the money was; that "he had held out the promise to R. and S., if they would tell him where the money was, that he would not prosecute him heavy, and told R. it would go better with him to tell him where the money was; that all he wanted was his money, and if R. would tell him where it was he would not prosecute him hard, or get the record from M. county." Held inadmissible, as under coercion. Rector v. Commonwealth, 80 Ky. 468.

Where a constable, who apprehended a prisoner for stealing a brass tap, asked him what he had done with the tap he had stolen from the prosecutor's premises, and said, "You had better not add to the crime of theft," and desired him to go with another constable and show him where he had put the tap; Gaselee, J., after expressing some doubt, refused to receive a confession made to the constable who had addressed these observations to the prisoner. R. v. Shepherd, 7 C. & P. 579. Mr. Joy (Joy on Conf. 8) observes "that the manner in which these words were used may have been considered by the learned judge, who saw and heard the witness, to be of a threatening nature, and calculated to lead the prisoner untruly to confess himself guilty; or the words may have been deemed in effect the same as if the constable had said, 'You have committed a theft, it will be better for you not to deny it—that is, to confess.' The words, viewed in this light, imply an inducement rather than a threat." "This case has been controverted," Joy on Conf. 8, note (a), but it is not stated upon what occasion. It is difficult to see how the observations of the constable could induce the prisoner to state what was false, especially as he desired the prisoner to go and show where he had put the tap; and therefore the case seems at variance with R. v. Court, 7 C. & P. 486, which seems to have proceeded on the correct principle, namely, that a confession is admissible unless it has been obtained by the prisoner being induced to suppose that it will be better for him to admit himself guilty of an offence which he really never committed.

Where an officer promised a girl of 14 that if she would tell, she should not be hurt, held, that the confession was inadmissible. Earp v. State, 55 Ga. 136; s. c., 1 Am Cr. Rep. 171.

Where the accused said of a witness who had testified against him, "that what he said was true as far as it went, but that he did say all, or enough," held, not admissible as a confession. Finn v. Commonwealth, 5 Rand. (Va.) 701.

Duress.—Where a party is compelled by duress to make a self-disserving statement, this statement cannot be put in evidence against him. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 661. Summerbell v. Summerbell, 37 N. J. Eq. 603.

"It has been thought that illegal imprisonment is calculated to exert such influence upon the mind of the prisoner as to justify the inference that his confessions made during its continuance were not voluntary; and on one occasion they appear on this ground to have been rejected. R. v. Ackroyd, 1 Lew. C. C. 49. But this doctrine cannot yet be considered as satisfactorily established. R. v. Thornton, 1 Mood. C. C. 27." Taylor's Ev. (8th Ed.) § 806.

Where the confession of a prisoner to an officer is voluntarily made, evidence thereof cannot be rejected, because of the fact that the officer held the prisoner in custody at the time upon an invalid process, or without any process or lawful right. Balbo v. People, 80 N. Y. 484.

Evidence that a witness forcibly placed defendant's foot in certain tracks near the scene of the burglary, and that they were of the same size, is not admissible. Day v. State, 63 Ga. 667. Compare State v. Graham, 74 N. Car. 646.

Confession Made When Under Arrest.—It is not sufficient to exclude a confession by a prisoner that he was under arrest at the time, or that it was made to the officer in whose custody he was, or in answer to questions put by him, or that it was made under hope or promise of a benefit of a collateral nature. Cox v. People, 80 N. Y. 500; State v. Tatro, 50 Vt. 483; Redd v. State, 68 Ala. 492; Spicer v. State, 69 Ala. 159; Jackson v. State, 69 Ala. 251; State v. Guy, 69 Mo. 430.

The fact that the prisoner's feet were tied at the time of making the confession does not render it inadmissible. State v. Patterson, 73 Mo. 695.

Evidence of confessions made by a defendant while under arrest are admissible, if voluntarily made; the fact that defendant was under arrest not necessarily proving that the declarations were involuntary. People v. Abbott, 4 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 769.

Confessions made under arrest, though not voluntary or after warning, may be used in evidence to the extent that the accused made statement of facts and circumstances found to be true, and no further. Only so much of the confession is admissible as was indicative of verified and inculpatory disclosures. Massey v. State, 10 Tex. App. 645; Davis v. State, 2 Tex. App. 588.

The kind of fear must be something more than the fear which is produced by the fact that the defendant was accused of a crime, and was arrested or taken into custody. Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Com. v. Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431; Com. v. Preece, 140 Mass. 276; State v. Carlisle, 57 Mo. 102.

In People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 384, the defendant was arrested by a constable, without warrant, on a charge of having murdered his wife. The constable took him before the coroner, who was holding an inquest on the body, by whom he was sworn and examined as a witness. It was held that the evidence thus given was not admissible on the prisoner's trial for the murder, and his conviction was reversed upon that ground. In the judgment all the judges who heard the case concurred. See People v. Mondon, 103 N. Y. 211.

The prisoner was charged with killing his wife; the murder was committed in the city of New York; the prisoner on the night of the murder left that city and went to Wheeling, W. Va., where he was arrested without a warrant by police officers who had followed him. While on the way to and before reaching this State he made a confession to one of the officers having him in charge, to the effect that he killed his wife. It was shown that no promises were held out, or threats used to induce the confession. It was held that it was properly received in evidence, that conceding the fact that the prisoner was at the time under illegal arrest, did not render it inadmissible. Balbo v. People, 80 N. Y. 484.

See EXAMINATION UNDER OATH, § 1. See, generally, Cobb v. State, 27 Ga. 648; Stephen v. State, 11 Ga. 225; Jefferson v. State, 58 Miss. 349; State v. Jefferson, 6 Ired (N. Car.) 305; Com. v. Mosley, Pa. St. 264; People v. McMahan, 2 P. C. C. (N. Y.) 663; People v. Murphy, N. Y. 590; People v. Rogers, 18 N. Y. 500; Cox v. People, 80 N. Y. 500; Austin v. State, 14 Ark. 556; Com. v. Cuffee, Mass. 285. Compare People v. Webb, 37 N. Y. 303; Young v. Com., 8 B. (Ky.) 366.

Under the Texas statute a judicial confession made while in custody is not inadmissible. Speer v. State, 4 Tex. A. 474.

Violence of Mob.—Two prisoners had been committed to jail on a charge of murder, then recently perpetrated. They were taken in a few days after their commitment, without legal authority, by a body of forty unarmed men; and handcuffed, chained together, and guarded, they were carried seven miles into the country to a church near the scene of the murder, before arriving at which place the crowd had increased to seventy. These men had obtained the keys of the jail from the sheriff on the assurance that they would restore to him the prisoners unharmed, accompanied with a threat that they would have the prisoners if he did not let them have the keys. Their purpose in taking the prisoners, as stated by them to the sheriff, was to get some money alleged to have been taken at the time of the commission of the offence; but it was not shown that the prisoners were informed of the assurance given the sheriff, or of the crowd's avowed purpose in taking them from jail. About ten minutes after arriving at the church, one of the prisoners, without any solicitation, so far as shown, asked permission to have a "friendly" talk with one of the crowd, whom the prisoner designated by name, and the privilege having been granted by the leader, the prisoner, with a party selected by him, and another of the original forty men, went a short distance into the woods, and there the prisoner admitted that he assisted in killing the victim; the confession then ceased; and afterwards the other pris-

"also confessed under similar circumstances." While going from the jail to the church, silence towards the prisoners was enjoined in their presence and afterwards observed. The prisoners at no time gave the slightest exhibition or evidence of apprehension or fright, and it was shown that no threats in words or otherwise than as above stated were made, or any inducement offered to the prisoners to obtain their confessions. Held, that the prisoners' confessions are not shown to have been uninfluenced by their surroundings, suspicious and menacing in their character as they were, and are therefore not shown to have been voluntary, and were not admissible in evidence. Young v. State, 68 Ala. 569.

Where a confession was made at a late hour of the night to the sheriff of the county by a prisoner who was confined in jail on a charge of murder, and who had been advised that a mob was gathering in town to rescue him from jail, and who knew that a guard of eight or ten persons had been summoned to protect him, one of whom had asked him "whether he was afraid of a mob," to which he replied in the negative, and to whom the sheriff himself, in the presence of a half-dozen of the guards, had stated that he was "in a bad fix," and, in reply to a question put by the prisoner, had told him that "sometimes in cases of assault and battery and similar cases it would be best to plead guilty,"—held, that such confession was obtained under the combined influence of both hope and fear, and was inadmissible. Another confession of a similar character made by the prisoner on the following morning to the jailer, when he went up to feed the prisoners, which seems to have been elicited by a question put by him to the prisoner, asking whether the prisoner had anything to say to him, is presumed to have originated from the same motives, and is inadmissible, in the absence of evidence showing that the influence exerted upon the mind of the prisoner by the events of the previous night had been removed. Redd v. State, 69 Ala. 255.

A confession was held admissible, notwithstanding that on the day before the prisoner, when confined, was actually threatened by third persons with violence. Mose v. State, 36 Ala. 211.

The defendant was arrested in the night of the day on which the poisoning was alleged to have been done, on suspicion of being the person who had done it. After her arrest she made her escape, but was recaptured a day or two afterwards, and was confined by a chain around her neck, in a negro-house about one hundred yards from the residence of R., and was guarded by a negro constable. About dark, witness and H., another neighbor, fearing she might again escape, concluded to carry her to the house of R., and remain there with her that night. They started with her from the negro-house to the house of R., with the chain around her neck, and the negro constable and some other negroes along with them. After going a short distance they came to a tree, when the defendant, without any one having said anything to her on the subject, said to them, "If you will stop here I will tell you all about it," or that in substance. Thereupon they all stopped, and the defendant stated to them that she took the morphine out of the bottle in the trunk and put it in the cup of coffee which she had prepared and was carrying to Mrs. R.; that she was mad with R., and wanted to kill him, but concluded to try it on Mrs. R. first. Witness testified also, that after they stopped, and defendant began to tell them about it, other negroes came up to where they were, and when defendant had finished telling them about it, he supposed there were fifteen or twenty, or probably more, present; that after defendant said she had put the morphine in the coffee, as above stated, one of the negroes said to her that she ought to have her neck broken, and made demonstrations of violence towards her; but witness and said H. told them they should not hurt her, and then carried her to the house of R. Witness testified also that up to the time when defendant told them to stop and she would tell them all about it, no threat of any kind had been used, and no promise or inducement of any kind made or held out to induce her to tell, and that no threat was made during the entire time, except as above stated. Held admissible. Kendall v. State, 65 Ala. 493.

The prisoner after his arrest was tied by a party of negroes and taken to the spot where the body of the murdered man lay. A large party of negroes, mostly armed, were present. They were all greatly excited, and insisted that the prisoner should be hung. He then confessed. Held, that the confession was admissible. Cady v. State, 44 Miss. 332. See State v. Ingram, 16 Kan. 14.

Where a mob surrounded the jail, and the sheriff told the prisoner that she was "gone up," held, that her confession was not admissible. Self v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 244.

The prisoner, accused of murder, was brought handcuffed to a place where a number of the relatives and neighbors of the deceased were assembled, and he was threatened with violence. The officer assured him that he would be protected. Held, that confessions made while he was handcuffed and after the threats, and without any solicitations, were admissible. Honeycutt v. State, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 371.

When Admissible — "The cases excluding confessions on the ground of unlawful inducement have gone too far for the protection of crime." R. v. Reeve, 12 Cox C. C. 179.

"The real question is whether there has been any threat or promise of such a nature that the prisoner would be likely to tell an untruth for fear of the threat, or hope of profit from the promise." Keating, J., in R. v. Reason, 12 Cox C. C. 228.

The hope or fear of some collateral benefit or injury does not render the confession inadmissible. State v. Wentworth, 37 N. H. 196. Thus where one was notified by his employer that he would be discharged unless he settled for the stolen property with the owner, but that if he would settle he should be kept at work, and a promise by the employer to say nothing about it to hurt him if he would settle, do not render confessions subsequently made in the same conversation incompetent. Com. v. Howe, 2 Allen (Mass.), 153.

Where the owner of stolen property, not suspecting the defendant, offered him a reward if he would get the property and thief, and the defendant a few days thereafter brought back the property and demanded the reward, and on being refused because he had not brought the thief, replied that he was the thief, and again demanded the reward, held, that such declarations were admissible as confessions of guilt. McIntosh v. State, 52 Ala. 355.

The fact that the defendant, in making the confession, was actuated by the belief that he was suspected of the offence and was in danger of being prosecuted for it, does not make the confession a compulsory one. Allen v. State, 12 Tex. App. 190.

Where the prisoner, who was tied, said to the officer, "If you will untie me I will tell you," and on being loosened confessed, held admissible. State v. Cruse, 74 N. Car. 491. See State v. Tatro, 50 Vt. 483.

In Fife v. Com., 29 Pa. St. 429, the jailer, in a conversation with a prisoner respecting herself and other prisoners, had said to her "that if the community wealth would use any of them as a witness, I suppose it would prefer you either of the others," and she afterwards made a confession. It was held that there was nothing in this expression of the jailer which amounted to a promise or which should cause the confession to be rejected.

On the trial, P., the father of I., a witness for the State, testified that in conversation with the defendant he, defendants, commenced telling on him, and witness cautioned him not to tell anything to convict himself, and said to "that he did not come there to get evidence to convict him, but he wanted to use him as a witness;" that he made no promise, and thereupon the defendant admitted his taking his girl off, that he did it; that prior to that time he had no information of the defendant's guilt. Held admissible. State v. Geo, 93 N. Car. 567.

The witness stated: "I told him to tell on himself; but if there were others in with him, to tell it; we could then use him as a State witness against them. He then said he stole the horse and no one else had anything to do with it." Held, though confessions made under persuasion or threats, however light, weak, must be excluded, this confession was voluntary. State v. Rigby, 6 (Tenn.), 554.

Where an employer said to his clerk, "I am satisfied that there are other receivers whom we have not yet discovered. I should like to have you make a confession in breast of this matter, as W. has done." Held, that the confession was admissible. Com. v. Sego, 125 Mass. 210.

The watch of the deceased had been found upon the prisoner's person. The officer then asked him where the real Mrs. H.'s jewelry was. The prisoner replied that he knew nothing about Mrs. H.'s jewelry. Afterwards the officer repeated the question, and the prisoner said, "Will you do me a favor?" The officer replied, "I will if I can; I sympathize with you," or "I pity you;" "You are in a bad fix." The prisoner then requested that the officer would send his clothing and things to his mother, and not let his mother know that anything had happened to him. The prisoner then in answer to a question put by the officer who asked him to tell about the murder, went on to make a detailed statement how he entered the house and what he did. The subsequent confessions were made to other parties; they were objected to on the ground that they were made

After the supposed inducements held out by the officer. Held, the confession was admissible. Cox v. People, 80 N.Y. 500. Upon trial of an indictment for larceny, it appeared that while officers were making a search of defendant's house for the stolen property, one of them said to her that she might as well own up, as they had proof sufficient to convict her, and that she might consider herself under arrest. Thereafter she made certain statements, which were proved under objection and exception. Held, that conceding the statements so made would be regarded as confessions, evidence thereof was competent under the Code of Cr. Proc. (§ 395); it could not be considered that the statement of the officer was a threat, or that the declarations of defendant were induced by fear. People v. McCallam, 103 N. Y. 587.

Confession voluntarily made to members of the same church is admissible. Com. v. Drake, 15 Mass. 161.

The confession of the accused, if made voluntarily, not being induced by hope or fear excited by others, are admissible evidence against him, though made while he is under arrest to the officer having him in custody, and in response to inquiries addressed to him by the officer, though a mob was threatening violence. Edwards v. State, 68 Ala. 492; Rice v. State, 71 Ala. 38.

The fact that a prisoner had been threatened with personal violence does not disqualify his subsequent confession, voluntarily made, when he was entirely removed beyond and relieved from the influence of such threats. Walker v. State, 9 Tex. App. 38. See Wilson v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 232.

Where it appeared that the officer making the arrest was accompanied by two other men, and that they were all large, strong men, but were not armed, and the prisoner was a small, weakly man, but that no threats or violence were used and no inducements held out, held, that confessions could not be excluded on the ground that the defendant was put in fear by force and numbers. State v. Howard, 92 N. Car. 772.

The State was allowed, against defendant's objection, to prove by one L., a deputy-sheriff, a confession made to him by the defendant, upon, in substance, the following preliminary proof: When the defendant rode off in the direction of his home after killing C., several armed persons followed for the purpose of arresting him. Three of the number found him in a field near his house, about two miles from J., with his gun, and drew their guns on him. About this time the witness L. and others came up, and the defendant said to him, "You are an officer and a gentleman. Don't let these men hurt me." He was arrested by L. without resistance, and carried back to J., he and L. riding in a buggy, with some of the crowd in the rear and some in front. After going a short distance the witness said to the defendant, "I am sorry you have got into trouble;" and thereupon the defendant made the confession, which was as follows: "The defendant said he had done wrong; that he expected they would hang him or penitentiary him, and that he did not care a d—n which; that he did not intend to employ a lawyer; and that he had consulted his family about it last night, and it was all right." He also said in the same conversation that "C. [the deceased] had beat him up and broke two of his ribs, and that he was an old man." It was also shown that no threats or inducements were made against or offered to the defendant before he made the confession. Held admissible. De Arman v. State, 71 Ala. 351.

Where representations of the infamy which would attend concealment were made, and the accused, while greatly agitated, confessed, held, that it was admissible. State v. Crank, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 66.

A confession induced by wrong means may be used to the extent of showing that the prisoner had knowledge of the facts to the discovery of which his confession has led. White v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 338.

A and B were jointly indicted for larceny. A witness who had also had property stolen testified that he went to A, while in jail, and told him that B had turned State's evidence, and asked A to do likewise in order to convict B, promising that if he would do so he would "clear A of the charge of taking another's property." A said he did not take witness's property, but did take the prosecuting witness's. Held, the testimony was admissible. State v. Fortner, 43 Iowa, 494.

Where the accused was urged to confess if guilty, but not to confess if innocent, held admissible. Meinaka v. State, 55 Ala. 47.

Where A threatened B with a gun, whereupon he surrendered to arrest, and after walking two miles together, upon A's assuring him that he would not be harmed, B confessed. Held admissible. Wilson v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 232.

A confession obtained by a private person by saying to the accused, "I know your father, and you had better tell me, so I can tell him so that he can help you," is admissible. Ulrich v. People, 39 Mich. 245.

See further, for facts of admissible confessions, Com. v. Mitchell, 117 Mass. 431; Com. v. Morey, 1 Gray (Mass.), 461; Com. v. Tuckerman, 10 Gray (Mass.), 173; Com. v. Whitmore, 11 Gray (Mass.), 201; Com. v. Howe, 2 Allen (Mass.), 153; State v. Tatro, 50 Vt. 483; State v. Howard, 17 N. H. 171; State v. Wentworth, 37 N. H. 196; State v. Patter, 18 Conn. 166; People v. Phillips, 42 N. Y. 200; Ward v. People, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 395; People v. Burns, 2 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 34; State v. Carlisle, 57 Mo. 102; Hawkins v. State, 7 Mo. 190; State v. Brockman, 46 Mo. 566; Austine v. State, 51 Ill. 236; Cropper v. U. S., 1 Morris (Iowa), 259; Fouts v. State, 8 Ohio St. 98; Cunningham v. Commonwealth, 9 Bush (Ky.), 149; Spence v. State, 17 Ala. 192; Carrol v. State, 23 Ala. 28; Aaron v. State, 37 Ala. 106; Frain v. State, 40 Ga. 529; Dick v. State, 30 Miss. 593; Lynes v. State, 36 Miss. 617; People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 167; State v. Cook, 15 Rich. (S. Car.) 29; State v. Cowan, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 239; State v. Freeman, 12 Md. 100; Com. v. Dillon, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 116.

If what is said to a prisoner have no tendency to induce him to make an untrue statement, his confession is admissible. 3 Russ. on Cr. (5th Ed.) 442. On an indictment for cattle-stealing, a witness stated that he had had a conversation with the prisoner, in which the prisoner asked the witness if it would be better for him to confess; upon which the witness replied that it would be better for him not to confess, but that the prisoner might say what he had to say to him, for it should go no further; it was objected that the statement made to the witness was not receivable, as it had been obtained under a promise. Coleridge, J.: "The only proper question is, whether the inducement held out to the prisoner was calculated to make his confession an untrue one. I think that what was said in the present case must have had a contrary tendency." R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 345. So if what is said to a prisoner contain neither a promise, threat, nor inducement to confess, the statement of the prisoner is admissible. The prisoner having been charged on oath by B., an accessory before the fact, with having set fire to three hay stacks belonging to O., N., and G., the constable went with a warrant, specifying all the three charges, and stating them to have been made on the oath of the accessory, and when the prisoner was apprehended she was told that there was a very serious oath laid against her by B., who had sworn that she had set fire to O.'s, N.'s, and G.'s ricks, which the prisoner made a statement in which was allowed to be given in evidence. R. v. Long, 6 C. & P. 179.

If a person advise a prisoner to be sure to tell the truth, and he then makes a statement, such statement is admissible on the ground that such advice cannot be supposed to induce the prisoner to confess that he is guilty of a crime of which he is really innocent. On an indictment for forgery, the committing magistrate proved that no inducement was held out to the prisoner to confess, but the prosecutor had said, in the presence of the prisoner, that he considered the prisoner as the tool of one G., where the magistrate then told the prisoner to be sure to tell the truth: on which the prisoner made a statement. It was objected that this statement was not receivable, though this was not, in form, an inducement to confess, it was in effect so. A person in authority advising a prisoner to tell the truth, conveyed to the ears of the accused that it would be better for him if he confessed the charge. Lord Hale, J.: "I think I ought to receive this evidence. It can hardly be said that in telling a man to be sure to tell the truth, he is advising him to confess what he is really not guilty of. The object of the rule relating to the exclusion of confessions is to exclude all confessions which may have been procured by the prisoner being led to suppose that it will be better for him to admit himself to be guilty of an offence which he really never committed." R. v. Court, 7 C. & P. 48.

So where at the conclusion of the examinations before the magistrate the prisoner began to make a statement, where the magistrate said to him, "Be sure you say nothing but the truth, or it will be taken against you, and may be given in evidence against you at your trial," it was objected that the statement made was inadmissible; it was answered that the only proper question was whether the words said to the prisoner had a tendency to induce him to make a untrue statement. Here the prisoner was told not to say anything that was false, and the preceding case was expressed in point. Rolfe, B.: "I am glad to find that there is such an authority; then, in some previous cases the other way, where it was held that it was an inducement to tell a prisoner that it would be better to tell the truth. I think this stateadmissible." R. v. Holmes, 1 C. & K. 48.

The prisoner was indicted for setting fire to her master's farm-building; she was about to go away from a policeman, but he prevented her, saying she was his prisoner upon the charge of this arson. He desired to change her dress. He said she might do so, but she must remain in custody, and he gave her into the charge of Mrs. A., who was a married daughter of her master, but did not live with her father, and had no control over the prisoner by reason of any relation of master and servant. Mrs. A. went with her into a laundry where her clothes were; but both Mrs. A. and the prisoner considered that the latter was in custody. Mrs. A. said to her, "Jane, I am very sorry for you; you ought to have known better; tell me the truth whether you did or not." She said, "I am innocent." Mrs. A. said, "Don't run your soul into more sin, but tell the truth." The prisoner then confessed. And on a case reserved upon the question whether the confession was legally admissible in evidence, it was held that there was no threat or inducement, and no sufficient authority on the part of Mrs. A. to exclude a statement made in consequence of any inducement to confess held out by her. R. v. Sleeman, Dears. C. C.

J. and G. were indicted for stealing and receiving hops, the property of A., a policeman, had gone to G.'s house, where J. and another brother, W., then were, and had found some hops in a room upstairs. He and the prosecutor then went into a parlor, where J., G., and W. were. L. then charged W. and J. with stealing the hops, and G. with receiving them, knowing them to have been stolen; which W. said, "Well, J., you had better tell Mr. A. the truth." Neither the prosecutor nor L. dissented from or marked on W.'s advice; whereupon J. said, "I will tell the truth. I did take some hops, and must risk it." L. then took the three to the Bridewell, and on their way J. said of his own accord, "I'll tell you how I got them hops," etc. Upon a case reserved, which stated that "if the confession was, under the circumstances, receivable, the conviction was to stand," the conviction was affirmed. R. v. Parker, L. & C. 42.

The result of these cases is that "as a general rule, an exhortation to speak the truth ought not to exclude a confession" R. v. Erle, J., R. v. Moore, 2 Den. C. C. 1.

But it has been repeatedly held that to tell a prisoner that it would be better for him to tell the truth will exclude a confession. See per Maule, J., in R. v. Garner, 1 Den. C. C. 329; per Pollock, C. B., in R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 430.

Where a prisoner and his wife were both in custody on a charge of receiving bank-notes, but in separate rooms, and a person said to him, "I hope you will tell, because the prosecutrix can ill afford to lose the money," and the constable said, "If you will tell where the property is, you shall see your wife;" Patteson, J., said, "I think that this is not such an inducement as will exclude the evidence of what the prisoner said: it amounts only to this, that if he would tell where the money was, he should see his wife." And the statement made by the prisoner was received. R. v. Lloyd, 6 C. & P. 393.

It is no objection to receiving a confession that the party to whom it was made takes an oath that he will not reveal what is told to him. After the prisoner had been committed on a charge of murder, a fellow-prisoner said to him, "I wish you would tell me how you murdered the boy; pray split." The prisoner said, "Will you be upon your oath not to mention what I tell you?" The other prisoner went upon his oath, that he hoped, if he told, that he might never stir out of that place again. The prisoner then made a statement. It was held that this was not such an inducement as to render the statement inadmissible, and that, although such oaths were very wrong and wicked, still they were not binding; and that every person, except counsel and attorneys, were bound to reveal what they might have heard. R. v. Shaw, 6 C. & P. 372.

So where a constable told a prisoner that his father had been charged with murder. He had been previously cautioned not to criminate himself, as the witness would bring it all against him. The prisoner said he hoped no one would be charged with the murder but himself, and then made a confession. Doherty, C. J., having conferred with Torrens, J., admitted the confession, observing that, although such announcement was likely to act upon the feelings of the prisoner, he would not be warranted on that ground in refusing to receive it. Nolan's Case, Joy on Conf. 16; 1 Crawf. & Dix C. C. 74. So where the prisoner was indicted for concealing the birth of her child, a medical witness said that he examined the prisoner in custody, and found that her breasts were full of milk, and asked her whether she had not recently had a child, and added that if she refused to tell he would examine her person more closely; the prisoner then said, "It is unnecessary to examine me, for I had a child." Torrens, J., admitted this confession, on the ground that the witness was endeavoring to ascertain a fact within his own province, and not inconsistent with the prisoner's innocence, and that the declaration of the witness was not a threat within the rule which excludes confessions. Cain's Case, Joy on Conf. 16; 1 Crawf. & Dix C. C. 37.

If the proposal to confess comes from the prisoner, it seems that his confession is admissible, although the prosecutor, in consideration of his doing so, says he will do all he can for him. Upon an indictment for housebreaking, it appeared that the prisoner being in the shop of the prosecutor, handcuffed, some recommendations to confess had been, in the absence of the prosecutor, made to him by the person who had been left in charge of the house; and the prisoner said, that if the handcuffs were taken off he would tell where he put the property. He had expressed doubts whether, if he told where the property was, he could rely on being leniently dealt with, and, after the prosecutor came in, he was told that they would do all they could for him. It was objected that the statement was inadmissible, as it was made under duress, and to deliver himself from the confinement. Bosanquet, J.: "I do not think there is anything in the objection, but I will take a note of it." Taunton, J.: "I take it no man ever makes a confession voluntarily, without proposing to himself in his own mind some advantage to be derived from it." The statement was received. R. v. Green, 6 C. & P. 655.

In a case where M., the chief officer of the police at Liverpool, stated that on the 18th of November the prisoner, a boy of fourteen years of age, was apprehended by his directions, without any warrant, between twelve and one o'clock, and that he was carried to the police office about one o'clock. The magistrates were then sitting at a very short distance, and continued sitting till between two and three, and till the business presented to them was finished; but the prisoner was not carried before them, because the police officer was engaged elsewhere. The officer ordered the prisoner to Bridewell on his own authority, between four and five o'clock; and between five and six o'clock he told the prisoner that, in consequence of the falsehoods he had told, and the prevarications he had made, there was no doubt but he had set the premises on fire; and he therefore asked him if any person had been concerned with him, or induced him to do it? The prisoner said he had not done it. The police officer replied that he had not have told so many falsehoods, had if he had not been concerned in it. He again asked him if anybody had induced him to do it? The prisoner began to cry, and made a full confession. In speaking of the falsehoods, the officer referred to an examination of a prisoner he had himself made. The prisoner was taken before he had dinner, and had had no food from the time he was apprehended till after his confession. Levy, J., thought it deserved consideration whether a confession so obtained, the detention of the prisoner was not illegal, and when the conduct of the prisoner was calculated to intimidate, was admissible in evidence, and reserved the question for the opinion of the judges, a majority of whom held the confession rightly received, on the ground that no threat or promise had been used. R. v. Thomas, 1 R. & M. C. C. R. 27.

In another case, R. v. Derrington, 1 R. & P. 418, where the prisoner, while in jail, asked the turnkey if he would put a letter into the post for him, and, after promising to do so, the prisoner gave him a letter addressed to his father, and the turnkey, instead of putting it into the post, gave it to the visiting magistrates of the jail, who gave it to the prosecutor. Row, B., held that the letter so obtained was admissible in evidence, and he remembered making an objection, at the bar, to evidence under the circumstances before Gould, J., who overruled it.

Upon an indictment for murder, it appeared that the prisoner, who was of the age of fourteen, was taken into custody by W., not a constable, and on the same night was in the parlor of the house in which he was taken; several persons, neighbors, but no constable, were in the room, and had been asking him questions about the children whom he was charged with drowning. One C., who was present when W. took the prisoner up, and who was not a constable, stated, "I took him to kneel down and tell the truth." W. took him into Adams' parlor, and to question him how the children came to get into the pit; whether they fell in, or were put in; he said he should not say anything about it. W. asked him if he would tell any one else, if he would go out of the parlor; the prisoner said no. W. then went out. I. said to the prisoner, "Now kneel you down by the side of the pit and tell me the truth." I. believed that was the first thing. He did kneel down said I was going to ask him a very serious question, and I hoped he would tell me the truth in the presence of the Almighty. I then said, "Did these children fall into the pit?" He said he pushed one in with one foot, and the other with the other, but not purposely. M. asked him if he had any malice or revenge; he said, No. Subsequently to this, the son of the innkeeper stated that next day the prisoner said he would tell him all about it. He neither promised nor threatened him. The prisoner then made a statement to him, which was given in evidence. Other declarations also were given in evidence. An examination of the prisoner, who could not write, was put in; it began, "W. Wild being cautioned," etc., and the evidence being read over to him, said, "I can give no other account than I have already given," etc. The prisoner having been found guilty, upon a case reserved as to the admissibility of the evidence, the judges present were unanimous that the confession was strictly admissible, but they much disapproved of the mode in which it was obtained. R. v. Wild, R. & M. C. C. 452.

Inducement by Offer of Pardon.—The mere knowledge by a prisoner of a handbill, by which a government reward and promise of pardon are held out to any accomplice, does not furnish sufficient grounds for rejecting the confession of a prisoner. But where it was shown that the prisoner had asked to see any handbill that might appear, and one was accordingly shown him, in which a promise of pardon was held out to an accomplice, upon which the prisoner said he saw no reason why he should suffer for the crime of another, and that, as government had offered a free pardon to any one of the parties concerned who had not struck the blow, he would tell all about the matter, and accordingly did so, Cresswell, J., held the confession inadmissible, as it was sufficiently clear that the prisoner was influenced by the offer of pardon. R. v. Cresswell, 6 Car. & M. 584. In R. v. Blackburn, 6 Cox Cr. Ca. 334, a statement made by the prisoner in a room, in which a large printed handbill, containing an offer of reward and pardon, was hanging up, was rejected by Talfourd, J., after consulting with Williams, J., the prisoner appearing to have the notion that he would be admitted as witness for the crown. In R. v. Dingley, 1 C. & K. 37, the prisoner asked the chaplain of the jail if any offer of pardon had been made; the chaplain said there had, but added that, if the prisoner made a statement, he hoped he would understand that he (the chaplain) could offer him no inducement, as it must be his own free and voluntary act. The prisoner afterwards signed a confession before a justice, in which he distinctly stated that no person had made any promise, or held out any inducement to him to confess anything. Pollock, C. B., held that the confession was admissible."

Inducement by Promise of Immunity from Prosecution.—See People v. McCallam, 103 N. Y. 587; People v. Druse, 103 N. Y. 655; People v. Mondon, 103 N. Y. 211.

Inducement by Accepting as State's Evidence.—If the accused receives a promise that he shall not be prosecuted if he will become State's evidence, and make a full disclosure, and upon such promise he makes a confession, but afterward refuses to testify, the confession will be admissible in evidence against him. Com. v. Knapp, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 477. See Lopez v. State, 12 Tex. App. 27; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 173.

Where an intimation is given that the accused might be accepted as State's evidence, but no promise is made, his confession is admissible. State v. Squires, 48 N. H. 364. Compare State v. Thompson, Kirby (Conn.), 345; State v. Phelps, Kirby (Conn.), 282.

Where a promise is made that the accused might be used as State's evidence, his confession is not admissible. State v. Johnson, 30 La. Ann. Pt. II. 881; Thorn's Case, 4 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 81.

Inducement—Where Held to Have Ceased.—Although a confession made under the influence of a promise or threat is inadmissible, there are yet many cases in which it has been held that, notwithstanding such threat or promise may have been made use of, the confession is to be received if it has been made under such circumstances as to create a reasonable presumption that the threat or promise had no influence, or had ceased to have any influence, upon the mind of the party. State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404. Thus, if the impression that a confession is likely to benefit him has been removed from the mind of the prisoner, what he says will be evidence against him, although he has been obliged to confess. Where the prisoner, on being taken into custody, had been told by a person who came to assist the constable, that it would be better for him to confess, but, on his being examined before the committing magistrate on the following day, he was frequently cautioned by the magistrate to say nothing against himself, a confession under these circumstances was held by Mr. Justice Bayley to be clearly admissible. R. v. Lingate, 1815; 1 Phill. Ev. (10th Ed.) 414. So where it appeared that a constable told a prisoner he might do himself some good by confessing, and the prisoner afterwards asked the magistrate if it would be any benefit to him to confess, on which the magistrate said he would not say it would; the prisoner having afterwards, on his way to prison, made a confession to another constable, and, again in prison, to another magistrate; the judges unanimously held that the confessions were admissible in evidence, on the ground that the magistrate's answer was sufficient to efface any expectation which the constable might have raised. R. v. Rosier, East. T. 1821; 1 Phill. Ev. (10th Ed.) 414. A prisoner charged with murder was visited by a magistrate, who told him that, if he was not the man who struck the fatal blow, he would use all his endeavors and influence to prevent any ill consequences from falling on him, if he would disclose what he knew of the murder. The magistrate wrote to the secretary of state, who returned answer that mercy could not be extended to the prisoner; which answer was communicated to the prisoner, who afterwards sent for the coroner, and desired to make a statement to him. The coroner cautioned him, and added that no hopes or promise of pardon could be held out to him. Littledale, J., ruled that a confession subsequently made by the prisoner to the coroner was admissible; for that the caution given by the latter must be taken to have completely put an end to all the hopes that had been held out. R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 224. See also R. v. Howes, 6 C. & P. 404. A girl charged with poisoning was told by her mistress that if she did not tell all about it that night, the constable would be sent for next morning to take her to S. (meaning before the magistrate there); upon which the prisoner made a statement. The next morning a constable was sent for, who took the prisoner into custody, and on the way to the magistrate, without any inducement from the constable, she confessed to him. Bosanquet, J., said: "I think this statement receivable. The inducement was, that if she confessed that night the constable would not be sent for, and she would not be taken before the magistrates. Now she must have known when she made this statement that the constable was taking her to the magistrates. The inducement there was at an end." R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318.

Where a prisoner, when before a magistrate, stated that he had confessed to two constables, who were then present, and did not deny what the prisoner said in consequence of their having told him that two others had split, and that he might as well, and that if he told all he would be acquitted; and the magistrate told him that he need not say anything before him unless he pleased, and that his confession would do him no good, but that he would be committed to prison to take his trial,—it was held that the confession made before the magistrate was admissible, as it could not be said to result from the same influence as the confession to the constables. R. v. Howes, 6 C. & P. 404 (25 E. C. R.), Lord Denman, C. J. A prisoner when in custody, said to a magistrate that he wished to see his priest. The priest stated that, observing the prisoner appeared greatly agitated, he said to him, "The evidence at the quest was so clear against you, there can be no doubt you are the guilty man." The prisoner then stated something to the priest, who thereupon asked the prisoner whether he had any objection to state to the magistrate what he had said to him? The prisoner said he had, and the magistrate being called in, the prisoner repeated in his presence what he had stated to the priest. It was objected that this could not be admitted, whereupon the magistrate was recalled and stated that, on the evening of the day on which he had the said interview with the prisoner, he cautioned him not to say anything to him or to the police to exonerate himself. The magistrate was allowed to state what the prisoner said to him on this occasion, which appeared to be in every respect the same as what he had stated in the previous interview. The prisoner was convicted, and the decision of the judges of Ireland held the confession right. Bryan's Case, Joy, 73; 1 C. & P. C. 157.

Where a prosecutrix said to her servant girl, who was in custody of a prisoner in her house at night, on a charge of administering poison, "Jane, now see the effects of your wickedness; you will be to go from here to-morrow morning to Stourbridge, to the magistrate, and not return again;" on which the girl said: "Sooner than I will go from here or anywhere else, I will tell the truth to which the prosecutrix answered, " all I want." A statement then made as held inadmissible. On the following morning a constable came to the house, and while there, without giving her any warning, said to the girl, "My dear girl, where did you get the stuff from that you put in the tea and coffee?" It was held that what was then said must be considered as being under the influence of what was said the night before, because she was still in the house, and still in the hopes that she might not be taken before the magistrates. The constable afterwards took her to Stourbridge, and while on the way thither she made a statement, without any caution having been given, any inducement having been held out to her, and this was held admissible, because the only hope was that she should not be taken away from the house, and this must have been at an end when she was taken away by the constable. Rex v. Jane Griffiths, MSS.; s. c., but not so reported, Rex v. Richards, 5 C. & J. 313.

Prisoners were taken into custody on the 1st of October, and on that day the prosecutor frequently told them it would be better for them to confess. They were taken before a magistrate on the 3d, when they were told that they were not bound to say anything, but what they did say would be taken down, and read against them on their trials. They then made a statement. It was considered that, as the prosecutor did not tell them it would be better to confess to him, generally, that it would be better to confess, the confessions to the magistrate might be produced by that inducement. Bedale, J.: "It appears to me that examinations may be read. If I could see that the influence was continuing, I should not allow them to be read, two days elapsed between the promise and the confession. If the prisoners were gone before the magistrate the same day, I should have thought that the influence was continuing. I think that it would make no difference that the promise was made by one person, but the confession to another." R. v. Nicholls, Monmouth Spr. Ass. 1830; s. c., 3 Russ. on 9th Am. Ed. 385. And where the prisoner had been induced by promises of favor to make a confession, which was for that cause excluded, but about six months afterwards, and after having been solemnly warned by two magistrates that he must expect death, and prepare to meet it, he again made a full confession, this latter confession was admitted in evidence. State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 1; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404.

In this case, upon much consideration, the rule was stated to be that, although an original confession may have been obtained by improper means, yet subsequent confessions of the same or of like facts may be admitted, if the court believes, from the length of time intervening, or from proper warning of the consequences of confession, or from other circumstances, that the delusive hopes or fears, under the influence of which the original confession was obtained, were entirely dispelled. State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404. In the absence of any such circumstances, the influence of the motives proved to have been offered will be presumed to continue, and to have produced the confession, unless the contrary is shown by clear evidence, and the confession will therefore be rejected. State v. Roberts, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 259.

Inducement—Where Held Not to Have Ceased.—It is said by Mr. Justice Buller that there must be very strong evidence of an explicit warning not to rely on any expected favor, and that it ought most clearly to appear that the prisoner thoroughly understood such warning before his subsequent confession can be given in evidence. 2 East P. C. 658. In the following case the warning was not considered sufficient. A confession having been improperly obtained by giving the prisoner two glasses of gin, the officer to whom it had been made read it over to the prisoner before a magistrate, who told the prisoner that the offence imputed to him affected his life, and that a confession might do him harm. The prisoner said that what had been read to him was the truth, and signed the papers. Best, J., considered the second confession, as well as the first, inadmissible; and said that had the magistrate known that the officer had given the prisoner gin, he would, no doubt, have told the prisoner that what he had already said could not be given in evidence against him; and that it was for him to consider whether he would make a second confession. If the prisoner had been told this, what he afterwards said would have been evidence against him; but for want of this information he might think that he could not make his case worse than he had already made it, and under this impression might sign the confession before the magistrate. R. v. Sexton, Chetw. Burn. Just. tit. Confessions. So where the committing magistrate told the prisoner that if he would make a confession he would do all he could for him, and no confession was then made, but after his committal the prisoner made a statement to the turnkey, who held out no inducement and gave no caution, Parke, J., said he thought the evidence ought not to be received after what the committing magistrate had said to the prisoner, more especially as the turnkey had not given any caution. R. v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 525.

A prisoner had made a confession to one of the prosecutors in a charge of larceny, which, it was admitted, could not be received in evidence on account of what had passed between the prisoner and a constable who had her in charge. In the afternoon of the same day another of the prosecutors went to the prisoner's house and entered into conversation with her about the stolen property, when she repeated the confession she had made in the morning, but no promise or menace was on this occasion held out to her. Taunton, J., said that the second confession was not receivable, it being impossible to say that it was not induced by the promise which the constable made to the prisoner in the morning. R. v. Meynell, 2 Lewin C. C. 122.

The prisoner, who was indicted for murder, worked at a colliery, and some suspicion having fallen upon him, the overlooker charged him with the murder. The prisoner denied having been near the place. Presently the overlooker called his attention to certain statements made by his wife and sister which were inconsistent with his own, and added that there was no doubt he would be found guilty; it would be better for him if he would confess. A constable then came in and said to the overlooker, in a tone loud enough for the prisoner to hear, "Robert, do not make him any promises." The prisoner then made a confession. Patteson, J., on the evidence being tendered, said, "That will not do. The constable ought to have done something to remove the impression from the prisoner's mind." It was then further proved that the overlooker, in about ten minutes after the above confession, delivered the prisoner to another constable, and that, when the latter received the prisoner, the overlooker told him (but not in the prisoner's hearing) that the prisoner had confessed. This constable took the prisoner to his house, and there said, "I believe Sherrington has murdered a man in a brutal manner." The wife and brother of the prisoner were there, and they said to the prisoner, "What made thee go near the cabin?" The prisoner in answer made a statement similar in effect to the one he made before. The constable used no promise nor threat to induce the prisoner to say anything, but did not caution him, and it was not more than five minutes after he received the prisoner into charge that the prisoner made the statement. The constable was not aware the overlooker had held out any inducement, and the overlooker was not present when the statement was made. Patteson, J., rejected the second confession, saying, "There ought to be strong evidence to show that the impression which the first confession was made under afterwards removed before the second confession can be received. I am of opinion in this case that the prisoner must be considered to have made the second confession under the same influence as he made the first; the interval being too short to allow of the position that it was the result of reflection and voluntary determination." R. v. Sherrington, 2 Lewin C. C. 122. A female servant being suspected of taking money, her mistress, on a Monday told her that she would forgive her if she told her the truth. On the Tuesday she was taken before a magistrate, and one appearing against her, was charged. On the Wednesday, again apprehended, the superintendent of police went with her mistress to Bridewell, and told her, in the presence of her mistress, that she "was not to say anything unless she liked; that if she had anything to say, her mistress would hear her;" but (not knowing that her mistress had promised to forgive her) he did not tell her that if she made a statement it might be given in evidence against her. The prisoner then made a statement. Patteson, J., held that the statement was not receivable in evidence, as the promise of the mistress must be considered as still operating on the prisoner's mind at the time of the statement; but that if the mistress had not been then present it might have been otherwise. R. v. Hewitt, 1 Car. 534. See also R. v. Rue, 13 Cox 209; Moore v. Commonwealth, 2 (Va.), 701.

Where inducements were held out by a police officer, and upon the next day the accused confessed to another officer, it was held, that a refusal to charge the accused by a jury should give no weight to the confession if they thought it was made as a result of such inducement, was an error. Com. v. Cullen, 111 Mass. 574. See Hopt v. U. S., 110 U. S. 574.

5. Confessions Obtained by Artifice or Deception.—A confession procured by artifice is not for that reason inadmissible, unless the artifice used was calculated to produce an untrue confession.<sup>1</sup>

6. Facts Ascertained in Consequence of Inadmissible Confessions.—Although a confession may have been made under the influence of threats or promises, yet evidence of any facts which were ascertained in consequence of such confession is competent.<sup>2</sup>

1. State v. Fredericks, 85 Mo. 145; State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 278; Whar. Cr. v. § 670; State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128; State v. Jones, 54 Mo. 478; State v. Haley, 14 Minn. 105; Price v. State, 18 Mo. St. 418; People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 391; Balbo v. People, 80 N. Y. 484; Com. v. Hanlon, 3 Brews. (Pa.) 461; Ing v. State, 40 Ala. 314.

In cases of this sort, "The real question (as said by Keating, J., in Reg. v. Reason, 12 Cox Cr. Cases, 228) is, whether there has been any threat or promise of such a nature that the prisoner could be likely to tell an untruth from fear of the threat, or hope of profit from the promise."

Where a confession has been obtained by artifice or deception, but without the use of promises or threats, it is admissible. Thus it has been held that it is no objection that the confession was made under a mistaken supposition that some of the prisoner's accomplices were in custody, and even though some artifice has been used to draw him into that position. R. v. Burley, East. T. 1818; Phill. Ev. (10th Ed.) 413. Where a prisoner asked the turnkey if he would put a letter in the post, and on receiving promise that he would do so, gave him the letter, which was detained by the turnkey and given in evidence as a confession at the trial, Garrow. B., received the evidence. R. v. Derrington, 2 C. & 418. So where a person took an oath that he would not mention what the prisoner told him. R. v. Shaw, 6 C. & 373. And where a witness promised that what the prisoner said should go no further. R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 345. It appeared that one of the prisoners had made a statement to a constable in whose custody he was, but that he was drunk at the time; and it was imputed that the constable had given him liquor to cause him to be so. On its being objected that what a prisoner said under such circumstances was not receivable in evidence, Coleridge, J., said, "I am of opinion that a statement made by a prisoner while he was drunk is not therefore inadmissible; it must either be obtained by hope or fear. This is matter of observation for me, upon the weight that ought to attach to this statement when it is considered by the jury." R. v. Spilsbury, 7 C. & P. 187.

A confession made under the influence of the promise of some collateral boon or benefit is admissible, where no hope or fear is induced in respect to the particular criminal charge. State v. Hopkirk, 84 Mo. 278.

A confession not induced by promises or threats is admissible in evidence, notwithstanding it was obtained by artifice practised upon the prisoner by the officer having him in charge, and when properly corroborated will sustain a conviction. State v. Phelps, 74 Mo. 128.

Confidential communications made by a prisoner in reliance upon the supposed relation of attorney and client are not admissible in evidence; but such communications are admissible if made in the presence of others. People v. Barker, 27 N. Westn. Rep. (Mich.) 539.

Where a fellow prisoner was placed in the cell with the accused for the purpose of obtaining a confession, held, that such confession was admissible. Com. v. Hanlon, 3 Brews. (Pa.) 461.

2. 3 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 421; Duffy v. People, 26 N. Y. 588; Jackson's Case, 1 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 28; Stage's Case, 5 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 177; Teachout v. People, 41 N. Y. 7; Com. v. Knapp, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 496; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 491; Frederick v. State, 3 W. Va. 695; Gates v. People, 14 Ill. 433; State v. Garrett, 71 N. Car. 85; State v. Graham, 74 N. Car. 646; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 182; State v. Cowan, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 239; State v. Vaigneur, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 391; State v. Motley, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 327; State v. Crank, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 67; Jordan v. State, 32 Miss. 382; Sarah v. State, 28 Ga. 576; Murphy v. State, 63 Ala. 1; Mountain v. State, 40 Ala. 344; Jane v. Commonwealth, 2 Metc (Ky.) 30; Deathridge v. State, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 75; White v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 338; Elizabeth v. State, 27 Tex. 329; Selvidge v. State, 30 Tex. 60; Greer v. State, 31 Tex. 129; People v. Kelly, 47 Cal. 125; People v. Jones, 32 Cal. 80; People v. Ah Ki, 20 Cal. 177; People v. Hoy Yen,

7. Subsequent Confessions.—Although an original confession may have been obtained by improper means, subsequent confession of the same or of like facts may be admitted, if the court believe from the length of time intervening, from proper warning of consequences of confession, or from other circumstances, that the delusive hopes or fears under the influence of which the original confession was obtained were entirely dispelled.<sup>1</sup>

8. Evidence Only Against the Parties Making Them.—A confession is only evidence against the party making it, and cannot be used against others. If an inducement be held out to one prisoner to make a statement which implicates another prisoner, such statement is inadmissible; for it can only be used as evidence against the prisoner who made it, and then it is evidence obtained by inducement.<sup>2</sup>

34 Cal. 176; R. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. 364; R. v. Griffin, Russ. & Ry. 151.

When a confession in itself inadmissible leads to the ascertainment of a fact admissible and material in the case, so much of such confession as relates strictly to the fact may be received. State v. Vaigneur, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 391; State v. Motley, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 327; Duffy v. People, 26 N. Y. 588; Com. v. Knapp, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 496; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 491; Laros v. State, 84 Pa. St. 200; Frederick v. State, 3 W. Va. 695; State v. Garrett, 71 N. Car. 85; Murphy v. State, 63 Ala. 1; Belote v. State, 36 Miss. 96; Massey v. State, 10 Tex. App. 645; Clemons v. State, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 23; People v. Hoy Yen, 34 Cal. 176; Beery v. U. S., 2 Colo. 186; U. S. v. Richard, 2 Cranch C. C. 439.

The prisoner was charged with stealing a guinea and two promissory notes, one of which was a Bank of England note for five pounds, and the other a Reading bank-note for the like sum. The prosecutor had told the prisoner that he had better confess. Chambre, J., held that, although the prosecutor could not be allowed to prove a confession made after this admonition, he might be permitted to give evidence that the prisoner brought to him a guinea and a five pound Reading bank-note, which he gave up to the prosecutor as the guinea and one of the notes that had been stolen from him. The note thus produced the prosecutor could not identify otherwise than by its corresponding with the stolen note in the sum for which it was given, and in being a note of the same bank. Upon a case reserved, the majority of the judges agreed with Chambre, J., in thinking the conviction right and the evidence admissible. R. v. Griffin, Russ. & Ry. 115.

1. State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s.

c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; Peter v. State & M. (Miss.) 31; Simon v. State, 36 Miss. 636; State v. Clarissa, 11 Ala. 58; State v. State, 32 Ala. 560; Joe v. State, 38 Ala. 422; Com. v. Knapp, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 477; State v. Carr, 37 Vt. 191; Wa. People, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 395; State v. C. 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; Com. v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 269; State v. Commonwealth, 2 Leigh (Va.), 338; State v. Lowhorne, 66 N. Car. 538; State v. Gregory, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 315; State v. Roberts, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 259; State v. State, 22 Ark. 336; State v. Jones, 54 Ark. 478; Walker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 645; State v. Hash, 12 La. Ann. 895; State v. Jim Ti, 32 Cal. 60; Beery v. U. S. Colo. 186; U. S. v. Charles, 2 Cranch C. 76; U. S. v. Kurtz, 4 Cranch C. 682. Compare State v. Frazier, 6 Tenn. 539; McAdory v. State, 62 Ala. 154.

The presumption is that the influence of the threats or promises continues until such presumptions must be overcome. Com. v. Knapp, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 477; Com. v. Taylor, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 31; Brownhas's Case, 4 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 31; Stage's Case, 5 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 31; Milligan's Case, 6 C. H. R. (N. Y.) 31; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; Com. v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 269; Thompson v. Commonwealth, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 724; State v. Fish, 10 Jones (N. Car.), 478; State v. Roberts, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 259; State v. Dral, 1 N. Car. 592; Whaley v. State, 11 Ga. 31; Simon v. State, 36 Miss. 636; Peter v. State, 4 S. & M. (Miss.) 31; Van v. State, 24 Miss. 512; State v. Ha, 12 La. Ann. 895; State v. Chamber, 179; State v. Jones, 54 Mo. 2. 3 Russ. on Cr. (9th Am. Ed.) 421; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 53; People v. Whipple, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 707;

v. Knapp, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 496; Com. v. Thompson, 99 Mass. 444; Fife v. Commonwealth, 29 Pa. St. 429; State v. Fuller, 39 Vt. 74; State v. Dodson, 16 S. Car. 453; Blackman v. State, 36 Ala. 295; Gore v. State, 58 Ala. 391; Smith v. State, 9 Ala. 990; Morrison v. State, 5 Ohio, 438; Lowe v. Boteler, 4 H. & McH. (Md.) 346; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 410; State v. Weasel, 30 La. Ann. Pt. II. 919; Ake v. State, 30 Tex. 466; Spencer v. State, 31 Tex. 64; Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 393; U. S. v. Douglass, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 207; U. S. v. White, 5 Cranch C. C. 38; U. S. v. Miller, 4 Cranch C. C. 104; U. S. v. McMahon, 4 Cranch C. C. 573.

It is quite settled, generally, that a confession is only evidence against the party making it, and cannot be used against others. With respect to conspiracy, there is some obscurity on this subject, which will be found discussed in the article relating to that offence, post. In general, where the conspiracy is proved, the admissions concerning the common object are admissible. Lee v. Lamprey, 43 N. H. 13. State v. Thibeau, 6 Vt. 100; Com. v. Waterman, 122 Mass. 3; Com. v. Brown, 14 Gray (Mass.) 419; Kelley v. People, 55 N. Y. 565; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 342; Adams v. Davidson, 10 N. Y. 309; Benham v. Cary, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 83; Crary v. Sprague, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 41; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 110; Hmsby v. People, 53 N. Y. 472; Kehoe v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 127; Kimbell v. Geeting, 2 Grant (Pa.), 125; Price v. Junkin, 4 Watts (Pa.), 85; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 685; Helser v. McGrath, 58 Pa. St. 458; McDowell v. Rissel, 37 Pa. St. 164; Peterson v. Speer, 29 Pa. St. 479; Frans v. Matson, 56 Pa. St. 54; Reitenbach v. Reitenbach, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 362; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 638; Clawson v. State, 4 Ohio St. 234; Preston v. Bowers, 13 Ohio St. 1; Williams v. State, 47 Ind. 568; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 195; State v. Ash, 7 Iowa, 347; State v. Ross, 29 Mo. 2; State v. Danbert, 42 Mo. 239; People v. Geiger, 49 Cal. 643; Clinton v. State, 20 Ark. 216; Loggins v. State, Tex. App. 434; State v. Jackson, 29 Ala. Ann. 354; Smith v. State, 52 Ala. 97; Garrard v. State, 50 Miss. 147; Lincoln v. Claflin, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 132; U. S. v. McKee, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 546. But a difficulty occurs where a confession by one prisoner is given in evidence, which implicates the other prisoners by name, as to the propriety of suffering those names to be mentioned to the jury. Several cases are collected in 1 Lewin C. C. 107, which show that Littledale, J., Alderson, J., and Denman, C. J., considered that the whole of the confession, whether verbal or written, ought to be presented to the jury, not omitting the names. Parke, B., thought otherwise. See R. v. Fletcher, 4 C. & P. 250, and R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221, where Littledale, J., says that he had formed his opinion after much consideration.

The confession of the principal is not admissible in evidence to prove his guilt, upon an indictment against the accessory. One Turner was indicted for receiving sixty sovereigns, etc., by one Sarah Rich, then lately before feloniously stolen. To establish the larceny by Rich, the counsel for the prosecution proposed to prove a confession by her, made before a magistrate in the presence of the prisoner, in which she stated various facts, implicating herself and others, as well as the prisoner. Patteson, J., refused to receive as evidence anything which was said by Sarah Rich respecting the prisoner, but admitted what she had said respecting herself. The prisoner was convicted. Having afterwards learned that a case had occurred before Mr. Baron Wood, at York, where two persons were indicted together, one for stealing and the other for receiving, in which the principal pleaded guilty and the receiver not guilty, and that Mr. Baron Wood refused to allow the plea of guilty, to establish the fact of the stealing by the principal, as against the receiver, Patteson, J., thought it proper to refer to the judges the question, "Whether he was right in admitting the confession of Sarah Rich in the present case?" All the judges having met (except Lord Lyndhurst, C. B., and Taunton, J.), they were unanimously of opinion that Sarah Rich's confession was no evidence against the prisoner, and the conviction was held wrong. R. v. Turner, Moody C. C. 347. In R. v. Cox, 1 F. & F. 90, Crowder, J., admitted, on the trial of the receiver, the confession of the thief made in the receiver's presence as evidence of the fact of stealing. See qu. Where the counsel for the prosecution opened no case against one of two prisoners, and was about to detail to the jury certain statements made by that prisoner, Pollock, C. B., interposed, saying that those statements ought not to be repeated merely because the prisoners were jointly charged, and that the proper course would be to take an acquittal, and examine such prisoner as a witness. R. v. Gardner, 9 Cox C. C. 332.

Upon an indictment for murder, against a man and woman, it appeared that a woman who was placed by the constable with the female prisoner, whilst he went to the inquest, to prevent her laying violent hands upon herself, and to prevent her from going away, told her "o the effect that "she had better tell the truth, or it would lie upon her, and the man would go free." Parke, J. (after consulting Taunton, J.), said: "As this declaration of the female prisoner can only legitimately be received in evidence to affect her and no one else, we think that it is not receivable, as it was made after an inducement held out by a person who had her in custody. If it were to be used at all, it could only be used to criminate her; and then it would be evidence obtained to criminate her by means of an inducement." R. v. Enock, 5 C. & P. 539.

9. Confessions Obtained by Questioning Admissible.—A confession is admissible in evidence where it has been elicited by questions put by a person in authority. At common law no examination of the accused was permitted, but such examination was permitted by the statutes of Philip and Mary. The main features of these statutes have been adopted in many of the States.<sup>1</sup>

The confession of one of the defendants implicating himself and others, is competent evidence against himself, and should be proved as made, including the names of his confederates as stated by him, the jury being instructed that it is evidence only against the party who made the confession. State v. Dodson, 16 S. Car. 453; State v. Fuller, 39 Vt. 74; State v. Workman, 15 S. Car. 541.

If, by agreement with proper authority, a particeps criminis not in custody made a confession to secure his own immunity on condition that he would testify against his accomplices, and he afterwards refused to testify, the confession is evidence against himself if it be shown that it was made freely and without compulsion. If, however, he was in custody when he made the confession, there must not only be a showing that it was made freely and without compulsion or persuasion, but also that it was made voluntarily after he was cautioned that it might be used against him in case he should refuse to testify. Lopez v. State, 12 Tex. App. 27; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 173; Com. v. Knapp, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 477; Bowden v. State, 1 Tex. App. 137.

Admission or Confession by Third Person.—The admission or confession of a third person, that he committed the offence with which the accused is charged, not made under oath, though on his death-bed, is mere hearsay, and is not admissible as evidence for the accused.

West v. State, 76 Ala. 98; Snow v. State, 58 Ala. 372.

Confessions of an accomplice, made in the presence of the accused and assented to by him, are admissible against him. Com. v. Call, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 515.

1. 1 Greenl. on Ev. (14th Ed.) § 224; Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) §666; People v. Restell, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 289; People v. Smith, 1 Wheel. C. C. (N. Y.) 54; State v. Cowan, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 239; State v. Kirby, 1 Strob. (S. Car.) 378; Carroll v. State, 23 Ala. 28; State v. McLaughlin, 44 Iowa, 82; Wolf v. Commonwealth, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 833.

Unless a prisoner comprehends his rights fully, and is informed by the court that his refusal to answer the questions propounded could not prejudice his case, or be construed as an evidence of guilt, any responsive confessions, implicating him in the crime charged, must be regarded as involuntary. Whar. Cr. Ev. §§ 668-9; State v. Rorie, 74 N. C. 148; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 215, note 4; Rex v. Greene, 5 C. & P. 312; Murphy v. State, 63 Ala. 1; Kelly v. State, 72 Ala. 244. See State v. Matthews, 66 N. Car. 106; Peter v. State, 4 S. & M. (Miss.) 31; Van Buren v. State, 24 Miss. 512; Dick v. State, 30 Miss. 593.

It was formerly held that if a prisoner were told that what he said would be used for him or against him at his trial, his statement was inadmissible. A prisoner, when before a magistrate, was told by the magistrate's clerk not to say anything to prejudice himself, "as what he said would be taken down, and would be used for him or against him at his trial." Coleridge, J.: "This is an inducement, and it was held out by a person in authority. I am of opinion that the prisoner's statement cannot be given in evidence. I cannot conceive a more direct inducement to a man to make a confession than telling him that what he says may be used in his favor at the trial." R. v. Drew, 8 C. & P. 140. So where the constable who apprehended the prisoner said to him, "What you are charged with is a very heavy offence, and you must be very careful in making any statement to me or anybody else that may tend to injure you, but anything you can-say in your defence we shall be ready to hear, and send to assist you," a statement thereon made was rejected. R. v. Morton, 2 M. & Rob. 514. So where the constable told the prisoner, "You are apprehended on a serious charge; take care that you do not say anything to injure yourself; but if you can say anything in your defence, we are willing to hear it, and to send to any person to assist you," a statement thereon made was rejected. R. v. Hornbrook, 1 Cox C. C. 54. So where a policeman told a prisoner that whatever she told him would be used against her on her trial, a statement thereon made was rejected. R. v. Furley, 1 Cox C. C. 76. So where the magistrate's clerk, when the prisoner was being examined, told him that he was at liberty to make any statement, but that "whatever he said would be taken down and used against him;" a statement thereon made was rejected. R. v. Harris, 1 Cox C. C. 196.

On the other hand, where a police officer had told a prisoner that whatever he said would be used against him, it was held that a statement thereon made was admissible. R. v. Chambers, 3 Cox C. C. 92. So where a police officer told the prisoner before he made a statement, "to be careful: it would be used against him on his trial if committed by the magistrates," it was held that the statement was admissible. R. v. Atwood, 5 Cox C. C. 322.

These cases were reviewed in the following case, which may be taken to have settled the law on this point. Where, on an indictment for murder, a police constable said, "I went to the prisoner's house. I saw the prisoner. I told him what he was charged with. He made no reply, and sat with his face buried in his handkerchief. I believe he was crying. I said he need not say anything to criminate himself; what he did say would be taken down and used as evidence against him." Objection was made that what the prisoner then said was inadmissible. Lord Campbell, C. J., thought that although the caution of the constable differed from that directed by the 11 and 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, to be given by the justice to the prisoner in the word "will" instead of "may," it did not amount to any promise or threat to induce the prisoner to confess; it could have no tendency to induce him to say anything untrue; and that in spite of it, if he did afterwards confess, the confession must be considered voluntary. His lordship therefore allowed the witness to give evidence of what the prisoner then said, which amounted to a confession of his guilt; and upon a case reserved, after argument, on behalf of the prisoner, the judges were unanimously of opinion that the confession was properly received. Lord Campbell, C. J.: "I adhere to the opinion which I formed at the trial. The rule is, that if there be any worldly advantage held out, or any harm threatened, the confession must be excluded. The reason is, not that the law supposes that the statement will be false, but that the prisoner has made a confession under a bias, and that therefore it would be better not to submit it to the jury." Pollock, C. B.: "A simple caution to the accused to tell the truth, if he says anything, has been decided not to be sufficient to prevent the statement made being given in evidence. R. v. Court, 6 C. & P. 486; R. v. Holmes, 1 C. & K. 248. And although it may be put that where a person is told to tell the truth, he may possibly understand that the only thing true is that he is guilty, that is not what he ought to understand. He is reminded that he need not say anything, but if he says anything, let it be true. But where the admonition to speak the truth has been coupled with any expression importing that it would be better for him to do so, it has been held that the confession was not receivable, the objectionable words being that it would be better to speak the truth, because they import that it would be better for him to say something. R. v. Garner, 1 Den. C. C. 329. The true distinction between the present case and a case of that kind is, that it is left to the prisoner as a matter of perfect indifference whether he should open his mouth or not." R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 430.

But where an inspector of police said to a woman in custody on the charge of having attempted to set fire to a workhouse, "You are accused of a very serious offence; have you any explanation to give? You are not bound to say anything, but anything you say will be given in evidence against you" The inspector then asked her, "Was it she that set fire to the buildings?" It was held that the statement of the prisoner in answer to this question was not admissible. R. v. Toole, 7 Cox C. C. 244.

The prisoner, who was indicted with several others for burglary, sent for a magistrate to tell him he had something to communicate to him. The magistrate acted at the interview with great caution, and warned the prisoner not to say anything that would criminate himself, as what he said would be taken down in writing, and made use of against him on his trial. The prisoner replied he did not care, as he knew that the witness knew all. Upon cross-examination, it appeared that the prisoner had been confined, after his arrest, in the same cell with another person, charged with the same crime, who had confessed and been admitted queen's evidence; the prisoner was aware of this, and it was to that he alluded when he said that he knew the witness knew all, and that it was from the statement made by the person who had been admitted queen's evidence that the prisoner was examined, and his confession taken down. It was insisted that, under these circumstances, the confession was not admissible, as the caution given by the magistrate did not appear to have had the effect of removing from the prisoner's mind all the influences which would have invalidated the confession, and that there was a reasonable cause to lead the prisoner to believe that if he made a confession he would be put in the same situation with the other person who had done so. Crompton, J., received the confession, observing that the magistrate stated that, as far as he knew, the prisoner came forward voluntarily; that a mere formal caution from a magistrate would not be sufficient to set up a confession, if it appeared that such confession was made under the distinct impression of a previous promise or threat, but that it did not appear that there was any previous inducement whatever. If there were any threats made use of before, or any promises held out, the distinct caution given by the magistrate was sufficient to obviate them. It was in effect telling the prisoner that he would get no benefit from his confession, and that he should consequently dismiss from his mind all expectation of getting any, if any such he had. Berigan's Case, Joy on Conf. 27.

On an indictment for forgery a statement by the prisoner before the magistrate was offered in evidence. Appended to the statement was a declaration by the magistrate that he had, previously to the prisoner's being called upon for his defence, repeated the form contained in schedule (N); but there was nothing to show that the caution contained in the latter part of sec. 18 of the 11 and 12 Vict. c. 42, had been used. For the prisoner it was urged that proof must be given of a strict compliance with the terms of the proviso. For the crown it was answered that the form given by the statute had been scrupulously adhered to, and that the rest was merely a direction to the magistrate, which it was to be presumed he had complied with. Coleridge, J., after consulting Cresswell, J., said that they were both inclined to think that the proviso was a condition precedent, and that in the absence of any proof that it had been acted upon, the statement was not receivable in evidence; but he added that, as it was desirable so important a point should be settled, they would receive the evidence, and reserve the question, if it should become necessary. R. v. Kimber, 3 Cox C. C. 223.

Upon an indictment for attempting to procure abortion the statement of the prisoner before the magistrate was tendered in evidence. The magistrate's clerk, who was called to prove it, stated that when the prisoner was before the magistrate, the witnesses for the prosecution having been examined in presence, the magistrate thus addressed him: "Having heard the evidence, you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? you are not obliged to say anything, unless you desire to do so; whatever you say will be taken down in writing, and may be given in evidence against you upon your trial;" that the magistrate added nothing more. The prisoner then made the statement, which was taken down, read over to him, signed by him and by the magistrate. The statement was in the form in schedule to the 11 and 12 Vict. c. 42, contained the words so proved to have been addressed to the prisoner by the magistrate. It was objected that the statement was not admissible, as the magistrate had not given the caution against any promise or threat required by the proviso in sec. 18 of the statute; but Lord Campbell, C. J., overruled the objection; and, upon a case reserved after argument, Lord Campbell, C. J., thus pronounced judgment: "The objection to the admissibility of this statement of the prisoner is unfounded. The signature of the magistrate, and that of the prisoner, were proved. It would have been admissible at common law, and is so still unless excluded by statute. It is argued that the objection to the caution in the first proviso is to take away with the effect of a previous inducement; but as there was no previous inducement here, it is not necessary in this case to decide whether, if a previous threat or inducement had been held out to the prisoner, the caution prescribed in the first proviso is to be regarded as a condition precedent or merely directory. The 28th sec. of the statute declares that the forms given in the schedule are to deemed good, valid, and sufficient in law, and the form in the schedule does not contain the second caution. It would therefore seem that both at common law and under the statute the statement in this case was admissible in evidence against the prisoner." R. v. Sansome, 1 Den. C. C. 545.

A prisoner was taken before the magistrate on the 20th of October, and charged with stealing £70 in money from his employers, and remanded after some witnesses had been examined. He was brought up a second time on the 24th of October, and then further evidence was given, and that which had been given on the former occasion was read over. The magistrate then addressed him in the language prescribed by the 11 and 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18; but did not tell him, as required by the proviso, that he had nothing to hope from any promise of favor or to fear from any threat. The prisoner's answer was taken down. It was, "I shall say nothing here; I had rather say it at my trial." The solicitor for the prosecution then asked for another remand. The prisoner objected, and assigned a reason; and being asked whether he wished that to be taken down as part of his statement, he said that he did, and it was written down; it was,

"It is my intention to plead guilty to the charge." This statement was not signed by the prisoner or the magistrate. The prisoner was then remanded, and brought again before the magistrate on the 31st of October. No new witnesses were examined, nor any questions put for the prosecution, but an attorney for the prisoner put a few questions to one of the witnesses, who had been before examined. The evidence was then read over and the witnesses were re-sworn. The statement made by the prisoner at the former examination was then read to him. His attorney objected to its being taken as his statement, because an addition had been made to the evidence in answer to his questions. The magistrate then again asked the prisoner in the terms prescribed by the statute whether he wished to make any statement, and he declined doing so. The prisoner's counsel objected to the former statement being received; but it was admitted; and, upon a case reserved, it was contended that the statement was inadmissible: 1st, because it was not returned with the depositions; 2dly, that the statement was made after an insufficient caution. But the judges were unanimously of opinion that the statement was properly received in evidence. It was read over to the prisoner at the second examination, and the proper caution mentioned in the act of Parliament given to him before it was taken. It is true that on the last examination some other questions (apparently for no other purpose than to try to raise this point) were put to one of the witnesses by the prisoner's attorney; but this made no real difference. If it was receivable, as undoubtedly it was, before they were put, it was properly received at the trial. R. v. Bond, 1 Den. C. C. 517.

The declarations or confessions of a prisoner, either at the time when he is arrested or when he is charged with the crime, are admissible either for or against him when they are voluntarily made; and it is only necessary that the prisoner should be cautioned that he is at liberty to refuse to answer, and that such refusal will not prejudice him when the confession is made upon an examination before a magistrate. State v. Howard, 92 N. Car. 772.

Where evidence of a confession is excluded because induced by promises made by an officer having custody of the prisoner, but the prisoner, on a subsequent day, voluntarily goes on the stand and is sworn and examined as a witness in his own behalf, under the statute, on his examination before a magistrate on such charge, and he is cautioned by the magistrate, before testifying, that he need not say anything to criminate himself, and that what he may say may be used against him, a confession made in such testimony may be proved by the State on the subsequent trial of such person charged with the crime. Jackson v. State, 39 Ohio St. 37.

Upon the trial of an indictment for murder, a statement or confession made and signed by the prisoner was offered in evidence on the part of the prosecution. It appeared that when the prisoner was arrested the officer making the arrest, an inspector of police in the city of New York, informed him of the crime for which he was arrested, and that he (the officer) was an inspector of police, and had been watching him (the prisoner) since the shooting, and saw him, in company with a man named Healey, try to steal a barrel of whiskey the night before; also told him about his pledging a pistol with which the murder was supposed to have been committed; the prisoner thereupon said he would make a statement; a coroner was sent for, who came to police headquarters where the prisoner was in custody, and the confession in question was then made, the coroner not acting in an official capacity, but simply as a clerk to take down and prove the confession. Held, that the evidence did not disclose any threats, and did not authorize an inference that the confession was made under the influence of fear; that assuming the paper was sworn to by the accused, it was in no respect a compulsory statement, and it was properly received in evidence under the Code of Cr. Proc. (§ 395). People v. McGloin, 91 N. Y. 241.

But where the accused is compelled to answer under oath questions put by the committing magistrate, the admissions made by him during such examination are not admissible as evidence.<sup>1</sup>

Where the magistrate, before whom a prisoner charged with a crime was brought, but before the warrant was returned, or any of the witnesses had been sworn, and before the prisoner was informed of the charge against him, asked the prisoner if he was ready to proceed, and the latter replied that he was not, because of the absence of certain witnesses, by whom he expected to prove a state of facts relied upon as a defence; held, that the "examination" contemplated by the Code had not then commenced, and any declaration pertinent to the charge, then made by the prisoner, was competent evidence against him, though he was not "cautioned." State v. Conrad, 95 N. Car. 666.

1. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 668; Com. v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 269; Hendrickson v. People, 10 N. Y. 12; Schoeffler v. State, 3 Wis. 717; State v. Marshall, 36 Mo. 400; State v. Gilman, 51 Me. 206; State v. Matthews, 66 N. Car. 106; State v. Broughton, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 96; State v. Young Wins. (N. Car.) 126; Nelson v. State, 2 Swan (Tenn.), 237; State v. Vandergraff, 23 La. Ann. 96; State v. Garvey, 25 La. Ann. 191; People v. Soto, 49 Cal. 69; U. S. v. Duffy, 1 Cranch C. C. 164; U. S. v. Bascadore, 2 Cranch C. C. 30; U. S. v. Williams, 1 Cliff (U. S.), 5. Compare Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

In People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 384, the court laid down the following rule: 1. The statement or confession will not be rejected on account of its having been made under oath, unless that oath was administered in the course of some judicial inquiry in regard to the crime itself for which the prisoner is on trial; 2. The statement, although made under oath, and upon a judicial examination as to the crime, may still be admitted, if, at the time it was made, the prisoner was not himself resting under any charge or suspicion of having committed the crime.

A judicial oath administered when the mind is agitated and disturbed by a criminal charge may prevent free and voluntary mental action, and this is the reason for excluding evidence thus given. People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 384.

Upon a trial for murder, statements made by the prisoner, as a witness at the coroner's inquest upon the body of the deceased, before the witness had been charged with the murder, and before it was ascertained that a murder had been committed, are admissible in evidence against him. Hendrickson v. People, 10 N. Y. 12; State v. Vaigneur, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 391; Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 340. See Com. v. Bradford, 126 Mass. 42.

Statements made by the prisoner, under oath, at a coroner's inquest are admissible against him upon his trial for murder, although he knew at the time he was sworn that it was suspected the deceased was poisoned, and that he himself would probably be arrested for the crime, and was informed by the coroner that rumors implicated him; that he had a right to refuse to testify. Teachout v. People, 41 N. Y. 7. See People v. Kelly, 47 Cal. 125.

Upon an information charging the accused, in separate counts, with murder, and with being an accessory thereto, there was no error in admitting in evidence against him testimony given by him as a witness for the State, while under arrest upon suspicion of having committed said crimes, upon the examination of another person accused of the same murder; there being no reason for believing that such testimony was not entirely voluntary. Dickerson v. State, 48 Wis. 288.

On the trial of an indictment for murder it appeared that the prisoner, who was an ignorant Italian laborer, unfamiliar with the English language, was arrested, without warrant, as the suspected murderer, and while under arrest, was taken by the officer having him in charge before a coroner's inquest, and after proof had been given of the homicide, was examined, on oath, by the district attorney and the coroner as to circumstances tending to connect him with the crime. It did not appear that he was informed that he was not bound to answer questions tending to criminate himself. The prosecution was permitted to prove, under objections and exceptions, the statements so made by the prisoner. Held, error; and that the evidence was not rendered

10. Confessions Obtained in the Course of Legal Proceedings.—There is much contradiction in the older cases on the point whether confessions made in the course of legal proceedings, not having reference to the charge upon the prosecution of which they are sought to be used, are admissible;<sup>1</sup> but evidence given in a former trial may afterwards be used as a confession.<sup>2</sup> competent by the provision of the Code of Cr. Proc. (§ 395) specifying the cases where the confession of a defendant in a criminal action may be given in evidence against him. People v. Mondon, 103 N. Y. 211.

11. By Children.—Where a child has such sufficient mental capacity as to render him amenable to the law for the commission of crime, he has sufficient mental capacity to make a confession of his guilt.<sup>3</sup> (See also AGE, Vol. I., p. 327.)

Verified and inculpatory disclosures voluntarily made by an uncautioned prisoner are evidence against him; but his other statements, though voluntary and parts of the same confession, are not. Walker v. State, 9 Tex. App. 38; Davis v. State, 8 Tex. App. 510; Strait v. State, 43 Tex. 486; Selvidge v. State, 30 Tex. 59; Warren v. State, 29 Tex. 370.

Where the confessions of a prisoner made to a trial justice at the preliminary examination are reduced to writing and signed by the prisoner, and such written statement is within reach of the court, it is error to admit parol testimony of the confession. State v. Branham, 13 S. Car. 389.

When it was shown that a defendant's confession, made before an examining court, and after he had been duly cautioned that it might be used against him, was reduced to writing, but that the writing was not so authenticated as to render it competent evidence, it was not error to allow the State, after laying the proper predicate, to adduce parol proof of the statements made by the defendant in his confession before the examining court. Guy v. State, 9 Tex. App. 161; State v. Simien, 30 La. Ann. pt. i., 296.

1. The subject was fully considered in R. v. Scott, 25 L. J. M. C. 128; 7 Cox C. C. 164; Dears. & B. C. C. 47; and the distinction pointed out. That was a case in which the prisoner had been examined in the court of bankruptcy, touching his trade, dealings, and estate, under the provisions of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 117 (repealed); and this examination was given in evidence on a criminal charge against the bankrupt of mutilating his trade books. The question whether such evidence was admissible was argued before the court of criminal appeal; and it was admitted on all hands that, in ordinary cases, what is stated by a person in a lawful examination may be used in evidence against him. The main contention was, that inasmuch as by the act it was compulsory upon the bankrupt to answer the questions put to him, whether they tended to criminate him or no, he ought not to be criminally prejudiced by such answers, otherwise the fundamental maxim, nemo tenetur seipsum accusare, would be violated. In this view Colebridge, J., concurred; but all the other judges, Lord Campbell, C. J., Willes, J., Alderson and Bramwell, BB., thought that the evidence was admissible, and that the maxim relied on had been overruled by the legislature. And the same view of the law has been taken with respect to the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71. See R. v. Hallam, 12 Cox C. C. 174; R. v. Widdop, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 3; 42 L. J. M. C. 9; Ex parte Schofield, 6 Ch. D. 230; 46 L. J. Bkcy. 112.

2. Com. v. Reynolds, 122 Mass. 454; State v. Gilman, 51 Me. 206; Teachout v. People, 41 N. Y. 7; Hendrickson v. People, 10 N. Y. 12; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 721; People v. McMahon, 15 N. Y. 384; Williams v. Commonwealth, 29 Pa. St. 102; Snyder v. State, 59 Ind. 105; Anderson v. State, 26 Ind. 89; Dickerson v. State, 48 Wis. 288; Alston v. State, 41 Tex. 39; State v. Broughton, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 96; People v. Kelly, 47 Cal. 125. Compare Jackson v. State, 56 Miss. 311; Josephine v. State, 39 Miss. 613; People v. Garvey, 25 La. Ann. 191.

3. State v. Bostick, 4 Harr. (Del.) 563, Earp v. State, 55 Ga. 136; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 171; State v. Guild, 10 N. J. L. 163; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 404; State v. Aaron, 1 South. (N. J.) 231; McCoon v. Smith, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 117; Stage's Case, 5 City H. R. (N. Y.) 177; Com. v. Smith, 119 Mass. 305; Studstill v. State, 7 Ga. 2; Mather v. Clark, 2 Atk. 209; R. v. Thornton, R. & M. C. C. 27.

12. By Agents.—An admission by an agent is never evidence in criminal as it is sometimes in civil cases, in the sense in which an admission by a party himself is evidence. An admission by the party himself is in all cases the best evidence which can be produced, and supersedes the necessity of all further proof; and in civil cases the rule is carried still further, for the admission of an agent made in the course of his employment, and in accordance with his duty, is as binding upon the principal as an admission made by himself. But this has never been extended to criminal cases.<sup>1</sup>

13. Admissions by the Prosecutor.—It would seem doubtful whether in any case a prosecutor in an indictment is a party to the inquiry in such a sense as that an admission by him could be received in evidence to prove facts for the defence. Of course this does not refer to the admission of facts which would go to his reputation for credibility as a witness in the case; these may always and under all circumstances be proved by the admission of the witness himself. But any other fact necessary to the defence would have to be proved by the best available evidence, independently of any admission by the prosecutor.<sup>2</sup>

1. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 53.

Thus, in order to make a client criminally responsible for a letter written by his solicitor, it is not sufficient to show that such letter was written in consequence of an interview, but it must be shown that it was written in pursuance of instructions of the client. R. v. Downer, 14 Cox C. C. R. 486. Where a party is charged with the commission of an offence through the instrumentality of an agent, then it becomes necessary to prove the acts of the agent; and, in some cases, as where the agent is dead, the agent's admission is the best evidence of those acts which can be produced. Thus, on the impeachment of Lord Melville by the House of Lords, it was decided that a receipt given in the regular and official form by Mr. Douglas, who was proved to have been appointed by Lord Melville to be his attorney to transact the business of his office as treasurer of the navy, and to receive all necessary sums of money, and to give receipts for the same, and who was dead, was admissible in evidence against Lord Melville, to establish the single fact, that a person appointed by him as his paymaster did receive from the exchequer a certain sum of money in the ordinary course of business. 29 How. St. Tr. 746. Had, however, Mr. Douglas been alive at the time, there can be no doubt that he must have been called; and that he might have been called to prove the receipt of the money, would probably not have been questioned.

This case does not, therefore, as sometimes appears to have been thought, in any way touch upon the rules that the admission of an agent does not bind his principal in criminal cases, but merely shows that, where the acts of the agent have to be proved, those acts may be proved in the usual way. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 54.

Whatever is done by an agent in reference to the business in which he is at the time employed, and within the scope of his authority, is said or done by the principal, and may be proved as well in a criminal as in a civil case, in all respects as if the principal were the actor or speaker. Cliquot v. U. S., 3 Wall. (U.S.) 114.

2. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 54.

The Queen's Case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 297, is sometimes quoted as bearing on this point. There the question asked of the judges, in abstract form, was, whether the admission of an agent of the prosecutor that he had offered a bribe to a witness who was not called could be given in evidence by the prisoner, for the purpose of discrediting generally those witnesses who were called; and the judges answered that it could not. No question of admission or agency was discussed, but the judges grounded their opinion on this, that no inference against the general credibility of the witnesses could be drawn from the evidence tendered, and that it was not, therefore, relevant to the issue. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 54.

14. The Whole of a Confession Must be Taken Together.—In criminal as well as in civil cases the whole of an admission made by a party is to be given in evidence.<sup>1</sup>

1. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 54; Conner v. State, 34 Tex. 659; State v. Hollenscheit, 61 Mo. 302; State v. Marten, 28 Mo. 530; Griswold v. State, 24 Wis. 144; State v. Elliott, 15 Iowa, 72; Peterson v. State, 47 Ga. 524; Long v. State, 22 Ga. 40; Alfred v. State, 37 Miss. 296; Green v. State, 13 Mo. 382; Bower v. State, 5 Mo. 364; William v. State, 39 Ala. 532; Corbett v. State, 31 Ala. 429; Chambers v. State, 26 Ala. 59; Frank v. State, 27 Ala. 37; State v. Mahon, 32 Vt. 241; State v. M'Donnell, 32 Vt. 491; Kelsey v. Bush, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 440; People v. Johnson, 2 Wheel. C. C. (N. Y.) 377; Com. v. Keyes, 11 Gray (Mass.), 323; Com. v. Brown, 9 Leigh (Va.), 633; State v. Worthington, 64 N. Car. 594; Crawford v. State, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 190; Tipton v. State, Peck (Tenn.), 308; State v. Isaac, 3 La. Ann. 359; People v. Navis, 3 Cal. 106; People v. Murphy, 39 Cal. 52; People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 663; Republica v. McCarty, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 86; U. S. v. Prior, 5 Cranch C. C. 37; U. S. v. Wilson, 1 Bald. (U. S.) 78. Compare Com. v. Pitsinger, 110 Mass. 101; McCulloch v. State, 48 Ind. 109; Levison v. State, 54 Ala. 520.

The rule is thus laid down by Abbott, C. J., in The Queen's Case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 297: If, on the part of the prosecution, a confession or admission of the defendant, made in the course of a conversation with the witness, be brought forward, the defendant has a right to lay before the court the whole of what was said in that conversation; not only so much as may explain or qualify the matter introduced by the previous examination, but even matter not properly connected with the matter introduced on the previous examination, provided only that it relates to the subject-matter of the suit; because it would not be just to take part of a conversation as evidence against a party without giving to the party at the same time the benefit of the entire residue of what he said on the same occasion. "There is no doubt," says Mr. Justice Bosanquet, "that if a prosecutor uses the declaration of a prisoner, he must take the whole of it together, and cannot select one part and leave another; and if there be either no other evidence in the case, or no other evidence incompatible with it, the declaration so adduced in evidence must be taken as true. But if, after the whole of the statement of the prisoner is given in evidence, the prosecutor is in a situation to contradict any part of it, he is at liberty to do so, and then the statement of the prisoner and the whole of the other evidence must be left to the jury for their consideration, precisely as in any other case where one part of the evidence is contradictory to another." R. v. Jones, 2 C. & P. 629. Where a prisoner was indicted for larceny, and, in addition to evidence of the possession of the goods the counsel for the prosecution put in the prisoner's statement before the magistrate in which he asserted that he had bought the goods, Garrow, B., is reported to have directed an acquittal, saying, that if a prosecutor used a prisoner's statement he must take the whole of it together. But there is not the least doubt that a jury may believe that part which charges the prisoner, and reject that which is in his favor if they see sufficient grounds for so doing. Thus where, in addition to evidence of the stolen goods being found in the possession of the prisoner, the prosecutor put in the prisoner's examination, which merely stated that the "cloth was honestly bought and paid for," Mr. Justice J. Park told the jury "If you believe that the prisoner really bought and paid for this cloth, as he says he did, you ought to acquit him; but if, from his selling it so very soon after it was lost, at the distance of eight miles, you feel satisfied that the statement of his buying it is all false, you will find him guilty." R. v. Higgins, 3 C. & P. 603. So where a prisoner, charged with murder, stated in his confession that he was present at the murder, which was committed by another person, and that he took no part in it, Littledale, J., left the confession to the jury, saying, "It must be taken all together, and it is evidence for the prisoner as well as against him; still the jury may, if they think proper, believe one part of it and disbelieve another." R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221. See also R. v. Steptoe, 4 C. & P. 397; Blackburn v. State, 23 Ohio St. 146; People v. Wyman, 15 Cal. 70; Griswold v. State, 24 Wis. 144; Kelsey v. Bush, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 441; Roberts v. Gee, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 449; Fox v. Lambson, 3 Halst. (N. J.) 275; Eiland v. State, 52 Ala. 322; State v. Hollenscheit, 61 Mo. 302; State v. West, 1 Houst. C. C. (Del.) 371; Young v. State, 2 Verg. (Tenn.) 292; Com. v. Brown, 9 Leigh (Va.), 633;

15. Confessions of Matters Void in Point of Law, or False in Fact.—An admission on the part of a prisoner is not conclusive, and if it afterwards appear in evidence that the fact was otherwise, the admission will be of no weight. Thus, upon an indictment for bigamy, where the prisoner had admitted the first marriage, and it appeared at the trial that such marriage was void, for want of consent of the guardian of the woman, the prisoner was acquitted.<sup>1</sup>

16. Confessions Inferred from Silence or Demeanor.—Besides the proof of direct confessions, the conduct or demeanor of a prisoner on being charged with the crime, or upon allusions being made to it, is frequently given in evidence against him.<sup>2</sup>

State v. Mahon, 32 Vt. 241. In a trial for murder, the counsel for the prosecution said he would treat the statements of the prisoners before the magistrates as their defence, and show by evidence that they were not consistent with truth. R. v. Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 36. And this course is frequently adopted in practice.

Although the confession may be incompetent as an entirety, yet so much of it may be received as relates strictly to the fact discovered by it. Garrard v. State, 50 Miss. 147.

Where but a portion only of the confession was overheard, it is admissible. State v. Covington, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 569. But where the accused was interrupted, and was unable to say all he wanted to, the confession is not admissible. Miller v. State, 40 Ala. 54; Crawford v. State, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 90.

Where a witness testified that he did not understand all the accused said to him, the confession is not admissible. People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 663.

Where the prosecution have proved declarations of the prisoner by a witness who states that he did hear all that the prisoner said at the time, the prisoner has a right to prove by other witnesses who were present all that he said at the time tending to exonerate himself. Coffman v. Commonwealth, 10 Bush (Ky.), 495; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 293. See Burns v. State, 49 Ala. 370; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 326.

A confession cannot be proved by a witness who does not remember the substance of all that was said in the same conversation. Berry v. Commonwealth, 10 Bush (Ky.), 15; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 272.

Where the prosecution prove declarations and conversations of the accused, he has a right on cross-examination to question the witnesses as to all he said at the time, and has also a right to call on his defence witnesses to prove all that was said at the time. People v. Strong, 30

Cal. 151. See Conner v. State, 34 Tex. 659; State v. Worthington, 64 N. Car. 594.

1. 3 Stark. Ev. (3d Ed.) 894; Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 55; Alton v. Gilman, 2 N. H. 521; State v. Welch, 7 Port. (Ala.) 463.

On an indictment for setting fire to a ship, with intent to injure two part-owners, it was held that the prosecutor could not make use of an admission by the prisoner that these persons were owners, if it appeared that the requisites of the shipping acts had not been complied with. R. v. Philp, 1 Moody C. C. 271.

2. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 56; Slatery v. People, 76 Ill. 217; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 29, and note; State v. Pratt, 20 Iowa, 267; Murphy v. State, 36 Ohio St. 628; Broyles v. State, 47 Ind. 251; State v. Johnson, 35 La. Ann. 842; Donnelly v. State, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 463, 601; Ettlinger v. Commonwealth, 98 Pa. St. 338; People v. Green, 1 Park. C. C. (N. Y.) 11; Kelley v. People, 55 N. Y. 565; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 342; McKee v. People, 36 N. Y. 113; Com. v. Call, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 515; McDonough v. McNeil, 113 Mass. 96; Com. v. Brown, 121 Mass. 69; Com. v. Kenney, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 235; Com. v. Harvey, 1 Gray (Mass.), 487; Robinson v. Blen, 20 Me. 109; State v. Reed, 62 Me. 129; Batturs v. Sellers, 5 H. & J. (Md.) 117; Frost v. Commonwealth, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 362; State v. Bowman, 80 N. Car. 432; State v. Swink, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 9; State v. Perkins, 3 Hawkes (N. Car.), 377; Lawson v. State, 20 Ala. 65; State v. Welch, 7 Port. (Ala.) 463; Drumright v. State, 29 Ga. 430; People v. Estrado, 49 Cal. 171; People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113; Noftsinger v. State, 7 Tex. App. 301; Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 262. Compare Com. v. Kenny, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 235.

During a trial before a justice of the peace, one who was testifying as a witness left the stand to engage, with others, in violence against J. B. This breach of the peace put an end to the trial. The witness then resumed his place and said to an attorney: "We are ready to go on with the trial." To which the attorney answered: "You and your crowd have nearly killed J. B., and we cannot go on with the trial. You have disabled him so that we can't try the case now." To which no response was made. Held, that this was proper evidence in a suit for the injury by J. B. against his assailants, as the failure to deny the accusation was a tacit admission. Puett v. Beard, 86 Ind. 104.

Where one is accused of crime and is silent, it may go to the jury as a tacit but weak admission of guilt. Such silence is worth but little as a tacit admission, and should be received with great caution. Williams v. State, 42 Ark. 380.

The statement of the justice of the peace before whom the preliminary examination of the defendant was had, testifying as a witness on the trial, "that he explained the charge to the defendant, and asked him if he desired to make a statement; that, after defendant made his statement, witness told him his own statement would convict him, and defendant made no reply," is not a confession, or admission implied from silence, and is not competent evidence against the defendant. Weaver v. State, 77 Ala. 26.

Although neither the evidence nor the declaration of a wife is admissible against the husband on a criminal charge, yet observations made by her to him upon the subject of the offence, to which he gives no answer or an evasive reply, are receivable in evidence as an implied admission on his part. R. v. Smithers, 5 C. & P. 332; R. v. Bartlett, 7 C. & P. 832. So evidence of a prisoner's demeanor on a former occasion is admissible to prove guilty knowledge. R. v. Tatershall, and R. v. Phillips, 1 Lew. C. C. 105. Mr. Phillipps, after remarking that a confession may in some cases be collected or inferred from the conduct and demeanor of a prisoner, on hearing a statement affecting himself adds, "As such statements frequently contain much hearsay and other objectionable evidence, and as the demeanor of a person upon hearing a criminal charge against himself is liable to great misconstruction, evidence of this description ought to be regarded with much caution." 1 Ph. & Arn. (10th Ed.) 405.

A deposition of a witness, or the examination of another prisoner taken before the committing magistrate, is not admissible in evidence merely because the party affected by it was present, and might have had an opportunity of cross-examining or commenting on the evidence; neither can any inference be drawn, as in other cases, from his silence. R. v. Appleby, 3 Stark. N. P. 33; Melen v. Andrews, M. & M. 336; R. v. Turner, 1 Moody C. C. 347; R. v. Swinnerton, 1 Carr. & M. 593.

If the evidence is sufficient to establish a concert of action on the part of two persons in the commission of an offence, the confessions of the other party, made in the presence of the accused on trial, who said nothing, is competent evidence for the State, on the principle of acquiescence. Robins v. State, 9 Tex. App. 671. Compare Com. v. McDermott, 123 Mass. 440.

Where two persons charged with a larceny, having the stolen property in their possession, were taken into custody by a police officer, the declarations of one of them, assuming to speak for and implicating both, made to the officer in the presence and hearing of the other person charged, who remained silent, are competent evidence for the State on the separate trial of the latter. Murphy v. State, 36 Ohio St. 628.

The judge charged the jury that if a party hears a criminal charge against himself made in his presence, and says nothing, it is an admission on his part, and in the eye of the law the party accepts that charge as his confession. Held, that the charge was erroneous. State v. Edwards, 13 S. Car. 30; Campbell v. State, 55 Ala. 80.

The mere fact that the accused does not contradict the evidence against him does not warrant the implication that he thereby confesses the truth of their statements. State v. Smith, 30 La. Ann. pt. i. 457.

If the accused was intoxicated at the time, it is for the jury to consider if he understood the declarations. State v. Perkins, 3 Hawkes (N. Car.). 377.

The defendant on the trial made a statement "that all the allegations of the prosecution are false and untrue, etc." Held, that it was error to charge the jury that "the statement of defendant does not, however, deny the assault. This silence would go far to confirm the testimony of the plaintiff." His assertion that "all her allegations" were false and untrue was a direct denial of the assault. De Foe v. People, 22 Mich. 224.

A statement made in the presence of the prisoner will be presumed to have been in his hearing. Hochreiter v. People, 2 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 363.

When a party, against whom material

The rule allowing the silence of a person to be taken as an implied admission of the truth of allegations spoken or uttered facts within his own knowledge are charged in the pleading and in the testimony, fails to testify in his own behalf, this is a suspicious circumstance against him. Felton v. Leigh, 48 Ark. 198.

Misnomer.—Issue being joined on the plea of misnomer in a criminal case, it is competent for the prosecution to prove, as an implied admission by the defendant, that he was arraigned and tried in the mayor's court by the same name alleged in the indictment, without interposing any objection on the ground of misnomer. White v. State, 72 Ala. 195.

Statements of third persons, made in presence of the defendant, are admissible against him only to the extent they are admitted by him to be correct, either by his words or conduct; and the conduct of the defendant is the gist of the inquiry, and the only matter to be considered by the jury. Such statements are therefore inadmissible, unless accompanied with proof of defendant's statements or conduct in response thereto. People v. Ab Yute, 54 Cal. 89.

Before the acquiescence of a defendant on trial, in the language or the conduct of others, can be assumed as the concession of the truth of any particular statement, or of the existence of any particular fact, it must clearly appear that the language was heard, or the conduct understood, by the defendant at the time. Long v. State, 13 Tex. App. 211; Com. v. Harvey, 1 Gray (Mass.), 487; Com. v. Sliney, 126 Mass. 49.

Whether the defendant could hear and appeared to be listening depended on his position and attitude, and might be estimated and testified to by any one who was present at the time and saw them. Com. v. Galavan, 9 Allen (Mass.), 271.

In Com. v. Brown, 121 Mass. 69, the court said: "The rule is that a statement made in the presence of the defendant, to which no reply is made, is not admissible against him, unless it appears that he was at liberty to make a reply, and that the statement was made by such person and under such circumstances as naturally to call for a reply unless he intends to admit it. But if he makes a reply, wholly or partially admitting the truth of the facts stated, both the statement and the reply are competent evidence." In this case two women stated that the defendant had performed an operation on them; he did not remain silent, but asked them in reply whether they had been previously operated upon by another person. Held, that the jury might infer from this an admission by him of the truth of their statement. The fact that the defendant was arrested, and was taken by the officer in the presence of the women, did not destroy the competency of the evidence.

At the trial of an indictment for murder the defendant's son testified that, after the fire or soon after, he asked the defendant, "What did you want to set the fire for?" and that the defendant made no reply. The judge instructed the jury that, if the defendant did not hear the question, he was not bound to answer; if he did, the jury would consider whether or not, under the circumstances, he was bound to answer, and how far any inference was to be drawn against him from his answering. Held, that the defendant's silence was no ground of exception. Com. v. E. B. 134 Mass. 527. In this case the court said: "Declarations made in the presence of a party, to which he makes no reply, are sometimes competent evidence equivalent to a tacit admission by him. This depends on whether he heard the statements, whether he is at liberty to reply, whether he is in custody under any restraint or duress, and whether the statements are made to him or to other persons, and under such circumstances as naturally to call for a reply." Com. v. Kenney, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 235; Com. v. Harvey, 1 Gray (Mass.), 487; Com. v. Galavan, 9 Allen (Mass.), 271.

Where inculpatory statements were made by a brother of the defendant in his presence and under circumstances which would warrant the inference that he heard them, but did not deny them, they were admissible in evidence. The question whether they were so admissible being left to the jury under proper instructions. Moye v. State, 66 Cal. 271. See Com. v. Harvey, 1 Gray (Mass.), 487.

Silence under accusations is not to be considered as an admission of guilt. Thus where one had promised to go on his good behavior at a family interview to which he had induced a friend by means of such promise, to go with him, it was held that his silence at the interview under harsh accusations should be construed as an admission of the truth. Slattery v. People, 76 Ill. 235. See Com. v. Kenney, 12 Metc. 235; Mattocks v. Lyman, 16 Vt. 135.

presence does not apply to silence at a judicial proceeding or hearing.<sup>1</sup>

17. To the Clergy.—Admission made to a clergyman may be received in evidence in a criminal case if not made to him in his professional character in the course of discipline enjoined by his church.<sup>2</sup>

18. Must be of the Crime Charged.—A confession to be given in evidence must be of the offence charged in the indictment. It is not competence to give in evidence any confession or declaration of the prisoner of his having committed similar crimes upon other occasions, or of his general disposition to commit them.<sup>3</sup>

19. The Mode of Introducing Confessions.—For the purpose of introducing a confession, it is unnecessary in general to negative any promise or inducement, unless there is good reason to suspect that something of the kind has taken place.<sup>4</sup>

1. People v. Willett, 92 N. Y. 29; Boyles v. State, 47 Ind. 251; Comstock v. State, 14 Neb. 205; R. v. Turner, 1 Moody C. C. 347; Melen v. Andrews, 1 L. & M. 336; Child v. Grace, 2 C. & P. 93.

2. Upon the trial of an indictment for murder, evidence was received on the part of the prosecution, under objection and exception, to the effect, that upon a coroner's inquest a witness testified that shortly after the murder a stranger called at her house and asked the way to Sandy Hill, and also for a drink of water; that the prisoner with a number of others was placed around a room and the witness pointed out the prisoner as the one who was called; also, that a number of persons, including the prisoner, passed behind her, each one repeating the question asked her by the stranger, and that she identified the prisoner by his voice, and that the prisoner on that occasion did not deny that he was such stranger. Held, that the examination before the coroner was of a judicial character; that the examinations so made were part of the proceedings; that the prisoner was not bound to speak, and his silence could not be regarded as an evidence of guilt; and therefore that the evidence was improperly received. People v. Willett, 92 N. Y. 29.

3. People v. Gates, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 11. See R. v. Gilham, 1 Moo. C. C. 16; Com. v. Drake, 15 Mass. 161.

4. 2 Arch. Cr. Pr. & Pl. (8th Ed.) 385; Com. v. Call, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 515; Sutton v. Johnson, 62 Ill. 209; Kinchelow v. State, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 9.

A statement of the defendant to the district attorney, at the time of the preliminary examination, that he wanted the prosecution stopped; that he "didn't hurt the girl much;" that he would give the attorney $8 or $10; and that the girl would "get over it again,"—does not amount to a confession of the crime of rape, or of anything more than an assault. Hardtke v. State, 67 Wis. 552.

4. Roscoe's Cr. Ev. (10th Ed.) 56.

In a trial for murder, it was proposed to give in evidence a statement of the prisoner, made in prison, to a coroner for whom the prisoner had sent. It, however, appeared that previous to this time, Mr. Clifton, a magistrate, had had an interview with the prisoner, and it was suggested on behalf of the prisoner that he might have told the prisoner that it would be better to confess, and that therefore the counsel for the prosecution were bound to call him. Littledale, J.: "As something might have passed between the prisoner and Mr. Clifton respecting the confession, it would be fair in the prosecutors to call him, but I will not compel them to do so. However, if they will not call him, the prisoner may do so if he chooses." R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221. So where a prisoner being in the custody of two constables on a charge of arson, one B. went into the room, and the prisoner immediately asked him to go into another room, as he wished to speak to him, and they went into another room, when the prisoner made a statement; it was urged that the constables ought to be called to prove that they had done nothing to induce the prisoner to confess, and R. v. Swatkins, in/ra, was relied upon. Taunton, J.: "A confession is presumed to be voluntary, unless the contrary is shown, and as no threat or promise is proved to have been made by the constables, it is not to be presumed." Having consulted Littledale, J., his lordship added, "We do not think, according to the usual practice, that we ought to exclude the evidence, because a constable may have induced the prisoner to make the statement, otherwise he must in all cases call the magistrates and constables before whom or in whose custody the prisoner has been." R. v. Williams, Glouc. Spr. Ass. 1832; 3 Russ. on Crimes (5th Ed.), 497.

But if there be any probable ground to suspect that an officer, in whose custody a prisoner has previously been, has been guilty of collusion in obtaining a confession, such suspicion ought to be removed in the first instance by the prosecutor calling such officer. Upon an indictment for arson, it appeared that a constable, who was called to prove a confession, went into a room in an inn, where he found the prisoner in the custody of another constable, and as soon as he went into the room the prisoner said he wished to speak to him, and motioned the other constable to leave the room, which he did, and left them alone. The prisoner immediately made a statement. The witness had not cautioned the prisoner at all, and nothing had been said of what had passed between the constable and the prisoner before the witness entered the room. It was contended that the other constable must be called to show that he had used no inducement to make the prisoner confess. Patteson, J.: "I am inclined to think the constable ought to be called. This is a peculiar case, and can never be cited as an authority, except in cases where a man being in the custody of one person, another who has nothing to do with the case comes in, and the prisoner motions the first to go away. I think, as the witness did not caution the prisoner, it would be unsafe to receive the statement. It would lead to collusion between constables." R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 548. In order to induce the court to call another officer in whose custody the prisoner has been, it must appear either that some inducement has been used by, or some express reference made to, such officer. A prisoner, when before the committing magistrate, having been duly cautioned, made a confession, in which he alluded to a confession which he had previously made to Williams, a constable. It was submitted that Williams ought to be called to prove that he had not used any inducement. Littledale, J.: "Although I do not think it necessary that a constable in whose custody a prisoner has been should be called in every case, yet, as in this case there is a reference to the constable, I think he ought to be called." Williams was then called, and proved he did not use any undue means to obtain a confession; but he had received the prisoner from Marsh, another constable, and the prisoner had made some statement to Marsh. It was then urged that Marsh should be called. Littledale, J.: "I do not think it is necessary that a constable should be called, unless it appear that some promise was given or some express reference was made to the constable. There was a distinct reference made to Williams, and therefore I thought he must be called, but there is no reference to Marsh. It does not appear either that any confession was made to Marsh. It only appears that a statement was made that might either be a confession, a denial, or an exculpation." R. v. Warner, Glouc. Spr. Ass. 1832, 3 Russ. on Crimes (5th Ed.), 498.

If evidence of a confession be received, and it afterwards appear from other evidence that an inducement was held out, which, had it been known at the time, would have rendered the evidence inadmissible, the proper course for the judge to take is to strike the evidence of confession out of his notes, and to tell the jury to pay no attention to it. R. v. Garner, 1 Den. C. C. 329; 2 C. & K. 920.

Confessions Taken Down in Writing.—If the confession is taken down in writing and signed by the prisoner, or its truth acknowledged by parol, or if it be written by him, then it is put in as an ordinary document and read by the officer of the court. R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 550. But if it be taken down by a person who is present when the confession is made, and is not signed or acknowledged by the prisoner, the document is not itself evidence, but may be used by the person who made it to refresh his memory. 4 C. & P. 550, note b. According to general principles, if the confession were contained in a document, which was in existence and admissible in evidence, parol evidence could not be given of it. See R. v. Gay, 7 C. & P. 230.

Burden of Proof.—The burden of showing that a confession was obtained by improper inducements rests with the defendant. Rufers v. State, 25 Ohio St. 464. Compare State v. Garvey, 28 La. Ann. 925.

Where confessions offered in evidence are objected to upon the ground that they were improperly obtained; if the person who obtained the confession denies holding out any inducements, the defendant has a right before the confessions are received to give evidence that the confessions were obtained by improper induce-

CONFIDENCE—CONFINEMENT.

20. Furnishing Copy of.—A district attorney was under no obligation to furnish the defence with a copy of a confession.<sup>1</sup>

CONFIDENCE.—The word "confidence" is a word peculiarly appropriate to create a trust. It is, as applicable to the subject of a trust, as nearly a synonym as the English language allows. Trust is a confidence which one man reposes in another, and confidence is a trust.<sup>2</sup>

CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS. See PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.

CONFINEMENT, within the meaning of an act prohibiting confinement of the master of a ship, may be by a moral or physical restraint; by threats of violence with a present force, which restrains the master from his freedom of movement or command in his ship; or by physical restraint of his person.<sup>3</sup> But assault and battery does not amount to a confinement.<sup>4</sup>

As to its meaning in statutes relating to prisoners, see note 5.

ments. Com. v. Culver, 126 Mass. 464.

It is for the prosecution to show that the confession was voluntary. Barnes v. State, 36 Tex. 356; People v. Barric, 49 Cal. 342; s. c., 1 Am. Cr. Rep. 178; Nicholson v. State, 28 Md. 140.

1. Santry v. State, 67 Wis. 65.

Authorities for Confession.—Roscoe's Criminal Evidence; Wharton's Criminal Evidence; Russell on Crimes; Desty's Criminal Law; Bishop's Criminal Procedure; Archbold's Criminal Practice and Pleading; Greenleaf on Evidence.

2. Coates' Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 133.

Confidence Game, in a statutory prohibition, is the obtaining or attempting to obtain from any person money or property by means of the use of any false or bogus check, or by any other means, instrument, or device. Morton v. People, 47 Ill. 474.

3. U. S. v. Thompson, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 171.

And it matters not whether such seizure or restraint is principally or wholly for the purpose of inflicting personal chastisement upon the master, and not to deprive him of his authority or command on board the ship. "The law looks to the act, and not merely to the intent. If the seizure is unlawful, it is a confinement." U. S. v. Savage, 5 Mas. (U. S.) 461. See also U. S. v. Sharp, Pet. (U. S. C. C.) 118.

4. U. S. v. Lawrence, 1 Cranch (U. S.), 94.

5. The words "in confinement," in a 3 C. of L.—32 statute authorizing the judge to order an inquiry as to the sanity of prisoners, and to direct their removal to an insane asylum, "are used to import those who are imprisoned in the county jail, awaiting a final trial, or in the actual custody of the officers of the law, as distinguished from those not having been arrested, or who, having been arrested, have been discharged from arrest on bail." Ex parte Trice, 53 Ala. 548.

Actual Confinement, in a statute relating to insolvent debtors, means either an actual imprisonment or "being upon the limits," the limits being simply by a fiction of law an extension of the prison walls. In re Moschberger, 10 N. J. L. J. 121, citing Smick v. Opycke, 7 Hal. (N. J.) 438.

Confine a Woman.—A New Jersey statute provided that "it should not be lawful to confine the person of any female for debt." The plaintiff appeared before a justice and made oath that he would be in danger of losing his debt if process issued against the defendant, a woman, by summons. A warrant was accordingly issued and judgment given against her, overruling her plea that she was not liable to arrest by warrant. The case was appealed to the common pleas and the judgment sustained. On appeal to the supreme court it was held that an arrest was an imprisonment and came within the meaning of the act, and therefore the issuing of a warrant against a woman was improper. Blight v. Meeker, 7 N. J. L. 97.

CONFIRMATION is the approbation or consent to an estate already created, which, as far as it is in the confirming power, makes it good and valid. So that the confirmation does not regularly create the estate, yet such words may be mingled in the confirmation as may create or enlarge an estate; but that is by the force of such words as are foreign to the business of confirmation, and by their own force and power tend to create the estate.<sup>1</sup> The conveyance of an estate or right in esse, whereby a voidable estate is made sure and unavoidable, or a particular estate is increased.<sup>2</sup> (See also CONVEYANCE.)

CONFISCATION ACTS. See WAR.

1. People v. Law, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 511, quoting Gilb. (Tenn.) 69.

Injunction prayed for against street passenger railway company entering on a street, on ground that the common council was incapable of giving a valid consent to, or conferring a legal authority on, the defendants for the construction of this road. The court said that the defendant's authority depended on the construction to be placed upon the act of April 14, 1860. "In the first place, I think it was intended to confirm and make valid the grant or permission conferred by the resolution and action of the common council, whether regular or irregular,—whether valid or invalid,—whether the consent was sufficiently or imperfectly given. It has been said that the consent of the common council was never given according to the forms of law, and that, therefore, it is not proper to assume that its consent was ever intended to be given. But I think this is a fallacy, and that the effect of the act in question was a legislative declaration and adjudication that such consent was intended to be given; and that their confirmation was based upon that assumption, and the action of the common council intended to be validated. This the legislature had power to do; and I think they have effectually ratified the action of the common council, if the legislative proceedings are free from other valid or constitutional objections.

"Some criticism is made upon the effect of confirmation in a legal point of view; and it is said that 'a confirmation may make a voidable or defeasible estate good, but it cannot strengthen a void estate.' Viner's Abr. Con. Y. pl. 5; Co. Lit. 295, b. This is true, but it must be considered in reference to the subject-matter. If the common council of New York had no authority to give their consent in any way to the construction of the Ninth Avenue Railroad, a mere confirmation of an act thus entirely void and unauthorized, because of want of power over the subject-matter, would probably be of no avail. But if the common council had authority over the subject matter to express their consent, provided it be done according to established forms, I think the supreme power would have a right to waive or correct a mere irregularity, and by confirmation give effect to an act in other respects legally done. I am inclined to think also that there is something of substance in another distinction, which may be mentioned. If a resolution of the common council, in order to be legally effective, must be passed in a particular way,—as by the action of separate boards thereon in the same year,—it may be that the resolution as such is still defective, notwithstanding its confirmation by the legislature; but if the grant or permission which is the subject of the resolution be such as the common council is authorized to confer, and such grant or permission, though irregularly given, be confirmed by the legislature, it strikes me such confirmation would reach back of and beyond the mere instrument by which the grant or permission was conveyed, to the substance of the grant or permission itself, and make it effective if the exertion of such a power would be within the scope of the powers of the confirming body."

Confirmation of Assessment.—Where the act provided that no certiorari to remove an assessment should be allowed after thirty days have elapsed from the confirmation of the assessment, the limitation will not begin to run if the confirmation has no legal existence for the want of notice of filing of the report, and of the convening of the township committee to consider objections touching the assessment. State v. North Bergen, 39 N. J. 456.

2. 2 Bl. Com. 325.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

- I. Definition, 501.
    1. In international law, 501.
    2. In inter-state law, 501.
  - II. General principles, 502.
    1. Sovereignty and jurisdiction of nations, 502.
    2. Comity of nations, 503.
    3. Rules governing recognition of foreign laws, 507.
  - III. Extra-territorial force of laws, 508.
    1. Supremacy of States, 508.
      - a. Natural allegiance, 511.
    2. Laws relating to the status and capacity of persons, 512.
      - a. Rights of expatriation and naturalisation, 513.
      - b. Rights to regulate property, 513.
      - c. Lex loci contractus, 513.
    3. Municipal laws, 514.
    4. Supremacy of domicile, 514.
    5. Statutes destroying capacity, 515.
      - a. Disabilities of slaves, 516.
      - b. Disabilities of civil death, 516.
      - c. Disabilities of infamy and attainder, 516.
      - d. Disabilities of creed and caste, 517.
      - e. Disabilities of infants, 517.
      - f. Disabilities of coverture, 518.
      - g. Disabilities of idiocy and lunacy, 518.
      - h. Disabilities of spendthrifts, 518.
    6. Statutes protecting capacity, 519.
  - IV. Jurisdiction of action, 519.
    1. Want of jurisdiction, 519.
      - a. Suits for negligence causing death, 521.
      - b. Suits on foreign statute, 522.
      - c. Garnishment of wages, 523.
    2. Conflict of jurisdiction, 524.
    3. Concurrent jurisdiction, 525.
    4. Priorities, levies, and attachments, 527.
  - V. Foreign judgments, 527.
    1. Judgments in rem, 528.
    2. Judgments in personam, 530.
    3. Judgments in courts of sister States, 531.
    4. Pendency of suit in foreign State, 535.
  - VI. Penal laws and offences, 536.
    1. Territorial limitation of the operation of criminal laws and sentences, 536.
      - a. Attainder and infamy, 537.
    2. When crimes committed in one country will be punished in another, 537.
      - a. Continuing offences, 538.
    3. Jurisdiction to try offences, 539.
  - VII. Pleadings and proofs, 539.
    1. Foreign laws, etc., must be plead, 539.
    2. Proof governed by lex fori, 540.
    3. Manner of proof, 541.
  - VIII. Contracts, 542.
    1. Of lex loci contractus, 542.
      - a. What deemed the place of contract, 546.
      - b. Interest, 549.
        - (1) Contract rate, 549.
        - (2) Rate after maturity, 550.
        - (3) Usury, 550.
    - c. Contracts for the loan of money, 550.
    - d. Contracts for insurance, 551.
    - e. Contracts relating to personal property, 552.
      - (1) Mortgage of a vessel, 552.
    - f. Validity of contract where made, 552.
    - g. Contracts injurious to a nation or its subjects, 555.
    - h. Contracts founded on political, etc., interpitude, 556.
    - i. Contracts in fraud, etc., of the laws of another country, 556.
      - (1) Contracts for sale of intoxicating liquors, 556.
      - (2) Contracts by subjects residing abroad, 558.
    - j. Contracts which are immoral, 558.
    - k. Contracts opposed to national policy, 558.
    - l. Form, proof, and authentication of contracts, 558.
    - m. Nature, obligation, and interpretation of contracts, 559.
      - (1) Nature, 559.
      - (2) Obligation, 559.
      - (3) Interpretation, 559.
        - (a) Rules of interpretation, 561.
    - n. Contracts made in one State to be performed in another, 561.
  2. Lex loci rei sita, 563.
    - a. Real property, 563.
      - (1) Distinctive features of real property, 564.
      - (2) Conveyances of real property, 565.
        - (a) Nature and extent of interest transferred, 566.
        - (b) Capacity to take real estate, 566.
        - (c) Real estate acquired by operation of law, 566.
      - (3) Immovables not land, 567.
      - (4) Incumbrances of real property, 567.
    - b. Personal property, 567.
      - (1) Sale valid according to lex loci contractus, but invalid according to lex loci rei sita, 569.
      - (2) Assignment of choses in action, 571.
      - (3) Foreign assignments for benefit of creditors, 571.
  - c. Powers, 573.
3. Of lex domicilii, 573.
  - a. Capacity to contract. — Personal status, 573.
  - b. Assignment for benefit of creditors, 573.
  - c. Contract by master of a vessel, 574.
  - d. Personal property, 574.
  - e. Married women, 575.
4. Of the lex fori, 575.
  - a. General rules, 575.
  - b. The rule as to remedies upon contracts, 576.

§ General Principles. — 1. SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF NATIONS. — Every nation possesses exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory; and the laws of every State affect and bind directly all property, whether personal or real, within its territory, whether belonging to citizens or aliens, and all persons residing therein, whether native-born subjects or alien sojourners, as well as all contracts made, and acts done, within the territory of such State or sovereignty.<sup>3</sup> Sovereignty, united with domain, establishes the exclusive jurisdiction of a nation within its own territories as to all controversies, crimes, and rights arising therein.<sup>4</sup>

It has been laid down by Huberus, and the doctrine has been sanctioned both in England<sup>5</sup> and the United States,<sup>6</sup> —

(1) That the laws of every empire have force only within the limits of its own government, and bind all who are subject thereof, but not beyond; (2) That all persons who are found

1 Transfer of Property. — The power of a State to regulate the transfer of all property within its territory is well established. Steele v. Goodwin (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 461; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 361; Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall (U. S.), 151; 74 U. S. bk. 19, L. Ed. 113; Warner's App. 13 Weekly Notes of Cases, 505.

A transfer of title to property, whether personalty or realty, can only be effected within the limits of the territory where the law prevails; and as the laws of a State have no extra-territorial force, it follows that the title to property located in one State cannot be passed by force of the laws of another, except by virtue of the comity or courtesy which prevails among different nations and States by force of international law. State Bank Receiver v. Plainfield Bank, 34 N.J. Eq. 450.

<sup>3</sup> See Lawrence's Wheaton, 160, 161; Henry, For. Law, pt. I. ch. 1, § 1; Huberus, lib. I. tit. 3, § 2; Minor v. Cardwell, 37 Mo. 354; Campbell v. Hall, Cowp. 208; Davis v. Jarquin, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 100; Ruding v. Smith, 2 Hagg. Con. 383; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182, 192; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black, 402, 405; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black, 672, 690, 691.

In discussing this question, Fœlix lays down the broad principle that "every State possesses the power of regulating the conditions on which the real or personal property within its territory may be held or transmitted; and of determining the state and capacity of all persons therein, as well as the validity of the contracts and other acts which arise there, and the rights and obligations which result from them; and, finally, of prescribing the conditions on which suits at law may be commenced and carried on in its territory," also, "that no State can, by its laws, directly affect, bind, or regulate property beyond its territory, or control persons who do not reside within it, whether they be native-born subjects or not." See Fœlix, Droit Intern. Privé, § 1.

Story says, that each State may by statute regulate the manner and circumstances under which property, whether personal or real, or mere chores in action, within its territory, shall be held, transferred, transmitted, bequeathed, or enforced; the condition, capacity, and state of all persons within it; the validity of contracts made, and acts done within it; the resulting rights and duties growing out of these contracts and acts; and the remedies and modes of administering justice in all cases, calling for the interposition of its tribunals to protect and vindicate and secure the wholesome operation of its own laws within its own domain. See Story, Conf. L. 19, § 18. To the same effect Vattel, pt. 2, ch. 7, §§ 84, 85, and Boullenois, Traité des Statutes, pp. 2, 3.

<sup>4</sup> Vattel, b. 2, ch. 7, §§ 84, 85.
<sup>5</sup> See Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr, 1010; Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341; Lit. 794, Hargrave's note 44.

<sup>6</sup> See Pearsall v. Dwight, 2 Mass. 90; Desobats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 469; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 C. (N. Y.) 510, and n.; Saul v. His Creditors, 17 Martin (La.), 569, 596, 597, 598; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 358; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 588-591. See also Shanks v. Dupont, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 242, 247; Inglis v. Sail Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99, 125; Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. (U. S.), 237; U. S. v. Gillies, 1 Pet. C. C. 159, 160; Murray v. Schooner Charming Betsy, 2 U. S. 64, 119; United States v. Williams, 2 Cr. (U. S.) 82, and note; Talbot v. Jenson, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 133.

within the limits of a government, whether their residence is permanent or only temporary, are to be deemed subjects thereof; and (3) That the rulers of every empire, from comity, admit that the laws of every people in force within its limits ought to have the same force everywhere, so far as they do not prejudice the powers or rights of other governments or of their subjects.<sup>1</sup>

Whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another, depend entirely upon the laws and municipal regulations of such other country; in other words, upon its own proper jurisprudence and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.<sup>2</sup>

A State may prohibit the operation of all foreign laws and the rights growing out of them, within its own territories; it may permit some, and prohibit others; it may recognize and modify and qualify some, and give universal effect to others. When the nation's own code speaks positively on any subject, it must be obeyed by all persons who are within reach of its sovereignty. When the nation's customary, unwritten, or common law speaks directly on any subject, it is equally to be obeyed, being of equal obligation with the positive code. Where both are silent, then only can the question properly arise as to which law shall govern.<sup>3</sup>

2. COMITY OF NATIONS. — But it is said, that, by the universal practice of civilized countries, by what is known as "the comity"<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Huberus, lib. 1, tit. 3; De Conflictu Legum, § 38, § 2.

<sup>2</sup> Huberus, lib. 1, tit. 3, § 2.

<sup>3</sup> Wheaton says, that, "All the effect which foreign laws can have in the territory of a State depends absolutely upon the express or tacit consent of that State. A State is not obliged to allow the application of foreign laws within its territory, but may absolutely refuse to give any effect to them. It may pronounce this prohibition with regard to some of them only, and permit others to be operative, in whole or in part. If the legislation of the State is positive either way, the tribunals must necessarily conform to it. In the event the courts may as, how far to to apply their sent of a State n laws within passed by its treaties con- i tacit consent of its judicial es, as well as icists." Law-that the term expressive of give effect to not prejudicial to their own rights and interests, or those of their subjects. Some regard it not so much a matter of comity or courtesy as a matter of paramount moral duty. See Liverm. Dessert, 26-30. Story says, that, "Assuming that such a moral duty does exist, it is clearly one of imperfect obligation, like that of beneficence, humanity, and charity. Every nation must be the final judge for itself, not only of the nature and extent of the duty, but of the occasions on which its exercise may be justly demanded. And certainly there can be no pretence to say that any foreign nation has a right to require the full recognition and execution of its own laws in other territories, when those laws are deemed oppressive or injurious to the rights and interests of the inhabitants of the latter, or when their moral character is questionable, or their provisions are impolitic or unjust. See Saul v. His Creditors, 17 Martin (La.), 569, 596-599. Even in other cases it is difficult to perceive a clear foundation in morals, or in natural law, for declaring that any nation has a right (all other things being equal in sovereignty) to insist that its own positive laws shall be of superior obligation in a foreign realm to the domestic laws of the latter, of an equally positive character. What intrinsic right has one nation to declare that no contract shall be binding which is made by any of its sub-of nations," the laws of one nation or State will be recognized and executed in another, where the rights of individuals are concerned.<sup>1</sup> jects in a foreign country, unless they are twenty-five years of age, any more than another nation, where the contract is made, has a right to declare that such a contract shall be binding, if made by any person twenty-one years of age? One would suppose, that, if there be any thing clearly within the scope of national sovereignty, it is the right to fix what shall be the rule to govern contracts made within its own territories." Story, Conf. L. 29, 30.

<sup>1</sup> Minor v. Cardwell, 37 Mo. 350, 354; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519, 539.

Laws of a Foreign Country.—The laws of a foreign State, where the parties in interest are domiciled, will be respected in another jurisdiction, unless they be in conflict with the rights of its own citizens, or are in opposition to its policy. Sherwood v. Judd, 3 Brad. 419. Thus the law of a foreign country, which protects the party to a contract from execution, will, in our courts, protect him from arrest on the same contract. Camfranque v. Burnell, 1 Wash. C. C. 340.

Laws of a Sister State.—The laws of other States will be presumed to be the common law. Carpenter v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 72 Me. 388; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 340; but judicial notice will not be taken of such laws. Crane v. Dawson (Mo.), 1 West. Rep. 689.

A statute law of another State will be enforced, if not against public policy, when such law has entered into a contract. Bancher v. Gregory, 9 Mo. App. 102. Thus, under the Illinois statute, a tax title cannot be questioned by one not owning the land at the time of the tax sale; and this rule was enforced by a Missouri court in an action to recover for sand taken from land in Illinois. Cobb v. Griffith & Adams Sand, etc. Co. 12 Mo. App. 130.

It has been held that a State statute, making railroad companies liable for the value of animals killed because of a failure to fence, remains operative in territory not ceded by the State, but purchased by the United States. Chicago, etc., Ry. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 543.

And the State legislation, concerning military settlements, governs questions between towns, notwithstanding the general provisions of the U. S. Act of July 4, 1864, that recruits are to be credited to the quota of the "town, ward, district, or State in which they respectively reside." Brockton v. Uxbridge, 138 Mass. 292.

An Ohio statute makes it a misdemeanor for a citizen of that State to assign, transfer, or send out of the State for collection a claim against another citizen of the State which cannot be there collected, because of the Ohio exemption law. Where such law was set up as a defence, it was held that the principles of inter-state comity do not preclude the courts of West Virginia from awarding judgment where an attempt is made to collect such a claim by process of garnishment against a party in West Virginia owing such debtor. Stever v. Brown, 20 W. Va. 450.

Under the settled law of New York, the grantee of an equity of redemption assumes an outstanding mortgage on land, by accepting a deed containing a covenant that he shall pay it, the mortgagee may maintain an action against him; in New York, the statute of limitations applicable to simple contracts, does not apply to such an action. Yet in an action on such a New-York contract, brought in the District of Columbia, it was held that while the liability must be governed by New-York law, the court would hold that the form of the action must be assumpsit and that, therefore, the statute of limitations applicable to actions of assumpsit governed the case. Willard v. Wood Mackey (D. C.), 538.

The statutes of a foreign State cannot, in any case, have any force or effect in any other State ex proprio vigore; hence it has been held in New York that the statutory provisions of foreign assignees in bankruptcy have no recognition solely by virtue of a foreign statute. But the comity of nations allows effect to such titles when they can be recognized and enforced without prejudice to the rights of creditors pursuing their rights under the State statutes, when they are not in conflict with the public policy of the State. In re Wood, 99 N. Y. 433.

Decisions of Courts, and Construction of Statutes.—The decree of a foreign court with respect to the distribution of American assets would be void for want of jurisdiction. Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467; Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 467. The decisions of State courts in construing the statutes of their own State, should be binding upon courts of other States. American Print Works v. Lawrence, 3 Zab. (Ill.) 590. Thus, in an action against personal copartners, though assuming to be incorporated under the laws of another State, the decisions of the courts of that other State must control, in determining whether there was such an incorporation, and the extent of its powers. Bank of Kentucky v. Schuyler, 10 Ky. 104.

This comity is the purely voluntary act of the nation or State, and is totally inadmissible when the laws of the foreign State Bank, 1 Pars. 180. But if the law thus ascertained has been changed by decisions rendered since the making of the contract sued on, such later decisions will not be regarded. Jessup v. Carnegie, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 260. And the decree of a Virginia Court of Chancery, transferring property of a corporation to trustees, was recognized by Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, under doctrine of comity, in Glenn v. Dodge (D. C.), 3 Cent. Rep. 283.

A State within whose territory personal property is situated, has entire domain over it; but the decisions of its courts in that respect have no extra-territorial force. Rice v. Harbeson, 2 T. & C. (N. Y.) 4.

It has been said that, as a general rule, the courts of New York will follow the construction placed upon a statute by the courts of the State enacting it, and that, where obligations have been entered into on the faith of the decisions of such other State, a subsequent and contrary decision will not control. Jessup v. Carnegie, 80 N. Y. 441; s. c. 36 Am. Rep. 643.

The courts of Pennsylvania give effect to the construction put upon the statute of another State by its own courts. Case v. Cushman, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 544, s. c. 1 Pa. St. 241.

But one State cannot dictate to another how to construe a contract sought to be enforced within its limits. A reasonable limitation of the rule of comity is, that no community shall suffer prejudice by its comity. Lewis v. Woodfolk, 58 Tenn. (2 Bart.) 25.

The United States courts follow the decisions of the State courts in matters relating to land, etc., and the construction of the statutes of such State. Foster v. Joice, 3 Wash. C. C. 498, 500; Harrison v. Rowan, 3 Wash. C. C. 580, 582.

Corporations.—If, by the law of a State under which a corporation is organized, the corporation has a lien on the stock of any shareholder for a debt due from him to the corporation, such lien is a good defence to an action in another State against the corporation by a person to whom the shareholder has transferred the stock. Bishop v. Globe Co. 135 Mass. 132.

A New-York statute provided that the stockholders in corporations organized hereunder should be severally liable to creditors of the corporation until the whole of the capital stock should be paid in. In a suit brought under this statute in a Florida court against a stockholder, it was held that the liability rested in contract, and was not in the nature of a penalty which could only be enforced in New York, and that therefore the suit could be maintained in a Florida court; and that a decision, to the same effect, of the New-York Court of Appeals, in the construction of the statute, was entitled to great weight in determining the question at issue, and to none the less weight because of the suit having been brought in Florida. Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371.

An Oregon corporation ceased to do business, and a creditor thereupon obtained a judgment against it in Oregon, and brought an action at law in Illinois against a shareholder there to apply the amount of his unpaid subscription: the court held that the action could not be maintained. Patterson v. Lynde, 112 Ill. 196.

When an action was brought in Pennsylvania by an English subject against an English corporation, which action could not have been brought in England, because the company was in the hands of a liquidator, on motion to stay proceedings on the ground that, by comity, the court would administer the same law in Pennsylvania, it was held that, prima facie, the English statute was not intended to apply to a foreign jurisdiction, even as between English subjects. Henry v. Stuart, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 110.

In an action brought in New York to enforce the liability of certain stockholders under the Iowa Code, sect. 1166, it appeared that, after the commencement of the action, a decision had been rendered by a majority of the Supreme Court of Iowa (First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43 Iowa, 424), declaring that an omission to file articles of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State did not render the private property of the stockholders liable for the corporation debts, the company being a railroad company within the meaning of the exception in sect. 1338, the court held that the decision of the Iowa court was authoritative. Jessup v. Carnegie, 80 N. Y. 441; s. c. 36 Am. Rep. 643.

Railroads: Actions against.—In Texas a master cannot be held liable for the consequences of the negligence of a fellow-servant of plaintiff, the master's servant, but in Kansas he can. In a suit brought in Kansas against a railroad corporation by a brakeman, to recover damages for injuries caused in Texas by the negligence of the employees of the corporation, whose duty it was to give notice of a fall of gravel on the track, the judge presiding at the trial failed to make clear to the jury the distinction between the rule prevailing in Texas and that prevailing in Kansas, and a verdict was rendered for plaintiff. It was

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

- c. As to arrest on foreign contract, 577.
- d. Form of judgments and executions, 579.
- e. Defences arising from matters ex post facto, 579.
  - (1) Counter-claim, or set-off, 579.
  - (2) Discharge, 579.
  - (3) Statute of limitations, 583.
- IX. Bills and notes, 585.
  - 1. Notes, bonds, etc., 585.
    - a. Rights of original parties, 585.
    - b. Liability of parties, 585.
    - c. Interest and usury, 586.
    - d. Demand, protest, notice of dishonor and days of grace, 587.
    - e. Indorsements, 587.
    - f. Assignment, 588.
    - g. Notes executed in one State, and made payable or indorsed in another, 588.
    - h. Rights of action against maker or acceptor, 588.
      - (1) Suits by administrators and their assignees, 589.
    - i. Defences, 590.
  - 2. Bill of exchange, drafts, checks, etc., 591.
    - a. Law governing, 591.
    - b. What a foreign bill, 591.
    - c. Bills drawn in one State, and accepted, indorsed, or discounted in another, 591.
    - d. Acceptance, 592.
    - e. Transfer, 593.
    - f. Protest, and notice of dishonor, 593.
    - g. Days of grace, 593.
    - h. Action on, 594.
      - (1) Action by indorsee, 594.
    - i. Interest, 595.
    - j. Damages, 595.
    - k. Defences, 596.
  - 3. Checks, 596.
  - 4. Letters of credit, 597.
- X. Marriage and divorce, 598.
  - 1. Marriage, 598.
    - a. Governed by the lex loci, 598.
    - b. Capacity to contract marriage, 599.
    - c. Marriage of persons divorced for adultery, 599.
  - 2. Divorce, 601.
    - a. Foreign divorces, 601.
      - (1) In England, 601.
      - (2) In America, 602.
        - (a) Jurisdiction and validity, 602.
        - (b) Domicile gives jurisdiction, 605.
        - (c) Domicile of wife, 607.
        - (d) Domicile must be bona fide, 609.
        - (e) Place of commission of offence, 609.
        - (f) Domicile of parties at time of offence committed, 610.
        - (g) Place of celebration of marriage, 610.
        - (h) Defendant must be personally served, 610.
        - (i) Appearance, 611.
        - (j) Form of proceedings in, 612.

- (k) Collusion in divorce proceedings, 612.
- (l) Fraud in procuring divorce, 613.
- XI. Bankrupt and insolvent laws, 613.
  - 1. Where the parties are all subjects of the State in which the assignment is made, 613.
    - a. Assignment of real estate, 616.
    - b. Choses in action, 616.
    - c. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 616.
  - 2. Assignments which contravene law of the situs, 616.
  - 3. Conveyances under foreign bankrupt and insolvent laws, 618.
  - 4. Relation of foreign bankrupt to attaching creditors, 618.
  - 5. Collision with local lien, 620.
  - 6. Reciprocal relation of creditors, 621.
  - 7. General rules as to priorities, 621.
  - 8. Questions between local bankrupts, 621.
  - 9. Bankrupt's prior transactions, 621.
  - 10. Effect of bankruptcy upon subsequent execution, 622.
  - 11. Effect of foreign bankrupt discharge, 622.
    - a. Participation in bankrupt proceedings, 623.
    - b. Power of States to pass bankrupt laws, 623.
    - c. Foreign discharge no defence against creditor not domiciled in country granting the discharge, 623.
    - d. Contracts made and to be performed in State of discharge, 624.
    - e. Contracts made and to be performed out of State granting discharge, 624.
    - f. Discharge in one State no bar to action on a contract made in another State, 625.
    - g. Discharge in one State no bar to action in another, 625.
    - h. Discharge no bar to suit by creditor of another State in the federal courts, 625.
    - i. Where foreign discharge may be pleaded, 626.
    - j. Effect of foreign discharge on negotiable instrument indorsed to bona fide holder before maturity, 627.
    - k. Effect of foreign discharge of person from arrest, 627.
  - 12. Rights of foreign bankrupt assignee to sue, 627.
    - a. The remedy is governed by the foreign law, 627.
    - b. Assignee representative of assignor, 628.
    - c. Suit by assignee in his own name, 629.
    - d. Substitution of assignee, 629.
    - e. Suit against assignee in federal courts, 629.
  - 13. Federal bankrupt laws and discharge, 629.

XII. Wills and testaments, 630.

1. Personal capacity, 630.
  - a. Of movable property, 630.
  - b. Of immovable property, 632.
  - c. Trusts and execution of powers, 633.
2. Execution and revocation of wills, 634.
  - a. Change of domicile, 635.
  - b. Subsequent birth of a child, 635.
3. Construction of wills, 635.
  - a. As to interpretation of words, 635.
    - (1) Designatio personarum, 637.
    - b. As to the effect of particular provisions, 637.
  - c. Adjudication by domiciliary courts, 638.
4. Authentication and proof, 638.
  - a. Of personal property, 638.
  - b. Of real property, 639.

XIII. Succession and distribution, 639.

1. Succession, 639.
  - a. Movable property, 639.
  - b. Immovable property, 640.
  - c. Capacity to take, 642.
    - (1) Devises to corporations, 642.
    - (2) Devises for charitable purposes, 642.
    - (3) Capacity of aliens to inherit, 643.
2. Distribution, 643.

XIV. Persons acting in autre droit, 644.

1. Foreign administrators and executors, 644.
  - a. When may act, 644.
  - b. Title of administrators and executors, 645.

c. Suits by and against, 646.

- (1) When may maintain action, 647.
  - (a) Suit by assignee of administrator, 647.
- (2) Suit by administrator on policy on his decedent, 648.
- (3) Suits by foreign administrator for negligence causing death of his intestate, 648.
- (4) Suit against administrator, 649.
  - (a) Suit by non-resident widow for allowance, 651.
- d. Primary and ancillary administrations, 651.
- e. Course of distribution in ancillary administrations, 653.
- f. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 654.
- g. Conflict between primary and ancillary administrations, 654.
- h. Payment of debts to foreign administrator, 655.
2. Foreign guardians, 656.
  - a. How constituted, 656.
  - b. How administered, 657.
    - (1) As to person of ward, 657.
      - (a) Power over domicile of ward, 658.
    - (2) As to property of ward, 658.
      - (a) Personal property, 658.
      - (b) Immovable property, 658.
- c. Lunatics, 659.

1 Definition.—By the phrase conflict of law (conflictus legum) is meant the doctrine which treats of the proper application of the differing laws of various States or nations to matters claimed to be subject to both; and of the application of foreign laws to foreign contracts and rights where there is no law of the forum governing in the case.<sup>1</sup>

1. IN INTERNATIONAL LAW.—In international law it relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition between the municipal laws of different countries, where the subjects of one country may have acquired rights, and become subject to duties, within the jurisdiction of another country.<sup>2</sup>

2. IN INTER-STATE JURISPRUDENCE.—In inter-state jurisprudence, the phrase, conflict of laws, relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition or inconsistency of the laws of the different States of the Union, or the domestic laws of any particular State, upon the same subject.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Abb. Law Dict. 264.

<sup>2</sup> Burrill's Law Dict (2d ed.) 346; 2 Kent, Comm. 110.

<sup>3</sup> "As a term of art it also includes the decision as to which law is, in such cases, to have superiority. It also includes many cases where there is no opposition between two systems of law, but where the question is, how much force may be allowed to a foreign law with reference to which an act has been done, either directly or by legal implication, in the absence of any domestic law exclusively applicable to the case." 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (14th ed.) 320.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (4th ed.) 320. See Rorer, Inter-State Law, passim.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

- c. As to arrest on foreign contract, 577.
  - d. Form of judgments and executions, 579.
  - e. Defences arising from matters ex post facto, 579.
    - (1) Counter-claim, or set-off, 579.
    - (2) Discharge, 579.
    - (3) Statute of limitations, 583.
- IX. Bills and notes, 585.
- 1. Notes, bonds, etc., 585.
    - a. Rights of original parties, 585.
    - b. Liability of parties, 585.
    - c. Interest and usury, 586.
    - d. Demand, protest, notice of dishonor and days of grace, 587.
    - e. Indorsements, 587.
    - f. Assignment, 588.
    - g. Notes executed in one State, and made payable or indorsed in another, 588.
    - h. Rights of action against maker or acceptor, 588.
      - (1) Suits by administrators and their assignees, 589.
    - i. Defences, 590.
  - 2. Bill of exchange, drafts, checks, etc., 591.
    - a. Law governing, 591.
    - b. What a foreign bill, 591.
    - c. Bills drawn in one State, and accepted, indorsed, or discounted in another, 591.
    - d. Acceptance, 592.
    - e. Transfer, 593.
    - f. Protest, and notice of dishonor, 593.
    - g. Days of grace, 593.
    - h. Action on, 594.
      - (1) Action by indorser, 594.
    - i. Interest, 595.
    - j. Damages, 595.
    - k. Defences, 596.
  - 3. Checks, 596.
  - 4. Letters of credit, 597.
- X. Marriage and divorce, 598.
- 1. Marriage, 598.
    - a. Governed by the lex loci, 598.
    - b. Capacity to contract marriage, 599.
    - c. Marriage of persons divorced for adultery, 599.
  - 2. Divorce, 601.
    - a. Foreign divorces, 601.
      - (1) In England, 601.
      - (2) In America, 602.
        - (a) Jurisdiction and validity, 602.
        - (b) Domicile gives jurisdiction, 605.
        - (c) Domicile of wife, 607.
        - (d) Domicile must be bona fide, 609.
        - (e) Place of commission of offence, 609.
        - (f) Domicile of parties at time of offence committed, 610.
        - (g) Place of celebration of marriage, 610.
        - (h) Defendant must be personally served, 610.
        - (i) Appearance, 611.
        - (j) Form of proceedings in, 612.

- (k) Collusion in divorce proceedings, 612.
  - (l) Fraud in procuring divorce, 613.
- XI. Bankrupt and insolvent laws, 613.
- 1. Where the parties are all subjects of the State in which the assignment is made, 613.
    - a. Assignment of real estate, 616.
    - b. Choses in action, 616.
    - c. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 616.
  - 2. Assignments which contravene law of the situs, 616.
  - 3. Conveyances under foreign bankrupt and insolvent laws, 618.
  - 4. Relation of foreign bankrupt to attaching creditors, 618.
  - 5. Collision with local lien, 620.
  - 6. Reciprocal relation of creditors, 621.
  - 7. General rules as to priorities, 621.
  - 8. Questions between local bankrupts, 621.
  - 9. Bankrupt's prior transactions, 621.
  - 10. Effect of bankruptcy upon subsequent execution, 622.
  - 11. Effect of foreign bankrupt discharge, 622.
    - a. Participation in bankrupt proceedings, 623.
    - b. Power of States to pass bankrupt laws, 623.
    - c. Foreign discharge no defence against creditor not domiciled in country granting the discharge, 623.
    - d. Contracts made and to be performed in State of discharge, 624.
    - e. Contracts made and to be performed out of State granting discharge, 624.
    - f. Discharge in one State no bar to action on a contract made in another State, 625.
    - g. Discharge in one State no bar to action in another, 625.
    - h. Discharge no bar to suit by creditor of another State in the federal courts, 625.
    - i. Where foreign discharge may be pleaded, 626.
    - j. Effect of foreign discharge on negotiable instrument indorsed to bona fide holder before maturity, 627.
    - k. Effect of foreign discharge of person from arrest, 627.
  - 12. Rights of foreign bankrupt assignee to sue, 627.
    - a. The remedy is governed by the forum, 628.
    - b. Assignee representative of assignor, 628.
    - c. Suit by assignee in his own name, 629.
    - d. Substitution of assignee, 629.
    - e. Suit against assignee in federal courts, 629.
  - 13. Federal bankrupt laws and discharge, 629.

XII. Wills and testaments, 630.

1. Personal capacity, 630.
  - a. Of movable property, 630.
  - b. Of immovable property, 632.
  - c. Trusts and execution of powers, 633.
2. Execution and revocation of wills, 634.
  - a. Change of domicile, 635.
  - b. Subsequent birth of a child, 635.
3. Construction of wills, 635.
  - a. As to interpretation of words, 635.
    - (1) Designatio personarum, 637.
    - b. As to the effect of particular provisions, 637.
  - c. Adjudication by domiciliary courts, 638.
4. Authentication and proof, 638.
  - a. Of personal property, 638.
  - b. Of real property, 639.

XIII. Succession and distribution, 639.

1. Succession, 639.
  - a. Movable property, 639.
  - b. Immovable property, 640.
  - c. Capacity to take, 642.
    - (1) Devises to corporations, 642.
    - (2) Devises for charitable purposes, 642.
    - (3) Capacity of aliens to inherit, 643.
2. Distribution, 643.

XIV. Persons acting in autre droit, 644.

1. Foreign administrators and executors, 644.
  - a. When may act, 644.
  - b. Title of administrators and executors, 645.

c. Suits by and against, 646.

- (1) When may maintain action, 647.
  - (a) Suit by assignee of administrator, 647.
- (2) Suit by administrator on policy on his decedent, 648.
- (3) Suits by foreign administrator for negligence causing death of his intestate, 648.
- (4) Suit against administrator, 649.
  - (a) Suit by non-resident widow for allowance, 651.
- d. Primary and ancillary administrations, 651.
- e. Course of distribution in ancillary administrations, 653.
- f. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 654.
- g. Conflict between primary and ancillary administrations, 654.
- h. Payment of debts to foreign administrator, 655.
2. Foreign guardians, 656.
  - a. How constituted, 656.
  - b. How administered, 657.
    - (1) As to person of ward, 657.
      - (a) Power over domicile of ward, 658.
    - (2) As to property of ward, 658.
      - (a) Personal property, 658.
      - (b) Immovable property, 658.
- c. Lunatics, 659.

1. Definition.—By the phrase conflict of law (conflictus legum) is meant the doctrine which treats of the proper application of the differing laws of various States or nations to matters claimed to be subject to both; and of the application of foreign laws to foreign contracts and rights where there is no law of the forum governing in the case.<sup>1</sup>

1. IN INTERNATIONAL LAW.—In international law it relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition between the municipal laws of different countries, where the subjects of one country may have acquired rights, and become subject to duties, within the jurisdiction of another country.<sup>2</sup>

2. IN INTER-STATE JURISPRUDENCE.—In inter-state jurisprudence, the phrase, conflict of laws, relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition or inconsistency of the laws of the different States of the Union, or the domestic laws of any particular State, upon the same subject.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Abb. Law Dict. 264.

<sup>2</sup> Berrill's Law Dict (2d ed.) 346; 2 Kent, Comm. 110.

<sup>3</sup> As a term of art it also includes the decision as to which law is, in such cases, to have superiority. It also includes many cases where there is no opposition between two systems of law, but where the question is, how much force may be allowed to a foreign law with reference to which an act has been done, either directly or by legal implication, in the absence of any domestic law exclusively applicable to the case." 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (14th ed.) 320.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (4th ed.) 320. See Rorer, Inter-State Law, passim.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

- c. As to arrest on foreign contract, 577.
  - d. Form of judgments and executions, 579.
  - e. Defences arising from matters ex post facto, 579.
    - (1) Counter-claim, or set-off, 579.
    - (2) Discharge, 579.
    - (3) Statute of limitations, 583.
- IX. Bills and notes, 585.
- 1. Notes, bonds, etc., 585.
    - a. Rights of original parties, 585.
    - b. Liability of parties, 585.
    - c. Interest and usury, 586.
    - d. Demand, protest, notice of dishonor and days of grace, 587.
    - e. Indorsements, 587.
    - f. Assignment, 588.
    - g. Notes executed in one State, and made payable or indorsed in another, 588.
    - h. Rights of action against maker or acceptor, 588.
      - (1) Suits by administrators and their assignees, 589.
    - i. Defences, 590.
  - 2. Bill of exchange, drafts, checks, etc., 591.
    - a. Law governing, 591.
    - b. What a foreign bill, 591.
    - c. Bills drawn in one State, and accepted, indorsed, or discounted in another, 591.
    - d. Acceptance, 592.
    - e. Transfer, 593.
    - f. Protest, and notice of dishonor, 593.
    - g. Days of grace, 593.
    - h. Action on, 594.
      - (1) Action by indorsee, 594.
    - i. Interest, 595.
    - j. Damages, 595.
    - k. Defences, 596.
  - 3. Checks, 596.
  - 4. Letters of credit, 597.
- X. Marriage and divorce, 598.
- 1. Marriage, 598.
    - a. Governed by the lex loci, 598.
    - b. Capacity to contract marriage, 599.
    - c. Marriage of persons divorced for adultery, 599.
  - 2. Divorce, 601.
    - a. Foreign divorces, 601.
      - (1) In England, 601.
      - (2) In America, 602.
        - (a) Jurisdiction and validity, 602.
        - (b) Domicile gives jurisdiction, 605.
        - (c) Domicile of wife, 607.
        - (d) Domicile must be bona fide, 609.
        - (e) Place of commission of offence, 609.
        - (f) Domicile of parties at time of offence committed, 610.
        - (g) Place of celebration of marriage, 610.
        - (h) Defendant must be personally served, 610.
        - (i) Appearance, 611.
        - (j) Form of proceedings in, 612.
    - (k) Collusion in divorce proceedings, 612.
    - (l) Fraud in procuring divorce, 613.
- XI. Bankrupt and insolvent laws, 613.
- 1. Where the parties are all subjects of the State in which the assignment is made, 613.
    - a. Assignment of real estate, 616.
    - b. Choses in action, 616.
    - c. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 616.
  - 2. Assignments which contravene the law of the situs, 616.
  - 3. Conveyances under foreign bankrupt and insolvent laws, 618.
  - 4. Relation of foreign bankrupt to attaching creditors, 618.
  - 5. Collision with local lien, 620.
  - 6. Reciprocal relation of creditors, 621.
  - 7. General rules as to priorities, 621.
  - 8. Questions between local bankruptcies, 621.
  - 9. Bankrupt's prior transactions, 621.
  - 10. Effect of bankruptcy upon subsequent execution, 622.
  - 11. Effect of foreign bankrupt discharge, 622.
    - a. Participation in bankrupt proceedings, 623.
    - b. Power of States to pass bankrupt laws, 623.
    - c. Foreign discharge no defence against creditor not domiciled in country granting the discharge, 623.
    - d. Contracts made and to be performed in State of discharge, 624.
    - e. Contracts made and to be performed out of State granting discharge, 624.
    - f. Discharge in one State no bar to action on a contract made in another State, 625.
    - g. Discharge in one State no bar to action in another, 625.
    - h. Discharge no bar to suit by creditor of another State in the federal courts, 625.
    - i. Where foreign discharge may be pleaded, 626.
    - j. Effect of foreign discharge on negotiable instrument indorsed to bona fide holder before maturity, 627.
    - k. Effect of foreign discharge of person from arrest, 627.
  - 12. Rights of foreign bankrupt assignee to sue, 627.
    - a. The remedy is governed by the forum, 628.
    - b. Assignee representative of assignor, 628.
    - c. Suit by assignee in his own name, 629.
    - d. Substitution of assignee, 629.
    - e. Suit against assignee in federal courts, 629.
  - 13. Federal bankrupt laws and discharge, 629.

XII. Wills and testaments, 630.

1. Personal capacity, 630.
  - a. Of movable property, 630.
  - b. Of immovable property, 632.
  - c. Trusts and execution of powers, 633.
2. Execution and revocation of wills, 634.
  - a. Change of domicile, 635.
  - b. Subsequent birth of a child, 635.
3. Construction of wills, 635.
  - a. As to interpretation of words, 635.
    - (1) Designatio personarum, 637.
  - b. As to the effect of particular provisions, 637.
  - c. Adjudication by domiciliary courts, 638.
4. Authentication and proof, 638.
  - a. Of personal property, 638.
  - b. Of real property, 639.

XIII. Succession and distribution, 639.

1. Succession, 639.
  - a. Movable property, 639.
  - b. Immovable property, 640.
  - c. Capacity to take, 642.
    - (1) Devises to corporations, 642.
    - (2) Devises for charitable purposes, 642.
    - (3) Capacity of aliens to inherit, 643.
2. Distribution, 643.

XIV. Persons acting in autre droit, 644.

1. Foreign administrators and executors, 644.
  - a. When may act, 644.
  - b. Title of administrators and executors, 645.

c. Suits by and against, 646.

- (1) When may maintain action, 647.
  - (a) Suit by assignee of administrator, 647.
- (2) Suit by administrator on policy on his decedent, 648.
- (3) Suits by foreign administrator for negligence causing death of his intestate, 648.
- (4) Suit against administrator, 649.
  - (a) Suit by non-resident widow for allowance, 651.
- d. Primary and ancillary administrations, 651.
- e. Course of distribution in ancillary administrations, 653.
- f. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 654.
- g. Conflict between primary and ancillary administrations, 654.
- h. Payment of debts to foreign administrator, 655.
2. Foreign guardians, 656.
  - a. How constituted, 656.
  - b. How administered, 657.
    - (1) As to person of ward, 657.
      - (a) Power over domicile of ward, 658.
    - (2) As to property of ward, 658.
      - (a) Personal property, 658.
      - (b) Immovable property, 658.
- c. Lunatics, 659.

1. Definition.—By the phrase conflict of law (conflictus legum) is meant the doctrine which treats of the proper application of the differing laws of various States or nations to matters claimed to be subject to both; and of the application of foreign laws to foreign contracts and rights where there is no law of the forum governing in the case.<sup>1</sup>

1. IN INTERNATIONAL LAW.—In international law it relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition between the municipal laws of different countries, where the subjects of one country may have acquired rights, and become subject to duties, within the jurisdiction of another country.<sup>2</sup>

2. IN INTER-STATE JURISPRUDENCE.—In inter-state jurisprudence, the phrase, conflict of laws, relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition or inconsistency of the laws of the different States of the Union, or the domestic laws of any particular State, upon the same subject.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Abb. Law Dict. 264.

<sup>2</sup> Burrill's Law Dict. (2d ed.) 346; 2 Kent, Comm. 110.

<sup>3</sup> As a term of art it also includes the decision as to which law is, in such cases, to have superiority. It also includes many cases where there is no opposition between two systems of law, but where the question is, how much force may be allowed to a foreign law with reference to which an act has been done, either directly or by legal implication, in the absence of any domestic law exclusively applicable to the case." 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (14th ed.) 320.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (4th ed.) 320. See Rorer, Inter-State Law, passim.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

- c. As to arrest on foreign contract, 577.
- d. Form of judgments and executions, 579.
- e. Defences arising from matters ex post facto, 579.
  - (1) Counter-claim, or set-off, 579.
  - (2) Discharge, 579.
  - (3) Statute of limitations, 583.
- IX. Bills and notes, 585.
  - 1. Notes, bonds, etc., 585.
    - a. Rights of original parties, 585.
    - b. Liability of parties, 585.
    - c. Interest and usury, 586.
    - d. Demand, protest, notice of dishonor and days of grace, 587.
    - e. Indorsements, 587.
    - f. Assignment, 588.
    - g. Notes executed in one State, and made payable or indorsed in another, 588.
    - h. Rights of action against maker or acceptor, 588.
      - (1) Suits by administrators and their assignees, 589.
    - i. Defences, 590.
  - 2. Bill of exchange, drafts, checks, etc., 591.
    - a. Law governing, 591.
    - b. What a foreign bill, 591.
    - c. Bills drawn in one State, and accepted, indorsed, or discounted in another, 591.
    - d. Acceptance, 592.
    - e. Transfer, 593.
    - f. Protest, and notice of dishonor, 593.
    - g. Days of grace, 593.
    - h. Action on, 594.
      - (1) Action by indorsee, 594.
    - i. Interest, 595.
    - j. Damages, 595.
    - k. Defences, 596.
  - 3. Checks, 596.
  - 4. Letters of credit, 597.
- X. Marriage and divorce, 598.
  - 1. Marriage, 598.
    - a. Governed by the lex loci, 598.
    - b. Capacity to contract marriage, 599.
    - c. Marriage of persons divorced for adultery, 599.
  - 2. Divorce, 601.
    - a. Foreign divorces, 601.
      - (1) In England, 601.
      - (2) In America, 602.
        - (a) Jurisdiction and validity, 602.
        - (b) Domicile gives jurisdiction, 603.
        - (c) Domicile of wife, 607.
        - (d) Domicile must be bona fide, 609.
        - (e) Place of commission of offence, 609.
        - (f) Domicile of parties at time of offence committed, 610.
        - (g) Place of celebration of marriage, 610.
        - (h) Defendant must be personally served, 610.
        - (i) Appearance, 611.
        - (j) Form of proceedings in, 612.
    - (k) Collusion in divorce proceedings, 612.
    - (l) Fraud in procuring divorce, 613.
- XI. Bankrupt and insolvent laws, 613.
  - 1. Where the parties are all subjects of the State in which the assignment is made, 613.
    - a. Assignment of real estate, 616.
    - b. Choices in action, 616.
    - c. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 616.
  - 2. Assignments which contravene law of the situs, 616.
  - 3. Conveyances under foreign bankrupt and insolvent laws, 618.
  - 4. Relation of foreign bankrupt to attaching creditors, 618.
  - 5. Collision with local lien, 620.
  - 6. Reciprocal relation of creditors, 621.
  - 7. General rules as to priorities, 621.
  - 8. Questions between local bankrupts, 621.
  - 9. Bankrupt's prior transactions, 621.
  - 10. Effect of bankruptcy upon subsequent execution, 622.
  - 11. Effect of foreign bankrupt discharge, 622.
    - a. Participation in bankrupt proceedings, 623.
    - b. Power of States to pass bankrupt laws, 623.
    - c. Foreign discharge no defence against creditor not domiciled in country granting the discharge, 623.
    - d. Contracts made and to be performed in State of discharge, 624.
    - e. Contracts made and to be performed out of State granting discharge, 624.
    - f. Discharge in one State no bar to action on a contract made in another State, 625.
    - g. Discharge in one State no bar to action in another, 625.
    - h. Discharge no bar to suit by creditor of another State in the federal courts, 625.
    - i. Where foreign discharge may be pleaded, 626.
    - j. Effect of foreign discharge on indorsed to bona fide holder before maturity, 627.
    - k. Effect of foreign discharge of person from arrest, 627.
  - 12. Rights of foreign bankrupt assignee to sue, 627.
    - a. The remedy is governed by the foreign law, 628.
    - b. Assignee representative of assignor, 628.
    - c. Suit by assignee in his own name, 629.
    - d. Substitution of assignee, 629.
    - e. Suit against assignee in federal courts, 629.
  - 13. Federal bankrupt laws and discharge, 629.

XII. Wills and testaments, 630.

1. Personal capacity, 630.
  - a. Of movable property, 630.
  - b. Of immovable property, 632.
- c. Trusts and execution of powers, 633.
2. Execution and revocation of wills, 634.
  - a. Change of domicile, 635.
  - b. Subsequent birth of a child, 635.
3. Construction of wills, 635.
  - a. As to interpretation of words, 635.
    - (1) Designatio personarum, 637.
  - b. As to the effect of particular provisions, 637.
- c. Adjudication by domiciliary courts, 638.
4. Authentication and proof, 638.
  - a. Of personal property, 638.
  - b. Of real property, 639.

XIII. Succession and distribution, 639.

1. Succession, 639.
  - a. Movable property, 639.
  - b. Immovable property, 640.
  - c. Capacity to take, 642.
    - (1) Devises to corporations, 642.
    - (2) Devises for charitable purposes, 642.
    - (3) Capacity of aliens to inherit, 643.
2. Distribution, 643.

XIV. Persons acting in autre droit, 644.

1. Foreign administrators and executors, 644.
  - a. When may act, 644.
  - b. Title of administrators and executors, 645.

c. Suits by and against, 646.

- (1) When may maintain action, 647.
  - (a) Suit by assignee of administrator, 647.
- (2) Suit by administrator on policy on his decedent, 648.
- (3) Suits by foreign administrator for negligence causing death of his intestate, 648.
- (4) Suit against administrator, 649.
  - (a) Suit by non-resident widow for allowance, 651.
- d. Primary and ancillary administrations, 651.
- e. Course of distribution in ancillary administrations, 653.
- f. Property in transitu and ships at sea, 654.
- g. Conflict between primary and ancillary administrations, 654.
- h. Payment of debts to foreign administrator, 655.
2. Foreign guardians, 656.
  - a. How constituted, 656.
  - b. How administered, 657.
    - (1) As to person of ward, 657.
      - (a) Power over domicile of ward, 658.
    - (2) As to property of ward, 658.
      - (a) Personal property, 658.
      - (b) Immovable property, 658.
- c. Lunatics, 659.

1. Definition.—By the phrase conflict of law (conflictus legum) is meant the doctrine which treats of the proper application of the differing laws of various States or nations to matters claimed to be subject to both; and of the application of foreign laws to foreign contracts and rights where there is no law of the forum governing in the case.<sup>1</sup>

1. IN INTERNATIONAL LAW.—In international law it relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition between the municipal laws of different countries, where the subjects of one country may have acquired rights, and become subject to duties, within the jurisdiction of another country.<sup>2</sup>

2. IN INTER-STATE JURISPRUDENCE.—In inter-state jurisprudence, the phrase, conflict of laws, relates to the doctrine which treats of the opposition or inconsistency of the laws of the different States of the Union, or the domestic laws of any particular State, upon the same subject.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Abb. Law Dict. 264.

<sup>2</sup> Burrill's Law Dict. (2d ed.) 346; 2 Kent, Comm. 110.

<sup>3</sup> As a term of art it also includes the decision as to which law is, in such cases, to have superiority. It also includes many cases where there is no opposition between two systems of law, but where the question is, how much force may be allowed to a foreign law with reference to which an act has been done, either directly or by legal implication, in the absence of any domestic law exclusively applicable to the case." 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. (14th ed.) 320. See Rorer, Inter-State Law, passim.

There are certain cases where the municipal laws of a nation or State, both civil and criminal, operate beyond its territorial jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup>

2. LAWS RELATING TO THE STATE AND CAPACITY OF PERSONS.—It has been said that the sovereign power of municipal legislation extends to the regulation of the personal rights of the citizens of the State, and to every thing affecting their civil status and condition; that it extends to the supreme police over all persons within the territory, whether citizens or not, and to all criminal offences committed by them within the same.<sup>2</sup>

Personal capacity, as the term is generally used, contains two very distinct elements; to wit, (1) a capacity for rights; and (2) a capacity for business, which are subject to very different considerations. Laws extinguishing the capacity for rights affect the status, but have no extra-territorial force. With regard to capacity for business, there is a subordinate distinction: special incapacities have no extra-territorial force; but general incapacities based on condition of tutelage, have.<sup>3</sup> as the royal power and protection of the King et à comesso," that the maxim was, protectio trahit subjectionem et subjectio protectionem; and that "power and protection draweth legiance, and it followeth that seeing the King's power, command, and protection extendeth out of England, that legiance cannot be local or confined within the bounds thereof," and held it to be due at all times and in all countries. See 1 Broom, Com. 445; Fosters, C. L. 183. The same principle was applied in the case of Aeneas Macdonald, Foster, Cr. Cas. 59; s. c., 18 State Trials, 858, who was tried for high treason in the King's Bench, for having borne arms in the rebellion of 1745. It was held in Fitch v. Weber, 6 Hare, 63, decided in 1847, that a British subject could not by his own act throw off his allegiance to his native country. This doctrine was re-affirmed in England as recently as 1867. See Cockb. Nat. 50. See also Clark's Col. Law, 4 et seq.; Leith's Black (2d ed.), 33; Campbell v. Hall, Cowp. 204; The Mayor of Lyons v. The East India Co. 1 Moore, P. C. 175; Le Noir v. Ritchie, 3 L. C. R. 575; Donegani v. Donegani, 3 Knapp, P. C. C. 85; Anderson v. Todd, 2 U. C. (Q. B.) R. 82; Hay v. Hunt, 11 U. C. (Q. B.) R. 381; Reg. v. McMahon, 26 U. C. (Q. B.) R. 195; Reg. v. Lynch, 26 U. C. (Q. B.) R. 208.

The Doctrine in the United States.—The doctrine of perpetual allegiance was recognized in the United States as well as in Europe until recently. Kent says, "In the United States the inclination has been to follow the rule of the English common law, and to hold that neither a native nor a naturalized citizen can throw off his allegiance without consent of the State." 2 Kent, Com.

49. See Story, Const. 3, n. 1; Wheaton v. State Trials, 654; 8 Ops. Atty.-Gen. 157; 9 Ops. Atty.-Gen. (U. S.) 356; Gillies, 1 Pet. C. C. 159; Talbot v. Talbot, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 154; Shanks v. Duane, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 242; The Santissima Trinidad, 1 Brock. C. C. 478.

By an act of Congress passed in 1868, the right of expatriation is declared to be a natural and inherent right of every people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Since that time treaties of naturalization have been concluded with England and the leading nations of the world, which do away altogether with the doctrine of "inalienable allegiance."

The State courts have ever manifested a greater disposition to concede the right of expatriation than has been manifested by the Federal tribunals. 8 Ops. Atty.-Gen. (U. S.) 157; Lawrence's Wheaton v. Lawrence, 10 U. S. 250. And the legislature of Virginia authorized the treaty action of Congress, authorizing the President to announce this important principle. In 1792 the legislature of the State of New York passed a law expressly authorizing expatriation, providing that, "Whenever any person of this Commonwealth shall . . . that he relinquishes the character of citizen, and shall depart out of this Commonwealth, . . . he shall be considered as having exercised the right of expatriation, and shall thenceforth be deemed no longer a citizen of this State." See Howell on Naturalization, 34; States v. Gillies, 1 Pet. C. C. 159.

<sup>1</sup> Lawrence's Wheaton, 171.

<sup>2</sup> Lawrence's Wheaton, 171; Hunt v. Hunt, tom. ii. lib. i. tit. 3, de Conf. Legu.

<sup>3</sup> Barr, Pri. Intern. L. IV. p. 250. application of the lex loci actus is

It is a general rule, that those laws of a State which are applicable to the civil condition and personal capacity of its citizens attach to them wherever they may go, travel with them into foreign countries, and there operate upon and bind them.<sup>1</sup>

There are those universal personal qualities which affect either (1) from birth, such as citizenship, legitimacy, or illegitimacy; (2) at a fixed time after birth, as minority and majority; and (3) at an intermediate time after birth, as idiocy, lunacy, bankruptcy, marriage, divorce.

This general rule is subject to exceptions.

a. Rights of Expatriation and Naturalisation.—Every subject of a country has a right to change his allegiance; and conversely, every independent sovereignty has the right to naturalize foreigners, and confer upon them the privileges and protection of their acquired domicile.<sup>2</sup>

b. Rights to regulate Property.—Another exception to the general rule laid down is the right of every sovereign State to regulate the property within its own territory.<sup>3</sup>

c. Lex Loci Contractus.—And the general rule yields in some instances to the lex loci contractus.<sup>4</sup> cally preferable to that of the lex domicilii, when the question relates, not to business capacity, in its general sense, but to what are called the special business capacities. The application of the law of domicile to the latter would impose an intolerable burden. It would require that the inhabitants of every land, when entering into a contract, should observe the formalities required by the domicile of any foreigners who may be parties,—formalities which may not only be extraordinary, but, to those unused to them, absurd. It would require the maintenance of special rules for special classes of foreigners,—classes of which at home there is no conception, because at home they do not exist. It is otherwise with business capacity, in the sense in which that term is used. The law on this topic, because it rests on the natural properties of the persons concerned, exists in one or another form, in every land. A person of this class, when travelling in a foreign land, notifies, by his very condition, the inhabitants of such foreign land, that at home he labors under disabilities. In addition to this, persons of this class, from the very fact that they have no power over their estate, have no means to carry on permanent business abroad. A prudent man of business will not be readily induced to engage with them in important undertakings. And he who gives credit to unknown persons deserves no greater legal protection in those cases where his money is lost through the want of the capacity of the parties whom he trusts, than in those cases where it is lost through their insolvency." Whart., Conf. L. § 98.

<sup>1</sup> Lawrence's Wheaton, 172; Huberus, tom. ii. lib. i. tit. 3, de Conflict. Leg. § 12; Foelix, Droit Inter. Privé, liv. i. tit. 1, § 31.

<sup>2</sup> See 2 Kent Com. 49; Woolsey, Introd. § 66; Westlake, Priv. Intern. L.; 1 Phillimore, Intern. L. 1, 350-354; Twiss, Law of Nations, ch. 9; 1 Foelix, Droit Intern. Privé, 80-100; 2 Foelix, Revue Française et Etrangère, 328; Marten's Nouv. Recueil, ii.; De Beudant, de la Naturalisation; Heffter, Europ. Völkerr. liv. i. ch. 1, § 4.

<sup>3</sup> The personal capacity to contract marriage, for instance, as to age, consent of parents or guardians, and the like, is regulated by the law of the State of which the party is a citizen; but the effect of such marriage upon real property in another State is to be determined by the lex loci rei sitæ. Lawrence's Wheaton, 174, 175.

<sup>4</sup> Thus the insolvent laws of one State do not have any force beyond the territorial limits of that State. Woodhull v. Wagner, Baldw. C. C. 296; Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 289; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Hale v. Baldwin, 1 Cliff. C. C. 511; s. c., 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Ex parte Eames, 2 Story, 322; Davidson v. Smith, 9 Am. L. R. 217; s. c., 2 West. L. Mo. 566, Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McL. C. C. 397; except such as is given them by comity. Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295; Davidson v. Smith, 1 Biss. C. C. 346; s. c., 9 Am. L. Reg. 217.

"A bankrupt's certificate, under the laws

3. MUNICIPAL LAWS. — The municipal laws of a State operate beyond its territorial jurisdiction, when a contract within such State's territory comes in question, either directly or incidentally, in the judicial tribunals of another State or nation.

1. Exceptions. — This rule does not apply (1) where the subject-matter is properly governed by the lex loci rei sitæ, or the law of another State relating to the personal status and capacity of its citizens; (2) where it would injuriously conflict with the law of another State relating to the police, public health, commerce, or the general sovereign authority of such other State and the rights and interests of its citizens; (3) where from the nature of the contract itself, or the law of the place where it is made, or the expressed intention of the parties, the contract is to be executed in another country; then every thing which concerns its execution is to be determined by the laws of the country where it is performed; (4) the lex loci contractus cannot apply in cases where the lex fori properly governs. Thus where the contract is brought in question in the judicial tribunals of another State, the lex loci governs.<sup>4</sup>

4. SUPREMACY OF DOMICILE. — With regard to personal property, the law of the domicile of its owner prevails over the law of his own country, cannot operate in another State to discharge him from his debts contracted with foreigners in a foreign country. And though the personal capacity to enter into the nuptial contract as to age, consent of parents, and prohibited degree of affinity, etc., is generally to be governed by the law of the State in which a party is a subject, the marriage ceremony is always regulated by the law of the place where it is celebrated; and, if valid there, it is considered as valid everywhere else, unless in fraud of the laws of the country of which the parties are domiciled subjects." Lawrence's Wheaton, 178.

1 Lawrence's Wheaton, 179.

2 Lawrence's Wheaton, 179.

Where goods sold in a place where such sale is not prohibited, to be delivered in a place where such sale is prohibited, the price cannot be recovered in the State where the goods are to be delivered, because to enforce such a contract would be to sanction a breach of its own commercial laws. Lawrence's Wheaton, 179. Vide infra, § 4, a.

The tribunals of one country will not take notice of or enforce, either directly or indirectly, the laws of trade or revenue of another State; and contracts made in violation of such laws of one State may be enforced in the tribunals of any other State than that where they are prohibited, such as the insurance of a prohibited trade. Lawrence's Wheaton, 180; Story, Conf. L. § 257; Westlake, Pri. Inter. L. § 199;

3 Kent, Com. 266-268; Marshall, 59-61; Chitty, Com. 83; Park on Ins. ed.) 341; Pardessus, Droit Com. pt. VI. tit. 7, ch. 2, § 3; Emérigon d'Assurance, tom. i. 212-215.

But this principle is severely corrected by modern jurists. See Story, Conf. L. § 257; Westlake, Pri. Inter. L. § 199; Heffter, Droit Intern. pub. par Bergström, § 83; Pand. de Droit Intern. 144.

3 It is said that what relates to the validity and interpretation of a contract, the usage of nations, is to be determined by the lex loci contractus where it is executed in one place, and to be performed in another; and that which relates to the execution is to be governed by the law of the place where it is to be carried into effect. Story, Conf. L. §§ 242, 260, 263-265, 280-283, 309, 314; Lawrence's Wheaton, 179; Fœlix, Droit Inter. Privé, § 7.

4 Where a contract made in one country is sought to be enforced, or comes incidentally in question, in the judicial tribunals of another, every thing relating to the mode of proceeding, the rules of evidence, and the limitations, is to be determined by the law of the State where the suit is pending, not that of the State where the contract was made. Don v. Lippmann, 5 C. Fin. 1; 2 Kent, Com. 459; Story, Conf. L. §§ 557-576; Woolsey's Introd. § 73; Droit Int. Privé, § 76; Savigny, 27 Boullenois, obs. 33, 46; Rodenburg, stat. tit. 2.

country where such property is situated, as regards the rule of inheritance, — mobilia ossibus inhærent personam sequuntur; <sup>1</sup> and where an instrument relating to or affecting personal property is executed by a party domiciled in a different country from that in which the property is situated, the laws of that domicile govern as to the form and interpretation and effect of that instrument. <sup>2</sup>

An act valid when done by a person in his own country, is to be regarded as valid in foreign countries, even though in such foreign countries he is treated as incapable of performing such act. <sup>3</sup>

§. STATUTES DESTROYING CAPACITY. — To statutes which destroy capacity, no extra-territorial force is to be allowed; and the subject of a State in which such statutes obtain is relieved from <sup>1</sup> Lawrence's Wheaton, 168, 169; Henry's Foreign Law, Appx. 169; Huberus, Praelect. tom. ii. lib. i. tit. 3, de Confl. Legu. §§ 14, 15; Fœlix, Droit Intern. Privé, § 37; Merlin, Répertoire, tit. Loi, § 6, No. 3; Bynkershoek, Quaest. Jur. Pub. lib. i. cap. 16.

This rule was once doubted in England, — see Curling v. Thornton, 2 Addams, Eccl. Rep. 17, — but it is now settled that the foreign domicile of a British subject is to govern in respect to his testamentary disposition of personal property, the same as it does in the case of a mere foreigner. Stanley v. Bernes, 3 Hagg. Eccl. Rep. 393-465; Moore v. Darell, 4 Hagg. Eccl. Rep. 346, 354.

<sup>2</sup> See Trotter v. Trotter, 3 Wils. & S. 407-414; 2 C., 4 Bligh, N. R. 502.

It is said in the case of Polydore v. Prince, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 413, that no nation ever gave the maxim of the ubiquity of domiciliary statutes effect in its practical jurisprudence, in its whole extent; that "among these personal statutes, for which this ubiquity is claimed, are those which formerly, over the whole of Europe, and still over a large part of it, divided the people into different castes, as nobles and plebeians, priests and laity. The favored classes were entitled to many privileges and immunities, particularly beneficial and honorable to themselves. It cannot be supposed that these immunities would be entry which admitted of no such disabilities in its domestic policy. In disqualifications and incapacities persons may be affected by the laws and institutions of their own country, and not be recognized against them in countries by whose laws no such disqualifications are acknowledged." And in applying these principles the court held that a person who, by the laws of Guadeloupe, could not bring suit upon an account for servitude, labored under no such incapacity in Boston. See Whart., Conf. L. § 5-10.

The doctrine that the status of foreigners is determined by the law of their domicile, has been at least nominally accepted by the majority of publicists. Lawrence's Wheaton, 168; Eichhorn, § 35; Heffter, i. § 38; Schäffner, § 33; Savigny, VIII. 134; Boullenois, i. 48; Wächter, ii. 172; Huber, de Conflict. lib. i. tit. 3; Boubier, ch. 24, Nos. 1, 9; Mittermaier, § 31; Rodenburg, i. 3, §§ 4-6; Merlin, Rép. Testament, lect. 1, § 5, art. i.

Wharton says that "under the general rule, that domicile is the parent of status, lie masked the most contradictory conclusions. By some it is held that where a statute of domicile confers, abridges, or destroys capacity, whether this capacity be generally for the possession of rights, or specially for the exercise of business, then such statute attaches to the subject wherever he may stay, and is to be regarded as conclusive by all foreign courts." Whart., Conf. L. § 91.

Story declares that "the truth seems to be that there are, properly speaking, no universal rules by which nations are, or ought to be, morally or politically, bound to each other on this subject. Each nation may well adopt for itself such modifications of the general doctrine as it deems most convenient and most in harmony with its own institutions and interests and policy." Story, Conf. L. § 102.

<sup>3</sup> Thus, if a person in his own country has arrived at his majority, his acts will be regarded as valid in another country, although in that other country he would yet be a minor. See Polydore v. Prince, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 413; Males v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163; Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 189; Boullenois, 6; Barr, Private Int. L. § 45.

the disabilities so imposed, when he touches the soil of a foreign State.<sup>1</sup> a. Disabilities of Slaves.—When a slave goes into a country where slavery is not recognized, he becomes free.<sup>2</sup> If he acquires a domicile in such free country, on returning to his former country he cannot be resubjected to slavery by his former master;<sup>3</sup> if he fails to acquire a domicile on his return, he can be subjected to servitude by his former master.<sup>4</sup>

b. Disabilities of Civil Death.—Statutes respecting civil death will not be given extra-territorial force.<sup>5</sup>

c. Disabilities of Infamy and Attainder.—Disabilities produced by attainder and infamy have no extra-territorial force.<sup>6</sup> How-

<sup>1</sup> Among the statutes which destroy capacity are those establishing serfdom and slavery, those which decree to individuals civil death (whether as a penalty for crime, or as a consequence of entrance into ecclesiastical orders), and those which prohibit certain persons, who are of full age and free from tutelage, from exercising specific business rights and the like. Whart., Conf. L. §§ 101-105.

<sup>2</sup> Polydore v. Prince, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 413; Commonwealth v. Aves, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 198; Commonwealth v. Holloway, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 213; Butler v. Delaplaine, 7 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 378; Butler v. Hopper, 1 Wash. C. C. 499; The Slave Grace, 2 Hagg. Adm. 94; The Amedie, 1 Dodson, 84 Note; Forbes v. Cochrane, 2 Barn. & C. 448; Sommersett's case; 11 Hargrave, St. Tr. 340; s. c., 20 How. St. Tr. 1; Story, Conf. L. 96; Savigny, 37, 46; 2 Wächter, 172; J. Voet, Comment In. Dig. 1, § 3; 3 Puffendorf, de Jure Nat. c. §§ 1, 2; 2 Grotius, de J. B. ch. 22, sect. 11.

<sup>3</sup> Bar, Private Int. L. § 47; Story, Conf. L. § 96.

<sup>4</sup> Haynes v. Forno, 8 La. Ann. 35; Hunter v. Fulcher, 1 Leigh (Va.), 172; Hinds v. Brazeale, 2 How. (Miss.) 841; The Slave Grace, 2 Hagg. Adm. 94; Story, Conf. L. § 96.

Wharton says, "It has been largely discussed whether a slave who has acquired freedom lapses again into slavery on returning to the land where he was formerly in slavery. It is certainly clear that, when a slave has acquired a domicile in a free state, an attempt by his former sovereign to reduce him again into slavery, should he return to such sovereign's territory, would be a violation of international law. On the other hand, the doctrine seems to be, that when a person who is under disabilities or servitude in his domicile, and who, after leaving such domicile, and was journeying in a free country without acquiring a domicile in such latter country, voluntarily returns to such original domicile, then such disabilities or servitude survive." Whart., Conf. L. § 105.

<sup>5</sup> 1 Bl. com. 132; 3 Id. 101; 4 Id. 319; Story, Conf. L. § 92; 4 P. Voet, Stat. 3, § 19; Mittermaier, § 30, n. 1; Wächter, ii. 184.

It has been questioned whether an ecclesiastic, who has made a vow of poverty, which vow the law of his domicile regards as binding and operative, is incapable of inheritance in a foreign land. English and German jurists hold that, when this vow is voluntary, the incapacity is extra-territorial. Savigny, 161 n. 2; Bar, Private Int. L. § 48. But while the courts of his domicile might enjoin him from accepting inheritance, his incapacity in this respect would not be recognized in countries where this form of civil death is not sanctioned. Whart., Conf. L. § 106.

<sup>6</sup> Whart., Conf. L. § 107.

The old jurists (see 3 Burgundus, Bouhier, ch. 24, No. 134; 2 Boullenois, as well as the Continental writers of the present day (see Mittermaier, § 30; Einleitung, § 78; Bar, Priv. Int. L. § 48) accept the doctrine of the international recognition of such disqualifications; the latter add the qualifications that the doctrine will be applied by the domestic tribunals, before whom such a question arises, only where it would apply a similar qualification, in similar cases, to its own subjects. But in England and the United States such disabilities have never been recognized or enforced. Whart., Conf. L. §§ 107, 108.

Judge Story says that an American court would regard such disabilities as purely local, and incapable of being enforced in this country. "Even the conviction of a crime in a foreign country, which renders the party infamous there, and incapable of being a witness in their own courts, has been held not to produce a like effect in this country. The capacity or incapacity of any person to do acts in their own country will, under such circumstances, be judged it has been held that the conviction of an infamous crime in a foreign country may be proved by the foreign record; but the question whether the infamy was such as to incapacitate him, is a question to be decided by the lex fori.<sup>1</sup>

d. Disabilities of Creed and Caste.—Distinctions arising from caste or creed have no extra-territorial force, either in England or United States;<sup>2</sup> and on the continent of Europe the same rule is universally applied to incapacities on account of creed,<sup>3</sup> though the distinctions as to class are still retained.<sup>4</sup>

e. Disabilities of Infants.—The laws protecting infancy are accorded extra-territorial force, and an infant is entitled to the protection in a foreign land of his domiciliary law.<sup>5</sup> their own laws, but not their capacity or incapacity to do like acts in any foreign territory where different laws prevail." Story, Conf. L. § 92.

<sup>1</sup> Kirshner v. State, 9 Wis. 140.

<sup>2</sup> Story, Conf. L. §§ 91, 92, 93; Whart., Conf. L. §§ 5-9, 98-103.

<sup>3</sup> Bar, Priv. Int. L. § 50; Savigny, 36, 160.

<sup>4</sup> Whart., Conf. L. § 109; Thöl. § 78; J. Voet, 1, 5, § 3; 2 Duplessis, 456; 1 Boullenois, 67; Bouhier, ch. 24, No. 134.

<sup>5</sup> Whart., in Conf. L. § 112, says, "Two reasons combine to require this: (1) because as a child an infant is a ward of Christendom; that on his face he shows this, and makes this claim; (2) because he is a traveller. If he is with his guardians it is a gross infraction of natural law to deal with him without their privity and consent. If separated from them, the proper office of humanity is to return him to their care, or, at all events, to obtain for him a protection of a proper local court. His age is notice to all parties that the country of his domicile will only hold him or his estate responsible so far as its own laws permit; and, as he is to return to that country, to its laws the question of his responsibility is to be remanded. Hence it is that many eminent jurists have agreed, for various reasons, in holding that the status of infants is to be determined by the law of their domicile. Molinæus in L. i. e. de S. Trin.; Huber, § 12; 2 Rodenburg, 1, §§ 1, 2; Bouhier, ch. 25, No. 1; 1 Boullenois, 53, 54; Merlin, Rep. Majorité, § 5; 1 Wheaton, 111; Thöl. §§ 81, 87; Schäffner, 47, 48; Savigny, 134, 135; 1 Föelix, No. 33; 2 Masse, 84; Story, Conf. L. § 46. Indeed, in respect to infancy by natural law, the question does not admit a doubt to its difference when infancy approaches that period as to which particular country, following, climate, and tradition have attached various bounds. Even, however, as to this debatable period, the opinion is expressed that no matter how high a country may place the era of majority, such law of domicile binds the person in foreign lands." 2 Rodenburg, 1, §§ 1, 2; 1 Boullenois, 53; 4 Phil. 252; Livermore, Dissert. § 17; Savigny, 134, 135.

But it seems the case is different where the infant is residing in a foreign country without his guardian, though not domiciled there. Whart., Conf. L. § 113.

It is said in Saul v. His Creditors, 17 Martin, 569, that all writers "agree that the laws or statutes which regulate minority and majority, and those which fix the state or condition of man, are personal statutes, and follow and govern him in every country. Now, supposing the case of our law fixing the age of majority at twenty-five, and the country in which a man was born and lived previous to his coming here placing it at twenty-one: no objection could, perhaps, be made to the rule just stated. And it may be, and we believe would be, true that a contract made here between the two periods already mentioned would bind him. But reverse the facts of the case, and suppose, as is the truth, that our law placed the age of majority at twenty-one; that twenty-five was the period at which a man ceased to be a minor in the country in which he resided, and that at the age of twenty-four he came into this State, and entered into contracts, would it be permitted that he should, in our courts, and to the demand of one of our citizens, plead, as to the protection against his engagements, the laws of a foreign country, of which the people of Louisiana had no knowledge? Most assuredly it would not." See also Baldwin v. Gray, 16 Martin (La.), 192.

This opinion of the Louisiana court has been severely attacked. See Liverm., Dissert. § 17; Phillimore, IV. 252; Story, Conf. L. § 76. On the other hand, the principle has been approved by Bar, Int. L. 156, § 45, note 5, and has been sustained by a recent decision in England,—see per Helleman, L. R. 2 Eq. 362,—and has been incorporated into the Prussian Code,—A.

Regarding the business capacity of infants, it has been said that he who is capable of business at his domicile, is capable of it everywhere;<sup>1</sup> and the personal status of each individual is to be determined by the law of the place where he is, as to acts done within the jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

f. Disabilities of Coverture.—Throughout Christendom the position of a married woman is that of business dependence.<sup>3</sup> This law of disability is a protective law, and as such has extra-territorial force, and is internationally binding.<sup>4</sup>

g. Disabilities of Idiocy and Lunacy.—Idiocy and lunacy are notice to all the world of irresponsibility, and those dealing with such persons do so at their peril.<sup>5</sup>

h. Disabilities of Spendthrifts.—Some States have laws placing under disabilities spendthrifts, or persons of business profligacy; and these disabilities are said to adhere to such persons wherever they may travel.<sup>6</sup>

L. R. § 35; see Savigny, 145; Whart., Conf. L. § 429, — and may be regarded as the law which now obtains throughout the German Empire, and prevails in both England and the United States. Whart., Conf. L. § 115.

1 Bar maintains that the courts will sustain that construction which most favors capacity; that, foreigners, in case of conflict, when competent at the place of transaction, are to be regarded by all courts, except those of their domicile and of countries with similar codes, as competent to do the particular act. The reason he assigns is, that a government, it is presumed, would not exercise a greater tenderness over foreigners than over its own subjects, and that, if it presumes its subjects to be capable of being relieved from the incapacity of minority at a particular age, it will not grant that protection to foreigners for such a period. Bar, Pri. Int. L. 156, § 45, note 5.

Reinhold Schmid says that, "So far as concerns foreigners whose business capacity comes into question before our courts, on the one side, there is no reason to give them a wider protection than their home laws secure; and on the other side, it would be repugnant to equity if, by extending to them their foreign protection, they should be more favored than our own citizens. This leads to the conclusions (1) that a foreigner who is capable of business at his domicile must be recognized as so capable by our own laws, even though if domiciled among us he would be incapable; and (2) foreigners who are incapable by their own laws must be treated by us as incapable when our laws so regard them. Die Herrschaft der Gesetze, etc., 43. The second proposition is not universally admitted. See Whart., Conf. L. § 114.

2 Petrie v. Voorhees, 3 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 285; Amerman v. Wills, 9 C. E. Gr. (N. J.)

13; Polydore v. Prince, 1 Ware (U. S.) D. C. 413; Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. Rep. 760; Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163; Westlake, Private Int. L. art. 404.

3 The status of a married woman, and her capacity to carry on business in a foreign State, are determined by the law of her domicile. Hill v. Pine River Bank, 45 N. H. 300; Cosio v. De Dernaes, 1 C. & P. 266; s. c., Ry and Wood, 102; Story, Conf. L. § 136; Pothier, Traité des Oblig. par. 2, ch. vi. § 3; Savigny, 137; Boullenois, i. 437-439; Fœlix, i. 188, No. 89. But it is said that the forms of contract she must use, and the manner in which she must sue, are to be determined by the lex loci actus. Ilderton v. Ilderton, 2 H. Bl. 145; Bar, Priv. Intr. L. § 53; Wächter, ii. 180, and the forms of conveyance used are to be determined by the lex rei sitæ. Sell v. Miller, 11 Ohio St. 331.

4 Whart., Conf. L. § 118.

5 But when a person who has been adjudged a lunatic is apparently sane, and the law of his domicile permits him to travel in a foreign country unattended, it seems the laws of his domicile will be no protection to any one dealing with him in good faith. See Whart., Conf. L. § 122.

6 Bar, Priv. Inter. L. 175, § 54; Fœlix, i. p. 188; Masse, ii. 87; P. Voet, IV. 3, No. 17; D'Aguesseau, Œuvres, IV. 638; Rodenburg, ii. 1, § 4; Argent, No. 7, Burgundus, iii. 2.

It has been said that "a 'spendthrift,' though under interdiction at his domicile, may be a very plausible person, and may carry with him on his travels means to deceive the most cautious. If the law of his domicile permits him to travel without an attendant to notify strangers of his irresponsibility, it is not thought that that law should be his defence in suits against

6. STATUTES PROTECTING CAPACITY. — Restrictions which belong to those statutes which protect capacity are said to be part of the common law of Christendom, and that they will be enforced in every civilized country, wherever they are decreed by the law of the domicile. And where there are conflicting local laws, more or less favorable to capacity, that will be preferred by which the capacity is most enlarged.<sup>1</sup>

4. Jurisdiction of Action. — I. WANT OF JURISDICTION. — The question of jurisdiction is to be determined by the special laws of each particular State.<sup>2</sup> But want of jurisdiction may always be him by persons on whom he has imposed." Whart., Conf. L. § 122.

1 Whart., Conf. L. §§ 102, 113, 479.

Among the statutes which protect capacity are those restraining infants, those limiting the business rights of married women, and those placing under tutelage lunatics and spendthrifts.

Privilegia favorabilia. — Those statutes which, in order to protect from damage persons supposed to be incapable of business, restrain them, either temporarily or permanently, from the exercise of certain business functions. Wharton, Conf. L. § 103.

This form of restraint may be instituted in various ways; as by the judicial appointment of a tutor or guardian, after due examination by a proper court, or it may be by marriage when the law, "to secure her property from her husband's depredations, so as to secure her unharassed attention to the family sphere," deprives the wife of the right to alienate it, except with peculiar solemnities, and relieves her from responsibilities for debts incurred. Or it may be in the protection afforded to infants. And the modes in which the restraint has been applied are various. "The Roman law, where property has been wrong from a person thus protected, gives the in integrum restitutio. Savigny, Sayst. vii. p. 100.

The English common law avoids all contracts made by such persons, except for necessities. But however such restraints may be instituted, or by whatever process they may be enforced, their principle is common to all civilized lands. This object is, not to extinguish capacity, but to nurture and protect it. The persons to whom they relate are not a class politically and socially depressed, but a class whom the State regards as the subjects of its tenderest care, and who, in the case of minors or married women, it would so cherish, that they, in their turn, may be the guardians and artificers of its own future greatness and strength. A nation could expect but little for its own future which left its children without parental or tutelary restraint, and exposed married women, when under their husband's control, to responsibilities by which the wife's private estate would be imperilled, and her capacity for domestic usefulness impaired. Hence it is that protective laws of this order have been held as adhering to the person of the subject in whatever land he may travel. The status that he has in this respect at home must be granted to him abroad. Whart., Conf. L. § 103. It has been said that "these personal laws determining the state and condition of individuals which are founded on natural relations and qualities, and such as are universally recognized among civilized communities, as those of parent and child, those resulting from marriage, from intellectual imbecility, and the like, they (sovereigns) may, and in point of fact do, establish distinctions which are not founded in nature, but relate only to the peculiarities of their own social organization, to their own municipal laws, and to the artificial forms of society which are established among themselves;" but that "it is by no means clear that these personal distinctions, which are not founded in nature, and are the result of mere civil institutions, can be allowed to accompany them (the persons), and give them personal immunities, or affect them with personal incapacities, in other countries in which they may be temporarily resident, or transiently passing, whose laws acknowledge no distinction." Polydore v. Prince, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 413.

§ Where the subject-matter of the suit is strictly local, jurisdiction depends upon such locality, and can only be exercised in the State where the subject-matter is located. Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109. Thus, an action for injuries by a vessel to a bridge, its approaches, and abutments, which rested upon the land, is properly brought under the law of the State in which the bridge is located. The Queen City, 17 Ill. App. 203.

And a holder of a mortgage on a horse, valid by the laws of Missouri, may enforce his rights against the horse when removed into Kansas. Ramsey v. Glenn, 33 Kan. 271.

If the object of the suit is to directly deal with and affect the person of the deceased party, and not the subject-matter itself, and the decree when rendered, and the relief when granted, would, in fact, directly affect and operate upon the person of the defendant only, and would not directly operate upon the subject-matter, the suit may be maintained in any State where the court obtains jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, although the subject-matter of the controversy referred to and described in the decree, and ultimately but indirectly affected by the relief granted, may be situated in another State. Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109.

A State court has original jurisdiction of a suit on an injunction bond given in a federal court. Recovery in the latter court is not a condition precedent to the action in the bond. Aiken v. Leathers, 37 La. An. 482.

And where a question involving the validity of a patent arises incidentally in a suit in a State court, the court may determine it. Brown v. Texas Cactus Hedge Co., 64 Tex. 396.

A thief took a horse stolen in Arkansas to the Indian Territory. The federal court there released him before trial, and it was held that a State court would hear the case. Elmore v. State, 45 Ark. 243.

It is said that an action cannot be maintained under a statute of Georgia regulating the compensation of inspectors, for services performed in South Carolina. Fitz-Simmons v. Guanahani, 16 S. C. 192.

Contracts made in China by American merchants are, by our treaties and statutes, and the English treaties, governed by the common law, meaning the rules found in the decisions of federal and State courts, as distinguished from our statute law, and can be enforced by the consular courts. But the decisions of the consul are not conclusive upon all other courts. Forbes v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 242.

A receiver, on the ground of inter-state comity, may sue in the courts of another State than that in which he was appointed. Metzner v. Bauer, 98 Ind. 425. But it is questioned whether a citizen of one State, acting within that State, and under its judicial authority, can be called in question for such act in another State. Gibbons v. Livingston, 1 Hals. (N. J.) 236.

It has been held that the Supreme Court of New York can take jurisdiction of foreclosure of a mortgage where a portion of the premises lie in another State, and may order the mortgagor to execute a conveyance thereof in performance of the covenant in the mortgage; and such order, although not originally prayed, can be granted, even after report of sale, by way of amendment. Union Trust Co. v. Roch- ester & P. R. R. Co. (N. Y.) 3 Cent. Rep. 840.

But where a mortgage by a railroad company covered its property in New York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, suits to foreclose were brought in all three States, and the same person appointed receiver in each suit. Upon a motion to amend the complaint and order appointing the receiver, so as to make the action in New York collateral or ancillary to that pending in Ohio, which the mortgagees desired should be the principal suit, the court held that the motion to amend the complaint might be granted, provided the issues already framed and the court's powers to dispose of them effectually were not changed. But the court refused to modify the order appointing the receiver. Taylor v. Atlantic & G. W. R. R. Co., 57 How. Pr. 9. Compare Matter of U. S. Rolling-Stock Co., 55 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 286. On an application to compel such receiver to pay certificates issued by him for the rental by his company of rolling-stock, the court refused to remit the applicant to the courts of Ohio, on the ground that the proceedings in each State were separate and independent as to property within its limits. In re United States Rolling-Stock Co., 57 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 16.

Where by the lex loci contractus the legal title to a chose in action passes by assignment, the assignee may sue in his own name, in any forum. Levy v. Levy, 78 Pa. St. 507.

The State court will not enjoin a licensee from manufacturing, on his refusal to pay the stipulated royalty, where the defendant denies the validity of the patent, since the question raised is exclusively within the jurisdiction of the federal courts; and for the non-payment of royalty, the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law. Hat Sweat Mfg. Co. v. Reinoehl (N. Y.), 102 N. Y. 167; 55 Am. Rep. 793; s. c., 3 Cent. Rep. 54.

Another Suit Pending.—The pendency of a suit in one State is no bar to a suit in another State. The States, in a jurisdictional sense, are foreign to one another. Davis v. Morriss, 76 Va. 21. Nor is the pendency of an action on a contract in the United States court, a ground for setting aside summons in an action in a State court: the fact that the first action was commenced in a State court and removed to a United States court will not bar the second action in the State court against a joint contractor. Oneida County Bank v. Otis (N. Y.), 2 Cent. Rep. 91.

The removal of an action against several will not be a bar to an action in the State court for the same cause against one of the defendants: both causes may continue to judgment. Oneida County Bank v. Otis (N. Y.), 2 Cent. Rep. 91.

pleaded in an action on a foreign judgment.<sup>1</sup> A finding or recital of such jurisdiction will not prevent inquiry.<sup>2</sup>

Where the jurisdiction of a court of limited jurisdiction depends on some fact which can be decided without deciding the case on its merits, the jurisdiction may be questioned and disproved collaterally, although the jurisdictional fact is averred of record, and has been, on evidence, actually found by the court. But when the question of jurisdiction is so involved in the subject-matter of the suit that it cannot be separately decided, the judgment rendered is conclusive in collateral proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

a. Suits for Negligence causing Death. — No action will lie for the death of a person by negligence, except in the State where the death occurred, and by force of a statute in that State. And when a State statute gives such right of action, it has no operation upon an injury received in another State, where no such law is in force, although received by a citizen of the former State.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109; Morey v. Morey, 27 Minn. 265; Whart., Conf. L. secs. 704, 811.

<sup>2</sup> Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 30; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714; bk. 24, 1. ed. 565; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall (U. S.) 457; s. c., 85 U. S. 21; bk. 21, 1. ed. 897.

On the general issue, the jurisdiction of the courts rendering a foreign judgment is put in issue, but not the merits of the judgment. Crone v. Dawson, 19 Mo. App. 214; s. c., 1 West. Rep. 689.

Where a foreign judgment is sued on, or is set up in bar, the party supposed to be bound by it may aver and prove, even in contradiction of the record, any jurisdictional fact appearing therein, — as that he was not a resident within the territorial jurisdiction of the court rendering it; that he was not personally served with process within that jurisdiction; and that the attorney who appeared for him had no authority to do so. Graham v. Spencer, 14 Fed. Rep. 603. Or he may impeach it for want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the record. Morey v. Morey, 27 Minn. 265. The decree of a foreign court, with respect to the distribution of American assets, would be void for want of jurisdiction. Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467; Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 44.

The courts of a State have no jurisdiction of a charge of desertion under the poor laws, where the husband's domicile is in another State, and the act of desertion took place in a third one. Commonwealth v. Bailey (Pa.), 1 Leg. Gaz. Rep. 87.

<sup>3</sup> People's Savings Bank v. Wilcox (R. I.), 1 N. Eng. Rep. 818; Chew v. Holroyd, 8 Welsb. Hurl. & Gord. 249; Bunbury v. Fuller, 9 Welsb. Hurl. & Gord. 111; Wanzer v. Howland, 10 Wis. 8; Clark v. Holmes, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 390; Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; Jochumsen v. Suffolk Savings Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.), 87; Sears v. Terry, 26 Conn. 273, 285; Fowle v. Coe, 63 Me. 245; Salladay v. Bainhill, 29 Iowa, 555; Wyatt's Adm'r v. Rambo, 29 Ala. 510, 520; Wilson v. Frazier, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 30; Johnson v. Corpenning, 4 Ired. (N. C.) Eq. 216; Moore v. Smith, 11 Rich. (S. C.) 569, 577. Burns v. Van Loan, 29 La. Ann. 560; Miller v. Jones' Admr., 26 Ala. 247; Brown v. Foster, 6 R. I. 564; 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 820.

<sup>4</sup> Texas, etc., Ry. Co. v. Richards (Tex.), 4 S. W. Rep. 627; s. c., 25 Cent. L. J. 86. Willis v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 61 Tex. 432; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 301; Needham v. Grand Trunk R. R. Co., 38 Vt. 294; Crowley v. the Panama R. R. Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 99; Whitford v. The Panama R. R. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 67; s. c., 23 N. Y. 465; Beach v. The Bay State Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 433; Richardson v. New York Central R. R. Co., 98 Mass. 85; Woodard v. Michigan, S. & N. I. R. R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 121.

Yet it has been held that the rights of a father to maintain an action for the death of his child in Indiana, will be enforced in an Illinois court according to the law of Indiana on the subject, there being nothing therein contrary to public policy. Shedd v. Moran, 10 Ill. App. 618.

As the right of recovery for an injury resulting in death exists only by reason of the law of the place of the injury, it has accordingly been held that there can be no recovery in Iowa, under the Iowa statute, for defendant's negligence in Missouri, without showing a like statute in Missouri. Hyde v. Wabash, St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co., b. Suits on Foreign Statute.—The statute of a foreign State, if it seems, will be enforced where there is a similar statute in the State where the suit is brought, founded upon the same public policy.<sup>1</sup> 61 Iowa, 441; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 820. But where the statutes of the State where the suit is brought, and that of the State where the injury was sustained, both provide the same remedy for the injury in substantially the same form, the action may be maintained. Morris v. Chicago, Rock Island, etc., Ry. Co., 65 Iowa, 727; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 39; Knight v. West Jersey R. R. Co., 108 Pa. St. 250; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 200; Boyce v. Wabash Ry. Co., 63 Iowa, 70; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 730.

But, on the other hand, it has been held that a cause of action accruing in Iowa, under a statute rendering railway corporations liable to employees for injuries caused by negligence of co-employees, may be enforced in Minnesota, although there is no corresponding statute in Minnesota. Herrick v. Minneapolis & St. Louis Ry. Co., 31 Minn. 11; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 771.

Damages may be recovered in Missouri courts for the death of plaintiff's decedent, under statutes of sister States founded upon the same general policy as those of Missouri. Stoeckman v. Terre Haute & Indianapolis R. R. Co., 15 Mo. App. 503.

Where a South Carolina railroad company was allowed to extend its road into Georgia on condition that suits on all claims against it might be brought in the Georgia courts, it was held that a South Carolina administrator might bring suit in a Georgia court to recover the penalty provided by the South Carolina statute for the killing of his intestate. South Carolina R. R. Co. v. Nil, 68 Ga. 572. And where a Georgia railroad company ran its road into Alabama, and there killed a man, it was held that the Alabama administrator might bring suit in Georgia. Central R. R. Co. v. Swint, 73 Ga. 651.

Under the Kansas code, sect. 422, permitting an action by an administrator for injuries resulting in the death of the intestate, it is held that a foreign administrator cannot maintain such an action where the law of the State of his appointment prohibited him from so doing. Limekiller v. Hannibal & St. Joseph R. R. Co., 33 Kan. 83; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 524. And it was held in Vawter v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 84 Mo. 679; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 107, that an administrator appointed in Missouri cannot maintain an action there for the death of his intestate in Kansas, such action being allowed by the statute of Kansas, but not by that of Missouri.

An action is maintainable in New York by the personal representative of one who died as a result of an injury received in another State through the negligence of the defendant. Where it appears that the laws of that State are similar to those of New York, giving to the personal representative a right of action in such cases, it is not essential that the statute be precisely the same. Leonard v. Columbia Steam Nav. Co., 84 N. Y. 48; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 491.

Where a railroad passes through the territory of another State, a passenger procures a ticket for his conveyance from one place within this State to another place within the State, though injured by negligence whilst passing over the portion of the road situate within the other State, he is restricted in the amount of his recovery by the statute laws of that State: it is a local contract, and governed by the law of loci contractus. Dyke v. Erie R. Co., 45 N. Y. 113.

<sup>1</sup> Boyce v. Wabash Ry. Co., 63 Iowa, 70; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 730; Morris v. Chicago, Rock Island, etc., Ry. Co., 65 Iowa, 727; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 39; Knight v. West Jersey R. R. Co., 108 Pa. St. 250; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 200; Boyce v. Wabash Ry. Co., 63 Iowa, 70; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 730; Stoeckman v. Terre Haute & Indianapolis Ry. Co., 15 Mo. App. 503; Leonard v. Columbia Steam Navigation Co., 84 N. Y. 48; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 491.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota has said as far as to say that such suit is maintainable, although there be no corresponding statute in Minnesota. Herrick v. Minneapolis & St. Louis Ry. Co., 31 Minn. 11; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 771. But the Minnesota decisions are not relied upon when they go beyond the limits of well-established principles of the adjudicated cases.

A South Carolina statute providing that no special contract shall limit the common law liability of "any railroad company" within this State for, or in respect to, the loss of goods to be carried and conveyed by it, was held to apply to a Virginia corporation lost, in an action for goods that were shipped, and bills of lading issued, in South Carolina. In an action brought in New York against the carrier, it was held that the South Carolina statute did not apply. Platt v. Richmond, York River, etc., Ry. Co., 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 496.

By the law of the State of New York certain corporations therein named are required to report annually, within

Wages. — It seems that a foreign corporation State may be garnished for a debt due to a , contracted outside of that State, and exempt he State where the defendant and garnishee mary, the con-to have the failure to do a corporation ally liable for for all that h report shall hat an action the company on a liability

; cannot be Derrickson v.
b. But on a that the stockanized there-le to creditors whole of the id in, it was ida against a ity rested in e nature of a e enforced in fore the suit lorida court;
sion, to the ork Court of ction of the at weight in issue, and to se of the suit
ida. Flash v.

ed by persons cess of settle-their interests
nistrator, and,
ent into Tennvested them in his wife's and his wife Tennessee as to the fundaea (Tenn.), 93.
has inherited,
property from t she is also Louisiana, and cited in Ken-note executed udgment may in Kentucky, e common-law
een applicable
e in Kentucky.
red against her e assets which band. Wads-
Rep. 447.

1 Burlington & Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 31 Kan. 180; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 497; Broadstreet v. Clark, 65 Iowa, 670. But if wages be exempt from attachment by the law of the place of contract, it would seem that an attachment of them in another jurisdiction will not prevent a recovery in the court of the domicile and of the contract. Gilbert v. Black, 1 Leg. Chron. 132. See Broadstreet v. Clark, 65 Iowa, 670.

However, where the complaint alleged that plaintiff was a resident householder of Indiana, and an employee of a railroad company incorporated in the State, that the defendant was also a resident of the State, and was about to institute proceedings in attachment in Illinois, and garnishee the wages due the plaintiff from his employer, to prevent plaintiff from availing himself of the exemption laws of Indiana, a restraining order was issued forbidding the defendant from the prosecution of such proceedings. Wilson v. Joseph (Ind.), 5 West. Rep. 681. But in Stevens v. Brown, 20 W. Va. 450, where an Ohio statute making it a misdemeanor for a citizen of that State to assign, transfer, or send out of the State for collection, a claim against another citizen of the State, which cannot be there collected because of the Ohio exemption law, which law was set up as a defence, it was held that the principles of inter-state comity do not preclude the courts of West Virginia from awarding judgment where an attempt is made to collect such a claim by process of garnishment against a party in West Virginia owing such debtor. And in Mooney v. Union Pac. R. R. Co., 60 Iowa, 346, the plaintiff and defendant were residents in Nebraska: the plaintiff sued defendant in Iowa, personal service being had in Nebraska; and a railroad corporation, operating its road in both States, being summoned as garnishee. The debt due the defendant from the garnishee was for labor done in Nebraska, in which State defendant was in the habit of receiving his dues from the garnishee. Under the Nebraska law, the debt due from the garnishee was exempt from attachment, and the court held that the suit could be maintained, and the garnishee charged.

But it was recently held by the Supreme Court of Iowa that in garnishment proceedings in that State, the exemption laws of the State where the contract creating the garnishee's debt was made, will protect

2. CONFLICT OF JURISDICTION. — A State legislature cannot suspend process in the federal courts as to its citizens;<sup>1</sup> nor can a State court enjoin an action in the circuit court of the United States.<sup>2</sup> And the circuit court of the United States cannot interfere in any way with the jurisdiction of the courts of a State,<sup>3</sup> except in matters of bankruptcy.<sup>4</sup> Neither can the jurisdiction neither the defendant nor the garnishee. Broadstreet v. Clark, 65 Iowa, 670.

In a case in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, on a seaman's libel of a propeller for wages, it appeared that before answer her owner had been garnished in a Massachusetts State court, and under its judgment compelled to pay the same. In the first United States circuit such wages have been held liable to attachment at common law: it has been held otherwise in the second. In this case the court said that in absence of any decision of the United States Supreme Court settling the question, the Massachusetts court's judgment should, by comity (as well as by the admiralty rule to do equity), be recognized, and the amount so paid be allowed as a credit against the libellant's claim. The City of New Bedford, 20 Fed. Rep. 57.

<sup>1</sup> Babcock v. Weston, 1 Gall. C. C. 168.

The service of process under the United States cannot be interrupted by the arrest of the officer, or person aiding him, or in any other manner, by means of State process. United States v. Morris, 2 Am. L. R. 348. And a State court cannot enjoin collection of a tax ordered by a federal court to pay a judgment of that court. Gaines v. Springer, 46 Ark. 502.

<sup>2</sup> Schuyler v. Pelissier, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 191; Coster v. Griswold, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 364. Nor one in a court of another State. Mead v. Merritt, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 402; Burgess v. Smith, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 276.

<sup>3</sup> Ex parte Cabrera, 1 Wash. C. C. 232.

Where the State statute provides a method of ousting a railroad company from land for which it has not paid damages, the federal court will not direct this to be done by the marshal. Reed v. Chicago, Milwaukee, etc., Ry. Co. 25 Fed. Rep. 886. And where the law affords an adequate remedy, the federal court, sitting in equity, will not entertain a case cognizable in the equity courts of the State under a State statute. Whitehead v. Entwistle, 27 Fed. Rep. 778.

Federal courts will not enjoin action, under proceedings had in the State court, at the instance of one who was a party to those proceedings, and who might have contested his case there. Del Valle v. Welsh, 28 Fed. Rep. 342. And where a State court of competent jurisdiction has possession of the res, the federal court cannot interfere on the ground that the State court was imposed upon. Attleborough Bank v. North-western Manuf. & Car. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 113. But it was recently held where, pending a sale for A.'s benefit on a marshal's f. fa., of a judgment recovered by B., B. died, and it was held that the federal court, on motion, would suspend the sale, and permit administration by the probate court. Kio Grande Ry. Co. v. Gomila, 28 Fed. Rep. 337.

The United States Circuit Court cannot issue an injunction to prevent a police officer of a city from serving warrants of arrest issued by a State court for violation of city ordinances, claimed to be in contravention of the fourteenth amendment of the United States Constitution, and the treaty with China. Yick Wo v. Crowley, 26 Fed. Rep. 207.

Where a person, while in attendance upon the federal court as a witness, was served with a writ of garnishment from a State court, it was held that the plaintiff in such writ could not be restrained from proceeding in the State court, nor be punished as for a contempt of the federal court. Ex parte Schulenberg, 25 Fed. Rep. 211. And where lands were sold by order of the bankrupt court, the sale confirmed, and the conveyance made by the assignee, it was held that the court was without power to enjoin a sale of the same land under an order of the same court. Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 348.

<sup>4</sup> U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720. See Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 348.

Pending a suit in a State court to enforce a statutory lien on mortgaged railroad property, foreclosure proceedings were instituted in the federal court, and a receiver there appointed. Without leave of the federal court, the State-court suit was prosecuted to a judgment declaring lien. It was held that the federal court would not entertain a petition to have this lien declared paramount to the lien of the mortgage. Blair v. St. Louis, Hannibal, etc., R. R. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 2.

Where an Indian convicted of manslaughter, in the United States District Court of Alaska was sentenced, under the Oregon statute, to a more onerous punishment than United States Act of March 3, 1875, defining the punishment in the case of one convicted of manslaughter in any court of the United States warranted, it of the federal courts over controversies between citizens of different States be impaired by the laws of the States, which prescribe the modes of redress in their own courts, or which regulate the distribution of their judicial power.<sup>1</sup>

3. CONCURRENT JURISDICTION. — Where concurrent jurisdiction may be exercised by the federal and State courts, the court which first takes jurisdiction can be interfered with by no other, whether State or federal.<sup>2</sup> was held erroneous, that the federal law governed. Kie v. United States, 27 Fed. Rep. 351.

Hyde v. Stone, 20 How. (U. S.) 170; Watson v. Tarpley, 18 How. (U. S.) 517.

Thus a State law, barring all actions against the personal representatives of one judicially declared insolvent, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action by a citizen of another State, in a federal court. Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; Union Bank of Tennessee v. Jolly Admrs. 18 How. (U. S.) 503. And State exemption laws have no application to process out of a federal court. Lloyd v. Yost, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 42.

A State law abolishing resulting trusts does not affect the right of one for whom public lands were purchased by an agent to call on the agent to account, as trustee, in a federal court. Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. (U. S.) 558.

Discharge of Prisoners. — A State judge has no power to discharge from arrest, under the insolvent law, a prisoner arrested under federal process. Duncan v. Klinefelter, 5 Watts (Pa.), 141. And a person in custody under a capias ad satisfaciendum issued under the authority of the circuit court cannot legally be discharged from imprisonment by a State officer acting under a State insolvent law. McNutt v. Blond, 2 How. (U. S.) 1; Duncan v. Darst, 1 How. (U. S.) 301; Sadlier v. Fallen, 2 Curt. C. C. 190. And a prisoner held by a United States marshal under federal process for the purpose of extradition cannot be discharged by a State court. People v. Fiske, 45 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 294. On the other hand, where a person is in custody under State authority, a federal court has no power to take the accused from such custody. Norris v. Newton, 5 McL. C. C. 92; United States v. Rector, 2 Am. L. Reg. 174.

A New York corporation insured a house in Michigan for A., a resident of that State. After the loss, and before its adjustment, a creditor of A., a resident of Illinois, there sued A., and garnished the fund, the corporation doing business in Illinois. No service was had on A., but judgment was taken against the corporation. Before the rendition of this judgment, the loss was adjusted. A. assigned the claim to B., a resident of Michigan; B. sued the corporation, and recovered judgment before the rendition of the Illinois judgment. On motion before the district judge to vacate the stay, it was held that the motion should be denied without costs, and without prejudice to the right to renew the motion when the circuit justice should preside. Connor v. Hanover Ins. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 549.

Habeas Corpus. — A State court has not power to remove, by writ of habeas corpus, a defendant in custody of a federal court. Norris v. Newton, 5 McL. C. C. 92; United States v. Rector, 2 Am. L. R. 174; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. (U. S.) 506; Veremaitre's Case (N. Y.), 9 N. Y. Leg. obs. 129, Ex parte Sifford, 5 Am. L. R. 659. Where an attempt is made to do so, it is the duty of the marshal to make return to such writ, but not to obey it. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. (U. S.) 506; Veremaitre's Case (N. Y.), 9 N. Y. Leg. obs. 129; Ex parte Sifford, 5 Am. L. R. 659.

Where a homicide is punishable both by the State and federal laws, and the circuit court first acquires jurisdiction, the prisoners will not be discharged on habeas corpus from a State prosecution whilst the proceedings in the circuit court are pending and undetermined. People v. Sheriff of Westchester, 1 Park. (N. Y.) 659; s. c., 10 N. Y. Leg. obs. 298. Where the State and federal courts have jurisdiction to punish the same act, the prisoner must plead a conviction in one jurisdiction as a bar to a further proceeding in the other. People v. Sheriff of Westchester, 1 Park. (N. Y.) 659; s. c., 10 N. Y. Leg. obs. 298.

A federal court has power, on habeas corpus, to discharge one of its officers, who has been arrested on State process, for his conduct in executing a writ issued under federal authority; Ex parte Jenkins, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 521. But a federal court has no power to discharge one of its officers from arrest under State process, unless a purpose to disregard an act of Congress be apparent on the face of the proceedings; it has no right to go behind the return to a habeas corpus. Thomas v. Crossin, 5 Clark (Pa.), 328.

<sup>2</sup> Ex parte Robinson, 6 McL. C. C.

Where the court of admiralty has acquired jurisdiction, and the marshal is in possession, a State court cannot interfere therewith by the appointment of a receiver; but the court may appoint a receiver to represent creditors in the admiralty court as to the surplus;<sup>1</sup> and where a vessel has been seized under State process, it is not subsequently open to attachment, by process from the admiralty, for seamen's wages;<sup>2</sup> but the latter may interfere in the State court for the protection of their interest.<sup>3</sup>

Although it is true that the admiralty has exclusive jurisdiction

355; Putney v. The Celestine, 4 Am. L. J. 164.

In cases of concurrent jurisdiction in the State and federal courts, the latter have no discretion to refuse jurisdiction, in order to prevent a collision of authority. Wadleigh v. Veazie, 3 Sum. C. C. 165.

Where two suits are commenced in different courts, and the parties and the subject-matter are the same in each, that which first has jurisdiction should dispose of the whole matter. McCarthy v. Peake, 18 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 138; s. c., 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 164. And where a committee has been appointed of the estate of an habitual drunkard, another court will not, by the appointment of a receiver in a creditor's suit, take the property out of the hands of the committee. Niblo v. Harrison, 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 668.

The jurisdiction of the United States courts previously acquired cannot be ousted by proceedings in insolvency under State laws when the parties invoking the jurisdiction have not participated in the insolvency proceedings. Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; McMicken v. Perin, 18 How. (U. S.) 507; Green v. Creighton, 23 How. (U. S.) 90; Claffin v. Lisso, 4 Wood, C. C. 252; s. c., 16 Fed. Rep. 897. And whenever the State court acquires possession and control of the insolvent debtor's property, it has the unquestioned power to dispose of it and give a good title. To this extent the State law is a rule of property. Burt v. Keyes, 1 Flipp. C. C. 61.

A federal suit will not be stayed until a suit, subsequently commenced between the same parties in the State court, involving some of the same questions, shall have been determined. Sharon v. Hill, 26 Fed. Rep. (N. Y.) 337.

The court will not attach a sheriff, who has paid the proceeds of an execution into the court of bankruptcy, in accordance with its order to that effect. Felton v. Uhlinger, 1 Weekly Notes of Cases, 37.

Where the Supreme Court reverses the decree of a surrogate, another court of coordinate jurisdiction cannot inquire into the grounds of the reversal: redress for any error therein must be sought in the Supreme Court. Ruthven v. Patten, 1 Rob. (N. Y.) 416; s. c., 2 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 121.

Under their constitutions, the courts of Minnesota and Wisconsin have concurrent jurisdiction on the St. Croix River, a common highway. An action, therefore, to recover damages for an injury occurring on the Wisconsin side of the river channel, may be brought in a Minnesota court. Opsahl v. Judd, 30 Minn. 126.

The Supreme Court of Missouri has appellate jurisdiction of cases involving questions of concurrent jurisdiction of Missouri and Illinois over the Mississippi River, and of the construction of provisions in the constitution of Missouri. Sanders v. St. Louis & New Orleans Anchor Line (Mo. App.), 4 West. Rep. 266.

1 Thompson v. Van Vechten, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 618.

Where a vessel, after being attached on process out of the admiralty, is fraudulently removed beyond the jurisdiction, and there attached on State process, the latter will not hold the property against a claim by the marshal. The Joseph Gorham, 7 Law Rep. 135.

In trespass against a collector of customs for seizing the plaintiff's vessel, where the proceedings on the libel in the federal court have been unnecessarily delayed, the State court will not grant an indefinite stay of proceedings, until the libel has been disposed of. Hoyt v. Gelston, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 79. See Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 246.

2 Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. (U. S.) 583; The Oliver Jordan, 2 Curt. C. C. 414; The Robert Fulton, 1 Paine, C. C. 620; Earl v. Raymond, 4 McL. C. C. 233; Fisher v. The Plymouth, 2 Inter. Rev. Rec. 109; Certain Logs of Mahogany, 2 Sumn. C. C. 589; McLelland v. The Robert Morris, 2 Penn. L. J. 493; Taylor v. The Royal Saxon, 1 Wall. Jr. C. C. 311; Wall v. The Royal Saxon, 2 Am. L. R. 324; The Gazelle, 1 Sprague (U. S.), D. C. 378; The Julia Ann, 1 Sprague (U. S.), D. C. 382; The John Richards, Newb. Adm. 73.

3 Taylor v. Carryl, 24 Pa. St. 259; s. c., 2 Am. L. Reg. 333; affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, in 20 How. (U. S.) 583.

of suits on ransom bills, yet an action at common law may be sustained on a bill of exchange given as collateral to a ransom, although the consideration appears on the face of the bill; and in a common-law court the lawfulness of the capture cannot be questioned.<sup>1</sup>

4. PRIORITY, LEVIES, AND ATTACHMENTS. — Where executions issue from a State court, and from a court of the United States, if there be no lien by judgment, the one under which the first seizure is made must prevail.<sup>2</sup>

5. Foreign Judgments. — Foreign judgments are either in rem or in personam.<sup>3</sup> In order that a judgment may be valid and entitled to the recognition of foreign tribunals, it is indispensable that the court pronouncing the judgment should have a lawful jurisdiction over the case, over the subject of the action, and over the parties to the action; that the court had such jurisdiction

1 Maisonnaire v. Keating, 2 Gall. C. C. 325.

2 Brown v. Clarke, 4 How. (U. S.) 4; Pulliam v. Osborne, 17 How. (U. S.) 471.

Where a marshal and sheriff have process of execution against the same defendant, the proceeds of his goods will be treated as if but one jurisdiction existed; and, after satisfying the execution under which the sale took place, the surplus will be awarded to the plaintiff in the other writ. Bayard v. Bayard, 5 Pa. L. J. 160; Azcarati v. Fitz-Simmons, 3 Wash. C. C. 134.

Where personal property is levied on by the marshal, by virtue of mesne process out of a federal court, it cannot be taken out of his possession by a sheriff, under a replevin from a State court. Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. (U. S.) 450; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 335. And after action commenced in a federal court, the claim in suit cannot be attached, by process out of a State court. Wallace v. McConnell, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 136.

Personal property levied on by a sheriff, under State process, is in the custody of the law, and cannot be again taken in execution by the marshal, under federal process. Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 400; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. (U. S.) 583.

An attachment issued by a justice will not prevail against an execution from a court of record unless an actual levy was previously made under the attachment. Ray v. Harcourt, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 495. And where a sheriff makes a general levy, after the lien of a constable's execution has expired, and sets aside to the defendant, under the exemption law, the goods on which the constable had levied, the issuing of a second execution gives the latter no claim on the proceeds. Ebert v. Allen, 1 Leg. Gaz. Rep. 133.

A constable's sale conveys a good title, notwithstanding a prior levy by the sheriff. The execution creditors must litigate the appropriation of the proceeds. Duncan v. McCumber, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 264.

3 Story, Conf. L. § 584. See also 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 24, pp. 1014 to 1080; 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. (2d ed.) 436 n.

Some divide judgments into three classes; to wit, (1) in rem, (2) in personam, and (3) mixed, in rem and in personam. See Burgundus, Tract. 3 n. 1, 2, pp. 84, 85; 1 Boullenois, obs. 25, p. 602.

Vattel says that it is the province of every sovereignty to administer justice in all places within its own territory and under its own jurisdiction, to take cognizance of the crimes committed there, and of the controversies that arise within it, and says that, in consequence of this right of jurisdiction, the decision made by the judge of the place within the extent of his authority ought to be respected and take effect, even in foreign countries. Vattel, b. 2, ch. 7, §§ 84, 85. But this doctrine has not been generally accepted. See Story, Conf. L. § 586.

Lord Karnes, in his work on equity (see 2 Karnes, Eq. 3d ed. 365), makes another distinction as to foreign judgments; namely, "Suits sustaining and suits dismissing a claim." He says, "A foreign suit sustaining the claim is not one of those universal titles which ought to be made effectual everywhere. It is a title that depends on the authority of the court whence it issued, and therefore has no coercive authority extra territorium." But this seems to be a refinement of distinctions not warranted by the ancient common law, and not sanctioned by the modern decisions. See Gelston v. Hoyt, 13 John. (N. Y.) 561; Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 246; the Bennet, 1 Dodson, 175, 180; Starkie, Ev. pt. 2, § 80.

must be clearly shown;<sup>1</sup> and if the jurisdiction fails in either of these respects, the judgment will be a nullity, without obligation, and not entitled to be respected or enforced beyond the jurisdiction of the court rendering it, whether the judgment be in rem or in personam.<sup>2</sup>

1. JUDGMENTS IN REM. — Where the matter in controversy is immovable property, or land, the judgment pronounced in the forum rei sitæ is of universal obligation as to all matters of right and title which it professes to determine; but a foreign judgment relating thereto will be of no obligation.<sup>3</sup> And the same principle applies to all proceedings in rem against movable property within the jurisdiction of the court pronouncing the judgment.<sup>4</sup> But the judgment must be bona fide, and without fraud; for if fraud intervenes, it will avoid the force and validity of the judgment, however well founded the jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup> But fraud, practised

1 Smith v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.), 339; Ferguson v. Mahon, 11 Ad. & El. 179, 182, 183; 1 Boullenois, obs. 25, pp. 618-620.

The judgment of a competent Spanish court having jurisdiction of the case, made after the cession of Louisiana but whilst the country, though ceded, was, de facto, in the possession of Spain, and subject to Spanish law, is valid so far as it affects the private rights of the parties. Keene v. McDonough, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 308.

2 Rose v. Himley, 4 Cr. (U. S.) 269, 270; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 524 n.; Shumway v. Stillman, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 447; Noyes v. Butler, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 613; Middlesex Bank v. Butman, 29 Me. 19; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Woodward v. Tremere, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 354; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462; Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn., 1, 20, 21; Cavan v. Stewart, 1 Stark. 525; Thornton v. Jenyns, 11 Ad. & El. 179, 182, 183, 1 Stark., Ev. pt. 2, p. 214, sec. 68; Henry on For. Law, 18, n. 23, 73; Story, Confli. L. secs. 539, 546, 547, 586.

But if the judgment of a foreign court contravenes the universal principle in reference to the lex loci contractus, it will not be treated as conclusive in the courts of the State or country whose laws have been thus disregarded. Dias v. Morrell, 2 U. S. Law Mag. 431; Loreille v. Dias, 2 U. S. Law Mag. 433.

3 See Cammell v. Sewell, 5 H. & N. 728; Rafael v. Verelst, 2 W. Black. 1058; Story, Confli. L. §§ 362 n. 3, 532, 545, 551, 591; 1 Boullenois, obs. 25, pp. 618, 619, 623; 1 Hertii Opera, debollis, § 4, n. 73, pp. 153, 154; J. Voet, ad Pand. tom. 1, lib. 42, tit. 1, n. 41, p. 788.

4 French v. Hall, 9 N. H. 137; Croudson v. Leonard, 4 Cr. (U. S.) 434; Gelston

v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 246; Williams v. Armroyd, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 423; Rose v. Himley, 4 Cr. (U. S.) 241; Hudson v. Guestier, 4 Cr. (U. S.) 293; The Mary, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 126, 142-146; Bradstreet v. Neptune Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. C. C. 600; s. c., 2 Law Rep. 262, 264, 265; Peters v. The Warren Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. C. C. 389; s. c., 1 Law Rep. 222; Magoun v. New England Ins. Co., 1 Story, C. C. 157; s. c., 3 Law Rep. 127, 130, 131; The Mary Anne, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 104; Whitney v. Walsh, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 29; Barrow v. West, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 270; Monroe v. Douglas, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 179; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 520, and n.; Grant v. McLachlin, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 334; Blad v. Bamfield, 3 Swanst. 604, 605; Castrique v. Imrie, L. R. 4 H. L. 414; Harmer v. Bell, 7 Moore, P. C. 267; s. c., 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 62.

5 Magoun v. The New England Ins. Co., 1 Story, C. C. 157; s. c., 3 Law Rep. 127, 130, 131; Bradstreet v. the Neptune Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. C. C. 600; s. c., 2 Law Rep. 262, 264, 265; Duchess of Kingston's Case, 11 State Trials, 261, 262; s. c., 20 Howell's State Trials, 355, 538, n.; Bowles v. Orr, 1 Younge & C. 464; Starkie, Ev. pt. 2, secs. 77, 79, 83; Harg. Law Tracts, 449, 479, 483.

It must appear that the proceedings upon which the judgment is founded were regular, and that the parties interested in rem had notice of the proceedings, and an opportunity to appear and defend their interests, either personally or by representative, before the judgment was pronounced. Bradstreet v. the Neptune Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. C. C. 600; s. c., 2 Law Rep. 263; Magoun v. The New England Ins. Co., 1 Story, C. C. 157; s. c., 3 Law Rep. 127, 130; Monroe v. Douglas, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 180; Sawyer v. Maine Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 291.

in the recovery of a judgment, cannot be pleaded in an action thereon brought in another State, unless such a defence could be made in the courts of the State where the judgment was rendered.<sup>1</sup>

Proceedings by a creditor, against the personal property of a debtor in the hands of a third person, or against debts due to him by such third person, are treated as in some sense proceedings in rem, and are regarded as entitled to the same consideration as proceedings in rem.<sup>2</sup> In such cases the existence of the property seized, or the debt garnisheed within the territory, constitutes just grounds of proceeding to enforce the rights of the plaintiff and discharging his debt, — at least, so far as the property or debt will do so.<sup>3</sup> If the defendant does not appear in the suit, the proceedings will be regarded as a proceeding in rem, and the judgment will bind the property or debt, but will not be binding upon the debtor as a decree in personam would be.<sup>4</sup>

Such judgments are held conclusive in England, not only in rem, but also as to all the points and facts which are directly or incidentally decided;<sup>5</sup> but in the United States the rule is not uniform, some of the States holding that they are conclusive only in rem, and may be controverted as to all the incidental grounds and facts on which they profess to be founded, while others follow the English courts.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Barras v. Bidwell, 3 Wood, C. C. 5.

And a bill in equity for an injunction against the use in New Hampshire of a judgment rendered in another State, cannot be maintained on the ground that the judgment was obtained by false and fraudulent testimony. Metcalf v. Gilmore, 59 N. H. 417; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 217.

<sup>2</sup> These proceedings are processes of foreign attachment, or garnishment, or trustee process. Story says that in this class of cases "we are especially to bear in mind that, to make any judgment effectual, the court must possess and exercise the rightful jurisdiction over the res, and also over the person, at least so far as the res is concerned; otherwise it will be disregarded. And if the jurisdiction over the res be well founded, but not over the person, except as to the res, the judgment will not be either conclusive or binding upon the party in personam, although it may be in rem." Story, Confli. L. sec. 592a.

See Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 468; Ocean Insur. Co. v. Portsmouth Marine Ry. Co., 3 Metc. (Mass.) 420; Danforth v. Penny, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 564; 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. and For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 24, pp. 1014-1019.

Garnishment of Wages. — Respecting the attachment of wages in a foreign State, see Broadstreet v. Clark, 65 Iowa, 670; Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 31 Kan. 180; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 497; Gil- bert v. Black, 1 Leg. Chron. 132; Wilson v. Joseph (Ind.), 5 West. Rep. 681; Stevens v. Brown, 20 W. Va. 450; Mooney v. Union Pac. R. R. Co., 60 Iowa, 346; The City of New Bedford, 20 Fed. Rep. 57; also supra, 4, 1, c.

<sup>3</sup> Story, Confli. L. sec. 549.

<sup>4</sup> See Ewer v. Coffin, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 24; Rangely v. Webster, 11 N. H. 299; McVicker v. Beedy, 31 Me. 317; Phelps v. Holker, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 261; Kilburn v. Woodworth, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 37; Robinson v. Ward, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 86; Pawling v. Bird's Ex'rs, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 192; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462; 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 24, pp. 1016-1019. Compare Taylor v. Phelps, 1 Harr. & Gill (Md.), 492; Shumway v. Stillman, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 447; Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686, 702, 703, 1 Boullenois, obs. 25, pp. 609, 610, 619, 620, 622, 623, 624, 625.

<sup>5</sup> Blad v. Bamfield, 3 Swanst. 604; Tarleton v. Tarleton, 4 M. & S. 20.

<sup>6</sup> See Maley v. Shattuck, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 488; Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 246; Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. C. C. 369; s. c., 1 Law Rep. 281; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 522 n.; Vandenheuev v. U. Insurance Co., 2 Cain. Cas. (N. Y.) 217; s. c., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 451; Robinson v. Jones, 8 Mass. 536; 2 Kent, Com. 120, 121.

2. JUDGMENTS IN PERSONAM. — It is said that a sovereign is not bound jure gentium to execute any foreign judgment within his dominions; and that, if execution of such an one is sought within his dominions, he is at liberty to examine into the merits of the judgment, and refuse to give it effect where it appears unjust or unfounded.<sup>1</sup> It is otherwise, however, where a foreign judgment is set up as a bar to an action.<sup>2</sup> This distinction has been frequently recognized by the courts, and is regarded "as having a just foundation in international justice."<sup>3</sup>

But, according to the present doctrine in England, where a plaintiff has recovered a judgment in a foreign country upon the original cause of action, he may sue either upon the judgment there obtained, or upon the original cause of action; the court there holding that such cause of action is not merged in the judgment thus obtained.<sup>4</sup>

Whether the effect of a foreign judgment is a merger of the cause of action, so as to defeat a recovery in another State upon the same cause of action, where the suits were commenced simultaneously, will depend upon the effect, force, and validity of the judgment in the State where rendered.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> 2 Kent, Com. 119, 120; Story, Conf. L. sec. 598, 611-618; 1 Boullenois, obs. 25, p. 601.

<sup>2</sup> Where a judgment has been pronounced by a competent court, and carried into effect, the matter then becomes res judicata, and the losing party has no right to institute a new suit elsewhere for the litigation of the same question. 2 Kent, Com. 119, 120; Story, Conf. L. § 598.

According to the doctrine of the American courts, where a judgment rendered by a foreign court, in favor of the plaintiff, is relied upon as a bar, it seems that if the foreign tribunal had no jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, a judgment there, in favor of the plaintiff, would not merge the original cause of action so as to defeat an action in another State upon the same cause. Middlesex Bank v. Butman, 29 Me. 19; McVicker v. Beedy, 31 Me. 314; Rangely v. Webster, 11 N. H. 299; Whittier v. Wendell, 7 N. H. 257; Kane v. Cook, 8 Cal. 449; Barnes v. Gibbs, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 317; Rogers v. Odell, 39 N. H. 457; North Bank v. Brown, 50 Me. 214; Baxley v. Linah, 16 Pa. St. 241. But if that court had full jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, a judgment for the plaintiff therein is a bar to a suit upon the original cause of action in another State of the Union. See Bank of North America v. Wheeler, 28 Conn. 433; Cleaves v. Lord, 43 Me. 290; Baxley v. Linah, 16 Pa. St. 241; Child v. The Eureka Power Works, 45 N. H. 547; North Bank v. Brown, 50 Me. 214; Bank of United States v. Merchants' Bank, 7 Gill (Md.), 415; Cutts v. Beardale, 15 Conn. 523; McGill v. Avery, 30 Vt. 538. The English courts, however, apply the rule, even to judgments where the court had full jurisdiction of the parties. Story, Conf. L. sec. 598.

<sup>3</sup> See Taylor v. Phelps, 1 Harr. (Md.), 492; Griswold v. Pitcairn, 2 N. H. 85; Rangely v. Webster, 11 N. H. 299; Burnham v. Webster, 1 Wood. & M. 208; Tarleton v. Tarleton, 4 M. & S. 208; Row v. Jemino, 2 Str. 733; s. c., 1 C. & D. 87; Boucher v. Lawson, 2 C. & D. 326, n.; s. c., Cases T. Hardw. 85; Ellis v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 410; Black. Inst. B. 4, tit. 3, sec. 4; 2 Kent, Com. 120; Story, Conf. L. sec. 598.

<sup>4</sup> Bank of Australasia v. Hardin, 1 B. 661; Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 1 B. 717; Smith v. Nicolls, 5 Bing. 208, 221-224; Hall v. Odber, 11 East 208; Reimers v. Druce, 23 Beav. 149. It has been aptly remarked by Story, that "if the original cause of action is not merged in a case where the judgment is in favor of the plaintiff, it is difficult to assert that it is merged in the judgment in the foreign court in favor of the defendant." Story, Conf. L. sec. 598.

<sup>5</sup> McGill v. Avery, 30 Vt. 538; Girty v. Bosw. (N. Y.) 567. There was formerly a disposition in the American courts to regard ex parte judgments obtained on attachment of the debtor's property, and publication of notice to a non-wholly void as to the person of the non-appearing defendant. Mills v. L.

3. JUDGMENTS IN COURTS OF SISTER STATES. — By the provisions of the Federal Constitution<sup>1</sup> it is required that full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State; and an Act of Congress<sup>2</sup> supplementary to the provisions of the Constitution declares that the judgments of State courts shall have the same faith and credit in other States as they have in the State where they were rendered. It has accordingly been held that the decree or judgment in a court of competent jurisdiction of a sister State has the same credit, validity, and effect in the courts of another State that it has in the State where it was rendered,<sup>3</sup> but that the question of jurisdiction of the court rendering such judgment is always open,<sup>4</sup>

7 Cr. (U. S.) 481; Hampton v. McConnel, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 234; Lapham v. Briggs, 27 Vt. 26; Bank of North America v. Wheeler, 28 Conn. 433. But the better opinion, and the one that prevails in the federal and State courts, seems to be that foreign judgments, where the defendant did not appear, and where the court had no jurisdiction over his person, are void. D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. (U. S.) 165; Webster v. Reid, 11 How. (U. S.) 437; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Kilburn v. Woodworth, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 37; Bisell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462.

Where A. of Vermont sued B. of Vermont, and C. of Louisiana, in New Hampshire, and service was had by publication, and real estate attached, and defendants were defaulted without appearance, but the property attached did not satisfy the judgment, it was held that the cause of action was not merged in the New Hampshire judgment so as to preclude A. from maintaining a suit in Vermont upon the original cause of action. St. Johnsbury Bank v. Peabody, 55 Vt. 492; 2 C., 45 Am. Rep. 632.

<sup>1</sup> Article 3, sec. 4.

<sup>2</sup> Act of Congress of May 26, 1790, ch. 11; Story on Const., ch. 29, secs. 1297-1307.

<sup>3</sup> Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothchild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109. See Phillips v. Godfrey, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 150; McFarlane v. White, 13 La. An. 394; Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182.

These provisions put such judgments on the same footing as domestic judgments; otherwise they would be regarded as foreign judgments. See Dorsey v. Maury, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 298; Seever v. Clement, 28 Md. 426; Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 586; Smith v. Lathrop, 44 Pa. St. 326.

A judgment of a court of common pleas of a county in another State, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is to be regarded as a judgment of a court of general jurisdiction, and is entitled to every presumption in favor of its validity and regularity. Pringle v. Woolworth, 90 N. Y. 502.

The validity of a judgment regularly rendered on a confession under the Pennsylvania law will be recognized by the Kansas courts, although judgments by confession are not known to the law of Kansas. Ritter v. Hoffman, 35 Kan. 215. But where the charter granted by a foreign government to a corporation reserved the right of revocation, which right was exercised by a subsequent de facto government, recognized as such by the United States, it was held that a judgment obtained in New York in an action instituted after the revocation of the charter, would not be recognized in Massachusetts as a foundation for a proceeding against stockholders. Remington v. Samana Bay Co., 140 Mass. 494.

If a scire facias would lie upon a judgment in the State in which it was rendered, an action of debt will lie upon it in another jurisdiction. Simonton v. Barrell, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 362.

Under the United States Constitution, Article 4, section 1, and the act of Congress of May 26, 1790, a writ of error, not operating as a supersedeas from the supreme appellate court of Texas to a judgment of a district court of that State, will be regarded as having the same effect in Virginia as in Texas. Piedmont and Arlington Life Ins. Co. v. Ray, 75 Va. 821.

<sup>4</sup> Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothchild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109.

The same rule applies to judgments of circuit courts of the United States, when relied upon in a State court, as governs the judgments of courts of sister States. See Barney v. Patterson, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 182; Niblett v. Scott, 4 La. An. 246.

Whether a defendant who is sued upon a foreign judgment may disprove a recital in the record of personal service upon him, or an appearance by an attorney, thereby denying the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment, the cases are divided: some hold that he can, — see as is also the question of vitiating fraud.<sup>1</sup> But where a foreign judgment is sought to be enforced in the courts of a sister State

Starbuck v. Murray, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 148; Carleton v. Bickford, 13 Gray (Mass.), 591; Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 329; Norwood v. Cobb, 24 Tex. 551; but the better opinion seems to be that the averment in the record of personal service or appearance is conclusive in other States. See Welsh v. Sykes, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 197; Lawrence v. Jarvis, 32 Ill. 304; Baltzell v. Nozler, 1 Clarke (Iowa), 588; Walker v. Lathrop, 6 Clarke (Iowa), 516, 588; Westcott v. Brown, 13 Ind. 83; Wilcox v. Kassick, 2 Mich. 165; Wilson v. Jackson, 10 Mo. 330; Pritchett v. Clark, 4 Harr. (Del.) 280; Lincoln v. Moer, 2 McL. C. C. 473; Thompson v. Emmert, 4 McL. C. C. 96; Hampton v. McConnell, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 234. Where the record shows appearance by attorney, only the defendant, although he may not deny the fact of such appearance,—Roberts v. Caldwell, 5 Dana (Ky.), 512; Gilbert v. Lane, 3 Porter (Ala.), 267,—may deny that such attorney had any authority to appear. Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 380; Lawrence v. Jarvis, 32 Ill. 304; Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20 Iowa, 161; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272; Watson v. New England Bank, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 343; Shelton v. Tiffin, 6 How. (U. S.) 163. But where the record contains no averment of service or appearance, it is always open to the defendant to show want of jurisdiction over his person. Nunn v. Sturgess, 22 Ark. 389; Gunn v. Howell, 27 Ala. 663; Dunbar v. Hallowell, 34 Ill. 168; Pollard v. Baldwin, 22 Iowa, 328; Bissell v. Wheelock, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 277; Reid v. Boyd, 13 Tex. 241; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. (U. S.) 165.

The presumption that a judgment which has run twenty years has been paid may be rebutted, though it was rendered in another State, by whose statute no action could be brought after six years from its rendition. Fanton v. Middlebrook, 50 Conn. 44.

An action lies in Iowa on a judgment rendered by a court of record in Nebraska, which has become dormant by the laws of Nebraska. David v. Porter, 51 Iowa, 254.

It has been said that a defendant, when sued on a foreign judgment in New Hampshire, is not estopped to set up the invalidity of such judgment by the fact that he had pleaded the judgment in bar in a second suit on the same demand in Louisiana. Wilbur v. Abbott, 60 N. H. 40. And that a joint judgment rendered in Louisiana on notice to only one defendant, though valid there, is invalid in New Hampshire. Wilbur v. Abbott, 60 N. H. 40.

Where the courts of Missouri declared certain bonds to be void, and the United States Circuit Court declared otherwise of similar bonds in the hands of non-residents, it was held that the State court would not compel a resident holder of such bonds to deliver them up to be cancelled. Dal County v. Merrill, 77 Mo. 573.

Suits against Corporations.—In proceedings in a foreign country for winding up the affairs of an insolvent corporation a call on shareholders was ordered, and action was brought in a New York court to compel payment of the call by a resident of New York: the proceedings being summary and in derogation of the common law, was held that the action could not be maintained on the decree. Anderson v. Haddock, 33 Hun (N. Y.), 435.

In New York a judgment in personam cannot be rendered against a foreign corporation which has not appeared, therefore in a suit upon a New York judgment against a foreign corporation when the judgment would have been void in New York want of an appearance, it was said to be void in West Virginia. Gilchrist v. West Virginia Oil & Oil Land Co., 21 W. Va. 115; 2 C., 45 Am. Rep. 555.

In a suit brought in the Second United States Circuit, by creditors of a Missouri corporation, who were not judgment creditors elsewhere than in Missouri, to enforce one's liability as holder of unpaid capital stock thereof, it was held that the law would not lie, the remedy at law not being exhausted, and the Missouri judgments having, in that circuit, the force of domestic judgments. Walser v. Seligman, Blatchf. C. C. 130.

1 See Gleason v. Dodd, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 333; Ewer v. Coffin, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 333; Carleton v. Bickford, 13 Gray (Mass.) 591; Folger v. Columbian Ins. Co., 99 Mass. 273; Taylor v. Bryden, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 173; Cummings v. Banks, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 602; Davis v. Smith, 5 Ga. 274; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. (U. S.) 165; Pease v. Olney, 20 Conn. 544; Rogers v. Gwin, 21 Iowa, 58.

However, there are numerous well-considered cases which deny the right to attack the judgment of a sister State on the ground of fraud. See Sanford v. Sanford, 28 Conn. 6, 28; McRae v. Mattocks, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 53; Bicknell v. Field, Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 440; Christmas v. Field, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290.

The United States Constitution, requiring full faith and credit to be given in every State to the judicial proceedings of every other State, applies only where the court whose judgment is invoked had jurisdiction and a finding or recital of such jurisdiction will not prevent inquiry. Thompson the defendant may not show that the judgment was founded on a mistake either of law or of fact;<sup>1</sup> neither will the fact that in the State where a foreign judgment is sought to be enforced, the cause was barred by the statute of limitations when the suit upon which the judgment was obtained was brought, avail as a defence.<sup>2</sup> The judgments of courts of record in one State are entitled to recognition by the courts of sister States as evidence of a debt simply:<sup>3</sup> they have no extra-territorial force as judgments.<sup>4</sup>

Whitman, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 457; 85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 897; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714; bk. 24, L. ed. 565; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272; Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 30.

Thus, when the fact of divorce is sought to be proved by the record of a decree in another State, the decree may be questioned for want of jurisdiction apparent on the record. Morey v. Morey, 27 Minn. 265.

And a decree for the removal of a cloud upon a title being a decree in personam can only be supported, against one not a citizen or resident of the State in which the decree is rendered, by actual service within the jurisdiction; hence, where such a decree is rendered by a State court against a non-resident upon a constructive service by publication, it is without jurisdiction, and affords no bar to a suit to recover the land brought in the federal court of the district embracing the State. Hart v. Sanson, 110 U. S. 151.

In the case of D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. (U. S.) 165, it was held that the provision of the United States Constitution and act of Congress do not apply to judgments which are, in fact, rendered without the court having jurisdiction of the case and of the person of the defendant, but that such judgments are still to be regarded as foreign judgments when attempted to be enforced beyond the limits of the State where rendered. Mr. Edmund H. Bennett, in his edition of Story's Conflict of Laws (see sec. 599f), criticises the doctrine of this decision, because, as he alleges, it "might seem to imply that the record when presented was liable to contradiction upon any question affecting the jurisdiction of the court." He adds, "But as no such doctrine has yet been declared by that court, we should hesitate to believe they will ever come to a result which we regard so much at variance with well-established general principles; for, in order to admit evidence to contradict the recitals of the record, we are obliged to adopt a rule of presumption precisely opposite to that which we apply in ordinary judgments; we have to make every possible presumption against their conclusiveness, and virtually treat them all as foreign judgments, until the contrary is established to the satisfaction of a jury. If this rule is to be generally recognised, there will be no judgment from any of the American States when attempted to be enforced in any other of the States, where it will not be practicable by proper pleas to draw the validity of the whole judgment into controversy before the jury, and thus virtually nullify the provisions of the United States Constitution and the act of Congress in their favor. . . . We perceive no necessity for the adoption of any such rule of construction in regard to this class of judgments. All that is required to protect the rights of debtors or defendants in such cases, is to hold such judgments of no validity, unless acquiesced in by the defendant, until it appears by the record of such judgment that the court had jurisdiction both of the subject-matter and of the parties, and then treat the record as conclusive the same as that of any domestic judgment."

1 Hassell v. Hamilton, 33 Ala. 280; Rocco v. Hackett, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 579; Milne v. Van Buskirk, 9 Iowa, 558; Scott v. Pilkington, 2 Best & S. 11; Godard v. Gray, L. R. 6 Q. B. 139; Castrique v. Imrie, L. R. 4, H. L. 445.

Foreign judgments are said to be binding, although proceedings are pending but not decided, in the courts of the State where rendered to annul and set them aside. Gunn v. Howell, 35 Ala. 144; Indiana v. Helmer, 21 Iowa, 370; Barringer v. Hoyd, 27 Miss. 473; Grover v. Grover, 30 Mo. 400; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. De Wolf, 33 Pa. St. 45; Scott v. Pilkington, 2 Best & S. 11.

2 A State statute permitting such a defence has been held unconstitutional and void. Sweet v. Brackley, 53 Me. 346; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290.

3 Elizabethtown Savings Inst. v. Gerber, 34 N. J. Eq. 130.

As the original debt is not merged in a judgment rendered in a foreign court, such judgment may be used as evidence by either party in a suit on the original cause of action, without a formal allegation in the proceedings; and, if it settles the whole controversy between the parties, it is conclusive. N. Y., L. E. & W. Ry. Co. v. McHenry, 17 Fed. Rep. 414.

4 Elizabethtown Savings Institution v. Gerber, 34 N. J. Eq. 130.

The Constitution does not confer any new power upon States, but simply regulates the effect of their acknowledged jurisdiction over persons and things within their own territory. It does not make the judgment of the courts of sister States domestic judgments to all intents and purposes,<sup>3</sup> but simply gives a general validity, faith, and credit to them as evidence; and execution can issue upon them until after a new suit and judgment in the courts of the other States.<sup>4</sup>

The tendency of recent decisions is to restrict the force of foreign judgments, when they are relied upon as a cause of action in another State.<sup>5</sup> The doctrine of the American courts in relation to foreign judgment seems now to be that they are only prima facie evidence of the facts therein recited regarding the jurisdiction of the court,<sup>6</sup> but are conclusive upon the merits, and only be impeached for want of jurisdiction or fraud.<sup>6</sup>

Thus, a judgment of a foreign probate court, that certain persons were heirs-at-law of one A., deceased, and entitled by the laws of that State to inherit his real estate, was held not to be admissible in ejectment in Minnesota as proof of the death of A., or of inheritance under Minnesota laws. Morin v. St. Paul, Minneapolis, etc., Ry. Co., 33 Minn. 176.

<sup>1</sup> Shumway v. Stillman, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 447; Harrod v. Barrett, 1 Hall (N. Y.), 155; s. c., 2 Hall (N. Y.), 302; Wilson v. Niles, 2 Hall (N. Y.), 358; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 237; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 260; Benton v. Burgot, 10 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 240; Hoxie v. Wright, 2 Vt. 263; Bellows v. Ingham, 2 Vt. 575; Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 380.

<sup>2</sup> See D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. (U. S.) 165.

<sup>3</sup> See Dimick v. Brooks, 21 Vt. 569.

Foreign judgments carry with them none of the privileges or priorities that belong to them, in the courts of the State where they are rendered, but only those which the lex fori gives to them as foreign judgments. Wood v. Watkinson, 17 Conn. 500; McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312, 328, 329; Story, Conf. L. secs. 582, 609.

Where by the laws and practice of one State, a discharge in bankruptcy is a good defence to a judgment recovered subsequent to such discharge, but founded on a claim existing prior to the commencement of such bankruptcy proceedings, such discharge will be a good defence to an action on such judgment in another State, although the rule in the latter State regarding such judgments might be different. Haggerty v. Amory, 7 Allen (Mass.), 458. But such discharge will not be a defence where the rule in both States is that such discharge is no bar. Bradford v. Rice, 102 Mass. 472.

<sup>4</sup> See Arndt v. Arndt, 15 Ohio, 13; Vicker v. Beedy, 31 Me. 316; Price v. Hickok, 39 Vt. 292; Moulin v. Insurance Co., 4 Zab. (N. J.) 222; Gillett v. C., 23 Mo. 375; Trimble v. Longworth, 17 Ohio St. 439; Smith v. Smith, 17 Ill. 109; Pollard v. Wegener, 13 Wis. 569; J. v. Spencer, 15 Wis. 583; Ewer v. Coffin, 23 Cush. (Mass.) 23; Foster v. Glazener, 1 Ala. 396.

<sup>5</sup> See Carleton v. Bickford, 13 Vt. 100 (Mass.), 591; Bodurtha v. Goodrich, 13 Gray (Mass.), 508; Silver Lake Bank v. Harding, 5 Ohio, 545; Indiana v. Heister, 21 Iowa, 370; Lewis v. Wilder, 4 La. 574; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462; Boyd v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 131; Greene v. Sarmiento, 1 Pet. C. C. 74; Field v. G., 1 Pet. C. C. 155; Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 380; Shumway v. Stillman, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 447; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 237; Starbuck v. Murray, 5 W. 148 (N. Y.) 148; Davis v. Packard, 6 W. 327 (N. Y.) 327; Buttrick v. Allen, 8 Mass. 273; Pawling v. Bird's Ex'rs, 13 N. Y. 192; Rathbone v. Terry, 1 Vt. 73; Hitchcock v. Aicken, 1 Cain. (N. Y.) 460; Hoxie v. Wright, 2 Vt. 263; Bellows v. Ingham, 2 Vt. 575; Barney v. Parsons, 6 Har. & J. (Md.) 182, 2 Kent, 118, and Bank of Chenango v. Hyatt, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 570, n.

But this note does not seem to have been adapted by the supreme court of the United States. See Landes v. Brant, 10 U. S. 348.

<sup>6</sup> See Cummings v. Banks, 2 N. Y. 602; Noyes v. Butler, 6 N. Y. 613; Lazier v. Westcott, 26 N. Y. 152; Monroe v. Douglas, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 126. Compare Rankin v. Goddard, 54 Me. 28; Wood v. Watkinson, 17 Conn. 500; Wesch v. Sykes, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 19.

Such judgments are to be deemed

4. PENDENCY OF SUIT IN FOREIGN STATE. — It seems that the pendency of a suit in a foreign court cannot be set up as a defence in a subsequent suit;<sup>1</sup> and each State in the Union being foreign to every other, except as united for national purposes under the Constitution,<sup>2</sup> in this respect they are foreign countries, so that the mere pendency of a suit in the courts of another State cannot be pleaded in abatement.<sup>3</sup> until the contrary is established. Monroe v. Douglas, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 126; Ripple v. Ripple, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 386; Hall v. Odber, 11 East, 118; Alivon v. Furnival, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 277; Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 279; Houlditch v. Donegal, 2 Clark & Finn. 470; Arnott v. Redfern, 3 Bing. 353; Sinclair v. Fraser, Doug. 4, 52, 4 & 5, note 6; Walker v. Witter, Doug. 1. If they are founded on fraud, or pronounced by a court that has not acquired jurisdiction of the cause, they may be avoided. See Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 19, 20, 21; Ferguson v. Mahon, 11 Ad. & E. 179, 182; Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 279, 302; Ferguson v. Mahon, 3 Per. & Dav. 143; Bowles v. Orr, 1 Younge & C. 464; Story, Conf. L. sec. 544, 545-550, 602.

The question whether foreign judgments are to be deemed conclusive, whether the defendant is at liberty to go at large into the original merits, to show that the judgment ought to have been different upon the merits, although obtained bona fide, has been much discussed in England. See Kennedy v. Earl of Casillis, 2 Swanst. 325, 327, note; Boucher v. Lawson, Cas. T. Hard. 89; Reoch v. Gavvan, 1 Ves. 17; Walker v. Witter, Doug. 1, 6, n. 3; Herbert v. Cook, Willes 36, n.; Hall v. Odber, 11 East, 118; Bayley v. Edwards, 3 Swanst. 703, 711, 712; Phillips v. Hunter, 1 H. Black. 410; Galbraith v. Neville, Doug. 6, n. 3; Sinclair v. Fraser, Doug. 4, 5, n. 1; Alivon v. Furnival, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 277; Guianens v. Carroll, 1 Barn. & Ad. 499; Becquet v. McCarthy, 2 Barn. & Ad. 951; Tarleton v. Tarleton, 4 Maule & S. 21; Martin v. Nicolla, 3 Sim. 458; Bank of Australasia v. Harding, 19 Law Jour., C. P. 345; s. c., 9 C. B. 661; Houlditch v. Donegal, 8 Bligh, 301, 337-340; Henderson v. Henderson, 3 Hare, 100, 113, 115. But the doctrine may be said to be now well established there, that a foreign judgment is only prima-facie evidence upon the question whether the foreign court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter or the person of the defendant, or whether the judgment was regularly obtained, but that it is so far conclusive upon the defendant as to prevent him from denying that the promises upon which it was founded were ever made, or alleging that they were obtained by fraud of the plaintiff. It is also said that pleas which might have been filed to the original action cannot be pleaded to an action upon the judgment. See Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717; s. c., 4 Eng. L. & Eq. 252; Henderson v. Henderson, 6 Q. B. 288; Reimers v. Druce, 23 Beav. 149; De Coase Brissac v. Rathbone, 6 H. & N. 301; Vanquelin v. Bouard, 15 C. B. (N. S.) 341; Ricardo v. Garcias, 12 Clark & Finn. 368; Scott v. Pilkington, 2 Best & S. 11; Crawley v. Isaacs, 16 L. T. (N. S.) 529; Vallee v. Dumerque, 4 Emch. 290; Cowan v. Braidwood, 2 Scott, N. R. 138; Dogliani v. Crispin, L. R. 1 H. L. 301.

It is said that the rule that the judgment is to be prima facie evidence, would be a mere delusion if the defendant were permitted to question it by opening all or any of the original merits on his side, which, under such circumstances, would be equivalent to granting a new trial, that the defendant may impeach the original judgment, by showing that the court had no jurisdiction, that he never had notice of suit, that the judgment was procured by fraud, that upon its face it is founded upon mistake, or that it is irregular and bad by the local law, but that beyond this he cannot impugn the judgment. See Ferguson v. Mahon, 11 Ad. & E. 179, 182; Arnott v. Redfern, 2 Carr. & P. 88; s. c., 3 Bing. 353; Novelli v. Rossi, 2 Barn. & Ad. 757; Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686; Obicini v. Bligh, 8 Bing. 335; Martin v. Nicolla, 3 Sim. 458; Alivon v. Furnival, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 277; Stark. Ev.; pt. 2, sec. 67; Herbeus, tom. 2, lib. 1, tit. 3, de Conflictu, sec. 6.

1 Scott v. Seymour, 1 Hurl. & C. 219; Cox v. Mitchell, 7 C. B. (N. S.) 55; Ostell v. Lepage, 5 DeGex & S. 95; s. c., 10 Eng. L. & Eq. 255; Bayley v. Edwards, 3 Swanst. 703; Maule v. Murray, 7 T. R. 470; Russell v. Field, Stuart's Canada, 558.

2 Buckner v. Finley & Van Lear, 2 Pet. U. S. 586.

3 Bowne v. Joy, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 221; Salmon v. Wootton, 9 Dana (Ky.), 423; McJilton v. Love, 13 Ill. 486; Drake v. Brander, 8 Tex. 352; Seever v. Clement, 28 Md. 434; Smith v. Lathrop, 44 Pa. St. 326; Hatch v. Spofford, 22 Conn. 485; Goodall v. Marshall, 11 N. H. 99; Cook v. Litchfield, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 342.

But it seems that where a debtor has been sued by his creditor in one State, such suit will be a bar to a suit in another State by a person having a claim against such creditor, seeking to hold the debtor as a trustee.<sup>1</sup>

6. Penal Laws and Offences. — 1. TERRITORIAL LIMITATIONS IN CRIMINAL LAWS AND SENTENCES.—One nation cannot extend the penal laws of another,<sup>2</sup> such laws being strictly local and having no operation beyond the jurisdiction of the country in which they were enacted,<sup>3</sup> and crimes under them are cognizable and punishable exclusively in the country where they are committed. One nation neither has a right to punish crimes committed under the laws of another, nor is under any obligation to give notice of them, or to enforce any judgment rendered in such cases by the tribunals having authority over such crimes.<sup>4</sup>

The same rule applies to a suit pending in a United States court for a different district than the one in which the State in which the second action is instituted is situated. Walsh v. Durkin, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 99; Cook v. Lothfield, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 330; and vice versa White v. Whitman, 1 Curt. C. C. 494; Lyman v. Brown, 2 Curt. C. C. 559. Otherwise, however, where the first action is pending in the United States Circuit Court in which the State in which the second action is brought is situated, provided the circuit court has jurisdiction of the cause. Smith v. Atlantic Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2 Foster (N. H.), 21.

But when one of the actions is at law, and the other is in equity, neither will be cause for abatement. Hatch v. Spofford, 22 Conn. 485; Colt v. Partridge, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 570. And the same is true where both actions are at law, if the parties be reversed. Wadleigh v. Veazie, 3 Sumn. C. C. 165.

<sup>1</sup> See Merrill v. New England Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 249; Whipple v. Robbins, 97 Mass. 107; American Bank v. Rollins, 99 Mass. 313.

The same rule applies to actions in the federal and State courts. Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. (U. S.) 450.

<sup>2</sup> The Antelope, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 66. American courts will not recognize as binding the convictions of other lands. Whart., Conf. L. sec. 108; Story, Conf. L. sec. 91.

<sup>3</sup> Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338; Peterson v. Walsh, 1 Daly (N. Y.), 182. See Rafael v. Verelst., 2 W. Bl. 1058; Folliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Bl. 135.

<sup>4</sup> The Antelope, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 66, 123; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338, 340; State v. Knight, Taylor's (N. C.) Rep. 65; Commonwealth v. Green, 17 Mass. 515, 545, 546-548; Ogden v. Folliott, 3 T. R. 733, 734; Wolffe v. Oxholme, 6 M. & S. 99; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 119, 120; King of Two Sicilies v.

Willcox, 1 Sim. (N. S.) 310; Story, L. sec. 620; Kames, Eq., b. 3, ch. 1; Ersk. Inst. B. 1, tit. 2, p. 23; Pa. Droit Comm. 5, art. 1467; Bouhier de Bourg. ch. 34, p. 588; Matthæi, ad Pand. Lib. 48, tit. 20, secs. 17, 18. Compare Hertii Opera, de Collis. l. 4, Nos. 18-21, pp. 130-132 (ed. 1715); Voet, de Statut. sec. 4, ch. 2, n. 6, p. 1715; Rutherf. Inst., B. 2, ch. 9, § 1; Marten's Law of Nations, B. 3, ch. 22-25; Merlin, Répertoire, Somme sec. 5, nos. 5, 6, pp. 379-382.

Wharton criticises this doctrine, saying, "Plausible as is this theory of exclusive jurisdiction of courts of delicti, it is incompatible, it may at first be noticed, with the maintenance of that territorial supremacy which nations profess to protect. An Austrian, if pushed to its logical results, crossing over to Switzerland, for impunity Austrian papers, or organizing conspiracies against the Austrian crown, then, when the evil was done, could securely to his home, protected by territoriality, that the offence could only be punished in the place of its commission. The boundary lines between the United States, Canada, and the United States and those which separate the great European powers, would, in this view, be a cascade against which subjects could organize triumphant crime. Not only would particular sovereigns find their municipal laws in this way successfully but neighboring nations would be to cherish, within their borders, cold desperate criminals whom the sovereignty of the locus delicti could not reach, but after the commission of the crime leave the soil, and whom the sovereignty of their place of refuge could not touch, cause the sovereign of the locus delicti to lose its exclusive jurisdiction. Nor is it a. Attainder and Infamy. — The disabilities which attach to a sentence of attainder in one country do not follow the individual into another State.<sup>1</sup> And it has been held that a person convicted of an infamous crime in one State is not thereby rendered incompetent as a witness in another State.<sup>2</sup>

A law of one State, imposing a liability in the nature of a penalty, will not be enforced in the courts of another.<sup>3</sup>

2. WHEN CRIMES COMMITTED IN ONE COUNTRY WILL BE PUNISHED IN ANOTHER. — Notwithstanding the fact that penal laws are local, yet an offence may be committed in one sovereignty or State in violation of the laws of another. In such case, if the offender is afterwards found in the State against whose laws the offence was committed, he may be there punished according to the laws which he has violated.<sup>4</sup> might be punished, on the fiction that a ship is a part of the territory to which it belongs; but pirates, who own no country, could rove the seas with impunity, and blockade, in secure arrogance, every port in Christendom. In barbarous or semi-barbarous lands, also, in which there is no operative organization for the punishment of crime, no mercantile enterprise could be pursued; for each adventurer might prey upon his associates, even to the extent of murder or robbery, and return home prosperously to defy the law whose forms were so rigid that it could only punish offences committed on the home soil. So far, therefore, as concerns infra-territorial practice, the rule that the locus delicti has exclusive jurisdiction of the offence, is, no doubt, wise. But it is obvious that, as a principle of international law, it cannot be maintained without impairing that very territorial sovereignty which it is its vowed object to secure.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Story, Conf. L. sec. 620.

Continental jurists maintain a contrary doctrine, contending that the status of a person in his domicile follows him wherever he goes. See 1 Boullenois, obs. 4, pp. 64, 65; Hentii Opera, de Collis. Leg. sec. 4, n. 8, p. 124.

<sup>2</sup> Commonwealth v. Green, 17 Mass. 515, 540, 541, 546, 547. Compare State v. Candler, 3 Hawks. (N. C.) 393; Chase v. Blodgett, 10 N. H. 22.

<sup>3</sup> Winter v. Baker, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 432; 34 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 183; Paterson v. Baker, 34 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 180; Scott v. Roberts, 34 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 185.

Thus where the law of one State imposes a personal liability upon the stockholders of a corporation, by way of penalty, for the omission of duty enjoined by their charter, it cannot be enforced in the courts of another State. Bird v. Hayden, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 383; s. c., 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. (N. S.)

The liability of a stockholder resident in Tennessee for the debts of a foreign corporation, based upon the failure of the directors to make a certificate of the fact of payment of the capital stock, being highly penal in its nature, will not be enforced by the courts of Tennessee. Woods v. Wicks, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 40.

And it has been held that an Indiana statute giving a right to recover a penalty to one injured by an incorrect transmission of a telegraph message, has no application to a contract made in another State to send a message from that State into Indiana. Carnahan v. Western Union Tel. Co., 89 Ind., 526; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 175.

<sup>4</sup> See Adams v. People, 1 N. Y. 173; s. c., 3 Denio (N. Y.), 190; State v. Wyckoff, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 65; Commonwealth v. Gillespie, 7 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 469; Reg. v. Garrett, 6 Cox, C. C. 260.

Accessories. — By the common law, all accessories in treason and misdemeanors are principals, and, under the old rule, were to be tried where the guilty act took place; but by statute in most of the States he may now be tried by the court having jurisdiction of the principal felon. See Rex v. Ferguson, 2 Stark, N. P. C. 489; Whart., Cr. L. secs. 95, 97, 100, 103, 104, 210.

It has been held that where a person in one State employs an innocent agent in another State to commit a felony, he will be amenable to the laws of the latter. People v. Adams, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 190; affirming 1 N. Y. 173; Reg. v. Garrett, 6 Cox, C. C. 260; but that when the agent is personally responsible for the crime, the principal, who planned it, being absent from the State at the time of its commission, cannot be there tried for the same. State v. Wyckoff, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 69; State v. Moore, 6 Foster (N. H.), 448; State v. Knight, 1 Taylor (N. C.), 65; Ex parte Smith, 6 L. R. 57; State v. Chapin, 17 Ark. 561.

Co-conspirators. — In conspiracies each a. Continuing Offences.—In England that, wherever a felony or misdemeanor and completed in another, the venue may and that offences committed when travel through a county through which the passenger, car and larceny or embezzlement may there into which the spoils are brought.<sup>1</sup>

It has been said, that by the common United States, where goods are stolen by the thief into another, the latter county of the offence;<sup>2</sup> but that the States may extend jurisdiction to the county into which the goods are brought.<sup>3</sup>

The question as to the jurisdiction where a crime is begun in one country and terminated in another, or where the offender is struck in one country and the victim in another, is much discussed in England and America, and the result is fluctuating and unsatisfactory.<sup>4</sup> The United States have held that such jurisdiction is conferred by special statute.<sup>5</sup>

The general principle that a person who commits a crime in one country is liable for its consequences in another has been frequently affirmed.<sup>6</sup>

conspirator is responsible for the crime to the jurisdiction in which an overt act is done by any of the co-conspirators. See Commonwealth v. Corlies, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 575; Rex v. Ferguson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 489; Whart., Conf. L. secs. 277-284, 2350.

Attempts to commit a Crime.—At common law, attempts to commit a crime are cognizable at the place of the crime; and such is to-day the law in cases of conspiracies where the conspiracy is the gist of the offence; but the parties are also all responsible at the place where the offence is committed. See People v. Griffin, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 427; Commonwealth v. Blanding, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 304; People v. Rathbun, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 533; United States v. Worral, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 388; Rex v. Girdwood, 1 Leach, 142; Rex v. Burdett, 4 B & A. 95.

<sup>1</sup> See 7 Geo. iv. c. 64, secs. 12, 13; 1 Vict. c. 36, sec. 37.

<sup>2</sup> Commonwealth v. Uprichard, 3 Gray (Mass.), 434; Butler's Case, 13 Co. 53; 3 Inst. 113.

<sup>3</sup> See People v. Burke, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 129; Hemmaker v. State, 12 Mo. 453; State v. Seay, 3 Stew. (N. J.) 123.

As between the different States of the Union, this jurisdiction is held to exist at common law by some of the courts. State v. Ellis, 3 Conn. 186; Ferrill v. Commonwealth, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 153; Commonwealth v. Holder, 9 Gray (Mass.), 7; Cummings v. State, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 340; State v. Brown, 1 Hayw. (N. C.) 100; Common- wealth v. State, 36 Ohio, 435 doctrine.

<sup>5</sup> Binn. (1 Vr. (N. J.) 5 (N. J.) 5 jurisdiction Simmons 619; Simmons 461; Beal 461.

It has been held that a person who steals in one State and carries the goods into another, is liable in the latter for the crime. United States v. Bartlett, 19 Me. 181; Richard, 3

<sup>4</sup> See C 426, 500;

<sup>5</sup> United States v. Armistead, 12 jurisdiction See United

A statute in a case has been held. See Tyler v. Commonwealth, 12

ple v. Bur v. Seay, 3 State, 12 <sup>6</sup> Thus side of th

3. JURISDICTION TO TRY OFFENCES. — It has been maintained that the jurisdiction to try a person for a crime belongs to the country where he is arrested. Where the crime is committed in the country where the arrest is made, there can then be no question as to the unqualified jurisdiction of the court; but in all other instances to the general proposition must be added the following qualifications: (1) The defendant must owe allegiance to the sovereign of the country where the arrest was made, and the offence be against its laws; (2) Such jurisdiction must be necessary for the prevention of crime, or (3) is necessary to protect or indemnify parties injured; (4) as to offences committed in foreign civilized lands, the country of arrest has jurisdiction only of offences distinctively against its sovereignty.<sup>1</sup>

7. Pleadings and Proofs. — 1. FOREIGN LAWS, ETC., MUST BE PLEADED. — Foreign laws must be averred and proved as facts.<sup>2</sup>

and killing a person on the American side, — "he amenable to the laws of the place: the man died. United States v. Sumn. C. C. 485; State v. Wyck, 1 N. J. 68; Commonwealth v. Mon, 101 Mass. 1; Story, Conf. L. sec. Whart., Conf. L. sec. 877; 1 Hale 475; but not until he is personally in the jurisdiction of such country. v. Garrett, 6 Cox, C. C. 260. 1 where one man struck another a blow in Canada, and the latter died in prison, he was held to be answerable in Michigan. Tyler v. People, 8 Mich. 326. 2 a person pollutes a stream in one way, and thereby creates a nuisance in another, he will be liable under the laws of the latter. Stillman v. White Rock Co., 104 N. H. 538; Thompson v. Tr., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 59; Rex v. Bulwer, 1 B. & A. 175, 176; Bulwer's Case, 7 B. & C. 36; Com. Dig., tit. "Action," n. 3, Hawk. ch. 25, par. 27. And it has been held that the author of a libel uttered in one country, and published in another, even though he be absent from it at the time, is triable in the country where it is published. Commonwealth v. Rogers, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 304; Rex v. East, 65.

<sup>1</sup> See Whart., Conf. L., secs. 881-902. <sup>2</sup> Armendiaz v. Serna, 40 Tex. 291; Atterson v. Carrell, 60 Ind. 128; Graves v. Champion, 103 N. H. 33; Trasher v. De Laistre, 2 Conn. 517; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193, 219. But where the proof consists of the parol evidence of experts as to the existence or prevailing construction of a statute, or as to any point of unwritten law, the jury is to determine what the foreign law is. Ingraham v. Hart, 11 Ohio, 255; Moore v. Gwynn, 5 Ired. (N. C.) L. 187; Dyer v. Smith, 12 Conn. 384; Holman v. King, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 384; Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 255. Questions of the competency of the evidence and of the qualifications of the expert must be passed upon by the court as in any other case. Where the evidence admitted consists entirely of a written document, statute, or judicial opinion, the question of construction and effect is for the court. Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 255; Owen v. Boyle, 15 Me. 147; People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349; State v. Jackson, 2 B. Mon.

(Ky.) 306; Territt v. Woodruff, 19 Vt. 182; Hosford v. Nichols, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 220; Douglas v. Brown, 2 Dow. & C. 171; Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163; Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 175.

It is said that foreign laws are to be proved as facts to the court, and not as facts to the jury, because all matters of law are properly referable to the court, and the object of the proof of what the foreign laws are being to enable the court to instruct the jury what, in point of law, is the result of the foreign law to be applied to the matters in controversy. The trial court are to decide what is proper evidence of the laws of a foreign country; and when they are properly proven, the court is to judge of their applicability to the case on trial. Leavenworth v. Brockway, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 201; Robinson v. Dauchy, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 20; Trasher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234, 242; Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193, 219. But where the proof consists of the parol evidence of experts as to the existence or prevailing construction of a statute, or as to any point of unwritten law, the jury is to determine what the foreign law is. Ingraham v. Hart, 11 Ohio, 255; Moore v. Gwynn, 5 Ired. (N. C.) L. 187; Dyer v. Smith, 12 Conn. 384; Holman v. King, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 384; Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 255. Questions of the competency of the evidence and of the qualifications of the expert must be passed upon by the court as in any other case. Where the evidence admitted consists entirely of a written document, statute, or judicial opinion, the question of construction and effect is for the court. Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 255; Owen v. Boyle, 15 Me. 147; People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349; State v. Jackson, 2 B. Mon.

2. PROOF GOVERNED BY LEX FORI. — The admissibility of evidence and its method of introduction are governed by the lex fori, and not by the lex loci or lex loci domicilii.<sup>1</sup>

2 Cr. (U. S.) 187; Bremer v. Freeman, 10 Moore, P. C. 306; Di Sora v. Phillips, 10 H. L. Cas. 624. Mr. Bennett, in his edition of Story's "Conflict of Laws" (section 638a), criticises this doctrine. He says that the general proposition that "proof, of general laws in a foreign country, is addressed exclusively to the court, will not be found to be confirmed by the general practice in those countries where jury trials prevail. There is no doubt the courts are to judge of what the law is, its force, construction, and application to the facts. But where there is any controversy in regard to the existence of any particular rule of law, as there more commonly is when it is referred to the testimony of experts, the ultimate fact must be referred to the jury, and any instructions necessary to be given by the court must be given hypothetically."

It devolves upon the party interested to claim the benefit of the foreign laws, to show, by appropriate pleading and proof, what is the law of the place where the contract was made, or was to be performed. In the absence of such affirmative showing, the courts of the State where the suit is brought will apply the law of such State to the contract. Bean v. Briggs, 4 Iowa, 464; Whidden v. Seelye, 40 Me. 247; Dakin v. Pomeroy, 9 Gill (Md.) 1; Fonke v. Fleming, 13 Md. 392; Allen v. Watson, 2 Hill (S. C.) 319; Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203. This is because it will be presumed, until the contrary is shown, that the foreign law is the same as that where the suit is brought. Russell v. Kitchen, 3 Irish C. L. Rep. 613. And where a contract would be a legal one if made under the lex fori, it will be taken to have been so where it was made, unless the party impeaching its validity shows that, by the lex loci, it was illegal and void. Ellis v. Park, 8 Tex. 205.

This presumption as to the laws of another State or country applies to contracts relating to personal estates and as to commercial matters particularly, but does not extend to statute law. Langdon v. Young, 33 Vt. 136; Morrissey v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 47 Mo. 521; Ellis v. Maxson, 19 Mich. 186; Wright v. Delafield, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 498; Chase v. Alliance Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.), 311.

Where a defendant relies on a foreign discharge in bankruptcy, or on his having entitled himself to a certificate in bankruptcy, as a bar by which the cause of action is abated, he must set forth, not only the statute, but the proceedings and the prior proceedings in the granting of it. James v. Robt. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S.

A declaration of what is the rate of interest was given. Sur Marsh. (Ky.) 174. of interest allowed of the United States must be produced. Wash. C. C. 253.

It is said that, a New York statute for death caused by territorial effect, on account of a State, the existence that State must. Debevoise v. New R. R. Co., 98 N. Y. 683.

The New York to be brought in the interest does not; a New Jersey corporation in the New York court in the although he might. Merchants' Loan Hun (N. Y.), 362.

1 See Don v. Finn, 1, 14-16; Y. & Finn, 577, 580; F. J. R. Co., 3 H.

The reason is the evidence and the matters attaching of parties under other instruments of procedure, and governed by the law of the country where. Lord Brougham Clark & Finn, 570.

However, this is difficulties; and down any general to all cases of evidence points there is a instance, on the chant's book-accounts favor. See Cogan 217; Starkis, Ev. 1 kins, tom. 7, Diss. tii Opera, de Collis

OF.—In the proof of foreign laws and deeds, and other instruments, the general best testimony or proof shall be produced: a thing admits of.<sup>1</sup>

Col. & For.
Paul Voet,
6 (ed. 1715).
tit. "Books tries certitracts and admissible istence and others not.
(U. S.) 378;
artin (La.),
ven & F. R.
Thornton,
Braybrook,
Braybrook, 6
Hartley, 1

of person-country, it ty to admit their valid-would estab-
the testator.
le to prove a made and ator's domi-foundation
Sobry v. De-
195; Yates
44, 574. n, 5 Clark &
I contend, in of evidence
; and yet it principle in t, though the e country, it to the laws
y. Look at xample. In ; probative;
se of thirty n selves. In required for ty are suffi-to be ascer-e particular be a previous be no such e case must
of evidence.
he question to be given ried by the e law is set ient. Again, umed or not hat country;
the admissi-

bility of evidence, and that clearly brings us home to the statute of limitations. . . . It is not contended here that the practice of England is applicable to Scotland, but these are illustrations of the inconvenience of applying one set of rules of law, to an instrument which is to be enforced by a law of a different kind." And see also Lord Brougham's opinion in Yates v. Thomson, 3 Clark & Finn. 577, 580.

1 The manner of proving foreign laws, etc., varies according to circumstances; but in no case will such a species of testimony be required, as the institutions and usages of the foreign country do not admit of; and in no case will testimony be required which is shown to be unattainable. See Isabella v. Pecot, 2 La. An. 391; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cr. (U. S.) 237.

As a general rule, authenticated copies of the written laws, or other public instruments of foreign countries, are expected to be produced, and are sufficient. But if on application a foreign country, for any reason, should refuse to authenticate its edicts, and the like, then inferior proofs would be admissible. Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cr. (U. S.) 237, 238. But it has been said that where a country has promulgated a foreign law or ordinance of a public nature, such promulgation is of itself sufficient evidence of the actual existence and provisions of such law or ordinance. Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 39.

Foreign laws are usually required to be verified by the sanction of an oath, unless verified in some equally satisfactory manner. Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517; Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480; Dyer v. Smith, 12 Conn. 384; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cr. (U. S.) 237. The most usual methods of verifying a foreign law or judgment, or instrument of record, is by an exemplification of a copy with the great seal of the State attached; by a copy proved to be a true copy by some one who has examined and compared it with the original; or by the certificate of an officer of the foreign State duly authorized by law to give the certificate, which certificate must itself be duly authenticated. See Packard v. Hill, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 411; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cr. (U. S.) 238. The certificate of a deputy county recorder to the official character of an acting justice of the peace taking a deposition, must be tested by the laws of the State or Territory where taken. Fredericks v. Davis, 3 Montana, 251. The legislatures of many of the States of the Union have provided by special enactments that printed copies of the laws of other States purporting to be published by authority, shall be prima facie evidence of such laws. See Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. (U. S.) 400; Compere v. Jernegan, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 375. In some of the States they are admitted without the authority of a special statute. Lord v. Staples, 3 Foster (N. H.), 449; Emery v. Berry, 8 Foster (N. H.), 486; Barkman v. Hopkins, 6 English, 157. Other States hold that the printed statutes are not admissible, but that the only evidence of a foreign law which can be admitted, is an exemplified copy properly certified. Packard v. Hill, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 411; Chanoine v. Fowler, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 173; Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517; Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480; Bailey v. McDowell, 2 Harring (Del.) 34; Van Buskirk v. Muloch, 3 Harrison (N. J.), 184; State v. Twitty, 2 Hawks (N. C.), 441; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cr. (U. S.) 236.

The public seal of a foreign sovereign, when affixed to a writing purporting to be a written law or judgment, proves itself. Griswold v. Pitcairn, 2 Conn. 85; United States v. Johns, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 416; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475;

Boullenois I for the govern such contracts the place whe is to govern a cerns the pro contract, and I that is to say, solemnities or law of the plac

CONFLICT OF LAWS. Of Law Local Contractors.

the validity of a contract is to be determined where it is made,<sup>1</sup> unless it appears on its

h forms the bat is called

The law of govern as to form of the law has the things subject of the action is to to contracts. When the fact admits to not spring the contract, the state and the law which which his Sixthly, In which arise he contract he place of venthly, In property, of antly made, ntract is to which arise contracting ntract valid ecision, but purely acci- is case the rights arise have other- ie rules are contestation a domestic iction over a questions any clauses the accom- rdinarily to . § 240, pp. ondict des om. 7, § 70.

356; Evans
Iriswold w.
535; s. c.
Golden, 141
Miss. 801;
; Smith w.
79; Bliss w.
w. Stevens,
ker, 1 C. E. ve Machine
567; s. c., 8
9; Armour
24; Walker
02; Marvin
410; s. c., ep. 418; 24
Ketcham. 8

Johns. (N. Y.) 189; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338; Northup v. Foot, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 248; Crosby v. Berger, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 538; Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. (3 Const.) 266; Touro v. Cassin, 1 Nott. & M. (S. C.) 173; Shelton v. Marshall, 16 Tex. 344; Bainbridge v. Wilcocks, Bald. C. C. 536; Camfranque v. Burnell, 1 Wash. C. C. 340; Courtois v. Carpenter, 1 Wash. C. C. 376; Webster v. Massey, 2 Wash. C. C. 157; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. C. C. 313; Morgan v. New Orleans, Mobile & S. R. R. Co., 2 Wood C. C. 244; Nicolls v. Rogers, 2 Paine C. C. 437.

Thus, by the law of New Jersey, upon a conditional sale of chattels followed by delivery of possession to the vendee, the reservation of title in the vendor, until the contract price is paid, is valid, as against creditors of a bona fide purchaser from the vendee, unless the vendor has conferred upon the vendee inducia of title beyond the mere possession, or has forfeited his rights of conduct, which the law regards as fraudulent; but by the law of Pennsylvania the reservation of title in the vendor upon such a conditional sale, is valid as between the parties, but is invalid as against creditors of the vendee, or bona fide purchasers from him. Hence, where S. purchased from the M. S. Co. a safe on credit, under a contract that the safe was to be the property of the company until the contract-price was paid, the purchase being made at the company's office in Philadelphia, and the safe delivered there to a carrier to be transferred to a town in New Jersey where S. resided, and subsequently S. sold the safe to N., and delivered possession to him in the town where he resided, N. being a bona fide purchaser, and paying the purchase-money without a knowledge of the contract between S. and the M. S. Co., in trover by the M. S. Co. against N. to recover the safe, the court held (1) that the contract of purchase by N. having been made in New Jersey, the legal effect of such contract, and his rights under it, were determined by the laws of that State; and (2) that N., by his purchase, acquired only such title as his vendor had when the property was taken into New Jersey, and became subject to the laws of that State, and that therefore the title to the safe was in the company. Marvin Safe Co. v. Norton, 48 N. J. L. 410; 2 C., 7 Alt. Rep. 418; 5 Cent. Rep. 341; 24 Cent. L. J. 161.

The general rule, that the validity and effect of a contract are to be determined by the law of the place where it is made, is subject to some exceptions; to wit, (1).

face that it was to be performed, or was made, in reference to the laws of some other place, in which case it will be governed by the laws of the place of the performance.<sup>1</sup>

The nature, validity, and interpretation of contracts are to be governed by the lex loci contractus;<sup>2</sup> but remedies, by the

No nation is bound to recognize or enforce contracts injurious to its own citizens. (2) The enforcement by one nation of contracts made under the laws of another, rests on the principles of comity, which cannot be so far extended as to violate the positive legislation of the nation called on to enforce such contracts. (3) When a contract which violates the revenue laws of the country where it was made comes before the courts of another country, those courts will not take notice of the foreign revenue laws. Ivey v. Lalland, 42 Miss. 444.

The general rule of the jus gentium is that in regard to questions of minority or majority, competency or incompetency, incapacities incident to coverture, guardianship, emancipation, and other personal qualities and disabilities, the law of the place where the contract is made, or the act done, furnishes the rule of decision. Huey's Appeal, 1 Grand (Pa.), Cas. 51. Thus the law of Ohio, making females of full age when they arrive at the age of eighteen years, enables them, while domiciled in Ohio, to make a valid contract of sale of their personal property in Pennsylvania. Huey's Appeal, 1 Grant (Pa.), Cas. 51.

The fact that a foreign contract, valid where it was made, is not recorded in pursuance of the law of the place where it is enforced, affects the operation only, and not the validity. Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich (S. C.), Eq. 187.

The sufficiency of the consideration of a contract is not a matter of remedy or procedure governed by the law of the forum, but belongs to the substance of the contract, and must be determined by the law of the place of the contract. Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124; s. c., 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

It has been held that where a note of a married woman, executed by her for necessities, without a place of payment being named in the note, in a State in which such contract is obligatory, will be enforced in the State in which such contracts, if made there, would not be obligatory. Griswold v. Golding (Ky.), 3 S. W. Rep. 535; s. c., 24 Cent. L. J. 419.

The validity of a contract under the statute of frauds is to be decided by the proved law of the place of the contract. Forward v. Harris, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 338. And it is said that, whether a purchase of goods be fraudulent as against the vendor, depends on the lex loci contractus. Arnold v. Shade, 3 Phila. (Pa.) 82.

The rule of damages to be recovered on a breach of contract is a part of the law to which the injured party is entitled. It is to be governed by the lex loci contractus. Consequa v. Willings, Pet. C. C. 22; fray v. Dennis, 2 Wash. C. C. 253. The effect of a release to one of two debtors is governed by the lex loci contractus. Greenwald v. Kaster (Pa.), 3 Weekly Rep. of Cases, 327.

The New York law relieving a tenant who has had to abandon untenable premises, for liability to pay rent, does not apply in an action there for rent of premises situated in another State. The common law is presumed to prevail there. The statute is no defence unless duly pleaded. Graves v. Cameron, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 178.

The adjustment of a general average is governed only by the lex loci contractus. Lenox v. United Insurance Co., 3 Cas. (N. Y.) 178.

Where a contract was made in England, the currency of which is the representative of gold, a judgment upon it must be given in terms of the value of the gold in legal-tender. Benners v. Clemens, 58 Pa. St. 24. It has been held that a foreigner contracting with the government of Virginia, during the paper-money period, is bound by the statute of that State establishing the value of the currency. Commonwealth v. Merchants, 3 Call (Va.), 122.

For peculiar and unusual cases in which the application of the law of the place of the contract has been a question, see Russell v. Wiggim, 2 Story, C. C. 5; L. Rep. 533; York v. Wist, 16 Haz. Pa. Reg. 153; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124; s. c., 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

1 Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Child (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109; Remer, 8 Am. L. Reg. 654; Shepherd v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103; Lee v. Leck, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; s. c., 2 (N. Y.) Pr. 275; Cox v. United States, Pet. (U. S.) 172; Bank of the United States v. Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 32; Andrews v. Pond, 11 (U. S.) 65; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 (U. S.) 258; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 C. C. 465; Willings v. Consequa, C. C. 301.

2 Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 9 C. C. 406. Compare Payson v. Withers, C. C. 269.

lex fori.<sup>1</sup> The rights of the parties are governed by the lex loci.<sup>2</sup>

A contract by a resident of one State, made and to be performed in another, is governed by the lex loci contractus as regards its validity and construction, and not by the lex fori where remedy is sought for a breach.<sup>3</sup> And where a contract is to be performed partly in one country and partly in another, each portion is to be interpreted according to the laws of the country where it is to be performed.<sup>4</sup>

In two cases only can foreign laws affect the contracts of American citizens: (1) when they reside or trade in a foreign country, and (2) when the contract plainly referring to a foreign country for its execution adopts and recognizes the lex loci.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Bank of the United States v. Donnelly, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 362; Wilcox v. Hunt, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Hinkley v. Marean, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; Willard v. Dorr, 3 Mason, C. C. 91; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 474; Rodgers v. Nicolls, 2 Paine, C. C. 437; Smith v. Atwood, 3 McL. C. C. 545; Matheson v. Crawford, 4 McL. C. C. 540; Broadhead v. Noyes, 9 Mo. 56; Dorsey v. Hardesty, 9 Mo. 157; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338.

It is only in ascertaining the rights and liabilities of the parties that the law of the place where the contract is made governs: the remedy is governed by the law of the forum. If the liability of the party, ascertained by the law of the State where it was made, is equitable, it can be enforced, in a State where legal and equitable remedies are distinct, only in equity, notwithstanding it might, in the State where made, have been enforced at law. Burchard v. Dunbar, 82 Ill. 450.

<sup>2</sup> Alexandria Canal Co. v. Swann, 5 How. (U. S.) 83.

<sup>3</sup> Williams v. Carr, 80 N. C. 204.

Thus, an agreement made in Alabama to deliver lumber in Georgia, for the building of a house there, is governed by the Georgia mechanics' lien laws, and the fact that the contractor is a citizen of Alabama does not prevent him from invoking those laws. Thurman v. Kyle, 71 Ga. 628. And in an action against an attaching officer or creditor for the conversion of personal property attached as that of the seller under a contract of sale which, although written in one State, was executed, delivered, and recorded in another State, where the property was at the time, the rights of the seller are to be settled by the law of such other State. Ames v. McCamper, 124 Mass. 85.

A contract made in one State to collect demand on shares, which is to be carried into effect in another State, will not be enforced in the latter State, though valid if made there, where it is illegal in the State in which entered into. Blackwell v. Webster (U. S., D. C.), 29 Fed. Rep. 614; s. c., 24 Cent. L. J. 397.

Whether a time-note given in New Hampshire by a New Hampshire debtor to a Massachusetts creditor has the effect of payment pro tanto, is determinable by the law of New Hampshire. Gilman v. Stevens, 63 N. H. 342.

On a bill of lading issued in New York for goods to be delivered in Pennsylvania the New York law governs. Brooke v. New York, L. E., etc., R. Co. (Pa.), 1 Cent. Rep. 123. And the effect of the indorsement and delivery of a private warehouse receipt for goods stored in another State, is to be determined by the laws of the latter State. Hallgarten v. Oldham, 135 Mass. 1, 7; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 433.

In Louisiana, it is held, that where a contract is entered into in one place, to be executed in another, there are two loci contractus,—the locus celebrati contractus and the locus solutionis; and the laws of the former govern the interpretation, nature, and validity of the contract; those of the latter, its performance. Fontenot v. Soileau, 2 La. An. 774.

<sup>4</sup> Pomeroy v. Ainsworth, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 118.

But it has been held that where a contract is made by a common carrier in one State to transport goods from that State into another, and the goods are lost, the rights of the parties are governed by the law of the State in which the loss happens. Gray v. Jackson, 51 N. H. 9.

<sup>5</sup> Searight v. Calbraith, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 325.

A contract made in one State is not affected by a discharge of the debtor under the insolvent laws of another State, in which the debtor resides. That the law was in force when the contract was made, does not affect the question. Cook v.

The laws which subsist at the time and place of the making of a contract, if it is to be there performed, enter into and form a part of the contract; and this is so whether such laws affect the validity, construction, discharge, or enforcement,<sup>1</sup> provided they can be shown; but if those laws are not in evidence, the courts must apply the rule of the law of the jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

The law of the country, where a contract is made, is the law of the contract, no matter where performance is demanded; and if the contract be discharged by the lex loci contractus, such discharge will be regarded wherever performance is demanded.

a. What deemed the Place of Contract.—The question, what law governs a contract, depends, theoretically at least, upon the intention of the contracting parties. An agreement to perform an act at a particular place is made with reference to that place, and an agreement to perform an act without designating a place for performance is presumed to be made with reference to the law of the place at which the agreement was made; and such presumptions are conclusive.<sup>3</sup> If not made with reference to the law of the place where it is made, or of the place where it is to be performed, being forbidden by both, the law of the place where it is made governs as to its invalidity.<sup>4</sup>

Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295. Vide, infra, 11, "EFFECT OF FOREIGN DISCHARGES IN BANKRUPTCY."

<sup>1</sup> Roberts v. Cocke, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 207; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 314.

<sup>2</sup> The Scotland, 105 U. S. 24; Champion v. Wilson, 64 Ga. 184.

Thus, a contract made in New York, and to be there performed, is to be enforced according to the law of New York; but the law of that State must be put in evidence. Champion v. Wilson, 64 Ga. 184.

<sup>3</sup> Green v. Sarmiento, Pet. C. C. 74; Willings v. Consequa, Pet. C. C. 301; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; Poe v. Duck, 5 Md. 1; Roach v. St. Louis Type Foundry (Mo.), 3 West. Rep. 186.

<sup>4</sup> Green v. Sarmiento, Pet. C. C. 74; a. c., 3 Wash. C. C. 17; Webster v. Massey, 2 Wash. C. C. 157; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. C. C. 313; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Willings v. Consequa, Pet. C. C. 301; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; Poe v. Duck, 5 Md. 1.

It has been said that the general doctrine, that a defence or discharge, good by the law of the place of the contract, is good everywhere, is subject to several qualifications, one of which is that the discharge or defence must not be of such character that to recognize it would conflict with the duty of the State where it is sought to be enforced towards its own citizens, to recognize it. The laws of sovereignty have no extra-territorial vigor, and are enforced elsewhere only upon considerations of public policy, and these always yield to those of the place of performance, which demand of every State the protection of its own citizens against the unwarrantable acts of a foreign State. Gebbard v. Canada S. Ry. Co., 11 C. C. 416; a. c., 1 Fed. Rep. 387; L. J. 352; 9 Rep. 203. Compare U. S. 527.

<sup>5</sup> Hyatt v. Bank of Kentucky (Ky.) 193; De Sobry v. De Laist & J. (Md.) 191.

Where a party's residence is in one State, and his place of business in another, the presumption is that his contracts are made at his place of business, rather than at his place of residence. Varick v. Cr. Ch. (N. J.) 128. But the fact that a higher rate of interest is allowed by the law of the place of the making of the contract, specified therein, is evidence of an intention of the parties to contract with reference to the law of the place of making. New England Mortgage Security Co. v. Vander, 28 Fed. Rep. 265.

<sup>6</sup> Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 100. Thus, where a contract has been made without reference to the laws of the place where it was made, or to the law of the place of performance, and a rate of interest is reserved, forbidden by the laws of the place where the contract was made, it is concealed under the name of exchange, in order to avoid the law against it. The question is not which law is to be applied in executing the contract, but which

Where a contract is delivered,<sup>1</sup> or first becomes a binding obligation upon the parties, is deemed the place of contract for the purpose of distinguishing what law governs.<sup>2</sup>

Where negotiations for a contract are carried on between two parties living in different States, partly by mail and partly through an agent of one of them, the contract is made in that State in which it first took effect as a binding obligation.<sup>3</sup> side the fate of the security on an agreement which neither will execute. Unquestionably it must be the law of the State where the agreement was entered into, and the instrument taken to secure its performance. A contract of this kind cannot stand on the same principles with bona fide agreements, which are permitted by the lex loci contractus, and will even be enforced there if the party is found within its jurisdiction; but the same rule cannot be applied to contracts forbidden by its laws, and designed to evade them. In such cases the legal consequences of such an agreement must be decided by the law of the place where the contract was made. If void there, it is void everywhere. De Wolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 383; Dewar v. Span, 3 Durnf. & E. 425.

The mere fact that a contract is invalid where made, but valid elsewhere, does not of itself authorize the presumption that its performance is to be abroad, and that it is made with reference to the foreign law. Evans v. Kittrell, 33 Ala. 449; Augusta Ins. Co. v. Morton, 3 La. An. 417.

<sup>1</sup> Butler v. Myer, 17 Ind. 77.

<sup>2</sup> Waldron v. Ritchings, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 288; s. c., 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 359.

Thus, where the plaintiff, being in New York, agreed with defendant, the manager of an opera in Philadelphia, to go there and make her début, she to be assured, if she did not fail in the estimation of the public and the press, of an engagement upon terms specified in the negotiation between the parties, it was held that the contract was not made in New York, but in Philadelphia, upon her fulfilling the test of success. Waldron v. Ritchings, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 288; s. c., 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 359.

The contract of a travelling agent, which required ratification by his principal, is presumed to have been made at the place where the ratification was given. Shuenfeldt v. Junkermann, 20 Fed. Rep. 357.

Thus where B., a New York liquor-dealer, delivered on steamboat at New York, liquors for A. in Rhode Island, in accordance with an order given by A. in Rhode Island to B's agent there, which agent had no authority to make sales, but only to take orders, which B. filled or not as he saw fit, — the court held that the sale was consummated in New York. Mack v. Lee, 13 R. I. 293. See Backman v. Jenks, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 468; Rindskopf v. De Ruyter, 39 Mich. 1. And where an order for goods is taken by the agent of a New York house, from a buyer in Vermont, and forwarded to the New York house, and the goods were shipped to the buyer, who was to pay the carrier's charges, the contract is regarded as a New York contract, notwithstanding the seller has reserved the right to reject any order after its receipt. Engs. v. Priest, 65 Iowa, 232.

Where the residence of the payee of a note, dated in West Virginia, and made payable to a resident thereof, does not appear, the note will be treated as a West Virginia contract. Heflebower v. Detrick, 27 W. Va. 16. And the State in which a note was made payable, and where it was delivered in consummation of a bargain, is the place of contract, though it was executed in another State. Johnston v. Gawtry, 83 Mo. 339.

<sup>3</sup> Waldron v. Ritchings, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 288; s. c., 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 359.

A promissory note written in Maine, but signed in Massachusetts, by citizens there, and then returned by mail to the payee in Maine, is a note made in Maine, and to be construed by the laws thereof; so where one of the makers of such a note, thus written and signed, was a married woman who signed it as surety for her husband, and by the laws of Massachusetts she could not thus bind herself there, the note is to be construed by the laws of Maine, which authorize her to contract for any lawful purpose. Bell v. Packard, 69 Me. 105.

A contract to indemnify a party for advances made in another State, is an undertaking to replace the money at that place, and is governed by the law thereof. Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 635; York v. Wistar (Pa.), 16 Haz. Pa. Reg. 153.

The right of a consignee who has made advances in excess of the amount realized by the subsequent sale to recover back the excess, is to be regarded as a contract of the place where the money was advanced. Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101; and if he is a citizen of that State, a discharge of the consignor, under the insolvent law of another State, will not operate

An instrument for the payment of money, executed in one State, but payable in another, is governed by the law of the place of payment.<sup>1</sup> And inasmuch as the contract of a drawee to pay the bill upon non-acceptance, not at the drawee's business, but where it was drawn, the drawer's liability is to be determined by the law of the place where the bill was upon the debt. Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295. And where, by a contract in Mississippi between a party residing there, and the agent of a factor residing in Louisiana, the latter is bound to apply the proceeds of cotton delivered in Mississippi to be sold in Louisiana to certain claims of third persons, the rights of the parties are governed by the laws of Mississippi. Oliver v. Lake, 3 La. An. 78. The agents of a New York insurance company, at the request of its Canadian agent, insured a Canadian vessel, the premium note being made payable in Canada, and the policy delivered there: the contract was held to be a Canadian, not a New York, contract. In re State of Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 109.

Where the parties to a gambling transaction to purchase stocks, bonds, and grain in other States, both resided in one State, and deliveries were to be made in the State where they resided, the law of that State will govern, in an action by the broker, for money advanced. Stewart v. Schall (Md.), 3 Cent. Rep. 509.

An agreement by the consignor to indemnify his consignees residing in another State against liability by their having voluntarily become security to release his vessel from attachment, is to be regarded as a contract to be governed by the law of the latter place: whether their becoming security was authorized, or, being authorized, was subsequently ratified by him, the result in this respect would be the same. Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 635; Conseque v. Fanning, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 587; Fanning v. Conseque, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; disapproving, Martin v. Franklin, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 125; Scofield v. Day, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 102; Adams v. Cordis, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 260; Grant v. Healey, 3 Sumn. C. C. 523, 2 L. Rep. 113. And where A., residing in Philadelphia, consigned goods to B., residing in New York, and drew on B., promising to pay him any balance not covered by the proceeds of the goods, and B. accepted and paid the bill, which exceeded the amount of sales, A. was held bound to reimburse B. in New York. Woodhull v. Wagner, Hald. C. C. 296.

In absence of contrary stipulation, a commission merchant's account for advances to a customer in another State on consignments to be made, is payable and garnishable at the merchant's residence. Bush v. Nance, 61 Miss. 237.

1 Warren v. Lynch, 5 Johns. 239; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; Ralph v. W. & S. (Pa.) 395; Archer v. W. & S. (Pa.) 327; Wood v. Kelso, 241; Schell v. Stetson (Pa.), 34 114. See infra "CONTRACTS FORMED IN ANOTHER PLACE."

Thus, notes made and dated in one State, but delivered in New York for goods there purchased, are governed by the laws of New York. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295; Clemson, 6 McL. C. C. 622. A promissory note was made in Louisiana and indorsed by a party in Louisiana, for the accommodation of the maker, then returned to them so in Louisiana, where they subsequently indorsed it, the contract was held to be governed by the laws of that State. Stetson v. Ramo, 89 Ill. 221. It has been held by the Iowa supreme court, that a note dated and signed by one of its residents in another State, but delivered and indorsed by the other maker and the surety in this State, is governed by the laws of that State. Wills, 52 Iowa, 56. Where a note is indorsed in Indiana by indorsee against the maker of which was alleged to be a non-resident of Indiana, the only issue was the note, the indorsement was not in protest, and the court held that the indorsement must be presumed to be made at the time and place of making the note, and both note and indorsement were governed by the law of Ohio; that the common law must be presumed to be the law there, and the note, therefore, was governed by the law-merchant; that the 2 Indiana Revised Statutes, 77, that the law of Ohio should have been pleaded and proved; that the evidence did not show such diligence in proceedings against the maker as by 1 Indiana Revised Statutes, 636, § 4, is required to bind the indorser of a note not payable in Indiana; and, consequently, the evidence was insufficient to sustain the claim for the plaintiff. Patterson v. C. Ind. 128.

2 Wood v. Gibbs, 35 Miss. 500. Where a draft was drawn in b. Interest.—Interest is payable according to the law of the country where the contract is made and to be performed,<sup>1</sup> although the rate at the place of payment is lower than that contracted for.<sup>2</sup> And the fact that there may be no statute prescribing a rate in the place where the transaction takes place, does not prevent the recovery of interest; and interest at a reasonable rate, and conforming to the custom which obtains in the community in dealings of the same character, will be allowed.<sup>3</sup>

But if the terms or nature of the contract, it is to be executed in another country, or it appears that the parties had reference to another country, then the rate of interest is to be governed by the laws of that other country.<sup>4</sup>

Rate.—Any rate of interest may be stipulated for that allowed by the place of performance,<sup>5</sup> although the rate allowed at the place of performance be greater than that allowed at the place of the contract; and the parties may stipulate for a higher interest without incurring the penalties of bankers in New York or another New Orleans firm refused, it was held that no action arose in New York, though the plaintiff bank was in Louisiana, and subject to the law of that State. The fact that, prior to the time the drawer bank had been sued in the Louisiana court, been for the right of a creditor, or its commissioners in New York as to property, was no bar. Hibernia Bank v. La. Nat. Bank, 166 N. Y.

53 Barb. (N. Y.) 350; 18 N. Y. Pr. 181, 41 N. Y. Pr. 181; 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 511; Fanning v. Fanning, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 511; Hosford v. Fanning, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 220; Stewart v. Stewart, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 604; New York v. American Life Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 215; s. c., 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 215; Bank v. Amer. Life Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 344; Jacks v. Nichols, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 313; s. c., 5 N. Y. Pr. 124; Cope v. Cope, 37 N. Y. Pr. 37; s. c., 53 Barb. 350; 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101; 33 N. J. L. (4 Vr.) 81. If a mortgage on lands is executed in one State, and there is no law in that State made payable, the mortgage is governed by the lex loci. Ingersoll v. Keyes, 1 Keyes Abb. (N. Y.) App. Dec.

acceptance drawn in Memphis on a New Orleans firm, to whom it is addressed at New Orleans, is to be computed according to the law of Louisiana. Frierson v. Galbraith, 12 Lea (Tenn.), 120.

<sup>2</sup> Second Nat. Bank v. Smoot, 2 MacAr. (D. C.) 371.

And if the note be sued in the State where it was made, the stipulated rate of interest may be recovered. Fisher v. Otis, 3 Chand. (Wis.) 83.

<sup>3</sup> Young v. Godbe, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 562.

<sup>4</sup> Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; reversing, Consequa v. Fanning, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 587; Berrien v. Wright, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 208.

Thus a promissory note, made in Lower Canada, payable in England, will bear interest according to the law of England. Scofield v. Day, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 102.

But it has been held that the rate of interest upon notes made in one State, for money there loaned, payable at a given bank in another, is governed, as to the rate of interest, by the law of the former State. Bank of Georgia v. Lewin, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 340; First National Bank v. Morris, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 680.

<sup>5</sup> Robb v. Halsey, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 146; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 77; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Chapman v. Robertson, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 627.

<sup>6</sup> Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65; DeWolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 367; Quinee v. Callender, 1 Des. (S. C.) 160; Scofield v. Day, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 102; Thompson v. Powles, 2 Simons, 194; Miller v. Tiffany, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Fitch v. Remer, 8 Am. L. Reg. 654, 2 Kent, Com. 460.

A moneyed corporation, forbidden by its

(2) Rate after Maturity. — The rate of interest to be allowed on a promissory note, after maturity, is governed by the lex loci contractus.<sup>1</sup>

(3) Usury. — The lex loci contractus governs as to the defence of usury,<sup>2</sup> notwithstanding the fact that by the terms of the instrument the debt was to be secured by a mortgage on real property in another State.<sup>3</sup>

The discount in one State of a note made payable in another State, at an usurious rate of interest, is governed by the laws of the former State.<sup>4</sup>

c. Contracts for the Loan of Money. — A contract for the loan of money is governed by the lex loci contractus, though the loan is secured by a mortgage on lands in another State.<sup>5</sup> Yet a contract made in one State, under a charter to make any contract amounting to usury, may make a loan in another State, at the rate of interest there lawful, though more than permitted in the State of its creation. Bard v. Poole, 12 N. Y. 495.

The rate of interest fixed by the law of Georgia, the contract having been made there, will be allowed in the courts of the United States on such contracts, although it may exceed the interest allowed by the law of the State in which the court sits. Jaffray v. Dennis, 2 Wash. C. C. 253.

If a note, executed in a State where twelve per cent interest per annum is allowed by law, though payable in a State where only six per cent interest is legal, be sued in the State where it was made, the stipulated rate of interest may be recovered. Fisher v. Otis, 3 Chand. (Wis.) 83. But a Pennsylvania court has said that a California contract to pay monthly two and a half per cent interest, and to compound it, though lawful by the lex loci contractus, is not only unconscionable, but deceptive, and will not be enforced in Pennsylvania. Sime v. Norris, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 84. Compare Ransom v. Jones (Pa.), Mass. 1860 (1190), aff'd, 1863 (33); Hoag v. Dessan (Pa.), 1 Pitts. (Pa.) 390.

<sup>1</sup> Cowqua v. Lauderbrun, 1 Wash. C. C. 521; Evans v. White, Hemp. C. C. 296.

Where the law of the place of contract fixes a general rate of interest, but allows parties to contract for a special rate, and they have done so, the rule of construction, followed in the federal courts, is to govern the contract, and thereafter the rate prescribed for cases where the parties themselves have fixed no rate. Brewster v. Wakefield, 22 How. (U. S.) 118; Burnhisel v. Firman, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 170; Holden v. Trust Co., 100 U. S. 72.

<sup>2</sup> Brewster v. Lyndes, 2 Miles (Pa.), 185.

<sup>3</sup> De Wolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 367.

In a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage in which usury is set up as a defence, and it appears that the parties to the mortgage both resided in one State, and the negotiations were conducted there, the contract made there, the validity of the mortgage must be decided according to the laws of that State. The fact that the land, which was the subject of the mortgage, is in another State, will not affect the question. Dolman v. Cook, 1 McC. Ch. 56; Blydenburgh v. Cotheal, 1 R. (N. J.) 17, 631; Andrews v. Torrey, 1 R. Ch. (N. J.) 355; Uhler v. Semp, 1 E. Gr. (N. J.) 288; Marsh v. L. Beas, (N. J.) 253. See infra "Mortgages." And it has been held that a contract made in Massachusetts, between a resident of that State and one of New York, for the loan of money on the mortgage of the latter of lands in New York, is not void, as to the question of usury, by the law of Massachusetts, as the lex loci contractus. Van Schaick v. Edwards, 1 Cas. (N. Y.) 355.

<sup>4</sup> Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige Ch. 615; Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Smith, 4 Law. Rep. 37.

If the maker and indorser of a note made in New York, where it is payable, is not usurious, because discounted in New Jersey, at seven per cent, which is less than the legal rate of interest in New York, the note is not void. Hackettstown Bank v. Rea, 6 Lans. 455; s. c., 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 175; 56 N. Y. 618.

<sup>5</sup> De Wolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. 367; Davis v. Clemson, 6 McL. C. 367; Chappell v. Jardine, 51 Conn. 64; Price v. Price, 4 W. Va. 4; Cubbedge v. Price, 62 Ala. 518.

It has been held that in an agreement for the loan of money made in New York, where the money advanced thereon, a note made in Nebraska payable in New York, secured by a mortgage on lands in Nebraska, to secure the debt, the fact that the note was made and dated in Nebraska is immaterial, for the note was but an incident to the agreement, and the contract was to ance of lands to secure the payment of the loan, though executed in another State, is determined by the laws of the State where the lands lie and the suit is brought.<sup>1</sup> A contract for the loan of money, valid by the laws of the State where it is made, is not rendered void by the usury laws of another State, because it is to be repaid in such other State, unless it were a mere device to evade the usury laws of such State.<sup>2</sup>

d. Contracts for Insurance. — The general rule is, that the place of the contract of insurance is the place where it was accepted.<sup>3</sup>

Where an insurance policy is issued from the office of the company in one State on the life or property of A. in another, and sent to the local agent in such other State for delivery, containing a clause that it is not binding until countersigned and delivered there and the premium paid, the contract is completed in such other State; and its validity must be determined by the laws of that State.<sup>4</sup>

A contract of insurance made in one State upon property in erned by the laws of New York. Sands v. Smith, 1 Neb. 108. See also Mills v. Wilson, 88 Pa. St. 118. And where A. of Indiana borrowed in Indiana, on notes secured by a mortgage of land there, money of a citizen of New York, some of the notes being made payable in New York, and some specifying no place of payment, the contract was held to be an Indiana contract, and that the question of its being usurious was to be tested by the law of Indiana. Thompson v. Edwards, 85 Ind. 414.

Where a mortgage is made of land supposed to be in New York, but by settlement of the State boundary decided afterwards to be in Connecticut, the incidents of the mortgage are those given to it by the New York law; and a court of equity, in Connecticut, will adapt the form of relief to the circumstances, the relief ordinarily given being inapplicable. Chappell v. Jarline, 51 Conn. 64.

<sup>1</sup> Klinck v. Price, 4 W. Va. 4.

<sup>2</sup> Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 15.

<sup>3</sup> Where proposals for insurance were forwarded from Massachusetts to New York, and there accepted, and the policy there issued, and was forwarded to the company's agent in Massachusetts to be delivered to the insured, and it is so delivered, the contract is governed by the laws of New York. Shattuck v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 4 Cliff. C. C. 598; s. c., 7 Ins. L. J. 937; 7 Rep. 171; Lamb v. Bowser, 118 Mass. C. C. 315; Wright v. Sun Mutual Ins. Co., 6 Am. L. R. 485; s. c., 23 How. (U. S.) 412; and will not be affected by any Massachusetts statute. Shattuck v. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 4 Cliff. C. C. 598.

A policy which was issued in New Jersey to a resident in Massachusetts, the loss to be paid at the principal office in New Jersey, is a contract to be governed by the laws of New Jersey, and not of Massachusetts. Desmazes v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co., 7 Ins. L. J. 926; s. c., 7 Rep. 136.

Where a policy of insurance is effected in New York, on coffee, at so much per pound, the American standard of weight governs in estimating a loss, not the foreign standard, where they differ. Gracie v. Bowne, 2 Cain. (N. Y.) 30.

<sup>4</sup> North-western Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Elliott, 7 Sawy. C. C. 17; Cromwell v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 49 Md. 366; Todd v. State Ins. Co., 11 Phila. (Pa.) 355; Todd v. State Ins. Co. (Pa.) 33 Leg. Int. 239; s. c., 3 Weekly Notes of Cases, 330.

But where a life policy was issued by a Connecticut company having its office at Hartford, to a citizen of Massachusetts, and sent to an agent in Massachusetts, and the latter countersigned and delivered it to the insured upon receipt of the premium, it was held that the contract was a Connecticut contract, and therefore not within the non-forfeiture law of Massachusetts (Stat. 1861, c. 186), the countersigning by the agent having been chiefly intended as proof that the premiums had been paid to him. Whitcomb v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 8 Repr. 642; Smith v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 5 Fed. Rep. 582; s. c., 10 Ins. L. J. 180. And it has been held by the courts of New York that a policy of insurance, executed in that State in favor of a citizen, though sent abroad to be countersigned by an agent in a foreign country, is to be judged of by the New York laws, in the absence of any proof of the foreign law. Huth v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 538.

another State is not void, because in violation of the laws of the latter State.<sup>1</sup> And it is not an ingredient of the contract of insurance that it shall be enforced conformably to the law of the place where it was executed.<sup>2</sup>

e. Contracts relating to Personal Property. — A contract entered into in one State, concerning personal property, when the property is situate and the contract to be performed in another State, may be made according to the law of the State where the contract is entered into, — not according to the law of the State where the property is to be performed.<sup>3</sup>

A chattel mortgage being valid in one State, without possession of the title of the mortgagee cannot be divested by proceeding in invitum in another State, where a different rule prevails, to which the property may have been taken for a temporary purpose.<sup>4</sup>

(1) Mortgage of a Vessel. — The validity of a chattel mortgage upon a vessel depends upon the laws of the State in which the mortgage is made, and where the vessel is registered.<sup>5</sup>

f. Validity of Contract where made. — If valid and binding where made, a contract is valid and binding everywhere;<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Huntley v. Merrill, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 626.

<sup>2</sup> Griswold v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Blatchf. C. C. 231.

<sup>3</sup> Dacosta v. Davis, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 319; Waters v. Cox, 2 Ill. App. (Bradw.) 129.

Thus, a contract made in Michigan for the purchase of a piano, construed by the courts of that State to be a mere bailment giving the buyer no right to mortgage it, will be so construed by the courts of Illinois, upon the purchaser's removal to that State, and attempting to mortgage it. Waters v. Cox, 2 Ill. App. (Bradw.) 129.

<sup>4</sup> Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 631.

The supreme court of the United States hold that the fiction of the law that the domicile of the owner draws to it his personal estate, wherever it may happen to be, must yield whenever it becomes necessary for the purpose of justice to examine into the actual situs of the property: accordingly, where a chattel mortgage was executed by a debtor to one creditor in New York, on personal property in Illinois, which was not required to be recorded in New York, but was required to be in Illinois, the mortgage was held invalid as against an attaching creditor of New York. Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 140. See also Gullander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 657.

It has been held that the bona fide purchaser of a chattel mortgage at a mortgagee's sale, under a mortgage executed and filed in New York, according to the statutes of that State, the chattel being there, and the mortgagor also residing there at the execution of the mortgage, and the mortgage being due, is protected against a bona fide purchaser from the mortgagor where the property has been taken to another State and there sold. Brady, 8 Vr. (N. J.) 201.

In Kunyon v. Groshon, 1 Beas. 86, the owner of a picture, at the exhibition, in New York, executed in New Jersey a mortgage on it as a security for a loan, the domicile of both parties being New Jersey. Subsequently the mortgagor sold the picture to a bona fide purchaser. By the laws of New York, mortgages of pictures remaining in the possession of the mortgagor is void as against subsequent purchasers in good faith, unless the mortgage is filed in the office of the register, etc. The mortgagor, having taken the picture into New York, on a bill filed to foreclose the mortgage, the court held that the mortgage was valid as against the subsequent purchaser, and that notice, as the possession of the picture by the mortgagor was consistent with the transaction, and explained to the satisfaction of the court.

<sup>5</sup> Watson v. Campbell, 3 Alb. L. 1. A mortgage upon a British vessel, executed in a British province, is governed by the rules of the common law, notwithstanding the provisions of the revised statutes of the province. Banks v. Bloomfield, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 140. And the sale of a vessel, in Louisiana, is governed by the civil code of that State, notwithstanding the provisions of the revised statutes of the State. By the general commercial law. v. Honold, 19 How. (U. S.) 390; St. v. Honold, 19 How. (U. S.) 393.

<sup>6</sup> Roach v. St. Louis Type Foundry, 3 Mo. 186; Dixon v. Martin, 3 N. Eng. Rep. 777; M.

void or illegal there, it is generally held to be void and illegal everywhere else;<sup>1</sup> although, had the same contract been made where suit is brought, it would have been held valid.<sup>2</sup> But if a Nesbit, 13 Fed. Rep. 872; Fitch v. Remer, 8 Am. L. R. 654; Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253; Medbury v. Hopkins, 3 Conn. 472; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 329; Whiston v. Stodder, 8 Martin (La.), 95; Andrews v. His Creditors, 11 La. 465; Hollomon v. Hollomon, 12 La. An. 607; Poe v. Duck, 5 Md. 1; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193, 221, 228; Pearsall v. Dwight, 2 Mass. 88, 89; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; King of Prussia v. Kuemper, 22 Mo. 550; Stix v. Matthews, 75 Mo. 96; Houghton v. Page, 2 N. H. 42; Dyer v. Hunt, 5 N. H. 401; French v. Hall, 9 N. H. 137; Smith v. Godfrey, 8 Foster (N. H.), 381; Noble v. Thompson Oil Co., 79 Pa. St. 354; Bank of United States v. Donnelly, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361, 372; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65; Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; Green v. Sarmento, Pet. C. C. 74; Willings v. Consequa, Pet. C. C. 301, 317; Trimble v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 151, 159; s. c., 4 Moore & S. 695; Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Clark & Finn 131; Lebel v. Tucker, L. R. 3 Q. B. 77; Lawrence's Wheaton, 179. See "SALE OF LIQUORS," infra, (1) note 4.

<sup>1</sup> Moore v. Clopton, 22 Ark. 125; McAllister v. Smith, 17 Ill. 328; Titus v. Scantling, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 89; McDaniel v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 24 Iowa, 417; Ford v. Buckeye Ins. Co., 6 Bush (Ky.), 133; Kennedy v. Cochrane, 65 Me. 504; Trasher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234; Harper v. Hampton, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 453, 622, 662; Pearsall v. Dwight, 2 Mass. 84; Powers v. Lynch, 3 Mass. 77; Baker v. Wheaton, 5 Mass. 509; Grimshaw v. Bender, 6 Mass. 157; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 358; Watson v. Bourne, rleton, 12

3 Mass. 1;
; Hull v.
Benjamin,
ledway v.
s. 157; Inhabitants
6; Ivey v.
v. Davis,
v. Phelps,
v. Schaick
Y.) 355;
Y.) 235;
Y.) 263;
V. Y.) 285; ill v. Hopambers v.
Am. Rep.
McC. (S.
9 Humph.

(Tenn.) 426; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65; Allshouse v. Ramsay, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 331; Blackwell v. Webster, 23 Blatchf. C. C. 537; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; McClintick v. Cummins, 3 McL. C. C. 158; La Jeune Eugénie, 2 Mason, C. C. 459; Carroll v. Nixon, 2 Miles (Pa.), 428; Warder v. Arell, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077; Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163; Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Str. 732; Alves v. Hodgson, 7 T. R. 241.

A contract entered into in New York, between Philadelphia coal companies, which is in contravention of the New York statute which makes it a misdemeanor for "persons to conspire to commit any act injurious to trade or commerce," will not be upheld in the Pennsylvania courts. Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co., 68 Pa. St. 173. The distinction between contracts for the "protection" of trade, and those which are in "restraint" of trade, discussed. Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co., 68 Pa. St. 173.

Where W., residing in Maine, there made a contract with an attorney residing in New York, whereby the latter was to prosecute W.'s claim in the New York courts on shares, it was held that the Maine law, which made such agreements void, covered the case. Blackwell v. Webster, 23 Blatchf. C. C. 537.

A promissory note made by a wife as surety for her husband in Louisiana, where she resides, although void by the law of that State, can be enforced against land in Mississippi devised to her sole and separate use, if she intended to charge it with the debt created by the note. Frierson v. Williams, 57 Miss. 451.

It has been questioned whether a mortgage on land, made by a foreign corporation having no power to execute a mortgage in the State where chartered, is good. Amerman v. Wiles, 9 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 13, 16.

<sup>2</sup> McAllister v. Smith, 17 Ill. 328; Titus v. Scantling, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 89; Trasher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234.

Yet it has been said that the law of New Jersey governs as to property brought into that State, and the construction of contracts made elsewhere for its disposal. The Marina, 19 Fed. Rep. 760. The character and effect of a contract made in one State concerning property there, must be construed by the laws of that State, although the parties afterwards remove to another State, where the laws are different. Hollomon v. Hollomon, 12 La. An. 607.

contract be not executed, either with reference to the law of the place where it is made, or where it is to be performed, if forbidden by both, the law of the place where it is executed governs as to its invalidity.<sup>1</sup>

This rule is said to be founded on the necessity of nations "the whole system of agencies, of purchases and sales, of credits, and of transfers of negotiable instruments, rests on this foundation." We have no more forcible application of this doctrine than in the subject of international private contracts "in this, as a general principle, there seems a universal consent of all courts and jurists, foreign and domestic."<sup>2</sup>

A contract valid in the State where it is made will be enforced in another State, unless clearly contrary to good morals, or repugnant to the policy or positive institutions of the latter State.

<sup>1</sup> Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65.

<sup>2</sup> Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253; Medbury v. Hopkins, 3 Conn. 472; Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517; Atwood v. Protection Ins. Co., 14 Conn. 555; Van Buskirk v. Hartford Ins. Co., 14 Conn. 583; Thomas v. Beckman, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 32; Garnier v. Poydras, 13 La. 177; Chartres v. Cairnes, 16 Mart. (La.), 1; Trasher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193, 221, 228; Dunscomb v. Bunker, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 8; Sessions v. Little, 9 N. H. 271; Bank of Orange County v. Colby, 12 N. H. 520; Crosby v. Berger, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 538; Le Breton v. Miles, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 261; In re Roberts Will, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 446, 525; Decouche v. Savetier, 3 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Watson v. Orr, 3 Dev. (N. C.) L. 161; Arrington v. Gee, 5 Ired. (N. C.) L. 590; Kneeland v. Ensley, Meigs (Tenn.), 620; Bryant v. Edson, 8 Vt. 325; Bank of United States v. Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361; Allshouse v. Ramsay, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 331; Feaubert v. Turst, Prec. in Ch. 207; s. c., 1 Bro. P. C. 129; Dues v. Smith, Jacob. 544; Anstruther v. Adair, 2 My. & K. 513; Freemoult v. Dedire, 1 P. Wms. 429. <sup>3</sup> Phinney v. Baldwin, 16 Ill. 108; Chewning v. Johnson, 5 La. An. 678; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 358, 377.

An Indiana statute provides that "notes payable to order or bearer in a bank in this State, shall be negotiable as inland bills of exchange, and the payees and indorsees may recover as in case of such bills." Under this statute the Indiana courts hold that a note, to be negotiable, must be made payable at a bank in Indiana; that the name of the bank must be correctly stated in the note; and that a party is not estopped from denying that there is any such bank as that named in his note. In the case of a note executed in and made payable in Indiana, the Missouri courts will apply the same rules. Stix v. Matthews, 75 Mo. 96.

A Sunday contract valid by the law of the State where made, will be enforced by the courts of another State, by the law of which such contract would be void. Swann, 21 Fed. Rep. 299. But it has been held that a contract for speculation in stocks upon margins, made in another State where they are presumed to be lawful, will not be enforced in New Jersey, where such contracts are unlawful. Flagg v. Baldwin, 30 N. J. Eq. 219; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 308.

A contract made in one State, with the full knowledge of the parties that the subject-matter, which is its subject-matter, is prohibited in another State, in no immoral or against public policy, but in violation of the positive law of the latter State, is valid, and will be enforced in the latter State, when it is shown that the parties knew that such conduct was forbidden. Merchants' Bank v. Bank of New York, 9 N. Y. (5 Seld.) 53. Though it has been held that the fact that an agent for the prosecution of suits for infringement of patents is made within a State, the common-law rules against champerty and maintenance have been abolished, and do not protect it against the objection that the suits contemplated are to be prosecuted in various States throughout the Union, many of which the common-law rules against champerty and maintenance are in force. Gregerson v. Imlay, 4 Blatchf. C. C. 167.

Where a contract is made in one State for conveyance of lands in another State, such contract is valid by the laws of the State where made, and sanctioned by the courts, it will be enforced in the other State, though it would have been void under the statute of frauds subsequently passed in the first State. Arrington v. Brents, 1 McL. C. C. 167. A contract of sale made in a State where the statute of frauds does not prevail, will be enforced in another, by the laws of which it would have been void, though the statute of frauds was in the latter State at the time of sale, were in the latter State. Allen v. Schuchardt, 10 Am. L. R.

A State, by virtue of its general authority, may act between its own citizens in every other country; but it is otherwise as to contracts between citizens and foreigners, made in foreign countries.<sup>1</sup>

g. Contracts injurious to a Nation or its Subjects. — To this general rule, there are qualifications or exceptions. Thus, no nation is bound to recognize and enforce any contract which is injurious to its own interests, or those of its subjects, out of deference to foreign laws.<sup>2</sup>

An indenture of apprenticeship, with covenants valid in the State where executed, will be enforced in the courts of another State, if not contra bonos mores, or against the policy of the law of that State. Petrie v. Voorhees, 3 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 285.

Where a contract of guaranty was signed in Massachusetts by a married woman, domiciled there, and sent to Maine by mail, and assented to and acted on in Maine for the price of goods sold there, the law of Maine, but not that of Massachusetts, then allowed her to make such contract. It was held (1) that the contract was made in Maine, and (2) that an action lay against her thereon in a Massachusetts court. Miliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374.

As between the maker and payee of a note executed and payable in the State of Louisiana, the legal effect of the note must be determined by the law of that State in which it is regarded as commercial paper, having the legal character of a bill of exchange. Hyatt v. Bank of Kentucky, 8 Bush (Ky.), 193. But an assignment of such a note is of itself a contract, by which the party making the assignment assumes certain liabilities, to be regulated and determined by the law of the place where the assignment is made, in the absence of an agreement upon his part, by which he assumes liabilities treated by the laws of another State or place. Hyatt v. Bank of Kentucky, 8 Bush (Ky.), 193.

Assumpsit may be maintained in Rhode Island for breach of a contract of sale there made, and there valid, of goods in process of manufacture, although the delivery was to take place in New York, where the contract was invalid by the New York statute of frauds. Hunt v. Jones, 12 R. I. 265.

A defendant who sets up infancy as a defence to a foreign contract, must show affirmatively that it would be a good defence by the foreign law. Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 189.

Where a daughter under the will of her father, valid by the laws of the State where it was executed, on receiving a legacy of money and bank stock, executed an obligation to carry out the provisions of the will, by leaving at her death, if she died without issue, the money and bank stock which she had received, to the surviving children of the testator, such an obligation being a valid one by the laws of the State where it was executed, it was held that it will be enforced by the courts of another State. Groves v. Nutt, 13 La. An. 117.

1 Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371.

And a contract implied by official relations in a foreign State, by the laws of that State, will be recognized and enforced in Missouri, at the suit of the sovereign, who is the creditor by force of such relations. King of Prussia v. Kuepper, 22 Mo. 550.

When by the laws of a foreign country where a contract between its citizens was made, the creditor's right to proceed to the enforcement of his contract is suspended, the tribunals of this country will give effect to the contract only according to such laws. Camfranke v. Burnell, 1 Wash. C. C. 340.

2 Cole v. Lucas, 2 La. An. 953; Mary v. Brown, 5 La. An. 269; Tatum v. Wright, 7 La. An. 358; Groves v. Nutt, 13 La. An. 117; Hughes v. Klingender, 14 La. An. 52; Whiston v. Stodder, 8 Martin (La.), 95; Trasher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193, 228; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 376, 379; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 6; Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20, 24; Ingraham v. Geyer, 13 Mass. 146; Tappan v. Poor, 15 Mass. 419, 422; West Cambridge v. Lexington, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 506; Hinds v. Brazeale, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 837; Smith v. Godfrey, 8 Foster (N. H.), 382; Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 631; Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134; Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65, 78. See Story, Conf. L. § 244; Huberus, lib. 1, tit. 3, De Conflict. Legu § 2.

Comitas inter Communitates. — The enforcement by one nation of contracts made under the laws of another, rests on the principles of comity which cannot be so far extended as to violate the positive legislation of the nation called on to enforce such contracts, and in no case should it be carried to such an extent that the nation or its subjects will be in any way prejudiced thereby. Trasher v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234; Pearsall v. Dwight, 2 Mass. 88, h. Contracts founded on Political, etc., Interpitude. — A contract, arising out of moral or political interpitude, will be enforced.<sup>1</sup>

i. Contracts in Fraud, etc., of the Law of a Country. — Contracts in fraud or evasion of the laws of another country will not be enforced.<sup>2</sup> Thus, if merchandise is sold in one place, to be delivered in another, where such sale is prohibited the contract will not be enforced in the courts of the latter country, because the contract is repugnant to the law and interest of the country making the prohibition.<sup>3</sup>

(1) Contract for Sale of Intoxicating Liquors. — Where a contract for the sale of spirituous liquors is valid by the laws of the State where the sale is made, but invalid by the laws of the State where the goods are to be delivered, the vendor cannot, in the latter State, recover the price, where he has knowledge that the vendee intends to use them in violation of law, and aids therein.<sup>4</sup> But the intent

89; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 378; Ohio Ins. Co. v. Edmondson, 5 La. 295, 299-300; Ivey v. Lalland, 42 Miss. 444; Smith v. Godfrey, 8 Foster (N. H.), 382; Merchants' Bank v. Spalding, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 302; Kentucky v. Bossford, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 526; Territt v. Bartlett, 21 Vt. 189; Forbes v. Cochrane, 2 Barn. & Cress. 448, 471. For no nation is bound to recognize or enforce contracts injurious to its own citizens. Ivey v. Lalland, 42 Miss. 444. "The general comity and natural convenience of nations have established the rule, that the law of that place governs in every thing respecting the form, interpretation, obligation, and effect of the contract, wherever the authority, rights, and interests of other States and their citizens are not thereby prejudiced." Lawrence's Wheaton, 179; Huberus, tom. ii. lib. i. tit. 3, de Conflict. Leg. § 2.

1 Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258, 260; Boucher v. Lowson, Cas. Temp. Hard. 84, 89, 191; Planche v. Fletcher, Doug. 251.

2 Cambioso v. Maffett, 2 Wash. C. C. 98; Hannay v. Eve, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 242; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258; Springfield Bank v. Merrick, 14 Mass. 322; Cannan v. Bryce, 3 B. & Al. 179; Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341; Jaques v. Withy, 1 H. Black. 65. Compare Pelletat v. Angell, 2 Crompt. M. & R. 311.

When a contract which violates the revenue laws of the country where it was made, comes before the courts of another country, they will not take notice of the foreign revenue laws, — Ivey v. Lalland, 42 Miss. 444. — and they will enforce contracts by the subjects of such country, made to evade or defraud the revenue laws of another country. See Ludlow v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 94; Boucher v. Lowson, Cas. Temp.

Hard. 85, 89, 191; Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341; Biggs v. Lawrence, 3 T. R. 466; Clugas v. Penaluna, 4 T. R. 466; Foot v. Tenant, 1 Bos. & Pull. 551; v. Fletcher, Doug. 251; Lever v. Marsh. Ins. 58-61; La Jeune v. Mason, C. C. 459, 461; Pothier, 58; 2 Valin, Comm. art. 49, p. 127; erig. Ch. 8 §§ 5, 212, 215.

But it has been held that the sale of a lottery ticket in a State where such sale is not prohibited, to a resident of another State where such sale is illegal, is not void, and the contract will be enforced in the latter State, although the buying and selling were contrary to its laws. See Smythe v. Parks, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 207; v. Gregory, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 370.

3 Cambioso v. Maffett, 2 Wash. C. C. 98; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 378; Story, Conf. L. § 252; Huber, lib. 1, De Conflictu Leg. § 5.

4 Bancher v. Mausel, 47 Me. 58; v. Stratton, 47 Me. 120; Webster v. Gray (Mass.), 584; Dalter v. Iowa, 538; Spalding v. Preston, 21 Vt. 184.

Where a sale of liquor was made by a Philadelphia firm, to its agent in Providence, Rhode Island, for the purpose of enabling the defendant to violate the laws of Rhode Island, which prohibited the sale of liquor without a license, no recovery can be had on a draft for the price of the liquor accepted by defendant. Weil v. Gould, 364; s. c., 2 N. Eng. Rep. 235. It has been said that an action cannot be maintained in New Hampshire to recover the price of intoxicating liquors sold by the plaintiff to defendant in Massachusetts (the sale was legal), when it appears that the plaintiff actively aided defendant in the commission of his purpose to keep and sell the purchaser and the knowledge and aid of the vendor must distinctly appear to avoid the sale.<sup>1</sup>

However, if the transaction is completed in one State, where the sale is legal, although the seller knew the illegal purpose of the buyer, it is valid and binding, provided he did not engage actively to promote or share in it.<sup>2</sup> But if any thing remains to be violation of law, by packing it for transportation in a way to conceal the fact that the packages contained liquor. Fisher v. Lord, 63 N. H. 514; s. c., 3 Atl. Rep. 297; 2 N. Eng. Rep. 285.

And where the agent of a Pennsylvania firm went to Rhode Island, and there effected a sale of whiskey by sample to a citizen of Rhode Island, to whom the whiskey was sent and delivered, in a suit brought in Massachusetts on an acceptance given by the buyer, it was held that the illegality of the transaction was determinable by the Rhode Island law. Weil v. Golden, 141 Mass. 364; s. c., 2 N. Eng. Rep. 235.

<sup>1</sup> Samuel Bowman Distillery Co. v. Nutt, 34 Kans. 724; Savage v. Mallory, 4 Allen (Mass.), 492; Bligh v. James, 6 Allen (Mass.), 570; Barnard v. Field, 46 Me. 526; Whitlock v. Workman, 15 Iowa, 351; Langton v. Hughes, 1 Maule & S. 593.

A mere knowledge on the part of the seller that the goods are to be used for an illegal or an immoral purpose in another country, will not affect the validity of the contract, even in the courts of that country. Samuel Bowman Distillery Co. v. Nutt, 34 Kans. 724. Yet it is said that "no one should furnish another with the means of transgressing the law, knowing that he intended to make that use of them." Lightfoot v. Tenant, 1 Bos. & Pull. 551; Langton v. Hughes, 1 Maule & S. 593. To render the contract void, there must be some participation or interest of the seller in the in further-use them

Seligman,
Godfrey, 8
arl, 3 Gray
, 14 N. Y.
Cans. 621;

Oil Co. v.
Rowan, 59
f. H. 514;
. Rep. 285;

; Tracy v.
Anderson v.

; Rose v.
r. Rooney, u, 50 Iowa, 474; Hub-

; Langton
Ritchie v.

f. Rep., C.
k Ald. 179.

181; Catlin v. Bell, 4 Camp. 183. Compare Hodgson v. Temple, 5 Taunt. 182; Pellecat v. Angell, 2 Crompt. M. & R. 311; Johnson v. Hudson, 11 East, 180.

But it was held in a recent case that a person who solicits orders for spirituous liquors in New Hampshire, where the sale of them is prohibited, to be delivered outside of the State, having reasonable cause to believe that if so delivered, they will be transported into the State for illegal sale, cannot recover the price of such liquors in the New Hampshire courts, although the contract of sale may have been lawful in the State where it was completed, and the delivery made. Jones v. Surprise (N. H. 1887), 9 Atl. Rep. 384.

The later English cases, however, seem to hold that mere knowledge on the part of the vendor that the vendee purchased the property for an illegal or immoral purpose, vitiates the contract. See Cowan v. Milbourn, L. R. 2 Ex. 230; Pearce v. Brooks, L. R. 1 Ex. 213; Taylor v. Chester, L. R. 4 Q. B. 309.

A purchase made in Missouri, of property to be sold in Arkansas, is valid in Arkansas, although the sale of such property is unlawful in Arkansas, if it is lawful in Missouri, and the seller is not actively to participate or be interested in the sale in Arkansas. Parson's Oil Co. v. Boyett, 44 Ark. 230.

<sup>2</sup> Feineman v. Sachs, 33 Kan. 62; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 547; Territt v. Hartlett, 21 Vt. 184; Spalding v. Preston, 21 Vt. 9; Mack v. Lee, 13 R. I. 293.

An order for liquors to be forwarded to the buyer, made by a dealer in one State on an order taken in another by an agent having no authority to make sales, which is filled, is governed, as to its validity, by the laws of the State where filled, and a recovery may be had on notes given for the price, though the contract for the sale and delivery of spirituous liquors is a violation of the statute of the State where the buyer resides. Backman v. Jenks, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 468; Fuller v. Leet, 59 N. H. 163. See also Lauten v. Rowan, 59 N. H. 215.

Where a contract signed in Massachusetts for the purchase of whiskey clearly contemplates that the title shall pass when the whiskey is in a bonded warehouse in Kentucky, the contract is for a sale to be made in Kentucky, and evidence that the seller had no license in Massachusetts is done,—as, if the goods are sent by express, the price to be collected by the carrier on delivering them,—there can be no recovery.

(2) Contracts by Subjects residing Abroad.—Where a citizen of one country, who is residing abroad, sells to a citizen of his own country for the purpose of their being smuggled into such country, he will not be allowed to enforce the contract in the courts of that country, although the contract was complete in the foreign country, and might be enforced in the like case of a foreigner.

j. Contracts which are Immoral, etc.—Contracts which are immoral, or against public rights or religion, will not be enforced. But, to come within the rule, such contracts must not simply be contrary to the statutes of the country where they are sought to be enforced, but must involve moral interperitute.<sup>4</sup>

k. Contracts opposed to National Policy.—Contracts opposed to national policy and institutions will not be enforced.<sup>5</sup>

l. Form, Proof, and Authentication of Contracts.—The form, proof, and authentication of contracts are governed by the law of the country where they are made;<sup>6</sup> and this law must be immaterial. Sherley v. McCormick, 135 Mass. 126.

<sup>1</sup> State v. Four Jugs of Intoxicating Liquors, 58 Vt. 594; s. c., 2 Atl. Rep. 586. See Dolan v. Green, 110 Mass. 322.

Where a verbal order for liquors was given in Michigan to the agent of a Wisconsin firm subject to the approval of the firm, and to the acceptance or rejection of the goods on their arrival in Michigan, it was held in an action on the contract, that the delivery of the liquors to a carrier in Wisconsin did not complete the sale as a Wisconsin contract within the statute of frauds, and that, as a Michigan contract, it was void under the prohibitory liquor law. Rindskopf v. De Ruyter, 39 Mich. 1.

An executory contract of sale of intoxicating liquors made in Massachusetts, and completed in New York, is not a sale in violation of law within the meaning of Massachusetts Gen. Stat. ch. 86, on which the money paid therefor can be recovered back. Abberger v. Marrin, 102 Mass. 70; Ely v. Webster, 102 Mass. 304; Brockway v. Maloney, 102 Mass. 308.

<sup>2</sup> See Cambioso v. Maffett, 2 Wash. C. C. 98; Waniell v. Reed, 5 T. R. 599; Clugas v. Penaluna, 4 T. R. 466; Biggs v. Lawrence, 3 T. R. 454.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Bell, Comm. (4th ed.) § 232, pp. 232-242.

Thus, contracts in a foreign country for illicit cohabitation and prostitution will not be enforced. Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 379; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193, 228; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr, 1084; Walker v. Perkins, 3 Burr. 1568; Binnington v. Wallis, 4 Barn. & Ald. 650; Lloyd v. Johnson, 1 Bos. & Pull. 340; will any contracts which are founded on moral interperitute, and are inconsistent with good order, and the best interests of society, be enforced. Wolcot v. Wood, Ves. 1; Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Jac. 435, 441; Lawrence v. Smith, Jac. 474, n.; Jones v. Randall, Cowp. 37; v. Bennet, 1 Camp. 348; Jennings v. Throgmorton, Ry. & Moody, 251; ton v. Campbell, 2 Carr. & P. 347; v. Stotesbury, 1 W. Black. 204; Burr, 924; Fores v. Johns, 4 L. R. 450.

Jones v. Randall, Cowp. 37; Appel v. Campbell, 2 Carr. & P. 347; 1 N. P. tit. "Assumpsit," 59, 60.

<sup>4</sup> See Kentucky v. Bassford, (N. Y.), 526.

<sup>5</sup> Richardson v. Marine Ins. Co., 102, 110, 112; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 358; Musson v. Fales, 16 Mass. 36; Coolidge v. Inglee, 13 Mass. 26; C. v. Waddington, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) s. c., 2 Wheat. Appendix 35; C. v. wealth v. Aves, 18 Pick. (Mass.), 1; drews v. His Creditors, 11 La. 46; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 1; De Wutz v. Hendricks, 9 Moore, 58; 2 Bing. 314; Thompson v. Powles, 194; Jones v. Garcia del Rio, 1 & Russ. 299; Pattison v. Mills, 1 Clark, 342; Somerset v. Stewart, L. Rex v. Sommersett, 20 Howell's Trials, 79; Madrado v. Wilkes, 3 Ald. 353; Forbes v. Cochrane, & Cress. 448.

<sup>6</sup> Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fe. 760; Harman v. Harman, Bald. C. Satterthwaite v. Doughty, 1 Busbee L. 314; Warrender v. Warrender, 558.

strictly followed to entitle the contracts to be held valid elsewhere.<sup>1</sup>

m. Nature, Obligation, and Interpretation of Foreign Contracts.—The law of the place where the contract is made is to govern as to the nature, the obligation, and interpretation thereof.<sup>2</sup>

(1) Nature.—By the nature of a contract is meant those qualities which properly belong to it, and by law or custom always accompany it, or inhere in it.<sup>3</sup>

(2) Obligation.—By the obligation of a contract is meant the duty to perform it.<sup>4</sup>

(3) Interpretation.—The interpretation of a contract is ascertaining the real intention of the parties in their stipulations; and, when the latter are silent or uncertain, to ascertain what is the true sense of the words used, and what ought to be implied in order to give them their true and full effect.<sup>5</sup> The general principle is, that, in ascertaining the right of parties to a controversy, the law of the place where the right arises governs, provided it be 111, 112; Alves v. Hodgson, 7 T. R. 241; Clegg v. Levy, 3 Campb. 166, Wynne v. Jackson, 2 Russ. 351; James v. Catherwood, 3 Dowl. & Ry. 190. See 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 20, pp. 752-764; Föelix, Conflict des Lois, Revue Étrang. et Franç., tom. vii. §§ 40-51, pp. 246-260; Ersk. Inst. b. 3, tit. 2, §§ 39, 40, 41, pp. 514, 515; 2 Boullenois, obs. 46, 467; 1 Hertii Opera, de Collis. Leg. § 11, n. 59.

Our courts will not require contracts, made in Cuba, to be stamped according to the Cuban laws. Skinner v. Tinker, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 333.

1 Bank of Rochester v. Gray, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 227; Tickner v. Roberts, 11 La. 14; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 332, 338-347; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 4; Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801.

It seems that where goods are sold in one country to be delivered in another, and the laws of the countries governing such sales are different, those of the country where the goods are to be delivered will govern. See Vidal v. Thompson, 11 Mart. (La.) 23-25; Acebal v. Levy, 10 Bing. 376.

2 Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 193; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 703; Jacks v. Nicholls, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 38; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 289; Delvalle v. Plomer, 3 Camp. Rep. C. C. 47; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Clark & Finn. 121, 140; Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Str. 733, s. c., 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 525; Winchelsea v. Garett, 1 Keen, 293; Melan v. Fitz James, 1 Bos. & Pull. 138; Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend.

(N. Y.) 439; Trimbey v. Vignier, 6 Carr. & P. 25; s. c., 1 Bing. N. C. 151, 159; 4 Moore & S. 695; King v. Harman's Heirs, 6 La. 607, 617; Brown v. Richardson, 13 Mart. (La.), 202. Compare Lebel v. Tucker, L. R. 3 Q. B. 79.

3 See Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Str. 733; Story, Conf. L. § 263.

4 See Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Winchelsea v. Garett, 2 Keen, 293, 309; Drummond v. Drummond, 6 Bro. Parl. (by Tomlin's), 601; Elliott v. Minto, 6 Madd. 16; Melan v. Fitz James, 1 Bos. & Pull. 138; Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; King v. Harman's Heirs, 6 La. 607, 617; Brown v. Richardson, 13 Mart. (La.) 202.

It has been said that the obligation of a corporation to pay its bonds executed and issued in the Dominion of Canada, but drawn and payable in the city of New York, cannot be deemed by our courts to be discharged by virtue of an act of parliament of the Dominion of Canada authorizing such railroad to issue new bonds, bearing a lower rate of interest, in substitution of such former bonds. Gebhard v. Canada S. Ry. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 387; s. c., 17 Blatchf. C. C. 416; 21 Alb. L. J. 352; 9 Rep. 203. But the supreme court reversed this decision, and held that the Canadian act was in the nature of a discharge in bankruptcy, was within the power of the parliament, and was binding on holders of the bonds everywhere. Canada Southern R. R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527.

5 See Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 23; Chapman v. Robertson, 6 Paige, Ch. (N. Y.) 627, 630; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 89; s. c., 2 Clark & Finn. 488.

shown;<sup>1</sup> and the laws of a place where a contract is made, not where the action is brought, is to govern in enforcing and expounding the contract,<sup>2</sup> provided they are not repugnant to the laws or policy of the country where suit is brought,<sup>3</sup> unless the parties intended otherwise, in view of its being executed elsewhere.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The Scotland, 105 U. S. 24; Champion v. Wilson, 64 Ga. 184.

If a contract is ambiguous, it must be determined by the usages of the country where it was made; if not, and a contingency unprovided for occurs, the omission may be supplied by the same usage. Moore v. Johnston, 8 La. An. 488.

The lex loci contractus must control in interpreting a contract made in a foreign country. In the absence of any understanding to the contrary, a debt there contracted is there payable, and in the legal currency thereof. Benner v. Clemens, 58 Pa. St. 24. But where the performance of a contract made in a foreign country is sought here, in the absence of evidence it must necessarily be performed in the foreign country, the contract must be construed according to our own laws. White v. Perley, 15 Me. 470.

<sup>2</sup> Fitch v. Remer, 8 Am. L. Reg. 654; Brooke v. N. Y., L. E., etc., R. Co. (Pa.) 1 Cent. Rep. 123, 125; Howenstein v. Barnes, 9 Cent. L. J. 48; s. c., 8 Rep. 326; Peake v. Yeldell, 17 Ala. 636; McDougald v. Rutherford, 30 Ala. 253; Walker v. Forbes, 31 Ala. 9; Spears v. Shropshire, 11 La. An. 559; Barney v. Newcomb, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 46; Partee v. Silliman, 44 Miss. 272; Golson v. Ebert, 52 Mo. 260; Hodges v. Shuler, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 68; Hildreth v. Shepard, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 265; Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 263; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; Cantu v. Bennett, 39 Tex. 303; Fisher v. Otis, 3 Chand. (Wis.) 83; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 169; Brabston v. Gibson, 9 How. (U. S.) 277; Cox v. U. S., 6 Pet. (U. S.) 172; Cox v. United States, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 203; Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406; Story, Conf. L. § 280; Story, Bills, 147. Compare Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 465; Payson v. Withers, 5 Biss. C. C. 269; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077; Story, Conf. L. § 280.

The nature, validity, and construction of a contract, are determined, both in the civil and common law, by the lex loci contractus. Brooke v. New York, L. E., etc., R. Co. (Pa.), 1 Cent. Rep. 123, 125. But it is held that the law of New Jersey governs as to property brought into that State, and the construction of contracts made elsewhere for its disposal. The Marina, 19 Fed. Rep. 760.

A State statute declaring certain contracts invalid unless recorded, does not apply to a contract made in another State where the laws have no such provision. Drew v. Smith, 59 Me. 393.

On a contract to be executed in Maryland but made and sued in Pennsylvania, the court held that a sufficient consideration was expressed on the face of the contract. Roll v. Nixon, 2 Miles (Pa.), 428.

It being the custom at Canton to add to other charges on the amount of goods sold, and for which compensation was demanded, this will be allowed in the States on a Canton contract. White v. Consequa, Pet. C. C. 301.

Where a contract is made in one State to be partly performed in that State and partly performed in other States, the law is, that the construction of the contract shall be governed by the law of the place where it is made. Morgan v. New Orleans, R. R. Co., 2 Woods, C. C. 244; Williams v. Carr, 80 N. C. 294. But where a case, in the performance of the contract, conveyance and transfers of property are made in several States, the law of the States where the particular property is situated governs. Morgan v. New Orleans, etc., R. R. Co., 2 Woods, C. C. 244; Williams v. Carr, 80 N. C. 294.

<sup>3</sup> Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 520; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 465.

<sup>4</sup> Cox v. United States, 6 Pet. 172; Duncan v. United States, 7 Pet. 435; Caldwell v. Carrington's Heirs, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 86; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 474; Willings v. Consequa, 17 Johns. 511; Camfranke v. Burnell, 1 Wa. 340; Courtois v. Carpentier, 1 Wa. 376; Mathuson v. Crawford, 4 Mo. 540. A citizen of Chicago made a contract with agents of a line of British steamers to carry cattle from Baltimore to Liverpool. It was stipulated that any question arising should be determined by the law in England. In a suit on this contract it was held that a federal court sitting in Maryland would recognize this stipulation and would apply the English rule in the solution of the question in controversy under the contract. The Oran, 19 Fed. Rep. 922.

Where a cause of action arises in another State, the lex loci only applies to the construction and effect of the contract, not to the remedy.<sup>1</sup> The law to be applied to the remedy is the lex fori, at the time such remedy is sought.<sup>2</sup>

(a) Rules of Interpretation.—If the full and entire intention of the parties does not appear from the words of the contract, and it can be interpreted by any custom or usage of the place where it was made, that should be done.<sup>3</sup>

Where an instrument executed by foreigners in a foreign country is free from obscurity, it will be construed according to the obvious import of the words used, unless there is proof that, according to the law of the country where executed, the true interpretation of them would be different.<sup>4</sup>

n. Contracts made in One State to be performed in Another.—Where contracts are made in one place, and to be performed in another, they are to be governed by the law of the place of performance as to validity, nature, obligation, and interpretation.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338.

<sup>2</sup> Matheson v. Crawford, 4 McL. C. C. 540; Partee v. Silliman, 44 Miss. 272; Hodges v. Shuler, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 68; Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406; Howenstein v. Barnes, 8 Rep. 326; s. c., 9 Cent. L. J. 48; Cox v. U. S., 6 Pet. (U. S.) 203; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 182; Brabston v. Gibson, 9 How. (U. S.) 277; Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 263; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. 266; Barney v. Newcomb, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 46; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077; Fitch v. Remer, 8 Am. L. Reg. 654. Compare Payson v. Withers, 5 Miss. C. C. 269.

<sup>3</sup> See Leffingwell v. White, 1 Johns. Cas. 1; Phreys, 20 1; Bent v. Eves, 11 1; arpenter, 1 1; Robertson, 6 1; ecauche v. o; Trabue 1; Bank of et. (U. S.) 3; itory, C. C. 4; J. S. 289; 378, 379; 151, 159; & Ad. 284, 1, 10 Barn. 1, 10 Barn. 1; urst, Prec. 1; Mylne & ard, L. R. 1; Machado, 4 3r. & Bing. 111; Selw. 111; proving, Bowen v. Bradley, 9 Abb. (N. Y.)

Webb v. Plummer, 2 Barn. & Ald. 746; Wigglesworth v. Dallison, Doug. 201, 207; Kearney v. King, 2 Barn. & Ald. 301; Spowle v. Legge, 1 Barn. & Cresw. 16.

<sup>4</sup> See Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 4, 5; King of Spain v. Machado, 4 Russ. 225. Where a particular interpretation is established, that must be followed, for the reason that the courts of a country are presumed to be the best expositors of its own law, as well as the terms of a contract made in reference to them. See Saul v. His Creditors, 17 Martin (La.), 587; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 159.

<sup>5</sup> Fitch v. Remer, 8 Am. L. Reg. 654; Pittsburgh & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109. In re State of Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 109; Schell v. Stetson, 34 Leg. Intel. 114; Lewis v. McCabe, 49 Conn. 141; Herschfeld v. Dexel, 12 Ga. 582; Dunn v. Welsh, 62 Ga. 241; Sherman v. Gassett, 9 Ill. (4 Gilm.) 521; Lewis v. Headley, 36 Ill. 433; Boyd v. Ellis, 11 Iowa, 97; McDaniel v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 24 Iowa, 417; Goddin v. Shipley, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 575; Tyler v. Trabue, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 306; White v. Perley, 15 Me. 470; Powers v. Lynch, 3 Mass. 77; Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20, 23, 24; Denny v. Williams, 5 Allen (Mass.), 1; Wooten v. Miller, 15 Miss. 380; Frazier v. Warfield, 9 S. M. & Mar. (Miss.) 220; Broadhead v. Noyes, 9 Mo. 56; Dorsey v. Hardesty, 9 Mo. 157; Thayer v. Elliott, 16 N. H. 104; Howard v. Fletcher, 59 N. H. 151; Campbell v. Nichols, 33 N. J. L. (4 Vr.) 81; Baeder v. Carnie, 44 N. J. L. 208; Irvine v. Barrett, 2 Grant (Pa.), 73; Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. 266; disap- Selw. 111; proving, Bowen v. Bradley, 9 Abb. (N. Y.)

Pr. N. S. 395; Scott v. Pilkington, 15 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 280; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9; s. c., 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; Pomeroy v. Ainsworth, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; Berrien v. Wright, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 208; Lee v. Selleck, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; s. c., 20 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 275; Cartwright v. Green, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 91; Adams v. Honness, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 265, 326; Kentucky v. Barford, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 526; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow (N. Y.) 510, note; Hildreth v. Shepard, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 265; Dickinson v. Edwards, 58 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 24; Richardson v. Draper, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 188; Ludlow v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 94; Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Brooker v. Coffin, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 189; Warren v. Lynch, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 239; Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; reversing s. c., 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 587; Commercial Bank v. Simpson, 90 N. C. 467; Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134; Wood v. Kelso, 27 Pa. St. 241; Brown v. Camden & A. R. Co., 83 Pa. St. 316; Archer v. Dunn, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 327; McCandlish v. Cruger, 2 Bay. (S. C.) 377; Fisher v. Otis, 3 Chand. (Wis.) 83; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 169; Cox v. United States, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 172, 203; Bank of United States v. Donnelly, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65; Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258; Harman v. Harman, Bald. C. C. 129; Woodhull v. Wagner, Bald. C. C. 296; Ladd v. Dulany, 1 Cr. C. C. 583; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Huthsing v. Bosquet, 3 McCr. C. C. 569; s. c., 11 Fed. Rep. 44. See also 7 Fed. Rep. 533; Hayden v. Davis, 3 McL. C. C. 276; Oregon & Wash. Trust, etc., Co. v. Rathbun, 5 Sawy. C. C. 32; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 465; Bushby v. Camac, 4 Wash. C. C. 396; Dent v. Smith, L. R. 4 Q. B. 413; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077, 1078; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 13, 19; Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Clark & Finn. 121; Peninsular & Oriental Co. v. Shand, 3 Moore, P. C. (N. S.) 272. Compare Joslin v. Miller, 14 Neb. 91; Payson v. Withers, 5 Biss. C. C. 269.

But where no place of performance is designated by the contract, or it may be performed anywhere, it must be referred to the lex loci contractus. Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 13, 19. Thus, where a contract for the payment of money is made in one State, which is payable in another, without any stipulation as to interest, the rate of interest is to be governed by the law of the place where it is payable. Pomeroy v. Ainsworth, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; reversing s. c., 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.)

587; Berrien v. Wright, 26 Barb. 208. Cartwright v. Green, 47 Barb. 9; Hildreth v. Shepard, 65 Barb. 265; Warren v. Lynch, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 239; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9; Barb. (N. Y.) 309; Archer v. Watts & S. (Pa.) 327; Wood v. Pa. St. 241; Schell v. Stetson Leg. Intel. 14; Irvine v. Barrett, (Pa.), 73; Bushby v. Camac, 4 W. 296; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65. See also ante § 1, b. tit. "INTEREST."

A letter of guaranty, written in the United States, but to be executed in another country, must be construed according to the law of that country. Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 169. And a bond for a certain sum of sterling money, to be paid in Ireland, under a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in some court in Ireland, is payable in British sterling money, but bears interest. Bushby v. Camac, 4 W. 296.

Where a note was made in Jamaica, but payable in New York, the contract was held to be governed by the laws of New York. Thompson v. Ketcham, 4 Johns. 285; s. c., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 189. The Nebraska supreme court has held that the validity of a promissory note made in Nebraska, and payable in New York, is determined by the laws of Nebraska. Miller, 14 Neb. 91.

The law of the place where goods are to be delivered, according to a contract, determines their mercantile quality. Dulany v. Dulany, 1 Cr. C. C. 583. But where an agent sold goods to a person in New York, subject to the approval of his principal, who resided in New York, and the principal approved the contract, the goods were delivered in Connecticut, and the payment was expected to be made to the agent, it was held that the contract was governed by the laws of the latter State. Lewis v. McCabe, 49 Conn. 141.

The effect of the indorsement of a bill of lading, in one State, of a private warehouse receipt for goods stored in another State, is to be determined by the law of the State. Hallgarten v. Oldham, 111 U. S. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 433. But it was held that, on a bill of lading issued in New York for goods in Pennsylvania, New York law governs. Brooke v. N. L. E., etc., R. Co. (Pa.), 1 Cent. R.

A passenger contract to be performed in another State, by a railroad company incorporated by such State, is governed by the laws thereof, though the ticket was purchased elsewhere. Brown v. C. & A. R. R. Co., 83 Pa. St. 316. But where a contract is made by a common carrier in one State to transport goods from that State into another, and the goods are delivered in the latter State, the rights of the parties are gov-

But the remedy upon it will be governed by the law of the State in which a remedy is sought.<sup>1</sup> And if, by the law of the place, where a remedy is sought on a contract, it is not a sealed instrument, although it would be considered as under seal in the place where it was made, covenant will not lie upon it.<sup>2</sup> Where a contract is made in one State, and intended to have effect in another, it must conform to the laws of the latter State.<sup>3</sup>

2. LEX LOCI REI SITÆ. — a. Real Property. — That all real property, and contracts and instruments affecting the title thereto, and immovable property, are exclusively subject to the laws of the government within whose territory the land is situated, is the generally accepted doctrine, both in America<sup>4</sup> and in Eng-the law of the State in which the loss happens. Gray v. Jackson, 51 N. H. 9.

It has been held that the New Jersey statute giving a lien for work done on vessels in that State, applies if the work is done there, although the contract is made in another State. Baeder v. Carnie, 44 N. J. L. 208.

A purchase of movable effects in another State, for delivery in Louisiana, to be paid for on inspection, evidences a contract to be executed in Louisiana, and the Louisiana law applies as to the vendor's privilege to secure payment of the credit instalments. McIlvaine v. Legare, 36 La. An. 359. Yet it has been held that an agreement made in Alabama to deliver lumber in Georgia for the building of a house there, is governed by the Georgia mechanics' lien laws; and the fact that the contractor is a citizen of Alabama, does not alter those laws.

executed in New York, real estate in joint guaranty, &c. and others. Citizens of San Francisco assignment benefit of his bonds provides that, if indebted on a state shall be fact had been d, (1) that the and the liability by the laws of W. was liable on so guar-
v. Draper, 23

Mo. 56; Dorsey v. Hardesty, 9 Mo. 157.
An instrument in the form of a promissory note, made in Vermont, the scroll "L. S." being at the end of the maker's name (which by the laws of that State, constitutes a seal), and payable in New York, is to be governed by the laws of New York, and is but a simple contract. Warren v. Lynch, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 239; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 508; Ayre's Case, 6 C. H. Rec. 30.

380.

they are not discharged by an extension, the agreement for which was not in writing, signed by the creditor. Howard v. Fletcher, 59 N. H. 151.

2 Broadhead v. Noyes, 9 Mo. 56; Dorsey v. Hardesty, 9 Mo. 157.

3 Stricker v. Tinkham, 35 Ga. 176; Wooten v. Miller, 15 Miss. (7 Smed. & M.) 380.

Thus, it was held in a suit on two notes given as collateral security for a deposit with a bank of Illinois, by a bank of another State, of its notes of a denomination of less than five dollars, for circulation in Illinois, that although the arrangement was made in another State, the law of Illinois, where it was to be carried out, and where the notes were payable, must govern; and that it made no difference whether the foreign bank knew of the illegality of the transaction under the Illinois laws or not.

Lewis v. Headley, 36 Ill. 433.
But it is held by some courts that a contract entered into in one State, concerning personal property, when the property is situated, and the contract to be performed, in another State, must be made according to the law of the State where the contract is entered into, not according to the law of the State where it is to be performed. Dacosta v. Davis, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 319.

4 United States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 115; Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 577; Oakey v. Bennett, 11 How. (U. S.) 33; Christian Union v. Yount, 101 U. S. 352; Darby v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 465; McCormick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 192; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 566; land.<sup>1</sup> And the title thereto can be acquired and lost, and devised thereof made only in the manner prescribed by the law of the place where the land is situate.<sup>2</sup>

(1) Distinctive Features of Real Property. — Real property does not depend altogether upon the will of private individuals, but is regarded as having certain qualities impressed upon it by the law of the country where it is situate. These qualities remain independent of whatever the laws of another State, or the private dispositions of its citizens, may provide to the contrary. The State in which any real property is situated cannot suffer its own laws to be changed by such laws or dispositions of foreign States and citizens, without great confusion and prejudice to its own interests. For this reason the law of a place where real property is situated governs exclusively as to the tenure, the title,<sup>3</sup> and Chapman v. Robertson, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 627; Harper v. Hampton, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 622, 687; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514, 518; Cutter v. Davenport, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 81, 86; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460, s. c., 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 254; Nicholson v. Leavitt, 4 Sanf. (N. Y.) 276; Hosford v. Nichols, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 220; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 353, 4 Cow. 510, 527; Wills v. Cowper, 2 Ohio, 124; Augusta Ins. Co. v. Morton, 3 La. An. 418.

1 Curtis v. Hutton, 14 Ves. 537, 541; Elliott v. Minto, 6 Madd. 16; Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Moore, P. C. 98, 131, 132; Tulloch v. Hartley, 1 Younge & C. 114; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 665; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402; Selkrig v. Davies, 2 Rose, 97; s. c., 2 Dow. 230; Coppin v. Coppin, 2 P. Wms. 290, 293; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 130; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & Cress. 438. See, also, 2 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 9, pp. 840-870; 4 Id. pt. 2, ch. 4; § 5, p. 150; Id. ch. 5, n. 11, pp. 71, 217; Id. ch. 12, p. 576; Föelix, Conflict des Lois, Revue, Étrang. et Franç. tom. i. §§ 27-37, pp. 216-250, 307-312 (ed. 1740); Vattel, b. 2, ch. 8, §§ 100, 103; Pothier, Coutume d'Orléans, ch. 1, §§ 22-24; Id., ch. 3, n. 51; Hertii Opera, tom. i. de Collis. Leg. § 4, n. 9, p. 125 (ed. 1737); Bouhier, Cout. de Bourg. ch. 23, §§ 36-63; Le Burn, de la Communauté, lib. 1, ch. 5, pp. 9, 10; D'Agnesseau, Œuvres, tom. iv. p. 660 (4to ed.); Cochin, Œuvres, tom. i. p. 545 (4to ed.); 1 Froland, Mém. ch. 4, p. 49; Id., ch. 7, p. 155; Liverm. Dissert. §§ 9-162, pp. 28-106; Ersk. Inst. B. 3, tit. 2, § 40, p. 515; 2 Bell, Comm. (4th ed.), § 1266, p. 690; Henry on Foreign Law, 12, 14, 15, Id., Appx. 169.

The 24th section of the Act of Sept. 24, 1789, is a mere legislative recognition of the principles of universal jurisprudence as to the operation of the lex loci. man v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.)

2 United States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. 115; Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. 577; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) McCormick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. 192; Darby v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) Watts v. Waddle, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 389; Manufacturing Co. v. Brown, 2 W. & M. C. C. 450; Root v. Brother McL. C. C. 230; Jeter v. Fellowes, St. 465; Abell v. Douglass, 4 Denio (305. And see Giddings v. Eastman, 6 Ch. (N. Y.) 19; Hawley v. James, 7 Ch. (N. Y.) 213; Mills v. Fogal, 4 Ch. (N. Y.) 559; Monroe v. Doug Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 126; s. c., 5 N. Y. White v. Howard, 46 N. Y. 144; D son v. Phillips, 18 Pa. St. 170; Cha v. Robertson, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 627; Potter v. Titcomb, 22 Me. 300; Cu Hutton; 14 Ves. 537, 541; Elliott v. 6 Madd. 16; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 5 & Cress. 438; s. c., 9 Bligh, 32-88.

The disposition of real estate, whether by deed, descent, or other mode, must be governed by the laws of the State in which the land is situated. Pittsburgh & R. R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. 109. And though a person having no legal title to land in one State, may be decreed by a court of equity in another State, to convey the land, yet neither decree, nor any conveyance in execution of it, by one not having the title, can operate beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 30. An inquisition of lunacy, taken in another State, confers no power to sell the land or real estate in New York, for his maintenance. Ex parte Perkins, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 124.

3 The law of the situs must determine what constitutes title and seisin, and what descent<sup>1</sup> of such property;<sup>2</sup> and a deed or will transferring real property, made in a foreign country, or in another State of the Union, must be executed in the form and with the formalities required by the laws of the State where the land is situated.<sup>3</sup>

(2) Conveyance of Real Estate.—All instruments and contracts conveying or affecting the title to real estate must be executed in the form and with those solemnities prescribed by the law where the law is situated, in order to have any validity;<sup>4</sup> and such contracts and instruments are to be construed and given effect to by the law of the situs.<sup>5</sup> a covenant of title and seisin be broken. Kling v. Sejour, 4 La. An. 128.

<sup>1</sup> Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & Cress. 438. But see s. c., in 9 Bligh, 32-88; 2 Clark & Finn. 571.

Where lands of an infant in another State are sold by partition proceedings there, if by the law of that State the proceeds are considered personal estate, they will pass as such in another State, although the infant is a resident in such other State. Oberle v. Lerch, 3 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 346, 575.

<sup>2</sup> Lawrence's Wheat., 164, 166; Huberus, i. iv. i. 3, de Conf. Leg. § 15.

<sup>3</sup> United States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 115; Robinson v. Campbell, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 212.

<sup>4</sup> "No one maintains that a form expressly imposed as an exclusive one by the lex situs can even be dispensed with." Westlake, Priv. Int. L. § 87.

But this application of the rule is said to be peculiar to American and British laws, and that, "according to the international jurisprudence recognized among the different nations of the European continent, a deed or will, executed according to the laws of the place where it is made, is valid; not only as to personal but as to real property, wherever situated; provided the property is allowed by the lex loci rei sitæ to be alienated by deed or will; and those cases excepted, where that law prescribes as to instruments for the transfer of real property, particular forms, which can only be observed in the place where it is situated, such as the registry of a deed on the probate of a will." Lawrence's Wheaton, 165; Fœlix, Droit Intern. Privé, § 52; Huberus, i. iv. tit. 3, de Conf. Leg. § 15.

However, the French law, by requiring every act, in reference to the transfer inter vivos of real property, of rights susceptible of hypothecation, to be inscribed at a particular place, prevents the operation of a transfer made elsewhere, according to the laws of the place where made. Tripier, Codes Français, 16, 18.

<sup>4</sup> It has been declared to be the well-settled rule in America, that any title or interest in land or in other immovables, can only be acquired or lost agreeably to the law of the place where the same is situated. See Wills v. Cowper, 2 Ohio St. 124; Cutter v. Davenport, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Hosford v. Nichols, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 220; Goddard v. Sawyer, 9 Allen (Mass.) 78; Houston v. Howland, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 480; Osborn v. Adams, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 245; Rabun v. Rabun, 15 La. An. 471.

The same doctrine prevails in England, also. See Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 127, 128; Robinson v. Bland, 1 W. Black. 259; s. c., on re-agreement, 2 Burr. 1079; Scott v. Allnutt, 2 Dow. & Clark, 404; Selkirk v. Davies, 2 Dow. 230, 250; Jerningham v. Herbert, 1 Tamlyn, 103; Elliott v. Minto, 6 Madd. 16; Winchelsea v. Garety, 2 Keen, 293, 309, 310; Drummond v. Drummond, 6 Bro. Parl. C. (by Towlins) 601; 2 Darris on Statut. 648; Ersk. Inst. b. 3, tit. 9, § 4; Id., §§ 40, 41, p. 515; Henry, For. Law, pp. 12-15; 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 9, pp. 863-870; Id., ch. 20, pp. 751, 752; 2 Kames, Eq. b. 3, ch. 2, § 2; Ferguson, Mar. & Div. 401; 2 Bell, Comm. pp. 7, 8 (4th ed.); Id., § 1266, p. 690.

<sup>5</sup> Cantu v. Bennett, 39 Tex. 303; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 127, 128; 2 Darris on Statut. 648; Story, Conf. L. §§ 350 d, 364.

When a contract is made in one State for the purchase of land lying in another, and the money is to be paid in the State in which the contract is made, the lex rei sitæ will govern as to the title to the land, and the lex loci contractus, as to the effect of a failure of consideration. Glenn v. Thistle, 23 Miss. 42.

When a husband and wife in one State enter into a contract transferring land in another from the husband to the wife, the effect of such contract on the land is governed by the laws of the State in which the land is situated. Kelly v. Davis, 28 La. An. 773. Any marriage contract executed in one country will not operate upon real estate situate in another. Ordronaux v. Rey, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 33. The same

(a) Nature and Extent of Interest transferred. — The lex loci sitæ governs the nature and extent of the interest in real estate or immovables, to be disposed of by a conveyance made according to such laws.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Capacity to take Real Estate. — It is a general principle that a person, natural or artificial, must have a capacity to take, according to the law of the situs, otherwise he will be excluded from ownership.<sup>2</sup>

(c) Estates acquired by Operation of Law. — Independent of contract, express or implied, no estate can be acquired by operation of law in any other manner, or to any other extent, or by other means, than those prescribed by the lex loci rei sitæ.<sup>3</sup> is true of mutual gifts or donations between husband and wife. Story, Conf. L. §§ 143-159, 453; Liverm. Dissert. §§ 181, 182, pp. 114, 115.

<sup>1</sup> Waterhouse v. Stansfield, 9 Hare, 234; s. c., 12 Eng. L. & Eq. 206, 13 Id. 465.

Where restrictions are imposed by the lex loci rei sitæ upon the devise or transfer of real estate, such restrictions will be operative without regard to the place where the will or the deed is made. See Attorney-General v. Mill, 2 Dow. & Clark, 393; s. c., 3 Russ. 328.

<sup>2</sup> Thus, whether a foreign corporation can take and hold lands in a State, is to be determined by the lex loci rei sitæ. Boyce v. St. Louis, 29 Barb. (N.Y.) 650; s. c., 18 How. (N.Y.) Pr. 125. See Santa Clara Female Academy v. Sullivan, 116 Ill. 375; s. c., 4 West. Rep. 114; Barnes v. Suddard, 117 Ill. 237; s. c., 4 West. Rep. 134.

It is held that a bastard, although legitimated by the law of another State, does not thereby acquire the right of inheriting in Pennsylvania. Smith v. Derr, 34 Pa. St. 126.

But in Scott v. Key, 11 La. An. 232, it was held that a statute of one State, legitimating a person residing in that State, was a "real statute," and made him so far legitimate in another that he could inherit real property situated in such other State. The same doctrine prevails in England. See Shedden v. Patrick, 4 Wils. & Shaw, 89-95; cited in 5 Barn. & Cr. 444; in 3 Hagg. Ecc. 652; in 6 Bligh, 474, 475, 487; in 9 Bligh, 51, 52, 75, 76, 80; the Strathmore Peerage Case, 9 Bligh, 51; Munro v. Saunders, 6 Bligh, 468; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. 54, 59; s. c., 9 Bligh, cited 45, 46; and in some of the States of the Union. See Story, Conf. L. § 93, n. 3; also, Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, ch. 3, p. 3, § 101.

Where the laws of a country exclude aliens from holding lands, either by successions, by devise, or by purchase, title in them becomes inoperative, whatever may be the law of their domicile. Sewall v. Lee, 9 Mass. 363; Buchanan v. Deshon, 1 Md. & J. (Md.) 280; and if by the law of the situs an alien may take and hold either by purchase, succession, or devise, title in him will be valid whatever may be the law of his domicile. Story, Conf. L. § 430, p. 541.

If a person is by the law of the country for any reason, such as infancy or coverture, incapable of transferring immovable property, any transfer by such person will be invalid, although no such personal incapacity may exist under the law of the domicile, and vice versa. See Saul v. His Creditors, 17 Martin (La.), 569, 597.

Foreign and Continental jurists generally, but not universally, hold that the question of legitimacy or illegitimacy, as well as the capacity to dispose of real estate, is to be determined exclusively by the law of the domicile of origin; and by the law of the country where a husband was born, such bastard is legitimate. After the subsequent marriage of his parents there, he ought everywhere to be regarded as legitimate; and vice versa. See Liverm. Dissert. § 44, p. 48; §§ 47, 48, p. 50; p. 52; §§ 59-62, pp. 58-60; 1 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. I, pp. 101-106; Boullenois, obs. 4, pp. 64; Id., obs. 5, p. 102; Id., obs. 12, p. 103; Id., obs. 13, p. 183; Id., obs. 23, p. 499; obs. 28, pp. 700, 705, 720; Id., Questions, p. 19; Vinnius, ad. Inst. lib. 1, tit. 1, § 1, n. 1; Huberus, de Conn. Leg. lib. 3, § 9; Stockmanus, Decis. 125, § 6, p. 1; J. Voët, Comm. ad. Pand. lib. 1, tit. 1, p. 40; Bouhier, Cout. de Bourg. C. 1, § 122, 123, p. 481; Hertii, de Collis. tom. 1, § 4, n. 15, p. 184 (ed. 1716); Id., land, Mém. Ch. 5, § 4, p. 89 (ed. 1716); Id., ch. 7, § 2, p. 156; Roudenburg, de Stat. tit. 2, ch. 1. Compare Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, Tract. 1, ns. 7, 8, pp. 19, 20; Bartol. Cod. lib. 1, tit. 1, n. 27; Bartol. tom. 7, p. 5.

<sup>3</sup> See Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 7 Cl. & F. 67; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves.

(3) Immovables not Land. — Among the class of immovables, not land and houses, are servitudes and easements,<sup>1</sup> and other charges on lands, as mortgages, ground-rents, trust estates, "heritable bonds," dowry, tenancy by courtesy, and all other things, movable or immovable in their nature, which by the local law are deemed immovables, and governed by the lex loci.<sup>2</sup>

(4) Incumbrance of Real Property. — The validity of a mortgage of land situated in another State is to be governed by the law of that State, although the parties may reside, and the instrument be executed, in another State.<sup>3</sup> Thus, a conveyance of lands executed in another State to secure the repayment of a loan of money is governed by the laws of the State where the lands lie and the suit is brought.<sup>4</sup>

b. Personal Property. — The general doctrine is, that a disposition of personal property, or movables, is to be governed by the law of the domicile of the owner, and not by the law of the place where they are situated;<sup>5</sup> and this view is maintained by nearly all foreign jurists, ancient and modern.<sup>6</sup>

127; Gambier v. Gambier, 7 Sim. 263, 270; Story, Conf. L. § 448, p. 569. Liverm. Dissert. §§ 88, 89, pp. 72, 73.

Hence persons married where the law of community exists, owning immovable property in a State where it does not exist, on the death of the husband, the wife would be entitled to a dower interest only, and not to a moiety in fee simple; and on the death of the wife, the husband would be entitled to a tenancy by courtesy simply. Story, Conf. L. § 454, p. 572.

1 All servitudes and easements, and other charges on lands, are deemed to be, in the sense of the law, immovables, and governed by the lex rei sitæ. Pittsburg & St. L. R. R. Co. v. Rothschild (Pa.), 4 Cent. Rep. 109. And in determining whether a conveyance of real estate contains a covenant that runs with the land, the lex rei sitæ governs. Fisher v. Parry, 68 Ind. 465.

2 Chatfield v. Berchtoldt, 25 L. T. (N. S.)

111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

57, 382, 447; -652; 2 Id., 2, §§ 9-20; Traité des re movables ven locality,

: lex loci rei
6 Paige Ch.

.); s. c., 25
1, 303; God-
Mass., 78;
amlyn, 103;
Appx. Cas.
5, 67, note;
: Shaw, 61;
5, 15; Id.,
.. 8, § 2, p.

328; 2 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 9, p. 865.

Thus, where a married woman in Ohio executes in that State a mortgage on her real property in Indiana, the contract is governed by the law of the latter State; and if the mortgage is given to secure the husband's debt, will be invalid. Swank v. Hufnagle (Ind.); s. c., 25 Cent. L. J. 60, 11; 12 N. E. Rep. 303.

But a mortgage of real estate being personal property, the assignment thereof is to be governed by the law of the State where the contract of assignment is made, and not by that where the land is situated. Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McL. C. C. 397.

4 Klinck v. Price, 4 W. Va. 4; Oregon & Wash. Trust Co. v. Rathbun, 5 Sawy. C. C. 32.

When not varied by contract, the law of the State where a mortgage is executed, and the mortgaged property situated, furnishes the rule for determining the rights of the mortgagor after condition broken. Dow v. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 260.

A mortgage conveying substantially all a debtor's property, including lands in another State, is governed, as to whether it operates as a general assignment, as to those lands, by the law of the State where they are situated. Danner v. Brewer, 69 Ala. 191.

5 See Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Moore, P. C. 98, 132; Thomson v. Advocate-General, 13 Sim. 153, 160. In re Bruce, 2 Cromp. & Jerv. 436; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35; 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 20, pp. 750-752; 1 Kames Eq. b. 3, ch. § 3; Ersk. Inst. b. 3, tit. 2, § 40, p. 515; Story, Conf. L. §§ 364.

6 See Boullenois, Prin. Gen. 33, p. 8; 1

The doctrine that movables follow the person<sup>1</sup> has received such general sanction that it may now be regarded as part of the jus gentium,<sup>2</sup> and has been maintained both in England<sup>3</sup> and America<sup>4</sup> "with unbroken confidence and general unanimity."

Hence by the law of the owner's domicile is to be determined the validity of each transfer, alienation, or disposition of personal property, whether it be inter-vivos or post-mortem.<sup>5</sup>

Boullenois, obs. 20, p. 348; 2 Boullenois, Appx. pp. 6, 48; Liverm. Dissert. pp. 128, 129, 130, 162, 163; P. Voet, de Statut. ch. 2, § 4, n. 8, p. 126 (ed. 1715); Fœlix, Conflict des Lois, Revue Étrang. et Franç. tom. 7, pp. 216-227 (ed. 1840); J. Voet, ad Pand. lib. 1, tit. 4, pt. 2, § 11, p. 44; 2 Id., lib. 38, tit. 17, n. 34, p. 596; i. Hertii Opera, de Collis. Leg. § 4, n. 6, pp. 122, 123 (ed. 1737); Rodenburg, de Divers. Stat. tit. 1, ch. 2; Id., tit. 2, ch. 5, § 16; 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 1, ch. 20, pp. 750, 751; D'Argentré, de Leg. Brit. tom. 1, des Donations, art. 218, Gloss. 6, n. 30, p. 654; Bouhier, Cout. de Bourg. ch. 25, § 2, p. 490; Burgundus, Tract. 2, n. 20, pp. 71, 72.

<sup>1</sup> Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N.Y.) 487.

It has been said that, if the lex loci rei sitæ "were generally to prevail in regard to movables, it would be utterly impossible for the owner in many cases to know in what manner to dispose of them during his life, or to distribute them at his death, not only in the uncertainty of their situation in the transit to and from different places, but from the impracticability of knowing with minute accuracy the law of transfers inter vivos or of testamentary dispositions and successions in the different countries in which they might happen to be. Any change of place at a future time might defeat the best considered will, and any sale or donation might be rendered inoperative from the ignorance of the parties of the law of the actual situs at the time of their acts. There would be serious evils pervading the whole community, and equally affecting the subjects and interests of all civilized nations. But in maritime nations, depending upon commerce for their revenues, their power, and their glory, the mischief would be incalculable. A sense of general utility, therefore, must have first suggested the doctrine; and, as soon as it was promulgated, it could not fail to recommend itself to all nations by its simplicity, its convenience, and its enlarged policy." Story, Conf. L. § 379, p. 478. See Swearingen v. Morris, 14 Ohio St. 28; Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, C. C. 412.

<sup>2</sup> Bremer v. Truman, 10 Moore, P. C. 358; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 690;

Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 408; Bruce v. Bruce, 2 Bos. & Pull. 23; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Kames, Eq. b. 3, ch. 8, § 3; Ersk. 3, tit. 2, § 40; Story, Conf. L. § 379.

"It is a clear proposition, not only of the law of England, but of every country in the world where law has the sanction of science, that personal property follows the person of the owner, but that it is subject to that law in respect to the disposition of it, and to the transmission of it, by succession or by the act of the person. The law of the country in which the person in any country may dispose of his property is, but the law of the country of which the property is a subject, that will regulate the disposition." Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 690; Hoffman v. Carow, 22 Wend. (N.Y.) 323; Thomson v. Advocate-Gen. of Scotland, 1 Clark & Finn. 1.

<sup>3</sup> Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Moo. 98, 131, 132; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402, 405; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182, 192; Bruce v. Bruce, 2 Bos. & Pull. 23 (note); Pipon v. Pipon, Amb. 249; whistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & C. 452; Selkrig v. Davies, 1 Rose, B. 478; In re Ewin 1 Tyrwhitt, 151; on Foreign Law, pp. 13-15; Karb. b. 3, ch. 8, §§ 3, 4; Ersk. Inst. 2, § 40, p. 515; Dwarria on Statu. 6; 2 Bell, Comm. (5th ed.) 2-10; Dissert. 128-132; 3 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 20, pp. 749-751.

<sup>4</sup> French v. Hall, 9 N. H. 137; Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286, 314; Ewin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514, 517; D. v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 1; Guier v. O'Daniel, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 3; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. 460; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. 517 note; 2 Kent, Com., 405, 428. <sup>5</sup> Story, Conf. L. § 380, p. 479. <sup>6</sup> French v. Hall, 9 N. H. 137; v. Little, 9 N. H. 271; Roe Highlant, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 522.

This is true unless there is positive enactment or customary law of the country where they are situate, providing

(1) Sale valid according to Lex Loci Contractus, but invalid according to Lex Loci Rei Sitæ. — By the common law a sale of movables is complete without delivery;<sup>1</sup> but in those States where the laws are founded upon the civil law, as in Louisiana, delivery is necessary to complete the transfer:<sup>2</sup> hence, whenever there is a transfer of personal property situated in a State where the civil-law rule prevails, by a person domiciled in a State where the common law is supreme, according to the lex loci contractus, there must of necessity be a conflict of principles as to the validity of the transaction.<sup>3</sup> cial cases, or unless from the nature of the property it has an implied locality. See Herrick v. King, 19 N. J. Eq. (4 C. E. Gr., 80; Bentley v. Whittemore, 19 N. J. Eq. (4 C. E. Gr.) 465; Moore v. Bonnell, 31 N. J. L. (2 Vr.) 92; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 361.

It seems that contracts respecting public stocks or funds are to be carried into execution according to the local law. Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1079; s. c., 1 W. Black. 47.

To the same class belong all local stock or funds, such as bank stock, insurance stock, turnpike or canal or bridge shares, and all other incorporeal property owing to or regulated by local laws. See Attorney-General v. Bouwens, 4 Mees. & W. 171, 191-193; Attorney-General v. Hope, 1 Crompt., M. & R. 538; s. c., 8 Bligh, 44; 2 Clark & Finn. 84; Attorney-General v. Dimond, 1 Crompt. & Jerv. 356, 370, 371.

Such property can be transferred only in the manner prescribed by the local laws. See In re Ewin 1 Tyrwh. 151; Attorney-General v. Dimond, 1 Tyrwh. 243.

But in the case of Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207, where a canal and banking corporation of New Jersey owned a mortgage security, which they sold and transferred in the State of New York to a bona fide purchaser for value, it was held that such purchaser acquired a perfect title to the mortgage security, notwithstanding the fact that by the law of New Jersey, where the corporation was created and had its situs, the transfer was inoperative as to creditors. See also Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9.

<sup>1</sup> But this is only as between the parties, not as to third persons. To complete his title, the purchaser must take possession within a reasonable time; and if the property be at sea, or in transitu from another State, and is incapable of delivery, the title, though complete without delivery, may be lost by an omission to take possession within a reasonable time after its arrival. See Laufear v. Sumner, 17 Mass. 110; Bholen v. Cleveland, 5 Mason, C. C. 174; Meeker v. Wilson, 1 Gall. C. C. 419; Long on Sales (ed. 1839), 259; 3 Chitty, Comm. Manuf. 272; 1 Black. Com. 446, 448; 2 Kent, Com. 492, 493, 498, 515-522.

By the law of England and of other commercial States, the legal title to goods passes by the mere indorsement and delivery of the bill of lading, without any actual manual possession of the goods represented by it. Lickharrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63; Desty on Admr. & Ship.; Abbott on Shipp. pt. 3, ch. 9, § 16; Story, Conf. L. § 395, p. 498.

<sup>2</sup> Durnford v. Brooks' Syndics, 3 Martin (La.), 222, 225; Morris v. Mumford, 4 Martin (La.), 20; Fisk v. Chandler, 7 Martin (La.), 24; McNeil v. Glass, 13 Martin (La.), 261; Olivier v. Townes, 14 Martin (La.), 93, 162.

This is in accordance with the requirements of the well-known rule in the civil law, "Traditionibus et usucapionibus dominia rerum non nudis pactis, transferuntur." Cod. lib. 2 tit. 3, l. 20.

The doctrine as set forth by the Louisiana decisions has been vigorously assailed. See Liverm. Dissert. §§ 220-223; Taylor v. Boardman, 25 Vt. 589; Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 635; Southern Bank v. Wood, 14 La. An. 561; Hughes v. Klingender, 14 La. An. 52. But this attack is made from the stand-point of the common law.

<sup>3</sup> Thus in Olivier v. Townes, 14 Martin (La.), 93, 102, where a ship was sold in Virginia, but before delivery was attached by creditors at New Orleans, and the court held the sale void as to the attaching creditors. And see Lanfear v. Sumner, 17 Mass. 110; Lamb v. Durant, 12 Mass. 54; Caldwell v. Ball, 1 T. R. 205. Compare Bholen v. Cleveland, 5 Mason, C. C. 174; Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 386, 445; Nathan v. Giles, 5 Taunt. 558.

But in the case of Thuret v. Jenkins, 1 Martin (La.), 318, 353, 354, a ship belonging at New York, and owned there, was transferred while at sea, according to the law of New York, and the ship subsequently arrived at New Orleans, and was attached there before delivery to the vendee, the court held that where a chattel which is "at sea, or in any other place, if any there be, in which the law of no particular country prevails, the bargain will have its full effect, eo instanti, as to the whole world. And the circumstance of the chattel being afterwards brought into a country, according to the law of which the sale would be invalid, would not effect it." The doctrine of this case has since been affirmed in the case of Southern Bank v. Wood, 14 La. An. 561.

It has been said that personal property is subject to the law of the situs, without regard to the domicile of the owner;<sup>1</sup> and the validity of a chattel mortgage upon property in another State must be determined by the law of that State.<sup>2</sup> It is competent for a State to adopt such a rule in its own legislation, having perfect jurisdiction over all property, movable as well as immovable, within its territorial limits.<sup>3</sup>

In Simpson v. Fogo, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 195, where a vessel had been mortgaged in England, and was taken to New Orleans by the mortgagor, in whose possession she was left, and there attached by creditors, citizens of Louisiana, in an action to recover their debt, but not on a proceeding in rem. The mortgagee intervened and claimed possession of the property. The Louisiana court refused to recognize his right, though valid in England, and sold the ship for the benefit of the Louisiana creditors, and distributed the proceeds amongst them. On the ship being taken subsequently to England, the mortgagee set up his claim, which the English court of exchequer sustained on the ground that the Louisiana judgment was examinable for error on its face, by reason of its disregard of the comity of nations, and was only a judgment inter partes and not in rem. This doctrine was approved there in the subsequent case of the Liverpool & Marine Credit Co. v. Hunter, L. R. 4 Eq. 62; s. c., L. R. 3 ch. App. 479.

<sup>1</sup> Guillander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 657.

The validity of a sale and delivery of personal property in another State, must be determined by the law of the situs. Born v. Shaw, 29 Pa. St. 288; Baltimore & O. R. R. Co. v. Hoge, 34 Pa. St. 214; D'Ivernois v. Leavitt, 23 Barb. (N.Y.) 63.

Under an agreement for the construction and delivery of certain machinery, which is to remain the property of the vendors until payment of the purchase-money, they are not bound to deliver it, in order to its erection in another State, by the laws of which it would become part of the realty. Hawkins v. Brown, 30 Barb. (N.Y.) 206.

Where the plaintiff's firm in New York sent goods by railroad to the plaintiff's firm in Boston, where they were destroyed by fire while in the freight-house of the defendant company, and it appeared that by the law of Massachusetts (Rice v. Hart, 118 Mass. 201) the carrier was not liable under the circumstance proved, it was held that that law must govern the case, and the action could not be maintained. Hart v. Hart, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. R.

Where a married woman, domiciled in Maryland, owned stock in a bank in Virginia, where the relations of husband and wife are determined by the rule of the common law, a judgment of dividends to the husband was held to discharge the bank from liability. Bank v. Norfolk Bank, 84 N. Y. 393; 38 Am. Rep. 528.

The tax laws of a State are not repugnant, as applied to shares of national banks, on the ground that such laws would interfere with the operation of such institutions, as the fiscal agent of the government of the United States. Haight, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 399; State v. Haight, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 434.

<sup>2</sup> Watson v. Campbell, 38 N. Y. 335; s. c., 6 Tr. App. (N. Y.) 335; Tyler v. Strang, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 528.

The law of the situs, and not the law of the domicili, governs chattel mortgages. Where a mortgage was executed and recorded in Illinois, upon personal property in Indiana, but was recorded in the State, and no delivery was made to the mortgagee, it was held to be invalid as against attaching creditors. Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512; s. c., 40 A. 258. And a mortgage of chattels in New Hampshire, and not conforming to the law of New Hampshire, but of Massachusetts, where the mortgage was made and the parties resided, has been held to be invalid as against an attaching creditor. Clark v. Tarbell, 58 N. H. 88. Where a mortgagor of chattels removes to another State, the mortgagee, to serve his rights, need not again re-mortgage in such other State. Kennedy v. Stimson, 32 Minn. 377.

Though a chattel mortgage, executed in another State, be valid, without regard to the property, by the lex loci contractus, yet, if the mortgagor take the property into another State, and sell to a purchaser, the title of the latter will be good under the lex loci rei sitæ. McBryre, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 615; McBryre v. Jones, 2 Clark (Pa.) 123.

<sup>3</sup> Vide ante, this title, § 1, 48 EIGHTY AND JURISDICTION OF NA

(2) Assignment of Choses in Action. — In some countries the assignment of a debt is valid without notice to the debtor; in others, notice to the debtor is necessary to perfect the title in the vendee.<sup>1</sup> It would seem that in England an assignment of personal property, whether it be goods held or debts owing, according to the law of the domicile of the owner, will pass the title in whatever country such debt or chose in action is situated, in the absence of any prohibitory law in that country.<sup>2</sup> In America an assignment, made by a creditor residing in a foreign country, according to the formalities and requirements of the laws of that country, will be recognized and enforced, even though it be informal, provided only it be good jure gentium.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Foreign Assignments for Benefit of Creditors. — A voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors, with preferences, if valid, lished for the prorchasers has been en to the reproach narrow or selfish er v. Howell, 35

Bonnell, 2 Vr.

9 Fla. 104; 3 Burge,
Law, pt. 2, ch. 20,
fl. L. § 395, p. 498.
ine which prevails

generally throughout the American States, the assignment of a debt or chose in action operates, per se, as an equitable transfer of the debt; but notice to the debtor is necesof pay-to the rge the 4 John.

enck, 3
4 Mass.
Wood v.
Cleve-

2, 192;
92, 93;
R. 277,
k. 665,
k. 691—
k. 131,
s, 223;
Las. 97,
Dow. &
v. Saunid Mer-

ere the it coun-
it laws,
r ought 8, § 4.
R. 185;
Dissert.
s. Stat.
, 48, 49.

It has been held in this country that an assignment of a chose in action, valid by the law of the place of the domicile of the payee, but not perfected according to the law of the place of the domicile of the payor, which requires notice to him of such assignment, will not defeat a valid attachment according to the law of the rei sitæ. See Ward v. Morrison, 25 Vt. 593;
Emerson v. Partridge, 27 Vt. 8. But in Culver v. Benedict, 13 Gray (Mass.), 7, it was said that when the law of the place of assignment gives the assignee perfect title under such assignment, the effect of the assignment, and of the title acquired under it, is to be determined by the law of the place where the assignment was made.

3 Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.)
286, 307, 314; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John.
Ch. (N. Y.) 460, 486; s. c., 20 Johns. (N. Y.)
229, 267; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.)
353, 361, 369.

Where a creditor has assigned a debt due to him from a person residing in a foreign State, which debt is liable to attachment or garnishment there, and before notice of such assignment is given, the debt is attached or garnished by a creditor of the assignor, according to the law of the rei sitæ, it seems that such will not avail if the debtor receives notice of such assignment pendente lite, and in time to set it up in discharge of the suit against him. See Foster v. Sinkler, 4 Mass. 450; Dix v.
Cobb, 4 Mass. 508; Wood v. Partridge, 11
Mass. 488; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick.
(Mass.), 286, 307, 308, 314; Richardson v.
Leavitt, 1 La. An. 430; Merchants' Bank
v. Bank of United States, 2 La. An. 659;
Chewning v. Johnson, 5 La. An. 678;
Southern Bank v. Wood, 14 La. An. 561;
Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.),
460, 486; Muir v. Schenck, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 228.

by the laws of the State where made, and where he resides, will be valid and binding in all other jurisdictions.

It is an unsettled question whether an involuntary assignment by operation of law in the domicile which is sufficient under the bankrupt or insolvent law has universal operation, so as to transfer the mortgage to the party situated in other countries, and with the process of local or foreign laws by way of arrest, the like, in favor of foreign creditors in the case of movable property is situated. The courts of this country hold that the assignment has an universal operation wherever situated at the time;<sup>1</sup> but most of the States of the Union confine the operations of such an assignment to the territory where the party is declared to be a bankrupt.

<sup>1</sup> Richardson v. Leavitt, 1 La. An. 430; Merchants' Bank v. Bank of United States, 2 La. An. 659; Chewning v. Johnson, 5 La. An. 678; Paradise v. Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of Memphis, 5 La. An. 710. The same rule is said to apply to real estate situated in Louisiana, assigned by an owner residing in a foreign State. See Chewning v. Johnson, 5 La. An. 678; Merchants' Bank v. Bank of United States, 2 La. An. 659.

<sup>2</sup> See Wadham v. Marlow, 1 H. Black. 437-439, note; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 690, 691; In re Wilson, 1 H. Black. 691, 692; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402, 405; Wadham v. Marlow, 8 East, 314, 316, note 1; Solomons v. Ross, 1 H. Black. 131, note 691; Jollet v. Deponthieu, 1 H. Black. 132, note 691; Neal v. Cottingham, 1 H. Black. 132, note; Quelin v. Moisson, 1 Knapp, Appeal, 266, note; Ex parte Blakes, 1 Cox, 398; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 665, 690, 691, 694; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 192; s. c., in Error, 2 H. Black. 402; Royal Bank of Scotland v. Cuthbert, 1 Rose, Bank Cas. Appx. 472; 2 Rose, Bank Cas. 78, 91; Smith v. Buchanan, 1 East, 6; Selkirk v. Davies, 2 Rose, Bank Cas. 291, 314; s. c., 2 Dow. 230, 250; In re Blithman, 35 Beav. 219; 2 Bell, Comm. B. 8, ch. 2, § 1266, pp. 684-690 (4th ed.); Liverm. Dissert. 140; Beames, Lex Merc. (6th ed.) 5, 6.

It is said now to be the well-settled law of England, — "First, that an assignment under the bankrupt law of a foreign country passes all the personal property of the bankrupt locally situate, and debts owing in England; Secondly, that an attachment of such property by an English creditor, after such bankruptcy, with or without notice to him, is invalid to overreach the assignment; Thirdly, that in England the same doctrine holds under assignments, by her own bankrupt laws, as to personal property and debts of the bankrupt in foreign countries; Fourthly, attachments made in such assignment in to be held invalid; a British creditor will hold the property under an attachment in a foreign country after such a that a foreign creditor's laws, will be judgment, the local title." See, also, In re 219.

<sup>3</sup> See Blake v. V. 286; Olivier v. T. 93, 97-100; Milne v. 353; Very v. McHe v. Fredericks, 4 Z. v. Hubbard, 28 Co. entine, 1 Curt. C. 17 How. (U. S.) 32 23 Ark. 526; Thur in 35 N. Y. 661; 2 91; Law v. Mills, 18 v. Peshine, 1 C. E. Rogers v. Allen, ; McCullough v. Ro born v. Adams, 18 v. Breed, 7 Cush. Columbian Ins. Co Pingree v. Hudson (Mass.), 170; Wall & McH. (Md.) 463 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 1 Page, Ch. (N. Y.) 1 13 Mass. 146; Harv S.) 289; Ogden v. S.) 213, 360-369; N. H. 213; Fox v. v. Armory, 11 Ma ster, 2 Wall. Jr. C v. Bank of United 2 Kent, Com. 404-and with the English doctrine;<sup>1</sup> but is well as current of the decisions, situs of the subject of a power capacity to contract. — Personal Status. Contract depends upon the law of the place of personal ability or disability.<sup>4</sup> of Creditors. — The validity of an assignment to creditors is to be tested by the law in Estate, 1 Pars. Cas. (Pa.) 399. And where a husband and wife residing in Mississippi, made in that State a contract transferring lands in Louisiana from the husband to the wife, it was held that her capacity to take lands from the husband must be determined by the law of Mississippi; but the effect of the contract on the lands must be determined by the law of Louisiana. Kelly v. Davis, 28 La. An. 773.

But it has been held by a federal court that the capacities and incapacities of an individual are to be determined by the law of the place where the person is, and not by that of his domicile. Polydore v. Prince, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 402, citing and reviewing Medway v. Needham, 16 Mass. 157; West Cambridge v. Lexington, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 506; Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; Commonwealth v. Green, 17 Mass. 515; Saul v. His Creditors, 17 Martin (La.), 596; Case of Francesco, 9 Am. Jur. 490; Butler v. Hopper, 1 Wash. C. C. 499; Ex parte Simmons, 4 Wash. C. C. 396; Lunford v. Coquillon, 14 Martin (La.), 401; Rankin v. Lydia, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 470, The Slave Grace, 2 Hagg. Adm. 105-114; Schrimshire v. Schrimshire, 2 Hagg. Cons. 407; Compton v. Bearcroft, Buller's N. P. 114; Steuart v. Somerset, 1 Black. Com. 425 note; Somerset v. Stewart, 1 Lofft's Rep. 1; Steuart v. Somerset, 11 Ed State Trials, 340; s. c., 20 How. St. Tr. 1; Forbes v. Cochrane, 2 Barn. & Cr. 448; Williams v. Brown, 3 Bos. & Pull. 69; Shanley v. Harvey, 2 Eldon Rep. 127, quoted in 2 Hagg. 116.

Livermore v. Jenckes, 21 How. (U. S.) 126; Wickham v. Dillon, 2 West, L. Mo. 511; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 131; D'Ivernois v. Leavitt, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 63; Ockerman v. Cross, 54 N. Y. 29; s. c., 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 465; Moore v. Willett, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 663; Smith's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 381.

In Maine, a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, by a debtor domiciled in another jurisdiction, will not protect his property, found in that State, from the attachment of a resident creditor. The c. Contract by Master of a Vessel.—A contract made by the master of a vessel in a foreign country is governed by the law of the owner's domicile, so far as respects his liability.<sup>1</sup>

d. Personal Property.—Personal property has no locality: the law of the owners' domicile is to determine the right to its possession,<sup>2</sup> as well as the validity of its transfer or alienation, unless there be some positive or customary law of the country where it is found to the contrary.<sup>3</sup> And a title to personal property, acquired under the laws of the domicile, is available in any other State.<sup>4</sup>

The law appertaining to the domicile of the owner determines the character of personal property.<sup>5</sup>

A transfer of stock is governed by the lex fori as to the form of the transfer; but the rights of the parties under it are determined by the lex domicilii.<sup>6</sup>

Where property is pledged as security for a debt, the domicile of the creditor is the place at which a redemption must be made.<sup>7</sup>

If a trust of personal property be valid by the law of the domicile, it will be protected on a subsequent removal of the parties into another State.<sup>8</sup> The lex domicilii governs as to the testamentary capacity.<sup>9</sup> And the validity of a bequest of personal property depends upon the lex domicilii.<sup>10</sup>

Watchman, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 232. But this rule only applies to such property as is found within the jurisdiction of the State at the time of assignment. The Watchman, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 232.

<sup>1</sup> Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 465. Thus, it has been held that the liability of an English vessel on which goods are shipped in England on an ordinary bill of lading, is to be determined according to the law of the flag. The Titania, 19 Fed. Rep. 101. And a contract of affreightment made, in a foreign port, by the master of a vessel owned in Massachusetts, for the delivery of the cargo in Pennsylvania, is governed by the law of the former State. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, C. C. 465.

<sup>2</sup> Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brock. C. C. 62.

<sup>3</sup> Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483; Speed v. May, 17 Pa. St. 91; Oakey v. Bennett, 11 How. (U. S.) 33; Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, C. C. 381.

The fiction of law, that the domicile of the owner draws to it his personal estate, wherever it may happen to be, must yield whenever, for the purpose of justice, the actual situs of the property ought to be examined. Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 139; reversing s. c., 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 119; 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 457. Thus, by the laws of Illinois, an attachment of personal property there will take precedence over an unrecorded mortgage, executed in another State, where record is not necessary, though the owner, the attaching creditor, and the mortgagee, be all residents of such other State; and effect must be given in the latter to the judgment in the attachment suit. Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 139; reversing s. c., 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 119; 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 457.

<sup>4</sup> Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 361. A deed of personal property, valid by the law of the place where the parties resided, and duly there recorded, protects their title when they afterwards remove into another State to reside. Bank of the United States v. Lee, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 107; s. c., 5 Cr. C. C. 319.

<sup>5</sup> The Kosciusko, 11 N. Y. Leg. obs. 38.

<sup>6</sup> Burr v. Sherwood, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 85. A transfer of the stock of a bank located in another State, if good by the law of the owner's domicile, passes the equitable title to it, unless the law of the State where the corporation is located, prohibits such transfer. Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483.

Contracts respecting public funds or stock, bank stock, and other property of that incorporeal nature, which owes its existence to, and is regulated by, peculiar and local laws, must be made and carried into execution according to those laws. Dow v. Gould, etc., Co., 31 Cal. 629.

<sup>7</sup> Stoker v. Cogswell, 25 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 267.

<sup>8</sup> Reid v. Gray, 37 Pa. St. 508.

<sup>9</sup> Schultz v. Dambmann, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 379.

<sup>10</sup> Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389; Des-

c. Married Women. — The status of a married woman and her capacity to carry on business in a foreign State are determined by the law of her domicile.<sup>1</sup> But it is said that the forms of contract she must use, and the manner in which she must sue, are to be determined by the lex loci actus; <sup>2</sup> and the forms of conveyance used are to be determined by the lex rei sitæ.<sup>3</sup>

Personal property, given to a married woman, is received under the law of her actual domicile, and not of the matrimonial domicile.<sup>4</sup> And a purchase of personal property by a wife, in a State where the common law prevails, vests the same in her husband: it is governed by the law of the domicile.<sup>5</sup>

The mere removal by husband and wife from another State of personal property to which the husband's marital rights had attached by the law of their former domicile, will not change the ownership of the property.<sup>6</sup>

4. OF THE LEX FORI. — a. General Rules. — The general rule is, that the operation of a contract, and the rights of the parties, so far as they depend on the construction and validity of the agreement, or on questions of sufficiency of performance, are governed by the laws of the place where it is put in suit.<sup>7</sup> The pard v. Churchill, 53 N. Y. 192; Dupuy v. Wurtz, 53 N. Y. 556.

A will of personal property must be executed according to the law of the testator's domicile at the time of his death, or it will not pass personal property in a foreign country, though executed with all the formalities required by the laws of that country. Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Guier v. O'Daniel, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502; Carey's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 201. And jurisdiction over the estate of a decedent belongs exclusively to the forum of the domicile where the assets are situate. Van Dyke's Appeal (Pa.), 31 Leg. Int. 69; s. c., 6 Leg. Gaz. 70.

The succession to and distribution of personal property is regulated by the law of the owner's domicile, not by the lex loci rei sitæ. Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Vroom v. Van Horne, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 549; Mills v. Fogal, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 559; Suarez v. New York, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 173; Parsons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103; s. c., 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 564; reversing s. c., 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 268; Graham v. Public Administrator, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 127; s. c., 10 Law Rep. 386; Public Administrator v. Hughes, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 125; Burr v. Sherwood, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 85; Mercure's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 288; Grote v. Pace, 71 Ga. 231; Hutton's Ex'rs v. Hutton (N. J.), 2 Cent. Rep. 216; Richardson v. Lewis (Mo. App.), 4 West Rep. 267.

1 Hill v. Pine River Bank, 45 N. H. 300; Cosio v. De Dernaes, 1 C. & P. 266; s. c., Ry. & Wood, 102; Story, Conf. L., § 136;

Pothier, Traité des Oblig. par. 2, ch. vi. § 3; Savigny, 137; Boullenois, i. 437-439; Fœlix, i. 188, no. 89.

Yet it has been held that where a married woman, having a separate estate in lands in Missouri, made a contract in another State, her capacity to make the contract, and its validity, are to be determined by the law of Missouri, in a suit in a Missouri court to enforce such contract against her separate estate there. Johnston v. Gawtry, 11 Mo. App. 322.

2 Ilderton v. Ilderton, 2 H. Bl. 145; Bar. Priv. Intr. L., § 53; Wächter, ii. 180.

3 Sell v. Miller, 11 Ohio St. 331.

4 Gidney v. Moore, 86 N. C. 484.

5 Davis v. Zimmerman, 67 Pa. St. 70.

6 Cahalan v. Monroe, 70 Ala. 271; Gluck v. Cox, 75 Ala. 310; Bush v. Garner, 73 Ala. 162.

Bringing a wife's property from Mississippi into Alabama could not convert an equitable title into a legal one. Gluck v. Cox, 75 Ala. 310.

7 Broughton v. Bradley, 36 Ala. 689; Maguire v. Pingree, 30 Me. 508; Carnegie v. Morrison, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 381; Phila. Loan Co. v. Towner, 13 Conn. 249; Watson v. Brewster, 1 Pa. St. 381; Watson v. Orr, 3 Dev. (N. C.) L. 161; Martin v. Martin, 9 Miss. (1 Smed. & M.) 176; Bulger v. Roche, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 36, 38; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 4; Stebbins v. Leowolf, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 137; Jones v. Jones, 18 Ala. 248; Young v. Harris, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 556; Dakin v. Pomeroy, 9 Gill (Md.), 1; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2

lex fori governs as to the form of the contract and the nature of the action.<sup>1</sup>

b. The Rule as to Remedies upon Contracts.—All questions touching the remedy to be allowed upon a contract, and the proper course of enforcing it, are to be determined by the law of the place where suit is brought, according to their own course of proceeding;<sup>2</sup> but this should be in such a manner

Harr. & J. 191; Pitkin v. Thompson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 64; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 263; Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 189; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103; Whittemore v. Adams, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 626; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 508, note; Pomeroy v. Ainsworth, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; Brown v. Free-land, 34 Miss. 181; Anderson v. Doak, 10 Ired. (N. C.) L. 295; Ayres v. Audubon, 2 Hill (S. C.), 601; Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. (S. C.) Ch. 187; Pegram v. Williams, 4 Rich. (S. C.) L. 219; Warder v. Arell, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282.

The remedial statutes of one State cannot be invoked to enforce a contract in another. Mineral Point R.R. Co. v. Barron, 83 Ill. 365.

A decree by the court of chancery in England, dismissing a bill filed by an administrator against an executor with respect to assets in that country, is no bar to a like suit in the United States, between the same parties, upon the same title, with respect to American assets. Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467; Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 44.

<sup>1</sup> Lodge v. Phelps, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 321; s. c., 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 139; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 508; Stoneman v. Erie Railway Co. 52 N. Y. 429; Watson v. Brewster, 1 Pa. St. 381; Le Roy v. Beard, 8 How. (U. S.) 451; Ayer's Case, 6 C. H. Rec. 30; Thornton v. Western Reserve Farmers' Ins. Co., 31 Pa. St. 529.

Thus, an instrument, executed with a scroll seal, though considered a deed in the place of its execution, yet, if sued on in a State where scrolls are not treated as seals, the remedy must be as upon an unsealed, simple contract. Bank of United States v. Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361; Le Roy v. Beard, 8 How. (U. S.) 451; Warren v. Lynch, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 239; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 508; Meredith v. Hinsdale, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 362; Adam v. Kerr, 1 Bos. & Pull. 360. And a note with a scroll seal, although treated as a simple contract in the State where made, yet, if sued in a State where scroll seals are valid, it will be regarded as a specialty. Watson v. Brewster, 1 Pa. St. 381; Treshar v. Everhart, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 234; Bank of United States v. Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361.

<sup>2</sup> Smith v. Atwood, 3 McL. C. Jones v. Jones, 18 Ala. 248; D. Bowler, 3 McL. C. C. 396; Cox v. 2 Ga. 158; Brent v. Shouse, 15 110; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 B. (Md.) 191; Dakin v. Pomeroy, 9 G. 1; Pitkin v. Thompson, 13 Pick. (M. Smith v. Spinolla, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) Watson v. Brewster, 1 Pa. St. 381; v. Loder, 13 N. J. L. (1 Gr.) 68; Watson, 2 Hill (S. C.), 319; McK McKissick, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 7; v. Drummond, 1 Brock. C. C. 62; & Charlotte Air Line Ry. Co. v. 68 Ga. 384; Bird v. Caritat, 2 Johns. 342; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Joh. (N. Y.) 460; Bank of the United Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361; V. Hunt, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Laird v. 26 Ark. 356; Willard v. Wood (Cent. Rep. 675; Thornton v. Wes serve Farmers' Insurance Co., 31 529; Denny v. Faulkner, 22 K. Alexandria Canal Co. v. Swann, (U. S.) 83; Columbia Fire Ins. Kinyon, 8 Vr. (N. J.) 33; Van R. v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; H. Marcan, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; W. Dorr, 3 Mason, C. C. 91; Burchard bar, 82 Ill. 450; Mumford v. Cant 370; Canfranque v. Burnell, 1 Wa 340; Courtois v. Carpentier, 1 C. C. 376; Webster v. Massey, C. C. 157; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wa 313; Bainbridge v. Wilcocks, Bal 536; Nicolls v. Rodgers, 2 Paine, C. Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. Compare Payson v. Withers, 5 Bis 269.

The remedy upon a contract, in substance and form, must be regulated by the lex fori, and not by the lex loci contractus, even where the contract was formed in the place of making it. v. Brink, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 334; V. Malin, 5 Hal. (N. J.) 208; Gulick v. 1 Gr. (N. J.) 68; Armour v. Mc 7 Vr. (N. J.) 92, 94; Carr v. S. Harr. (Del.) 403, 405; Murray v. 2 La. An. 311; Roberts v. Wilk La. An. 379, 379; Bacon v. Dahl La. An. 600; Collins, etc., Co., v. 10 Mich. 283.

Whether or not an assignment give effect to the contract according to the laws which gave it validity.<sup>1</sup>

c. As to Arrest on Foreign Contract. — It has been held that in an action upon a contract made in a foreign country, the defendant may be held to bail, although by the lex loci contractus he would sonal property, without delivery of possession, be fraudulent as to creditors, is a question of evidence, and determinable by the law of the forum. Barton v. Bolton, 3 Phila. (Pa.) 369. And the question whether an assignee can sue in his own name, is sometimes a technical one, and sometimes one that is essential. When it is technical, the lex fori is to decide. Glenn v. Busey (D. C.), 4 Cent. Rep. 614.

A creditor, domiciled in Illinois, there executed an assignment of a debt due from a resident of Minnesota, and there payable. Before notice to the debtor of the assignment, a creditor of the assignor attached the debt by service of a garnished summons. Pending the proceedings, the assignee appeared, and was made a party thereto. The law of Minnesota makes an assignment of a chose in action complete without notice to the debtor. In Illinois the law is otherwise. It was held that the law of Minnesota must govern, the proceedings being there instituted, and that being the sums of the debt. Lewis v. Bush, 10 Minn. 244.

A transfer of stock is governed by the lex fori as to the form of the transfer, but not as to the rights of the parties under it. Burr v. Sherwood, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 85.

The effect of a sale of personal property, under proceedings in attachment, must be determined by the lex fori. Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 307.

A case of general average, settled in a foreign port, according to the local law, binds the right of the parties, though it may differ from our own law. Peters v. Warren Insurance Co., 14 Pet. (U. S.) 99. And where a collision occurs in a foreign port, the rights of the parties depend on the foreign law. Smith v. Condry, 1 How. (U. S.) 28.

When, by the laws of the foreign country, where a contract between its citizens was made, the creditor's right to proceed contract is sus-his country will t only according ue v. Burnell, 1

ns on railroad United States,
rt-on-the-Main by

... brought in good faith for value,
and sent them to New York for collection, it was held that the true owner could enjoin their payment to the purchaser, and that the law of New York must control the law and usage existing in Frankfort. Wylie v. Speyer, 62 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 107.

Questions of lien, or priority among creditors, relate to the remedy, and must be determined by the law of the forum. Owens v. Daves, 15 La. An. 22. Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. (S. C.) Eq. 187.

An attorney's warrant to appear must be executed in accordance with the lex fori. Commonwealth v. Peterson, 1 Clark (Pa.), 482.

A contract which has been recognized as valid by the courts of another State will not be enforced by the courts of New Jersey, if it is in violation of the public policy of that State. Union, etc., Co. v. Erie R. Co., 37 N. J. L. 23.

Where a person was killed in a collision on a railroad running through two States, it was held that the right of action was determined by the law of the State where the collision occurred. Chicago, St. Louis, etc., R. R. Co. v. Doyle, 60 Miss. 977.

It was held in an action brought in New York, on a promissory note made in Lower Canada, and payable in England, "with interest until paid in England," that interest is only to be calculated to the time of judgment, and that the plaintiffs cannot recover the difference of exchange. Scofield v. Day, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 102. The same court has held that, where a defendant is sued there for a debt contracted in a foreign country, the plaintiff is only entitled to recover the amount at the par of exchange. Martin v. Franklin, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 124.

Where a contract is to be completed in a foreign country, the compensation for which is payable in the money of account of that country, it is deemed performable there, so far that the value of the currency of that country is to be estimated at the place of the forum. Brown v. Post, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 111.

In the absence of any finding to the contrary, it will be assumed in favor of a judgment in an action on a contract made in another State, that the lex loci is the same as the lex fori. Chapin v. Dobson, 78 N. Y. 74.

1 Camfranke v. Burnell, 1 Wash. C. C. 340; Courtois v. Carpentier, 1 Wash. C. C. 376; Webster v. Massey, 2 Wash. C. C. 157; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. C. C. 313; Bainbridge v. Wilcocks, Bald. C. C. 536; Nicolls v. Rodgers, 2 Paine, C. C. 437.

not be liable to arrest.<sup>1</sup> It has been said that there is a broad distinction between a contract which ex directo excludes personal liability, and a contract made in a country which binds the party personally, but where the laws do not enforce the contract in personam, but only in rem; for in the latter case the remedy constitutes no part of the contract, and the liability under it is general, so far as the acts of the parties go; and the mode of enforcement is merely a matter of municipal regulation, which may be changed from time to time, as the legislature may choose.<sup>2</sup>

The rule, as settled in England and America, seems to be, that it is of no consequence whether the contract authorizes the arrest and imprisonment of the party in the country where it was made, if there is no exemption of the party from personal liability on the contract.<sup>3</sup>

Where the laws of two States are brought into conflict, the rule is, that the laws prevailing where the relief is sought must have the preference.<sup>4</sup> The rule that the laws relative to the binding force of a contract form a part of the contract to secure the remedy to the creditor, does not extend so far as to carry the remedy into another jurisdiction, and regulate the mode of enforcement of a contract in an action in the courts of another State.<sup>5</sup>

Where interest is allowed, not under contract, by the way of damage, the rate must be according to the lex fori.<sup>6</sup>

Questions of evidence are to be determined exclusively by the lex fori; <sup>7</sup> and the mode of authenticating a foreign protest, so as to make it evidence, is regulated by the same law.<sup>8</sup>

1 Bird v. Caritat, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 345; Smith v. Pinolla, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 198; Whittemore v. Adams, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 226; Willings v. Consequa, 1 Pet. C. C. 317; Courtois v. Carpentier, 1 Wash. C. C. 376; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 Barn. & Ad. 284; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Fin. 1-15.

But if the contract is simply binding in rem, and not in personam, in the country where entered into, the rule will be different. See Ohio Ins. Co. v. Edmonson, 5 La. 295, 300; Melan v. Fitz James, 1 Bos. & P. 138; Talleyrand v. Boulanger, 3 Ves. 447; Flack v. Holm, 1 Jac. & Walk. 405; Liverpool Marine Credit Co. v. Hunter, L. R. 3 Ch. App. 479; Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 20, pp. 766-768; Story, Conf. L. § 568, p. 709.

2 See Symonds v. Union Ins. Co., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 417; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Melan v. Fitz James, 1 Bos. & P. 142; Hinkley v. Marean, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; Titus v. Hobart, 5 Mason, C. C. 378.

3 Peck v. Hozier, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 346; Smith v. Pinolla, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 198, 200; Atwater v. Townsend, 4 Conn. 47; Woodbridge v. Wright, 3 Conn. 523, 526; Smith

v. Healy, 4 Conn. 49; Imlay v. Ellefsen, 2 East, 453; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr, 1077; De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 Barn. & Ad. 284.

4 Runyon v. Groshon, 1 Beas. 86; Taberner v. Brentnall, 3 Harr. (Del.) 262, 265.

5 Smith v. Atwood, 3 McL. C. C. 545.

Thus, where an action is brought in one State upon a contract made in another, the creditor's remedy by execution for satisfaction of the judgment is governed by the law existing in the State where the remedy is sought, at the time it is sought. Doe ex dem. Mathuson v. Crawford, 4 McL. C. C. 540; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. (U. S.) 608.

6 Goddard v. Foster, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 23.

After judgment recovered, the rate of interest is governed by the lex fori. Hoag v. Dessan (Pa.), 1 Pitts. 390.

In estimating the interest to be allowed on the judgments of another State, the common law is not presumed to have been in force in such State where it was never subject to the laws of England; in such case the laws of the forum must govern. Crone v. Dawson (Mo.), 1 West. Rep. 689.

7 Kirtland v. Wanzer, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 278; Bloomer v. Bloomer, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 339.

8 Bank of Rochester v. Gray, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 227.

d. Form of Judgments and Executions. — The form of the judgments to be rendered, and of the executions to be issued, must conform to the lex fori, although the party defendant may, in his domestic forum, be entitled to a judgment exempting his person from imprisonment, by virtue of an insolvent law existing there, and of which he has taken the benefit.<sup>1</sup>

e. Defences arising from Matters Ex Post Facto. — Defences growing out of matters ex post facto may be in the nature of a counter-claim or set-off to an action, or may be matters of discharge, or the limitation of actions.

(1) Counter-claim, or Set-off. — It is held at common law that a set-off to an action, allowed by the local law, is to be regarded as a part of the remedy, and may, therefore, be admissible by the lex fori, although not admissible by the law of the country where the contract was entered into.<sup>2</sup>

(2) Discharge. — The general rule is, that a defence or discharge which is good by the law of the place where the contract is made or is to be performed, is to be held of equal validity wherever the question may be litigated.<sup>3</sup> But this general rule is subject to

The evidence by which a contract is to be proved is a part of the law of the remedy, not of the law of the contract; hence the question whether a contract may be proved by parol, or whether written evidence must be adduced, or whether parol evidence may be received to show the actual agreement of the parties to a blank indorsement of a negotiable instrument, must be determined by the law of the State where the action is brought, and not by that of the State where the contract was made. Downer v. Chesebrough, 36 Conn. 39.

1 Woodbridge v. Wright, 3 Conn. 523, 526; Atwater v. Townsend, 4 Conn. 47; Smith v. Healy, 4 Conn. 49; Hinkley v. Marean, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; Titus v. Hobart, 5 Mason, C. C. 378.

It makes no difference that the contract sued on was made in the State granting such discharge in bankruptcy, because the effect of such discharge is purely local, and is addressed solely to the courts of that jurisdiction. It cannot reach or effect process of courts located in other States, which are governed by their own rules and regulations. And wherever a remedy is sought, the judgment obtained must be governed by the municipal jurisprudence of the State where suit is brought. Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; Toomer v. Dickerson, 37 Ga. 440; Dimick v. Brooks, 21 Vt. 569; Batley v. Holbrook, 11 Gray (Mass.), 212; Woodbridge v. Wright, 3 Conn. 523; Atwater v. Townsend, 4 Conn. 47; Smith v. Healy, 4 Conn. 49; Hinkley v. Marean, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; Titus v. Hobart, 5 Mason, C. C. 378.

2 Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. (N. Y.)

263; Carver v. Adams, 38 Vt. 502; Harrison v. Edwards, 12 Vt. 648; Gibbs v. Howard, 2 N. H. 296; Bliss v. Houghton, 13 N. H. 126; Bank of Gallipolis v. Trimble, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 601; Davis v. Morton, 5 Bush (Ky.), 161.

But where a defence inheres in the transaction itself, and does not arise out of something wholly distinct and independent, it may be set up wherever the contract is put in suit, and its effect must be determined by the lex loci contractus, and not by the lex fori. Britton v. Bishop, 11 Vt. 70; Harrison v. Edwards, 12 Vt. 648.

Where the lex fori allows a plea of want of consideration in a suit on an obligation, which by the lex loci contractus could not be pleaded, the lex fori is to control. Warren v. Lynch, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 239; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 508; Douglass v. Oldham, 6 N. H. 150; Williams v. Haynes, 27 Iowa, 251; United States v. Donnally, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361.

3 See Bartsch v. Atwater, 1 Conn. 409; Atwater v. Townsend, 4 Conn. 47; Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480; Houghton v. Page, 2 N. H. 42; Dyer v. Hunt, 5 N. H. 401; Hall v. Boardman, 14 N. H. 38; Very v. McHenry, 29 Me. 214; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; McMenomy v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 435, 440; Hicks v. Brown, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 515, n.; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1; Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20, 23; Baker v. Wheaton, 5 Mass. 511; Watson v. Bourne, 10 Mass. 337; Walsh v. Nourse, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 381; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Green v. Sarmiento, 1 Pet. C. C. 74; Sturges exceptions, which the various States enforce according to their sense of justice.<sup>1</sup>

The American doctrine seems to be, that a discharge under the insolvent laws of one State is not valid against a creditor who is a citizen of another State, and was at the time the contract was entered into, although the contract was made and was to be performed in the State where the debtor received his discharge.<sup>2</sup>

v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213, 358; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124; Ballantine v. Golding, 1 Coop. Bank. Laws, 397; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Quin v. Keefe, 2 H. Black. 553; 2 Kent, Comm. 392, 393, 459; Story, Conf. L. § 331, p. 415; Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 21, §§ 1-2, pp. 781-886; Bell, Comm. b. 8, ch. 3, § 1267, p. 692 (4th ed.); Dwarris on Stat. pt. 2, 650, 651. See, to same effect, J. Voet ad Pand. lib. 4, tit. 1, § 29, p. 240; Id., de Statut. ch. 2, § 20, p. 275 (ed. 1715); Casaregis, Disc. 179, §§ 60, 61; Huberus, lib. 1, tit. 3, §§ 3, 7; 2 Boullenois, obs. 46, p. 462; Molin. Comm. ad Cod. lib. 1, tit. 1, l. 1; Conclus. de Stat. tom. 3, p. 354.

Thus, if infancy is a valid defence by the lex loci contractus, it will be a valid defence everywhere. Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 89; Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163. The same is true of a tender and refusal, which amounts to a full discharge or present fulfilment of the contract by the lex loci contractus. Warder v. Arell, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282, 293. Also where, by the lex loci, equitable defences may be set up by the maker of a negotiable instrument, any subsequent indorsement will not change this right in regard to the holder, who must take such instrument cum onere. Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Evans v. Gray, 12 Martin (La.), 475; Chartres v. Cairnes, 16 Martin (La.), 1. Payment which is sufficient where made, will be good everywhere. Bartsch v. Atwater, 1 Conn. 409; Warder v. Arell, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282, 293; Searight v. Calbraith, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 325. And where a payment by negotiable bills or notes is held to be a conditional payment by the lex loci, it will be so held where suit is brought, although by the lex fori such payment would be regarded as absolute. Bartsch v. Atwater, 1 Conn. 409; Descadillas v. Harris, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 298. Where, by the law of a foreign country, an accepted bill is but a qualified contract, it is governed by that law, although the rule be different in the lex loci. Ellicott v. Early, 3 Gill (Md.), 439; Van Cleef v. Therasson, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 12; Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Str. 733; s. c., 2 Eq. Abridg. 525. Acceptances are said to be demand contracts, and are governed by the lex loci contractus; and the same is true of indorsements. Cooper v. Waldegrave, 2 Beav. 282; Lewis v. Owen, 4 Barn. & Ald. 654; Shanklin v. Cooper, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 41; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Q. B. 43; Hirschfeld v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 344. Compare Short v. Trabue, 4 Met. (Ky.) 299; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush (Ky.), 273; Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 160.

<sup>1</sup> Story, Conf. L. § 334, p. 417.

Thus, where the country in which a contract was made, by a general bankrupt law, authorizes a discharge of its subjects from all contracts made with foreigners, and also excludes such foreign creditors from all participation with domestic creditors in the bankrupt's assets, such law would not be enforced in the country of the foreign creditor's residence. Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 6. Neither will courts give effect to the discharge of a foreign debtor under the laws of his domicile, where, under its own laws, the creditor had previously acquired a right to proceed against such foreign debtor's property within its territory. Hall v. Winchell, 38 Vt. 590; Tappan v. Poor, 15 Mass. 419; Le Chevalier v. Lynch, 1 Doug. 170; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Philips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402.

In the case of Wolff v. Oxholm, 6 Maule & Sel. 92, two Danish subjects, one of them being domiciled in England, entered into a contract, and subsequently the debt was confiscated by the Danish government, and paid into the public treasury. Suit was afterwards brought for the debt in an English court, where it was held that the confiscation by and payment to the Danish government constituted no discharge. The ground on which the English court of King's Bench put their decision was, that the confiscation by the Danish government was not warranted by the law of nations.

<sup>2</sup> See Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Fessenden v. Willey, 2 Allen (Mass.), 67; Kelley v. Drury, 9 Allen (Mass.), 27; reversing Scribner v. Fisher, 2 Gray (Mass.), 43.

But where a contract is made between citizens of the same State, within such State, and the creditor afterwards removes to and becomes a citizen of another State, and the debtor, who continued to reside in the State where the contract was made, subsequently obtains a discharge under the

And it is said, that a State insolvent law discharging its citizens from contracts made in a foreign country, while binding on its own citizens,<sup>1</sup> would not be binding anywhere else.<sup>2</sup>

It may be laid down as a general rule, that where, in a discharge in bankruptcy, there is not any positive or virtual extinguishment of all rights and remedies of the creditor, the contract is not deemed to be extinguished,<sup>3</sup> and may be enforced in other countries.<sup>4</sup>

A discharge of a contract by the law of the place where it is made, is generally regarded as a discharge everywhere, without regard to the fact whether it is between citizens, between citizens and foreigners, or between foreigners.<sup>5</sup> insolvent laws of that State, which laws were in force at the time the contract was entered into, the creditor cannot afterwards enforce the contract in the State where the debtor resides, and the contract was discharged. See Brigham v. Henderson, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 430; Converse v. Bradley, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 434, note; Stoddard v. Harrington, 100 Mass. 87. Judge Redfield says, in a note appended to the case of Baldwin v. Hale, 3 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 469, 470, that a discharge under State insolvent laws is not a bar to an action upon a promissory note given in and payable in the same State where the discharge was obtained, and which in terms is declared to be operative upon all contracts to be performed within that State, but that a discharge under the general bankrupt laws of the United States has an universal operation throughout the Union, and is not embarrassed by any questions affecting discharges under foreign bankrupt laws. But the Judge cites no authorities in support of his last assertion.

<sup>1</sup> See Penniman v. Meigs, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 325; Babcock v. Weston, 1 Gall. C. C. 168; Murray v. De Rottenham, 6 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 52; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 471.

<sup>2</sup> Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 6; Ellis v. Early, 3 Gill (Md.), 439; Very v. McHenry, 20 Me. 208; Van Roush v. Van Arsdale, 3 Caine (N. Y.), 154; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; McMenomy v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 435; Smith v. Buchanan, 1 East, 6; Wolff v. Oxholm, 6 Maule & Sel. 92.

<sup>3</sup> There is a marked difference between cases where by the lex loci contractus there is a direct or virtual discharge of the contract or extinguishment of the debt, and where there is only a partial extinguishment of the remedy thereon. See Carver v. Adams, 38 Vt. 501; Story, Conf. L. § 338, p. 421.

By some insolvent laws there is an absolute discharge from all rights and remedies of the creditors, and the whole contract extinguished; while others fall short of this extent and operation, in some cases only liberating the person from imprisonment, in others exempting particular portions of the property, and in yet others modifying the liabilities of both the person and property. See Morris v. Eves, 11 Martin (La.), 730; Mather v. Bush, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 233; Phillips v. Allan, 8 Barn. & Cress. 477; 2 Kent, Comm. 389-404; Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 22, pp. 886-926; 1 Domat. Civ. Law, b. 4, tit. 5, § 1.

<sup>4</sup> See Boston Type Foundry v. Wallack, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 186; Coffin v. Coffin, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 323; Judd v. Porter, 7 Greenl. (Me.) 337.

Where an insolvent law absolves the person of the debtor from imprisonment, but does not relieve his future property, or which only suspends the remedies against the one or the other or both for a limited period, will not be regarded as a discharge of the debt or an extinguishment of the liability in any other country. See White v. Canfield, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 117; Wright v. Paton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 300; Peck v. Hozier, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 346; Tappan v. Poor, 15 Mass. 419; Boston Type Foundry v. Wallack, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 186; Morris v. Eves, 11 Martin (La.), 730; Judd v. Porter, 7 Greenl. (Me.) 337; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 160; Hinkley v. Marean, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; Titus v. Hobart, 5 Mason, C. C. 378; James v. Allen, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 188; Walsh v. Nourse, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 381; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 370; Quin v. Keefe, 2 H. Black. 553; Phillips v. Allan, 8 Barn. & Cress. 479; Ex parte Burton, 1 Atk. 255.

<sup>5</sup> See Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103, 107; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 703; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1; May v. Breed, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 15; Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 370; Potter v. Brown, 5

But it is held that the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the States from passing laws impairing the obligations of contracts, prevents a discharge under insolvent laws where the contract is made, from operating as a discharge, unless made between citizens of that State,<sup>1</sup> unless a foreign creditor should become a party to the bankrupt proceedings, prove his claim, and receive his share of the assets.<sup>2</sup>

It is a general rule, that the discharge of a contract by the laws of a place where it was not made, or to be performed, will not operate as a discharge of it in any other country. This doctrine is well established, both in the United States<sup>3</sup> and England.<sup>4</sup>

East, 124; Robinson v. Bland, 1 W. Black. 258.

There are some cases, however, which lay down a more limited doctrine, and which appear to confine the universal discharge to the case where it is between citizens of the same State. See Baker v. Wheaton, 5 Mass. 511; Watson v. Bourne, 10 Mass. 337, 340; Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194. Compare Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 10-12; Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 103, 107; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 702.

A discharge in bankruptcy in one State is a bar to an action elsewhere on a contract previously made by citizens of that State, although entered into and to be performed in a foreign country. Marsh v. Putnam, 3 Gray (Mass.), 551; reviewing Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 333; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 7; McMillan v. McNeill, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 209; Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank of Pennsylvania v. Smith, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 131; May v. Breed, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 15; Shaw v. Robbins, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 369, note; Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 411; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 635; Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; Cook v. Mofat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295; Brigham v. Henderson, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 434; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 387; Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Hettis v. Bagley, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 572; Agnew v. Platt, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 417; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Met. (Mass.) 594; Fiske v. Foster, 10 Met. (Mass.) 597; Woodbridge v. Allen, 12 Met. (Mass.) 470; Isley v. Merriam, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 242; Clark v. Hatch, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 455; Scribner v. Fisher, 2 Gray (Mass.), 43; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 131. See, also, Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103, 108.

<sup>1</sup> Donnelly v. Corbett, 7 N. Y. 500; Hicks v. Hotchkiss, 7 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 297; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 43; Soule v. Chase, 39 N. Y. 342; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Met. (Mass.) 594;

Agnew v. Platt, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 417; Producers' Bank v. Farnum, 5 Allen (Mass.) 10; Poe v. Duck, 5 Md. 1; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 348; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 358-369.

<sup>2</sup> Soule v. Chase, 39 N. Y. 342; Smith v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 411.

But this doctrine is not applicable to those contracts and discharges made in a foreign country: such contracts and discharges are governed by the general principles of international law. See Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 704; Very v. McMillan, 29 Me. 214; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; McMillan v. McNeill, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 209; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 358; Haldwin v. Wall, (U. S.) 223.

<sup>3</sup> See Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Van Raugh v. Van Arsdale, 3 Johns. (N. Y.), 154; Frey v. Kirk, 4 Gill & Cr. (Md.) 509; Ellicott v. Early, 3 Gill (Md.) 18; Bradford v. Farrand, 13 Mass. 18; v. Sarmiento, Pet. C. C. 74; Le v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 333-364; Northern Bank v. Squires, 18 An. 318; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 702.

<sup>4</sup> Lewis v. Owen, 4 Barn. & Ald. 1; Phillips v. Allan, 8 Barn. & Cresk. 1; Quelin Moisson, 1 Knapp, 265, note; v. McLeod, 4 S. & D. 311; Smith v. Chanan, 1 East, 6, 11; 2 Kent, Com. 345, 459; 2 Bell, Comm. (4th ed.) 511, pp. 691-695; 3 Burge, Comm. on For. Law, pt. 2, ch. 22, pp. 924-929.

But it seems that where a promissory note is executed in one State, and indorsed in another State to a citizen thereof, the indorsement is governed by the law of the State where the note was made, and a discharge in bankruptcy in that State will operate as a discharge of the note. See Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1, 11, 12; Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20, 23, 24; Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 360; Slack

(3) Statute of Limitations.—Statutes of limitation are not questions upon the merits, but simply questions affecting the remedy.<sup>1</sup> Therefore all suits must be brought within the time prescribed by the lex fori,<sup>2</sup> although the law of the country where

Pomery, 6 Cr. (U. S.) 221; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 123, 130; De la Chaumette v. Bank of England, 9 Barn. & Cress. 208; s. c., 2 Barn. & Ad. 385.

Yet the formalities of the indorsement necessary to charge the indorser must be such as are required by the law of the place of indorsement. See Chatham Bank v. Allison, 15 Iowa, 357; Short v. Tarbut, 4 Met. (Ky.) 299; Artisans' Bank v. Park Bank, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 599; Trabue v. Short, 18 La. An. 257; Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 262.

Decouche v. Savatier, 3 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 528, note 10; Gulick v. Loder, 2 Gr. (N. J.) 572; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; Higgins v. Scott, 2 Barn. & Ad. 413; British Linen Co. v. Drummond, 10 Barn. & Cress. 903; De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 Barn. & Ad. 284; Ferguson v. Fyffe, 8 Clark & Finn. 121, 140.

Continental jurists maintain the same doctrine. See 1 Boullenois, obs. 2, 3, p. 530; J. Voet, ad Pand. Lib. 5, tit. 1, § 53, p. 338.

The statute of frauds is said to be like the statute of limitations, affecting the remedy merely. See Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801; s. c., 14 Eng. L. & Eq. 247.

<sup>1</sup> See Medbury v. Hopkins, 3 Conn. 472; Woodbridge v. Wright, 3 Conn. 523; Decouche v. Savatier, 3 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 528, note 10; Brown v. Stone, 4 La. An. 235;

An. 233; 1) 36; Van C. 371; Le C. C. 151, ns. (N. Y.) C. C. 437; C. C. 86; 521; Nash Carpenter Murray v. Ruggles v. nat. Frank. m v. Lach- 5; s. c., 37 ny v. Silli- 10. Barney, ited States McElmoyle 2; Nicolls Townsend

v. Jemison, 9 How. (U. S.) 407; Bacon v. Rives, 106 U. S. 99; s. c., 1 Sup. Ct. Repr. 3; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122, 200, 207; Louisville, etc., Ky. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. (U. S.) 497; Ruckmaboye v. Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. 36; British Linen Co. v. Drummond, 10 Barn. & Cress. 903; De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 Barn. & Ad. 284; Huber v. Steiner, 2 Ding. N. C. 202, 209, 212; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 13-17.

Where the State and the federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction, a State statute of limitations may be pleaded as effectively in a federal court as it could be in a State court, and in such cases the federal courts will follow the decisions of local State tribunals, and will administer the same justice which the State courts would administer between the same parties. Price v. Yates, 19 Alb. L. J. 295; s. c., 246 Mass. Price v. Gates, 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 113.

The statute of limitations of another State, where the contract was made, cannot be pleaded in bar. Townsend v. Jemison, 9 How. (U. S.) 407; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 151; Egberts v. Dibble, 3 McL. C. C. 86; Stillman v. White Rock Manuf. Co., 3 Wood. & M. C. C. 539. Compare Gilpin v. Plummer, 2 Cr. C. C. 54; Loveland v. Davidson, 3 Clark (Pa.), 377; Hoag v. Demau, 1 Pitts. (Pa.) 390.

Although the time within which an action may be brought, relates generally to the remedy, and must be determined by the law of the forum, yet when a statute gives a right unknown to common law, and limits the time within which an action shall be brought to assert it, the limitation will be enforced by the courts of any State wherein the plaintiff may sue; and hence, where a statute of the province of Ontario gave compensation for death caused by the wrongful act of another, and further provided that action should be brought within twelve months after the death, it was held that this limitation was also applicable to actions brought in the State of Michigan, under this statute. Hoyd v. Clark, 8 Fed. Rep. 849; s. c., 24 Alb. L. J. 508, 13 Repr. 40.

A negotiable promissory note, made in New Orleans, secured by mortgage of real estate in Mississippi, the maker being a citizen of Arkansas, and the promisee a citizen of Louisiana, and no place of payment being named in the note, is subject to the limitations of actions prescribed by a contract is made between residents of another State, the statute of limitations of such other State cannot be pleaded to a suit brought in New York, though the parties continued to reside in such other State until the bar was complete.<sup>1</sup>

§. Bills and Notes. — 1. NOTES, BONDS, ETC. — a. Rights of Original Parties. — In general, the rights of the original parties to a negotiable instrument are determined by the law of the place where it was made, and is payable, rather than by that of the State where suit is brought,<sup>2</sup> or than by that of the State in which the consideration may have arisen,<sup>3</sup> unless it stipulates for payment in another jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup>

b. Liability of Parties. — It is the general rule of law, both in England<sup>5</sup> and in this country,<sup>6</sup> that every person who places his (U. S.) 419; McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312, 327, 328; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 19-21.

Thus, the statute of limitations of Georgia can be pleaded to an action in that State founded upon a judgment rendered in the State court of the State of South Carolina. McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312.

Where the laws of a State provide that when a cause of action has arisen in a State or Territory out of that State, or in a foreign country, and by the laws thereof an action cannot be maintained by reason of the lapse of time, an action thereon shall not be maintained in that State, the removal of a debtor into such State after having resided in another State sufficiently long to avail himself of the bar of the statute of limitations there, will not revive the cause of action in the State into which he removes. Osgood v. Artt, 10 Fed. Rep. 365; s. c., 11 Biss. C. C. 160. Thus, under 1 Ind. Rev. Stat. (1852) 77, providing that where a cause has been fully barred by the laws of a place where the defendant resided, such bar will be effective in Indiana. A suit on an administrator's bond executed in Maryland cannot be maintained in Indiana after the expiration of the time allowed by the laws of Maryland in which to bring a suit on such a bond, although before the expiration of such time the defendant has removed to Indiana. State v. Todd, 1 Biss. C. C. 69.

<sup>1</sup> Power v. Hathaway, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 214.

<sup>2</sup> Stacy v. Baker, 2 Ill. (1 Scam.) 417; Mendenhall v. Gately, 18 Ind. 149; Lawrence v. Baasett, 5 Allen (Mass.), 140; Bliss v. Houghton, 13 N. H. 126; Emerson v. Partridge, 27 Vt. 8.

<sup>3</sup> Pratt v. Wallbridge, 16 Ind. 147.

<sup>4</sup> Dunn v. Clement, 2 Ala. 392; Holbrook v. Vibbard, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 465; Rose v. Park Bank, 20 Ind. 94; Collins, etc., Co. v. Burkam, 10 Mich. 283; Ballard v. Webster, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 404; Palmer v. Yarrington, 1 Ohio St. 253; Wilson v. Lazier, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 477; Nichols v. Porter, 2 W. Va. 13.

The law of the place where a promissory note first becomes binding as a valid contract, governs as to the rights of the parties. Ludlow v. Bingham, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 47. Thus, whether a time note given in New Hampshire, by a New Hampshire debtor, to a Massachusetts creditor, has the effect of payment pro tanto, is determinable by the law of New Hampshire. Gilman v. Stevens, 63 N. H. 342.

Negotiable paper is personal property, within the rule that personal property has no locality, but follows the person of its owner. Ballard v. Webster, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 404.

The statutes of Alabama require the negotiability and character of bills of exchange, foreign and inland, and promissory notes, payable in bank, to be governed by the general commercial law. Smyth v. Strader, 4 How. (U. S.) 404.

The laws of a State where a promissory note is made and assigned, must govern as to the validity of a defence to a suit brought on the note in another State, by the assignee against the maker. Yeatman v. Cullen, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 240.

Whether the rights of a bona fide purchaser of a bill or note should be determined by a law of the place where he purchased the instrument, or by that of the place where it is payable, see Roe v. Jerome, 18 Conn. 138; Barney v. Newcomb, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 46; Emanuel v. White, 34 Miss. 56; Miller v. Mayfield, 37 Miss. 688; Harrison v. Edwards, 12 Vt. 648.

<sup>5</sup> See Cooper v. Waldegrave, 2 Beav. 282; Allen v. Kemble, 6 Moore, P. C. 314; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 12, 13; Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Exch. 31; Trimbe v. Vignier, 1 Hing. N. C. 151; s. c., 4 M. & S. 695, 6 C. & P. 25; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124; 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 351.

<sup>6</sup> Powers v. Lynch, 3 Mass. 77; Prentiss

name to commercial paper, whether as maker, drawer, acceptor, or indorser, is liable thereon according to the lex loci contractus.<sup>1</sup>

It is said that a negotiable note or a negotiable acceptance, made payable generally, without any specified place, creates a debt payable anywhere, and is a promise to whoever shall be the holder of the note or bill.<sup>2</sup> But such a contract is governed by the law of the place where made.<sup>3</sup>

c. Interest and Usury.—Where a note made and dated in one State, and payable at a bank there, is negotiated in another State, the laws of the State where made and payable must govern as to the interest and usury;<sup>4</sup> but where a note is made in one country, and payable in another, it draws interest at the rate of the place where it was made, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary.<sup>5</sup>

v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20; Hazelhurst v. Kean, 4 Yeates (Pa.), 19; Hicks v. Brown, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; Lee v. Selleck, 33 N. Y. 615; Artisans' Bank v. Park Bank, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 599; Rose v. Thames Bank, 15 Ind. 292; Depau v. Humphreys, 20 Martin (La.), 1; Trabue v. Short, 18 La. An. 257; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush (Ky.), 268; Trabue v. Short, 5 Cold. (Tenn.) 293; Brabston v. Gibson, 9 How. (U. S.) 263.

<sup>1</sup> See Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Van Clef v. Therasson, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 12; Ellicott v. Early, 3 Gil (Md.), 439; The Emulous, 1 Gall. C. C. 563; s. c., on appeal, sub. nom. Brown v. United States, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 110; Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Str. 733; s. c., Eq. Bridge, 525; Wolff v. Oxholm, 6 M. & S. 92.

It has been said that when the maker and indorser of a note reside in the same State where it is made, the liability of the indorser is to be determined by the law of such State, notwithstanding the fact that the indorsement was made in another State, where the indorser and indorsee (who resided in a third State) happened to be at the time on business. Vanzant v. Arnold, 31 Ga. 210.

And where the member of a Boston house, temporarily in England, accepted, while there, a bill drawn in England upon the Boston firm, it was held that the law governing the acceptance was the Massachusetts law. Grimshaw v. Bender, 6 Mass. 157; Whart., Conf. L. § 450; and see, also, Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 111; McCandlish v. Cruger, 2 Bay. (S. C.) 377; Bain v. Ackworth, 1 Mills (Court Rep.) (S. C.), 107; Lewis v. Owen, 4 B. & Ald. 654; Compare Foden v. Sharp, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 183; and Story, Conf. L. § 319.

<sup>2</sup> Savoye v. Marsh, 10 Met. (Mass.) 594; Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194.

<sup>3</sup> Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 702; Spowle

v. Legge, 1 Barn. & Cress. 16; Kearney v. King, 2 Barn. & Ald. 301; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 12, 13.

<sup>4</sup> Jewell v. Wright, 30 N. Y. 299; s. c., 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 399, n.; 27 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 481; reversing s. c., 12 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 55; Bowen v. Bradley, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 395; City Savings Bank v. Bidwell, 29 Bard. (N. Y.) 325; First National Bank v. Morris, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 680; s. c., 4 T. & C. (N. Y.) 182; Hull v. Wheeler, 7 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 411. And see Hallard v. Webster, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 404; Tilden v. Blair, 11 Alb. L. J. 220.

In an action upon a promissory note made in a foreign country, and payable in sugar, it was held, in conformity to the law or custom of such place, that interest was not recoverable before judgment. Courtois v. Carpentier, 1 Wash. C. C. 376.

After coupons have matured, they bear interest at the rate fixed by the law of the place where they are made payable. Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 529; s. c., 2 Sup. Ct. Repr. 704.

In an action brought on a promissory note given at Canton, China, the court directed the jury to allow the interest customary at that place. Cowqua v. Lauderbrun, 1 Wash. C. C. 521. And where a promissory note was made in Canada, and indorsed in Vermont, in both of which places the rate of interest was six per cent, and was payable on a day certain in the State of New York, where the rate of interest was seven per cent, but was not paid when due; on suit brought, it was held that both the makers and indorsers were liable to pay seven per cent interest, as damage for such delay. Peck v. Mayo, 14 Vt. 33.

<sup>5</sup> Bank of Georgia v. Lewin, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 340; Allen v. Kemble, 6 Moore, P. C. 314; Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Exch. 25; s. c., 20 Eng. L. & Eq. 555.

d. Demand, Protest, Notice of Dishonor, and Days of Grace. — The law of the place where a bill, check, or note is made payable, governs as to the time and manner of demanding payment, days of grace, protest, and giving notice of dishonor.<sup>1</sup>

e. Indorsement. — Each indorsement of a bill or note is regarded as a new contract; and the rights and liabilities of an indorser are determined by the law of the place where the indorsement was made,<sup>2</sup> in the absence of affirmative proof that the undertaking is to be subject to other laws;<sup>3</sup> and by the law of the State or 1 Allen v. Merchant's Bank, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 215; Bowen v. Newell, 13 N. Y. 290; Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361; Thorp v. Craig, 10 Iowa, 461; Williams v. Wade, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 82; Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 262; Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; Cook v. Litchfield, 5 Seld. (9 N. Y.) 279; Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 30, 34; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Ad. & El. (2 B., N. S.) 43; Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481; Hirschfeld v. Smith, 12 Jur. (N. S.) 523; s. c., L. R. 1 C. P. 340; 35 L. J., C. P. 177; 1 H. & R. 284.

Where no place of payment is designated in a note, for the purpose of demand, etc., the place where made is to be deemed the place of payment. Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Met. (Mass.) 594; Blodgett v. Durgin, 32 Vt. 361; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 702; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 12, 13; Kearney v. King, 2 Barn. & Ald. 301; Sprowle v. Legge, 1 Barn & Cress. 16.

2 Burrows v. Hannegan, 1 McL. C. C. 315; Bank of Illinois v. Brady, 4 McL. C. C. 268; Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McL. C. C. 397; Orr v. Lacy, 4 McL. C. C. 243; Davis v. Clemson, 6 McL. C. C. 622; Kipka v. Gaddis (cited in) 23 Pa. St. 140; Cox v. Adams, 2 Ga. 158; Humphreys v. Powell, 1 Ill. (Breese) 231; Bernard v. Barry, 1 Greene (Iowa), 388; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush. (Ky.) 268; Briggs v. Latham (Kan.), 24 Cent. L. J. 468; Trabue v. Short, 18 La. An. 257; Dow v. Rowell, 12 N. H. 49; Lee v. Selleck, 33 N. Y. 615; s. c., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; 20 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 275; Hatcher v. M'Morine, 4 Dev. (N. C.) L. 122; King v. Doolittle, 1 Head (Tenn.), 77; Raymond v. Holmes, 11 Tex. 54; Bailey v. Heald, 17 Tex. 102; Delvalle v. Plumer, 3 Camp. 444; Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 289; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 15; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371. Compare Everett v. Vendyres, 19 N. Y. 436; Reddick v. Jones, 6 Ired. (N. C.) L. 107; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Ad. & E. (N. S.) 43.

In a recent case, the defendant indorsed certain notes which she owned, and indorsed them to her husband to negotiate, who carried them to St. Louis, Mo., and there disposed of them to D., all the parties to the transaction being residents of Illinois; but L., by whom the notes were sold, was a passenger-conductor on a railroad running into St. Louis, and had for several years made his headquarters in that city. D. also was a passenger-conductor on a railroad running through Illinois into St. Louis, and had for years made his headquarters in that city, and kept some of his valuable papers there. In an action upon the notes before disposed of by L. to D., it was held that the contract of indorsement was consummated in Missouri, and that the laws of Missouri must govern in determining the liability of the indorser. Briggs v. Latham (Kan.), 24 Cent. L. J. 468.

The general rules of commercial law do not apply to promissory notes in Illinois, but they are governed by a statute differing essentially from the statute of Queen Anne relating to promissory notes. Under the Illinois statute, no demand or notice of non-payment is necessary to bind the indorser; but suit must be brought against the maker, and prosecuted, to effect without unnecessary delay, unless such maker be insolvent or absent from the State. Harding v. Dilley, 60 Ill. 528; Lusk v. Cook, Breese (Ill.), 84; Chalmers v. Moore, 22 Ill. 359; Saunders v. O'Briant, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 369; Hilborn v. Astors, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 344; Bledsoe v. Graves, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 832; Scuttler v. Platt, 12 Ill. 417; Pierce v. Short, 14 Ill. 144; Breton v. Walker, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 3.

3 Dunn v. Adams, 1 Ala. 527; Levy v. Cohen, 4 Ga. 1; Yeatman v. Cullen, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 240; Bank of Illinois v. Brady, 3 McL. C. C. 268; Holbrook v. Vibbard, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 465; Shanklin v. Cooper, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 41; Rose v. Park Bank, 20 Ind. 94; Williams v. Wade, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 82; Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; Nichols v. Porter, 2 W. Va. 13.

Where a note payable at the Western Bank of Georgia was indorsed in Alabama, it was held that the indorsement was governed by the laws of Alabama, although the note and indorsement were made with place where the indorsement is delivered, rather than of that where it is written.<sup>1</sup>

f. Assignment. — The liability of an assignor of a note assigned in one State, and sued in another, will be governed by the laws of the State where assigned.<sup>2</sup>

g. Notes executed in One State, and made payable or indorsed in Another. — If a negotiable instrument stipulates for payment in a different jurisdiction from the one within which it is made, the law of the place of payment governs the rights of the parties.<sup>3</sup>

h. Rights of Action against Maker or Acceptor. — Between the holder and the other parties to a note or bill, there is a privity on which indebitatus assumpsit may be brought.<sup>4</sup> But it has been the intention that the note should be negotiated and paid in Georgia. Lowry v. Western Bank of Georgia, 7 Ala. 120.

Where a resident of Wisconsin contracted a debt in New York for which he there executed his note, dated in New York, but payable in Illinois, whither he sent it, and procured it to be indorsed by a resident of that State, and afterward sent it by mail to his creditor in New York; it was held that the contract of the indorser was to be performed in New York, and was governed by the laws of New York. Lee v. Selleck, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; s. c., 20 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 275.

1 Stamford v. Pruet, 27 Ga. 243; Young v. Harris, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 556.

Although the law of the place where a promissory note or bill is indorsed, governs in regard to the liability of the indorser, yet the mere act of writing the name does not necessarily constitute an indorsement. There is no contract of indorsement until the note or bill is actually transferred to a third person with intent to enable him to enforce payment. The law of the place of this effectual transfer is the law that governs. Thus, where the maker and indorser of a note were residents of Michigan, and the note was there indorsed for the accommodation of the maker, and sent by the maker to his agent in New York to be delivered to a creditor of the maker in satisfaction of his debt, the court held that the indorsement, as a contract, was made in New York. Cook v. Litchfield, 9 N. Y. 279; s. c., 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 330.

2 Crouch v. Hall, 15 Ill. 263.
3 Murray v. Gibson, 2 La. An. 311; Roberts v. Wilkinson, 5 La. An. 370, 379; Bacon v. Dahlgreen, 7 La. An. 600; Kuenzi v. Elvers, 14 La. An. 392; Coffman v. Bank of Kentucky, 41 Miss. 212; Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Fant v. Miller, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 47; Gaylord v. Johnson, 5 McL. C. C. 448; Pryor v. Wright, 14 Ark. 189; Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253;

Tillotson v. Tillotson, 34 Conn. 335; Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Tyler v. Trabue, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 306; Bank of Orange Co. v. Colby, 12 N. H. 520; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 698; Freeman's Bank v. Ruckman, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 126. Compare Raymond v. Holmes, 11 Tex. 54.

Notes dated in Michigan, having been first negotiated by the maker in New York, where they were payable, with the defendant's indorsement, it was held that he was prima facie an accommodation indorser, and the contract of indorsement was made in New York, and governed by the laws of that State. Cook v. Litchfield, 9 N. Y. 279; s. c., 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 330. And where two persons sent their signatures from their residence to another State, with the intention that the blanks should be filled up into a promissory note, to be used in the place where the paper was sent, it was held that, when perfected by the payee, and made payable in the latter place, the note was subject to the laws of that place. Fant v. Miller, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 47.

In determining the lex loci contractus, the engagement of the maker and indorser of a note are to be treated as independent contracts. If a note payable in another State be indorsed in New York, the liability of the indorser on his contract is to be determined by the New York laws. Lee v. Sellick, 33 N. Y. 615; s. c., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; 20 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 275; Artisans' Bank v. Park Bank, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 599.

4 State Bank v. Hurd, 12 Mass. 172; Elsworth v. Brewer, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 316; Olcott v. Rathbone, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 490; Ainslie v. Wilson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 662; Bridge v. Johnson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 367; Frazer v. Carpenter, 2 McL. C. C. 235.

By the law of Illinois, a note payable to X. or bearer, cannot be transferred by delivery merely, so as to give the bearer a legal title; and even if the transfer was made in a State where a delivery has the effect to pass the title, the same rule will said that where one of the makers of a joint note resides in the State of New York at the time of making the note, the assignee cannot maintain his action against the assignor in another State before he sues the makers, unless he shows that the suit would have been unavailing in the State where the note was made.<sup>1</sup>

The liability of the indorser of a note is governed by the law of the State where it is payable.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held that a negotiable note payable to bearer, transferred in a foreign country, entitles the holder to maintain a suit thereon, in the country where it was executed, against the other parties,<sup>3</sup> although by the laws of the country where the transfer was made, such note was non-negotiable;<sup>4</sup> and that where a negotiable note is made and indorsed in one country, according to the laws of that country, this confers upon the indorsee the right to maintain a suit in his own name upon such note in another country.<sup>5</sup> Also that where a promissory note is non-negotiable by the laws of the State where it is executed, but is negotiable by the laws of the State where transferred, the indorsee may maintain a suit upon it in the latter State.<sup>6</sup>

(1) Suits by Administrators and their Assignees.—An administrator who holds negotiable paper belonging to his deceased, which is payable to bearer, is said to become personally principal on such paper, and entitled to maintain a suit on it in a foreign jurisdiction in which the debtor resides, without taking out letters of administration in such jurisdiction;<sup>7</sup> and it has been said that the indorsee of an administrator may maintain a suit in a foreign be applied in an action by the bearer in Illinois. Roosa v. Crist, 17 Ill. 450.

A promissory note was made and indorsed in blank in the State of New York, where it was payable. By the law of New York, no agreement different from that which the law infers from a blank indorsement can be proved by parol. In a suit on the note against the indorser in Connecticut, it was held that parol evidence of a special agreement different from that implied by law would be received. Downer v. Chesebrough, 36 Conn. 39.

<sup>1</sup> Myers v. Miller, 3 Mo. 586.

<sup>2</sup> Gaylord v. Johnson, 5 McL. C. C. 448.

An assignor is not liable as an indorser of paper not negotiable according to the laws of West Virginia, although it may have been negotiable under the laws of the place where it was made. In order to make an assignor liable for its payment, the holders must aver and show that the maker was insolvent at the time it became due, or at the time of the assignment, if assigned after it became due, or that due diligence has been used to collect it, or that it could not have been made by the use of due diligence; nor can there be a recovery under such circumstances, under the common counts in assumpsit. Nichols v. Porter, 2 W. Va. 13.

Upon a promissory note given in one State and payable in another, with interest and exchange, the exchange is to be calculated on the amount due at the maturity of the note. Price v. Teal, 4 McL. C. C. 201.

<sup>3</sup> See Milne v. Graham, 1 Barn. & Cress. 192. Compare Carr v. Shaw, Bayley on Bills (5th ed.), 16, note; De la Chaumette v. Bank of England, 2 Barn. & Ad. 385; Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 151.

<sup>4</sup> De la Chaumette v. Bank of England, 2 Barn. & Ad. 385; s. c., 9 Barn. & Cress. 208.

<sup>5</sup> See Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 151, 158-160; O'Callaghan v. Thomond, 3 Taunt. 82.

<sup>6</sup> Warren v. Copelin, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 594; Foss v. Nutting, 14 Gray (Mass.), 484; Lodge v. Phelps, 11 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 139; s. c., 2 Cain. Cas. (N. Y.) 321.

<sup>7</sup> Stearns v. Burnham, 5 Greenl. (5 Me.) 261; Barrett v. Barrett, 8 Greenl. (8 Me.) 353; Robinson v. Crandall, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 425; Thompson v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 291; McNeillage v. Holloway, 1 Barn. & A. 216. Vide infra, 14, 1, c and (1) "SUITS BY AND AGAINST" (ADMINISTRATORS).

country, without the administrator's taking out ancillary letters of administration there.<sup>1</sup>

i. Defences.—The maker of a promissory note is entitled, if sued in another jurisdiction, to a discount against the payee by the lex loci contractus.<sup>2</sup>

The fact that a note is not stamped according to the law of the place where it was made, will not avail as a defence to a suit there.

The law of Mississippi, allowing to the maker of a promissory note the benefit of all defences of want of consideration, want of consideration, payments, discounts, and set-offs, against the indorser, which he had against the payee, previously to the date of the indorsement, applies to a suit brought in another State upon a note payable in Mississippi, and indorsed in Mississippi.<sup>4</sup>

In an action upon a note made in violation of the usury law of a foreign State, which do not avoid the contract, the defendant cannot avail himself of the penalty given by the foreign law by way of defence.<sup>5</sup>

The question whether the right of action on a note has become outlawed is governed, like other questions relative to the right of action, by the law of the State in which action is brought.<sup>6</sup>

The right of a surety to discharge his obligations by notifying the creditor to pursue the debtor, is part of the contract. The sufficiency of the notice is to be determined by the lex loci contractus.

<sup>1</sup> See Petersen v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 21; Barrett v. Barrett, 8 Greenl. (8 Me.) 353; Rand v. Hubbard, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 252, 258, 259; Harper v. Butler, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 239; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mass. C. C. 16; Huthwaite v. Phaise, 1 Man. & Gr. 159, 164; Rawlinson v. Stone, 3 Wilson, 1; 2 Str. 1260; Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 151. Compare Stearns v. Burnham, 5 Greenl. (5 Me.) 261; Thompson v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 291; Dixon v. Ramsay, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319; Pond v. Makepeace, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 114; Harper v. Butler, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 239. Vide infra, 14, 1, c (1), (2), "SUIT BY ASSIGNEE OF ADMINISTRATOR."

But this rule, it seems, does not apply to bonds. Whyte v. Rose, 3 Q. B. 507.

Where an administrator has obtained a judgment in a domiciliary court, such judgment may be made the basis of an action by such administrator in a foreign State, where the debtor resides or has assets. Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71; Smith v. Nicolls, 5 Bing. N. C. 208.

Where the lex fori permits the assignee of a chose in action to sue in his own name, the assignee of an administrator may sue in his own name without the administrator taking out ancillary letters of administration in such place. See Harper v. Butler, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 239; Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71; Rand v. Hubbard, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 252, 258, 259; Trecothick v. Aus- tin, 4 Mass. C. C. 16; Smith v. Nicolls, 5 Bing. N. C. 208; Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 151.

<sup>2</sup> Gilman v. King, 2 Cr. C. C. 151. Thus, a note made in Louisiana and indorsed in Mississippi, and there indorsed, if sued in the former State, is governed by the law of the latter. Brabston v. Gibson, 9 How. (U. S.) 263.

<sup>3</sup> Ludlow v. Van Rensselaer, 1 N. Y. 94; Fant v. Miller, 17 Gr. 47.

<sup>4</sup> Brabston v. Gibson, 9 How. (U. S.) 263. Where there is a partial failure of consideration, arising out of an infirmity contemporaneous with the execution of the contract in another State, by whose laws an accommodation indorsement is a defence in such case is reserved against subsequent bona fide holders. The maker can avail himself in Louisiana of the same equity against such holder as he can in Mississippi, notwithstanding the mere fact that the maker has made accommodation indorsements to the holder. This is not ground for allowing a set-off of the accommodation indorsement. Newton v. Graham, 10 An. 67.

<sup>5</sup> Willis v. Cameron, 12 Abb. Pr. 245.

<sup>6</sup> Bank of United States v. Dimes, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 361.

<sup>7</sup> Such notice on a contract in West Virginia must be in writing. Tenant (Pa.), 1 Cent. Rep. 596.

2 BILLS OF EXCHANGE, DRAFTS, CHECK, ETC. — a. Law governing.—The operation of a bill of exchange is governed by the law of the State where it was made and is payable,<sup>1</sup> rather than by that of the State where suit is brought;<sup>2</sup> or that of the State in which the consideration may have arisen.<sup>3</sup>

b. What a Foreign Bill.—A bill of exchange drawn in one of the States of the Union on a person in another is a foreign bill, and to be treated as such. In this respect the States of the Union are to be considered as States foreign to each other, though they are otherwise as to the purposes of the federal constitution.<sup>4</sup>

c. Bills drawn in One State, and accepted, indorsed, or discounted in Another.—Bills are demand contracts of acceptance in the place where they are made, and where they are to be performed.<sup>5</sup>

1 But where an acceptance of a draft dated in one State, drawn by a resident of such State on the resident of another, and by the latter accepted without funds, and purely for the accommodation of the former, and then returned to him to be negotiated in the State where he resides, and the proceeds to be used in his business there, he to provide for its payment, is, after it has been negotiated, and is in the hands of a bona fide holder for value, and without notice of equities, to be regarded another, are so far foreign bills as to render their notarial protests, made elsewhere, admissible in the courts of Louisiana without further proof; but notice to drawers or indorsers must be proved by ordinary evidence. Schneider v. Cochrane, 9 La. An. 235.

And it is said that a bill drawn in Mississippi, payable in New Orleans, is not subject to the statutes of Mississippi relative to bills of exchange, but is governed by the general principle of commercial law. Fellows v. Harris, 20 Miss. (12 Smede & M.) 462.

5 Lewis v. Owen, 4 Barn. & Ald. 654.

A bill of exchange drawn in one State, and accepted in another State for the accommodation of the drawer, and negotiated in the latter State, is to be governed by the law of the latter State; and if void by its usury laws, an action cannot be sustained against the drawer in the courts of the State in which the bill was drawn. Davis v. Clemson, 6 McL. C. C. 622. And a discharge under the insolvent law of the latter State will not discharge the obligation of the contract. Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 383. Vide supra, § 11, "EFFECT OF FOREIGN BANKRUPT DISCHARGES," particularly c, e, f, and g.

Where a bill of exchange is drawn in the Chicago upon a firm in St. Louis, and is orally accepted by a member of such firm, then present in Chicago, the validity of the acceptance is to be determined by the law of Illinois, and by that law a parol acceptance is valid, and a parol promise to accept is an acceptance. Scudder v. Union Nat Bank, 91 U. S. 406. And where a bill of exchange was drawn by the defendant, (N. S.) abroad, on himself in Philadelphia, and was afterwards accepted by him at the latter place, and subsequently protested for non-payment, it was held that the bill was governed by the laws of Pennsylvania. Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. C. C. 313.

Where a bill is made in one State, but by its terms or legal effect is payable in another, the law of the State where it is payable determines its effect, rather than that of the State where it is made;<sup>1</sup> but the liability of the drawer of a bill, payable in another State, is governed by the law of the place where it is drawn, by that of the place where it is payable.<sup>2</sup> And an acceptance is said to be governed by the law of the place of acceptance.<sup>3</sup>

If the acceptor and indorser reside in different States, the contract of the latter is governed by the law of his domicile; and that requires presentment to charge him, he is not liable without it, even if dispensed with by the law of the acceptor's domicile.

It is said, that, where a bill is drawn in a foreign country and indorsed by one who resides there, the indorser is answerable to the holder only, according to the laws of that country;<sup>4</sup> it seems that the indorsee of a bill, drawn in a French West India island, on a house in Bordeaux, payable a certain number of days after sight, and transferred in New York, need not present for payment after protest for non-acceptance, notwithstanding the provisions of the French Commercial Code.<sup>5</sup>

Bills drawn for discount are governed by the law of the place where they are discounted, for they had not validity until then.

d. Acceptance. — It has been said that the effect of an acceptance

A promise made in New York to accept a bill of exchange, is governed by the law of that State, notwithstanding it is to be performed abroad. Scott v. Pilkington, 15 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 280.

Where the drawee of a bill of exchange, residing in New York, writes a letter there to the drawer, who resides in Massachusetts, accepting the bill, which was drawn in Massachusetts, the contract of acceptance is made in New York, and is governed by the law of that State, and the bill must be presented there to the acceptor for payment. Worcester Bank v. Well, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 107.

<sup>1</sup> Gaylord v. Johnson, 5 McL. C. C. 448; Pryor v. Wright, 14 Ark. 189; Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253; Tillotson v. Tillotson, 34 Conn. 335; Tyler v. Trabue, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 306; Bank of Orange Co. v. Colby, 12 N. H. 520; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 698, 702; Freeman's Bank v. Ruckman, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 126; Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 111; Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Frazier v. Warfield, 17 Miss. (9 Smed. & M.) 220; Cooper v. Waldegrave, 2 Beav. 282; Kearney v. King, 2 Barn. & Ald. 301; Spowle v. Legge, 1 Barn. & Cress. 16; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 12, 13. Compare Raymond v. Holmes, 11 Tex. 54.

But it has been held in New York that an action upon a bill of exchange payable in that State, but drawn and indorsed in a foreign country or another State, the law of that State controls the interpretation and validity of the indorsement, as between the indorsee and the drawer. E. Vendyres, 19 N. Y. 436; s. c., 2 (N. Y.) 383; Bright v. Judson, 4 (N. Y.) 29. See, also, Williams v. Metc. (Mass.) 82; Musson v. How. (U. S.) 262.

And where bills were accepted, in London, on a promise to provide to meet them, the contract was held to be governed by the law of England. Bridge v. Wilcocks, Bald. C. C. 53.

<sup>2</sup> Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 (N. Y.) 215; Cowperthwaite v. Sandf. (N. Y.) 416; s. c., 3 N. Y. 221; roll v. Upton, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.), 171; ford v. Branch Bank, 6 Ala. 12; T. Craig, 10 Iowa, 461; Hunt v. Star Ind. 33.

<sup>3</sup> Kelly v. Smith, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 1.

Thus, where the law of the place of acceptance requires a notice of non-acceptance of a bill presented before maturity, an omission to notify will be excused, because, by the law of the place where the bill was presented, notice of acceptance is unnecessary. Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 215.

<sup>4</sup> Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 262.

<sup>5</sup> Powers v. Lynch, 3 Mass. 77.

<sup>6</sup> Yet it is held that the payee must conform to the French law, in order to enforce his claims against the drawer. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439.

<sup>7</sup> Orr v. Lacy, 4 McL. C. C. 243.

ance is always to be determined by the laws of the place where it is made;<sup>1</sup> but the better doctrine appears to be, that the acceptance of a bill of exchange is governed by the laws of the State or place wherein the bill is made payable.<sup>2</sup>

e. Transfer.—The mode of transferring a bill of exchange, payable in a specific country or State, is governed by the laws of that country or State.<sup>3</sup>

f. Protest and Notice of Dishonor.—Bills of exchange, when dishonored, should be protested by the holder, and due notice thereof given to all parties interested. The common law requires the protest to be made and the notice given at the time, in the manner and by the persons prescribed in the place where the bill is payable.<sup>4</sup>

Protest is not necessary on the dishonor of a bill drawn in one State, payable in another, except to support the claim to statutory damages.<sup>5</sup>

g. Days of Grace.—It is almost an universal custom amongst civilized nations to allow some time beyond the period fixed for the payment of negotiable instruments. This period of indulgence is commonly known as "days of grace."<sup>6</sup> The law of a place

<sup>1</sup> See Shanklin v. Cooper, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 41; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Q. B. 43; Hirschfeld v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 344. Compare Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Short v. Trabue, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 299; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush (Ky.), 273.

<sup>2</sup> Frazier v. Warfield, 17 Miss. (9 Smed. & M.) 220; Bainbridge v. Wilcox, 1 Baldw. C. C. 536. Compare Mason v. Dousay, 35 Ill. 424; Grimshaw v. Bender, 6 Mass. 157.

<sup>3</sup> Everett v. Vendyres, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 382.

<sup>4</sup> See Thorp v. Craig, 10 Iowa, 461; Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; Cook v. Litchfield, 5 Seld. (9 N. Y.) 279; Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Short v. Trabue, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 299; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush (Ky.), 273; Shanklin v. Cooper, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 41; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103; Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 111; Ticknor v. Roberts, 11 La. 14; Bank of Rochester v. Gray, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 227; Robinson v. Bland, 1 Black. (U. S.) 258; Emory v. Greenough, 3 Dal. (U. S.) 370, note; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 190; Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.), 289; Slocum v. Pomeroy, 6 Cr. (U. S.) 221; Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101, 146; Melan v. Fitz James, 1 Bos. & P. 138; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Ad. & El. (N. S.) 43; Hirschfeld v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 344; Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481.

But it is said that the necessity of a demand and protest, and the circumstances under which notice may be required or dispensed with, are incidents of the original contract, which are governed by the laws of the place where the bill is drawn. See Aymar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush. (Ky.) 273; Short v. Trabue, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 299; Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Shanklin v. Cooper, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 41; Hirschfeld v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 344; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Ad. & El. N. S. 43. The reason is said to be, because they constitute implied conditions, upon which the liability of the drawer is to attach according to the lex loci contractus; and that if the bill is negotiated, the like responsibility attaches upon each successive indorser, according to the law of the place of his indorsement, each indorser being treated as a new drawer. See Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Ad. & El. N. S. 43; Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481.

It is said that a note payable in France, though drawn in England, is, in English practice, a foreign bill; and that notice of dishonor according to the French law will be sufficient. See Hirschfeld v. Smith, 12 Jur. N. S. 523; s. c., L. R. 1 C. P. 344; 35 L. J. C. P. 177; 1 H. & R. 284.

Where a bill was drawn and dated in Philadelphia, by C. & H., residents of Montgomery, Alabama, upon a firm in Mobile, a protest of an Alabama notary under seal, stating that he had notified the drawers, was held not sufficient. Fitler v. Morris, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 406.

<sup>5</sup> M'Murhey v. Robinson, 10 Ohio, 496.

<sup>6</sup> The period allowed as "days of grace" is different in different nations, varying in where a draft is made payable governs as to its being payable or without grace.<sup>1</sup>

h. Action on.—For purposes of jurisdiction, "the cause of action" upon a bill of exchange arises at the place where it is made payable, by the drawer and acceptor, though both reside in another jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> It is not necessary, in order to sustain an action by an indorser, to recover the amount paid by him on the bill or to put up a bill of exchange, that the bill should be indorsed in blank or to the holder, to whom the payment was made.<sup>3</sup> But where the holder accepts a bill without funds of the drawer in his hands, he cannot sue the drawer until he has paid the bill, or has done some act equivalent to payment, or is in confinement under a capias or isfaciendum at the suit of the holder.<sup>4</sup>

The holder of a draft has been held entitled to recover a sum of money paid to the drawer for the express purpose of putting up said draft, notwithstanding the money had been transferred to the bank, though after a demand for payment, to the trustees of the bank for the drawer.<sup>5</sup>

If a bill single, executed in Tennessee, payable in New Orleans, is negotiable and negotiated in Tennessee, the holder is entitled to maintain an action thereon, without regard to its negotiability under the laws of Louisiana.<sup>6</sup>

The holder of a bill may sue the indorser in a federal court after protest for non-acceptance, though such suit be forbidden by the State law.<sup>7</sup>

(1) Action by Indorsee.—On a bill of exchange, payable in one country, order, drawn, accepted, and payable in one country, an indorsee can maintain an action against an acceptor on it in that country, though by the law of another State, where the indorser and acceptor were domiciled at the time of the indorsement, such action could not be maintained.<sup>8</sup> duration from three to eleven days. Story, Conf. L. § 361, p. 446; Bayley on Bills (5th Am. ed.), 234, 235; Chitty on Bills, 407.

<sup>1</sup> Bowen v. Newell, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 326; s. c., 8 N. Y. 190; 2 Duer (N. Y.), 584; 13 N. Y. 290; Thorp v. Craig, 10 Iowa, 461; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35.

A bill of exchange payable at sight in New York was sued upon in Wisconsin; and the court held that since it was a bill which in Wisconsin would carry days of grace, in the absence of proof to the contrary, it must be presumed that it would do likewise in New York, and that protest of non-payment on the day of its first presentment was premature, and would not hold an indorser. Walsh v. Dart, 12 Wis. 635.

<sup>2</sup> Bank of Commerce v. Rutland and Washington Railroad Co., 10 How. (N. Y.) 17, 1.

<sup>3</sup> Palmer v. Blight, 2 Wash. C. C. 96.

<sup>4</sup> Parker v. United States, 1 Pet. 262.

<sup>5</sup> Seligman v. Wells, 17 Blat. s. c., 1 Fed. Rep. 302; 9 Repr. 57.

<sup>6</sup> Woods v. Ridley, 11 Humph. 194.

<sup>7</sup> Watson v. Tarpley, 18 How. 517.

<sup>8</sup> Robertson v. Burdekin, 1 Ro. Cas. 812; s. c., 6 Dunl. B. & M. la Chaumette v. Bank of England, C. 208; s. c., 2 B. & A. 385; Tucker, L. R. 3 Q. B. 77; s. c., 8 830.

The payee or indorser of a bill of exchange may maintain an action against the acceptor, the bill being taken to be for value received. From the nature of the engagement of acceptance there is a direct and immediate relation between the parties on acceptance, and not a collateral engagement to

The liability of the indorser of a foreign bill to the indorsee is governed by the law of the place where the contract of the indorsement was made, though by the law of the place where the instrument was drawn and made payable, he may have no recourse against the drawer, in consequence of the omission of the indorsee to comply with the requirements of the foreign law.<sup>1</sup>

i. Interest. — The drawer of a bill is liable only for the rate of interest fixed by the law of the place on which it is drawn,<sup>2</sup> unless it was drawn with a view to another place.<sup>3</sup>

The indorser of a bill of exchange is liable for interest, according to the law of the place on which it is drawn.<sup>4</sup>

j. Damages. — Damages on a bill are to be assessed according to the law of the place where the bill was drawn, unless it was drawn with a view to another place;<sup>5</sup> and each indorser on the bill is liable in damages thereon according to the law of the place where the indorsement was made.<sup>6</sup>

Where a bill is drawn payable out of the State, though all the debt of another, but a direct and absolute engagement to pay the money to the holder of the bill. The liability of the acceptor of a bill is like that of the maker of a note; and if debt lies against the latter, there is no reason why it should be denied against the former. Raborg v. Peyton, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 385; Kirkman v. Hamilton, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 20.

<sup>1</sup> Armar v. Sheldon, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 439; and see Cowperthwaite v. Sheffield, 3 N. Y. 243.

<sup>2</sup> Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 111; Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101; Bank of the United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 33; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 65; Bank of Illinois v. Brady, 3 McL. C. C. 268.

<sup>3</sup> Winthrop v. Pepon, 1 Bay. (S. C.) 468; Anon, 2 Hayw. (N. C.) 280; Schermerhorn v. Pelham, Cam. & N. (N. C.) 452; Foden v. Sharp, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 183; Hazelhurst v. Kean, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 19; Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 123; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. C. C. 316; Price v. Page, 24 Mo. 65; Page v. Page, 24 Mo. 595; Bouldin v. Page, 24 Mo. 594.

Where a contract to accept bills of exchange and the bills upon a person is made, it is held that the contract is governed by the law of the place where the bills were drawn. (U. S.) 111.

t. 85.

Bay. (S. C.)

280; Scher-

(N. C.) 452;

N. Y.) 183;

es (Pa.), 19;

(U. S.) 123;

C. C. 400;

Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124

C. 316; Price

Page, 24 Mo. 65; Page v. Page, 24 Mo. 595; Bouldin v. Page, 24 Mo. 594.

Thus, where a bill was drawn in Nassau by a resident in Charleston, on another resident of that city, and by him accepted but not paid, it was held that neither the drawer nor acceptor was liable for damages beyond the interest, in a suit brought in Charleston. Bain v. Ackworth, 1 Treadw. (S. C.) Const. 107; McCandlish v. Cruger, 2 Bay. (S. C.) 377.

<sup>6</sup> See Powers v. Lynch, 3 Mass. 77; Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20, 23, 24; Williams v. Wade, 1 Met. (Mass.) 82, 83; Depau v. Humphreys, 20 Martin (La.), 114, 15; Hicks v. Brown, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; Shanklin v. Cooper, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 41; Slacum v. Pomery, 6 Cr. (U. S.) 221; Lenox v. Wilson, 1 Cr. C. C. 170; Trimbe v. Vignier, 1 Bing. N. C. 151, 159, 160; Hirschfeld v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. 340; Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Q. B. 43. Compare Hunt v. Standart, 15 Ind. 33; Short v. Trabue, 4 Met. (Ky.) 399; Carlisle v. Chambers, 4 Bush (Ky.), 273.

This doctrine is said to be in entire conformity with the general rule that the law of the place of payment is to govern, because each successive indorser does not contract to pay the money in the foreign place on which the bill is drawn, but only to guarantee its acceptance and payment in that place by the drawee; and upon default of such acceptance and payment, upon due notice, to reimburse the holder in principal and damages at the place where they respectively contracted. See Powers v. Lynch, 3 Mass. 77; Prentiss v. Savage, 13 Mass. 20, 24; Hicks v. Brown, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McL. (U. S.) 123; C. C. 400; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124 C. 316; Price parties thereon reside in the State, on protest for non-payment, the drawer is liable for damages as on a bill drawn on a payee resident out of the State.<sup>1</sup>

k. Defences. — Where the holder of a bill of exchange proves the debt against the estate of the acceptor under proceedings in insolvency, in another State, whereby the debtor is absolutely discharged, and receives a dividend thereon, he thereby discharges the drawer.<sup>2</sup> And it has been held, that, where a bill is drawn in Mississippi, no matter where it is payable, the drawer may set up, even against an innocent holder, that there was no consideration, as that defence is allowed by Mississippi Revised Code, art. 2, 355.<sup>3</sup>

3. CHECKS. — It seems that the execution of a check in the ordinary form, not describing any particular fund, does not operate as an assignment, equitable or otherwise, of funds in the hands of the drawee,<sup>4</sup> although a special designation of the fund will so oper-

It has been held also not to be a departure from the rule to hold that the time when the payment of such a bill is to accrue, is to be determined according to the law of the place where the bill is payable, because such is the proper interpretation of the contract, according to the rules of law, and the presumed intention of the parties. See Vidal v. Thompson, 11 Martin (La.), 23, 24.

Where a bill was drawn, accepted, and transferred in the State of New York, the acceptance of which was obtained by fraud, and without consideration, but the holder took bona fide, without any knowledge of the fraud; in an action brought in Connecticut on such bill, against the acceptor, it was held (1) that the rule of damages was to be in conformity with the law of New York; and (2) that, by the law of that State, the plaintiff was entitled to recover all that he had actually paid for the bill, but nothing more. Roe v. Jerome, 18 Conn. 138.

In a suit in New York against indorsers, on a bill drawn at Mobile, payable in London in sterling money, the indorsement having been made at Mobile, damages are recoverable according to the statutes of the State of Alabama; and in the absence of proof of those statutes, the court directed damages according to the law merchant, which simply gives re-exchange; and the rate of exchange, at the time of the service of the notice of protest, being at par, estimating the value of the pound sterling at the rate fixed by the act of Congress, the sum recoverable was turned into Federal currency at that rate. Cowperthwaite v. Sheffield, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 416.

<sup>1</sup> State Bank v. Rodgers, 3 Ind. 53.

The Kentucky statute of 1798, giving ten per cent damages on bills of exchange drawn in Kentucky on persons out of that State, which were returned unpaid, has been held not to apply to a bill drawn in that State, all the parties to which are citizens and residents of that State, although made payable in New Orleans. Clay v. Hopkins, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 485; Bank of United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 32.

The Tennessee act of 1827, ch. 14 (Schermerhorn v. Pelham, Cam. & N. (N. C.) 452), provides for the allowance of three per cent damages on bills of exchange "drawn or indorsed in this State on any persons, etc., of or in any other State." The mere fact that a bill is payable in another State has been held not to bring it within this statute. Cox v. Bank of Tennessee, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 140.

<sup>2</sup> Gardner v. Lee's Bank, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 558. Vide infra, 11, 11 a, "PARTICIPATION IN BANKRUPT PROCEEDINGS."

<sup>3</sup> Wood v. Gibbs, 35 Miss. 559.

<sup>4</sup> See Attorney-General v. Insurance Co., 71 N. Y. 325; Vreeland v. Blunt, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 182; Rogers v. Hosack, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 319; reversing s. c., 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 415; Murray v. Judah, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 484; Lunt v. Bank of North America, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 221; Duncan v. Berlin, 60 N. Y. 151, 153; Tyler v. Gould, 48 N. Y. 682; Aetna National Bank v. Fourth National Bank, 46 N. Y. 83; Randolph & Co. v. Canby, 11 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 296; Burn v. Carvalho, 4 Myl. & Cr. 690; Malcolm v. Scott, 3 Hare, 39; Yeates v. Groves, 1 Ves. Jr. 280.

A. collected $11,072 for B., and sent B. a check therefor on a bank on the sixteenth day of the month, and charged himself with the amount in his account with the bank on that day, and on the 18th following A. had on deposit more than sufficient ate.<sup>1</sup> However, it has been said, by the United States Circuit Court, for the eighth circuit, that the rule thus broadly stated seems to be applicable only to cases at law, and that such an order, as soon as notice is given to the drawee, works an assignment in equity.<sup>2</sup>

It was recently held that a check or draft, drawn upon a fund more than sufficient to pay it, operates, as between the drawer and payee, as an equitable assignment of the amount therein specified.<sup>3</sup>

An instrument is not the less a check because the fact is apparent on its face that the drawer and drawee are residents of different States.<sup>4</sup>

4. LETTERS OF CREDIT.—Where a person domiciled in one country, and having his place of business there, writes a letter of credit, addressed to a person or firm in another country, it being a contract to be executed in such other country, it must be governed by the laws of that country.<sup>5</sup> Thus, a letter of guaranty written in the United States, and addressed to a house in England, being an agreement to be executed in England, must be construed according to the laws of that country.<sup>6</sup> In Scott v. Pilkington,<sup>7</sup> a merchant domiciled in England, and having his place of business there, gave a letter of credit to parties in New York, whereby they were authorized to draw bills of exchange on his house in Liverpool, for a given amount, which letter was delivered to the defendant in New York. In a suit by a drawee for non-acceptance of the drafts, it was held to be a contract governed by the laws of New York.<sup>8</sup> And a letter of credit given in Boston, by the agent money to meet the check. On the 18th A. made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to E. and F., who immediately accepted the trust. On the 19th the bank received notice of the assignment. On the same day B. received the check, and presented it to the bank after it had received the notice. Payment was refused. Thereafter the bank by bill of interpleader asked the decision of the court as to the disposition of the money. E. and F. claimed it all: B. claimed the amount called for by his check. The court held that as between A. and B., the check operated as an equitable assignment, and that the amount thereof should first be paid to B. out of the fund, and the balance, after payment of costs, should go to the assignees, and that, even if the check were not an equitable assignment of the fund, the same decree would be proper on the ground that A. held the fund for B. as the proceeds of a collection made as B.'s agent. German Sav. Inst. v. Adae, 1 McC. C. C. 501; s. c., 8 Fed. Rep. 106, 24 Ala. L. J. 234; 27 Int. Rev. Rec. 311; 12 Repr. 385; 15 West Jur. 467.

1 See Hall v. City of Buffalo, 1 Keyes (N. Y.), 193; Harris v. Clark, 3 Comst. (3 N. Y.) 119.

2 Walker, Ass. v. Siegel (U. S. D. C.), 2 Cent. L. J. 508. See, also, Roberts v. Corbin, 26 Iowa, 315; Fogarties v. State Bank, 12 Rich. (S. C.) L. 518; Munn v. Burch, 25 Ill. 35.

3 German Sav. Inst. v. Adae, 1 McC. C. C. 501; s. c., 24 Alb. L. J. 234; 27 Int. Rev. Rec. 311; 12 Rep. 381; 15 West, Jur. 467; 8 Fed. Rep. 106. See Superintendent v. Heath, 2 McCafer (N. J.), 22; Overseers of the Poor v. Bank of Virginia, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 544.

4 Bank v. Coates, 8 Fed. Rep. 540.

5 Russell v. Wiggins, 2 Story, C. C. 213; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 169; Bank of U. S. v. Daniel, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 54; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 169; s. c., 17 Pet. (U. S.) 169; Scott v. Pilkington, 8 Jur. (N. S.) 557; s. c., 2 Best. & S. 12.

6 Bank of U. S. v. Daniel, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 54; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. (U. S.) 169; s. c., 17 Pet. (U. S.) 169.

7 8 Jur. (N. S.) 557; s. c., 2 Best. & S. 12.

8 On the same principle it has been held that where a person residing in one State, for the mere accommodation of a person residing in another, indorses a promissory note, not intended to be used except in a third State, in the purchase of goods, that of a London banking-house, authorizing the party to draw on the principals, is governed by the law of Massachusetts, not by that of England.<sup>1</sup>

10. Marriage and Divorce. — I. MARRIAGE. — a. Governed by Lex Loci. — The validity of a marriage is to be determined by the law of the place where it was celebrated,<sup>2</sup> and all rights dependent on the nuptial contract are to be governed by the lex loci contractus;<sup>3</sup> but the mode of determining whether the lex loci was applied with, is necessarily regulated by the lex fori.<sup>4</sup> the liability of the indorser on such note is to be determined by the laws of the State where the note was to be used, and not those of the State where the indorsement was made. See Lee v. Selleck, 33 N. Y. 615.

<sup>1</sup> Russell v. Wiggin, 2 Story, C. C. 213.

<sup>2</sup> Phillips v. Gregg, 10 Watts (Pa.), 158; Crosby v. Berger, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 538; Smith v. Woodworth, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 198.

Under the law of Wurtemberg a citizen cannot contract a valid marriage but with the consent of the king. Where A., a citizen of Wurtemberg, went to Illinois, and there married B., the marriage being a legal one in Illinois, and then returned to Wurtemberg with his wife, and became domiciled there, and subsequently the marriage was declared a nullity. A. died, leaving real estate in Illinois. In an action it was held that B. had no rights therein. Roth v. Roth, 104 Ill. 35; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 81.

It has been said that a marriage contract made in France, and not repugnant to New York laws, will be recognized as a valid contract there, and interpreted according to the French laws. Crosby v. Berger, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 538.

Where a foreign statute upon the subject of marriage is in direct conflict with the established policy of a State, it will not be regarded as binding in the courts of such State. Philadelphia v. Williamson (Pa.), 30 Leg. Int. 45; s. c., 5 Leg. Gaz. 42. Thus it was held during the days of slavery that a statute of a slave State, forbidding slaves to marry, would not be regarded by courts where the marriage was good at common law. People v. Cooper, 8 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 288.

<sup>3</sup> Decouche v. Savatier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190.

Where parties marry in a State of the Union, but enter into an ante-nuptial contract with reference to the laws of France, as their intended domicile, those laws must govern in the construction of the contract so far as their rights of personal property are concerned. Le Breton v. Miles, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 261. See Ordranax v. Rey, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 33.

A woman entitled to an estate in personalty married in Georgia before the passage of the act of 1866, giving married women a separate estate. After 1866 she moved to Alabama, not carrying the property with her, and her husband exercised marital rights over it. At her death intestate in Alabama, it was held that the property passed under the law of descents of that State, and not under a statutory trust under the Alabama law, as might have been the case had the property been carried into that State. See Pace, 71 Ga. 231.

The rights of a wife as creditor of her husband, under the law of France, where the marriage was contracted, continue to attach to the property of the husband where he abandons her, and dies domiciled in a State of the Union. Bonati v. Vail, 24 N. Y. 157. See Vail v. Vail, 24 N. Y. 226.

<sup>4</sup> Coujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. 177; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. 550.

In New York marriage is simply a contract; and if a resident there contracts marriage per verba de presentis in a foreign country, with another person, with a view to a further ceremony in New York, the presumption is in favor of its validity. Hynes v. McDermod, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. C. 98.

II., a native-born citizen of the United States, went to England in the spring of 1871, and there, prior to May, 1871, commenced an illicit intercourse with a woman, an English subject. In May, 1871, he gave her a ring, saying that, if she would wear the ring and be true to him, he would consider her his wife as much as if she had been married in church, and he accepted the ring on these conditions. From that time until his death he lived and cohabited with her, in England, in the apparent relation of husband and wife, until his death in 1874, introducing her in society as his wife, and having children by her. In June, 1871, he returned temporarily to Paris, and there introduced her as his wife, and there cohabited with her. On these facts, in the absence of proof of a marriage in England

b. Capacity to contract Marriage. — As a general rule, the capacity or incapacity to marry depends on the law of the place where the marriage is contracted, and not on that of the domicile of the parties.<sup>1</sup>

There are three theories regarding capacity to contract marriage; to wit, —

First, That matrimonial capacity is determined by the lex loci contractus.<sup>2</sup>

Second, That marital capacity is to be determined by the lex domicilii.<sup>3</sup>

Third, That matrimonial capacity, in home marriages, is to be determined by the home law; and as to marriages abroad, by those general principles which concede marital capacity to all persons of puberty, excepting only those affected by the impediments of incest or polygamy.<sup>4</sup>

c. Marriage of Persons divorced for Adultery. — It has been held, ing to the local law, and of the marriage-law of France, it was held, (1) that the illicit origin of the intercourse in England rebutted the presumption of marriage, which would otherwise have arisen from the cohabitation and its circumstance; but (2) that the jury were warranted in finding that there was the requisite consent in Paris to establish a valid marriage according to New York law, and that the children of such marriage were entitled to inherit their father's real estate in New York. Hynes v. McDermott, 91 N. Y. 431; 2 C., 43 Am. Rep. 677.

<sup>1</sup> Ponsford v. Johnson, 2 Blatchf. C. C. 51.

<sup>2</sup> Ponsford v. Johnson, 2 Blatchf. C. C. 51; Story, Conf. L. §§ 110-112; Bishop, Mar. & Div. ch. xxi.; Fergusson, Mar. & Div. 397-399.

To this theory Dr. Wharton interposes the following objections; to wit, (1) "that it is admitted to be subject to exceptions which destroy its applicability to the majority of litigated questions. Thus, marriages which by our laws are incestuous, are not validated by being performed in another land where they would be lawful; and so the converse is true, that the marriage in England of a man with his deceased wife's sister would be recognized as valid in such of our American States as hold such a marriage to be legal. Nor, notwithstanding the observations frequently thrown out, that a marriage bad by the lex loci contractus is bad everywhere, is it believed that an American court will ever hold a marriage contract abroad to be illegal, simply because the consent of the parents was withheld." (2) "The risk to which it exposes marriages, now not infrequent, of persons travelling abroad, some defect in the observance of local law, of which the parties had no thought, would, if this view obtain, invalidate the marriage, and illegitimize the offspring. But a more serious objection would be the validity which would thus be given to Chinese and Mohammedan polygamy. To maintain the authoritativeness of the lex loci contractus in this respect, would be to license polygamy wherever Chinese and Mohammedan immigration exists." Whart., Conf. L. § 160.

<sup>3</sup> See Lawrence's Wheaton, 172; Westlake, Priv. Int. Law, § 346; Phillimore, Int. Law, iv. 284; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 89; 2 C., 2 Clark & Finn. 488; Brook v. Brook, 7 Jur. (N. S.) 422; 2 C., 9 H. L. Cas. 193; Le Breton v. Nouchet, 3 Martin (La.), 60. Compare Stevenson v. Gray, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 193; Ponsford v. Johnson, 2 Blatchf. C. C. 51.

There are said to be two serious objections to adopting this doctrine in the United States, because, "(1) it would make the validity of the marriages, in the United States, of natives of other countries, depend upon the question whether such persons had acquired a domicile in the United States; for if they had not, they would be governed by the laws of their foreign domicile, with which, especially in the case of minors, the difficulty in the way of a compliance would be almost insuperable. The mischief wrought by the adoption of such a principle would be very great. Few aliens who marry in this country could be sure that they were legally married; few descendants of such aliens could be sure of their legitimacy. (2) Another objection to such adoption of the law of domicile is, that it would internationally legalize in the United States polygamous marriages." Whart., Conf. L. § 164.

<sup>4</sup> Whart., Conf. L. § 10, 128-132, 165.

but on this point there is much conflict of opinion, that although a person divorced from a first wife for adultery is rendered by the law of the place incapable of contracting a second marriage, yet that, if he enters into a contract of marriage in another State where the same disability does not exist, the marriage will be valid.<sup>1</sup> And where the parties resident in one State, to avoid the laws of the place of domicile, go to another State and are married, the marriage is held valid, if so regarded in the country where celebrated, both in America<sup>2</sup> and England;<sup>3</sup> and if invalid there, it must be

<sup>1</sup> See Webb's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 372; West Cambridge v. Lexington, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 506; Decouche v. Savatier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Verg. (Tenn.) 110; Ponsford v. Johnson, 2 Blatchf. C. C. 51; Conway v. Beazley, 3 Hagg. Eccl. 639.

The rule is different, however, where parties go abroad for the purpose of evading the domiciliary law. See Williams v. Oates, 5 Ired. (N. C.) L. 535, 585; Marshall v. Marshall, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 238; s. c., 4 T. & C. (N. Y.) 449; 48 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 57; Stevenson v. Gray, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 193; Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; Dupre v. Boulard, 10 La. An. 411.

In New York, where a former marriage has been dissolved for the adultery of the husband, he cannot contract a second marriage in that State during the lifetime of his former wife, no matter where the first marriage was contracted or dissolved. Smith v. Woodworth, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 198. And where a husband who was divorced in New York on the ground of his adultery, goes into another State, although for the purpose of evading the New York laws, and there contracts a second marriage during the lifetime of his former wife, and immediately returns to and resides within that State, such second marriage is void. Marshall v. Marshall, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 238; s. c., 4 T. & C. (N. Y.) 449; 48 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 57. But see Van Vorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 505; Thorp v. Thorp, 90 N. Y. 602; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 189. But where a wife procured a divorce in New York for adultery, and the husband was prohibited by the decree from remarrying during her life, and the husband afterwards remarried in New Jersey, the statute of that State not prohibiting the remarriage of divorced parties, and with his second wife returned to and resided in New York; it was held that the children born in such marriage would inherit in New York. Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 408. And where a man obtained a divorce in Massachusetts for his wife's adultery, the law of that State prohibited her remarriage, and she remarried in New Hampshire, the law of which State prohibits the marriage of one having a "former wife or husband living," the court held the marriage lawful, and that it should be so recognized in New York. Roberts v. Ogdensburg & Lake Champlain R.R. Co., 34 Hun (N. Y.), 324.

<sup>2</sup> Decouche v. Savatier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Verg. (Tenn.) 110; Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; West Cambridge v. Lexington, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 506; Sutton v. Warren, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 451; Stevenson v. Gray, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 193; Donnelli v. Donnelli, 4 Bush (Ky.), 51; Medway v. Needham, 6 Mass. 157, 161; Pearl v. Hansborough, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 426; Phillips v. Gregg, 10 Watts (Pa.), 158; Morgan v. McGhee, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 13; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. C.) L. 346; Ponsford v. Johnson, 2 Blatchf. C. C. 51; Von Vorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 505; Thorp v. Thorp, 90 N. Y. 602; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 189; Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 408. Compare Marshall v. Marshall, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 238; s. c., 4 T. & C. (N. Y.) 449; 48 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 57.

The New York statute prohibiting the second marriage of one against whom a divorce has been granted for adultery, during the life of the other party to the divorce, and declaring such second marriage void, does not invalidate a second marriage entered into in Connecticut where it is valid, the act being in the nature of a penalty, and not in express terms showing the legislative intent to render such marriage entered into in another State, void; and this is the case although the parties, both being residents of New York, went to Connecticut for the purpose of evading the law of New York. Van Vorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 505; reversing s. c., 23 Hun (N. Y.), 260; Thorp v. Thorp, 90 N. Y. 602; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 189.

<sup>3</sup> Compton v. Bearcroft, Bull. N. P. 114; Conway v. Beazley, 3 Hagg. 639; Harford v. Morris, 2 Hagg. Consist. 429, 430, 443, 444; Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077-1080; Steele v. Braddell, 1 Milw. Consist. 1; Simonin v. Mallac, 2 Sw. & Tr. 67; Rex v.

regarded as invalid everywhere else.<sup>1</sup> There are exceptions to this general rule; to wit, (1) where the marriage is incestuous, (2) polygamous,<sup>2</sup> (3) prohibited by the positive law of a country,<sup>3</sup> and (4) where celebrated in foreign countries by subjects entitling them under special circumstances to the benefit of the laws of their own country.<sup>4</sup>

2. DIVORCE. — a. Foreign Divorces. — It has been said, that, to entitle a foreign court to render a decree of divorce, it must have domiciliary jurisdiction over the parties, and the proceedings must be in accordance with the rules of international law.<sup>5</sup>

(1) In England. — The English doctrine is, that a foreign Lolley, 1 Russ. & Ryan, 237; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 89; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55; Shaw v. The Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156; Brook v. Brook, 7 Jur. (N. S.) 422; s. c., 9 H. L. Cas. 193; Kent v. Burgess, 11 Sim. 361.

1 See Medway v. Needham, 16 Mass. 157; Putnam v. Putnam, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; West Cambridge v. Lexington, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 506; Ryan v. Ryan, 2 Phil. Ec. 332; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. 54; Ruding v. Smith, 2 Hagg. Consist. 390, 391; Schrimshire v. Schrimshire, 2 Hagg. Consist. 395; Munro v. Saunders, 6 Bligh, 473; Ilderton v. Ilderton, 2 H. Black. 145; Middleton v. Janverin, 2 Hagg. Cons. 437; Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178; Kent v. Burgess, 11 Sim. 361. See, also, ante, § 1, f, "VALIDITY OF CONTRACTS WHERE MADE."

2 Incest and polygamy being prohibited by Christianity, against the principles of good government and public morals, such marriages are recognized and enforced nowhere throughout Christendom. See Wall v. Williamson, 8 Ala. 48; Sneed v. Ewing, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 460; Sutton v. Warren, 10 Met. (Mass.) 451; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 378; Swift v. Kelly, 3 Knapp, 258, 579; Hyde v. Hyde, L. R. 1 P. & D. 130; 2 Kent, Comm. 81; 1 Bl. Comm. 436; 1 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, pt. 1, ch. 5, § 83, pp. 188-190; Paley, Moral Phil. b. 3, ch. 6; Grotius, b. 2, ch. 5, § 9; Huberus, lib. 1, tit. 3, § 8.

But this exception as to incestuous marriages is not to be applied, except to cases deemed incestuous by the universal consent of Christendom. Thus, in some countries a marriage between a man and his deceased wife's sister is deemed incestuous, in others not. If marriage is contracted between such persons in a place where it is recognized as valid, it will be so recognized everywhere else. See Medway v. Needham, 16 Mass. 157, 161; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 378, 379; Sutton v. Warren, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 451. Compare Brook v.

Brook, 7 Jur. (N. S.) 422; s. c., 3 Sm. & Gif. 481, 513; 9 H. L. Cas. 193.

3 These prohibitions apply only to the subjects of the country in which the laws are enacted. See 2 Kent, Comm. 93; 1 Black, Comm. 226; Code Civil of France, art. 170; Merlin, Répert. Loi, § 6, n. 1.

4 1 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. Law, ch. 5, § 3, p. 188.

This class of exceptions prevails where marriage is contracted and celebrated in a foreign country, where, as Judge Story puts it, "there is a local necessity from the absence of laws, or from the presence of prohibitions or obstructions in a foreign country, not binding upon other countries, or from peculiarities of religious opinion and conscientious scruples, or from circumstances of exemption from the local jurisdiction, marriages will be allowed to be valid according to the law of the native or fixed actual domicile." Story, Conf. L. § 118, p. 161. See Loring v. Thorndike, 5 Allen (Mass.), 257; Lautour v. Teesdale, 8 Taunt. 830; s. c., 2 Marsh. 243; Ruding v. Smith, 2 Hagg. Consist. 371, 384, 385, 386; King v. Inhabitants of Bampton, 10 East, 282; Harford v. Morris, 2 Hagg. Consist. 432.

5 The parties must have had an actual and bona fide domicile within the jurisdiction of the court, and not by collusion of the parties for the mere purpose of maintaining and pursuing the suit for divorce. See Dorsey v. Dorsey, 7 Watts (Pa.), 349; s. c., 1 Boston L. Rep. 288, 289; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; Tovey v. Lindsay, 1 Dow. 117, 131, 135-137; s. c., 2 Clark & Finn. cited 498 & 562; Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 141, 142; Conway v. Beazley, 3 Hagg. Eccl. 639, 645, 646; St. Aubyn v. O'Brien, Ferg. Mor. & Div. Appx. 276; Rex v. Lolley, 1 Russ. & Ryan, 237; McCarthy v. Decaix, 2 Russ. & M. 614, 620; s. c., 3 Hagg. Eccl. 642, n.; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55; Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. C. 390; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156.

tribunal has no authority, so far as any legal consequences in England are concerned, to pronounce a decree of divorce a vinculo in the case of an English marriage between English subjects, unless such subjects are, at the time such decree is pronounced, bona fide domiciled within the jurisdiction of the foreign court, and the suit for divorce prosecuted without collusion.<sup>1</sup>

(2) In America.—In America questions respecting the nature and effect of foreign divorces upon domestic marriages, and vice versa, have frequently arisen, and been variously determined by the courts of the different States.<sup>2</sup>

(a) Jurisdiction and Validity.—A decree of divorce, recognized as valid and binding in the State where rendered, should be regarded as valid and binding elsewhere;<sup>3</sup> and a statute providing that "a divorce bars all claim to curtesy or dower," applies to all valid divorces, wherever obtained.<sup>4</sup>

The jurisdiction of a particular court to grant a divorce is determined (1) by the statutes of the State where the court is;<sup>5</sup> (2) by

<sup>1</sup> Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55; Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156; Brodie v. Brodie, 2 Swab. & Tr. 259; Pitt v. Pitt, 4 Macq. 627; McCarthy v. Decaix, 2 Russ. & M. 614; Warrender v. Warrender, 2 Clark & Finn. 488; s. c., 2 S. & McL. 155; Robins v. Dolphin, 1 Swab. & Tr. 37, affd. in 7 H. L. Cas. 390; Tollemache v. Tollemache, 1 Swab. & Tr. 557.

The residence of the wife, where she sues for a divorce, it seems, is sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the court to hear and determine the cause. See Yelverton v. Yelverton, 1 Swab. & Tr. 591, approving Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Pitt v. Pitt, 4 Macq. 627; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55. See, also, Laneville v. Anderson, 2 Swab. & Tr. 24.

<sup>2</sup> The conflict of opinion in the American decisions is mainly due to the great diversity of statutory regulations in the different States.

<sup>3</sup> Van Orsdal v. Van Orsdal, 67 Iowa, 35; Johnson v. Johnson, 67 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 144; Hawkins v. Ragsdale, 80 Ky. 353; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 483; People v. Allen, 40 Hun (N. Y.), 611.

It has been said (Story, Conf. L. § 230 c) that "the incidents to a foreign divorce are also naturally to be deduced from the law of the place where it is decreed. If valid there, the divorce will have, and ought in general to have, all the effects in every other country upon personal property locally situated there, which are properly attributable to it in the forum where it is decreed. In respect to real or immovable property, the same effects would in general be attributed to such divorce as would ordinarily belong to a divorce of the same sort by the lex loci rei sitæ. If a dissolution of the marriage would there be consequent upon such divorce, and would there extinguish the right of dower, or of tenancy by courtesy, according to such local law, then the like effects would be attributed to the foreign divorce which worked a like dissolution of the marriage." See Warrender v. Warrender, 9 Bligh, 127.

A foreign decree of divorce cannot be impeached collaterally by showing a want of jurisdiction by reason of non-residence. Waldo v. Waldo, 52 Mich. 94.

Where, in a divorce suit, the libellee sets up a decree of divorce rendered by the court of another State, the record showing the jurisdiction, such decree is binding. Johnson v. Johnson, 67 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 144. Thus, a decree of the court of one State, granting a divorce and the custody of the children to the wife, is conclusive in another State, no new circumstances having arisen to justify a change in the custody of the children. People v. Allen, 40 Hun (N. Y.), 611.

Yet it is held in Pennsylvania that a foreign decree of divorce, obtained by the other party, pending a suit in that State, will not bar a decree there. Rebstock v. Rebstock, 2 Pitts. (Pa.) 124. Had the party appeared and defended in the foreign suit, however, the decree, it seems, would have been a bar. See Jones v. Jones, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 414.

<sup>4</sup> Hawkins v. Ragsdale, 80 Ky. 353; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 483.

<sup>5</sup> Trevino v. Trevino, 54 Tex. 261, 264; Standridge v. Standridge, 31 Ga. 223, 224.

The State courts have no jurisdiction to grant decrees of divorce unless the same is given them by statute. See Lovett v. Lovett, 11 Ala. 763, 767; Moyler v. Moyler.

the clause of the federal constitution requiring "full faith and credit" to be given to the proceedings of courts of sister States;<sup>1</sup>

11 Ala. 620, 622; Bauman v. Bauman, 18 Ark. 320, 324; Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 253; Steele v. Steele, 35 Conn. 48, 51; Jeans v. Jeans, 2 Harr (Del.) 38, 43; McGee v. McGee, 10 Ga. 477, 480; Hamaker v. Hamaker, 18 Ill. 137, 139, 140; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181, 188; Thornberry v. Thornberry, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 322; Butler v. Butler, 4 Lit. (Ky.) 201, 203; Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429, 448; Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349, 351; Stokes v. Stokes, 1 Mo. 320, 322; Perry v. Perry, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 501, 506; Burtis v. Burtis, Hopkins Ch. (N. Y.) 557, 566; Williamson v. Williamson, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 488, 491; Jarvis v. Jarvis, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 462, 463; Klein v. Klein, 42 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 166; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. (N. C.) Eq. 91, 98; Olin v. Hungerford, 10 Ohio, 268, 270; Northcut v. Lemery, 8 Oreg. 316, 322; Ristine v. Ristine, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 460, 461; Grant v. Grant, 12 S. C. 29-31; Wright v. Wright, 6 Tex. 3, 21; Nogeas v. Nogeas, 7 Tex. 538, 544; Cast v. Cast, 1 Utah, 112, 114; Almond v. Almond, 4 Rand. (Va.) 662, 666; LeBaron v. LeBaron, 35 Vt. 365, 367; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 39 Wis. 167, 171. Yet such jurisdiction need not necessarily be given in express words. Ellis v. Hatfield, 20 Ind. 101, 102. The statute must be strictly complied with as to service and the like. See Crossman v. Crossman, 33 Ala. 486, 487; Parish v. Parish, 32 Ga. 653, 655.

1 Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108, 123.

It is provided by the federal constitution that "full faith and credit shall be given in such State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State," and that "Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof." Const. art. 4, § 1. Congress has provided that "the said records and judicial proceedings" "shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of the State from whence the said records are or shall be taken." United States Stat. at Lar. 122, ch. 11; U. S. Rev. Stat. § 905.

These provisions apply to divorces granted by courts which had jurisdiction over the parties and the subject-matter. See Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407, 412; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 270; Wakefield v. Ives, 35 Iowa, 238, 240; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 149; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 161; People v. Dawell, 25

Mich. 247, 259-262; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200, 204; Doughty v. Doughty, 28 N. J. Eq. 581, 586; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 83, 84; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 274; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 234 s. c. 28 Am. R. 129; Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535, 539; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 121, 141; Van Fossen v. State, 37 Ohio St. 317, 320; Northcut v. Lemery, 8 Oreg. 316, 322; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375, 378, 379; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87, 107; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33, 36; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108, 123; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. (U. S.) 582, 591; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 734, 735.

The decree of such a court, so far as it is in rem, acts upon such things as are within the jurisdiction of the court or State. See Ellison v. Martin, 53 Mo. 575, 578; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200, 204; but so far as it is in personam, it acts only upon a person duly summoned, or who voluntarily offers and submits himself to the jurisdiction. See Beard v. Beard, 21 Ind. 321, 323; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128.

If both parties are domiciled out of the State where suit is brought, the courts of such State, having no control of their status, have no right to render a decree of divorce. Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 270, 271; Litowich v. Litowich, 19 Kan. 451, 454; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 162; and should they do so, other States will not be under any obligations to recognize the divorce as legal, even though there was full jurisdiction over the parties by the voluntary appearance of the defendant. See Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181, 183, 184, 185; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 257, 265; Van Fossen v. State, 37 Ohio St. 317, 319.

But where one of the parties is domiciled in the State where suit is brought, the divorce will be valid in every other State, as to the domiciled party. Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 257; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 274; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33. Though not as to the other party. People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 257; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 274; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33.

Where both parties are domiciled in the State where the suit is brought, every other State in the Union must give full faith and credit to the decree of divorce so far as the dissolution of the status is concerned. Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264. And this and by the principles of international law<sup>1</sup> federal courts have jurisdiction to grant divorces,<sup>2</sup> though in the exercise of their chancery powers they may entertain a suit for alimony against her husband residing in a different State.<sup>3</sup>

To be valid, a divorce must be without fraud<sup>4</sup> according to the law of the State where it is granted. It is true even though there may have been no personal service or appearance. See Beard v. Beard, 21 Ind. 321, 323; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733.

But even where both parties are domiciled in the State where suit is brought, and there is neither personal service nor appearance of the defendant, so much of the decree of divorce as is in personam will have no extra-territorial force or effect. Turner v. Turner, 44 Ala. 437, 450; Lytle v. Lytle, 48 Ind. 200, 202; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128; Prosser v. Warner, 47 Vt. 667, 670, 673.

<sup>1</sup> Harvey v. Farnie, L. R. 5 P. Div. 153, 157.

Jurisdiction to grant divorces is in all cases statutory. See Lovett v. Lovett, 11 Ala. 763, 767; Moyler v. Moyler, 11 Ala. 620, 622; Bauman v. Bauman, 18 Ark. 320, 324; Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 253; Steele v. Steele, 35 Conn. 48, 51; Jeans v. Jeans, 2 Harr. (Del.) 38, 43; McGee v. McGee, 10 Ga. 477, 480; Hamaker v. Hamaker, 18 Ill. 137, 139, 140; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181, 188; Thornberry v. Thornberry, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 322; Butler v. Butler, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 201, 203; Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429, 448; Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349, 351; Stokes v. Stokes, 1 Mo. 320, 322; Perry v. Perry, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 501, 506; Burtis v. Burtis, Hopkins, Ch. (N. Y.) 557, 566; Williamson v. Williamson, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 488, 491; Jarvis v. Jarvis, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 462, 463; Klein v. Klein, 42 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 166; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. (N. C.) Eq. 91, 98; Olin v. Hungerford, 10 Ohio, 268, 270; Northcut v. Lemery, 8 Oreg. 316, 322; Ristine v. Ristine, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 460, 461; Grant v. Grant, 12 S. C. 29-31; Wright v. Wright, 6 Tex. 3, 21; Nogees v. Nogees, 7 Tex. 538, 544; Almond v. Almond, 4 Rand. (Va.) 662, 666; Cast v. Cast, 1 Utah 112, 114; Le Barron v. Le Barron, 35 Vt. 365, 367.

No court, though having jurisdiction of the parties, can grant a decree of divorce except for causes provided by statute. See Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33, 34.

Marriage is a status, or domestic relation which every State has a right to control so far as its own citizens are concerned. See Noel v. Ewing, 9 Ind. 37; Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 173, 176; Ellison v. Martin, 53 Mo. 575, 578; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I.

87; Lonas v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 287, 288; Frasher v. State, 3 Tex. App. 263, 275; Green v. State, 58 Ala. 190, 195; Gibson, 36 Ind. 389, 395-400; Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 161; Hopkins, 3 Mass. 158, 159; 11 N. Y. 217, 228; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33; Harrison v. Harrison, 20 Ala. 12, 13; Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 13; Jenness, 24 Ind. 355, 359; Keiser, 34 Md. 21, 26; Dutcher v. Dutcher, 651, 657; Frost v. Knight, 41 N. H. 78; Niboyet v. Niboyet, L. R. 2 P. Div. 153, 157; Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 P. Div. 153, 157.

One country cannot change the status of the citizens of another, or in any way interfere with their domestic relations. Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 17; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181, 186; Harding v. Alden, 150; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 582, 584, 602, 605; Cheever v. Wall, (U. S.) 108, 124; ex parte Johnson, 1 Wood, C. C. 537, 539. It is said that Congress cannot exercise jurisdiction in the federal courts over marriage is a domestic relation under the control of the States, and not a matter cognizable by Congress. State v. State, 58 Ala. 190, 195; State v. State, 36 Ind. 389, 395-440; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 161; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 3 Mass. 158, 159; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. H. 78; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 129.

<sup>2</sup> See Barber v. Barber, 21 Iowa 582, 584, 602, 605; Cheever v. Wall, (U. S.) 108, 124; ex parte Johnson, 1 Wood, C. C. 537, 539.

It is said that Congress cannot exercise jurisdiction in the federal courts over marriage is a domestic relation under the control of the States, and not a matter cognizable by Congress. State v. State, 58 Ala. 190, 195; State v. State, 36 Ind. 389, 395-440; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 161; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 3 Mass. 158, 159; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. H. 78; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 129; Loas v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 287, 300, 310; State v. State, 3 Tex. App. 263, 275; Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33, 34, 443.

<sup>3</sup> Barber v. Barber, 21 Iowa 582, 584, 602, 605; Cheever v. Wall, (U. S.) 108, 124; ex parte Johnson, 1 Wood, C. C. 537, 539.

<sup>4</sup> Ex parte Smith, 34 Ala. 4, 5; son v. State, 28 Ala. 13, 18, 20; Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.), 407, 408; Litowich, 19 Kan. 451, 452; Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 161; Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 259; Goetz, 57 Mo. 200, 203; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. H. 78; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 129.

law,<sup>1</sup> and rendered by a court authorized by statute to grant divorces.<sup>2</sup>

Where, in a divorce proceeding, there is a direct adjudication upon the specific facts of the marriage or its dissolution, and there is no fraud or collusion, it is said to be binding, not only upon the tribunal in which rendered, in all collateral proceedings, but upon all other tribunals, in all proceedings, direct and collateral, whether between the same parties and their privies, or between strangers; not only in the country where rendered, but, the jurisdiction being unquestioned, in all foreign countries.<sup>3</sup>

(b) Domicile gives Jurisdiction.—The jurisdiction in divorce cases depends upon the domicile of the parties.<sup>4</sup> Where both

Rush v. Rush, 46 Iowa, 648, 649; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa, 437, 444; Graves v. Graves, 36 Iowa, 310; Comstock v. Adams, 23 Kan. 513, 523; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 151; Holmes v. Holmes, 63 Me. 420, 426; Lord v. Lord, 66 Me. 265, 266, 270; Gechter v. Gechter, 51 Md. 187, 189; Edson v. Edson, 108 Mass. 590, 596, 597; True v. True, 6 Minn. 458, 465, 466; Young v. Young, 17 Minn. 181, 185; Adams v. Adams, 51 N. H. 388, 397, 398; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 121, 141, 143; Boyd's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 241, 245; Allen v. Maclellan, 12 Pa. St. 328, 331, 332; Crouch v. Crouch, 30 Wis. 667, 669, 670.
1 McFarland v. McFarland, 40 Ind. 458, 460, 461; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 234, s. c., 28 Am. R. 129.

2 See Turner v. Turner, 44 Ala. 437; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 21; Litowich v. Litowich, 19 Kan. 451; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 25; Mich. 247; 200; Doughty v. s. c., 27 N. J. n, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) ; People v. Baker, Rep. 274; Hunt c., 28 Am. Rep. ; 37 Ohio St. 317; t. 375; Ditson v. iser v. Warner, 47 rep. 132; Cook v. c., 43 Am. Rep. 443; Hopkins v. 171; Cheever v. 108; Pennoyer v. 5; Harvey v. Far. c., L. R. 6 P. D. L. R. 4 P. & D. 1; l, L. R. 2 P. & D. R. 3 H. L. 55. , 1 Verg. (Tenn.) ey, 7 Watts (Pa.), iss. 99; Clarke v. v. Pink, 9 Watts (Pa.), 336; Mansfield v. McIntyre, 10 Ohio, 27; Cooper v. Cooper, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 238; Harding v. Alden, 9 Greenl. (Me.) 140; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.), 550, 599; Roach v. Garvan, 1 Ves. Sr. 157, 159; Hillyard v. Grantham (cited), 2 Ves. Sr. 246; Meadows v. Kingston, Amb. 756; Prudham v. Phillips (cited), Amb. 763; Rex v. Roche, 1 Leach (4th ed.), 134; Meddowcroft v. Huguenin, 3 Curt. Eccl. 403; s. c., 7 Eng. Eccl. 438; s. c., on appeal in privy council, 4 Knapp, 386; Bunting v. Lepingwell, 4 Co. 29; s. c., Sir F. Moore, 169; Blackham's Case, 1 Salk. 290; Guest v. Shipley, 2 Hagg. Consist. 321; s. c., 4 Eng. Ecc. 548, 549; Clews v. Bathurst, 2 Str. 960; Dacosta v. Villa Real, 2 Str. 961; Kenn's Case, 7 Co. 42; Jones v. Bow, Carth. 225; Hatfield v. Hatfield, 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 585, s. c., 15 Viners, Abr. Mar. G. 8; Morris v. Webber, 2 Leon. 169; s. c., Sir F. Moore, 225; Ryan v. Ryan, 2 Phillm. 332; s. c., 1 Eng. Ecc. 274; Conway v. Beazley, 5 Eng. Ecc. 242; Schrimshire v. Schrimshire, 2 Hagg. Eccl. 395; s. c., 4 Eng. Ecc. 562, 569; Sinclair v. Sinclair, 1 Hagg. Consist. 294; s. c., 4 Eng. Ecc. 412, 414; Goodin v. Smith, Milward, 236, 245.

4 Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 16, 19; House 1. House, 25 Ga. 473, 474; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407, 411; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 269, 271; Smith v. Smith, 4 Greene (Iowa), 266, 269; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 143, 151; Keerl v. Keerl, 34 Md. 21, 26; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 162; Ross v. Ross, 103 Mass. 575, 576; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 254; State v. Armington, 25 Minn. 29, 37; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 33; Coddington v. Coddington, 20 N. J. Eq. 263, 265; Yates v. Yates, 13 N. J. Eq. 280, 281; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 82; s. c., 32 Am. R. 274; Mellen v. Mellen, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 329, 331, 333, notes; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375, 377-380, 382; Platt's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 501, 504; Ditson v. Ditson, parties are domiciled in the same State, the decree will be valid everywhere.<sup>1</sup> The domicile of at least one of the parties must be in the jurisdiction of the court rendering the decree, to invest it with jurisdiction to pass upon the case,<sup>2</sup> for the courts of a State where neither of the parties is domiciled have no jurisdiction.<sup>3</sup>

And it is said that the legislature of a State has no power to 4 R. I. 87, 102; Hare v. Hare, 10 Tex. 355, 357; Cast v. Cast, 1 Utah, 112, 114; Shafer v. Bushnell, 24 Wis. 372, 376, 377; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108, 123, 124. Strader v. Graham, 10 How. (U. S.) 82, 93; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733; Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 P. & D. 435, 443; Brodie v. Brodie, 30 L. J. Eq. Mat. Cas. 185; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55, 85, 96, 98; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156, 161, 162; Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390, 414; Niboyet v. Niboyet, L. R. 4 P. Div. 1, 8, 12, 13; Le Sueur v. Le Sueur, L. R. 1 P. Div. 139; Harvey v. Farnie, L. R. 5 P. Div. 153, 162; s. c., L. R. 6 P. Div. 35, 47, 49, 51; Briggs v. Briggs, L. R. 5 P. Div. 163, 164; Warrender v. Warrender, 2 Clark & Finn. 488.

1 Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 38; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 240; s. c., 28 Am. R. 129; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 3 Wis. 662, 664.

2 See Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Hanover v. Turner, 14 Mass. 227; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260; Harding v. Alden, 9 Greenl. (Me.) 140; Mansfield v. McIntyre, 10 Ohio, 27; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407; Hull v. Hull, 2 Strob. (S. C.) Eq. 174; Powling v. Bird, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 192; Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424; Bradshaw v. Heath, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 407; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; White v. White, 5 N. H. 476; Freeman v. Freeman, 3 West. L. Jour. 475.

A wife being entitled to sue for divorce in the county where she is a bona fide resident, the court has jurisdiction, though the offences charged were committed in other counties. Jones v. Jones, 60 Tex. 451.

It has been said that the courts of Massachusetts have jurisdiction of a libel for divorce, brought by a husband residing in another State, for adultery committed in Massachusetts when both parties resided there, the wife having since remained there. Watkins v. Watkins, 135 Mass. 83.

It is said that the courts of Louisiana have jurisdiction of the suit of a wife for a divorce, though the marriage, as well as the causes alleged for the divorce, took place in France, if the husband, a resident and citizen of Louisiana, was only temporarily staying in France when the marriage and the acts complained of occurred. D'Auvilliers v. DeLivaudais, 32 La. An. 605. And it is held that the courts of Texas have jurisdiction of proceedings for divorce, though the defendant be permanently resident abroad, if the marriage was solemnized in Texas, and the act for which the divorce is demanded was committed there. Trevino v. Trevino, 54 Tex. 261.

A resident of C., becoming collector of internal revenue, was obliged to live at L., where he remained for five years, intending all the while to return to C. whenever he should cease to hold his office, and voting in C. After a three-years' stay in L. he married a woman who had never lived in Kansas, and lived with her in a boarding-house for eight months, and then in a furnished house for seven weeks, at the end of which time she left him and the State. In a suit for a divorce it was held that the court of the district in which the town of C. was situated had jurisdiction of the cause. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 30 Kan. 712.

3 House v. House, 25 Ga. 473, 474; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 270; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa, 437, 444; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; Litowich v. Litowich, 19 Kans. 451, 454; Powling v. Bird, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 192; Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424; Bradshaw v. Heath, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 407; Hanover v. Turner, 14 Mass. 227; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 162; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 254; White v. White, 5 N. H. 476; Freemon v. Freemon, 3 West. L. Jour. 475; State v. Armington, 25 Minn. 29, 36, 37; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 33, 37; Van Fossen v. State, 37 Ohio St. 317, 319; Platt's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 501, 504; Hare v. Hare, 10 Tex. 355, 357; Harvey v. Farnie, L. R. 6 P. Div. 35, 44; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156, 162.

A State court will not recognize as valid a decree of divorce rendered by the court of a territory in which neither party resided. Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 706.

It was held by the Supreme Court of Ohio, in a recent case, that a divorce authorized by the statute of another State where neither party is domiciled, is of no effect in that State where they have their domicile. Van Fossen v. State, 37 Ohio St. 317; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 507.

dissolve the marriage contract between parties only one of whom is resident within such State, so as to affect rights of property in another State.<sup>1</sup>

The courts will not take jurisdiction of a cause for divorce arising out of the State unless at the time the libellant had his domicile in the State.<sup>2</sup>

Where a defendant, against whom a divorce has been decreed, was a non-resident, and did not appear in the suit, the jurisdiction of the court was limited to the dissolution of the marriage, and that part of the decree prohibiting the defendant from marrying again will be invalid.<sup>3</sup>

(c) Domicile of Wife.—While it is true that the general rule is that the wife's domicile is merged in that of the husband on marriage,<sup>4</sup> and this merger continues until the marriage relation is dissolved,<sup>5</sup> and follows him wherever he may go,<sup>6</sup> although the misconduct of the husband may enable the wife to defend against a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights,<sup>7</sup> though it is certainly

<sup>1</sup> Todd v. Kerr, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 317.

<sup>2</sup> Foss v. Foss, 58 N. H. 283; Pate v. Pate, 6 Mo. App. 49; Ralston v. Ralston, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 30; Philadelphia v. Wetherby, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 403; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375; Reel v. Elder, 62 Pa. St. 308; Love v. Love (Pa.), 30 Leg. Int. 86; Thomas v. Thomas, 4 Leg. Opin. 440.

Thus, a non-resident wife cannot maintain a petition for a divorce, although the husband be a resident of Missouri, and the cause of action accrued therein. Pate v. Pate, 6 Mo. App. 49. And no jurisdiction can be had of a divorce suit brought by a husband who has removed from the State in which he and his wife lived, she remaining there. Ralston v. Ralston, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 30. Therefore, a divorce obtained by the husband in another State, the wife being a resident of Pennsylvania, does not effect her right of dower in lands within that State. Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375; Reel v. Elder, 62 Pa. St. 308; Love v. Love (Pa.), 30 Leg. Int. 86; Thomas v. Thomas (Pa.), 4 Leg. Opin. 440. And where, after having lived with his wife in Pennsylvania, a husband removed to St. Louis, and, claiming to have become a citizen of Missouri, obtained a divorce there, this divorce was held void in Pennsylvania as to the wife, the Missouri courts never having jurisdiction over her. Philadelphia v. Wetherby, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 403.

But in the District of Columbia, where the revised statutes (§ 740) declare that no divorce shall be granted for any cause occurring out of the District, unless the applicant shall have resided there for two years next preceding the application, in a suit under this statute it was held that a husband residing out of the District may apply to the court of the District for a divorce from his wife, who resides there, the act of adultery charged as cause for divorce being alleged to have been committed there. Smith v. Smith, 4 Mackey (D. C.), 255.

<sup>3</sup> Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127.

<sup>4</sup> See Dow v. Gould, & C. S. Min. Co. 31 Cal. 629; Sanderson v. Ralston, 20 La. An. 312; Hackettstown Bank v. Mitchell, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 516; Cutler v. Cutler, 2 Brews. (Pa.) 511, 513; Smith v. Morehead, 6 Jones (N. C.), Eq. 360; Williams v. Saunders, 5 Cold. (Tenn.) 60; Yelverton v. Yelverton, 1 Swab. & Tr. 574; Dalhousie v. McDouall, 7 Clark & Finn. 817; Bremer v. Freeman, 1 Dean & Swa. 212.

<sup>5</sup> But if a husband and wife are divorced a mensa et thoro, she may have her separate domicile. Overseers of Williamsport v. Overseer of Eldred, 84 Pa. St. 429, 432; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. (U. S.) 582, 588, 593; Bennett v. Bennett, Deady (U. S.), D. C. 299, 305; Williams v. Dormer, 2 Rob. Ecc. 505; s. c., 9 Eng. L. & Eq. 598, 600; Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390, 416.

<sup>6</sup> Hair v. Hair, 10 Rich. (S. C.) Eq. 163, 175; Bennett v. Bennett, Deady (U. S.), D. C. 299, 305; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. (U. S.) 582, 584; Greene v. Greene, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 410, 415; Hairston v. Hairston, 27 Miss. 704, 722; Smith v. Morehead, 6 Jones (N. C.), Eq. 360, 364; Williams v. Saunders, 5 Cold. (Tenn.) 60, 79.

<sup>7</sup> Yelverton v. Yelverton, 1 Swab. & Tr. 574.

"Suits for the restitution of conjugal rights," that is, suits to enforce cohabitation on the part of the delinquent husband or wife (see Mortimer v. Mortimer, 2 Hagg. Consist. 310; s. c., 4 Eng. Ecc. 543, 544; Bramwell v. Bramwell, 3 Hagg. Ecc.

otherwise where he is guilty of conduct justifying her in leaving him,<sup>1</sup> and they are living apart and in different States; the wife may, where necessary, acquire a separate domicile from that of her husband for the purpose of a divorce, and carry her case thither to be redressed.<sup>2</sup> But it is held in New York that the courts of that State will not give effect to a decree of 618; s. c., 5 Eng. Ecc. 232, 233; Denniss v. Denniss, 5 Eng. Ecc. 138, n.; Orme v. Orme, 2 Add. Ecc. 382; 2 Eng. Ecc. 354, 356), though still brought in England (see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85. Also Firebrace v. Firebrace, L. R. 4 P. Div. 63; Brown v. Brown, L. R. 7 Eq. 185; Anquez v. Anquez, L. R. 1 P. & D. 176), have never been known in this country. See Coverdill v. Coverdill, 3 Harr. (Del.) 13; Logan v. Logan, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 142; Baugh v. Baugh, 37 Mich. 59, 62; Garland v. Garland, 50 Miss. 694, 715; Cruger v. Douglas, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 433, 506; Rhame v. Rhame, 1 McC. (S. C.) Ch. 197. Compare Keerl v. Keerl, 34 Md. 21, 26; and Tenn. Rev. Stat. (1873) § 2461.

<sup>1</sup> See Bryan v. Bryan, 34 Ala. 516, 519, 520; Hardin v. Hardin, 17 Ala. 250, 253, 254; Kinsey v. Kinsey, 37 Ala. 393, 395; Pierce v. Pierce, 33 Iowa, 238, 240; Douglass v. Douglass, 31 Iowa, 421, 424; Logan v. Logan, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 142; Noulet v. Dubois, 6 La. An. 403, 404; Childs v. Childs, 49 Md. 509, 514; Gillinwaters v. Gillinwaters, 28 Mo. 61, 62; Black v. Black, 30 N. J. Eq. 215, 221; Meldowney v. Meldowney, 27 N. J. Eq. 328, 398; Cornish v. Cornish, 23 N. J. Eq. 208, 209; Boyce v. Boyce, 23 N. J. Eq. 337, 349; Laing v. Laing, 21 N. J. Eq. 248; Moores v. Moores, 16 N. J. Eq. 275; People v. Mercein, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 47, 68; Butler v. Butler, 1 Pars. Cas. (Pa.) 329; Eshbach v. Eshbach, 23 Pa. St. 343, 345; Caltison v. Caltison, 22 Pa. St. 275; Vanleer v. Vanleer, 13 Pa. St. 211, 215; Gordon v. Gordon, 48 Pa. St. 226; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375, 379; Grove's Appeal, 37 Pa. St. 443, 447.

<sup>2</sup> See Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; Hick v. Hick, 5 Bush (Ky.), 670; Velverton v. Velverton, 1 Sw. & Tr. 574.

<sup>3</sup> See Hanberry v. Hanberry, 29 Ala. 719, 724; Turner v. Turner, 44 Ala. 437, 451; Moffatt v. Moffatt, 5 Cal. 280, 281; Sawtell v. Sawtell, 17 Conn. 284; Jenness v. Jenness, 24 Ind. 355-359; Hinds v. Hinds, 1 Iowa, 36, 39; Brett v. Brett, 5 Met. (Mass.) 233; Fishli v. Fishli, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 337; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 150, 151; Goodwin v. Goodwin, 45 Me. 377, 378; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 162; Burden v. Shannon, 115 Mass. 438, 449; Shaw v. Shaw, 98 Mass. 158; Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 181, 185; Wright v. Wright, 24 Mich. 180, 181; Hopkins v. Hopkins, N. H. 474, 475; Payson v. Payson, 518; Masten v. Masten, 15 N. H. 61; Frery v. Frery, 10 N. H. 61; Yates, 13 N. J. Eq. 280; People v. Hunt, 76 N. Y. 78, 85, 87; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 129; Kinnier v. Kinnier, 535, 544; Mellen v. Mellen, 10 Ab. N. C. 329, 331, 333, n.; Smith v. Smith, 6 Jones (N. C.) Eq. 360, 364; Schlachter, Phill. (N. C.) 520; Hollister, 6 Pa. St. 449, 452; Calvin, 55 Pa. St. 375, 379; Ditson v. Ditson, R. I. 87, 107; Hull v. Hull, 2 Stro. Eq. 174, 177; Shreck v. Shreck, 579, 588; Republic v. Skidmore, 261; Hare v. Hare, 10 Tex. 355; Craven, 27 Wis. 418; Dutcher v. Dutcher, 39 Wis. 651, 659; Cook v. Cook, 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. J. 33, 35, 37, 443; Cheever v. Wilson (U. S.) 108, 124. Compare Neal v. Husband, 1 La. An. 315.

It has been said that "the law recognizes a wife as having a separate person, and separate interests, and rights, in those cases where the object of the proceeding is to show that the relation itself ought to be dissolved, and modified as to establish separate and especially a separate domicile home. . . . Otherwise the parties, in respect, would stand upon very different grounds, it being in the power of the husband to change his domicile at will, and in that of the wife." Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 181. See, also, Moffatt, 5 Cal. 280; Sawtell v. Sawtell, 17 Conn. 284; Jenness v. Jenness, 24 Ind. 355-359; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 40; Fishli v. Fishli, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 337; Harteau v. Alden, 9 Greenl. (Me.) 140; Brett v. Brett, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 233; Frery v. Frery, 10 N. H. 61. Also that, if either husband or wife becomes domiciled in another State, their status, as effected by the marriage, may be adjudged upon and changed in accordance with the law of that State. People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 85; s. c., 32 Am. R. 274; Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535; Hunt v. Hunt, 76 N. Y. 217; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 129; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87, 101; Pennoyer v. Pennoyer, U. S. 714, 734; Cheever v. Wilson (U. S.) 108.

obtained by a wife in another State for a cause not there allowed, she having been married and domiciled in New York, and having obtained such divorce in fraud of its laws.<sup>1</sup>

(d) Domicile must be Bona Fide.—Where there is a change of domicile, it must be bona fide, and not made merely for the purpose of prosecuting the divorce suit.<sup>2</sup> There must exist a present intention to permanently change the home or place of abode.<sup>3</sup>

(e) Place of Commission of Offence.—In the absence of any statutory regulations to the contrary, the place of the commission of the offence, or where the cause of action accrued, is immaterial,<sup>4</sup> even though the offence was committed, or the cause

<sup>1</sup> Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424; Pawling v. Bird, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 192. Compare Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535; s. c., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 454, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 424.

<sup>2</sup> See Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12; Loud v. Loud, 129 Mass. 14; Reed v. Reed, 52 Mich. 117; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 247; Winship v. Winship, 1 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 107; Brown v. Brown, 1 McC. (N. J.) 78; Smith v. Smith, 4 Greene (Iowa), 266; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20; Johnson v. Johnson, 4 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Greene v. Greene, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 410; Hanover v. Turner, 14 Mass. 227; Chase v. Chase, 6 Gray (Mass.), 157; Shannon v. Shannon, 4 Allen (Mass.), 134.

Domicile.—A person's domicile, for the purpose of divorce proceedings, may be defined as his home (see Warren v. Thompson, 43 Me. 406, 418, 419; Hairston v. Hairston, 27 Miss. 704, 718, 719; Crawford v. Wilson, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 504, 518-520; Whicker v. Hume, 28 L. J. Ch. 396, 400; Attorney-General v. Rowe, 31 L. J. Ex. 314, 320), the place or country,—

First, In which the person resides with the intention of remaining; in other words, where the person has his home. See Hinds v. Hinds, 1 Iowa, 36, 39; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa, 437, 443, 444; Greene v. Greene, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 410, 415; Hairston v. Hairston, 27 Miss. 704, 718, 719; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 34; Crawford v. Wilson, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 504, 520; Dutcher v. Dutcher, 39 Wis. 651, 659; Laneville v. Anderson, 2 Sw. & Tr. 24; s. c., 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 641; Bell v. Kennedy, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 307, 319; Briggs v. Briggs, L. R. 5 P. Div. 163, 165; Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 P. & D. 435, 443; Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390, 414; Tollemache v. Tollemache, 1 Sw. & Tr. 557, 559; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55, 96.

Second, In which having had his home, he continues to reside, though no longer retaining an intention of making such place his future residence or home. See cases above cited, and State v. Frest, 4 Harr.

(Del.) 558; Ringgold v. Barley, 5 Md. 186, 193; Hall v. Hall, 25 Wis. 600, 607.

Third, In which having resided or had his home, he still retains an intention of residing there for the future, and of making it his permanent home. See cases cited above, and D'Auvilliers v. Her Husband, 32 La. An. 605, 606; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 39; Briggs v. Briggs, L. R. 5 P. Div. 163, 164.

A State court will not recognize the decree of divorce of another State, the libellant having left the former State, and remained for a year in the other State for the purpose of obtaining such divorce. Reed v. Reed, 52 Mich. 117; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 247. See, also, Hood v. Hood, 11 Allen (Mass.), 196; Shannon v. Shannon, 4 Allen (Mass.), 134.

But this rule does not apply, of course, where there was a bona fide change of residence from one State to another, a divorce there obtained, and a subsequent return to the State of the former domicile. See Hood v. Hood, 11 Allen (Mass.), 196; Shannon v. Shannon, 4 Allen (Mass.), 134.

<sup>3</sup> Moorhouse v. Lord, 10 H. L. Cas. 272. No matter how long a person may reside in a particular place, it does not confer domicile, unless there is a present intention to abide there permanently. See Munro v. Munro, 7 Clark & Finn. 842.

<sup>4</sup> Hanberry v. Hanberry, 29 Ala. 719, 723; Smith v. Smith, 4 Greene (Iowa), 266, 269; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407, 411; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 143; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264; Clark v. Clark, 8 N. H. 21, 22; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 38; Holmes v. Holmes, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 305, 307; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 3 Wis. 662, 664; Shafer v. Bushnell, 24 Wis. 372, 376; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108, 124; Duntze v. Levett, Ferg. Eccl. 63; s. c., 3 Eng. Eccl. 360, 379; Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 P. & D. 435, 442. Compare Edwards v. Green, 9 La. An. 317, 318; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. St. 375, 380. See, also, Rev. Stats. of Ark. 1874, § 2201; Colo. 1877, § 919; Conn. 1875, of action arose, in a State where it is not a cause for divorce.<sup>1</sup>

(f) Domicile of Parties at Time Offence committed. — The domicile of the parties at the time the offence was committed, the cause of action arose, is immaterial, unless otherwise provided by statute.<sup>2</sup>

(g) Place of Celebration of Marriage. — Since the lex loci is not the lex loci contractus governs in all divorce proceedings, it is immaterial where the marriage was celebrated.<sup>3</sup>

(h) Defendant must be personally served. — In order to render a foreign decree of divorce valid and binding, the defendant must be personally served with process within the jurisdiction of the

<sup>1</sup> 4; Ill. 1880, p. 423; 1 La. Civ. Code, 1875, § 142; Md. 1878, art. 51, § 141, p. 480; Mass. 1881, p. 813; Mo. 1879, § 217.

<sup>2</sup> Harrison v. Harrison, 19 Ala. 499; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407, 411; Stokes v. Stokes, 1 Mo. 320; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 3 Wis. 662, 664; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156, 161; Niboyet v. Niboyet, L. R. 4 P. Div. 1. Compare Edwards v. Green, 9 La. An. 317, 318; Duke v. Fulmer, 5 Rich. (N. C.) Eq. 121, 125; Hare v. Hare, 10 Tex. 355, 357.

<sup>3</sup> See Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 16; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407, 411; Becket v. Becket, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 370, 374; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 35 N. H. 474, 475; Clark v. Clark, 8 N. H. 21, 22; Prosser v. Warner, 47 Vt. 667, 671; Shafer v. Bushnell, 24 Wis. 372, 376; Gleason v. Gleason, 4 Wis. 64, 65; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 3 Wis. 662, 664. Compare Dorsey v. Dorsey, 7 Watts (Pa.), 350; affd. McDermott's Appeal, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 256; Bishop v. Bishop, 30 Pa. (6 Casey) 416; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20; Edwards v. Green, 9 La. An. 317; Harman v. Harman, 1 Cal. 215, 216; Duke v. Fulmer, 5 Rich. (S. C.) Eq. 121, 125; Lolley v. Lolley, 2 Clark & Finn. 568.

<sup>4</sup> See Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Standridge v. Standridge, 31 Ga. 223; White v. White, 5 N. H. 476; State v. Fry, 4 Mo. 120; Dorsey v. Dorsey, 7 Watts (Pa.), 349; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407; Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 16; Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264; Clark v. Clark, 8 N. H. 21, 22; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 3 Wis. 662, 664; Shafer v. Bushnell, 24 Wis. 372, 376; Harvey v. Farnie, L. R. 5 P. D. 153; Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 P. & D. 435, 442. Compare Duke v. Fulmer, 5 Rich. (S. C.) Eq. 121, 125; Harman v. Harman, 1 Cal. 215, 216; Lolley v. Lolley, 2 Clark & Finn. 568.

<sup>5</sup> See Crossman v. Crossman, 33 Ala. 486, 487; Parish v. Parish, 32 Ga. 653, 655;

Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana 187; Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 187; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 23 Am. Rep. 129; People v. Baxter, 78, 83, 84; s. c., 32 Am. R. 274; Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264; Colvill, 55 Pa. St. (5 P. F. Smith) 375; Turner, 44 Ala. 437; Commonwealth v. Blood, 97 Mass. 538; Borden v. Johns. (N. Y.) 121; Vischer v. Barb. (N. Y.) 640; McGiffert v. Barb. (N. Y.) 70; Hoffman v. Barb. (N. Y.) 269; Kerr v. N. Y. 272; Holmes v. Holmes, 57 Y.) 305; Irby v. Wilson, 1 Dev. (N. C.) 568; State v. Schlack, (N. C.) 520; Hood v. Hood, (Mass.), 196; Harding v. Alden, (Me.) 140.

Some of the States provide for service by publication, whenabouts of the defendant is unknown and personal service is impossible. field v. McIntyre, 10 Ohio, 27; Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407; Hunt, 2 Strob. (S. C.) Eq. 174; Cooper, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 238; Harrison v. 19 Ala. 499; Gleason v. Gleason, 4 Wis. 64; Hubbell v. Hubbell, 3 Wis. 662, 664. Compare Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 16; land v. McFarland, 40 Ind. 458; Hare, 10 Tex. 355, 357; Shaw v. Attorney-General, L. R. 2 P. & D. 156, 161; also, Rev. Stats. Ind. 1881, § 1881, §§ 3599, 4180; Minn. 1873, § 216; Ohio, 1880, § 1882, p. 428.

It seems that where both parties are domiciled in the same State, the jurisdiction to render a decree of divorce without actual service of process on the defendant. See Barber v. Root, 10 Mass. 260, 264. Where the plaintiff is domiciled in the State, the jurisdiction of the court extends only to dissolve the marriage as to such an one. See Gould v. Mo. 200, 204; People v. Baker, 78; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 274; Cooper

It has long been the law in New York and other States, that a divorce is void there when obtained in another State by a resident thereof according to its own laws, against a resident of New York who has neither appeared nor had due personal service of process upon him.<sup>1</sup>

(i) Appearance.—Voluntary appearance in the suit gives the court jurisdiction to pass upon the cause, and renders the decree binding elsewhere.<sup>2</sup>

56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33, 443.

When the defendant is not personally served with process, and does not voluntarily appear, any decree will be invalid against him for costs. See Lytle v. Lytle, 48 Ind. 200, 202, or alimony. See Turner v. Turner, 44 Ala. 437, 450; Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12, 17; Sanford v. Sanford, 5 Day (Conn.), 353, 358; Beard v. Beard, 31 Ind. 321, 323; Madden v. Fielding, 19 La. An. 505, 506; Ellison v. Martin, 53 Mo. 575, 578; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200, 204; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 39; Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424; Prosser v. Warner, 47 Vt. 667, 670, 673. And a decree prohibiting such unserved and non-appearing defendant from marrying again will be invalid. See Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128, 129.

It has been said that "the injured party must seek redress in the forum of the defendant, except where the defendant has removed from what was before the common domicile of both." Reel v. Elder, 62 Pa. St. (12 P. F. Smith) 315. See also Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 565.

<sup>1</sup> See People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78; s. c., 72 Am. R. 274; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 121; Bradshaw v. Heath, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 407; Vischer v. Vischer, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 640; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272; Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 30; s. c., 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 269; Kilburn v. Woodworth, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 37; Shumway v. Stillman, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 292; s. c., 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 447; Ferguson v. Crawford, 70 N. Y. 253; Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 129; McGiffert v. McGiffert, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 69; s. c., 17 How.

. 18; Holmes v. Holmes, 4 Lans. 38; reversing s. c., 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 20. Compare Cheever v. Wilson, U. S.) 108; Kline v. Kline, 57 Pa. St. 501; Cook v. Cook, 56 s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33, 443.

here A. and his wife lived in New York, and his wife deserted him and went to Ohio, where he obtained a divorce upon service by publication, constructive service being made sufficient under the Ohio law. On a suit brought in New York to annul a subsequent marriage of one of the parties, it was held that the New York courts would not recognize the Ohio divorce as valid. O'Dea v. O'Dea, 101 N. Y. 23. And a judgment of divorce granted in Michigan to a husband, from a wife resident in Wisconsin, without personal service or appearance, or her knowledge of the proceedings, the alleged cause of action being false, is no bar to an action by her for a divorce in Wisconsin, although the statute of Michigan made jurisdiction solely dependent upon the residence there of the complainant. Cook v. Cook, 56 Wis. 195; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 706; 14 N. W. Rep. 33, 443. And a decree of divorce rendered in Wisconsin on service by publication is ineffectual to award the custody of minor children resident in Iowa. Kline v. Kline, 57 Iowa, 386; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 47.

<sup>2</sup> Garner v. Garner, 56 Md. 127, 128; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200, 202; People v. Baker, 76 N. Y. 78, 83, 84; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 274; Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535, 539; s. c., 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108, 110, 111, 124. Thus where A., of New York, brought in a New York court a divorce suit against his wife, a resident of Texas, and she brought a similar suit against him in a Texas court, and he defended, contesting the jurisdiction of the Texas court, and on the merits, and she prevailed, the New York court held that her decree was a bar to the further maintenance of his suit, without regard to whether the Texas court had or had not jurisdiction of his person. Jones v. Jones, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 414. And where a husband obtained a decree of divorce in Maine, his wife appearing, subsequently, for a pecuniary consideration, executed a release, discharging all claims against him and his estate, the release reciting the decree; it was held that the wife could not, upon her libel in Massachusetts, impeach the decree of the Maine court for want of jurisdiction, without showing that the husband went to Maine for the purpose of procuring a divorce in violation of the Massachusetts

j. Form of Proceedings in. — To give a foreign divorce validity and force outside of the jurisdiction where decreed, the proceedings must have been conducted according to the rules of international law prescribed as to foreign judgments.<sup>1</sup> k. Collusion in Divorce Proceedings. — All judgments in divorce are avoided by collusion, even in the jurisdiction where they were rendered, when the collusion is established.<sup>2</sup>

l. Fraud in procuring Divorce. — It is a well-recognized and well-established principle of law that fraud vitiates every thing it enters into;<sup>3</sup> and fraud vitiates a decree of divorce rendered in another State,<sup>4</sup> unless the same question of fraud has been tried in the laws (Gen. Stat. ch. 107, § 54). Loud v. Loud, 129 Mass. 14.

And where a wife appeared by counsel in a divorce suit in Indiana, and received alimony in pursuance of the decree of divorce, she will be stopped subsequently to impeach the divorce in another State, on the ground that it was obtained by fraud. Kirrigan v. Kirrigan, 2 McC. (N. J.) 146.

1 No judgment has extra-territorial force unless pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction, acting in conformity with the principles of international law. See Bischoff v. Wethered, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 812; Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 481; Tenton v. Garlick, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 194; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.), 121; DeWitt v. Burnett, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 90; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 462; Mowry v. Chase, 100 Mass. 79; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55; Ferguson v. Mahon, 3 Per. & Dav. 143; s. c., 11 Ad. & El. 179; Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192; Smith v. Nicolls, 5 Bing. N. C. 208; Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686; Don v. Lippmann, 5 Clark & Finn. 1, 21; Cranston v. Johnston, 3 Ves 170; Cavan v. Stewart, 1 Stark. 525; Becquet v. McCarthy, 2 Barn. & Ad. 951; Simpson v. Fogo, 1 J. & H. 18; s. c., 1 H. & M. 195; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 403; Schilby v. Westenholz, L. R. 6 Q. B. 155; s. c., 40 L. J. (Q. B.) 73; 24 L. T. (N. S.) 93; Lawrence's Wheaton, 291 Whart., Conf. L. § 231; Story, Conf. L. § 546, p. 688; Boullenois, obs. 1, p. 610; Wächter, i. p. 308; Bar, Priv. Intern. L. § 125 and n. 14; Fœlix, Nos 321, 327.

2 Hanover v. Turner, 14 Mass. 227; Kirrigan v. Kirrigan, 2 McC. (N. J.) 146; Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424.

3 See FRAUD.

4 See Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 13, 18, 21; Ex parte Smith, 34 Ala. 455; Tolen v. Tolen, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 407, 409; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa, 437, 444; Rush v. Rush, 46 Iowa, 648, 649; Graves v. Graves, 36 Iowa, 310; Comstock v. Adams, 23 Kan. 513, 523; Litowich v. Litowich, 19 Kan. 451, 454; Harding v. Alden, 9 Me. 140, 151; Holmes v. Holmes, 63 Me. 420, 426; Lord v. Lord, 66 Me. 265, 266, 270; Gechter

v. Gechter, 51 Md. 187, 189; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 161; Edson v. Edson, 108 Mass. 590, 596, 597; People v. Dawell, 25 Mich. 247, 259, 265; True v. True, 6 Minn. 458, 465, 466; Young v. Young, 17 Minn. 181, 185; Gould v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200, 203; Adams v. Adams, 51 N. H. 388, 397, 398; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 225-229; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 129; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 121, 141, 143; Boyd's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 241, 245; Allen v. Maclellan, 12 Pa. St. 328, 331, 332; Crouch v. Crouch, 30 Wis. 667, 669, 670.

Thus, a divorce obtained by fraud in another State is void in the District of Columbia, the parties to the marriage residing there. Strait v. Strait, 3 McAr. (D. C.) 415. The Michigan courts will not recognize a decree of divorce rendered in another State, the libellant having left Michigan, and remained for a year in the other State for the purpose of obtaining such divorce. Reed v. Reed, 52 Mich. 117; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 247. And the New York courts refuse to give effect to a decree of divorce obtained by a wife in another State for a cause not there allowed, she having been married and domiciled in that State, and having obtained such divorce in fraud of its laws. Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424; Pawling v. Bird's Ex'rs, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 192. Compare Kinnier v. Kinnier, 45 N. Y. 535; s. c., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 458; 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 424.

A divorce granted in another State, in favor of the husband, temporarily residing there, dissolving a marriage contracted in New York, on substituted service on the wife residing in New York, and for an alleged cause which did not exist in fact, was held invalid as against her. Mellen v. Mellen, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 329. And if, after a decree for a divorce a mensa et thoro, and for alimony, made in one State, the defendant, without disclosing the fact of such a decree, obtains a decree for a divorce a vinculo, in a court of another State, he is not thereby released from his liability for the payment of alimony. Barber v. Barber, 21 How. (U. S.) 532.

case.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a foreign divorce will be void where the court procured jurisdiction by a fraudulent affidavit<sup>2</sup> or by fraudulent residence,<sup>3</sup> or where false charges are set out and a fraudulent case made,<sup>4</sup> and the proceedings concealed from the other party.<sup>5</sup>

However, if the jurisdiction is unquestioned, the parties to the suit cannot collaterally impeach a decree of divorce for fraud or collusion.<sup>6</sup>

11. Bankrupt and Insolvent Laws.—I. WHERE THE PARTIES ARE ALL SUBJECTS OF THE STATE IN WHICH THE ASSIGNMENT IS MADE.—As against citizens of other States, and especially as against citizens where the assignment was made, an assignment valid by the laws of the State in which it is made, is valid everywhere,<sup>7</sup>

The New Hampshire law (1883, ch. 14), to prevent fraudulent divorces, does not enlarge the jurisdiction of the court. Kimball v. Kimball, 63 N. H. 598.

<sup>1</sup> Folsom v. Folsom, 55 N. H. 78, 82; Adams v. Adams, 51 N. H. 388, 397, 398.

<sup>2</sup> See Holmes v. Holmes, 63 Me. 420, 424.

<sup>3</sup> See Crossman v. Crossman, 33 Ala. 486, 487; People v. Peralta, 4 Cal. 175, 176; State v. Frest, 4 Harr. (Del.) 558; Strait v. Strait, 3 McAr. (D. C.) 415, 417; Way v. Way, 64 Ill. 406, 414; Powell v. Powell, 53 Ind. 513, 516; Maxwell v. Maxwell, 53 Ind. 363, 364; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 270; Hinds v. Hinds, 1 Iowa, 36, 39, 40; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa, 437, 443; Smith v. Smith, 4 Greene (Iowa), 266, 271; Warren v. Thomaston, 43 Me. 406, 418-420; Calef v. Calef, 54 Me. 365, 366; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 162; Hairston v. Hairston, 27 Miss. 714, 718, 719; Kruse v. Kruse, 25 Mo. 68; Pate v. Pate, 6 Mo. App. 49, 51; Leith v. Leith, 39 N. H. 20, 41; People v. Smith, 20 N. Y. Sup. Ct. Rep. (13 Hun) 414, 417; Broadman v. House, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 512; In re Wrigley, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 134, 139; State v. Casinova, 1 Tex. 401; Dutcher v. Dutcher, 39 Wis. 651, 658; Niboyet v. Niboyet, L. R. 4 P. D. 1, 18, 19; Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55, 87; Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390.

<sup>4</sup> Graves v. Graves, 36 Iowa, 310; Baker v. Baker 21 Hun (N. Y.), 179, 189.

<sup>5</sup> Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 46 Iowa, 437, 444; Doughty v. Doughty, 27 N. J. Eq. 315, 325; Crouch v. Crouch, 30 Wis. 667, 670.

It seems, however, that where the defendant has been heard (see Folsom v. Folsom, 55 N. H. 78, 80, 81), or duly summoned, though by publication (see Harrison v. Harrison, 19 Ala. 499, 509, 510; Parish v. Parish, 9 Ohio St. 534, 538, 540, where the service was not procured by perjury; Lord v. Lord, 66 Me. 265, 266, 270), the decree of a foreign court cannot be set aside on the ground of fraud. Folsom v. Folsom, 55 N. H. 78, 80.

<sup>6</sup> Plummer v. Plummer, 37 Miss. 185, 201; Adams v. Adams, 51 N. H. 388, 398.

But it seems that strangers to the divorce suit may (see Carpentier v. Oakland, 30 Cal. 439); although, on principle, such third party cannot apply directly to have a voidable decree of divorce avoided. See Walton v. Walton, 80 N. C. 26, 30; Atkinson v. Allen, 12 Vt. 619, 624.

<sup>7</sup> Greene v. Sprague Manuf. Co., 52 Conn. 330; Train v. Kendall, 137 Mass. 366; In re Waite, 99 N. Y. 433; Faulkner v. Hyman, 142 Mass. 53; s. c., 2 N. Eng. Rep. 181; Ockerman v. Cross, 54 N. Y. 29; s. c., 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 465; Moore v. Willett, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 663; Smith's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 381; Zuppann v. Bauer, 17 Mo. App. 678; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 131; Lamb v. Fries, 2 Pa. St. 83; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 320; overruling s. c., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 416; Hooper v. Tuckerman, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 311; J. M. Atherton Co. v. Ives, 20 Fed. Rep. 894; In re Paige & Sexsmith Lumber Co., 31 Minn. 136; Van Winkle v. Armstrong, 41 N. J. Eq. 402; s. c., 4 Cent. Rep. 53; Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 326; Moore v. Bonnell, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 90; Bird v. Caritat, 2 John. (N. Y.) 342.

A voluntary assignment for creditors, valid at the assignor's domicile, will pass title to his personal estate wherever situated. Smith's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 381; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Hooper v. Tuckerman, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 311. It has been held in New York that an assignment by the receiver of a foreign insolvent corporation of its choses in action in that State passes a good title to the same as against the debtors by whom they are owing. Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 320; overruling s. c., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 416. And in Massachusetts it has been held that an assignment is not void as against an attachment, because it gives preferences. Train v. Kendall, 137 Mass. 366.

so far as it deals with personalty,<sup>1</sup> even by the courts of the law of which makes such an assignment fraudulent in delays creditors.<sup>2</sup> And where such assignment does not

While the title of foreign assignees in bankruptcy will not be recognized in New York solely by virtue of the foreign statute, it will be recognized and enforced where it can be done without prejudice to creditors pursuing their remedies under New York statutes. In re Waite, 99 N. Y. 433; overruling, Mosselman v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66. But a voluntary assignment made in New York, and valid there, has been held not to be valid in Massachusetts against an attachment, if such assignment is one which, were it made between citizens of that State, it would be inoperative for want of compliance with legal requisition. Faulkner v. Hyman, 142 Mass. 53; s. c., 2 N. Eng. Rep. 181.

It has been said that the insolvent laws of a State do not by their declaratory force solely, without any other investiture of title, the possession remaining in the debtor, remove the property of the debtor beyond the reach of a creditor who is a resident of another State, and who proceeds in the circuit court. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 136; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 411; Mississippi Mills Co. v. Ranlett, 19 Fed. Rep. 191.

The Canada Southern Railway Company, a Canadian corporation, became embarrassed. The Canadian Parliament passed an "arrangement act," patterned upon similar English and Canadian acts. These acts partake partly of the nature of a re-organization after foreclosure, and partly of the nature of proceedings in bankruptcy. The act in question, without providing for notice or hearing, sought to conclude the rights of bondholders. The Canadian parliament is not restricted from enacting laws impairing the obligation of contracts. The court held that the act was clearly binding upon Canadian bondholders, and that, the corporation being a Canada corporation, and the scheme partaking so largely of an adjudication in bankruptcy, it should be deemed binding upon bondholders within the United States as well. Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527.

Under the Alabama law a woman's property is her own, and not liable for her husband's debts. A man there converted his wife's property into money, thereby becoming her debtor. They then moved to Tennessee, where he contracted debts, and made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, in which he preferred his wife as creditor. It was held Tennessee courts would respect title in accordance with the principles of international comity. Columbia Bank v. Walker (Tenn.), 299. It is the general principle among nations to give effect to the foreign assignees in bankruptcy. Caritat, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 342; Remsen, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 46.

The statutes of a foreign State have any force or effect in another State ex proprio vigore; hence it has been held in New York that the statutes recognizing foreign assignees in bankruptcy have no recognition solely by virtue of a foreign statute. But comity of nations gives no effect to such titles when they are not recognized and enforced without prejudice to the rights of creditors pursuing their rights under the State statutes, they are not in conflict with the public policy of the State. Waite, counting, 99 N. Y. 433; s. c., 1 C. C. 15; 2 N. E. Rep. 440.

<sup>1</sup> But the bankrupt law of one country cannot of itself operate a transfer of property in this country. Rison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 28; v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; a bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction over the property of the bankrupt in foreign countries, and cannot compel an assignment thereof by him. Phelps v. McArthur, (D. C.) 375; s. c., 16 B. & F. 217.

<sup>2</sup> Greene v. Sprague Manuf. Co., Conn. 330; Caskie v. Webster, 2 C. C. 131.

Thus, a general assignment for the benefit of creditors will carry personalty, although situated in a State where it would not permit the assignment to be made therein. Livermore v. How, 21 How. (U. S.) 126.

Foreign assignments for the benefit of creditors are valid in Minnesota if not made in conformity to Minnesota statutes. In re Paige & Sexsmith Lumber Co., 31 Minn. 136.

An assignment made in another State for the equal benefit of all creditors of the assignor is operative on property in Missouri; and this is so, although the policy of such other State would not give a similar effect to an assignment made in Missouri. Zuppann v. Bauer, 17 Mo. 136.

The title acquired by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, although given to the property assigned, is, as to other States, whose policy is not notified, as against the claims of cr with the law of the place where the personal property is situated, operates to transfer the title to the assignee as against process in favor of resident creditors.<sup>1</sup>

But a State law prescribing the effect of an assignment for the benefit of creditors can have no effect on an assignment made in another State, of an instrument executed in the former;<sup>2</sup> and where questions as to the extra-territorial property arise between foreign assignees and foreign creditors domiciled in the same State, the foreign laws to which such parties are subject will be upheld.<sup>3</sup>

The validity of an assignment for the benefit of creditors is governed by the laws of the State of the debtor's domicile, though it embraces real and personal property situate in other States.<sup>4</sup>

the assignor domiciled therein, the validity of general assignments with preferences, liable to be defeated by attachment sued out of the courts of such other States, by creditors domiciled therein, to recover their debts out of such assets. Kimball v. Lee, 40 N. J. Eq. 302; s. c., 4 Cent. Rep. 332.

It is said to be the understanding of the commercial world that the bankrupt's effects should follow his person, and be distributed in the place where the credit was given, and payment expected according to the laws thereof. Holmes v. Reimsen, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182, 192; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 691, 693; Philips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402, 405.

1 Kelsadt v. Reilly, N. Y. Daily Reg., Aug. 9, 1878, Van Brunt, J.; Moore v. Willett, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 663; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 131; Speed v. May, 17 Pa. 91; Law v. Mills, 18 Pa. St. 185; Bholen v. Cleveland, 5 Mason, C. C. 174; Hoyt v. Thompson's Ex'r, 19 N. Y. 207; Parsons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103; Greene v. Mowry, 2 Bailey (S. C.), 163; Smith v. Chicago & N. W. R.R. Co., 23 Wis. 267; Forbes v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 242.

However, there are decisions which seem to place foreign voluntary assignments upon the same basis with foreign bankrupt assignments. Ingraham v. Geyer, 13 Mass. 146; Fox v. Adams, 5 Greenl. (Me.) 245; Borden v. Sumner, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 265; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286; Fall River Iron Works Co. v. Croade, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 11; 2 Kent's Com. 407.

Other cases hold that foreign assignments for the benefit of creditors are not to be recognized as against claims of residents. Van Winkle v. Armstrong, 40 N. J. Eq. 402; s. c., 4 Cent. Rep. 53; Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 326; Moore v. Bonnell, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 90.

2 Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McL. C. C. 397. The law of Ohio, which declares that an assignment by a debtor in failing circumstances to a part of his creditors in preference to others, shall be for the benefit of all creditors, can have no effect on an assignment made in another State of an instrument executed in Ohio. Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McL. C. C. 397.

3 Bentley v. Whittemore, 19 N. J. Eq. 462; revg. s. c., 18 N. J. Eq. 366; Abraham v. Plestoro, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 540; s. c., 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 236; Sanderson v. Bradford, 10 N. H. 260; Hall v. Boardman, 14 N. H. 38; Thurston v. Rosenfield, 42 Mo. 474; Burlock v. Taylor, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 335; Moore v. Bonnell, 2 Vr. (N. J.) 90; Whipple v. Thayer, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 25; Burlock v. Taylor, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 335; Martin v. Potter, 11 Gray (Mass.), 37.

Bishop says that it is not easy to say how far this doctrine was intended to be affected by the decisions in Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 139. And Dr. Wharton distinguishes Green v. Van Buskirk upon the ground of the positive enactment of the State of Illinois in reference to the recording of chattel mortgages. He says, "If a State provide that no title shall pass to property within its borders except on certain conditions, such provisions cannot be overridden by any foreign law which parties domiciled abroad may choose to interpolate." Whart., Conf. L. § 371.

4 D'Ivernois v. Leavitt, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 63; Livermore v. Jenckes, 21 How. (U. S.) 126; Wickham v. Dillon, 2 West. L. Mo. 511.

Thus, an assignment for the benefit of creditors, executed in another State, valid by its laws, need not be recorded under the Pennsylvania statute in order to be operative in that State. Speed v. May, 17 Pa. St. 91.

The validity of an assignment of personal property in New York for the benefit of creditors, made in Virginia by citizens of Virginia carrying on business in both States, signed and acknowledged in Virginia, and delivered and accepted in New a. Assignment of Real Estate. — The validity of every disposition of lands, whether the disposition be absolute or qualified, whether it passes an estate or merely imposes a charge, depends exclusively upon the municipal law of the country or State in which the lands are situate.<sup>1</sup>

b. Choses in Action. — Choses in action, since they can have no locality, are said to follow the person, and pass by a general assignment, even though the persons owing the debts are foreign to the domicile of the assignor.<sup>2</sup>

c. Property in Transitu and Ships at Sea. — It is a familiar principle that property at sea, or in transitu, passes by any valid conveyance made by the owner.<sup>3</sup> And an assignment of a ship on the high seas passes a title to the assignees, if the assignment is valid at the place where it is made.<sup>4</sup>

2. ASSIGNMENTS WHICH CONTRAVENE THE LAW OF THE SITUS. — It is the general rule that voluntary assignments for the benefit of creditors, if valid according to the laws of the place of the domicile of the assignor, have the effect to pass all the personal property of the assignor, wherever situated, unless their operation

York, is to be determined by the law of New York. Grady v. Bowe, 11 Daly (N. Y.), 259.

1 Nicholson v. Leavitt, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 252, 276; Bonati v. Welsch, 24 N. Y. 157; Slatter v. Carroll, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 573; Hutcheson v. Peshine, 1 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 167; McGoon v. Scales, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 23; Osborn v. Adams, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 247; Loving v. Pairo, 10 Iowa, 282; Lucas v. Tucker, 17 Ind. 41; Rogers v. Allen, 3 Ohio, 488; Nelson v. Bridgeport, 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 547; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 131; Curtis v. Hutton, 14 Ves. 537; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 2 Clark & F. 571; s. c., 9 Bligh, 32; Harrison v. Harrison, 42 L. J. Ch. 495.

"It is of no consequence where the instrument containing the disposition is made or delivered, nor where the parties reside, since in all cases it is neither the lex loci contractus nor the lex domicilii, but solely the lex loci rei sitæ, that governs the construction; and so universal is the rule, that neither in the law of England nor in our own country (although it seems to be otherwise in some foreign countries) has a solitary exception ever been admitted." Story, Conf. L. § 428.

Bishop says, that, "while this rule is admitted in its full force, it does not follow, that because an assignment executed in this State (New York) covers real property situated in another State, that, therefore, it cannot be assailed here on the ground that the instrument was in fraud of citizens here, or that it was obtained fraudulently from the grantor." Bishop on Ins. Debt. 239, 240. See also D'Ivernois v. Leavitt, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 63, 80; Nicholson v. Leavitt, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 252, 276, 277. It has been said that an assignment in insolvency, under the laws of another State, passes lands in Pennsylvania. Lamb v. Fries, 2 Pa. St. 83.

Under the West Virginia acts 1877, ch. 114, § 1, non-residents not being entitled to home exemptions, it was held that where a resident of Virginia was declared a bankrupt by a United States district court sitting in that State, he was not entitled to a homestead in land situated in West Virginia as against his creditors there, though the land had been so set apart by his assignee in Virginia, and confirmed by the bankrupt court there. Gibbs v. Logan, 22 W. Va. 208.

2 Guillander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 657; s. c., 6 Am. L. Reg. (N. S.) 522; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 131; Speed v. May, 17 Pa. St. 91; Noble v. Smith, 6 R. I. 446; Clark v. Connecticut Peat Co., 35 Conn. 303; Smith v. Chicago & N. W. R.R. Co., 23 Wis. 267; Whart., Conf. L. § 545.

The decision of an assignee as to the allowance of a claim made subsequent to a judgment rendered thereon in another State, the claim having been presented prior to the judgment, is a bar to recovery on that judgment in the State of the assignee's jurisdiction. State v. Kansas Ins. Co., 32 Kan. 655.

3 Whar., Conf. L. § 356; Plestoro v. Abraham, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 236.

4 Moore v. Willett, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 663; Southern Bank v. Wood, 14 La. An. 561; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 610.

is limited or restrained by some local law or policy of the State where the same is situated.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an assignment for the benefit of creditors, executed in New York, does not confer title to personal property in another State, in contravention of the laws of that State.<sup>2</sup>

When assignments giving preferences are declared to be fraudulent or invalid by the statute at the place where the property is situated, they will not be sustained, although valid by the law of the State where made;<sup>3</sup> but the preference will be disregarded, and the conveyance sustained.<sup>4</sup>

Statutes which regulate the mode of executing and administering assignments, are intended to affect only assignments executed within the State, or such as are made by residents of the State, and have no application whatever to assignments executed without the State by non-residents.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Hanford v. Paine, 32 Vt. 442, 456; Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 375.

<sup>2</sup> "What is injurious to the rights of citizens where the property is situated, should be the subject of positive legislation, and not left to the discretion of the courts." Story, Conf. L. § 390. See Guillander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 657; Zipcey v. Thompson, 1 Gray (Mass.), 243; Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 326; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, C. C. 157; Fox v. Adams, 5 Greenl. (Me.) 245; Olivier v. Townes, 14 Martin (La.), 97.

<sup>3</sup> Warner v. Jaffray, 96 N. Y. 248; s. c., 30 Hun (N. Y.), 326; 48 Am. Rep. 616.

<sup>4</sup> Thus, in New Jersey, where assignments with preferences are prohibited by statute, an assignment executed under the laws of New York, where preferences are allowed, was held incompetent to pass title. Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 329. See Zipcey v. Thompson, 1 Gray (Mass.), 243; Boyd v. Rockport Mills, 7 Gray (Mass.), 406.

The same is true in Missouri. Bryan v. Brisbin, 26 Mo. 423.

<sup>5</sup> Kitchen v. Reinsky, 42 Mo. 427; Ma-berry v. Shisler, 1 Harr. (Del.) 349; Stricker v. Tinkham, 35 Ga. 177; United States v. United States Bank, 8 Rob. (La.) 262; Southern Bank v. Wood, 14 La. An. 561; Olivier v. Townes, 14 Martin (La.), 93.

In Fuller v. Steiglitz, 27 Ohio St. 355, a New York assignment giving preferences, invalid under the laws of Ohio, was held to confer a sufficient title upon the assignee to sue to recover assets belonging to the estate in that State. While the court recognized the exception to the general rule of comity, they held that it applied only when there was a conflict of rights growing out of a conflict of laws of the two States. But if, by attachment or otherwise, the property had been seized, and a lien or charge created against it under the Ohio law, the decision might have been different.

Where an assignment was made in New York, containing preferences, and the assignors had certain personal property in New Jersey covered by the assignment, which property was attached by the defendants, who were creditors residing in New Jersey, and sold in satisfaction of their claims, in an action brought in New Jersey against the defendants for the detention and conversion of the property, it having been shown that an assignment giving preferences was void in New Jersey by the laws of that State; it was held that the assignment was ineffectual to convey the personal property situated in New Jersey, although valid under the laws of the State where made. Guillander v. Howell, 35 N. Y. 657; s. c., 6 Am. L. Reg. (N. S.) 522. See, also, Van Buskirk v. Warren, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 457; s. c., 13 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 145; affid. 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 119; 4 Abb. (N. Y.) App. Dec. 457; s. c., rev'd. on appeal to Supreme Court of United States, sub nom., Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 307; s. c., 7 Wall. (U. S.) 139, 38 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 52.

<sup>5</sup> Ockerman v. Cross, 54 N. Y. 29; Hanford v. Paine, 32 Vt. 442; Wilson v. Carson, 12 Md. 54.

In Philson v. Barnes, 50 Pa. St. 230, it was held that an assignment, executed by a non-resident, but not recorded as required by the Pennsylvania statute, was invalid as against an attaching creditor in Pennsylvania. But Bishop says that this case "is exceptional, and turns upon the phraseology of the Pennsylvania statute." Bishop, Ins. Debt. 246.

In a case where an assignment was made in Rhode Island by persons residing there, conveying property, a portion of which was situated in New York, and the deed of

3. CONVEYANCES UNDER FOREIGN BANKRUPT AND INSOLVENT LAWS. — Regarding conveyances under foreign bankrupt or insolvent laws, there is in the United States some difference of opinion; but it seems to be pretty well settled that a conveyance by operation, of proceedings under foreign bankrupt and insolvent laws, cannot affect property outside of the State or country in which the law is enacted, and the title acquired under the bankrupt or insolvent proceedings<sup>1</sup> will not prevail against the rights of attaching creditors where the property is situated.

4. RELATION OF FOREIGN BANKRUPT TO ATTACHING CREDITORS. — It seems that in the United States a foreign bankruptcy or assignment is ineffective to transfer property, whether movable or immovable, as against attaching creditors, until it is either confirmed by domestic process, or the property has been realized and assigned to an assignee.<sup>2</sup> But the title of assignees in bankruptcy, appointment of an assignee contained reservations, which, although valid in Rhode Island, would have rendered the conveyance void if made in New York, in a creditor's action brought in the circuit court of the United States in New York, it was held that the assignment, being valid in Rhode Island, was sufficient to sustain the title in the assignees in New York. Livermore v. Jenckes, 21 How. (U. S.) 126.

And where an assignment was made in Virginia, by a corporation of that State, containing provisions which, under the statute of frauds, as expounded in the State of Maryland, would have rendered it void, but which were valid under the laws of the State of Virginia, the assignment was sustained in Maryland. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. v. Glenn, 28 Md. 287. See, also, Frazier v. Fredericks, 24 N. J. L. (4 Zab.) 162; Mowry v. Crocker, 6 Wis. 326; Law v. Mill, 18 Pa. St. 185; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 131; Fuller v. Steiglitz, 27 Ohio St. 355.

Where the assignment was made in North Carolina, and contained a clause allowing the assignees to sell on credit, and also to continue the business at their election, provisions which would render the assignment, if executed in New York, fraudulent and void, in an action brought by the assignees in New York to recover the possession of a portion of the assigned property levied upon by the sheriff under an execution on a judgment obtained by a creditor in that State, it was held that the provisions in the assignment, good where it was executed, but rendering it void in New York, did not impair its validity there, and the title of the assignee was sustained. Moore v. Willett, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 663.

But where an assignment was made in New York, and was valid under the laws of that State, a portion of the property covered by it was in Vermont, and there was no change of possession of the property, such as is required by the laws of Vermont, it was held that the assignment was invalid as against an attaching creditor in Vermont. Rice v. Rice, 32 Vt. 460.

Where an assignment made in Massachusetts was valid under the common law of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts court refused to sustain it against a resident attaching creditor. Ingraham v. Geyer, 146; Fall River Iron Works v. Pick, (Mass.) 11; Fox v. Adams, (Me.) 245. See Rhode Island v. Danforth, 14 Gray (Mass.), 12.

In Massachusetts an assignment assented to by creditors is void as against a creditor under the common law. Edwards v. Mitchell, 1 Cr. 239; Russell v. Woodward, 10 Pick. 408.

1 The courts of a State will not recognize or enforce a right or title acquired under a foreign bankrupt law. Johnson v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66; see also (N. Y.) Pr. 248.

2 Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (1841); Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 273; Prestoro v. Abraham, 1 Paige C. 236; Holmes v. Remsen, 20 John. 229; Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 226; Hoyt v. Thompson's Exr's, 19 John. 226; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. (1853) reversing s. c., 45 N. Y. 86; Adams, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 245, 246; Bugbee, 48 Me. 9; 2 Kent's Com. 100.

The rule has been extended so as to permit even a resident of a foreign country to obtain an attachment which will prevail against a subsequent bankruptcy in his own State. Boston v. Boston Locomotive Works, 5 Wend. 339; See Johnson v. Hunt, 23 Wend. 339.

3 See Upton v. Hubbard, 28 Ch. 408.

a sister State, will prevail over that of a subsequent attaching

Beasley v. Whittemore, 3 C. E. Gr. 18 N. J. Eq. 366; Stricker v. Tinkham, 35 Ga. 176; Johnson v. Parker, 4 Bush (Ky.), 149; Olivier v. Townes, 14 Martin (La.), 93, 97-100; Very v. McHenry, 29 Me. 208; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286; Fiske v. Foster, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 597; Scribner v. Fisher, 2 Gray (Mass.), 43; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 517; Dunlap v. Rogers, 47 N. H. 281; Kidder v. Tufts, 48 N. H. 125; Hutcheson v. Peshine, 1 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 167; Frazier v. Fredericks, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 166; Mosselman v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; s. c., 20 John. (N. Y.) 248; McCullough v. Rodrick, 2 Ohio, 234; Rogers v. Allen, 3 Ohio, 489; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 353; Ward v. Morrison, 25 Vt. 593; Devisme v. Martin, Wythe (Va.), Ch. 133; Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brock. C. C. 63; Betton v. Valentine, 1 Curt. C. C. 168; The Watchman, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 232; Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467; Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 44; Oakley v. Bennett, 11 How. (U. S.) 33; Booth v. Clark, 17 How. (U. S.) 322; Green v. Van Baskirk, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 139.

Wharton says that this doctrine is sometimes based on the proposition that compulsory conveyances in bankruptcy are the creatures of local law, and should not be extra-territorially extended, and sometimes on the priority, which every State, in case of collusion, should give to its own subjects; but that the true ground is that property, personal as well as real, is subject to all the lex loci rei sitæ; that if the owner locally incurs obligations on the faith of such property, it is but fair that it should primarily bear the burden of such debt; and that the forced application of the law of lex domicilii would operate to extend oppression and fraud. See Whart., Conf. L. §§ 392, 845-850.

Thus, it is held in New York that a statutory transfer, under the insolvent laws of another State, will not prevail over the lien of an attaching creditor upon property seized in that State. Kelly v. Crapo, 45 N. Y. 86; reversing s. c., 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 603. And in Maine, a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, by a debtor domiciled in another jurisdiction, will not protect his property found in that State, from the attachment of a resident creditor. The Watchman, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 232. But this rule only applies to such property as is found within the jurisdiction of the State at the time of the assignment. The Watchman, 1 Ware (U. S.), D. C. 232. Under the Louisiana Revised Statute, 1791, providing that "from and after such cession an acceptance (by the syndic) all the property of the insolvent debtor mentioned in the schedule shall fully vest in his creditors,"—was held not to, by its declaratory force only, with no other investiture of title, remove the property, possession remaining in the debtor, beyond the reach of a creditor who is resident of another State, and who proceeds in the United States circuit court. Mississippi Mills Co. v. Ranlett, 19 Fed. Rep. 191.

It is held by the New York courts that, where the charter of a corporation of another State provides that upon its committing an act of insolvency all its property shall forthwith vest in receivers, such receivers take the assets in another State, subject to the claims of attaching creditors who have attached subsequently to the act of insolvency. Willits v. Waite, 25 N. Y. 577; s. c., 13 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 34.

G. in Boston, dealing with J. in Naples, arranged thus: J. to send goods to G. and to draw on B. in London for payment, B. to accept the drafts, and G. to place funds with L. in Boston, B.'s agent. In pursuance of the arrangement, B. accepted drafts and became bankrupt. G. had placed funds with L. to meet these drafts, and these funds had been commingled with other moneys of L. and B. The drafts were taken up by J. from purchasers for value, G. paid J. for the goods sent, L. became bankrupt, G. attached B.'s money in Rhode Island, B. had given to L. an irrevocable power of attorney to collect this money. In a suit in equity between the English assignee in bankruptcy of L. and G., the court held that G. could claim the money by virtue of his attachment. Goodsell v. Benson, 13 R. I. 225.

A ship owner applied to the insolvent court of Massachusetts for the benefit of the insolvent laws of that State; his ship was at the time at sea, and bound for New York; her registry was in Massachusetts. The application to the Massachusetts court was granted, and the assignee in insolvency received from the court a transfer of all the debtor's property, which he could have lawfully sold, assigned, or conveyed. Subsequently a creditor of the ship owner, residing in New York, sued the former in the courts of that State, and upon the arrival of the ship she was seized by the sheriff under attachment. The court held that the ship was in Massachusetts territory, and subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of that State, and that the assignee in insolvency had a prior right to the New York creditor. Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 610.

creditor.<sup>1</sup> And an assignment, valid in the domicile of the owner, prevails over an attachment of personal property in another State, made with notice of the assignment, there being nothing in the laws of that State declaring such an assignment invalid.<sup>2</sup>

5. COLLISION WITH LOCAL LIEN.—The rights and priorities between local lien creditors and assignees in bankruptcy are to be determined by the lex rei sitæ; and where those liens attach prior to the actual arrest under local process, they take precedence.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Camley v. Tuckerman, 10 West. L. J. 513; Askew v. La Cygne Exchange Bank, 83 Mo. 366; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 590.

Thus a voluntary assignment by a debtor in New York for the benefit of creditors gives the assignee a better title to a debt due the debtor from a resident in Georgia than the title acquired by a Georgia creditor of the assignor under a garnishee process, the assignment not being repugnant to the laws of Georgia. Princeton Manuf. Co. v. White, 68 Ga. 96.

A Missouri life-insurance company which did business in Virginia, and had debts due it from citizens of Virginia, was adjudged insolvent in Missouri, and its assets, by order of court, under a statute, were adjudged vested in an assignee for the benefit of creditors. It was held that the claim of the assignee to the debts due from citizens of Virginia was paramount to the claim of a creditor seeking by attachment to subject these debts, regardless of the proceedings in Missouri. Bockover v. Life Association of America, 77 Va. 85.

An adjudication of insolvency vesting the insolvent's assets in his trustee is a bar to an attachment issued subsequent to the insolvency proceedings, even by the citizens of another State. Pinckney v. Lanahan, 62 Md. 447. And money in the hands of the trustee of the estate of one insolvent is not subject to attachment by a non-resident creditor of the insolvent. The United States circuit court follows the decision of the United States Supreme Court upon this point, rather than the decisions of the supreme court of a State. Torrens v. Hammond, 4 Hughes, C. C. 596.

It has been said that an attachment of property in New Hampshire by a citizen of Massachusetts against a debtor, insolvent under the laws of the latter State, will, on the principle of comity, be discharged that the assignee may make proper provision for the benefit of all the creditors. Eddy v. Winchester, 60 N. H. 63.

Yet it is held that an assignment by commissioners of a bankrupt, in England, will not prevail against an attachment of the bankrupt's effects by an American creditor. Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.)

353.

<sup>2</sup> J. M. Atherton Co. v. Ives, 20 Fed.

Rep. 894; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 131.

A foreign attachment, issued in any country where the property of a non-resident is situated, after the execution in another State of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, but before the assignment, is recorded in the county, has priority over the assignment. Steel v. Goodwin, 113 Pa. St. 288; s. c., 4 Cent. Rep. 659. And where proceedings in insolvency are pending in another State, and a provisional trustee has been there appointed, a creditor residing in the foreign forum cannot attach a debt due to the insolvent in this State. Mulliken v. Aughinbaugh, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 117.

Where deeds of assignment for the benefit of creditors, void in Rhode Island, conveying land in Missouri, where such assignments were valid, were delivered in Rhode Island before an attachment was levied in Missouri at the instance of a Massachusetts creditor, and were recorded in Missouri before execution and sale under judgment following such attachment, it was held that the rights under the assignments were superior to those under the sale. Attleboro Bank v. Hughes, 10 Mo. App. 7.

<sup>3</sup> See Ex parte Soldiers' Business Co., 2 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 162; Ex parte Manley, 3 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 75; Ex parte Coxart, 3 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 126.

It has been held, under the United States bankrupt law, that no lien was obtained against equitable interests by judgment and execution, but that such interests go to the assignee unburdened by such lien. See Ex parte Hinds, 3 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 91; Ex parte Joslyn, 3 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 118; s. c., 2 Chicago Leg. News, 137.

Where creditors at the rei sitæ have secured prior liens on assets of a bankrupt's estate, and have been satisfied, the residue, it seems, in those cases where a foreign assignee and foreign creditor have intervened, is to be sent, for distribution, to the domiciliary court of the bankrupt. See Ex parte Ray, 2 Ben. (U. S.) D. C. 53.

The courts of New York have refused to recognize the claim of an assignee under foreign bankruptcy proceedings, as against a person who has obtained an equitable lien upon the assets of the foreign bankrupt. Ex parte Bristol, 16 Abb. (N. Y.)

6. RECIPROCAL RELATION OF CREDITORS. — As the interests of the several creditors, both foreign and domestic, in the estate of a bankrupt are conflicting, each is entitled to appear as an intervener in suits by other creditors against the assignee.<sup>1</sup>

7. GENERAL RULES AS TO PRIORITIES. — An attaching creditor is entitled to hold against an involuntary assignee in insolvency, or a receiver appointed in a foreign State. It is immaterial whether he be citizen or alien, provided he be not a citizen of the State in which the assignee or receiver was appointed.<sup>2</sup>

A court, in adjusting the affairs and portioning out the estate of a bankrupt, will not regard the barring of a debt by the law of the bankrupt's domicile as extinguishing the debt, if it is not barred by the law of the place of bankruptcy.<sup>3</sup>

8. QUESTIONS BETWEEN LOCAL BANKRUPTCIES. — In case of bankruptcy, foreign creditors are entitled to come in pari passu with domestic creditors;<sup>4</sup> but where a series of particular or ancillary bankruptcies are opened in different States, the various creditors will have a right to appear in each particular bankruptcy, unless cause be shown why each creditor's claim should be restricted to a particular jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup>

9. BANKRUPT'S PRIOR TRANSACTIONS. — Where the business transactions are impeached by the assignees, the lex loci rei sitæ governs, except as to those articles which are in transitu, or those which are carried about by the owner.<sup>6</sup>

Pr. 184; Mosselman v. Caen, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 647. And also that an assignment to trustees of the property of an absconding debtor will not prevail against a citizen of the State who has pursued and prosecuted the fugitive in another State, and there obtained from him a transfer of the property in satisfaction of his judgment. Johnson v. Hunt, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 87.

Also, that the creditors of a dissolved insolvent corporation have an equitable lien upon its assets in the hands of a third person in that State, which its courts will enforce, though the holder of the fund be accountable to a foreign jurisdiction in reference thereto. Tinkham v. Borst, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 407; reversing s. c., 15 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 204.

<sup>1</sup> See Bonnaffe's Case, 23 N. Y. 169; Ex parte Murray, 3 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 187.

<sup>2</sup> Lichtenstein v. Gillett, 37 La. An. 522.

The holder of a protested draft of a bank is not entitled to priority over other creditors merely because the drawee has funds of the drawer in his hands at the time of refusing to accept the draft. Bank of Commerce v. Russell, 2 Dill. C. C. 215.

In insolvency proceedings in Pennsylvania, trustees were vested with all a debtor's estate. Creditors residing in that State brought suit in Illinois against persons indebted to the debtor. It was held that the lien of the creditors so suing in Illinois should be enforced to the exclusion of such trustees. Rhawn v. Pearce, 110 Ill. 350; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 691.

<sup>3</sup> Ex parte Ray, 2 Ben. (U. S.) D. C. 53; Ex parte Melbourn, L. R. 6 Ch. App. 64; s. c., 23 L. T. (N. S.) 578.

<sup>4</sup> And it would seem that, in the United States, a claim valid by the lex loci contractus, but void by the law of the debtor's domicile, may be proved in a domiciliary bankruptcy against the bankrupt's estate. See Ex parte Murray, 3 U. S. Bankr. Reg. 187; Bonnaffe's Case, 23 N. Y. 169.

<sup>5</sup> This is on the theory that the debt has not been paid by the assets in the first particular bankruptcy; however, if it be shown that such is not the case, then of course the party will have no rights in any other jurisdiction. As to administrative distribution, see Wheelock v. Pierce, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 288; Fay v. Haven, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 109; Dowes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 145; Hays v. Hibbard, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 30; Car-michael v. Ray, 5 Ired. (N. C.) Eq. 365; Mackey v. Cox, 18 How. (U. S.) 100.

<sup>6</sup> Thus, where the bankrupt is alleged to have made a collusive transfer of foreign assets, the question of the collusiveness of such transfer must be determined by the law of the place where the assets were.

BANKRUPTCY UPON SUBSEQUENT EXECUTION.—A law regulating a bankruptcy prohibits subsequent executions, foreign executions will also be prohibited.

FOREIGN BANKRUPT DISCHARGES.—Foreign bankrupt discharges in bankrupt proceedings have no force.<sup>2</sup>

Cases hold that a State insolvent law, discharge applies to all contracts there made, wherever made.

Other cases hold, and this seems to Chicago Leg. News, T. 188; Ex parte Reg. 113; Ex parte Reg. 5; Smith v. S.) 518. See, also, Business Co., 2 U. S. Ex parte Manley, 3; Ex parte Cozart, 5. assignee of an in-made a sale in the ore the assignment, Hampshire, affirms the purchaser and of a the goods in New res fraud, may be Hampshire as though nment. Harvey v. 848. land an execution uit court, is entitled itate insolvent law. hants' Bank v. Bay- h. 356; 1 Brummer (N. H.), 2 N. Eng. fason (N. H.), 2 N. Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 s. c., 9 Cr. (U. S.) od, 4 Wall. (U. S.) & Newbury, 1 Wall. Borden, 67 Cal. 7; ld, 2 Mason, C. C. oster, 2 Story, C. C. 07; Riston v. Con- 5; Banks v. Green- 261; s. c., 6 Call. r. Claudius, Pet. C. 1 N. Y. Leg. obs. tt, 11 How. (U. S.) 3 Wash. C. C. 17; ark's Ex'rs v. Van . 153; s. c., 1 Gall. . McNeill, 4 Wheat. Borland, 103 N. Y. 431; 24 Cent. L. J. (N. Y.), 366; Van 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 154; . (N. Y.) 235; Sicard N. Y.) 194; Whitte- . (N. Y.) 626; Pratt reversing; s. c., 29 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 296; 19 Abb. (N. Y.) 150; Ballard v. Webster, 9 Abb. Pr. 404; Lester v. Christalar, 1 Monroe v. Guillaume, 3 Keyes 30; s. c., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Hills v. Carlton, 74 Me. 156; N. Hagerman, 22 Fed. Rep. 525; Alexander, 108 Ill. 385; Moore v. 32 Hun (N. Y.), 393; White v. C. Johns. (N. Y.) 117; Whittemore v. 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 626; McDougall 55 Vt. 187; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 602; Hull v. Wagner, Bald. C. C. 296; Baldwin, 1 Cliff. C. C. 511; s. c. (U. S.) 223; Davidson v. Smith C. C. 346; s. c., 9 Am. L. Hinkley v. Marean, 3 Mason, C. Titus v. Hobart, 5 Mason, C. Webster v. Massey, 2 Wash. C. Fisher v. Hyde, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 29 v. Nourse, 5 Hinn. (Pa.) 381; Creagh, Ing. Ins. 384; Hillard : leaf, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 533; Jeffries : son, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 482; Russell ing, 12 N. Y. Leg. obs. 216; De Corbett, 7 N. Y. 500; Soule v. N. Y. 342; reversing s. c., 1 Rob 222; Cook v. Moffatt, 5 How. (U. Clark v. Van Reimsdyk, 9 Cr. (U. Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M. s. c., 9 L. Rep. 12; Byrd v. Badg All. C. C. 263; Kendall v. Badg All. C. C. 523; Webster v. Wash. C. C. 157. Compare Storey, 1 Paine, C. C. 79; s. c., 6 474; Babcock v. Weston, 1 Gall. Banks v. Greenleaf, 6 Call. (V. Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. Wray v. Reily, 1 Cr. C. C. 513. Thus, a decree in bankruptcy in court of the United States cannot the title of the debtor to land wi United States. Real estate can conveyed under the local law, and that the territory within which the in question lay was afterward ar the United States cannot alter Oakley v. Bennett, 11 How. (U. S. 3 Shieffelin v. Wheaton, 1 Ga 441; Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & 115; Davidson v. Smith, 9 Am. L. s. c., 2 West. L. Mo. 566.

better and prevailing opinion, that State insolvent laws cannot discharge the obligations of any contract made in the State, except those made between citizens of that State.<sup>1</sup>

a. Participation in Bankrupt Proceedings. — However, a discharge under a State insolvent law is valid, against a creditor residing in another State, if such creditor voluntarily becomes a party to and participates in the bankruptcy proceedings, and receives dividends.<sup>2</sup>

b. Power of States to pass Bankrupt Laws. — Whatever may formerly have been thought, it is now well settled that each State has the power, under the federal constitution, to pass insolvent laws in the nature of bankrupt laws, which will discharge all contracts made or existing between citizens of the State which enacted the law, and whose tribunals granted the discharge.<sup>3</sup>

c. Foreign Discharge no Defence against Creditor not domiciled in Country granting the Discharge. — A discharge under a foreign bankrupt law is no defence, in our courts, to an action by a creditor who was not a subject or domiciled resident of the foreign country at the time it was granted, and did not become a party to the proceedings or receive a dividend thereunder.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 348; Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Agnew v. Platt, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 417; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 383; s. c., 6 L. Repr. 10.

<sup>2</sup> Woodhull v. Wagner, Bald. C. C. 296; Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 411; Phelps v. Borland, 103 N. Y. 406; s. c., 5 Cent. Rep. 421; 24 Cent. L. J. 86; affirming, 30 Hun (N. Y.), 366; Ex parte Coates, 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 231; reversing, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; Perley v. Mason (N. H.), 2 N. Eng. Rep. 297; Carbee v. Mason (N. H.), 2 N. Eng. Rep. 299.

One who has proved his debt in bankruptcy proceedings in England, and accepted his share of a composition, cannot sue in New York. Phelps v. Borland, 30 Hun (N. Y.), 366.

If a debtor be discharged, and the creditor receives his dividend, in bankruptcy proceedings under the law of the State where both are domiciled, and where the debt had its origin, the claim is discharged, and the debtor cannot assert it in another State. Ex parte Coates, 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 231; reversing s. c., 13 Barb. (N. Y.)

ate makes him-gs of his debtor to obtain the olvent law, and ie assignees of the extra-terri-right otherwise of those laws.
) 411.

<sup>3</sup> Stone v. Tibbetts, 26 Me. 110; Brigham v. Henderson, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 430; Stoddard v. Harrington, 100 Mass. 87; Einer v. Beste, 32 Mo. 240; Stevens v. Norris, 10 Foster (N. H.), 466; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 241; Smith v. Parsons, 1 Ohio, 236.

<sup>4</sup> Munroe v. Guilleaume, 3 Keyes (N. Y.), 30; s. c., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 334; Moore v. Horton, 32 Hun (N. Y.), 393; Newton v. Hagerman, 22 Fed. Rep. 525; Woodhull v. Wagner, Bald. C. C. 296; Byrd v. Badger, 1 McAll. C. C. 263; Russell v. Harding, 12 N. Y. Leg. obs. 216; Donnelly v. Corbett, 7 N. Y. 500; Soule v. Chase, 39 N. Y. 342; reversing s. c., 1 Rob. (N. Y.) 222; Green v. Sarmiento, 3 Wash. C. C. 17; s. c., 1 Pet. C. C. 74; Hills v. Carlton, 74 Me. 156; Smith v. Gardner, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 54; Phelps v. Borland, 30 Hun (N. Y.), 366; s. c., 24 Cent. L. J. 86.

Thus, a discharge under the insolvent law of the State of the forum does not exempt a defendant from arrest, in an action by a citizen of another State, for a debt payable there. Woodhull v. Wagner, Bald. C. C. 296; Byrd v. Badger, 1 McAll. C. C. 263. And a discharge in bankruptcy does not preclude a citizen of Canada from recovering in a State court the amount of his debt, although, were he a citizen of the United States, the discharge would bar it. Moore v. Horton, 32 Hun (N. Y.), 393.

The holder of a negotiable note, residing in another State, who received it before maturity, is not affected by the maker's discharge under the insolvent law of the State in which it was made and originally

d. Contracts made and to be performed in State of Discharge. The discharge of a debtor, under the insolvent laws of one State will not bar an action by a citizen of another State, though the debt was contracted in the former State, and by its terms there payable.<sup>1</sup>

A discharge obtained under the insolvency law of one State is not a bar to an action on a note given in and payable in the same State, the party to whom the note was given being a citizen of a different State, and not having in any manner been a party to the proceedings,<sup>2</sup> even though the action is brought in courts of the State granting the discharge.<sup>3</sup>

e. Contracts made and to be performed out of State granting discharge. — A discharge under the insolvent or bankrupt law of one country will not be a bar to an action on a contract made and to be performed in another country, the plaintiff not having come under the proceedings in insolvency.<sup>4</sup> negotiated, not having been a party to the proceedings. Smith v. Gardner, 4 Bos. (N. Y.) 54.

Where a judgment was obtained in this country upon a foreign contract, and subsequently the defendant was discharged under the bankrupt law of the place of the original contract, such discharge was held not to bar an action on the judgment. Green v. Sarmiento, 3 Wash. C. C. 17; a. c., 1 Pet. C. C. 74. And where a citizen of Maine there obtained a discharge in insolvency, it was held no bar to an action brought in a Maine court by a creditor, a citizen of another State, not a party to the insolvency proceedings. Hills v. Carlton, 74 Me. 156.

<sup>1</sup> Hale v. Baldwin, 1 Cliff. C. C. 511; a. c., 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223.

<sup>2</sup> Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; a. c., 1 Cliff. C. C. 511; Worthington v. Jerome, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 279.

<sup>3</sup> Pratt v. Chase, 44 N. Y. 597; reversing a. c., 29 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 296, 19 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 150. And see Ballard v. Webster, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 404.

It has been held in New York that a discharge under the insolvent law of that State does not affect the remedy of a non-resident creditor upon a judgment obtained in one of the courts of that State. Lester v. Christalar, 1 Daly (N. Y.), 29.

The English doctrine that the discharge of a bankrupt, shall be effectual against contracts of the State that gives the discharge, is discussed, and the contrary rule of reciprocity adopted in other countries is explained in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213.

<sup>4</sup> Van Raugh v. Van Arsdaln, 3 Caine, (N. Y.) 154; Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Banks v. Greenleaf, 6 Call.

(Va.) 271; Babcock v. Weston, 1 C. C. 168; Byrd v. Badger, 1 McAll. C. 263; Kendall v. Badger, 1 McAll. C. 523; Wray v. Reily, 1 Cr. C. C. 513; Green v. Sarmiento, 3 Wash. C. C. 17; Banks v. Greenleaf, 1 Hughes, C. C. 261; a. c., 6 Call. (Va.) 271; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. 383; a. c., 6 L. Rep. 107; Clark v. Reimsdyk, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 153; Snyder v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; Van Raugh v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371; Townsend v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M. C. C. 115; Webster v. Massey, 2 Wash. C. C. 157. Compare Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, C. C. a. c., 6 Am. L. J. 474.

Thus, where a debt was payable in New York, and the plaintiffs were citizens of that State, it was held that the discharge of the defendant by the insolvent law of Pennsylvania did not discharge the contract, and could have no operation on the remedies to enforce performance. Wheeler v. Wagner, Bald. C. C. 296. A contract made and payable in Canada, by a person resident in Vermont, to a person resident in Canada, is not barred by a discharge under the United States bankrupt act, when the foreign resident neither was a party to the proceedings, nor had notice thereof. McDougall v. Page, 55 Vt. a. c., 45 Am. Rep. 602.

Where a citizen of Maryland gave a bond in Virginia to a citizen of Virginia, and afterward became bankrupt in Maryland, by the laws of that State, under which he was duly discharged by a competent tribunal, under a general discharge with respect to his creditors, it was held that this did not discharge him in Virginia. Banks v. Greenleaf, 1 Hughes, C. 261; a. c., 6 Call. (Va.) 271. And where

f. Discharge in One State no Bar to an Action on a Contract made in Another State. — But such discharge will not be a bar to an action by a citizen of another State, where the contract was not, by its express terms, made payable or to be performed in the State granting the discharge;<sup>1</sup> or where no place of payment is named.<sup>2</sup>

g. Discharge in One State no Bar to Action in Another. — An assignment for the benefit of creditors will not prevent a creditor in another State from enforcing his debt against land in that State, although such land is embraced in the deed of assignment.<sup>3</sup> And an insolvent discharge, obtained in another State, whose courts do not respect discharges granted under the laws of the forum, will not be regarded so as to entitle the party to a discharge on common bail.<sup>4</sup>

h. Discharge no Bar to Suit by Creditor of Another State in the Federal Courts. — A discharge granted under the insolvent law of a State cannot be pleaded in bar of an action brought by a citizen tin bills of exchange were drawn in Pennsylvania on a citizen in Massachusetts, and were accepted by him in Massachusetts, it was held that it was not competent for the legislature of Massachusetts, by the insolvent act of 1838, to discharge the obligation of these contracts. Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 383; s. c., 6 L. Rep. 107.

The discharge of a citizen from his debts under the insolvent laws of the State is no discharge of a contract made and to be executed in a foreign country. The law of the place where a contract is made is to govern as to its validity, nature, and construction, but the remedy on such contract is to be pursued according to the law of the place where the remedy is sought. Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, 1 Gall. C. C. 371, 630; modified on appeal, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 153.

<sup>1</sup> See Ory v. Winter, 16 Martin (La.), 277; Palmer v. Goodwin, 32 Me. 535; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 594; Fiske v. Foster, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 597; Braynard v. Marshall, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103; Donnelly v. Corbett, 3 Seld. (N. Y.) 500; Munroe v. Guillaume, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 30; overruling, Parkinson v. Scoville, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 150; Poe v. Duck, 5 Md. 1; Frey v. Kirk, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 509; Potter v. Kerr, 1 Md. Ch. 275; Anderson v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 603; Easterly v. Goodwin, 35 Conn. 273; Felch v. Bugbee, 48 Me. 9; Very v. McHenry, 29 Me. 206; Pugh v. Bussel, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 394; Brighton Bank v. Merick, 11 Mich. 405; Banks v. Greenleaf, 6 Call. (Va.) 271; Urton v. Hunter, 2 W. Va. 83; Worthington v. Jerome, 5 Blackf. C. C. 279; Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M. C. C. 115; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 387; Woodhull v. Wag- ner, Bald. C. C. 300; Byrd v. Badger, 1 McAll. C. C. 263; Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 409; Hilliard v. Greenleaf, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 532; Stevenson v. King, 2 Cliff. C. C. 1; Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Smith, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 131; Clark's Exr's v. Van Riemadyk, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 153; s. c., 1 Gall. C. C. 371; McMillan v. McNeill, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 209; Green v. Sarmiento, Pet. C. C. 74.

A discharge as a bankrupt in a foreign country is not deemed here a bar to any action that may be brought in another jurisdiction. The discharge is considered as local; and although an assignee of an individual declared a bankrupt in a foreign country would be allowed to sue as such assignee, yet our courts would not recognize the discharge as a bar to debts contracted in this country, or due to citizens of this country, but a discharge under our laws operates on debts due to citizens of any country. Zarega's Case, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 40, note.

<sup>2</sup> Scribner v. Fisher, 2 Gray (Mass.), 43; Clark v. Hatch, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 455; Ilisley v. Mirriam, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 242; Green v. Sarmiento, 3 Wash. C. C. 17.

Where a note specifying a place of payment was executed in California after the enactment of the insolvent law of that State, in favor of a citizen and resident of another State, it was held that a discharge under the insolvent law did not bar an action on the note. Rhodes v. Borden, 67 Cal. 7.

<sup>3</sup> Heyer v. Alexander, 108 Ill. 385.

<sup>4</sup> Fisher v. Hyde, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 256; Walsh v. Nourse, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 381; Hayden v. Creagh, Ing. Ina. 384.

of another State in the courts of the United States, it appears that the creditor in some way became a party to the proceedings. The insolvent laws of one State cannot discharge contracts of citizens of other States, because such laws have no extra-territorial operation.<sup>1</sup>

i. Where Foreign Discharge may be pleaded. — Although insolvent laws have no force beyond the limits of the State to which such as may be given them by comity,<sup>2</sup> yet where a contract was made between parties resident in a State in the shape of a promissory note on which a judgment was obtained in the same State by the indorser against the maker, which judgment was affirmed by the United States court for another State by the same parties who were citizens of the last-mentioned State, and a judgment was rendered thereon, and afterwards the defendant was discharged under the insolvent laws of the State of the contract, it was held that the discharge might be pleaded in bar of an action upon the last judgment.<sup>3</sup>

A discharge from the debt under the bankrupt law of the State of the contract is good in every other place, when pleaded in bar of the extinction of the debt; but a like discharge under the law of another place where the contract was not made cannot be so pleaded in the tribunals of any other nation.<sup>4</sup>

The discharge in bankruptcy of the acceptor of a bill of exchange, under the law of his domicile, is available against the holder, though a citizen and a resident of another country at the same time of its passage.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 409; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Baldwin v. Bank of Newbury, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 234; Rhodes v. Borden, 67 Cal. 7; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 383; Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M., C. C. 115; Hobblethwaite v. Batturs, 7 Miles (Pa.), 82.

A discharge under a State insolvent law will not dissolve an attachment issued out of a federal court, though it would have such effect on State process. Springer v. Foster, 2 Story, C. C. 383; Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M., C. C. 115. And a certificate of discharge granted under insolvent laws passed by a State, cannot be pleaded in bar of an action brought by a citizen of another State, in the courts of the United States, or of any other State than the one where the discharge was obtained, unless it appear that the plaintiff proved his debt against the defendant's estate in insolvency, or in some other manner became a party to the proceedings. Baldwin v. Bank of Newbury, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 234; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 409.

A discharge under the insolvent law of another State, which acts upon the contract, does not bar an action by the federal court of the district where the discharge was granted. Hobblethwaite v. Batturs, 1 Miles (Pa.), 82.

<sup>2</sup> Cook v. Moffat, 5 Howe (U. S.) 150; Davidson v. Smith, 1 B. & C. 346; a. c., 9 Am. L. Reg. 217.

<sup>3</sup> Parkinson v. Scoville, 19 W. & A. 151; Le Roy v. Crowninshield, C. C. 151, 175.

<sup>4</sup> Ritchie v. Garrison, 10 Ab. Pr. 246.

A discharge in bankruptcy under the act of 1841, operated upon a debt of a resident of a foreign country, at the time of its passage. Ritchie v. Garrison (N. Y.) Pr. 246. It has been held in Pennsylvania that where a contract is made in another State between residents of that State, and is executed there, upon which a judgment is obtained in such other State, the Pennsylvania courts will give the same effect to a discharge in insolvency in that State as though the judgment was obtained in Pennsylvania. See Bradford v. Miles (Pa.), 17; Miles v. Bradford, 2 Miles (Pa.), 17; Miles v. Bradford, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 229; Thompson v. Miles, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 294; Donaldson v. Miles, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 100; Hare v. Miles, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 100.

The discharge of a bankrupt or insolvent operates on the contract according to the lex loci where it was made, or is to be performed,<sup>1</sup> where no act of Congress controls it.<sup>2</sup>

A discharge under the insolvent law of the place of the contract may be pleaded to an action on the judgment, brought in a federal court sitting in another State.<sup>3</sup>

j. Effect of Foreign Discharge on Note indorsed to Bona Fide Holder before Maturity. — Where a note or bill is indorsed by an insolvent debtor, and transferred bona fide to a citizen of another State, before maturity, and before proceedings instituted in insolvency, this is a new contract, and a suit on it is not barred by a discharge in bankruptcy.<sup>4</sup>

k. Effect of Foreign Discharge of Person from Arrest. — A discharge of the person under a State insolvent law will not avail in another State: the lex fori governs as to remedies.<sup>5</sup>

The court will not quash a ca. sa., on the ground that the defendant has applied for the benefit of the insolvent laws in another jurisdiction, and is there protected from arrest.<sup>6</sup>

12. RIGHTS OF FOREIGN BANKRUPT ASSIGNEE TO SUE. — Under the general principles of comity, assignees of a foreign bankrupt

<sup>1</sup> Yeates (Pa.), 435; Hilliard v. Greenleaf, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 533. And a discharge in insolvency has been held to be a defence to a suit on a note made in California to a citizen there, and indorsed by him to a citizen of another State after the discharge in California. Thomas v. Crow, 65 Cal. 470.

<sup>2</sup> Hicks v. Brown, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; Sherrill v. Hopkins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 103; Parkinson v. Scoville, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 150.

<sup>3</sup> Perry Manufacturing Co. v. Brown, 2 Woodb. & M., C. C. 449; Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, C. C. 79.

The bankrupt law of the United States, on going into operation, ipso facto, suspended the operation of the State insolvent laws as to persons within its purview. Ex parte Eames, 2 Story, C. C. 322; Ex parte Holmes, 5 Law Rep. 360.

<sup>4</sup> Davidson v. Smith, 9 Am. L. Reg. 217; n. c., 2 W. L. Mo. 566.

<sup>5</sup> Anderson v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 603; Baucher v. Fisk, 33 Me. 316; Houghton v. Mayard, 5 Gray (Mass.), 552; Towne v. Smith, 7 Woodb. M., C. C. 115.

<sup>6</sup> Hinkley v. Marcan, 3 Mason, C. C. 88; Titus v. Hobart, 5 Mason, C. C. 378; Webster v. Massey, 2 Wash. C. C. 157; Secard v. Whale, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 194; Whittemore v. Adams, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 626; White v. Canfield, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 117; Whittemore v. Adams, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 629; Jeffries v. Thompson, 2 Yeates (Pa.), 482.

The provisions of the insolvent law of Rhode Island, empowering the supreme court of the State in its discretion to grant a stay of proceedings against the insolvent debtor, is addressed exclusively to the State court, and cannot be executed by the United States circuit court. And that part of this law which relieves a discharged debtor from imprisonment on execution, having been in operation at the date of the process act of May 19, 1828 (4 Stat. 278), is adopted by section three of that act, so far that a person so discharged cannot be imprisoned under final process of the United States court for debts contracted prior to the filing of his petition. Matter of Hopkins, 2 Curt. C. C. 567.

In the case of British subjects, a discharge under the bankrupt law of England will protect the person of the bankrupt, in Pennsylvania. Harris v. Mandeville, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 256; n. c., 2 Yeates (Pa.), 99.

A discharge of a defendant under the insolvent law of Pennsylvania will not discharge his person from a debt contracted in another State. Riston v. Content, 4 Wash. C. C. 476.

Where the debt has been contracted, and made payable out of the State, the circuit court will not discharge a defendant arrested for such debt on common bail, notwithstanding his discharge by the insolvent laws of the State where the suit is brought. Campbell v. Claudius, Pet. C. C. 404, 484. The court refused to quash a writ of capias issued against a defendant for a debt contracted in the State, he having been discharged by the State insolvent law, but discharged the defendant on common bail. Read v. Chapman, Pet. C. C. 404.

<sup>8</sup> Mattingly v. Smith, 2 Cr. C. C. 158.

are entitled to sue for and recover debts due to the bankrupt in another State, except when the claim of the assignees comes into conflict with creditors in that State claiming under attachment against the bankrupt's property.<sup>1</sup>

a. The Remedy is governed by the Forum.—With regard to the remedies, the methods of procedure, and all the machinery of the law in bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings, the place of trial governs.<sup>2</sup> And where by the lex fori an assignee is permitted to sue in his own name, he may do so, although forbidden by the foreign law by which the obligation is governed,<sup>3</sup> and vice versa. Objections to the capacity of a foreign bankrupt to sue cannot be taken for the first time on appeal.<sup>4</sup>

b. Assignee Representative of Assignor.—Where there is no conflict with his assignor, nor with the creditors, the assignee of a foreign bankrupt may be recognized as the representative of the assignor; but such assignee, as such, has no standing in foreign courts.<sup>5</sup> But where there are claims on the property adverse to

<sup>1</sup> Bird v. Pierpont, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 118; Bird v. Caritat, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 342; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; s. c., 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 229, 267.

But since the case of Abraham v. Ples-toro, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 538, this doctrine has been doubted, if not denied. Raymond v. Johnson, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 488; Mossel-man v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66; Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 320, 351; Willetts v. Waite, 25 N. Y. 577; s. c., 13 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 34.

Though Shipman, J., in Hunt v. Jackson, 5 Blackf. C. C. 349, expressed the opinion that these decisions do not go to the extent of prohibiting assignees, under foreign bankrupt laws, from suing in the courts of the State. See Hooper v. Tuckerman, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 311.

<sup>2</sup> Lodge v. Phelps, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 139; Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 263; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 508, and note; Speed v. May, 17 Pa. St. 95; Jones v. Taylor, 30 Vt. 48; Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 289; Smith v. Atwood, 3 McL. C. C. 545.

<sup>3</sup> Foss v. Nutting, 14 Gray (Mass.), 484.

While the right of a foreign assignee in bankruptcy as respects the assets of the bankrupt, must yield to the claims of creditors of the bankrupt, seeking the aid of those courts, such foreign assignee may, as the representatives of the bankrupt, maintain a suit where the bankrupt could have sued had no bankruptcy proceedings been instituted. Hunt v. Jackson, 5 Blackf. C. C. 349; s. c., 6 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 169.

The assignee of an insolvent debtor, appointed under a State law, cannot avoid a conveyance of personal property in another

State, which is good against the insolvent but fraudulent as to creditors, by the law of the latter State. Belton v. Valentini, 1 Curt. C. C. 168. And an assignee in insolvency may sue for money paid in fraud of creditors, notwithstanding the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings, and although no creditors proved their claims other than such as existed prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy. Bull v. Houghton, 65 C. 422.

The aid of equity will be extended to the receiver of a foreign corporation seeking to obtain possession of property of such corporation in New Jersey as against the officers of the company, who may be endeavoring by fraud to withhold it. Black v. Mason, 11 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 230.

<sup>4</sup> Orr v. Amory, 11 Mass. 25; Murrell v. Jones, 40 Miss. 565; Fisk v. Brackett, 32 Vt. 798; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. C. C. 131; Folliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Black. 131; Innes v. Dunlop, 8 T. R. 595; Jeffery v. McTaggart, 6 Maule & S. 126.

<sup>5</sup> Mosselman v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66; s. c., 21 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 248.

<sup>6</sup> See Upton v. Hubbard, 28 Conn. 27; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 517; Orr v. Amory, 11 Mass. 25; Ingraham v. Geyer, 13 Mass. 146; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 305; Murrell v. Jones, 40 Miss. 565; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 485; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Biss. (Pa.) 363, 374; Fisk v. Brackett, 32 Vt. 799; Perry v. Barry, 1 Cr. C. C. 204; Hunt v. Jackson, 5 Blackf. C. C. 349; s. c., 6 Am. L. R. 169; Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brod. C. C. 62; Caskie v. Webster, 2 Wall. C. C. 131; Wolff v. Oxholm, 6 Maule & S. 99; Folliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Black. 131; Innes v. Dunlop, 8 T. R. 595; Jeffery the assignment, the foreign assignee cannot sue in his own name; <sup>1</sup> but that, when there is no conflict with the assignor or with the creditors, he will be permitted to do so.<sup>2</sup>

c. Suit by Assignee in his own Name. — Foreign assignees in bankruptcy cannot maintain an action at law in their own name, against a debtor of a bankrupt in the courts of this country; and the action is only maintainable in the name of the bankrupt himself, though the right to personal property may be regulated by the laws of the domicile, as in the case of the bankrupt laws of England: and, though the equitable rights of the assignees acquired under those laws will be respected in our courts, yet the right of action must be regulated by the law of the forum in which the suit is brought; and the transfer of a bankrupt's effects, being an assignment merely by operation of law, and not by the act of the party, is not such an assignment of the legal title to the assignees as will enable them to maintain an action in their own name in the courts of this country.<sup>3</sup>

d. Substitution of Assignee. — The assignee in bankruptcy may be substituted as a party, but he cannot in any other manner interfere with the prosecution of a pending suit.<sup>4</sup>

e. Suit against Assignee in Federal Court. — A receiver appointed by a State court is not liable to be sued in a United States circuit court of another State.<sup>5</sup>

13. FEDERAL BANKRUPT LAWS AND DISCHARGE. — The bankrupt law of the United States, on going into operation, ipso facto, suspended the operations of the State insolvent laws, as to persons within its purview.<sup>6</sup> But the court of bankruptcy has no power McTaggart, 6 Maule & S. 126; Alivon v. Furnival, 1 Comp. M. & R. 296.

<sup>1</sup> Upton v. Hubbard, 28 Conn. 274.

<sup>2</sup> See Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 35; Ingraham v. Geyer, 13 (Mass.) 146; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 517; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 485; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 363; Hunt v. Jackson, 5 Blackf. C. C. 349; s. c., 6 Am. L. R. 169; Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brock. C. C. 62; Perry v. Barry, 1 Cr. C. C. 204.

But, it seems, this practice of allowing an assignee to sue in his own name is purely a matter of comity, which the forum exercises entirely at its own discretion. Whart., Conf. L. § 735, n. x.

<sup>3</sup> Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brock. C. C. 62. See Perry v. Barry, 1 Cr. C. C. 204.

<sup>4</sup> Clark v. Binninger, 39 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 363.

Where, pending a suit upon a promissory note by a citizen of New York against a citizen of Massachusetts, the defendant was adjudged an insolvent under the law of the latter State, and his assignees thereupon defended, and subsequently submitted to have the case defaulted, it was held that the action should be dismissed against the assignees without costs, unless plaintiff should elect to take judgment for the purpose of proof in insolvency, in which case that election was to be expressed in the judgment, and no execution should issue. Lean v. Durfee, 5 Fed. Rep. 256.

<sup>5</sup> Peale v. Phipps, 14 How. (U. S.) 368. The court is justified in summarily removing an assignee, for the benefit of creditors, whose irresponsibility is not denied, and who has not filed the inventory and bond required by the Pennsylvania statute, it not appearing that the assignor is a citizen of New York, and the assignee's claim to be exempt from removal being based on the fact that a part of the assigned property is in New York, and the requirements of the New York law have been complied with. Weiskettle's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 522.

<sup>6</sup> Ex parte Eames, 2 Story, C. C. 322; Ex parte Holmes, 5 Law Rep. 360; Torrens v. Hammond, 4 Hughes, C. C. 596; s. c., 10 Fed. Rep. 900.

An assignment was made for the benefit of creditors under New Hampshire General Statute 1867, ch. 126, while the United States bankrupt act of 1867 was in force, to arrest the proceedings of a State court in the ordinary and legitimate administration of justice.<sup>1</sup> Yet it was held that, under the bankrupt act of 1867, the bankruptcy court could direct the seizure, by the marshal, of goods belonging to the bankrupt, but in the possession and claimed by another, irrespective of State laws.<sup>2</sup>

The insolvent law, suspended in part by a bankrupt act of Congress, may suffice to pass title by an assignor under it to his assignees in the absence of mistake on proceedings taken in bankruptcy.<sup>3</sup>

Property set aside by the bankruptcy court as the bankrupt's exemption cannot be levied on by process from a State court,<sup>4</sup> and a wrongful allowance by a bankrupt court of the exemption claimed by the bankrupt cannot be remedied in the State courts.<sup>5</sup>

12. Wills and Testaments. — I. PERSONAL CAPACITY. — Regarding the capacity of a person to make a will, the general doctrine of the English common law, as held both in the United States and England, is, that testamentary capacity, as to personalty, is governed by the law of the last domicile, as to realty by the lex rei sitæ.<sup>6</sup>

a. Of Movable Property. — The validity of the execution of a will of personal property depends upon the law of the place where the testator was domiciled at the time of his death, not at the

and a creditor proved his claims, and received a dividend thereon; it was held that, if the effect of the New Hampshire statute was to bar an action upon the claim, it was an insolvent law, the operation of which was suspended by the bankrupt act. Lyman v. Bond, 130 Mass. 291.

Where an assignee in bankruptcy was appointed after an assignee under State law had taken possession of the estate, the court held that he was entitled, upon demand, to all assets in the hands of the latter, and that it was not necessary to apply for an injunction to restrain the assignee, under the State law, from disposing of them. Ostrander v. Meunch, 2 McC. C. C. 267.

A State court will not absolutely direct a sheriff to disregard an injunction issued by the court of bankruptcy, commanding him not to pay over moneys collected on execution, if there be any question whether the money may not be the property of the debtors within the meaning of the bankrupt law; if it may be, the injunction should be obeyed. Mills v. Davis, 3 J. & S. (N. Y.) 355.

While the United States bankrupt act was in force, A. of New Jersey made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors. The assignee deposited money in a New York bank, and a creditor in New York sued A., recovered judgment, and obtained, in proceedings supplementary to execution, the appointment of a receiver, who brought suit in the New York court against the assignee for the purpose of satisfying the execution from the deposit; the court held that the suit could not be maintained. Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 379.

<sup>1</sup> Clark v. Binninger, 38 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 341; s. c., 39 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 363; Tenth National Bank v. Sanger, 42 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 179.

<sup>2</sup> Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421.

<sup>3</sup> Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 378.

<sup>4</sup> Brady v. Brady, 71 Ga. 71. Compare Gibles v. Logan, 22 W. Va. 208, where a homestead in lands in West Virginia was assigned by a United States bankrupt court setting in Virginia, was held to be invalid as against West Virginia creditors. See also supra, this title, "1, a."

<sup>5</sup> Brengle v. Richardson, 78 Va. 406.

<sup>6</sup> Lawrence v. Kitteridge, 21 Conn. 582; Schultz v. Dambmann, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 379; Cherry v. Speight, 28 Tex. 503; Westlake, Priv. Inter. L. arts. 8 & 9; 4 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. L. 577; Story, Conf. L. § 465; Whart., Conf. L. §§ 296-329, 569.

The lex domicilii governs as to testamentary capacity; in which is included, not only the general capacity to make a will, but also the disposable power over the estate. Schultz v. Dambmann, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 379.

time of the execution of the will.<sup>1</sup> But it has been observed that it is the actual domicile, not allegiance nor residence, that forms the test.<sup>2</sup> It is a well-settled principle in the English law regard-

1 Dupuy v. Wurtz, 53 N. Y. 556; Lawrence v. Kitteridge, 21 Conn. 582; Dannelli v. Dannelli, 4 Bush (Ky.) 61; Johnson v. Copeland, 35 Ala. 521; Abston v. Abston, 15 La. An. 137; Gilman v. Gilman, 52 Me. 165; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Robert's Will, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 519; Moultrie v. Hunt, 23 N. Y. 394; Bascom v. Albertson, 34 N. Y. 584; Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389; Suarez v. Mayor, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 173; Swearingen v. Morris, 14 Ohio St. 424; Pretto's Will, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 380; Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502; Carey's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 201; Dixon v. Ramsey, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. (U. S.) 400; Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 483; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565; Grattan v. Appleton, 3 Story, C. C. 755; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 130; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & C. 76; s. c., 8 Sim. 279, 299, 300; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 690; De Bonneval v. De Bonneval, 1 Curt. Ecc. 856; Robbins v. Dolphin, 1 Sw. & Tr. 37; Thomas' Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 375; Boyes v. Bedale, 1 Hem. & M. 803; Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. C. 1; Laneville v. Anderson, 2 Sw. & Tr. 26; Yates v. Thomson, 3 Clark & Finn. 544, 570; Trotter v. Trotter, 4 Bligh, N. S. 502; s. c., 3 Wills & S. 407.

2 Whart., Conf. L. § 555; Bar, Priv. Inter. L. § 127, n. 22a.

The law of the place of the testator's domicile governs in relation to a will of personal property, though made in another State or country, where a different law prevails. Grattan v. Appleton, 3 Story, C. C. 755.

As to the movable property in Louisiana of a non-resident testator, its disposition by will must be governed by the law of the State where the will was made and the testator resided. Lewis' Estate, 32 La. An. 385.

A resident in New Jersey made a conveyance in trust, embracing real estate in New Jersey and New York and all his personal estate, to take effect after his death, subject to a power of revocation; and upon a contest as to the title to personal property embraced in it, the court held that the validity of the conveyance should be tested by the laws of New Jersey, and that, the instrument being invalid at the common law, the law of New Jersey should not be presumed to be identical with that of New York. Sullivan v. Babcock, 63 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 120.

Where it appeared that a testator's domicile was in New Jersey, and his will was not executed in accordance with the laws of that State, it was held that such will could not be regarded as a valid will of personal property in Pennsylvania. Thomason's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 376.

A will of personal property must be executed according to the law of the testator's domicile at the time of his death, or it will not pass personal property in a foreign country, though executed with all the formalities required by the laws of that country. Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Guier v. O'Daniel, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502; Carey's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 201.

Lease-held property in one State, owned by a resident of another State, will be deemed personal property, and as such, as to its transmission by will, controlled by the law of the testator's domicile. Despard v. Churchill, 53 N. Y. 192.

Rights to personal property are regulated by the law of the testator's domicile, but the remedies are governed by the law of the forum. Dixon's Ex'r's v. Ramsay's Ex'r's, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. (U. S.) 400; Atkinson v. Robbins, 5 Cr. C. C. 312.

Dr. Wharton says this view is generally accepted among modern civilians, particularly in Germany, and may now be held, so far as concerns German jurists and courts, to be a settled law; citing Wächter, Collision der Privatrechte, li. 192-193; Glück, Intestaterbfolge, § 42; Martini, Rechtsgelächten der Heidelberger Fakultät, b. 1, s. 175; Eichhorn, Deutsches Recht, § 35; Mittermaier, Deutsches Recht, § 32.

Thus, if, by the law of the place of his original domicile, a person cannot make a will of his property before he is twenty-one years of age, he cannot make a valid will under that age, even if such property as is situated in a place where the law allows persons of a different age to make a will of like property. Merlin, Répert. Stat.; Id. Majorité, § 5; Id. Autorisation Maritale, § 10. The like rule is maintained by Burgundus, Stockmans, and D'Argentre as to personal property and covenants. See Liverm., Diss. pp. 34, 35, 50.

And if by the law of her original domicile a married woman cannot dispose of her property by will, except with the consent of her husband, she cannot dispose of property situated in another place where no such consent is required. Ibid., Henry on For. L. § 1, p. 31; Story, Conf. L. § 52.

ing wills of personal or movable property, that if they are registered and made according to the forms and solemnities required by the law of the testator's domicile, they are sufficient to pass such movable or personal property in every other country in which they are situated.<sup>1</sup> The same doctrine is firmly established in the American courts.<sup>2</sup>

Where a person domiciled in one State, being abroad, but having lost his domicile in his native State, executes a will of personal property in such foreign State, such will is valid if executed according to the laws of his domicile, although not executed in accordance with the law of the place of its execution.<sup>3</sup>

But it seems that a will made while on a temporary visit to a foreign country, executed in conformity with the laws of such temporary residence, but contrary to the law of the domicile, will be invalid in the place of the domicile; and the admission of such will to probate in the place of execution, and the transmission of a copy to the place of domicile, cannot have any effect there in the absence of some statute giving it such force.<sup>4</sup>

Yet, if a will made in one State conflicts with the prohibitory laws of the State in which the property is situated, such will will be inoperative in the latter State, because it contravenes the public policy of the State, as declared by its express statute, and is not embraced in the general rule of comity regarding the law of domicile.<sup>5</sup>

b. Of Immovable Property.—The lex loci rei sitæ governs as to <sup>1</sup> Bruce v. Bruce, 2 Bos. & P. 229, n.; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 130; Ferraris v. Hertford, 3 Curt. Ecc. 468; s. c., 7 Eng. Jur. (Apr. 1, 1843) 262; Somerville v. Somerville, 5 Ves. 750; Balfour v. Scott, 6 Brown, P. C. 550; s. c., 2 Add. Ecc. 15, n.; Curling v. Thornton, 2 Add. Ecc. 1, 21; s. c., 8 Sim. 310, 311; Moore v. Darell, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 346, 352; Bremet v. Freeman, 10 Moore, P. C. 358; Pipon v. Pipon, Amb. 25; Burn v. Cole, Amb. 415; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402; Drummond v. Drummond, 6 Bro. P. C. 601; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; 4 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. L. pt. 2, pp. 588-590; Robertson, Succ. 99, 191, 214, 215, 235, 290, 297; Ersk., Inst. b. 3, tit. 9, § 4; Kames, Princ. Eq. b. 3, ch. 8, § 4. See, also, Vattel b. 2, ch. 8, § 110; Denizart, Voce Domicile, §§ 3, 4; Voet, lib. 38, tit. 17, § 34; Vinnius, Select. Quest. lib. 2, ch. 19; Van Leevuen, Cusura For. lib. 3, ch. 12; Hub. par. 1, lib. 3, tit. 13, § 20; Id. par. 2, lib. 1, tit. 3, § 15; Bynkershoek, Quest. Priv. Juris. lib. 1, ch. 16, 334, 335.

<sup>2</sup> This doctrine, though now formally established, was for a time much discussed in England. See Bempde v. Johnston, 3 Ves. 198, 200; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 127, 131; Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 279, 299,

300; s. c., 4 Myl. & Cr. 76, 80, 82; M. v. Darell, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 346, 352; Benbow Case, Mon. L. Mag. (Sept. 1840) 264; v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 690; Omnium v. Bingham, 5 Ves. 757; s. c., 3 Hagg. 414, n.; Stanley v. Bernes, 3 Hagg. 377; Hogg v. Lashley, 3 Hagg. Ecc. 4

<sup>3</sup> Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; Ards v. Dutch, 8 Mass. 506; Dawson v. Boylston, 9 Mass. 337; Guier v. O'Donoghue, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; Grattan v. Appleton, 3 Story, C. C. 755; Harvey v. Richardson, 3 Mason, C. C. 381; Armstrong v. Lee, Wheat. (U. S.) 160; Dixon's Ex'rs v. Lee, 10 U. S. 100; sey's Ex'rs, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Deasbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; Rue High App. 2 Doug. (Mich.) 522.

<sup>4</sup> Rue High App. 2 Doug. (Mich.) 522.

<sup>5</sup> Caulfield v. Sullivan, 85 N. Y. 153. A will executed in France by a citizen of New York, temporarily residing in France, is to be construed according to the law of New York. Caulfield v. Sullivan, 85 N. Y. 153.

<sup>6</sup> Morris v. Morris, 27 Miss. 847; Stewart v. Neill, 27 Miss. 157; Wallace v. Wallace, 2 Gr. (N. J.) Ch. 616.

<sup>7</sup> Mahorner v. Hooe, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 247; Harper v. Stanbrough, 2 An. 377; Harper v. Lee, 2 La. An. 38 capacity or incapacity of the testator to make a will, and as to the extent of his power to dispose of the property, and the forms and solemnities to be observed to give the will its due attention and effect;<sup>1</sup> and also in all that concerns the descent and distribution of real estate.<sup>2</sup>

c. Trusts and Execution of Powers. — The validity of the trusts declared by a will is to be determined by the law of the testator's domicile.<sup>3</sup>

A will, in execution of a power, must be executed in conformity to the law of the domicile of the donor of the power; the will creating the power, and the one executing it, form but a single instrument;<sup>4</sup> and where a testator executes a testamentary power, according to the law of his domicile, it does not relate back to a will of a prior testator domiciled elsewhere, conferring such power.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; s. c., 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 229; Wills v. Cowper, 2 Ohio, 124; Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502; Carey's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 201; United States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 115; McCormick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 192, 202; Darby v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 465; Copin v. Copin, 2 P. Will. 291, 293; Curtis v. Hurton, 14 Ves. 537, 541; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & C. 438; s. c., 9 Bligh, 32; Henry on For. L. 13, 15; Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. L. pt. 2, pp. 576-580; Id., pt. 2, ch. 4, § 5, pp. 169, 170; Id., pt. 2, ch. 5, p. 217; Story, Conf. L. §§ 428, 434, 474.

<sup>2</sup> Lucas v. Tucker, 17 Ind. 41; Dunbar v. Dunbar, 5 La. An. 159; Augusta Ins. Co. v. Morton, 3 La. An. 418; Harper v. Hampton, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 622, 687; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514, 518; Cutler v. Davenport, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 81, 83; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.)

32; Elliott v. Minto, 6 Madd. 16; Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Moore, P. C. 98, 131, 132; Tulloch v. Hartley, 1 Young & C. (N. R.) 114.

By a will made in Massachusetts, a testator devised land in Rhode Island to his wife. Other land passed under a residuary clause. Had the will been construed according to the law of Massachusetts, the widow would have had no dower in the residue. It was held that the law of Rhode Island must prevail, the land being there situated, and that the widow was entitled to claim dower in the residue. Atkinson v. Staagg, 13 R. I. 725.

A Scotch deed of disposition and settlement, duly executed as a testamentary disposition according to the laws of Scotland, in the presence of two witnesses, is a valid will of the testator's real and personal property in New York. Easton's Will, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 183.

A will executed in another State, and attested by a less number of witnesses than is required to give validity to a devise of lands in Florida, whose law requires three witnesses, is inoperative in Florida. Crolley v. Clark, 20 Fla. 849.

It has been held that if one would derive title through a Virginia will to land in the District of Columbia, he must show that the will was so executed as to pass real estate in the District: if this is not done, it is immaterial that the will was sufficient to pass the title of real estate in Virginia. Robertson v. Pickrell, 109 U. S. 608.

<sup>3</sup> Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 596; Bascom v. Albertson, 34 N. Y. 584; s. c., 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 340; Ward v. Starr (Pa.), 11 Pitts. L. J. 155.

<sup>4</sup> Bingham's Estate (Pa.), 1 Leg. Gaz. Rep. 3191.

<sup>5</sup> See Bingham's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 346; Tatnall v. Hankey, 2 Moore, P. C. 342.

Johns. (N. Y.) 229, 254; Att. 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 276; Als, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) v. Smith, 31 Mo. 161; Wertson, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) v. Cowper, 2 Ohio, 124; Holman v. Hopkins, 27 States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) Clark v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. by v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. is v. Smith, 14 How. (U. S.) v. Woody, 4 McL. C. C. wick, 1 H. Black. 665; 4 T. R. 182; Philips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402; Selkirk v. Davis, 2 Rose, Bank. Cas. 97; s. c., 2 Dow. 230; Copin v. Copin, 2 P. Will. 290, 293; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 130; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & Cress. 438; s. c., 9 Bligh,

Thus, where a power of appointment was given to a pa enabling him to dispose by will of personal property situated one country, and such party was domiciled in another coun and he executed the power and complied with all the requis thereof, making a will according to the law of the country wh the power was created and the personal estate was situated, which was not made in accordance with requisites prescribed the place of his domicile, it has been held that such execution the power is valid.<sup>1</sup>

2. EXECUTION AND REVOCATION OF WILLS. — It is a w established doctrine, both in England<sup>2</sup> and in America,<sup>3</sup> t the lex domicilii is to govern the formalities and execution o will of personalty; but that in regard to real property or imm ables, the lex rei sitæ governs as to all that concerns the will the solemnities by which it is to be attested.<sup>4</sup>

In England the courts will give effect to a foreign will, v where executed, though invalid as to execution by the Eng law;<sup>5</sup> but where an Englishman is domiciled abroad, in the c

1 Tatnell v. Hankey, 2 Moore, P. C. 342.

Where a married woman domiciled in Maryland, having a power of appointment over real estate in Massachusetts, devised by her father, who was domiciled there, died, leaving a will devising to her husband all the real and personal estate to which she should be entitled in law or equity at the time of her decease, but making no mention of the power of appointment, which by the law of Maryland was not a good execution of the power, though it was otherwise by the laws of Massachu- setts, it was held that the law of the lat- ter State must govern, and that the power was well executed. Sewall v. Wilmer, 132 Mass. 131.

2 Bruce v. Bruce, 2 Bos. & Pull. 229, n.; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 130; Ferraris v. Hertford, 3 Curt. Ecc. 468; s. c., 7 Eng. Jur. (Apr. 1, 1843) 262; Somerville v. Somer- ville, 5 Ves. 750; Balfour v. Scott, 6 Bro. P. C. 550; s. c., 2 Add. Ecc. 15, n.; Curling v. Thornton, 2 Add. Ecc. 21; s. c., 8 Sim. 310, 311; Moore v. Darell, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 346, 352; Breemer v. Freeman, 10 Moore, P. C. 358; Pison v. Pison, Amb. 25; Burn v. Cole, Amb. 415; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Vez. 35; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402; Drummond v. Drummond, 6 Bro. P. C. 601; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Bemp-de v. Johnstone, 3 Ves. 198, 200; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 127, 131; Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 279, 299, 300; s. c., 4 Myl. & Cr. 76, 80, 82; Moore v. Darell, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 346, 352; Bennett's case, Mon. L. Mag. (Sep. 1840) 264; Sill v. Wors- wick, 1 H. Black. 690; Ommaney v. Bing- ham, 5 Ves. 757; s. c., 3 Hagg. Ecc. 414, n.; Stanley v. Bernes, 3 Hagg. Ecc. 377; Hogg

v. Lashley, 3 Hagg. Ecc. 415, n.; De neval v. De Bonneval, 1 Curt. Ecc. Robins v. Dolphin, 1 Sw. & Tr. 37; C enden v. Fuller, 1 Sw. & Tr. 442; La ville v. Anderson, 2 Sw. & Tr. 24; 4 Com. on Col. & For. L. pt. 2, pp. 588- Robertson, Succ. 99, 191, 214, 215, 285, 297; Ersk. Inst. b. 3, tit. 9, sec. 4; K Princ. Eq. b. 3, ch. 8, § 48. See, Vattel, b. 21, ch. 8, § 110; Denizart, Domicil, §§ 3, 4; Voet, lib. 38, tit. 17. Vinnius, Select Quest. lib. 2, ch. 19; Leevrien, Cusura For. lib. 3, ch. 12; par. 1, lib. 3, tit. 13, § 20; Id., par. 2, § 15; Bynkerhoek, Quest. Priv. Juris 1, ch. 16, 334, 335.

3 Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; l ards v. Dutch, 8 Mass. 506; Dawe v. Boylston, 9 Mass. 337; Guier v. O'Da 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; Grattan v. Appl 3 Story, C. C. 755; Harvey v. Richa Mason, C. C. 381; Armstrong v. Lea Wheat. (U. S.) 169; Dixon's Exrs. v. sey's Exrs., 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319; Holm Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 450. Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) Rue High App. 2 Doug. (Mich.) 522.

4 Lucas v. Tucker, 17 Ind. 41; A gate v. Smith, 31 Mo. 166; Holm Hopkins, 27 Tex. 38; Armstrong v. 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; McCormic Sullivant, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 192; U States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 115; C v. Copin, 2 P. Will. 291; Curtis v. Hu 14 Ves. 537; Crookenden v. Fuller, 1 & Tr. 442; Laneville v. Anderson, 2 & Tr. 24; Onslow v. Cannon, 2 Sw. & Tr. 24; 436.

5 In re Guttierrez, 38 L. J. Rep. (N. S.) Prob. & M. 48.

cution of his will, he must follow the law of his domicile, — not that of his native land.<sup>1</sup>

In the United States, if a will as to personalty is good by the law of the domicile, it is good everywhere; and if void by the law of the domicile, it is void everywhere.<sup>2</sup>

a. Change of Domicile. — Where a testator, after the execution of his will in one domicile, abandons that domicile, and acquires a new residence in the second domicile in which such will is invalid for want of proper execution, the law of the latter domicile will prevail,<sup>3</sup> and the will, in effect, will be revoked.<sup>4</sup>

Where a citizen, domiciled in South Carolina, executed a will according to the law of that State, and subsequently abandoned his domicile there, and acquired a new one in New York, where he died, the New York courts held that the South Carolina will, not being executed according to the forms prescribed in New York, was not valid to pass personalty in New York.<sup>5</sup> The same doctrine has been held in Connecticut<sup>6</sup> and other States.<sup>7</sup>

b. Subsequent Birth of a Child. — If the proper tribunal of the domicile adjudge a will to be revoked by the subsequent birth of issue, it cannot be established as a valid will of personalty in another State; but as to the realty the question of testacy is governed by the lex loci.<sup>8</sup>

3. CONSTRUCTION OF WILLS. — a. As to Interpretation of Words. — It is a general rule, in the construction of wills, that the last

<sup>1</sup> Moore v. Darell, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 346; Stanley v. Bernes, 3 Hagg. Ecc. 373; Ferrars v. Hertford, 3 Curt. Ecc. 468.

<sup>2</sup> Johnson v. Copeland, 35 Ala. 521; Hill v. Townsend, 24 Tex. 575; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Moultrie v. Hunt, 23 N. Y. 394; Abston v. Abston, 15 La. An. 137; Perin v. McMicken, 15 La. An. 154; Jones v. Gerock, 6 Jones (N. C.) Eq. 190; Dunlap v. Rogers, 47 N. H. 281; Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Dixon v. Ramsay, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319; Armstrong v. Lear, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (N. S.) 483; Gilman v. Gilman, 52 Me. 165; Swearingen v. Morris, 14 Ohio St. 424.

<sup>3</sup> Nat. v. Coons, 10 Mo. 543. See Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Pottinger v. Wightman, 3 Meriv. 68.

"This doctrine," it is said by Sir R. Phillimore (Priv. Inter. L. IV. 628), "is fraught with obvious and many inconveniences, and with the great evil of rendering difficult and uncertain that which is one great object of civilization, to render easy and certain the validity of the testaments. It is to be lamented, therefore, that the doctrine has been in some degree countenanced, though not judicially adopted, by the judicial committee of the Privy Council." Breemer v. Freeman, 10 Moore, P. C. 359.

<sup>4</sup> But it has been held, that, if a will be executed in conformity to the law of the domicile, its validity is not affected by a subsequent change of domicile. Ex parte McCormick, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 169.

The principle that a change of domicile after the will is made may revoke a prior will, if the same be invalid, according to the law of the new domicile, was modified in England by Lord Kingsdown's act (23, 24, 25, Vict. ch. 114, § 3), which provides that "no will shall be held to be revoked, or to have become invalid, nor shall the construction thereof be altered, by reason of any subsequent change of domicile of the person making the same." Under this act, where a will was made in one country where a person was domiciled, which was valid in that country, but invalid in England, and the person subsequently removed to England, and acquired a new domicile, and died there, his will was held to be good in England. See In re Reid, L. R. 1 P. & D. 74.

<sup>5</sup> Moultrie v. Hunt, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 322; s. c., 23 N. Y. 394.

<sup>6</sup> Irwin's App. 33 Conn. 128; but this subject is now regulated by statute in Connecticut. 1 Redf. Wills. (3d ed.) 381.

<sup>7</sup> See Nat. v. Coons, 10 Mo. 543; Manuel v. Manuel, 13 Ohio St. 458.

<sup>8</sup> Bloomer v. Bloomer, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 339. Vide infra, this series, tit. "WILLS."

domicile of the testator is to be resorted to in all questions of construction or interpretation.<sup>1</sup>

But where a will is made in one country, as to the meaning of the terms used, it is to be constructed according to the law of that country, whether the judicial inquiry as to its meaning and interpretation arise in that country, or in a foreign country.<sup>2</sup>

If a question should arise as to whether the terms of the will include a bequest of real estate, or show an intention on the part of the testator to bequeath real estate as well as personal property, such question is to be determined according to the law of the country of his domicile, where the will was made; and the same interpretation must be put upon those terms in every other country where the will would be put upon them by the law of that domicile.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Bascom v. Nichols, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 340; Parsons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103; Dannelli v. Dannelli, 4 Bush (Ky.), 61; Adams v. Norris, 23 How. (U. S.) 354; Pierson v. Garnet, 2 Bro. Ch. 38; Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cass. 1; Trotter v. Trotter, 4 Bligh (N. S.), 502; Laneville v. Anderson, 2 Sw. & Tr. 26; s. c., 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 642; Stewart v. Garnett, 3 Sim. 398; Boyes v. Bedale, 1 Hem. & M. 803; Yates v. Thompson, 1 Sh. & McL. 325; s. c., 3 Clark & Finn. 544; 1 Redf. Will. (3d ed.) 388; Whart., Conf. L. § 592.

<sup>2</sup> Trotter v. Trotter, 4 Bligh (N. S.), 502; Gordan v. Brown, 3 Hagg. 455, n.; s. c., 3 Wills. & S. 407; Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 279, 299.

This rule, it has been said, does not require the adoption of foreign rules of evidence or procedure in the tribunal where the will is brought for a construction or interpretation. Adams v. Norris, 23 How. (U. S.) 354; Yates v. Thompson, 3 Clark & Finn. 548; Di Sora v. Phillips, 10 H. L. Cass. 624.

Thus, the words "heir at law" in a bequest of personalty, if the testator were domiciled in England, would pass the estate to his eldest son; if domiciled in Ohio or any of the States of a similar jurisprudence, it would pass the estate to all of his children. Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 483. And this is true although the testator was a native of England (Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 483; Anstruther v. Chalmers, 2 Sim. 1), who, after having made his will, moved to such State, where he died. Nat v. Coons, 10 Mo. 543.

A Georgia court, in construing a devise of land in Georgia to the testator's "own right heirs," will hear proof that the testator lived in Pennsylvania, and there made the will; and that, under the laws of Pennsylvania, brothers and sisters of the whole blood are preferred to those of the half blood, and will, from such proof, infer that the testator's use of the term was in the sense there attached to it. Guerard, 73 Ga. 506.

<sup>3</sup> Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cass. 1; s. c., 1 Sw. & Tr. 118; 1 De. G. 410.

What is deemed to be "real estate" in the sense as used in a will devising property, must be decided by the law of the country of the testator. Stewart v. Garnett, 3 Sim. 398; 1 Redf. Will. (3d ed.) 383; Conf. L. § 593; Story, Conf. L. § 410.

It has been held, that where the terms of a will give a legacy, or create a trust, in favor of a particular party, should the language used import a wish or desire, it is to be constructed according to the law of the place where the will is made and where the testator has his domicile. Pierson v. Garnet, 2 Bro. Ch. 38. Thus, legacies are payable in the currency of and according to the laws of the country where the will was made and the testator was domiciled. Saunders v. Drake, 2 Atk. 465; Lane v. Lansdowne, 2 Bligh, 60, 88, 89, 90; Polm v. Martin, 3 Bro. Ch. 50; Pierson v. Garnet, 2 Bro. Ch. 39, 47; Wallis v. Wallis, 2 P. Wms. 88.

The question whether, by the terms of a foreign will, a legatee takes an estate for life or in fee, is to be determined by the law of the place where the will was made and the testator domiciled, and not by the law of the place where the controversy arises. Brown v. Brown, 4 Wils. 28, 37. The same is true of the testator's capacity to make a particular bequest of property. Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 299, 300, 301.

Where a person to whom a legacy is given dies during the lifetime of the testator, the question whether it is an estate for life, or whether the legacy descends to the personal representative of the legatee, is to be decided by the law of the country where the will was made and the testator domiciled. Boyes v. Bedale, 1 Hem. & M. 805; Anstruther v. Chalmers, 2 Sim. 1.

The law of the place of the actual domicile of the testator must govern in its construction and interpretation of a foreign will.<sup>1</sup> And it seems that, where a will is made in one country, and the testator afterwards removes to another country, where he acquires a domicile, and dies there, such will, if not executed in accordance with the law of such new domicile, will be invalid, although executed according to the law of the testator's domicile at the time when it was made.<sup>2</sup>

The law of the domicile of the testator governs in the construction of a will disposing of real property, unless the testator had in view the law of the situs, or uses language necessarily referring to the usages and customs, and appropriate only to that situs.<sup>3</sup>

It has been held in this country, that, in the construction of a foreign will, the foreign law will be presumed to be the same as the law of the forum, unless the contrary is proved.<sup>4</sup>

) Designatio Personarum. — Where the bequest in a will designates a particular class or description of persons entitled to take under the designatio personarum, who belong to that class, is to be determined by the law of the place where the will is made and the testator is domiciled.<sup>5</sup>

As to Effect of Particular Provisions. — It has been said, that, although the law of the testator's domicile is of general application, when aid is asked from the court to enforce a provision which the law of the forum is forbidden, an exception is to be made.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Newton v. Curling, 2 Add. Ecc. 6, 10-25; 3 Sim. 310.

<sup>2</sup> Where a testator domiciled in one country provides for the sale of his land in that country, and the application of the proceeds to charity in another country, the question of the validity of such will is to be determined by the law of the country where he is domiciled and the land situated, not by the law of the country where it is to be applied to charity. Trustees of Asso. v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) appx. 63; s. c., 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Curtis v. Norton, 14 Ves. 537, 541.

<sup>3</sup> Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 483, 504, 505; Anstruther v. Chalmers, 2 Sim. 1; Laneville v. Anderson, 2 Sw. & Tr. 24.

<sup>4</sup> The legal operation and interpretation of a will is to be determined by the law as it existed at the time of its execution; but the mode in which it should be submitted to the court and jury, and the effect to be given to the testimony that accompanies it, depend upon the law of the forum at the time of trial. Adams v. Norris, 23 How. (U. S.) 354.

<sup>5</sup> Nat. v. Coons, 10 Mo. 543; Desesbats v. Berquier, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 336; Pottinger v. Wightman, 3 Meriv. 68; Bremer v. Freeman, 10 Moore, P. C. 359.

<sup>6</sup> This doctrine is severely criticised by Sir R. Phillimore, Priv. Inter. L. iv. 628.

<sup>3</sup> Dannelli v. Dannelli, 4 Bush (Ky.), 62; Enoch v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1; Trotter v. Trotter, 3 Wils. & Sh. 407; s. c., 4 Bligh (N. S.) 502, 505.

<sup>4</sup> Sharp v. Sharp, 35 Ala. 574.

<sup>5</sup> See Dannelli v. Dannelli, 4 Bush (Ky.), 61; Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 483.

<sup>6</sup> Whart., Conf. L. § 598.

Thus, in constructing wills, provisions of disinheritance will be restricted in those countries where a restricted disinheritance only is permitted, in constructing provisions creating trust entails, endowing ecclesiastical corporations in mortmain, and providing for perpetual accumulations, remainders of personalty, and substitutions, the court will be governed by the law of the forum, although no such law was in force at the place of the testator's domicile. Harper v. Stanbrough, 2 La. An. 377; Harper v. Lee, 2 La. An. 382; Mahorner v. Hooe, 9 Smed. M. (Miss.) 247; McIntosh v. Townsend, 16 Ves. 330; Somerville v. Somerville, 5 Ves. 749; Bradalbane v. Shandor, 2 S. & McL. 377; Attorney-General v. Mill, 3 Russ. C. C. 328; s. c., 5 Bligh, 593.

A direction in a will for an accumulation of the income of real estate, until the death of the last of twelve life annuitants, and that then the estate, with the accumulated interest, to be divided, is void as to real estate in New York, although the di-

Where a testator in his will executes a testamentary according to the law of his domicile, it does not relate back to a will of a prior testator domiciled elsewhere, conferring power.<sup>1</sup>

c. Adjudication by Domiciliary Courts.—Adjudications by foreign courts, being the domiciliary courts of the deceased testator, in construing a will, or passing upon the question of succession under the laws of such country, will be binding upon courts elsewhere.<sup>2</sup>

4. AUTHENTICATION AND PROOF.—The court of equity has no jurisdiction of testamentary trusts, cannot enforce a foreign will of which there has been no probate obtained from the courts.<sup>3</sup>

a. Of Personal Property.—A will of personal property must be proved according to the law of the last domicile of the testator.

Probate may be granted of a foreign will of personal property executed in conformity to the lex domicilii, though not valid under the laws of the State where offered for probate.<sup>4</sup> But a will of personal property made in another jurisdiction cannot be admitted to probate unless shown to have been executed in accordance with the law of the domicile.<sup>5</sup>

Probation may be valid in the State where the testator lived and made his will. Hobson v. Hale, 95 N. Y. 588.

<sup>1</sup> See Bingham's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 346; Tatnall v. Hankey, 2 Moore, P. C. 342. See supra, 1, c, "TRUSTS AND EXECUTION OF POWERS."

<sup>2</sup> Doglioni v. Crispin, L. R. 1 H. L. 301; In re Weaver, 36 L. J. Prob. & Mat. 41; Crispin v. Doglioni, 9 Jur. (N. S.) 653; aff'd, L. R. 1 H. L. 304; Partington v. Attorney-General, L. R. 4 H. L. 104, 107; Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1.

It is held that the judgment of the court of the domicile of a testator at the time of his death is binding upon all foreign courts as to questions of succession and title to personal property, where the same questions between the same parties are in issue in the foreign court which have been decided by the court of the domicile. Gordon v. Brown, 3 Hagg. 455; Crispin v. Doglioni, 8 L. T. (N. S.) 518; s. c., 3 Sw. & Tr. 96; 32 L. J. Prob. 169.

The rule of binding courts of one State by the decision of the courts of another State, in the administration of the laws of the first State, in respect to property subject thereto and within its jurisdiction applied as to interpretation, in 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 182 of N. Y. Rev. Stat. 64, § 45, defining the rights of devisees and an obligee in the testator's bond to convey. See, also, Haywood v. Daves, 81 N. C. 8.

<sup>3</sup> See Campbell v. Wallace, 10 Gray

(Mass.), 162; Campbell v. Shelton, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Young v. Brush, 20 N. Y. 667; s. c., 18 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 171; s. c., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Young v. Price, 41 N. Y. 620; Price v. Dewhurst, 41 N. Y. 620; McCormick v. Sullivan, 76 Cr. 76, 80; Wheat (U. S.) 192; Darby v. M. Wheat (U. S.) 465.

A testamentary paper executed in a foreign country, though a valid will under foreign law, cannot be made the foundation of a suit for a legacy in the courts of this country until admitted to probate. Armstrong v. Lear, 12 Wheat. 169.

A will duly probated in Indiana, where there was property of the testatrix, cannot be attacked for incapacity and undue influence in Vermont, where the testatrix had no domicile. Ives v. Salisbury, 56 Vt. 169.

Query. Whether a will of a non-resident, refused probate in one State on the ground of a local statute which would not give it validity in another, is sufficient to bar title to lands in the latter State. Lawrence, 3 Hal. Ch. (N. J.) 215.

<sup>4</sup> Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502; Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 201.

<sup>5</sup> Isham v. Gibbons, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 182; Pretto's Will, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 302; Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502.

The will of a feme covert, executed in a foreign country, disposing of her personal property, may be admitted to probate in this country, though invalid by the laws of her domicile. Sullivan v. Wheat, 11 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 398.

b. Of Real Property. — A will of real estate must be proved in the State where the land is situated, according to the law of that place.<sup>1</sup>

13. Succession and Distribution. — 1. SUCCESSION.<sup>2</sup> — a. Movable Property. — It is now the universal rule, recognized by the common law, that the succession of personal property is governed exclusively by the law of the place where the testator was domiciled<sup>3</sup> at the time of his death.<sup>4</sup>

It seems that a will of personal property executed in a foreign country by an alien there resident, must be proved in accordance with the laws of such country, though the testator be domiciled in New York at the time of his decease. Robert's Will, 8 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 446-519; Davison's Will, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 479.

1 Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502; Carey's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 201; Young v. Brush, 28 N. Y. 667; a. c., 18 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 171; revera, a. c., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 294. See Young v. Brush, 41 N. Y. 620.

Title of lands by devise can be acquired only under a will proved and recorded according to the laws of the State in which the lands lie; a probate in one State cannot affect the title to lands in another. McCormick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 191; Darby v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 405. And under a statute permitting wills, made in another State to be proved and recorded in the county and State where the land is situate, it must appear that the requisitions of the statute have been complied with, to give validity and effect to such will. Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565.

In Indiana a will made and recorded in another State, according to the laws of such State, will pass lands in Indiana. O'Brien v. Woody, 4 McL. C. C. 75. And a person taking title to land in Iowa, by virtue of a foreign will, secures a vested interest at the death of the testator, and may commence his action before probate of the will in Iowa. Otto v. Doty, 61 Iowa, 23.

<sup>2</sup> Those interested in the history of the question of succession to property and testamentary disposition thereof, will be instructed by Bentham's chapter on "Succession." See 1 Bentham's Works, 334, and Maine's chapters on "The Early History of Testamentary Succession," and "Ancient and Modern Ideas respecting Wills and Successions." See Maine's Ancient Law, chs. vi., vii., pp. 166-237.

<sup>3</sup> By the law of domicile as applied to succession, is meant, not the general law, but the law which the country of the domicile applies to the particular case. Dupuy v. Wurtz, 53 N. Y. 556.

<sup>4</sup> Richardson v. Lewis (Mo. App.), 4 West. Rep. 267. See Lawrence v. Kitteridge, 21 Conn. 577; Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 127; Thomas' Succession, 35 La. An. 19; Olivier v. Townes, 14 Martin (La.), 99; Suarez v. Mayor, etc., of New York, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 173; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; a. c., 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 229; Parsons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103; a. c., 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 564; reversing, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 263; Graham v. Public Adm'r, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 127; a. c., Law. Rep. 386; Public Adm'r v. Hughes, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 125; Hurr v. Sherwood, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 85; Mercury's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 283; Guler v. O'Daniel, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 191; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514, 517; Blake v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 286, 314; French v. Hall, 9 N. H. 137; Shultz v. Pulver, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 182; Decouche v. Savatier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Harvey v. Richards cited, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 517, n.; a. c., 1 Mason, C. C. 418; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. (U. S.) 400; Pipon v. Pipon, Amb. 25; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 690, 691; Bruce v. Bruce, 2 Hoa. & P. 229, n.; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 130; Birt-whistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & Cress. 438, 450-455; a. c., 9 Bligh, 32-33; 2 Clark & Finn. 571; Enobin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1; Crispin v. Doglioni, 9 Jur. (N. S.) 653; aff'd L. R. 1 H. L. 304; Partington v. Attorney-General, L. R. 4 H. L. 104; Vates v. Thomson, 3 Clark & Finn. 554; Thornton v. Curling, 8 Sim. 310, Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 279, 299; Moore v. Budd, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 346, 353; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1, 13; In re Ewin, 1 Tyrw. 91; a. c., 1 Rose, Bank. Cas. 478; 5 Barn. & Cress. 451, 452; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 403, 405.

The lex domicilii fixes the right of descent of personalty. Grote v. Pace, 71 Ga. 231. But it is said that the validity of a gift causa mortis is to be determined by the law of the place where it is made, without reference to the donor's domicile. Emery v. Clough, 61 N. H. 552. And where, while a husband and wife were domiciled in Minnesota, the wife inherited property

The succession to personal property is governed by the law of the actual domicile of the intestate at the time of his death, whether the matter what was the country of his birth or his former domicile, or the actual situs of the property at the time of his death.<sup>1</sup>

The courts of one State have no jurisdiction over the assets of a decedent, within the latter's domicile in another State.<sup>2</sup>

In ascertaining who is entitled to take as heirs or distributees, the law of the domicile governs.<sup>3</sup>

b. Immovable Property. — The descent and distribution of real estate is governed exclusively by the lex loci rei sitæ; <sup>4</sup> but in from her father in Norway, which, in the form of money, was transmitted to this country, it was held that the rights of the husband and wife in respect to such property were determined by the laws of Minnesota, and not by those of Norway. Muus v. Muus, 29 Minn. 115.

1. The right of succession to a descendant's personal property is governed by the law of the domicile; and therefore, where a testator domiciled in Louisiana left two children, a daughter residing in New York, and a son who had been absent and unheard from for twelve years, and the daughter's husband obtained administration in New York, and procured a decree of the probate court of Louisiana declaring his wife sole heir, such decree was held to be a bar to the rights of the son, who subsequently appeared and claimed his share of the estate. Sherwood v. Wooster, 11 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 441.

H., born in Connecticut, went to Europe in 1869 to acquire the German language, and complete his professional studies. In 1872 he went to Paris, where he remained, and in February, 1877, there married a French woman, without any contract as to property. Immediately after, he rented a house at Suresnes, near Paris, for two years, and took up his residence there with his wife. In May, 1878, he was brought to this country, and sent to a hospital for the insane at Philadelphia, where he died in 1881. The court held that his personal property became subject to the community law of France, and that his widow was entitled to one-half thereof, notwithstanding that by his will, made before the marriage, he had bequeathed the whole of it to others. Harral v. Harral, 39 N. J. Eq. 279; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 17.

2. Russell v. Madden, 95 Ill. 485.

Accordingly, one dying in the State of Sonora, Mexico, leaving no issue nor father, his mother would succeed to the whole estate, to the exclusion of his brothers and sisters. Russell v. Madden, 95 Ill. 485.

3. Watt's Appeal, 31 Leg. Int. 182; s. c., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 217; Van Dyke's Estate, 32 Leg. Int. 29; s. c., 1 W. N. C. 171.

It has been held in Pennsylvania that the courts of a State have no jurisdiction to grant administration for the purpose of recovering from the resident agent of a foreign executor a fund not collected in the jurisdiction. Schley's Estate, Leg. Int. 202; s. c., 2 W. N. C. 684.

It has been said that the qualification "at the time of his death" is imposed because any change made after the death of the testator will not effect the succession. Lynch v. The Government of Uruguay, 25 L. T. N. S. 164.

Where a person dies abroad, being domiciled there, and the courts thereof and the local law have adjudicated upon the rights of his heirs, the courts of other countries will be bound thereby in dividing of property within their jurisdiction. Dogliotti v. Crispin, L. R. 11 L. 308; re Weaver, 36 L. J. Prob. & Mat. 41.

4. Thus, in determining whether primogeniture gives a right to preference as to exclusive succession; whether a person is legitimate or not, and able to take succession, whether heirs are to take per capita or per stirpes, and the nature and extent of the representation, the law of the testator's domicile governs. Abston v. Abston, La. An. 138; Jennison v. Hapgood, Pick. (Mass.) 77, 99; Coster v. Sapp, Curt. Ecc. 691; Attorney-General v. De Mees & Welsb., 511, De Bonneval v. Bonneval, 1 Curt. Ecc. 856.

5. Cutter v. Davenport, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Harper v. Hampton, 1 Har. & J. (Pa.) 622, 687; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 518; Holmes v. Remsen, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 460; s. c., 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Nicholson v. Leavitt, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 1; Hosford v. Nichols, 1 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 220; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 510, 527; Blake v. Williams, 6 L. (Mass.) 286; Milne v. Moreton, 6 L. (Pa.) 353; Wills v. Cowper, 3 Ohio, s. c., 2 Ohio, 124; Augusta Ins. Co. v. Morton, 3 La. An. 417; Chapman v. Ertson, 6 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 627; United States v. Crosby, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 1; Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565.

interpretation of wills disposing of movable property, the persons who are to take are described by some general designation, such as "next of kin," "issue," "children," or "heirs," and the like; the rule of common law is, that persons who are to take are to be ascertained by the lex domicilii; and this is true whether the will be of movable or immovable property, unless the context clearly shows a different intention on the part of the testator.<sup>1</sup>

Where a man domiciled in one State executes a will there, in which he disposes of personal property in the State of his domicile, and also in another State, which renders it necessary to have administration in both States, after the assets within the latter State have been collected, they should be remitted to the court of the State of the domicile for distribution.<sup>2</sup>

The question whether a person died intestate or not must be determined by the law of the place where he was domiciled at the time of his death.<sup>3</sup>

Cornick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 192; Darby v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 465; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 665; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Black. 402; Selkirk v. Davis, 1 Rose, Bank. Cas. 291; s. c., 2 Dow. 230; Copin v. Copin, 2 P. Will. 290, 293; Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 130; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 5 Barn. & Cress. 438; Curtis v. Hutton, 14 Ves. 537, 541; Elliott v. Minto, 6 Madd. 16; Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Moore, P. C. 98, 131, 132; Tulloch v. Hartley, 1 Young & C. (N. R.) 114; Bunbury v. Bunbury, 3 Jur. (Eng. 1839) 644.

The descent of real estate in Alabama, owned by a person who dies intestate in New York, where he resided, is governed by the laws of Alabama. Grimball v. Patton, 70 Ala. 626.

A testator domiciled in California died, possessed of land and personalty there, and also in New Jersey. It was held that the community law prevailing in California would not apply to the lands in New Jersey. Pratt v. Douglas, 38 N. J. Eq. 516.

If one dies intestate and childless out of the State of Florida, leaving lands there, his widow is his sole heir to such lands under the Florida statute of 1872, which declares that, where the husband dies intestate without children, the wife shall be sole heir at law. Crolley v. Clark, 20 Fla. 840.

The rights of inheritance of a child adopted in Wisconsin, as to real estate in Illinois, the owner whereof was a resident of Illinois, must be determined by the laws of Illinois. Keegan v. Geraghty, 101 Ill. 26.

1 Browne v. Browne, 3 Hagg. Ecc. 455, n., s. c., 4 Wils. & Sh. 28; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35; Elliot v. Minto, 6 Madd. 16; Winchelsea v. Garretty, 2 Keen, 293, 309, 310.

It has been said "where land and personal property are situated in different countries, and governed by different laws, the question arises upon the combined effect of those laws. It is often very difficult to determine what portion of each law is to enter into the decision of the question. It is not easy to say how much is to be considered as depending on the law of real property, which must be taken from the country where the land lies, and how much on the law of personal property, which must be taken from the law of the domicile, and to blend both together so as to form a rule applicable to the mixed question which any other law separately furnishes sufficient material to decide." Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 130, 131. See, also, Balfour v. Scott, 6 Browne, P. C. 550; Drummond v. Drummond, 6 Browne, P. C. 601; Robertson on Succ. 202-207; 4 Burge, Comm. on Col. & For. L. pt. 2, ch. 15, § 4, p. 731.

2 Parsons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103.

3 Moultrie v. Hunt, 23 N. Y. 394; reversing s. c., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 252; 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 322; Isham v. Gibbons, 1 Brad. 69.

F. died in Connecticut, leaving a will attested by only two witnesses. The probate court granted administration on her estate, finding in the order that she was there domiciled and died intestate. Afterwards, on citation of all parties interested, the executors named had the will proved in New York (where it was valid): the New York supreme court finding that F. was domiciled in New York at the time of her death, it was held that this was conclusive on all persons who were parties to the proceedings, as to her domicile; and it was the duty of the Connecticut probate court, on application of the executors, to admit the will to the probate for ancillary ad*c. Capacity to take.* — The question of the capacity of persons entitled to inherit, either in case of testacy or intestacy, is governed, so far as concerns movables, by the law of the last domicile of the deceased.<sup>1</sup>

(1) Devises to Corporations. — A corporation created by the law of one State for educational purposes, with the power to acquire and hold real estate, is capable of taking, by devise, land in another State.<sup>2</sup>

It has been said that the business capacity of a successor in general, to be determined by the law of his domicile at the time of the devolution of the estate.<sup>3</sup>

Successors upon whom rest no incapacity in their domicile may yet be deemed incapable by the lex fori, owing to the effect of local laws, based upon public policy.<sup>4</sup>

(2) Devises for Charitable Purposes. — It has been said by the Supreme Court of the United States that the law of the testator's domicile is to govern as to the validity or invalidity of devises for charitable purposes,<sup>5</sup> but it is held that the validity of a charitable administration. Willet's Appeal, 50 Conn. 330.

<sup>1</sup> Dannelli v. Dannelli, 4 Bush (Ky.), 51.

Thus, where by the law of the parent's last domicile natural children are entitled to succeed, this will be binding in countries where only children born in wedlock have this right. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1; Doglioni v. Crispin, L. R. 1 H. L. 301. See, also, Boyes v. Bedale, 12 Week. Rep. 232; s. c., 1 Hem. & M. 798; Goodman v. Goodman, 3 Giff. 643; Skottowe v. Young, L. R. 11 Eq. 474.

The law of the State in which was one's property and domicile at the time of his death governs as to the nature and quantum of his heirs' interest. King v. Martin, 67 Ala. 177.

The nature and extent of the interest of the legatee is regulated by the domicile of the testator at the time of his death. Browne v. Browne, Wils. & Sh. 281; and this law is to determine whether a legacy is adeemed by the death of the legatee during the testator's lifetime. Thornton v. Curling, 8 Sim. 310; Anstruther v. Chalmers, 2 Sim. 1; and it is also to determine the husband's and wife's distributive interest. Slaughter v. Garland, 40 Miss. 172; Cameron v. Watson, 40 Miss. 191.

<sup>2</sup> Saint Clara Female Academy v. Sullivan, 116 Ill.; s. c., 4 West. Rep. 114.

A bequest by a citizen of Connecticut to an unincorporated association in New York will be declared void by the New York courts, if void under the New York law, although valid under the Connecticut law. Mapes v. American Home Missionary Society, 33 Hun (N. Y.), 360.

It has been said that although a New York corporation might be unable to take a legacy under a will executed within months of the death of the testator, a corporation created under the law of New Jersey, under a law which contains no such provision, may take under such a will executed in New York. Riley v. Demarest (N. Y.), 184. And under the statute provision of New York (Stat. p. 57, § 3), that "no corporation shall be valid, unless it be expressly authorized by its charter or by statute to take property," a foreign corporation cannot take assistance from the legislature to overcome whatever the provisions of the will may be. If, however, the will is to be sold, and the proceeds given to a corporation, it seems the gift is valid. Draper v. President, etc., of Harvard College, 57 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 269.

Where a bequest is made to a corporation authorized to receive the property, questions relating to the validity of the bequest, and as to investment and accumulation, must be decided by the courts of the foreign State. Draper v. President, etc., of Harvard College, 57 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 269.

<sup>3</sup> Hill v. Townsend, 24 Tex. 575.

<sup>4</sup> Harper v. Stanbrough, 2 La. An. 382. See also Harper v. Lee, 2 La. An. 382. See also Tosh v. Townsend, 16 Ves. 330; General v. Mill, 3 Russ. Ch. 328; Bligh, 593.

<sup>5</sup> Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

Thus, the validity of a charitable bequest as against the heir-at-law, depends upon the law of the State where the land is situated. Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

bequest is to be determined by the laws of the State where the fund is to be administered; <sup>1</sup> and where the law of the testator's domicile prohibits devises for charitable purposes, this law will be held to apply to a devise to a foreign charity, although such devise may be good if made in the country where the charity exists.<sup>2</sup>

(3) Capacity of Aliens to inherit.—According to common law, as it prevails in the United States, aliens are competent to take land by deed or devise, and hold the same as against any one except the sovereign, until "office found;" <sup>3</sup> and this is held to be the case, notwithstanding a local statute making such right dependent on a license from the State.<sup>4</sup>

2. DISTRIBUTION.—The distribution of personal property is regulated by the law of the owner's domicile, not by the lex loci rei sitæ.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Manice v. Manice, 43 N. Y. 303; s. c., 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 348; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 43 N. Y. 424; s. c., 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 348.

domiciled in one sale of his land application of the another country,
ty of such will is
w of the country
o charity. Phila-
ith, 3 Pet. (U. S.)
Appx. 501-503; Curtis v. Hutton, 14 Ves.
507, 541.

Baptist Ass. v. Smith, 3 501-503; Curtis v. Hut- ew York provides that a husband, wife, child,

y his will, bequeath to oration more than oneafter the payment of his st to be made valid to half and no more." It this statute does not ade by a testator domi-
t, where the bequest is ne corporation located York. Crum v. Bliss,

v. Mathews, 26 Cal. e, 9 Mass. 363; Guier
39; Taylor v. Benham,
; Jones v. McMasters,
; Cross v. De Valle, 1
Craig v. Radford, 3 that in Kentucky, while innot inherit land, an g in that State for two fter that period, to re-—Yeaker v. Yeaker, 4

nd in Iowa it is held alien can take by succession, provided he makes his residence in the State. See Krogan v. Kinney, 15

Iowa, 242; Purcell v. Smidt, 21 Iowa, 540;
Greenhold v. Stanforth, 21 Iowa, 595;
Robin v. Robin, 3 Iowa, 45.

<sup>4</sup> Cross v. De Valle, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 5.

<sup>5</sup> Hutton's Ex'rs v. Hutton (N. J.), 2
Cent. Rep. 216; Holmes v. Remsen, 4
Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 460; Vroom v. Van
Horne, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 549; Mills v.
Fogal, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 559; Suarez v.
New York, 2 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 173; Par- sons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103; s. c., 28 Barb.
(N. Y.) 564; reversing s. c., 4 Bradf. (N. Y.)
268; Graham v. Public Administrator, 4
Bradf. (N. Y.) 127; s. c., 19 Law. Rep. 386;
Public Administrator v. Hughes, 1 Bradf.
(N. Y.) 125; Burr v. Sherwood, 3 Bradf.
(N. Y.) 85; Mercure's Estate, 1 Tuck.
(N. Y.) 288; Apple's Estate, 66 Cal. 432;
Baubichon's Estate, Myrick's Probate (Cal.),
55; Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 326.

In California, as elsewhere, the rule is recognized that the distribution of a decedent's personalty is governed by the law of the domicile. Apple's Estate, 66 Cal. 432.
And the courts will not resort to the laws of a foreign country unless those laws are expressed in and made a part of a marriage contract. Baubichon's Estate, Myrick's
Probate (Cal.), 55.

But it is held in Pennsylvania that the lex fori controls the distribution of a decedent's estate. Miller's Estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 312; Pleasant's Appeal, 77 Pa. St.
356.

Notes taken by an agent, resident of Mississippi, for his principal in a foreign country, in the business of loaning money for the principal, are held to be subject to distribution as "personal property" situated in that State. Jahier v. Rascoc, 62
Miss. 699.

Money deposited in Mississippi banks, or notes secured on land there, have been held not within the Mississippi Code of 1880, § 1270, regulating the descent and distribution of personal property situated

The estate of a testator must be applied in satisfaction of his debts, according to the laws of the State of the domicile, and the courts of another State cannot interfere therewith by injunction.<sup>1</sup> But it seems that the right of priority of payment among creditors of an intestate depends on the law of the place where the assets are administered, and not on the law of the place of the contract or of the domicile of the deceased.<sup>2</sup>

Where there are real assets within the jurisdiction which are vested in a trustee, the grantor having died insolvent, the court of chancery will administer them there, though no administrator has been raised, and the trust deed is the rule of distribution.<sup>3</sup>

Where a lien exists by special mortgage on property in Louisiana, and the mortgagor being deceased, the property being in a course of administration in the probate court, the circuit court of the United States was held to have jurisdiction to decree a sale, under the mortgage, in favor of a citizen of another State.<sup>4</sup>

14. Persons acting in Autre Droit. — I. FOREIGN ADMINISTRATORS AND EXECUTORS. — a. When may act. — A foreign executor or administrator whose authority springs from the last domicile of his deceased principal, cannot do any act in pursuance of his ministerial office, or take possession of property in any other countries subject to the English common law, until after legal authority or probate to act in the country of the situs.<sup>5</sup>

in that State, if the deposits, certificates, and books, and the mortgage notes, are found at the foreign domicile of the intestate, who has no creditors, heirs, or property in Mississippi, and pending a contest between the domiciliary administrator and a stranger as to administering in Mississippi, the court of the domicile orders distribution. Speed v. Kelly, 59 Miss. 47. Compare Weaver v. Norwood, 59 Miss. 665.

<sup>1</sup> Mead v. Merritt, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 402; Vroom v. Van Horne, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 549; Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 326.

As to creditors of a deceased debtor, the administration of the assets is governed by the law of the place where the personal representative acts, and was appointed, without regard to the domicile of the creditor, or of the debtor at the time of his death. Jones v. Drewry, 72 Ala. 311.

<sup>2</sup> Smith v. Union Bank of Georgetown, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 518.

Debts are to be paid according to their respective dignity, as regulated by the law of the country where the administrator acts, and from which he derives his powers, not by the law of the place where the contract was made. Union Bank of Georgetown v. Smith, 1 Cr. C. C. 21.

Yet where A. died intestate and insolvent, domiciled in New Jersey, and administration was taken out in New York, to which

State the New Jersey assets were taken, it was held that a judgment creditor, whose claim was a preferred claim under the New Jersey law, should be accorded that status in New York to the extent of the New Jersey assets. Hardenberg v. Manning, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 437.

<sup>3</sup> Slatter v. Carroll, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 573.

<sup>4</sup> Erwin v. Lowry, 7 How. (U. S.) 72.

<sup>5</sup> Bell v. Nichols, 38 Ala. 678; Riley v. Riley, 3 Day (Conn.), 79; Rosenthal v. Renick, 44 Ill. 203; Rutherford v. Clark, 4 Bush (Ky.), 27; Henderson v. Rost, 15 La. An. 405; Burbank v. Payne, 17 La. An. 15; Borden v. Borden, 5 Mass. 67; Langdon v. Potter, 11 Mass. 313; Ex parte Picquet, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 65; Pond v. Makepeace, 2 Met. (Mass.) 114; Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50; Banta v. Moore, 2 McC. (15 N. J. Ch.) 97; Vermilya v. Beatty, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 431; Sayre v. Helme, 61 Pa. St. 299; Watson v. Pack, 3 W. Va. 154; Fenwick v. Sears, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 259; Armstrong v. Lear, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, C. C. 16; Pipon v. Pipon, Amb. 125; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & Cr. 76; s. c., 8 Sim. 279; Ferdinand's Executors' Case, L. R. 5 Ch. App. 315; Bond v. Graham, 1 Hare, 482; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1; 2 Redf. Will, 19.

The grant of administration is governed by the lex loci rei sitæ.<sup>1</sup>

Every grant of administration is strictly confined in its authority and operation to the limits of the territory of the government which granted it, and does not de jure extend to other countries.*

An heir, whether testamentary or by intestacy of immovable property, can take only according to the law lex loci rei, and is not admissible as an heir to administer on the estate in any foreign country, until he is duly qualified according to the proofs, rules, and forms of the local law.<sup>2</sup>

Where, by a will, power is given to an executor to sell immovable property, such power cannot be executed until after the will is duly probated in the place where the property is situated, and establishing that such power may be lawfully executed according to the lex loci rei sitæ.<sup>4</sup>

And where a party claims the right as a devisee, and not under the power in the will, is intrusted to sell real estate for the payment of debts, he also must have the will duly probated; but it will not be necessary for him to take out letters of administration, although the devisee describes the party as executor, because he takes as devisee under the will, and not as an executor under the letters testamentary.<sup>5</sup>

b. Title of Administrators and Executors.—The title of an administrator or executor derived from a grant of letters of administration in the country of the domicile of the deceased, cannot extend as a matter of right beyond the territory of the government granting such letters, and to the movable property therein.<sup>6</sup>

When, by a will executed under the French law, a testatrix constituted her husband her "general and universal legatee," and dispensed with his giving security, and by the law of France all the rights and duties of an executor are devolved on such a legatee, it was held that the husband must be deemed executor of the will, although not specifically named as such, and entitled to letters testamentary. Re Blancan, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 151.

<sup>1</sup> St. Jury's v. Dunscomb, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 105.

The register has no jurisdiction to grant administration upon the estate of a citizen and resident of another State, where the only asset within the jurisdiction is a sum of money collected by a resident agent. Schley's Estate (Pa.), 33 Leg. Int. 202; s. c., 2 W. N. C. 684.

<sup>2</sup> Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; s. c., 5 Cr. C. C. 496.

Thus, a license granted to an administrator in Massachusetts, by the Supreme Court of that State, to sell the lands of her intestate in Alabama, is merely void. Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 26.

The New York courts do not recognize letters of administration granted in another

State; but a foreign administrator may lawfully execute a power of sale contained in a mortgage of lands in that State, such execution being a matter of contract, and not of jurisdiction. Doolittle v. Lewis, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 45; Averill v. Taylor, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 476.

A resident of New York there died, and his will was proved there, but was neither proved nor recorded in New Jersey. Where one claiming, as residuary legatee under such will, a fund in the hands of the executors, denied the validity of a bequest thereof, it was held that he could not invoke the aid of the New Jersey courts, although the executors there resided. Van Gieson v. Banta, 40 N. J. Eq. 14.

<sup>3</sup> Lewis v. McFarland, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 151.

<sup>4</sup> Wells v. Cowper, 2 Ohio, 124.

<sup>5</sup> Lewis v. McFarland, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 151.

<sup>6</sup> It has been said that as to movable property situated in foreign countries, the title of the administrator or executor, if acknowledged at all, is acknowledged ex comitate; and is subject to be controlled or modified with reference to the institutions and policy of the country of the situs, and the rights of its subjects. Story, Conf. L. sec. 512.

The estate of a testator must be applied in satisfaction of his debts, according to the laws of the State of the domicile, and the courts of another State cannot interfere therewith by injunction.<sup>1</sup> But it seems that the right of priority of payment among creditors of an intestate depends on the law of the place where the assets are administered, and not on the law of the place of the contract or of the domicile of the deceased.<sup>2</sup>

Where there are real assets within the jurisdiction which are vested in a trustee, the grantor having died insolvent, the court of chancery will administer them there, though no administrator has been raised, and the trust deed is the rule of distribution.<sup>3</sup>

Where a lien exists by special mortgage on property in Louisiana, and the mortgagor being deceased, the property being in a course of administration in the probate court, the circuit court of the United States was held to have jurisdiction to decree a sale, under the mortgage, in favor of a citizen of another State.<sup>4</sup>

14. Persons acting in Autre Droit. — I. FOREIGN ADMINISTRATORS AND EXECUTORS. — a. When may act. — A foreign executor or administrator whose authority springs from the last domicile of his deceased principal, cannot do any act in pursuance of his ministerial office, or take possession of property in any other countries subject to the English common law, until after legal authority or probate to act in the country of the situs.<sup>5</sup>

in that State, if the deposits, certificates, and books, and the mortgage notes, are found at the foreign domicile of the intestate, who has no creditors, heirs, or property in Mississippi, and pending a contest between the domiciliary administrator and a stranger as to administering in Mississippi, the court of the domicile orders distribution. Speed v. Kelly, 59 Miss. 47. Compare Weaver v. Norwood, 59 Miss. 665.

1 Mead v. Merritt, 2 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 402; Vroom v. Van Horne, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 549; Varnum v. Camp, 1 Gr. (N. J.) 326.

As to creditors of a deceased debtor, the administration of the assets is governed by the law of the place where the personal representative acts, and was appointed, without regard to the domicile of the creditor, or of the debtor at the time of his death. Jones v. Drewry, 72 Ala. 311.

2 Smith v. Union Bank of Georgetown, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 518.

Debts are to be paid according to their respective dignity, as regulated by the law of the country where the administrator acts, and from which he derives his powers, not by the law of the place where the contract was made. Union Bank of Georgetown v. Smith, 1 Cr. C. C. 21.

Yet where A. died intestate and insolvent, domiciled in New Jersey, and administration was taken out in New York, to which

State the New Jersey assets were taken, it was held that a judgment creditor, whose claim was a preferred claim under the New Jersey law, should be accorded that status in New York to the extent of the New Jersey assets. Hardenberg v. Manning, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 437.

3 Slatter v. Carroll, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 573.

4 Erwin v. Lowry, 7 How. (U. S.) 72.

5 Bell v. Nichols, 38 Ala. 678; Riley v. Riley, 3 Day (Conn.), 79; Rosenthal v. Renick, 44 Ill. 203; Rutherford v. Clark, 4 Bush (Ky.), 27; Henderson v. Rost, 15 La. An. 405; Burbank v. Payne, 17 La. An. 15; Borden v. Borden, 5 Mass. 67; Langdon v. Potter, 11 Mass. 313; Ex parte Picquet, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 65; Pond v. Makepeace, 2 Met. (Mass.) 114; Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50; Banta v. Moore, 2 McC. (15 N. J. Ch.) 97; Vermilya v. Beatty, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 431; Sayre v. Helme, 61 Pa. St. 299; Watson v. Pack, 3 W. Va. 154; Fenwick v. Sears, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 259; Armstrong v. Lear, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, C. C. 16; Pipon v. Pipon, Ambl. 25; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & Cr. 76; s. c., 8 Sim. 279; Fernandez's Executors' Case, L. R. 5 Ch. App. 315; Bond v. Graham, 1 Hare, 482; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1; 2 Redf. Will, 19.

The grant of administration is governed by the lex loci rei sitæ.<sup>1</sup>

Every grant of administration is strictly confined in its authority and operation to the limits of the territory of the government which granted it, and does not de jure extend to other countries.<sup>2</sup>

An heir, whether testamentary or by intestacy of immovable property, can take only according to the law lex loci rei, and is not admissible as an heir to administer on the estate in any foreign country, until he is duly qualified according to the proofs, rules, and forms of the local law.<sup>3</sup>

Where, by a will, power is given to an executor to sell immovable property, such power cannot be executed until after the will is duly probated in the place where the property is situated, and establishing that such power may be lawfully executed according to the lex loci rei sitæ.<sup>4</sup>

And where a party claims the right as a devisee, and not under the power in the will, is intrusted to sell real estate for the payment of debts, he also must have the will duly probated; but it will not be necessary for him to take out letters of administration, although the devisee describes the party as executor, because he takes as devisee under the will, and not as an executor under the letters testamentary.<sup>5</sup>

b. Title of Administrators and Executors.—The title of an administrator or executor derived from a grant of letters of administration in the country of the domicile of the deceased, cannot extend as a matter of right beyond the territory of the government granting such letters, and to the movable property therein.<sup>6</sup>

When, by a will executed under the French law, a testatrix constituted her husband her "general and universal legatee," and dispensed with his giving security, and by the law of France all the rights and duties of an executor are devolved on such a legatee, it was held that the husband must be deemed executor of the will, although not specifically named as such, and entitled to letters testamentary. Re Blancan, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 151.

1 St. Jury's v. Dunscomb, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 105.

The register has no jurisdiction to grant administration upon the estate of a citizen and resident of another State, where the only asset within the jurisdiction is a sum of money collected by a resident agent. Schley's Estate (Pa.), 33 Leg. Int. 202; s. c., 2 W. N. C. 684.

2 Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; s. c., 5 Cr. C. C. 496.

Thus, a license granted to an administratrix in Massachusetts, by the Supreme Court of that State, to sell the lands of her intestate in Alabama, is merely void. Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 26.

The New York courts do not recognize letters of administration granted in another

State; but a foreign administrator may lawfully execute a power of sale contained in a mortgage of lands in that State, such execution being a matter of contract, and not of jurisdiction. Doolittle v. Lewis, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 45; Averill v. Taylor, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 476.

A resident of New York there died, and his will was proved there, but was neither proved nor recorded in New Jersey. Where one claiming, as residuary legatee under such will, a fund in the hands of the executors, denied the validity of a bequest thereof, it was held that he could not invoke the aid of the New Jersey courts, although the executors there resided. Van Gieson v. Banta, 40 N. J. Eq. 14.

3 Lewis v. McFarland, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 151.

4 Wells v. Cowper, 2 Ohio, 124.

5 Lewis v. McFarland, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 151.

6 It has been said that as to movable property situated in foreign countries, the title of the administrator or executor, if acknowledged at all, is acknowledged ex comitate; and is subject to be controlled or modified with reference to the institutions and policy of the country of the situs, and the rights of its subjects. Story, Conf. L. sec. 512.

c. Suits by and against.—It is the general doctrine of common law, both in England<sup>1</sup> and in America,<sup>2</sup> that no suit be brought and maintained by an administrator or executor against any administrator or executor in his official capacity in the courts of any country, except the courts from which he derived his authority to act, by virtue of probate and letters of administration there granted to him; but the court of a testator's domicile may in particular cases interfere to restrain his successor from proceeding to set up any thing except ancillary administrations in foreign lands.<sup>3</sup> Should an administrator desire to institute and maintain a suit in any foreign country, he must obtain letters of administration, and give new security, according to the rules of the laws prescribed in that country, before he bring suit.<sup>4</sup> The right of a foreign administrator or execu

<sup>1</sup> Atkins v. Smith, 2 Atk. 63; Swift v. Swift, 1 Ball & B. 326; Anderson v. Caunter, 2 Myl. & K. 763; Bond v. Graham, 1 Hare, 482; Silver v. Stein, 9 Eng. L. & Eq. 216; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1, 12; Whyte v. Rose, 3 Q. B. 498, 507; Spratt v. Harris, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 405; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & Cr. 76; Lee v. Verdon, Palm. 163; Tourton v. Flower, 3 P. Wil. 369, 370; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35; Attorney-General v. Cockerell, 1 Price, 179; Burn v. Cole, Ambl. 416; Lowe v. Farlie, 2 Madd. 101; Logan v. Fairlie, 2 Sim. & St. 285; Attorney-General v. Bouwens, 4 Mees. & W. 171, 192, 193; Tyler v. Bell, 1 Keen, 826, 829; s. c., 2 Myl. & Cr. 89, 100.

<sup>2</sup> Ball v. Nichols, 38 Ala. 678; Vermilya v. Beatty, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 431; Smith v. Webb, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 231; Swearingen v. Morris, 14 Ohio St. 429; Gilman v. Gilman, 54 Me. 453; Lawrence v. Lawrence, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 71; Fenwick v. Sears, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 259; Dixon's Ex'rs v. Ramsay's Ex'rs, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319, 323; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565; Armstrong v. Lear, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; Thompson v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 291; Dickenson's Adm'r v. McCraw, 4 Rand. (Va.) 158; Glenn v. Smith, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 493; Stearns v. Burnham, 5 Greenl. (Me.) 261; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; Borden v. Borden, 5 Mass. 67; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Caldwell v. Harding, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 501; Langdon v. Potter, 11 Mass. 313; Dangerfield v. Thurston, 20 Martin (La.), 232; Riley v. Riley, 3 Day (Conn.), 74; Champlin v. Tilley, 3 Day (Conn.), 303; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, C. C. 16, 32; Ex parte Paicquet, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 65; Holmes v. Remsen, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 229, 265; Smith Adm'r v. Union Bank of Georgetown, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 518; Campbell v. Tousey, 7 Cow. (U. S.) 64; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239, 241;

Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 5; Brownlee v. Lockwood, 5 C. E. N. J. Ch.) 243; Boston v. Boylston, 384; Fay v. Haven, 3 Met. (Mass.) 384; Morrill v. Morrill, 1 Allen (Mass.) 1; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (N. H.) 1; Swearingen v. Pendelton, 4 Serg. (Pa.) 389; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Ser. (Pa.) 252; Bryan v. McGee, 2 Wash. 337; McRae v. McRae, 11 La. 57; supra, § 1, h. (1), "SUITS BY ADMINISTRATORS AND THEIR ASSIGNEES."

<sup>3</sup> Hope v. Carnegie, L. R. 1 Ch. 320; s. c., L. R. 1 Eq. 126.

<sup>4</sup> A foreign administrator cannot maintain an appeal pending in the courts of the State. Warren v. Eddy, 13 Abb. Pr. 28.

Simple contract debts are bona fide in the State where the debtor resides, and an administrator appointed in another State cannot release or control them. Croft v. Fish, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 554.

The payee and owner of certain notes secured by mortgage, resided in Ohio. The maker of the notes and mortgage resided in Kansas. Upon the death of the payee and owner of the notes in Ohio, the appointment of administrators in Ohio was held that the title to the notes was in such administrator, who was authorized to sue for foreclosure of the mortgage in the Kansas courts. Cells v. Hays, 11 McC. C. C. 622.

A corporation authorized by statute of another State to administer on estates of deceased persons in that State, may sue as such administrator in the courts of the State where the debt is due, even if it is aware, for a debt due the decedent, that the decedent was insured by the Fidelity Ins. Trust & Safe Deposit Co. Niven, 5 Del. 416. Compare Deringer, 5 Del. 528.

A. was appointed in Maine administrator of the estate of B. of Michigan. B. was a resident of Wisconsin. Wisconsin owed the estate upon a take out new letters of administration in one country is usually admitted as a matter of course, unless some special reason intervenes to vary or control it. Where such new letters of administration are taken out, the new administration will be treated as merely ancillary or auxiliary to the foreign and primary administration, so far as regards collection of effects and the distributions of the assets of the estate.<sup>1</sup>

(1) When may maintain Action. — Although a foreign administrator cannot sue as such without local authorization, yet, when by any process he becomes the principal creditor, or reduces the claim to his own possession, he may sue in his own name.<sup>2</sup>

(a) Suit by Assignee of Administrator. — Where the local law permits the assignee of a chase in action to sue in his own name, the indorsee of an administrator may bring suit in a foreign country upon a negotiable instrument, without the administrator in contract. A. sued C. for this debt, while C. was temporarily in Maine, personal service being had; and the action was held maintainable; that the duty of the administrator, as defined by the Maine Rev. St. ch. 63, sec. 6, to administer not only upon property within the jurisdiction at the time the administration was granted, but upon such as should afterwards be found therein, clearly authorized such suit, as the debtor must be supposed to represent and carry with him the debt wherever he goes. Saunders v. Weston, 74 Maine, 85.

It has been said to be well established that the probate granted to letters testamentary of letters of administration in one country, give authority to maintain suits and collect assets of the testator intestate in that country only, and do not extend to the maintenance of suits and collection of assets in foreign countries, because that would be to assume an extra-territorial jurisdiction for the court granting such letters, and an usurpation of the functions of the foreign local tribunals in those matters. See Morrell v. Dickey, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 153; Doolittle v. Lewis, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 45-47; Pond's Adm'r v. Makepeace, 2 Met. (Mass.) 114; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1, 12, 14; Attorney-General v. Bouwens, 4 Mea. & W. 171, 190-192; Attorney-General v. Dimond, 1 Crompt. & Jer. 356, 370; Partington v. Attorney-General, L. R. 4 II. L. 100.

1 Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Miller's estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 312; Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, C. C. 381.

Yet the auxiliary administration will be subservient to the rights of creditors, legatees, and distributees, who reside within the jurisdiction where it was granted; and the remainder left after a final account has been settled in the proper tribunal where the new administration is granted, according to the principles adopted by its law of the application and distribution of assets, is to be transmitted to the primary administration for distribution. Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Richards v. Dutch, 8 Mass. 506; Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Hoot v. Olmstead, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 481; Davis v. Estey, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 475; Jennison v. Hapgood, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 77; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Gravillon v. Richards, Ex'r, 13 La. 293; Miller's Estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 312; Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, C. C. 381; Banta v. Moore, 2 McC. (15 N. J. Ch.) 101; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 12, 14.

2 Commonwealth v. Griffith, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 11; Slack v. Walcott, 3 Mason, C. C. 508; Shipman v. Thompson, Willes 103; Boitard v. Spencer, 7 T. R. 358.

Thus, he may sue as the owner of the chase in suit. Smith v. Webb, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 230. Hence, an administrator who holds negotiable paper belonging to his decedent payable to bearer, becomes principal on the same, and may sue in a foreign country in which the debtor resides without taking out letters of administration. See Robinson v. Crandall, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 425; Barrett v. Barrett, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 353. Compare Stearns v. Burnham, 5 Greenl. (Me.) 261; Thompson v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 291; McNeillage v. Holloway, 1 Barn. & Ald. 218.

And where a domiciliary administrator obtains a judgment against a debtor in the land of his testator's domicile, the debt being merged in the judgment, and the administrator becoming personally liable therefor, he may make such judgment the basis of an action in a foreign State where the debtor resides or has assets. Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71. Compare Smith v. Nicolls, 5 Bing. (N. C.) 308.

taking out ancillary letters of administration;<sup>1</sup> but this principle it seems, does not apply to bonds.*

(2) Suit by Administrator on Policy on his Decedent.—Where a resident of Alabama procured a policy of insurance on his life through an agent residing in that State and acting for a company chartered in New York, and died in Alabama, the administrator at his domicile may maintain an action on it there, although administration had also been granted in New York.* And an administrator who has duly taken out letters in a State in which he lives and in which a foreign insurance company does business, and an agent on whom process may be served, may there bring an action on a life policy which constitutes the only assets of the intestate of that State, the intestate never having been a resident there.

(3) Suits by Foreign Administrator for Negligence causing Death of his Intestate.—As a result of the general principle above given, it has been held that an administrator appointed in one State cannot maintain a suit in another State for an injury sustained there by his intestate, which resulted in death.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Petersen v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 21; s. c., 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 605; 27 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 491; Middlebrook v. Merchants' Bank, 3 Keyes (N. Y.), 135; s. c., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 295; 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 481; 27 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 474; Campbell v. Brown, 64 Iowa, 425; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 446; Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71; Harper v. Butler, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 239. Compare Dial v. Gary, 14 S. C. 573; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 737. Vide supra, § 1 h. (1), "SUITS BY ADMINISTRATORS AND THEIR ASSIGNEES."

Thus, the assignee of a foreign executor may maintain a suit in our courts upon a chose in action so transferred to him; the disability to sue is a personal one; he has a perfect right to assign the chose in action of his testator so as to confer title against every one but creditors and legatees. Petersen v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 21; s. c., 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 605; 27 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 491; Middlebrook v. Merchants' Bank, 3 Keyes (N. Y.), 135; s. c., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 295; 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 481; 27 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 474.

An action will lie, in Iowa, on a claim assigned to the plaintiff by a foreign executor, although there has been no probate or administration in Iowa. Campbell v. Brown, 64 Iowa, 425; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 446.

But where a resident of Massachusetts died there, possessing a bond and mortgage executed by a resident of South Carolina, and his administrator sold and assigned the securities to a resident of South Carolina, who brought suit upon them there, the court held that the suit was not maintainable. Dial v. Gary, 14 S. C. 573; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 737.

<sup>2</sup> It has been held that, in order to maintain a suit on an English bond, the plaintiff must be an English administrator. Wright v. Rose, 3 Q. B. 507.

<sup>3</sup> Equitable Life Assurance Society v. Vogel, 76 Ala. 441; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 446.

<sup>4</sup> New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Woodward, 111 U. S. 138.

<sup>5</sup> See Taylor v. Pennsylvania Co., 78 Ky. 348; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 244; Limekiller v. Hannibal & St. J. R. R. Co., 33 Kan. 83; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 524; Vawter v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 84 Mo. 679; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 105. Compare Leonard v. Columbia S. S. Nav. Co., 84 N. Y. 48; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 491; South Carolina R. R. Co. v. Nix, 52 Ga. 572; Central R. R. Co. v. Swin, 52 Ga. 651. Vide supra, § 1, a.—"SUITS FOR NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DEATH."

Thus, an administrator appointed in one State cannot maintain an action in another State for the death of his intestate, caused by negligence in Indiana, such action being maintainable under the Indiana statute but not under that of Kentucky. Taylor v. Pennsylvania Co., 78 Ky. 348; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 244.

Under the Kansas Code (sec. 422), prohibiting an action by an administrator for injuries resulting in the death of his intestate, it has been held that a foreign administrator cannot maintain such an action where his domiciliary law prohibits him from so doing. Limekiller v. Hannibal & St. J. R. R. Co., 33 Kan. 83; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 524. And in Vawter v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 84 Mo. 679; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 105, the court held that an administrator appointed in Missouri cannot maintain an action for the death of his intestate.

(4) Suit against Administrator. — It is a general rule that a foreign administrator cannot be sued out of his own forum.<sup>1</sup>

If a creditor of the estate wishes suit to be brought in any foreign country, in order to reach the assets of the deceased testator or intestate situated in such foreign country, it will be necessary to have letters of administration taken out, in due form, according to the local law, before the suit can be maintained, because the executor or administrator appointed in one country is not liable in another, and has no positive right or authority over the debts or assets of his principal in such foreign country, nor is he responsible therefor.<sup>2</sup>

An action of debt will not lie against an administrator in one State, on a judgment recovered against another administrator of the same intestate, appointed under the authority of another State.<sup>3</sup> in Kansas; such action being allowed by the statute of Kansas, but not by that of Missouri.

But it has been held in New York that an action may be maintained there by the personal representative of one whose death resulted from an injury received in another State, through the negligence of the defendant, where it appears that the laws of the State where the injury was received were similar to those of New York, giving to the personal representative a right of action in such case; it is not essential that the statute should be precisely the same. Leonard v. Columbia Steam Navigation Co., 84 N. Y. 48; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 491.

Where a South Carolina railroad was allowed to extend its road into Georgia, on condition that all the claims might be brought in the Georgia courts, it was held that a South Carolina administrator might bring suit in a Georgia court to recover the penalty provided by the South Carolina statute, for the killing of his intestate. South Carolina Railroad Co. v. Nix, 68 Ga. 572. And where a Georgia railroad company ran its road into Alabama, and there killed a man, it was held that the Alabama administrator might bring suit in Georgia. Central R. R. Co. v. Swint, 73 Ga. 651.

<sup>1</sup> McRea v. McRea, 11 La. 575; Fay v. Haven, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 109; Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Morrill v. Morrill, 1 Allen (Mass.), 132; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.), 101; Brownlee v. Lockwood, 5 C. E. Gr. (20 N. J. Ch.) 243; Vermilya v. Beatty, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 432; Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Caldwell v. Harding, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 501; Attorney-General v. Hope, 2 Clark & Finn. 84; s. c., 1 Crompt. M. & R. 538; Attorney-General v. Dimond, 1 Crompt. & Jer. 356. Compare McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239; Swearingen v. Pendleton, 4 Serg. &

R. (Pa.) 389; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 252; Bryon v. McGee, 2 Wash. C. C. 337.

An administrator is exclusively bound to account for all the assets which he receives, under and by virtue of his administration, to the proper tribunals of the government from which he derives his authority: the tribunals of other States have no right to interfere with him, according to the lex loci. Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; s. c., 5 Cr. C. C. 496.

An administrator of an intestate who resided out of a State, by letters granted in the place of his domicile, cannot be called to an account out of the State where his letters are granted for assets situated in that jurisdiction. Brownlee v. Lockwood, 5 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 239.

A testator domiciled in New Jersey provided that advances not to exceed $200,000 should be deducted from the share of a son, and that these charges should not affect the portions of other children. The testator had advanced the son $120,000. The son and the executor were domiciled in New York, and a large part of the property was there. The son sought in New York court to compel the executors to pay him $80,000. The other children objected. Pending a decision, the executors asked the New Jersey court for instructions; and the court held that the son should be enjoined from proceeding in the New York court, and that the executors should be enjoined from making further payment, until the condition of the estate should be more fully ascertained. Hutton v. Hutton, 40 N. J. Eq. 461.

<sup>2</sup> Story, Conf. L. sec. 513.

<sup>3</sup> Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 44; McLean v. Meek, 18 How. (U. S.) 16; Meiklan v. Campbell, 24 Beav. 100; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1.

A decree against the primary adminis-

But this rule, as to exemption from liability to suit, does not apply where funds are forwarded by a domiciliary administration to an agent in a foreign land, to pay legatees and distributees. In such case the agent may be compelled to pay over to the cestuis que trust without setting up as technical defence an ancillary administration.<sup>1</sup> And where an administrator goes into a foreign country, and there, by collecting debts or seizing assets belonging to the estate, makes himself executor de son tort, he will be liable to a suit in that jurisdiction for the same.<sup>2</sup>

And where an administrator has been sued by a creditor of an estate, and has come in and made a defence, he cannot be compelled, after summons and appearances, to take out new letters and enter into new bond.<sup>3</sup>

A court of equity has jurisdiction of an action against a foreign executor for a misapplication of the trust funds which have come into his hands,<sup>4</sup> although the trust funds were received abroad and brought into the jurisdiction of the forum; but the nature and extent of his liability will depend upon the laws of the country where he derived his authority to administer the assets.<sup>5</sup> trators of an intestate, in a suit relative to the succession of movable property, conducted in due form, and between proper parties, at the place of his domicile in a foreign country, is conclusive upon a subsidiary administrator appointed in another State, in respect to the rights of the parties which were therein adjudicated. Suarez v. New York, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 173.

Jurisdiction over the estate of a decedent belongs exclusively to the forum of the domicile where the assets are situate; the executor of a deceased executor of such decedent is not accountable in another jurisdiction; he is only liable to an administrator de bonis non. Van Dyke's Appeal (Pa.), 31 Leg. Int. 69; s. c., 6 Leg. Gaz. 70.

<sup>1</sup> See Arthur v. Hughes, 4 Beav. 506.

<sup>2</sup> See Campbell v. Tousey, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 64; Taylor v. Benham, 5 How. (U. S.) 233.

<sup>3</sup> Moss v. Rowland, 3 Bush (Ky.), 505.

It has been held that where an administrator or executor goes into a foreign State, and there collects assets which he carries into the State where he was appointed, such effects and assets are to be administered and accounted for as home assets by such administrator or executor. Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 252, 259; Dowdale's Case, 6 Co. 47, 48; s. c., Cro. Jac. 55.

It has been held by some American courts that where a foreign administrator or executor comes into a State from a foreign State or country, having received assets in the foreign country, he is liable to be sued in such State on account of such assets, although he may not have taken out new letters of administration there, and the estate has not been positively settled in the foreign State or country. Swearingen's Ex'rs v. Pendleton's Ex'rs, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 389, 392; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 252, 259; Campbell v. Tousey, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 64; Bryon v. McGee, 2 Wash. C. C. 337. Compare Fay v. Haven, 3 Met. (Mass.) 109; Davis v. Estey, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 475; Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; Doolittle v. Lewis, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 45, 57; McRea's Adm'r v. McRea, 11 La. 571.

<sup>4</sup> Montalvan v. Clover, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 190.

The ex parte settlement of an administrator is only prima facie correct, and parties interested may file a bill to surcharge and falsify the account so settled; and, fraud being alleged, it is immaterial that the settlement was had in Ohio, and the suit brought in West Virginia, where some of the parties in interest and the administrator live, the Ohio administration being ancillary. Leach v. Buckner, 19 W. Va. 36.

<sup>5</sup> McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239. See Brown v. Brown, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 343; Gulick v. Gulick, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 92.

The nature and extent of a foreign administrator's liability when sued in Georgia, depend upon the laws of the State of his appointment. Hoskins v. Sheddon, 70 Ga. 528.

A testator domiciled in Connecticut bequeathed a legacy to his grandson S. one to his daughter, and the residue of his estate to his son W., whom he appointed executor. W. passed his accounts before

And an executor who, pursuant to directions in the will, which the testator had power to give, sells lands in trust and receives the proceeds, is accountable to the cestuis que trust in the same State where he resides, though the will has not been proved there.<sup>1</sup>

(a) Suit by Non-resident Widow for Allowance.—It has been held that the widow of a non-resident intestate may sue for her year's allowance for support in Georgia, there being property there, and especially if there are no debts in the State of domicile; but the amount to be recovered must be regulated by the law of the State.<sup>2</sup>

d. Primary and Ancillary Administrations.—Where there are different administrations granted in different countries, that which is granted in the country where the testator was domiciled at the time of his death, will be regarded as the principal or primary administration, and those granted in other States as auxiliary or ancillary administrations. And the funds collected by the auxiliary or ancillary administrations, after the local administration has been completed, will be transmitted to the primary administration for distribution to the legatees and distributees of the estate. But each administration is said to be especially independent of the others;<sup>3</sup> that property received under one, cannot be sued for the probate court in Connecticut. At the testator's decease, and at the commencement of an action by S. to enforce payment of interest on his legacy, W. resided in the State of New York; and it was held that the courts of New York had jurisdiction of the action. Brown v. Knapp, 17 Hun (N. Y.), 160.

A legatee of a testator who died a resident of England may maintain in South Carolina a suit to impeach an investment by the executrix, who is also a resident of England, and who has had the will proved both in England and in that State, provided assets of the estate be alleged and proved to be remaining there. Gravely v. Gravely, 20 S. C. 93.

Where A. of Mississippi by will appointed B. of Virginia trustee of a legacy for a daughter and her children, who became residents of Virginia, it was held that they could maintain a suit in a Virginia court against B.'s executors to hold B.'s estate responsible for a breach of trust committed by B. in reference to the estate in Mississippi, notwithstanding the pendency of a suit in Mississippi, brought by another of A.'s legatees to recover a legacy, plaintiff in Virginia suit and B.'s executors being parties to the Mississippi suit. Davis v. Morris, 76 Va. 21.

M.'s intestate died in New York, leaving among his assets notes against a resident of Georgia, which M. settled by taking of the makers a house and lot in Atlanta, which she afterwards sold to G. In her accounting before the surrogate court of New York, M. was charged with the notes, the record of that court showing that she duly gave bond covering the same. On a bill filed in Georgia by certain distributees to set aside M.'s deed to G., by tracing the funds of the estate into the land, it was held, (1) that that court had jurisdiction to administer the notes according to the New York law; (2) that the record of that court was admissible; (3) that the bill could not be maintained until the complainants had exhausted their remedy in that court; and (4) that G., an innocent purchaser for value, without notice of the complainant's alleged equity, should not be disturbed. McNamara v. McNamara, 62 Ga. 200.

<sup>1</sup> Taylor v. Benham, 5 How. (U. S.) 233.

<sup>2</sup> Mitchell v. Word, 64 Ga. 208.

Yet it has been held that the provision of the North Carolina statute, for making an allowance from a decedent's estate to the widow, upon application by her "to a justice of the peace of the township in which the deceased resided, or some adjoining township," does not apply to the case of a decedent resident, and dying in another State, although having property in North Carolina, and although the widow subsequently moved into that State. Simpson's Adm'r v. Cureton (N. C.), 2 S. E. Rep. 668; Medley v. Dunlap, 90 N. C. 527.

<sup>3</sup> Thus, it has been held, where administrations are granted to different persons in under another, although for the time locally situated within the jurisdiction where suit is brought.<sup>1</sup> different States, that a judgment obtained against one, will not furnish a right of action against the others, so far as to affect assets received by the latter in favor of his own administration. Merrill v. New Eng. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 245; Ela v. Edwards, 13 Allen (Mass.), 48; Low v. Bartlett, 8 Allen (Mass.), 259; Brodie v. Bickley, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 431; Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 44; Hill v. Tucker, 13 How. (U. S.) 458; McLean v. Meek, 18 How. (U. S.) 16; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. (U. S.) 100.

And it has been held, that, where letters of administration on the same estate were granted in Wisconsin and Indiana, and in both, the intestate was described as of the place where he died, which was in Indiana, a judgment against the Indiana administrator is not even prima facie evidence in an action against the Wisconsin administrator. Price v. Mace, 47 Wis. 23. See Low v. Bartlett, 8 Allen (Mass.), 259; Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467; Stacey v. Thrasher, 6 How. (U. S.) 44.

But it has been said, that if a testator, by will, appoints different executors in different States, there will be such a privity between them that a judgment against one administrator in one State, may be evidence against another in a different State. Hill v. Tucker, 13 How. (U. S.) 458; distinguishing Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467.

And it would seem that where an administrator is appointed in different States, a suit against him in one State will also be binding in the other: Merrill v. New Eng. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 245; Ela v. Edwards, 13 Allen (Mass.), 48; Low v. Bartlett, 8 Allen (Mass.), 259; Brodie v. Bickley, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 431.

Where a judgment is recovered by a foreign administrator against a debtor of his intestate, it will not form a foundation for an action by an ancillary administrator appointed in another State. Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71; but such debt being merged by the judgment, and thereby becoming due to the foreign administrator personally, in his own right, and he being responsible therefor to the estate, such administrator can maintain a personal suit against the debtor in any other State. Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71. Compare Smith v. Nicolls, 5 Ping. N. C. 208.

J., domiciled in New Jersey, died intestate, leaving personal property there and in New York; administration was granted in both States. On a bill filed by the administrator in New Jersey, alleging that there were no debts, and praying a discovery and account of the amount in the defendant's hands, and a decree that he pay over such amount to the complainant, a demurrer being filed to the bill, it was held, that, as the intestate left assets both in New York and New Jersey, administration was rightfully granted in both States, although the right of succession to the personal estate was to be regulated by the law of the domicile. Banta v. Moore, 2 McC. (N. J.) 97.

A testator, resident in Wisconsin, died, leaving property in that State, and land in Minnesota. He left an insane widow resident in Wisconsin, for whom, by will, he made provision. Proceedings were instituted in Wisconsin to compel an election in behalf of the widow; and the court elected, in her behalf, to take under the will. After the commencement of the proceedings in Wisconsin, proceedings were instituted in Minnesota; and before the election was made in Wisconsin, the probate court in Minnesota elected, for the widow, to take against the will. An appeal was taken, the effect of which was to transfer the cause to the appellate court for traverse de novo. Pending this appeal, and before a new trial, the election aforesaid was made in Wisconsin. It was held that this election was effectual everywhere, and precluded a different election in Minnesota. Washburn v. Van Steenwyk, 32 Minn. 33.

Where a testatrix died domiciled in Massachusetts, and named an executor there, and one in New York, on an accounting by the New York executor, it was held that the surplus assets should be transmitted to the Massachusetts executor, but that a question as to whether one claiming a legacy was entitled thereto under the Massachusetts statute should be left to the discretion of the court, be determined in New York, instead of remitting the controversy to Massachusetts. Clark v. Butler, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 378.

The probate court of Connecticut discharged administrators appointed by that court, and who were also appointed by the New York court in ancillary proceedings. It was held that the discharge in Connecticut in no way affected the liability of the administrators to account in New York for property received by them there. Dulles v. Smith, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 202.

1 Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; Dawes v. Boylston, 9 Mass. 337; Dawes v. Head, Pick. (Mass.) 128-148; Banta v. Moore, McC. (N. J.) 101; Lynes v. Coley, 1 Rees (N. Y.) 407; Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mass. C. C. 381; Huthwaite v. Phaire, 1 Man. Gr. 159; Jauncey v. Sealey, 1 Vern. 39; Currie's Adm'r v. Bircham, 1 Dow. & Ry. 3.

c. Course of Distribution in Ancillary Administration. — When the funds in the hands of the ancillary administrator are sufficient to pay all legitimate claims existing in the jurisdiction by which such administration is granted, he is to pay such debts under the direction of such court, settle his accounts under the supervision of said court, and transmit the residuum, if any, to the primary administrator, to be distributed among the heirs and legatees.<sup>1</sup> The ancillary administrator is to make no payments except under the decree of the court by which he was appointed,<sup>2</sup> and to which he is exclusively bound to account.<sup>3</sup>

Where there has been an ancillary administrator appointed, by whom the assets of the decedent have been collected, they should not be transmitted to the primary administrator so long as there remain unsatisfied claimants within the jurisdiction of the ancillary administration;<sup>4</sup> yet the court having jurisdiction over the ancillary administration may order it to pay the residuum directly to the heirs and legatees within its jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup>

Where the estate for which an ancillary administrator has been appointed is insolvent, it seems that the assets coming into the hands of such ancillary administrator are to be administered according to the lex loci rei sitæ,<sup>6</sup> and where there is any conflict of law as to priority of payment among contesting claimants, the lex rei sitæ, and not the testator's domiciliary law, is to govern;<sup>7</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Wheelock v. Pierce, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 288; Fay v. Haven, 3 Met. (Mass.) 109; Meiklan v. Campbell, 24 Beav. 100; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1.

The law of the place of ancillary administration governs as to the payment of debts there, but the distribution among the next of kin or legatees is made according to the lex domicilii; and a decree against the primary administrator of the domicile is conclusive upon the ancillary administrator. Churchill v. Prescott, 3 Bradl. (N. Y.) 233.

In case of an ancillary administration in Pennsylvania of the estate of a decedent whose domicile was in another State or country, the orphans' court, after having paid all lawful claimants on the funds, who are residents of Pennsylvania, must direct the balance to be paid to the administrator of the domicile, and a creditor who has the same domicile as was that of the decedent, cannot make claim to the fund in the ancillary jurisdiction, but must resort to that of his domicile. Barry's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 131.

<sup>2</sup> Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Hooker v. Omstead, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 481; Jennison v. Hapgood, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 77; Richards v. Dutch, 8 Mass. 506; Dawes v. Boylston, 9 Mass. 337; Miller's Estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 312; Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 12.

<sup>3</sup> Lynes v. Coley, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 405.

If a person residing in Massachusetts is appointed executor of a will in another State, and ancillary letters are also granted him in Massachusetts, and his final account, showing that the balance in his hands has been paid to him as executor under his appointment in the other State, is allowed by the Massachusetts probate court, the supreme court thereof has no jurisdiction of a bill to construe the will, and marshal and distribute the estate. Emery v. Batchelder, 132 Mass. 452.

<sup>4</sup> See Parker's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 478; Porter v. Heydock, 6 Vt. 374; Mackey v. Cox, 18 How. (U. S.) 100.

An estate will not be remitted to the administrator of the domicile when there are claimants within the jurisdiction of the ancillary administration. Appeal of Del Valle (Pa.), 3 Cent. Rep. 163.

<sup>5</sup> Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Carmichael v. Ray, 5 Ired. (N. C.) Ch. 365; Mackey v. Cox, 18 How. (U. S.) 100; Innes v. Mitchell, 4 Drew. 144; s. c., 1 De G. & J. 423; Meiklan v. Campbell, 24 Beav. 100.

<sup>6</sup> See Dunlap v. Rogers, 47 N. H. 287; Carson v. Oates, 64 N. C. 115; Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Union Bank v. Smith, 4 Cr. C. C. 21.

<sup>7</sup> Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Holmes v. Remsen, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 265; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 353; MU-

but under such ancillary administration the foreign creditors will be entitled to prove their debts.<sup>1</sup>

It has been held, that, in order to enable an ancillary administrator to obtain an order to sell real estate in the ancillary jurisdiction, it is not necessary for him to show that the personal estate in the primary administration has been exhausted; but it will be sufficient if it is made to appear that the personal estate in the domiciliary administration is exhausted.<sup>2</sup>

f. Property in transitu and Ships at Sea. — It has been said, that when property at the time of the death of the testator is in a foreign country, and subsequent returns by remittance or otherwise to the country of his domicile, such property will be under the administration of the domiciliary administrator,<sup>3</sup> although some doubt has been expressed as to whether the personal property of the deceased testator or intestate, consisting of goods situated in a foreign country at the time of his death, can be lawfully disposed of, except under the administration granted in the country where they are situated at the time; yet it has been said, that according to the common course of commercial business, ships and cargoes, and the proceeds thereof, locally situated in a foreign country at the time of the death of the owner, always proceed on their voyages, and return to the home port, and are there taken into possession of and administered by the administrator of the fori domicilii; and that such administrator is bound to administer upon them as part of the funds appropriately in his hands.<sup>4</sup> But where there is a primary administrator and ancillary administrator, and goods are in transitu, such goods are to be charged to the administrator who first reduces them to possession.<sup>5</sup>

g. Conflict between Primary and Ancillary Administrators. — The domiciliary administrator and the ancillary administrators are independent of each other; and where there are several local ancillary administrators, the commission of each is to be governed by the law of the place in which his letters are granted;<sup>6</sup> and ler's estate, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 312; Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cr. (U. S.) 289; McElnoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312; Union Bank v. Smith, 4 Cr. C. C. 509; Cook v. Gregson, 3 Drew. 547; Hanson v. Walker, 7 L. J. Ch. 135; Pardo v. Bingham, L. R. 6 Eq. 485.

<sup>1</sup> Cook v. Gregson, 2 Drew. 286.

<sup>2</sup> Rosenthal v. Rennick, 44 Ill. 202.

<sup>3</sup> Story, Conf. L. § 519.

<sup>4</sup> Orcutt v. Orms, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 459; Wells v. Miller, 45 Ill. 382; Collins v. Bankhead, 1 Strobb. (S. C.) L. 25.

<sup>5</sup> Orcutt v. Orms, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 459.

Thus, it has been held that where a domiciliary administrator during his administration receives assets belonging to the estate, which at the time of the death of the principal were in a foreign land, he is accountable for such assets. Randall v. Hubbard, 4 Met. (Mass.) 252; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 252; Van Hook v. Barret, 5 Vt. 333; Dowdale's Case, Coke, 46b.

<sup>6</sup> Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Meriv. 24.

It has been held in Massachusetts that where an administrator was appointed by a probate judge, who had no jurisdiction from a want of domicile on the part of the decedent, the whole proceedings will be void, and all titles passed under the same null. Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; s. c., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 259.

Statutes limiting the time in which an appeal may be taken from such appointments have been passed in Massachusetts, Maine, and other States. Record v. Hubbard, 58 Me. 225.

each ancillary administrator is required to satisfy in full the creditors within his jurisdiction before transmitting any residuum to the primary administrator,<sup>1</sup> even though the principal administration be insolvent.<sup>2</sup>

Where there is a conflict between the law of the domicile and the law of the situs, as to priority of payment in cases of insolvency of the estate, the law of the situs is to prevail;<sup>3</sup> because in the reciprocal relations of administration, each State is sovereign within its own limits, and each is foreign so far as concerns the issues to the other States of the Union.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held that where assets which have been reduced to possession by a foreign administrator find their way into another land, the administrator of the estate in such land cannot seize such assets either by attachment or by suit against the foreign administrator who has reduced them to possession.<sup>5</sup>

Where a decree has been rendered in favor of an ancillary administrator in his own forum, finding a balance due to him from the estate, such decree is not conclusive as against the primary administration in the forum of the testator;<sup>6</sup> and it has been held that where the same person is both ancillary and primary administrator, that a decree in his favor in the domiciliary forum is no bar to the suit against him in the forum of the ancillary administration.<sup>7</sup>

h. Payment of Debts to Foreign Administrator. — Since the administrator has no authority to act outside of the jurisdiction in which the administration is granted, it has been held by the English courts that the payment of a debt to a foreign administrator will be no bar to a suit by an ancillary administration in the rei situs, <sup>1</sup> Appeal of Del Valle (Pa.), 3 Cent. Rep. 163.

<sup>2</sup> Pardo v. Bingham, L. R., 6 Eq. 485; Cook v. Gregson, 2 Drew. 286.

Where administration has been granted in the place of the domicile of the intestate, and ancillary administration elsewhere for the purpose of collecting debts, if the fund in the hands of the foreign administrator is needed for the purpose of due administration in the place of the domicile, the mode of reaching it would be to require its transmission or distribution, after all claims against the foreign administration had been ascertained or settled. Normand v. Grogard, 2 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 426.

N. C. 115; Union C. 21.

Met. (Mass.) 109; ass. 343; Goodall

88; Brownlee v. 243; Mothland v.

W.) 185; Sayre v. 39; Porter v. Hey-

1 v. Rogers, 16 Vt.

294; Abbott v. Coburn, 28 Vt. 663; Hill v. Tucker, 13 How. (U. S.) 458; McLean v. Meek, 18 How. (U. S.) 16.

A mortgage upon real property in Michigan belonging to a person who dies in another State, and whose estate is in course of regular and valid local administration in Michigan, may not be sold by a foreign administrator to strangers: the title thereto is in the local administrator for purposes of administration, and he alone can sue on it, or assign or discharge it of record. Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 386.

An administrator appointed at the deceased's domicile in another State cannot sue for a debt due his intestate in Arkansas, after the appointment of an administrator there. Gibson v. Ponder, 40 Ark. 195.

<sup>5</sup> Dawes v. Head, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, C. C. 381; Currie v. Bircham, 1 Dow. & Ry. 35.

<sup>6</sup> Ela v. Edwards, 13 Allen (Mass.), 48; Brodie v. Bickley, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 431.

<sup>7</sup> See Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. (U. S.) 467.

should one afterwards be appointed;<sup>1</sup> but it is held in the United States that a voluntary payment of a debt to a foreign administrator, which he may lawfully receive under that administration when there is no domestic administration, is a good discharge of the debt;<sup>2</sup> particularly is this the case where the debt is payable at the domicile of the deceased, which is the forum of the principal administrator;<sup>3</sup> and a payment made to a foreign administrator under decree of a court is a defence to a suit brought on the debt by a domestic administrator afterwards appointed.<sup>4</sup>

Thus, where Q. was a citizen of Tennessee, and died in Alabama in which State G. took out letters of administration, and W. in Tennessee there paid to G. a debt due the estate, there were no other debts due in Tennessee. The payment was included in G.'s account in Alabama. Afterwards, administration was taken out by E. in Tennessee, and it was held that E. could not maintain against W. an action for the debt paid by W. to G.<sup>5</sup>

Where a testator has property in a foreign State, in which State there are no creditors, and no ancillary administration is either set up or called for, the administrator of the decedent's domicile may receive such debts.<sup>6</sup>

2. FOREIGN GUARDIANS. — a. How constituted. — It has been said that the State within which a ward is domiciled is that which "in interest and in conscience, is charged with his protection and that, therefore, on general principles, it is the law of that State which should nominate and direct the guardian of such ward and that the guardian thus appointed by such home authorities should have control of his ward's estate abroad as well as at home;<sup>7</sup> but in England and the United States a foreign guardian

<sup>1</sup> Attorney-General v. Dimond, 1 Crompt. & Jer. 356; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1, 12, 14.

<sup>2</sup> Hooker v. Olmstead, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 481; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Shultz v. Pulver, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 182; Doolittle v. Lewis, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 49; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, C. C. 16; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. (U. S.) 104.

Payment of a debt, at the domicile of the debtor, to a foreign administrator, is no defence to a suit by an administrator subsequently appointed under authority of the State in which the debtor is domiciled. Anon., 2 Am. L. Rev. 359.

<sup>3</sup> Huthwaite v. Phaire, 1 Man. & Gr. 159.

<sup>4</sup> Shaw v. Staughton, 3 Keb. 163; Huthwaite v. Phaire, 1 Man. & Gr. 159.

But an administrator should not be permitted to enforce the collection of debts outside of his own forum. McRea v. McRea, 11 La. 571; Fay v. Haven, 3 Met. (Mass.) 109; Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Morrill v. Morrill, 1 Allen (Mass.), 132; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.) 132; Vermilya v. Beatty, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 509; Brownlee v. Lockwood, 5 Gr. (N. J.) 15; Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 370; Caldwell v. Harding, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 84; a. c., 1 Crompt. M. & R. 538; Attorney-General v. Hope, 2 Clark & Jer. 370. See Huthwaite v. Phaire, 1 Man. & Gr. 159, 164, 165; Whyte v. Rose, 3 Cr. 159, 164, 165; Currie v. Bircham, 1 Dow. & Ry. 493; Tyler v. Bell, 1 Keen. 826; a. c., 2 M. & Cr. 89, 109, 110. Compare Anderson v. Caunter, 2 Myl. & K. 763; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239; Sengen v. Pendleton, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 159; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 337; Bryan v. McGee, 2 Wash. C. C. 337.

<sup>5</sup> Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256.

<sup>6</sup> Vaughn v. Barret, 5 Vt. 333.

<sup>7</sup> Such is the uniform practice of European and Continental states. See Savigny, § 380; Wächter, § 23; Pütler, § 6; Föelix, ii. p. 198, No. 466; Id., No. 187; Id., No. 89; Argentrén, No. 19; Priv. Intr. L. § 106; Schaeffer, p.

as in the case of foreign administrators and executors, is not usually permitted to act without giving bond in the local court;<sup>1</sup> and it has even been held that a foreign guardian, appointed by the court of the domicile, is not by virtue of his office necessarily entitled to the custody of his ward in Massachusetts, though the court, after appointing a local guardian, may decree the custody of the child to a guardian appointed in a foreign State.<sup>2</sup>

b. How administered. — (1) As to Person of Ward. — The rights and powers of guardians are considered as strictly local, and they are not entitled to exercise any authority over the person or personal property of their wards in other States;<sup>3</sup> and the same principle has recently been sustained in England.<sup>4</sup>

Under the common-law doctrine, foreign guardians have no rights over immovable property situated in other countries: such rights are "deemed to be strictly territorial, and are not recognized as having any influence upon property in other countries, whose systems of jurisprudence embrace different regulation, and require different duties and arrangements."<sup>5</sup>

A guardian appointed in a foreign State, and giving bond there, is not bound to account in the court of his ward's domicile for funds received in such foreign State.<sup>6</sup>

Hertius, iv. 29; Stockman, Decis. Brabant, 125, No. 6; Boullenois, ii. p. 3; Gand. No. 469; Pottinger, § 61.

It is said by Sir R. Phillimore (iv. 377) that "whatever may be the difference in the positive laws of the different States, with regard to the mode of constituting a guardian, the rule of international comity imperatively demands that a guardian, duly constituted according to the laws of the domicile of the ward, should be recognized as such by all other countries." See Nugent v. Vetzera, L. R. 2 Eq. 704.

<sup>1</sup> Young's Succession, 21 La. An. 394; Stephens' Succession, 19 La. An. 499.

A guardian, who has been appointed in another State, and given bond there, is not bound to account, in the court of the ward's domicile, for funds received in such other jurisdiction. Smoot v. Bell, 3 Cr. C. C. 343.

<sup>2</sup> Woodworth v. Spring, 4 Allen (Mass.), 321.

<sup>3</sup> Kraft v. Wickey, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 332; Woodworth v. Spring, 4 Allen (Mass.), 324; Morrell v. Dickey, 1 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 153; Morrison's Case, 4 Durn. & East, 185; 2 C. & T. R. 185; Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Black. 677, 682. Compare Beattie v. Johnstone, 1 Phill. Ch. 17; s. c., 10 Clark & Finn. 42.

<sup>4</sup> Nugent v. Vetzera, L. R. 2 Eq. 704; Beattie v. Johnstone, 10 Clark & Finn. 42, 113, 145; Stuart v. Moore, 4 L. T. N. S. 382; s. c., 9 H. L. Cas. 463; 4 McQ. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Kraft v. Wickey, 4 Gill & J. (Md.)

322, 340, 341; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239, 241; Morrill v. Dickey, 1 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 153; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 529.

Story says that "no one has ever supposed that a guardian appointed in one State of this Union, had any right to receive the profits, or to assume the possession, of the real estate of his ward in another State, without having received a due appointment from the principal tribunal of the State where it is situated." Story, Conf. L. § 504.

Lord Kames says, that, according to the Scottish doctrine, it is of no importance in what country curators of minors are chosen; and that accordingly a choice made in England of curators, whether English or Scotch, will be held effectual in Scotland; but that the authority of any guardian or curator, however appointed in a foreign country, is not understood to extend to any real estate in Scotland. 2 Kames, Eq. b. 3, ch. 8, § 1, p. 325; Id., § 4, p. 348.

<sup>6</sup> Riley v. Riley, 3 Day (Conn.), 74; Champlin v. Tilley, 3 Day (Conn.), 303; Dangerfield v. Thurston, 20 Martin (La.), 232; McRae v. McRae, 11 La. 571; Smoot v. Bell, 3 Cr. C. C. 343. See, also, Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Fay v. Haven 3 Met. (Mass.) 109; Morrill v. Morrill, 1, Allen (Mass.), 132; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.), 101; Ex parte Picquet, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 65; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; Borden v. Borden, 5 Mass. 67; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256;

(a) Power over Domicile of Ward. — By the common law a guardian has no right to change the domicile of his ward, except under order of the court.<sup>1</sup>

It is said that the law of succession varies so much in the different States of the Union, that the power to arbitrarily change succession by changing the minor's domicile, is one which no guardian should possess.<sup>2</sup>

(2) As to Property of Ward. — (a) Personal Property. — Since personal or movable property is deemed to be in the domicile of the owner, the law of such domicile will govern the rights and powers of guardians appointed in foreign countries, and regulate their control or authority over the property of their wards situated in other countries, to the same extent as they are acknowledged by the law of the domicile of the ward.<sup>3</sup>

(b) Immovable Property. — As regards real estate, the rule is, that the lex rei sitæ must govern, and that the foreign guardian

Langdon v. Potter, 11 Mass. 313; Glenn v. Smith, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 493; Stearns v. Burnham, 5 Greenl. (Me.) 261; Brownlee v. Lockwood, 5 Gr. (N. J.) 243; Thompson v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 291; Campbell v. Tousey, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 64; Holmes v. Remsen, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 229, 265; Vermilya v. Beatty, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; Lawrence v. Lawrence, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 71; Fenwick v. Sears, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 259; Dixon's Ex'rs v. Ramsay's Ex'rs, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 319, 323; Smith, Adm'r, v. Union Bank of Georgetown, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 518; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565; Armstrong v. Lear, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; Dickinson, Adm'r, v. McCraw, 4 Rand. (Va.) 158; Caldwell v. Harding, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 501; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, C. C. 16, 32; Preston v. Melville, 8 Clark & Finn. 1; Whyte v. Rose, 3 Q. B. 498, 507; Spratt v. Harris, 4 Hagg. Ecc. 405; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & Cr. 76; Lee v. Verton, Palmer, 163; Tourton v. Flower, 3 P. Wms. 369, 370; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. 35; Attorney-General v. Cockerell, 1 Price, 179; Burn v. Cole, Amb. 416; Lowe v. Farlie, 2 Madd. 101; Logan v. Farlie, 2 Sim. & S. 285; Attorney-General v. Bouwens, 4 Mees. & W. 171, 192, 193; Tyler v. Bell, 1 Keen, 826, 829; s. c., 2 Myl. & Cr. 89, 109. Compare McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239; Swearingen v. Pendleton, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 389; Evans v. Tatem, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 252; Bryan v. McGee, 2 Wash. C. C. 337.

<sup>1</sup> School Directors v. James, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 568; Whar., Conf. L. §§ 41, 42. Compare Cutts v. Haskins, 9 Mass. 543; Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; Guier v. O'Daniel, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 349, n.; Pottinger v. Wightman, 3 Meriv. 67.

But where a parent domiciled in one State, appoints a testamentary guardian domiciled in another State, for his child, with other circumstances indicating a desire that the child should reside with the guardian, followed by the actual removal of such child to the domicile of the guardian, this will constitute a change of the child's domicile. See White v. Howard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 294.

It seems that a mother cannot change the domicile of the minor children of her first marriage, by taking them into another State subsequent to her second marriage, so as to make property subject to the laws of succession and distribution of such other State. See Johnson v. Copeland, 35 Ala. 521; Freetown v. Taunton, 16 Mass. 52; Mears v. Sinclair, 1 W. Va. 185.

But a change of the domicile of her children by a surviving mother, when it is made reasonably and in good faith, will be sustained by the English and American courts. See Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; School Directors v. James, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 568; Pottinger v. Wightman, 3 Meriv. 67.

Continental jurists hold that the minor's domicile is fixed by the father's death, and cannot be changed during the minority of the infant by the mother or guardian, except by act of law. Bouhier, ch. 21, No. 3; Id., ch. 22, No. 164; Boulenois, ii. p. 69; Bar, Priv., Int. L. § 31; Denisart, Domicile, § 2; Fœlix, i. pp. 54, 55, 94.

<sup>2</sup> Whart., Conf. L. § 42. See also Robertson, Per. Succ. 275, n.

<sup>3</sup> Story, Conf. L. 500; Whart., Conf. L. 268.

As a general rule, the management and investment, by a guardian, of the property of his ward, should be governed by the law of the State of the domicile of the ward, and not by the law of the State wherein the guardian has been appointed. Lamar can have no authority or control over lands situated in another State without the sanction of the local court.<sup>1</sup>

c. Lunatics.—Where a committee has been appointed for a lunatic, in what is conceded to be his place of domicile, it seems such committee is accountable in the place of his appointment for fund received by virtue of an ancillary appointment in another State; but the question cannot be raised in a suit against the surety in his bond.<sup>2</sup>

v. Micon, 112 U. S. 452; s. c., 114 U. S. 218.

Wharton says, that as to personalty a foreign guardian may "at least make himself liable on his bond for money received by him in a foreign jurisdiction." Whart., Conf. L. § 268. See also United States v. Bender, 5 Cr. C. C. 620; United States v. Nichols, 4 Cr. C. C. 291.

1. Kraft v. Wickey, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 332, 340, 341; Morrell v. Dickey, 1 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 153; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 529, n.; Brooke v. Potowmack Co., 1 Cr. C. C. 526. Compare McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239, 241.

"Administration on the estate of Michael Marck having been granted in Baltimore County, the orphans' court of that county had express power conferred upon it to appoint a guardian to his infant children, and the legality and consequent regularity of this appointment could in no manner be affected by the fact that a guardian for these children had been appointed by the orphans' court of York County, in the State of Pennsylvania. For the appointment of a guardian granted in a foreign State can have no extra-territorial operation, so as to oust our courts of their jurisdiction over the property of infants. . . . But it is supposed that the determination which would give validity to the guardian's appointment, made by our courts, when at the same time there existed a guardian appointed by a foreign power, would produce a conflict of jurisdictions prejudicial to the interests of the minor. But it cannot be perceived in what manner this result is to be produced. The control of the person of the ward being with the foreign jurisdiction, cannot be disturbed by the guardian here; on the other hand, the foreign guardian cannot interfere with the management and control, by the domestic guardian, of the ward's property. Kraft v. Wickey, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 332, 340, 341. But persons coming en autre droit, under the appointment of foreign laws, cannot be parties. To entitle them to be received as such, they must have their appointments repeated under our laws. This has been held of foreign guardians,—Morrell v. Dickey, 1 John. Ch. Rep. (N. Y.) 153,—of foreign executors and administrators. 1 John. Ch. Rep. (N. Y.) 156; Tourton v. Flower, 3 P. Wms. 369; Lee v. Bank of England, 3 Ves. 44; Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; Riley v. Riley, 3 Day (Conn.), 74; Fenwick v. Adm'rs of Sears, 1 Cr. C. C. 259; Dixon's Ex'rs v. Ramsay's Ex'rs, 3 Cranch C. C. 319; Doolittle v. Lewis, 7 John. Ch. Rep. (N. Y.) 45; Williams v. Storrs, 6 Johns. Ch. Rep. (N. Y.) 353; Lewis v. McFarland, 9 Cranch C. C. 159; Langdon v. Potter, 11 Mass. 313; Borden v. Borden, 5 Mass. 67; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Cutler v. Davenport, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Kerr v. Devises of Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565; Darby's Lessee v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 465; Admrs. of Dodge v. Wetmore, Brayton's Rep. 92; Lee v. Havens, Brayton's Rep. 93.

"It appears to be perfectly well settled that a foreign executor or administrator cannot maintain a suit in this State by virtue of letters testamentary or of administration granted abroad. And the learned and very distinguished American commentator on the conflict of foreign and domestic laws is evidently of the opinion that this principle extends to suits brought against the foreign executor or administrator to recover the property which he has received in that character. Story's Conf. of Laws, 422, §§ 513, 514. I have, however, after a careful examination of the several cases referred to by him, not been able to find any one in which it has been directly decided that the remedy against an executor or administrator, either in behalf of the next of kin or of the creditors, is necessarily confined to the courts of the country in which the letters testamentary or of administration were granted. Indeed to suppose such was the law, would lead to the conclusion that cases must frequently exist in which there would be a total failure of justice." McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 239, 241.

2. Commonwealth v. Rhoads, 37 Pa. St. 60.

CONFUSION OF DEBTS—CONGREGATION.

CONFUSION OF DEBTS is the concurrence of two adverse rights the same thing in one and the same person.<sup>1</sup>

Confusion of goods takes place where there has been such an intermixture of goods owned by different persons, that the property of each can no longer be distinguished.<sup>2</sup>

CONFUSION OF GOODS. See ACCESSION, Vol. I. p. 50.

CONGREGATION. (See also RELIGIOUS SOCIETY.)—An assemblage or union of persons in society for some religious purpose.<sup>3</sup>

1. Woods v. Ridley, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 198, quoting Story on Prom. N. sec. 439.

2. Hesseltine v. Stockwell, 30 Me. 241.

"Confusion, as it is termed, is a mixture of liquids, as wine and wine, or wine and honey, or melted silver and gold. . . . And within the same reason is the intermixture of money or coin or hay, that forms one undistinguishable mass. . . . But the placing of crockery, china, or other articles resembling each other, on the same shelf, is not a confusion of them, within the meaning of the law." Treat v. Barber, 7 Conn. 280.

"In the case of confusion of goods . . . the English law partly agrees with, and partly differs from, the civil. If the intermixture be by consent, I apprehend that in both laws the proprietors have an interest in common, in proportion to their respective shares. But if one wilfully intermixes his money, corn, or hay with that of another man, without his approbation or knowledge, or casts gold in like manner into another's melting-pot or crucible, the civil law, though it gives the sole property of the whole to him who has not interfered in the mixture, yet allows a satisfaction to the other for what he has so improvidently lost. But our law, to guard against fraud, gives the entire property, without any account, to him whose original domain is invaded, and endeavored to be rendered uncertain without his own consent." 2 Bl. Com. 405.

3. On a motion to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, commanding the defendants to restore their pastor into the place and function of minister of the congregation of the German or High Dutch Reformed Christian church in Fredericktown, the court, Chase, J., in granting the mandamus, held that the court had jurisdiction therein both because, by the form of government in Maryland, the Christian religion is the established religion, and also because of the temporal rights and emoluments annexed to the position, these emoluments being held by trustees for the use of the congregation, whom he defines as above. Runkel v. Winemiller et al., 4 Har. & McH. (Md.) 429.

In refusing an application for an injunction, restraining the defendants from occupying the pulpit or impeding the complainants from celebrating divine worship in the church by a Baptist minister in regular standing, and from using or interfering with the temporalities of the church, the Chancellor Walworth said: "The complainants appear to have acted on the supposition that the decision of the ecclesiastical judicatory, that a certain portion of the members of the Baptist church in Hartford were heterodox in doctrine or practice, and were not the true church, must have a legal effect upon the incorporation of the members of this religious society. But I apprehend that in this they have overlooked the distinction between the 'congregation' and the church strictly so-called, which comprises only a part of the 'congregation' or society. The church consists of an indefinite number of persons, of one or both sexes, who have made a public profession of religion, and who are associated together by a covenant of church fellowship, for the purpose of celebrating the Sacrament and watching over the spiritual welfare of each other. But a religious society, or 'congregation,' as recognized by the third section of the statute providing for the incorporation of religious societies is, with us, what is usually denominated a poll parish, in some of the neighboring States. It consists of a voluntary association of individuals or families, united for the purpose of having a common place of worship and to provide a proper teacher to instruct them in religious doctrines and duties, and to administer the ordinances of baptism, etc. Although a church, or body of professing Christians, is almost uniformly connected with such a society or 'congregation,' the members of the church have no other or greater rights than any other members of the society who stately attend with them for the purposes of divine worship. Over the church, as such, the legal or

Definition.

CONSANGUINITY—CONSCIENCE.

Definition.

CONNIVANCE. See DIVORCE.

CONSANGUINITY.—The having the blood of some common ancestor.<sup>1</sup>

CONSCIENCE.—That sense by which men determine whether a thing is right or wrong.<sup>2</sup>

temporal tribunals of this State do not profess to have any jurisdiction whatever, except so far as is necessary to protect the civil rights of others, and to preserve the public peace. All questions relating to the faith and practice of the church and its members belong to the church judicatory to which they have voluntarily subjected themselves. But, as a general principle, those ecclesiastical judicatories cannot interfere with the temporal concerns of the 'congregation' or society, with which the church or the members thereof are connected. It follows, from this view of the subject, that these defendants, although they may have been rightfully excluded from the communion and fellowship of the Baptist Church, on account of anti-Sabbatarianism, or some other heresy, as suggested by the complainants' counsel, yet they may still not only be legal voters as members of the 'congregation' or society, but they may be elected trustees, and have the management of the temporal concerns of the "congregation." Baptist Church in Hartford v. Witherell, 3 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 296.

So in Roberson v. Bullions, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 64. Hand, J., said: "But as used in this statute, a 'congregation' is an assembly met, or a body of persons who usually meet, in some stated place for the worship of God and religious instruction, and may or may not include a church or spiritual body. And the same may be said of the term 'religious society' used in the same connection in the third section. The church, congregation, or society must, to organize, have stated 'divine worship,' for the electors must have attended the same to constitute them such by the third and seventh sections."

Congregation Met for Religious Worship.—See ASSEMBLY; CAMP-MEETING.

1. Blodget v. Brinsmaid, 9 Vt. 30.

In holding that, by the civil law, the rules of which are to be used in determining who are the next of kin, the grandfather of the decedent is in the second degree, and the aunt in the third, the court, Bradford, surrogate, said: "'Consanguinity' is the connection or relation of persons descended from the same stock or common ancestor." Swezey v. Willes, 1 Bradford Surr. R. (N. Y.) 495.

So Woodward, C. J., held that in Pennsylvania, under the Intestate Act of April 8, 1833, the next of kin are to be ascertained by the rules of the civil law, saying: "Consanguinity is either lineal or collateral. Lineal is that which subsists between persons of whom one is descended in a right line from the other. Every generation in this direct lineal consanguinity constitutes a degree. Collateral consanguinity is that which subsists between persons who lineally descend from the same ancestor who is the stirps or root, but who do not descend the one from the other." McDowell v. Addams, 45 Pa. St. 430.

Consanguinity and Affinity Distinguished.—In dissenting from the general opinion of the court that a father-in-law is a competent witness, under the Civ. Code, 312 Art. 248, which declares "that all persons above 14 years of age, free, of a sound mind, and not rendered infamous, may be witnesses of any fact . . . provided that the husband cannot be a witness for or against the wife, nor the wife for or against the husband. Neither can ascendants with respect to their descendants, nor descendants with respect to their ascendants." Martin, J., said: "Consanguinity is the basis of the laws which regulate the degrees between which marriage is forbidden, the rules of succession and tutorship, the recusation of judges, and the admission or rejection of persons who are offered as witnesses. Affinity is the basis of the same laws, with the exception of those which regulate succession." Bernard v. Vignaud, 10 Martin (La.), 478.

In New York it has been held that degrees of affinity are computed in the same way as those of consanguinity, and that therefore a judge whose wife is the aunt of the wife of one of the parties to a cause cannot sit at the trial of the cause, under the 16th section of chap. 50 of the Digest, which declares that "No judge of the circuit court, etc., shall sit on the determination of any cause or proceeding in which he is interested or related to either party, within the fourth degree of consanguinity or affinity, or shall have been counsel without consent of parties." Kelly v. Neely, Judge, etc., 12 Ark. 667.

2. Conscience and Principle Distinguished.—Where a juror in a capital case

CONSCIOUS.—Having a knowledge of anything, in a way to enable an opinion to be formed of its character.<sup>1</sup>

CONSENT, in Criminal Law. (See the particular criminal titles for the application to special crimes.)—No act shall be deemed a crime if done with the consent of the party injured, unless it be committed in public, and is likely to provoke a breach of the peace, or tends to the injury of a third party; provided no consent can be given which will deprive the consenter of any inalienable right.<sup>2</sup> was asked if he entertained such conscientious opinions as would preclude him from finding the defendant guilty, when the offence charged was punishable with death, to which he answered that he was opposed to capital punishment on principle; it was held error to sustain the challenge on such answer, the court, Murray, C.J., saying: "There is an important difference between conscience and principle. Conscience is defined by Webster to be 'internal or self-knowledge, or judgment of right and wrong, or the faculty, power, or principle within us, which decides on the lawfulness or unlawfulness of our own actions or affections, and instantly approves or condemns them; conscience is called by some writers the moral sense, and considered as an original faculty of our nature.' Principle he also defines to be, in a general sense, 'the cause, source, or origin of anything; that from which a thing proceeds, as the principle of motion, the principles of action; ground foundation, that which supports an assertion, an action, or a series of actions, or of reasoning; a general truth; a law comprehending many subordinate truths, as the principles of morality, of law, of government, etc.' In the language of the learned counsel for the appellant, 'the one is the result of judgment, is tested by reason, defended by argument, and yields to the decision of an intelligent mind. The other springs from some internal source of self-knowledge, which acknowledges no superior, bows to no authority, yields to no demonstration, and is governed by no law; it ignores reason, defies argument, and is unaccountable and irresponsible to all human tests and standards: it is a law unto itself, and its scruples and its teachings are not amenable to human tribunals, but rests alone with its possessor and his God.' All writers on moral philosophy make this same distinction. In fact, in very many cases conscience and principle have no connection whatever, and a man may be opposed on principle to what he conscientiously believes to be right." People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 140.

1. Conscious of what he is Doing.—A charge of the lower court as follows: "If he (the prisoner) had power of mind enough to be conscious of what he was doing at the time, then he was responsible to the law for that act," was held not to be error, the court, Agnew, C.J., saying: "It is contended this language was incorrect, and was liable to mislead the jury, because the prisoner might be conscious of what act he was doing, and yet, in consequence of mental disability or disease, be incapable of refraining from its commission. But the charge has a plain English meaning, referring to the nature of the act, and when taken in connection with other parts of the charge, this portion is not susceptible of misconstruction. All the judge said referred plainly not to the mere act, but to the prisoner's consciousness of what he did as a crime. The phrase 'conscious of what he was doing' is idiomatic, and is understood to mean the real nature and true character of the act as a crime, and not to the mere act itself. As used by the judge in connection with what else he said, it was not contradictory or misleading. A memorable instance of this idiomatic use of the word 'what' is found in the language of our Saviour on the cross, when He said 'Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do!' Clearly the Jews knew well that they were crucifying Jesus, but their darkened minds were unconscious of the great crime they were committing." Brown v. Com., 78 Pa. St. 122.

2. Desty's Cr. L. § 33. See R. v. Wollaston, 26 L. T. N. S. 403; People v. Dohring, 59 N. Y. 374; People v. Bransby, 32 N. Y. 525; State v. Beck, 1 Hill (S. Car.), 363; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 190; State v. Matthews, 20 Mo. 55; Smith v. State, 12 Ohio St. 466; Hull v. State, 22 Wis. 553; State v. Moon, 41 Wis. 684; Dodge v. Brittain, Meigs (Tenn.), 34; Wilson v. State, 45 Tex. 76; R. v. Dead, 2 C. & K. 957; R. v.

Banks, 8 C. & P. 574; R. v. Meredith, 8 C. & P. 589; R. v. Martin, 2 Moody C. C. 123; R. v. Wollaston, 26 L. T. R. 403.

Definition.—To will or to consent is an operation of the mind, and implies positive mental action, and when these words are used as the ground of responsibility for any given act, their meaning is the same. It is the quo animo of the act. Consenting is to be willing, as a condition of the mind.

Mr. Pollock, in his recent work on Torts, p. 139 et seq., says:

Limits of Consent.—"Wilful hurt is not excused by consent or assent if it has no reasonable object. Thus if a man licenses another to beat him, not only does this not prevent the assault from being a punishable offence, but the better opinion is that it does not deprive the party beaten of his right of action. On this principle prize-fights and the like 'are unlawful even when entered into by agreement and without anger or mutual ill-will.' 'Whenever two persons go out to strike each other, and do so, each is guilty of an assault.' The reason is said to be that such acts are against the peace, or tend to breaches of the peace. But inasmuch as even the slightest direct application of force, if not justified, was in the language of pleading vi et armis and contra pacem, something more than usual must be meant by this expression. The distinction seems to be that agreement will not justify the wilful causing or endeavoring to cause appreciable bodily harm for the mere pleasure of the parties or others. Boxing with properly padded gloves is lawful, because in the usual course of things harmless. Fighting with the bare fist is not. Football is a lawful pastime, though many kicks are given and taken in it; a kicking match is not. Single stick or playing with blunt sabres in the accustomed manner is lawful, because the players mean no hurt to one another, and take such order by the use of masks and pads that no hurt worth speaking of is likely. A duel with sharp swords after the manner of German students is not lawful, though there be no personal enmity between the men, and though the conditions be such as to exclude danger to life or limb. It seems to be what is called a question of mixed law and fact whether a particular action or contest involves such intention to do real hurt that consent or assent will not justify it. Neglect of usual precautions in any pastime known to involve danger would be evidence of wrongful intention, but not conclusive evidence.

"This question was incidentally considered by several of the judges in the recent case of R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534, where the majority of the court held that mere voluntary presence at an unlawful fight is not necessarily punishable as taking part in an assault, but there was no difference of opinion as to a prize-fight being unlawful, or all persons actually aiding and abetting therein being guilty of assault, notwithstanding that the principals fight by mutual consent. The court had not, of course, to decide anything as to civil liability, but some passages in the judgments are material. Cave, J., said: 'The true view is, I think, that a blow struck in anger, or which is likely or is intended to do corporal hurt, is an assault, but that a blow struck in sport, and not likely nor intended to cause bodily harm, is not an assault, and that, an assault being a breach of the peace and unlawful, the consent of the person struck is immaterial. If this view is correct, a blow struck in a prize fight is clearly an assault; but playing with single-sticks or wrestling do not involve an assault, nor does boxing with gloves in the ordinary way.' Stephen, J., said: 'When one person is indicted for inflicting personal injury upon another, the consent of the person who sustains the injury is no defence to the person who inflicts the injury, if the injury is of such a nature, or is inflicted under such circumstances, that its infliction is injurious to the public as well as to the person injured. . . . In cases where life and limb are exposed to no serious danger in the common course of things, I think that consent is a defence to a charge of assault, even when considerable force is used, as for instance in cases of wrestling, single-stick, sparring with gloves, football, and the like; but in all cases the question whether consent does or does not take from the application of force to another its illegal character is a question of degree depending upon circumstances.' These opinions seem equally applicable to the rule of civil responsibility.

Extended Meaning of "Volenti Non Fit Injuria."—"Trials of strength and skill in such pastimes as those above mentioned afford, when carried on within lawful bounds, the best illustration of the principle by which the maxim volenti non fit injuria is enlarged beyond its literal meaning. A man cannot complain of harm (within the limits we have mentioned) to the chances of which he has exposed himself with knowledge and of his free-will. Thus in the case of two men fencing or playing at single-stick, volenti non fit injuria would be assigned by most lawyers as the governing rule, yet the words must be forced. It is not the will of one player that the other should hit him; his object is to be hit as seldom as possible. But he is content that the other shall hit him as much as by fair-play he can; and in that sense the striking is not against his will. Therefore the 'assault' of the school of arms is no assault in law. Still less is there an actual consent if the fact is an accident, not a necessary incident, of what is being done; as where in the course of a cricket-match a player or spectator is struck by the ball. I suppose it has never occurred to any one that legal wrong is done by such an accident even to a spectator who is taking no part in the game. So if two men are fencing, and one of the foils breaks, and the broken end, being thrown off with some force, hits a bystander, no wrong is done to him. Such, too, is the case put in the Indian Penal Code of a man who stands near another cutting wood with a hatchet, and is struck by the head flying off. It may be said that these examples are trivial. They are so, and for that reason appropriate. They show that the principle is constantly at work, and that we find little about it in our books just because it is unquestioned in common-sense as well as in law.

The consentor must be capable of giving consent.<sup>1</sup>

Relation of these Cases to Inevitable Accident.—"Many cases of this kind seem to fall as naturally under the exception of inevitable accident, if that exception is allowed to the extent contended for above. But there is, we conceive, this distinction, that where the plaintiff has voluntarily put himself in the way of risk the defendant is not bound to disprove negligence. If I choose to stand near a man using an axe, he may be a good woodman or not; but I cannot (it is submitted) complain of an accident because a more skilled woodman might have avoided it. A man dealing with explosives is bound, as regards his neighbor's property, to diligence and more than diligence. But if I go and watch a firework-maker for my own amusement, and the shop is blown up, it seems I shall have no cause of action, even if he was handling his materials unskillfully. This, or even more, is implied in the decision in Hott v. Wilkes, 3 B. & Ald 304, where it was held that one who trespassed in a wood, having notice that spring guns were set there, and was shot by a spring-gun, could not recover. The maxim non fit injuria was expressly held applicable: 'he voluntarily exposes to the mischief which has happened. The case gave rise to much public excitement, and led to an alteration in the law, but it has not been doubted by subsequent authorities that on the facts as they came before the court, it was well decided. The point of negligence was expressly negatived by the pleadings, the decision is an authority that if a man goes out of his way to a dangerous action or thing, he must take the risk as it is. And this appears to be material in regard to the attempt made by the defendant to bring under this principle the case of Hott v. Wilkes, and noticed as an exception and by reason of inevitable accident." Holmes v. Mather, L. R. 10 Q. B. 267; Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R. 1 Ex. 287.

1. 1 Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) 373; Hadden v. People, 25 N. Y. 373; Insane Persons.—1 Whar. Cr. L. (9th Ed.) § 146.

On an indictment for rape, the defendant proved that the prosecutrix was a girl of a half years old, and that even when she was six weeks old she was born with a wrong in her mind; that she was incapable of understanding anything that was said to her, but that she could walk and down stairs by herself; that if she was in a chair by any one she would stay there till night, passing her evening and water in the chair; that if told to do so she would do so; that she could not communicate to her friends what she wanted; that she could feed herself a little, but that she was obliged to be dressed and undressed, and that she was unable to do any work. It was proved that the father of the prisoner, on returning home one day, saw the prisoner through the window of the sitting-room, and saw the prisoner lying on the floor, and the prosecutrix on a couch in the room, and that she had been placed by her sister. The prisoner then sent on an errand, and who desired the prisoner to lie on the couch till her return. On going into the room he found the prisoner standing up at the head of the bed, buttoning up his trousers, and the prosecutrix was lying quietly on the couch. There were no external signs of violence on the person of the prosecutrix. The learned judge told the jury that if the prisoner had connected

In each of these articles the word "consent" means a consent freely given by a rational and sober person, so situated as to be able to form a rational opinion upon the matter to which he consents.

Consent is said to be given freely when it is not procured by force, fraud, or threats of whatever nature.<sup>1</sup> the prosecutrix by force, and if she was in such an idiotic state that she did not know what the prisoner was doing, and if the prisoner was aware of her being in that state, they might find him guilty of rape. But if from animal instinct she yielded to the prisoner without resistance, or if the prisoner from her state and condition had reason to think she was consenting, they ought to acquit him. The jury found the prisoner guilty of an attempt at rape. Held, that the prisoner was rightly convicted. Reg. v. Fletcher, Law Rep. 1 C. C. 39, explained and distinguished. R. v. Barratt, L. R. 2 C. C. 81.

Upon an indictment for rape there must be some evidence that the act was without the consent of the woman, even where she is an idiot. In such a case, where there were no appearances of force having been used to the woman, and the only evidence of the connection was the prisoner's own admission, coupled with the statement that it was done with her consent, the court held that there was no evidence for the jury. R. v. Fletcher, L. R. 1 C. C. 39.

Intoxicated Persons.—Hadden v. People, 25 N. Y. 373; Com. v. Burke, 105 Mass. 376.

Children.—At common law a child under ten years cannot give consent to any criminal intercourse so as to deprive that intercourse of criminality, but she can give such consent as to render the attempt no assault. R. v. Cockburn, 3 Cox C. C. 543; R. v. Read, 2 C. & K. 957; R. v. Roadley, 14 Cox C. C. 463; State v. Pickett, 11 Nev. 255; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 754; Smith v. State, 12 Ohio St. 466. Compare Com. v. Roosnell, 143 Mass. 32; Hays v. People, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 352; People v. McDonald, 9 Mich. 150; Givens v. Com., 29 Gratt. (Va.) 830.

The presumption of the law is that a female child under ten years is incapable of giving consent to an act of carnal knowledge, or of assault with intent to commit the act; but the presumption may be rebutted by proof that she understood the nature of the act committed or intended. O'Meara v. State, 17 Ohio St. 515; Moore v. State, 17 Ohio St. 521.

A child of nine years cannot consent to his own abduction. Com. v. Nicker- son, 5 Allen (Mass.), 518; U. S. v. Ancarola, 1 Fed. Repr. 676. See title ABDUCTION.

Public Welfare.—An indictment for inflicting actual bodily harm is sustainable by evidence that a man, knowing that he has an infectious disease, has intimacy with a girl without informing her of the fact, by means of which the disease was communicated to her. Reg. v. Sinclair, 13 Cox C. C. 28; s. p., Reg. v. Bennett, 4 F. & F. 1105.

Excuses only the Act Consented to.—The performance of the sexual act, even with the consent of the woman, may be so brutal on the part of the man as to amount to an assault and battery. Richie v. State, 58 Ind. 355. See Don Moran v. People, 25 Mich. 356; Com. v. Stratton, 114 Mass. 303; R. v. Sinclair, 13 Cox C. C. 28; R. v. Bennett, 4 F. & F. 1105; R. v. Flattery, 2 L. R. Q. B. Div. 410.

Accessory.—See Am. & Eng. Encyclo. of L., vol. i. p. 64.

Deceits.—See Am. & Eng. Encyclo. of L., vol. i. p. 65, vol. ii. 671.

1. Fraud.—See 1 Am. & Eng. Encyclo. of L. 805; 1 Bish. Cr. L. (7th Ed.) § 261a; State v. Shepard, 7 Conn. 54; People v. Crosswill, 13 Mich. 427; People v. Metcalf, 1 Wheel. C. C., note, p. 381; Huber v. State, 57 Ind. 341.

A master of a workhouse was indicted for disposing of the dead bodies of paupers for the purpose of dissection and for gain to himself. On the death of the paupers he had caused their bodies to be shown to their relatives in coffins, and every appearance of regular funerals to be gone through; whereas, just before the funeral, other coffins had been substituted, and the bodies were afterwards taken to a hospital for dissection. The relatives had not, in accordance with the proviso in sect. 7 of 2 & 3 Will. 4. c. 75, required that the bodies should be interred without anatomical examination; but the jury found that he had caused the appearance of funerals to be gone through with a view to prevent the relatives making such requirement, and that they would have so required but for the supposed funerals. Held, that as, in fact, the relatives had not made the requirement which they had a right to make, the master of

1. Right to Consent to Bodily Injury for Surgical Purposes.—Every one has a right to consent to the infliction of any bodily injury, in the nature of a surgical operation, upon himself, or upon any child under his care and too young to exercise a reasonable discretion in such a matter, but such consent does not discharge the person performing the operation from the duties hereinafter defined in relation thereto.<sup>1</sup>

2. Surgical Operation on Person Incapable of Assent.—If a person is in such circumstances as to be incapable of giving consent to a surgical operation, or to the infliction of other bodily harm of a similar nature and for similar objects, it is not a crime to perform such operation or to inflict such bodily harm upon him without his consent, or in spite of his resistance.<sup>2</sup>

3. Right to Consent to Bodily Injury Short of Maim.—Every one has a right to consent to the infliction upon himself of bodily harm not amounting to a maim. A maim is bodily harm whereby a man is deprived of the use of any member of his body, or of any sense which he can use in fighting, or by the loss of which he is generally and permanently weakened; but a bodily injury is not a maim merely because it is a disfigurement.<sup>3</sup>

4. No Right to Consent to Infliction of Death.—No one has a right to consent to the infliction upon himself of death, or of an injury likely to cause death, in any case (other than those mentioned the workhouse was protected as a person having the lawful custody of the bodies, and was not therefore guilty of the offence charged. R. v. Feist, Dears. & B. C. C. 59; 8 Cox C. C. 18.

• Rape can only be committed by force, if the woman consent, in the belief that an illegal marriage is legal, upon the fraudulent assertion of the pretended husband, the latter will not be guilty of rape. State v. Murphy, 6 Ala. 765; s. c. 41 Am. Dec. 79. See People v. Quin, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 128; Lewis v. State, 30 Ala. 54; Don Moran v. People, 25 Mich. 357; Whittaker v. State, 50 Wis. 519; Com. v. Childs, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 391; Wyatt v. State, 2 Swan (Tenn.), 364; R. v. Rosinski, Moody C. C. 19; R. v. Nichol, R. & R. 130; R. v. Jackson, 8 C. & P. 265.

1. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 144; Pollock on Torts, 139; R. v. Spiller, 5 C. & P. 333; R. v. Long, 4 C. & P. 398; R. v. Whitehead, 3 C. & K. 202; R. v. Williamson, 3 C. & P. 635; R. v. Senior, 1 Moody C. C. 346.

Where the wife of the defendant, being afflicted with a dangerous disease, was carried by him to a distance from his residence and left under the care of the plaintiff as a surgeon, and after the lapse of some weeks the plaintiff performed an operation on her for the cure of the disease, soon after which she died, it was held, in an action by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover compensation for his services, that the performance of the operation was within the scope of the plaintiff's authority, if in his judgment it was necessary or expedient, and that it was not incumbent on him to prove that it was necessary or proper under the circumstances, or that before he performed it he gave notice to the defendant, or that it would have been dangerous to the wife to wait until notice could be given to the defendant. McClallen v. Adams, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 333.

2. Illustrations.—(1) A is rendered insensible by an accident which renders it necessary to amputate one of his limbs before he recovers his senses. The amputation of his limb without his consent is not an offence.

(2) If the accident made him mad, the amputation, in spite of his resistance, would be no offence.

(3) B is drowning and insensible. A, in order to save his life, pulls B out of the water with a hook which injures him. This is no offence. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 145.

3. It is maim to strike out a front tooth. It is not maim to cut off a man's nose. Castration is a maim. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 145; Co. Litt. 127; People v. Clough, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 351.

supra), or to consent to the infliction upon himself of bodily harm amounting to a maim, for any purpose injurious to the public.<sup>1</sup>

5. No Right to Consent to Injury Constituting a Breach of the Peace.—No one has a right to consent to the infliction of bodily harm upon himself in such a manner as to amount to a breach of the peace, or in a prize-fight or other exhibition calculated to collect together disorderly persons.<sup>2</sup>

6. Consent to Being Put in Danger.—It is uncertain to what extent any person has a right to consent to his being put in danger of death or bodily harm by the act of another.<sup>3</sup>

7. Evidence.—The defendant is not obliged to show consent; but the burden of proof is upon the prosecution to establish dissent.<sup>4</sup>

CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES. See DAMAGES; EMINENT DOMAIN.

CONSIDERATION. See CONTRACTS.

CONSIGNATION.—"Consignation is a deposit which the debtor makes of the thing that he owes into the hands of a third person, and under the authority of a court of justice."—French law.<sup>5</sup>

CONSIGNED.—"To consign, in the mercantile law, is ordinarily to send or transmit goods to a merchant or factor for sale, and a

1. Illustrations.—(1) A and B agree to fight a duel together with deadly weapons. If either is killed or wounded, his consent is immaterial.

(2) A gets B to cut off A's right hand, in order that A may avoid labor and to be enabled to beg. Both A and B commit an offence. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 146; 1 Inst. 107, a, b. Mr. Stephens says: "I think the qualification in the article 'for any purpose injurious to the public,' must be supplied. It seems absurd to say that if A gets a dentist to pull out a front tooth of A's because it is unsightly, though not diseased, A and the dentist both commit a misdemeanor. When it was an essential part of a common soldier's drill to bite cartridges, I believe that it was not an uncommon military offence to get the front teeth pulled out, and this would, I presume, be an offence at common law also." See Com. v. Parker, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 263; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 396; McAfee v. State, 31 Ga. 411.

2. Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 146; Pollock on Torts, 139; Foster, 260; 1 East, 270; R. v. Billingham, 2 C. & P. 234; R. v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537; Com. v. Wood, 11 Gray (Mass.), 85. Compare Duncan v. Com., 6 Dana (Ky.), 295; Com. v. Welsh, 7 Gray (Mass.), 324; Com. v. Barrett, 108 Mass. 302, Chamber v. State, 14 Ohio St. 437.

3. Illustration.—A, with B's consent, wheels B in a barrow along a tight rope at a great height from the ground. C hires A and B to do so, D, E, and F pay money to C to see the performance. B is killed. Quære, are A, C, D, E, and F, or any and which of them, guilty of manslaughter? Steph. Dig. Cr. L. (Am. Ed.) 146. Mr. Stephens says: "There is, so far as I know, no authority on this point, but the principle on which prize-fights have been held to be illegal might include such a case. Such an exhibition might also, under circumstances, be a public nuisance. To collect a large number of people to see a man put his life in jeopardy is a less coarse and boisterous proceeding than a prize-fight, but is it less immoral?"

4. Pollard v. State, 2 Iowa, 567; Conyers v. State, 50 Ga. 103; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 686.

5. See 1 Pothier's Obligations, 376. For distinction between the French consignation and tender in our law, see Weld v. Hadley, 1 N. H. (Adams) 304.

Though not an actual payment, the consignation is equivalent thereto. To be valid, it ought to be preceded by offers of payment, which place the creditor in demeure. It discharges the debtor. The augmentation or diminution in value of what is consigned enures to the profit or loss of the creditor, if the consignation is valid. Index to Pothier's Obligations, Lond. Ed. 1806.

consignee is consequently the person to whom they are consigned, shipped, or otherwise transmitted." <sup>1</sup>

CONSIGNOR AND CONSIGNEE. See CARRIERS.

CONSOLIDATE.—To consolidate means something more than rearrange or redivide. In a general sense it means to unite into one mass or body, as to consolidate the forces of an army, or various funds. In parliamentary usage, to consolidate two bills is to unite them into one. In law, to consolidate benefices is to combine them into one. <sup>2</sup>

CONSPIRACY. See CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY.

1. Gillespie v. Winberg, 4 Daly's N. Y. Com. Pl. 321.

The radical meaning of "consign" is to transfer or deliver as a charge or trust. When used in connection with a vessel, it ordinarily refers to the goods shipped by her, for the vessel herself is in charge of the master, who is, by his office, clothed with power to do whatever is essential to his employer's interests. But both vessel and cargo may be consigned to a person at the port of destination; or the vessel alone may be consigned. "And where a person is authorized to take charge of her upon her arrival, to collect the freight, pay all her expenses, obtain a cargo for her, and who, by virtue of this authority, enters and clears the vessel at the customs, he may, I think, be termed the consignee, for she is for that purpose and to that extent consigned to him."

Ship's Husband.—Where duties of this description are discharged at the home port or place where the vessel belongs, by a person appointed by the owners, he is known by the maritime term of the "ship's husband." Story's Agency, § 35; Abbott's Shipping, Part 1, c. 3, p. 105, 8th Lond. Ed.; 1 Parsons on Ship. & Ad. 109. From opinion by Daly, C. J., Gillespie v. Winberg, 4 Daly's N. Y. Com. Pl. 321.

New York Pilot Laws.—N. Y. Laws of 1857, p. 502, ch. 243, providing that pilotage shall be paid by the master, "owners, or consignees," where the master refuses to take a pilot upon coming into the port of New York by way of Sandy Hook," applies to the ship's husband who has just been described.

N. Y. Laws 1853, p. 925, ch. 567, § 18, (of which said Act of 1857 is amendatory), providing that the pilotage shall be payable by the master, owner, consignee, or agent clearing the vessel, means by "consignee" the consignee of the vessel, and not of the goods. Gillespie v. Winberg, 4 Daly's N. Y. Com. Pl. 321.

Insurance.—Goods were shipped to B, on whom bills were drawn in favor of the general agent of the consignor. These bills, and also the bill of lading, were sent to C (the general agent), with the request that they should be sent on to B if that B might insure. But B declined to receive the cargo or to accept the bills drawn on him, whereupon C drew a policy of insurance in his own name, and informed the consignor of the fact, the consignor approving of his conduct. In an action by C on the policy, it was held that C was a consignee within the meaning of 28 Geo. 3, c. 56, and that the policy was therefore valid.

2. Ind. Dist. of Fairview v. Durland, 45 Iowa, 56.

Consolidated Company.—The words "consolidate" and "consolidation," as used in statutes authorizing and ratifying the union or combination of several railroad corporations into one, have acquired a recognized judicial construction, which imports that all the companies are dissolved and merged into one new company. "When the rights, franchises, and effects of two or more corporations are, by legal authority and agreement of the parties, combined and united into one whole, and committed to a single corporation, the stockholders of which are composed of those (so far as they choose to become such) of the companies thus agreeing, this is in law and according to common understanding a consolidation of such companies; whether such single corporation, called the consolidated company, be a new one then created, or one of the original companies continuing in existence, with only larger rights, capacities, and property." Meyer v. Johnston, 64 Ala. 656.

"Consolidation" and "stay of proceedings" distinguished. Lee v. Tp. of Kearney, 13 Vr. (N. J.) 544.

CONSTABLES. See POLICE.

CONSTITUTION.—A constitution is the form of government, delineated by the mighty hand of the people, in which certain first principles of fundamental laws are established.<sup>1</sup> According to the common acceptation of the word in the United States, it may be said to be an agreement of the people, in their individual capacities, reduced to writing, establishing and fixing certain principles for the government of themselves;<sup>2</sup> the organization of the government, distributing its powers among bodies of magistracy and declaring their rights, and the liberties reserved and retained by the people.<sup>3</sup> The constitution of an American State is the supreme, organized, and written will of the people acting in convention, and assigning to the different departments of the government their respective powers.<sup>4</sup>

1. Vanhorne's Case v. Dorrance, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 308; Cohen v. Hoff, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 501.

2. State v. Parkhurst, 4 Halst. (N. J.) 443.

3. French v. State, 52 Miss. 762.

In State v. McCann, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 9, the court says, quoting Cooley on Const. Lim.: "In our American constitutional law, the word 'constitution,' is used in a restricted sense, as implying the written instrument agreed upon by the people of the Union or of any one of the States, as the absolute rule of action and decision for all department, and officers of the government, in respect to all points covered by it, which must control until it shall be changed by the authority which established it, and in opposition to which any act or regulation of any such department or officer, or even the people themselves, will be altogether void."

The constitution provides a class of officers, generally of the ministerial and executive class, with whose names and general functions the people are familiar, without a specification of their duties; thus: A State treasurer and auditor of accounts shall be elected, who shall hold their office for four years. Manifestly the convention had in view officers whose duties and functions had in general been defined by law, with which the people were familiar, and which were shadowed forth and symbolized by their names. When the people ratified the constitution which declared that they should quadriennially elect an auditor and treasurer of State, and every two years a coroner, sheriff, etc., they distinctly associated the offices with the functions and privileges which before that pertained by law respectively to them. It would be too narrow a view to consider the framers of the constitution as referring alone to those functions incident to the sheriff at common law. For many of the privileges and duties conferred by the common law and ancient statutes never belonged to him in this State, and would be wholly unsuited to our society. . . . We must suppose, when the constitution refers the election of this officer to the people, without a word to indicate the nature of his functions, or descriptive of them, other than the name itself imports, it must be implied that it means the sheriff, with such general attributes and authority as had been theretofore connected with the office, and declared in both the written and unwritten law. French v. State, 52 Miss. 762.

4. Taylor v. Gov'r, 1 Ark. 27.

"A constitution is an instrument of government, made and adopted by the people for practical purposes connected with the common business and wants of human life." People v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 486.

"A constitution is defined by Judge Story to be 'a fundamental law or basis of government.' It is established by the people in their original sovereign capacity, to promote their own happiness, and permanently to secure their rights, property, independence, and common welfare." McRoan v. Devries, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 198.

"The constitution of the United States is, in its more essential and fundamental character, a tripartite instrument. The parties to it are the States, the people, and the United States." In re Booth, 3 Wis. 96.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. (See also CITIZENSHIP; EMINENT DOMAIN; EXTRADITION; HABEAS CORPUS; INTERSTATE COMMERCE; JEOPARDY; OFFICERS; PARDON; POLICE POWER; STATES; STATUTES; TAXATION.)

Definitions, 670.

Establishment and Amendment of Constitutions, 671.

Power of the Judiciary to Determine the Constitutionality of Statutes, 673.

Construction and Interpretation of Constitutions, 678.

Separate Provinces of Departments of Government, 681.

Encroachments of Legislative on Judicial, 681.

Encroachments of Judicial on Legislative, 684.

Encroachments on Executive Department, 685.

Executive Powers, 686.

Nature and Boundaries of Legislative Power, 689.

Legislative Control of Municipal Corporations, 692.

Legislation Regulating Courts, Judges, and Jurisdiction, 693.

Local, Special, and Class Legislation, 695.

Delegation of Powers, 698.

Powers of Congress, 701.

Constitutional Rules of State Comity, 707.

Rights of Citizens of Other States, Sister State Judgments, 710.

Civil Rights and their Guaranties, 713.

"Due Process of Law," 714.

Searches and Seizures, 719.

Jury Trial (Civil), 719.

Liberty of Conscience, 724.

Right to Obtain Justice without Purchase, 725.

Right to Bear Arms, 726.

Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, 726.

Constitutional Guaranties in Criminal Cases, 729.

Presentment or Indictment, 729.

Trial by Jury, 731.

Witnesses and Evidence, 734.

Right to be Present at Trial, 735.

Cruel and Unusual Punishments, 736.

Ex Post Facto Laws, 736.

Constitutional Limitations on the Taxing Power, 738.

Laws Impairing the Obligation of Contracts, 741.

Contracts of the State with Corporations, 741.

Legislative Contracts with Private Persons, 748.

Legislative Interference with Contracts between Individuals, 751.

Remedies and Remedial Process, 753.

Retroactive Laws, 757.

The Invalid Classes of Retroactive Laws, 758.

The Valid Classes of Retroactive Laws, 760.

1. Definitions.—In its modern sense, a constitution comprises the principles or fundamental laws which govern a state or other organized body of men, and are embodied in written documents or implied in the institutions and usages of the country or society.<sup>1</sup>

1. Webster sub voce; 1 Bouv. Inst. 9; Duer's Const. Jur. 26.

Constitution.—The fundamental law of a free country which characterizes the organism of the country and secures the rights of the citizen and determines his main duties as a freeman. Bouvier's Law Dict.; 1 Story on the Const. § 339; Cooley's Const. Lim. 2.

A national constitution "prescribes the order of succession to the throne; or, in a republic, the mode of electing a president. It enumerates the prerogatives of the king or other chief magistrate. It regulates the composition of the council of state, and of the upper and lower houses of the assembly when the assembly is thus divided; the mode in which a seat is acquired in the upper house, whether by succession, by nomination, or by tenure of office; the mode of electing the members of the house of representatives; the powers and privileges of the assembly as a whole, and of the individuals who compose it; and the machinery of law-making. It deals also with the ministers, their responsibility, and their respective spheres of action;

According to the American usage, the word "constitution" is used to designate the written instrument agreed upon by the people of the Union or of a particular State, as the absolute rule of action and decision for all departments and officers of the government in respect to all the points covered by it, which must control until it shall be changed by the authority which established it, and in opposition to which any act or ordinance of any such department or officer is null and void.<sup>1</sup> The term "constitutional" means that which is consonant to, and agrees with, the constitution.<sup>2</sup> An "unconstitutional law" is therefore one which violates the provisions or principles of the supreme law of the land or of that constitution by which the particular law-making body is more immediately governed.<sup>3</sup> Constitutional jurisprudence is that branch of the science of law which treats of constitutions, their establishment, construction, and interpretation, and of the validity of legal enactments as tested by the criterion of conformity to the fundamental law.

2. Establishment and Amendment of Constitutions.—The people of the several Territories may form for themselves State constitutions whenever enabling acts for that purpose are passed by Congress, but only in the manner allowed by such enabling acts, and through the action of such persons as the enabling acts shall clothe with the elective franchise to that end.<sup>4</sup> The people of a State have the government offices and their organization; the armed forces of the state, their control, and the mode in which they are recruited; the relation, if any, between church and state; the judges and their immunities; local self-government; the relations between the mother country and its colonies and dependencies. It describes the portions of the earth's surface over which the sovereignty of the state extends; and defines the persons who are subject to its authority. It comprises, therefore, rules for the ascertainment of nationality and for regulating the acquisition of a new nationality by naturalization. It declares the rights of the State over its subjects in respect of their liability to military conscription, to service as jurymen, and otherwise. It declares, on the other hand, the rights of the subject to be assisted and protected by the State, and of that narrower class of subjects which enjoys full civic rights to hold public offices and to elect their representatives to the assembly or parliament of the nation." Holland on Jurisprudence, 249. See 1 Austin on Jurisprudence (Campbell's Ed.), § 248 et seq.

1. Cooley's Const. Lim. 3; 1 Story on the Const. § 338 et seq.

2. Bouvier's Law Dict.

3. Cooley's Const. Lim. 3. See 1 Austin on Jur. (Campbell's Ed.) § 248.

4. Cooley's Const. Lim. 30. When a constitution has been adopted by the people of a Territory preparatory to admission as a State, and Congress prescribes certain changes and additions to be adopted by the legislature as a part of the constitution, and such changes and additions are declared to be fundamental conditions of the admission of the State, and the legislature accepts them, and the State is thus admitted, they thereby become a part of the constitution and binding as such, although not submitted to the people for their approval. Brittle v. People, 2 Neb. 198.

But in general a constitution is not operative until its adoption by the people, and does not change any rights or duties dependent upon any territorial act until it has received such sanction. Parker v. Smith, 3 Minn. 240. See Secombe v. Kittleson, 29 Minn. 555.

Ordinance of 1787 superseded.—The ordinance of 1787 for the government of the Northwest Territory was superseded by the adoption of the United States constitution and the admission to the Union of the States formed from that Territory, in so far as any of its provisions conflict with the Federal or State constitutions. Strader v. Graham, 10 How. (U. S.) 82; Woodman v. Kilbourn Mfg. Co., 1 Abb. (U. S.) 158.

the right to alter or revise their constitution in a proper and manner to any extent they may choose so long as they deny allegiance to the United States, nor abolish the republican form of government, nor otherwise invade the provisions of the Federal constitution.<sup>1</sup> But a State constitution can only be changed by the people in convention, or in the mode prescribed in the instrument itself; and if the latter mode is adopted, the requisition of the constitution must be observed.<sup>2</sup> A constitutional convention cannot take from the people their sovereign right to ratify or reject the constitution or ordinance framed by it, and cannot infuse life or vigor into its work before ratification by the people.<sup>3</sup> It generally requires a majority of the electors of the State to ratify an amendment to the constitution. A constitutional amendment does not become operative upon its casting in its favor of the necessary majority of votes, but only after the due promulgation of the result.<sup>4</sup>

Connecticut Ins. Co. v. Cross, 18 Wis. 109.

So of the acts of Congress organizing the territorial government of Orleans. Permoli v. Municipality, 3 How. (U. S.) 589.

1. Penn v. Tollison, 26 Ark. 545. See U. S. Const. art. 4, § 4; Cooley's Const. Lim. 33; Federalist, No. 43.

2. Collier v. Frierson, 24 Ala. 100; Opinion of the Judges, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 573; In re Constitutional Convention, 14 R. I. 649; State v. Timme, 54 Wis. 318.

Bill of Rights.—A clause in the declaration of rights, in a State constitution, may be amended in the same manner as any other part of the constitution. State v. Cox, 3 Eng. (Ark.) 436.

Convention Called by Congress.—Provisions of the former State constitution of North Carolina, authorizing a call of a convention for amending the constitution, held not to exclude the power of the United States to call a convention of the people of North Carolina for the purpose of forming a constitution at a time when the State government organized under the former one had been practically superseded by acts of rebellion against the National Government. Matter of Hughes, Phill. (N. Car.) 57.

3. Wood's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 59; State v. New Orleans, 29 La. Ann. 863; Gibbes v. Railroad, 13 S. Car. 228; Jameson's Constitutional Convention, §§ 415-418; Cooley's Const. Lim. 32.

If the convention is called for the purpose of amending the constitution in a specified part, the delegates have no power to act upon and propose amendments in other parts of the constitution. Opinion of the Judges, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 573.

The constitutional convention has the inherent right of all independent governments to control its own incidental proceedings. Goodrich v. Moore, 2 Minn. 61.

Reconstruction.—The act of Congress, entitled "An act to admit the people of North Carolina, etc., to represent Congress," does not operate as a repeal or enactment of the constitutions of the States, but merely as a recognition of the fact that they had been adopted by the people. Hatch v. Burroughs, 10 Woods (U. S. Cir.), 439.

4. The whole number of votes cast at the election at which the amendment submitted may be taken as the number of electors of the State. State v. Green, 69 Ind. 505. See Green v. W. Miss. 650; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kans. 700; Dayton v. Paul, 22 Minn. 400.

The question whether or not a majority of qualified voters voted to amend the constitution, cannot be determined by action at law. Luther v. Borden, 7 (U. S.) 1. See State v. Starling, 120 (S. Car.) 120. Compare State v. Borden, 4 Mo. 303.

5. Sewell v. State, 15 Tex. 400; State v. Morgan City, 32 La. 400; People v. Norton, 59 Barb. 169.

Where legislation is necessary to give effect to a constitutional provision, laws that were in existence at the time the new constitution was adopted remain in force until legislation is had to amend the provisions of the new constitution. Provisors v. Stout, 9 W. Va. 7; Indiana Co. v. Agricultural Soc. 357.

An amendment to a constitution is to be considered as if it had been adopted by the original instrument, but rather as

3. Power of the Judiciary to Determine the Constitutionality of Statutes.—It is the right, and consequently the duty, of the judicial tribunals to determine whether a legislative enactment drawn in question in a suit pending before them is repugnant to the constitution of the United States or of the State, and if so found, to declare it inoperative and void.<sup>1</sup> But every presumption and ingous to a codicil or a second deed, altering or rescinding the first, which is referred to only to see how far the first must yield to give full effect to the last. The legal fiction regarding an amendment to a pleading as if inserted in the first instance does not apply. University v. McIver, 72 N. Car. 76.

1. Caldier v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 386; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 18; Bowdoinham v. Richmond, 6 Me. 112; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Woart v. Winnick, 3 N. H. 473; Dow v. Norris, 4 N. H. 16; Hill v. Sunderland, 3 Vt. 507; Stanford v. Barry, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 314; Holden v. James, 11 Mass. 396; Norwich v. Commissioners, 13 Pick. 60; King v. Bank, 15 Mass. 447; Derby Turnpike Co. v. Parks, 10 Conn. 522; Gosben v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 225; People v. Foot, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 58, Ex parte McCollum, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 550; Stoddart v. Smith, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 355; Moore v. Houston, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 169; Eakin v. Raub, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 330; Cronise v. Cronise, 54 Pa. St. 355; Vanuxem v. Hazelhurst, 1 South. (N. J.) 192; Norris v. Trustees, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 7; Crenshaw v. State River Co., 6 Rand. (Va.) 245; Dyer v. Bridge Co., 2 Port. (Ala.) 303; Bank of St. Mary's v. State, 12 Ga. 475; Cotton v. Commissioners, 6 Fla. 610; Bliss v. Commonwealth, 1 Lat. (Ky.) 90; Tate v. Bell, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 202; Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, 1 Ohio St. 77; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Dawson v. Shaver, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 206; Thomas v. Commissioners, 5 Ind. 4; Phoebe v. Jay, 1 Breese (Ill.), 209. See 1 Story on the Const. §§ 373-396.

Origin of the Power.—"The administration of public justice is referred to the courts. To perform this duty, the first requisite is to ascertain the facts, and the next to determine the law that is applicable. The constitution is the fundamental law of the State, in opposition to which any other law, or any direction or decree, must be inoperative and void. If therefore such other law, direction, or decree seems to be applicable to the facts, but on comparison with the fundamental law it is found to be in conflict, the court, in declaring what the law of the case is, must necessarily determine its invalidity, and thereby in effect annul it." Cooley's Const. Lim.

45. See De Chastellux v. Fairchild, 15 Pa. St. 18; Bates v. Kimball, 2 Chip. (Vt.) 77; 1 Story on the Const. § 532.

It appears that it is within the province of the courts to declare that a general law governing certain matters might be passed by the legislature, although such never has been. Ex parte Pritz, 9 Iowa, 30; Opinion of the Judges, 49 Mo. 216. But the courts have no means and no power to avoid the effects of non-action by the legislature. Myers v. English, 9 Cal. 341.

Legislature Not to Judge.—The legislative branch of the government cannot, by a statutory enactment, declare an act of its own to be either constitutional or void, though it may repeal any law, subject to the rights which may have been acquired under it if it was constitutional when enacted. In re Lafayette Co., 2 Chand. (Wis.) 212.

Inferior Courts.—A court ad nisi prius will not declare an act unconstitutional unless convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of its invalidity. Sarony v. Lithographic Co., 16 Repr. (U. S. Cir.) 8; White v. Kendrick, 1 Brevard (S. Car.), 469.

The courts of one State have power to decide on the validity of legislative acts of another State with respect to the Federal Constitution, when the question arises in a case within their jurisdiction. Stoddart v. Smith, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 355.

Presumption from Lapse of Time.—The fact that statutes of a certain class have long been in existence and considered constitutional does not prevent the court from declaring them invalid. Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; Sadler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311. Compare Chambers v. Fisk, 22 Tex. 504; State v. Bosworth, 13 Vt. 402.

Preamble.—The courts have no authority to declare a statute unconstitutional by reason of anything contained in the preamble, where the objection does not appear in the body of the statute. Sutherland v. De Leon, 1 Tex. 250; Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583.

State Constitutions, or any provisions contained in them, or amendments thereto, are inoperative and void in so far as they conflict with the constitution of the United States. Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. (U. S.) 331; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 610; New Orleans Gas-Light Co. v. Lon- tendment is in favor of the constitutionality of an act of ture, and the courts will not be justified in pronouncing unless satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of its repu the constitution.<sup>1</sup> And nothing but a clear violation of stitution—a clear usurpation of power prohibited—will w judiciary in declaring an act of the legislative departmen stitutional and void.<sup>2</sup> Still, there is reason and auth holding that if a statute is contrary to the spirit of the co and the implications necessarily drawn from it, or to t mentals of justice and good government, or to those principles of the social compact which underlie all legis enter into the framework of representative government, i power of the courts to pronounce it void.<sup>3</sup> Constitution isiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 672; Grigsby v. Peak, 57 Tex. 142; State v. Young, 29 Minn. 474.

City Ordinances, conflicting with the constitution of the State or of the United States, are invalid. Mayor v. Hussey, 21 Ga. 80; Hestonville R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 89 Pa. St. 210.

1. Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 18; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; Hartford Bridge Co. v. Union Ferry Co., 29 Conn. 210; In re Wellington, 16 Pick. 95; Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 245; Kerrigan v. Force, 68 N. Y. 381; Matter of Clinton St., 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 599; Speer v. School Directors, 50 Pa. St. 150; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; Gutman v. Virginia Iron Co., 5 W. Va. 22; Cutts v. Hardee, 38 Ga. 350; Franklin Bridge Co. v. Wood, 14 Ga. 80; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 13 Ga. 68; Carey v. Giles, 9 Ga. 253; Boston v. Cummins, 16 Ga. 102; Cheney v. Jones, 14 Fla. 587; State v. Robinson, 1 Kans. 17; Smithee v. Garth, 33 Ark. 17; Eason v. State, 6 Engl. (Ark.) 481; Brown v. Buzan, 24 Ind. 194; Allen v. Silvers, 22 Ind. 491; Lafayette v. Jenners, 10 Ind. 70; State v. Cooper, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 258; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 62 Ill. 268; Morrison v. Springer, 15 Iowa, 304; Blair v. Ridgley, 41 Mo. 63; Scott v. Smart, 1 Mann. (Mich.) 295; People v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co., 35 Cal. 606; Crowley v. State, 11 Oreg. 512; Alexander v. People, 7 Colo. 155; Cooley's Const. Lim. 182 et seq. Compare Sadler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311.

If an act may be valid or not according to the circumstances, the court would be bound to presume that such circumstances existed as would render it valid. Talbot v. Hudson, 16 Gray (Mass.), 417.

Construction of the Statute.—Whenever an act of the legislature can be so construed and applied as to avoid conflict with the constitution and give it the force of law, this will be done by the courts, although the construction so may not be the most obvious one, or the literal one. Newla 19 Ill. 376; Iowa Co. v. Web Iowa, 221; Roosevelt v. Gods (N. Y.) 533; Colwell v. Ma Co., 4 Green (N. J.), 245; Railroad, 27 Wis. 478; Dow N. H. 17; People v. Superv Y. 241; Clarke v. Rochester, Y.) 471; Cooley's Const. Lim.

If conflict with the constitution posed to arise from a peculiar tion of a statute, the interpret imperatively required, will b and the law sustained. Inkster 16 Mich. 484.

2. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pa. St. 164; People v. Railro (N. Y.) 123; Tyler v. Peop 320; Inkster v. Carver, 16 Flint River Steamboat Co., Ga. 194.

3. Regents v. Johnson, 9 (Md.) 365; Welch v. Wadswor 155; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn son v. New York, 10 Barb. ( Bowman v. Middleton, 1 Ba 252; Ham v. McClaws, 1 Ba 98; Black on Constitutional P § 177; Baltimore v. State, 15

Per contra, see Cooley's C 164, where it is said: "Nor declare a statute unconstitu void solely on the ground of oppressive provisions, or b supposed to violate the natur political rights of the citize can be shown that such injus hibited or such rights guarant tected by the constitution." People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 1 v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Road Co. v. Woodhull, 25 bare question of legislative power, and no inquiry is permissible as to the motives operating on the minds of the legislators in voting for the law.<sup>1</sup> The courts will take judicial notice of the journals of the legislative houses; and if it should appear from these records that any act did not receive the requisite majority, or that in respect to it the legislature did not follow any requirement of the constitution, or that in any other respect the act was not constitutionally adopted, the courts may act upon this evidence and adjudge the statute void.<sup>2</sup>

While the courts cannot shun the discussion of constitutional questions when fairly presented, they will not go out of their way to find such topics; they will not seek to draw in such weighty

Jewell v. Weed, 18 Minn. 272; People v. Hayden, 50 N. Y. 525; Sharpless v. Mayor of Philadelphia, 21 Pa. St. 161; Commonwealth v. McCloskey, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 374; Bridgeport v. Railroad, 15 Conn. 497; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. County Court, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 687.

The policy of the constitution, an infraction of which will justify the court in declaring a statute unconstitutional, must be manifested by its terms, fixing with precision the particular rule, and not be gathered by general inference or vague and uncertain speculation as to the unexpressed meaning of the framers. Pattison v. Yuba, 13 Cal. 175.

When an act of the legislature is plain and unambiguous, and is free from objection on constitutional grounds, the courts of the State are bound to apply and enforce it, notwithstanding objections to its policy. Leonard v. Wiseman, 31 Md. 201.

Nor are the courts at liberty to set aside a statute merely because it is absurd or unreasonable. Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194. Or because it is an unwise enactment. Merchants' Union Co. v. Brown, 18 Repr. (Iowa)

Justification Under Police Power.—Legislative powers, the exercise of which can be justified on the ground of the police power, and which are otherwise unconstitutional, can be such only as are absolutely requisite for the safety, comfort, or necessities of the public, and which the framers of the constitution, as a matter of ordinary prudence, cannot be supposed to have intended to prohibit, in the language of the prohibition. People v. Jackson Co., 9 Mich. 285. See New Orleans Gas-Light Co. v. Louisiana Ice and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650; Black Constitutional Prohibitions, § 62; Cooley's Const. Lim. 577.

Ex parte Newman, 9 Cal. 502; Light v. Derfees, 8 Ind. 298; State v.

Fagan, 22 La. Ann. 545; Sunbury, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, 33 Pa. St. 278; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; Johnson v. Higgins, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 566; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 545; Ex parte McCordle, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 514.

8. Prescott v. Illinois, etc., Canal, 19 Ill. 324; People v. Commissioners, 54 N. Y. 276; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; Opinion of the Judges, 35 N. H. 579; Pangborn v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 29; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Southwark Bank v. Commonwealth, 2 Pa. St. 446; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 430; State v. Moffit, 5 Ohio, 358; Turley v. Logan Co., 17 Ill. 151; People v. Supervisors, 8 N. Y. 317; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ill. 721. Compare Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253; Kilgore v. Magee, 85 Pa. St. 401; Whited v. Lewis, 25 La. Ann. 568.

But the courts cannot, for the purpose of impeaching a statute, go behind the legislative records to inquire into the regularity of the proceedings in passing it. People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 269.

And it will not be presumed, from the mere silence of the journals, that either house has exceeded its authority, or disregarded a constitutional requirement in the passage of an act, unless where the constitution requires the journals to show the action taken, as, for instance, where it requires the yeas and nays to be entered. Cooley's Const. Lim. 135; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; Supervisors v. People, 25 Ill. 181.

As each house of the legislature has the power to judge of the election and qualifications of its members, the court cannot go behind a law to ascertain whether the constitutional vote requisite to give it immediate effect was cast by members legally chosen. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481.

matters collaterally nor on trivial occasions.<sup>1</sup> Many courts adopt the rule that they will not decide a legislative act to be unconstitutional by a majority of the quorum of judges, but will postpone the argument until the bench is full; but this is a rule of propriety only, not of constitutional obligation.<sup>2</sup> A statute will not be declared unconstitutional on the application of a mere volunteer or person whose rights it does not specially affect; this will only be done in a proper case, where some person seeks to resist the operation of the statute and calls in the judicial power to pronounce it void as to him, his property, or his rights.<sup>3</sup> The fact that some provision or part of a statute is unconstitutional does not make the remainder so, if such remainder is independent of and separable from the void part, so that one part may operate without the other.<sup>4</sup> The decision of that court which is the final interpreter

1. Hoover v. Wood, 9 Ind. 286; State v. Rich, 20 Mo. 393; Ireland v. Turnpike Co., 19 Ohio St. 373.

The court will not decide a question involving the constitutionality of an act of the legislature, although it may be legitimately presented by the record, if the record presents any other clear ground on which its judgment may be based. Smith v. Speed, 50 Ala. 276; Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; Ex parte Randolph, 2 Brock. (U. S. Cir.) 447; Frees v. Ford, 6 N. Y. 177; White v. Scott, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 56; Mobile & Ohio R. Co. v. State, 29 Ala. 573.

Nor when it does not appear by the record that the decision of the court below was based upon that question. Hopson v. Murphy, 1 Tex. 314.

The courts will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute upon the decision of preliminary motions or applications for provisional injunctions. Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583; Rensselaer, etc., R. Co. v. Bennington, etc., R. Co., 17 Repr. (U. S. Cir.) 168; Deering v. Railroad, 31 Me. 172; Havemeyer v. Ingersoll, 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 301.

The constitutionality of a law upon which an indictment is based cannot be questioned upon an application for a habeas corpus. Parker v. State, 5 Tex. App. 579; In re Brosnahan, 18 Fed. Repr. 62.

The court will not consider the constitutionality of a statute on a summary motion to strike out part of a complaint as irrelevant. Brien v. Clay, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 649.

In Burbank v. Williams, Phill. (N. Car.) 37, the court refused to review the constitutionality of a statute which had been repealed, merely for the purpose of determining the right to costs.

2. Cooley's Const. Lim. 161. See Briscoe v. Bank, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 118.

3. Jones v. Black, 48 Ala. 540; Williamson v. Carlton, 51 Me. 449; State v. Snow, 3 R. I. 64; Dejarnett v. Haynes, 23 Miss. 600; Moore v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 726; People v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 89 N. Y. 75; Cooley's Const. Lim. 163.

A party proceeded against under one branch of a criminal statute cannot object to the unconstitutionality of another and independent part of the statute. State v. Snow, 3 R. I. 64.

A law unconstitutional only because impairing the obligation of contracts is not necessarily null as to the rights of persons not concerned in the contracts whose obligations are so impaired. Moore v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 726; New Orleans Nav. Co. v. New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 364.

The objection that a legislative act is unconstitutional because divesting the rights of remaindermen against their will cannot be urged by the owner of the particular estate, and can only be made on behalf of the remaindermen themselves. Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 543.

Tax-payers, citizens of a State, may maintain a suit quia timet to restrain its executive officers from funding the public indebtedness under an act unconstitutional and void. Lynn v. Polk, 8 Lea (Tenn.), 121.

Estoppel to Deny Constitutionality.—An individual has no right to complain that a law is unconstitutional after he has endeavored to take the benefit of it to the injury of others. Hansford v. Barbour, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 515; Barnett v. Barbour, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 396.

4. Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80.

Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 459; Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 717; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252; Duer v. Small, 4 Blatch. (U. S. Cir.) 263; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray (Mass.), 1; Commonwealth v. Clapp, 5 Gray (Mass.), 97; Commonwealth v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.), 482; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; State v. Snow, 3 R. I. 64; People v. Kenney, 96 N. Y. 204; Harris v. Niagara Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.), 279; Lea v. Bumm, 83 Pa. St. 237; Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151; State v. Commissioners, 29 Md. 521; Gamble v. McCrady, 75 N. Car. 509; Robinson v. Bank of Darien, 18 Ga. 65; Bucky v. Willard, 16 Fla. 330; Mobile & Ohio R. Co. v. State, 29 Ala. 573; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; Campbell v. Union Bank, 6 How. (Miss.) 625; Williams v. Payson, 14 La. Ann. 7; Franklin Co. v. Railroad, 12 Lea (Tenn.), 521; Tillman v. Cocke, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 429; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 70; Turner v. Woodson Co., 27 Kans. 314; Morrison v. State, 40 Ark. 448; Exchange Bank v. Hinds, 3 Ohio St. 1; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; State v. Newton, 59 Ind. 173; Nelson v. People, 33 Ill. 390; Santo v. State, 2 Clarke (Iowa), 165; State v. Clark, 54 Mo. 17; Rood v. McCargar, 49 Cal. 117; Ex parte Frazer, 54 Cal. 94; Mills v. Sargent, 36 Cal. 379; Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379; Lathrop v. Mills, 19 Cal. 513; People v. Hill, 7 Cal. 97; Tripp v. Overocker, 7 Colo. 72; People v. Jobs, 7 Colo. 475; State v. Rosenstock, 11 Nev. 128.

The constitutional and the unconstitutional provisions may even be contained in the same section of the law, and yet be perfectly distinct and separable, so that the former may stand though the latter fall: the question is whether the several provisions are essentially and inseparably connected in substance. Hagerstown v. Dechert, 32 Md. 369; Commonwealth v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.), 485; Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379; Eells v. People, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 512; State v. Easterbrook, 3 Nev. 173. Compare McCready v. Sexton, 29 Iowa, 356; Christy v. Sacramento Co., 39 Cal. 3.

Where part of an act is declared unconstitutional, but the rest is independent and can stand alone, the portion so declared to be unconstitutional is as if it had never been passed, and the portion declared to be constitutional must remain in full force as if that had been the whole of the act originally. State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33.

Provisions Must be Independent.—If, when the void part is stricken out, there remains enough to make a statute complete in itself, capable of being executed according to the apparent legislative intent, and independent of that which has been annulled, it will be sustained. State v. Tuttle, 53 Wis. 45; State v. Exnicios, 33 La. Ann. 253.

The imposition of a tax, and the designation of collectors thereof, are entirely distinct subject-matters, and an illegality in regard to the latter will not necessarily impeach the provisions relating to the tax. People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177. See Kennedy v. Railroad, 22 Wis. 581.

A law requiring the secretary of state to furnish copies of the laws to certain newspapers is not rendered void in toto by an unconstitutional provision reducing the compensation to be paid to the secretary for furnishing such copies below what it was when he took the office. State v. Kelsey, 44 N. J. L. 1.

Where a State, by the terms of a statute, has a lien on the property of a railroad company, as trustee for the holders of bonds issued by the State in aid of such company, it does not follow, because the provisions of the statute in respect to the execution and exchange of the bonds are unconstitutional, that the statutory lien is void also. Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schulte, 103 U. S. 118.

Statute with Single Object.—If the purpose of a statute is to accomplish a single object only, and some of its provisions are void, the whole must fall, unless sufficient remains to effect the object without the aid of the invalid portion. People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585; Ex parte Towles, 48 Tex. 413; Santo v. State, 2 Clarke (Iowa), 165.

But a clause in an act containing an unconstitutional provision will vitiate the whole act, if it enters so entirely into the scope and design of the law that it would be impossible to maintain it without the obnoxious provision. Reed v. Railroad, 33 Cal. 212; Campau v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 276; State v. Commissioners, 5 Ohio St. 497.

A State statute taxed telegraphic messages; the United States supreme court pronounced the statute, so far as interstate and governmental messages were concerned, to be invalid; the cause was remanded to the State courts. Held, that the different parts of the act were so intimately connected that by reason of such invalidity the entire statute was void. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 62 Tex. 630.

Legislative Intent.—When the parts of a statute are so mutually dependent and of a constitution, passing upon the constitutionality of a particular statute, is binding and conclusive upon all other courts unless reversed.<sup>1</sup>

An unconstitutional act is not a law; it confers no rights, it imposes no duties, it affords no protection, it creates no office in legal contemplation, as inoperative as though it had never passed.<sup>2</sup> When a statute has been held unconstitutional by an appellate court, it is inoperative while such decision is maintained, but a later decision sustaining such statute gives it vitality from the time of its enactment, and it is to be treated as having been constitutional from the beginning.<sup>3</sup>

(a) Construction and Interpretation of Constitutions.—The effect of construction applied to the constitution is to give effect connected, as conditions, considerations, or compensations for each other, as to warrant a belief that the legislature intended them as a whole, and that if all could not be carried into effect the legislature would not pass the residue independently, then if some parts are unconstitutional and void, all the provisions which are thus dependent conditional, or connected must fall with them. Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90; Warren v. Mayor, 2 Gray (Mass.), 84; Slauson v. Racine, 13 Wis. 398; State v. Dousman, 28 Wis. 541; Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406; Ex parte Frazer, 54 Cal. 94; Eckhart v. State, 5 W. Va. 515; Cooley's Const. Lim. 179.

1. Stare Decisis.—The decisions of the supreme court of the United States upon the construction of the Federal constitution or the laws of the Union are conclusive and binding upon all State tribunals. Black v. Lusk, 69 Ill. 70; Lebanon Bank v. Mangan, 28 Pa. St. 452.

And conversely, the judgment of the highest court of a State, that a statute has been enacted in accordance with the requirements of the State constitution, is conclusive upon the United States courts and will not be reviewed therein, when no Federal question is involved. Atlantic & Gulf R. Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359; Dundee Mortgage Co. v. Parrish, 24 Fed. Repr. 197; North Bennington Bank v. Bennington, 16 Blatch. (U. S. Cir.) 53. See Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175.

Where a statute has been declared unconstitutional, an inferior court is bound by the judgment, notwithstanding new reasons are set up against it. The presumption of law is that all the existing reasons were considered and held insufficient. Wheeler v. Rice, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 129; Palmer v. Lawrence, 5 N. Y. 389.

2. Norton v. Shelby Co., 118 U. S.

425; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270; Strong v. Daniel, 5 Ind. 34.

The secession ordinance of Louisiana, being a nullity, had no effect to prevent the judgment of its supreme court a few days after its passage. Cannon, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 443.

Protection to Officers.—An unconstitutional law can afford no justification for an officer acting under it. A. Hammond, 3 McLean (U. S. Cir.); Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 289. Compare Commonwealth v. Combs, 56 Pa. St. 436.

In Sessums v. Bolts, 34 Tex. 289, it was held that an act adjudged unconstitutional by the courts has no force and effect of law prior to such decision, so far as to protect officers who obey its mandates.

Although an act be unconstitutional and void it will yet operate as an act upon the party applying for and receiving it, and as notice to third parties. Robinson v. Bank, 18 Ga. 65; F. v. Landram, 5 Bush (Ky.) 230.

Although an act be unconstitutional the legislature may, by a subsequent act, direct the expenses incurred by the legislation to be paid. People v. 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 229.

Effect of Repealing Clause.—When an act is void for unconstitutionality, a clause repealing all acts or parts inconsistent with it repeals nothing. The former law remains unaffected. State v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 276; State v. Crosse, 11 Wis. 51; Tims v. State, 1 Ala. 165; Shepardson v. Railroad, 605; Sullivan v. Adams, 3 Gray 476; Devoy v. Mayor, 35 Barb. 264; Childs v. Shower, 18 Iowa 1. Compare Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 1; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Mar. 1; Harvey v. Virginia, 18 Repr. (U. S.) 1.

3. Pierce v. Pierce, 46 Ind. 86.

intent of its framers and the people in adopting it. This intent is to be found in the instrument itself. If the words convey a definite meaning which involves no absurdity or contradiction with other parts of the instrument, then that meaning apparent on its face is to be adopted.<sup>1</sup> When a constitutional provision has received a settled judicial construction, and is afterwards incorporated into a new constitution, or into the constitution of another State, it must be presumed to have been adopted with a knowledge of that interpretation, and the courts will feel bound to adhere to it.<sup>2</sup> When the language of a provision in the constitution of a State is of doubtful import, the condition of the people and the history of the instrument itself are to be looked to in determining the meaning of the clause in question.<sup>3</sup> Constitutions are also to

1. Hawkins v. Carroll Co., 50 Miss. 735; Hills v. Chicago, 60 Ill. 86; Commonwealth v. Randall, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 451; People v. Potter, 47 N. Y. 375; Beardstown v. Virginia, 76 Ill. 34. See Cooley Const. Lim. 55-57; 1 Story on the Const. § 400; Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 97; Den v. Reid, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 524; Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266; Leonard v. Wiseman, 31 Md. 204; McAdoo v. Benbow, 63 N. Car. 464.

It has been suggested that in construing a clause of a constitution, if a literal interpretation of the language involves any absurdity, contradiction, injustice, or extreme hardship the courts may deviate a little from the received sense and literal meaning of the words, and interpret the instrument in accordance with what appears to have been the intention of its framers. Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107.

But in general a liberal construction of statutes, and a strict construction of constitutional provisions, is a safe and reasonable judicial policy. Wolcott v. Wigton, 7 Ind. 44.

Popular Meaning Preferred.—The words of the constitution are to be taken in their popular, natural, and ordinary meaning rather than in any technical sense, unless the context or the very nature of the subject indicates otherwise. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 188; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 678; Settle v. Van Enrea, 49 N. Y. 281; 1 Story on the Const. § 451; Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111.

But where a word has acquired a fixed technical meaning in legal and constitutional history it is to be understood as used in that sense in a written constitution. Cooley Const. Lim. 59; 1 Story Const. § 453.

Whole to be Considered.—In the interpretation of a constitution the whole instrument must be examined to ascertain the sense in which the words in particular clauses were used. Manly v. State, 7

Md. 135; Wolcott v. Wigton, 7 Ind. 49; People v. Purdy, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 36; Greencastle Twp. v. Black, 5 Ind. 570; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650; Cooley Const. Lim. 57.

Expediency.—On constitutional questions presenting grave doubts on account of the uncertainty of the language employed, broad considerations of expediency are not to be overlooked. Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376. Compare Greencastle v. Black 5 Ind. 557.

Conflict to be Avoided.—A construction which raises a conflict between parts of the constitution is not permissible when, by any reasonable construction, the parts may be made to harmonize. People v. Wright, 6 Colo. 92. But when the constitution speaks in plain language in reference to a particular matter the courts have no right to place a different meaning on the words employed, because the literal interpretation may happen to be inconsistent with other parts of the instrument in relation to other subjects. Cantwell v. Owens, 14 Md. 215.

2. Atty.-Gen. v. Brunst, 3 Wis. 787; Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 42; People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; Commonwealth v. Hartnett, 3 Gray (Mass.), 450; Hess v. Pegg, 7 Nev. 23; Leavenworth Co. v. Miller, 7 Kans. 479; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; Daily v. Swope, 47 Miss. 367; Jenkins v. Ewin, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 456.

3. Hamilton v. County Court, 15 Mo. 3; Kennedy v. Gies, 35 Mich. 83; People v. Fanchu, 50 N. Y. 288; Cronise v. Cronise, 54 Pa. St. 255.

But when the text of a constitutional provision is not ambiguous, the courts, in giving construction thereto, are not at liberty to search for its meaning beyond the instrument itself. Chesapeake & Ohio R. Co. v. Miller, 19 W. Va. 408; Hamilton v. County Court, 15 Mo. 3. See Ex parte Jackson, 14 Blatch. (U. S. Cir.) 245.

be construed in the light of the common law, and of the fact that its rules are still in force. Thus the familiar rule that a state contravention of the common law ought not to be extended by construction applies with equal force to a constitutional provision of that character.<sup>1</sup> The courts do not feel themselves authorized, unless in very extreme cases, to regard any provision of the constitution as merely directory and not mandatory.<sup>2</sup> Where the bill of rights and the constitution differ, the latter is to be regarded as the established limitation, or limited adoption, of the general principles previously declared.<sup>3</sup> It is also a general rule that where a constitution gives a general power, or enjoins a duty, it also, by implication, every particular power necessary for the execution of the one or the performance of the other.<sup>4</sup> A constitutional enactment should be construed to operate prospectively

Debates of Convention.—The debates of the convention that framed a constitution can seldom be referred to by the courts in expounding it. See Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Springfield v. Edwards, 84 Ill. 626, 643; Cooley Const. Lim. 66.

The constitution is to be interpreted with reference to the previous legislation of the State, and powers always previously exercised by the legislature remain to them unless expressly or impliedly prohibited. Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 375.

As to contemporaneous and practical construction, see Cooley Const. Lim. 67; 1 Story on the Const. chap. v.

1. Brown v. Fifield, 4 Mich. 322.

A constitutional provision declaring in general terms the adoption of the English common law should be deemed to adopt the common law only so far as it was in harmony with the existing institutions, and as its principles are applicable to the state of the country and the conditions of society. Such a provision does not oblige the courts to follow the English doctrine of ancient lights. Powell v. Sims, 5 W. Va. 1. See Day v. State, 7 Gill (Md.), 321.

Where, in the constitution, technical terms of law or jurisprudence are used, which are common to our law and the law of England, if there is a difference of signification in the two countries the meaning which they have in our country is to be preferred. The Huntress, Davies, (U. S. Dist.) 82.

2. People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Cooley Const. Lim. 74-83.

3. Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376. Compare In re Dorsey, 7 Port. (Ala.) 293.

The bills of rights in the American constitutions have not been drafted for the introduction of new law, but to secure old principles against abrogation; they are conservatory institutions rather than reformatory. Webster v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201.

While the amendments to the United States constitution were intended primarily to be restrictive upon the powers of the general government and the State legislatures, yet they are declaratory of great principles of civil liberty which can be infringed neither by the federal nor the State governments. Campanelli v. State, 11 Ga. 353.

4. Field v. People, 2 Scam. 60; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wh. (U. S.) 428; United States v. Field, 1 Cranch (U. S.), 358; 1 Story on the Const. §§ 430-435; Cooley's Const. Lim. 63.

But this rule is modified by authority that where the means for the execution of a granted power are also given, or different means or powers can be applied, either on account of convenience or of being more effectual. People v. People, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 79.

In a clause of a constitution granting powers the word "necessary" does not always mean "indispensable," but is often construed to signify a power of discretion. Cotton v. Commissioner, 11 Fla. 610.

The Federal government being limited to enumerated powers, the constitutionality of an act of Congress is to be tested by the grant of powers contained in the Federal constitution; but the State governments are presumed to be invested with general powers of legislation, and therefore, in determining whether an act of a State legislature is in violation of the constitution, the inquiry is directed to the limitations imposed on the legislature by the terms of the constitution. In re Bryan, 5 Tex. App. 93; Logan v. State, 10 Tex. 201.

unless the language employed manifests a clear intention to give it a retrospective effect.<sup>1</sup> The principle of stare decisis applies with especial force to the interpretation of constitutions.<sup>2</sup>

4. Separate Provinces of Departments of Government.—One of the most important features of American constitutional law is the care which has been taken to separate the legislative, judicial, and executive functions. The different classes of power have been apportioned to different departments, and as all derive their authority from the same instrument, there is an implied exclusion of each department from exercising the functions conferred upon the others.<sup>3</sup> But it is impracticable (and was not intended) that the separation of powers should be absolute and complete in all details.<sup>4</sup>

(a) Encroachments of Legislative on Judicial.—The distinction between legislative and judicial action is that the former establishes a rule which regulates matters and transactions occurring after its passage, the latter determines rights and obligations concerning matters and transactions which already exist or which have transpired prior to the exercise of the judicial power.<sup>5</sup> An act of the legislature which undertakes to determine questions of fact and law, affecting the rights of persons or property, is judicial in its

Tex. App. 306. See infra, § 6 of this title.

1 See Allbyer v. State, 10 Ohio St. 588; State v. Barbee, 3 Ind. 258; State v. Thompson, 2 Kans. 432; Slack v. Railroad, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; State v. Macon County Court, 41 Mo. 453; Cooley's Const. Lim. 62; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 181. Compare Matter of Oliver Lee & Co.'s Bank, 21 N. Y. 9.

2. When the meaning of the constitution on a doubtful question has been once carefully considered and judiciously decided, every reason is in favor of a steady adherence to the authoritative interpretation; and especially so where the question is not simply as to the constitutionality of the law, but involves the validity of contracts and the rights of innocent parties, and in which the law is only one of the elements. Maddox v. Graham, 2 Met. (Ky.) 56. See Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401; Grubbs v. State, 24 Ind. 295.

A construction placed upon a section of the constitution prescribing the mode of amending laws is not a rule of property within the principle that the supreme court ought not to overrule former decisions which constitute a rule of property, but only a rule of legislation. Greencastle Turnpike Co. v. State, 28 Ind. 382.

State and Federal Courts.—State courts are bound to conform their decisions to those of the supreme court of the United States on all questions involving the construction of the Federal constitution. Newmarket Bank v. Butler, 45 N. H. 236; Smoot v. Lafferty, 2 Gilm. (Ill.) 383; Bank of U. S. v. Norton, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 423; Black v. Lusk, 69 Ill. 70, Lebanon Bank v. Mangan, 28 Pa. St. 452. Compare Padleford v. Mayor, 14 Ga. 438.

The Federal courts follow the decisions of the highest court of a State in construing the constitution and laws of the State, unless they conflict with or impair the efficacy of some principle of the Federal constitution or of a Federal statute, or a rule of commercial or general law. Norton v. Shelby Co., 118 U. S. 425.

3. Cooley's Const. Lim. 87; 1 Story on the Const. §§ 518-525; Federalist, No. 47; Montesquieu, Esprit des Loix, b. 11, c. 6; 1 Bl. Comm. 146. See an article "Are the Departments of Government Independent?" in Am. Law Review, March, 1887.

4. Story on the Const. § 525; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376.

5. Smith v. Strother, 21 Repr. (Cal.) 106; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 204; Bates v. Kimball, 2 Chip. (Vt.) 77; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 382.

Nothing in the constitution of the United States forbids the legislature of a State to exercise judicial functions. Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 413.

Under the colonial charter of Connecticut, the legislature were not restrained from exercising judicial power, and were character, and is therefore not a rightful subject of legislation.<sup>1</sup> The legislature has no constitutional power to control the action of the courts by revising, annulling, or attempting to regulate their judgments, or interfere with the adjudications they have duly and lawfully reached.<sup>2</sup> Declaratory laws, as such, are unconstitutional.

accustomed to grant appeals and new trials. Calder v. Bull, 2 Root (Conn.), 350.

1. Ponder v. Graham, 4 Fla. 23.

An act of the legislature directing the levy of a tax and payment out of it of specified demands of public creditors is not in the nature of judicial action, as involving a decision in favor of the validity of the demands, and being therefore beyond the power of the legislature, but is in the nature of an admission of liability and tender of a mode of payment by the executive power representing the party indebted (the public), and is valid. McLaughlin v. Commissioners, 7 S. Car. 375; Greene's Estate, 4 Md. Ch. 349; People v. San Francisco, 11 Cal. 206.

Where the power of the State to alter, amend, or revoke the charter of a private corporation is made to depend on the happening of some event, such as non-user or abuse of its privileges, the determination of the question, whether the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render legitimate the exercise of this power, belongs in the first instance to the legislature, and not to the courts. Erie & Northeast R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. St. 302; Miners' Bank v. United States, 1 Greene (Iowa), 553; Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583; McLaren v. Pennington, 1 Paige (N. Y.), 102; Crease v. Babcock, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 344; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 38. Compare Flint Plank Road Co. v. Woodhull, 25 Mich. 99; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 189; Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 122; Regents v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 365; Allen v. Buchanan, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 283; Cooley Const. Lim. 106.

The legislature does not exercise judicial power in declaring what causes "shall" entitle a party to transfer a case from one court to another of co-ordinate jurisdiction, if it leaves the ascertainment of such cause for judicial determination. Ex parte Hickey, 52 Ala. 228.

The authority conferred on the Senate to try contested elections is not "judicial power" within the constitutional requirement that the judicial power of the State shall be vested in the courts. State v. Harmon, 31 Ohio St. 250.

2. Northern v. Barnes, 2 Lea (Tenn.), 603; Mayor v. Horn, 26 Md. 194; Ex parte Low, 24 W. Va. 620, Opinion of the Supreme Court, In re Dorr, 3 B. 299.

A private act of the legislature providing that a decision of the supreme court quashing an order for the removal of a pauper, shall not be conclusive as to the question of settlement, which act was passed under the erroneous idea that such decision would otherwise be conclusive, is not unconstitutional but merely supererogatory. West Buffalo v. West, 8 Pa. St. 177.

An act providing for a graduated reduction from the term of imprisonment for which the prisoner is sentenced to the State penitentiary, as a reward for good conduct, is an interference with the judgment of the court sentencing the criminal, and therefore unconstitutional. Commonwealth v. Halloway, 42 Pa. St. 152. See State v. Fleming, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 152.

Legislature Cannot Grant New Trial. The legislature does not possess the constitutional power to grant a new trial in an action already determined in a court of law. Young v. State Bank, 4 N. H. 301; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 301; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Dunham v. Lewiston, 4 Me. 140; Bates v. Kimball, 2 Chip. (Vt.) 77; Staniford v. Barlow, 1 Vt. 314; De Chastellux v. Child, 15 Pa. St. 18; Taylor v. Platt, 1 R. I. 324; Miller v. State, 8 Gill (Md.) 145; Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 145; Lanier v. Gallatas, 13 La. Ann. 145; Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 515; Davis v. Nasha, 21 Wis. 491; Cooley Const. Lim. 95; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 38.

Writ Appeal.—The legislature has no constitutional power to grant to a party litigant a right to an appeal or writ of error, in cases where no such right existed when judgment was pronounced or when the right has been definitely forfeited. McCabe v. Emerson, 18 Pa. St. 147; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Hill v. Derland, 3 Vt. 506; Burch v. Newbould, 10 N. Y. 374; Prout v. Berry, 2 Gill (Md.) 147; Miller v. State, 8 Gill (Md.) 147. Compare Converse v. Burrows, 2 B. 229, Wheeler's Appeal, 45 Conn. 30.

But a statute which takes away the right to a future appeal in an action pending and undetermined when the statute takes effect, is not unconstitutional. Gibson v. Coon, 1 N. Y. 536; Ex parte McCabe, 18 Pa. St. 147.

It is well settled that an act of the legislature declaring the interpretation to be placed on a previous statute is not obligatory upon the courts with respect to the application of the first statute to transactions which occurred, or rights of action which accrued prior to the second.<sup>1</sup> It is constitutional for the legislature to authorize a guardian or other trustee to sell the real estate of his ward under the direction of the courts, such not being a judicial act.<sup>2</sup> Unless the State constitution forbids, the granting of di-

<sup>1</sup> 7 Wall. (U. S.) 506; Baltimore & Potomac R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 398.

An act of the legislature directing the y for a rehearing in public officers
ands the legisla-trusts, is not an e judicial power.
la. 238.

A statute authoopening of judg-certain anterior
hts and infringes nt of the govern-
erson, 31 Grant,

(Va.) 105; Stewart v. Davidson, 10 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 351; Taylor v. Place, 4 R. I. 324. Compare Braddee v. Brownfeld, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 271.

Resolving Injunctions.—Where a court of competent jurisdiction had enjoined the collection of certain gravel road assessments, held that it was not competent for the legislature to authorize the collection of said assessments. Searcy v. Patriot Turnpike Co., 79 Ind. 274.

An act which prescribes that no injunction shall be issued against the commissioners of certain public works is invalid. Guy v. Hermance, 5 Cal. 73.

Rules of Pleading.—The legislature, in undertaking to regulate the rules of pleading, does not usurp judicial functions. Whiting v. Townsend, 57 Cal. 515.

a receiver by the affairs of an indicial act. Carey

v. Pierce, 4 Biss.
y v. Kendall, 48
reenough, 11 Pa.
1 Boom Co. v.
Reiser v. Saving
daley v. Philadel- equindre v. Wil- cManning v. Far-
n Building Assn.
, Gorman v. Sink-
s, 9 Va. L. Journ.
6 Tex. App. 345;
Humph. (Tenn.)

165; Cooley Const. Lim. 93; Black Const. Prohibitions, § 194. Compare Baker v. Herndon, 17 Ga. 568.

But a statute construing and expounding a prior act may be valid so far as it relates only to future transactions. Stebbins v. Pueblo Co., 2 McCrary (U. S. Cir.), 196; Cambridge v. Boston, 130 Mass. 357. Compare Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 498.

The construction of statutes being exclusively a judicial power, the attempt of a legislature to exercise such a power, by adding as a proviso to a law that "nothing in this act shall be construed contrary to the provisions of the constitution," is an unconstitutional assumption of the functions of the judiciary. Ex parte Blanchard, 9 Nev. 101.

It is not within the province of the legislature to prescribe what instructions a court shall give in a murder case, unless the legislature has first embodied such instructions in an act as the law of the land. State v. Hopper, 71 Mo. 425.

Mason v. Wait, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 127; Rice v. Parkman, 16 Mass. 328; Cochran v. Van Surley, 20 Wend. 373; Carroll v. Olmstead, 16 Ohio, 251; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 660; Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 25, 60. Compare Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59.

"If the party standing in the position of trustee applies for permission to make the sale, for a purpose apparently for the interest of the cestui que trust, and there are no adverse interests to be considered and adjudicated, the case is not one which requires judicial action, but it is optional with the legislature to grant the relief by statute, or to refer the case to the courts for consideration, according as the one course or the other, on considerations of policy, may seem desirable." Cooley Const. Lim. 98.

But the legislature cannot authorize a person who does not occupy a fiduciary relation to the owner to make sale of real estate, to satisfy demands which he asserts, but which are not judicially determined. Lane v. Dorman, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 242; Cash, Appellant, 6 Mich. 193; Rozier vances by the legislature is not such an exercise of judicial authority as will render them invalid.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Encroachments of Judicial on Legislative.—The courts cannot assume the settlement of such questions as belong properly to a political or legislative department.<sup>2</sup> The correctness or incorrectness of a legislative opinion whereon an act is founded is not a question within the province of the court to determine; the court must assume the fact to be as the legislature states or assumes it to be. But if the judiciary cannot assume legislative or political functions, it is equally true that the law-making body cannot impose legislative powers or duties upon them.<sup>3</sup> Courts of justice, which can only operate only upon and under the law, cannot give vitality to laws which have become by paramount authority inoperative and void.<sup>5</sup>

v. Fagan, 46 Ill. 404; Cooley Const. Lim. 104.

1. 1 Bishop on Mar. & Div. §§ 680-686; Cooley Const. Lim. 109 et seq.; Starr v. Pease, 8 Conn. 541; Crane v. Meginnis, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 463; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.) 181; Hull v. Hull, 2 Strob. Eq. (S. Car.) 174; West v. West, 2 Mass. 223; Townsend v. Griffin, 4 Harr. (Del.) 440; Holmes v. Holmes, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 295; Levins v. Sleator, 2 Greene (Iowa), 604; Cabell v. Cabell, 1 Met. (Ky.) 319. Compare Ponder v. Graham, 4 Fla. 23; Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429; State v. Fry, 4 Mo. 120.

2. The question, which of two opposing governments, each claiming to be the rightful government of the State, is the legitimate power, is not a question to be decided by the judicial tribunals, but is to be determined by the political department. Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 1.

A bill was filed by the State of Georgia against the secretary of war, the general of the army, and the commander of the third military district to restrain them from executing the "Reconstruction Acts" of March 2 and March 23, 1867, on the ground that such execution would annul and abolish the existing State government of Georgia and establish another and different one in its place. The bill also alleged the ownership by Georgia of certain real and personal property, including the State capitol and executive mansion, and that the execution of the acts would deprive the plaintiff of the possession and enjoyment of its property. Held, that the rights thus sought to be protected being rights of sovereignty, of political jurisdiction, of government, of corporate existence as a State, with its constitutional powers and privileges, the questions presented were political questions merely, belonging to the two great political departments of the government, and not the subject of judicial cognizance. Georgia v. Stanton, 6 (U. S.) 50.

The legislature alone has the power to determine whether an emergency has arisen requiring the creation of a law in case of war, to repel invasion, to suppress insurrection. People v. Scheco, 27 Cal. 175; Franklin v. Board of Examiners, 23 Cal. 173.

The courts have no authority to determine whether peace or war exists. United States v. Packages, 11 Am. L. 419.

Nor whether a foreign country has become an independent state. Kennell v. Chambers, 14 How. (U. S.) 38; G. v. Hoyt, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 246; Ro. Himely, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 241.

Nor can they pass upon the right of Indians to be recognized as a tribe. Texas Indians, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 737; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 37.

When a legislative grant of a bridge or ferry franchise is made on the ground of public convenience, the correctness of the decision concerning the existence of public convenience cannot be reviewed by the courts, this being a matter of political regulation, not of judicial determination. Fall v. Sutter, 21 Cal. 1. See People v. Kelly, 5 Abb. New (N. Y.) 383.

But the eligibility of the person to the office of lieutenant-governor is such a political question that it is not within the jurisdiction of the courts. State v. Gleason, 12 Fla. 190.

3. People v. Lawrence, 36 Bar. (N. Y.) 177. See United States v. Wil. 5 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 133.

4. Hardenburgh v. Kidd, 10 Cal. 1. Tillman v. Cocke, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 1. Smith v. Strother, 21 Repr. (Cal.) 1. McLean Co. v. Bank, 81 Ky. 254. Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 2.

5. Austin v. Sandel, 19 La. Ann. 1. See State v. Hardy, 7 Neb. 377.

(c) Encroachments on Executive Department.—Such powers as are specially conferred by the constitution upon the executive department, or upon any designated officer, the legislature cannot require or authorize to be performed by any other officer or authority, and from those duties which the constitution requires of him he cannot be excused by law.<sup>1</sup> Where the constitution confers the power of appointing to office upon the executive department, appointments cannot be made by legislative enactment.<sup>2</sup> It is

1. Cooley's Const. Lim. 115; Attorney-General v. Brown, 1 Wis. 522.

The supreme court of a State, without assuming to direct the executive in the discharge of his functions, nor any control in such discharge, has yet such jurisdiction over the inhabitants of the State that it will prevent any one of them from usurping the functions or intruding into the office of the executive, and punish such usurpation. Attorney-General v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567.

Ministerial Duties.—Where a duty is devolved upon the chief executive of the State, rather than upon an inferior officer, it will be presumed to have been done because his superior judgment, discretion, and sense of responsibility were confided in for a more accurate, faithful, and discreet performance than could be relied upon if the duty were put upon an officer chosen for inferior duties; and such a duty can seldom be considered as purely ministerial. People v. Governor, 29 Mich. 320.

Mandamus to Governor.—The chief executive officer of a State, in the exercise of those political or executive powers or functions which are confided to his discretion by the constitution, is entirely independent of the supervision of the judiciary; and the latter cannot use its process either to enjoin or prohibit the performance of such executive acts or to regulate the manner of their exercise. Com. v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66; Astrom v. Hammond, 3 McLean (U. S. Cir.) 107; In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508; Mauran v. Smith, 8 R. I. 192; State v. Governor, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 331; Miles v. Bradford, 22 Md. 170; Magruder v. Swan, 25 Md. 173; Groome v. Gwinn, 43 Md. 572; Catten v. Ellis, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 545; State v. Champlin, 2 Ball. (S. Car.) 220; Low v. Towns, 8 Ga. 360, Tennessee, etc., R. v. Moore, 36 Ala. 371; State v. Warmoth, 22 La. Ann. 1; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 712; State v. Johnson, 28 La. Ann. 932; Houston, etc., Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; Turnpike Co. v. Brown, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 490; State v. Moffit, 5 Ohio, 358; State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 528, People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 229; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; People v. Yates, 40 Ill. 126; Bartley v. Governor, 39 Mo. 388; In re Woodson, 58 Mo. 369; People v. Governor, 29 Mich. 320; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 89; Chamberlain v. Sibley, 4 Minn. 309; County Treasurer v. Dike, 30 Minn. 363; State v. Whitcomb, 28 Minn. 50; Middleton v. Low, 30 Cal. 596; Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 432; Chumaseo v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; High on Extr. Leg. Rem. § 118; Moses on Mandamus, 80.

In several of the States it is held that mandamus will lie against the governor to compel the performance of acts falling within the scope of his duties, which are not political or executive in their nature, but merely ministerial, and which do not rest in his discretion, but in simple obedience to the mandates of positive law. In such case he is regarded as merely the ministerial agent of the law. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.), 137; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531; Magruder v. Swan, 25 Md. 212; Groome v. Gwinn, 43 Md. 572; Catten v. Ellis, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 545; Tennessee, etc., R. v. Moore, 36 Ala. 380; State v. Moffit, 5 Ohio 362; State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 528; Chamberlain v. Sibley, 4 Minn. 312; Middleton v. Low, 30 Cal. 596, Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; Chumaseo v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242.

But in other States the view obtains that mandamus will not lie against the governor in any case, even in regard to ministerial duties. Such a practice, it is said, would rob one branch of the government of its essential and entire independence. In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508; Mauran v. Smith, 8 R. I. 192, State v. Governor, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 331; Low v. Towns, 8 Ga. 372; State v. Warmoth, 22 La. Ann. 1; Turnpike Co. v. Brown, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 490; People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 233; People v. Yates, 40 Ill. 126; State v. Governor, 8 Mo. 39; Sutherland v. Governor, 29 Mich. 320.

8. Wood v. United States, 15 Ct. of Cl. 151; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; Davis v. State, 7 Md. 161; Taylor v. Commonwealth, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 404. See Baltimore v. State, 15 Md.

not competent for the legislature to interfere with or control power pertaining to the executive to grant pardons to criminals.

The executive is bound to give effect to the laws which regulate his duties, and in so doing must necessarily give a construction to them.<sup>2</sup> The governor cannot be compelled by attachment to close in aid of an investigation before a grand jury secrets of business of the executive department which he does not think fit to reveal.<sup>3</sup>

5. Executive Powers.—The power of appointing and removing subordinate executive officers is generally, by the American constitutions, vested in the chief executive.<sup>4</sup> Where the govern

376; Response to Governor, 58 Mo. 369.

The legislature may change the time of the election of a successor of an officer, so as to prolong the term of the incumbent, who will hold over until his successor is appointed. This does not amount to an "appointment to office." People v. Batchelor, 22 N. Y. 128.

For the legislature to name, in an act of incorporation of a city, the persons who shall constitute trustees to organize a city government and conduct the affairs thereof through the first year, is not an assumption of executive power. State v. Rosenstock, 11 Nev. 128.

1. Haley v. Clark, 26 Ala. 439; Ogle-tree v. Dozier, 59 Ga. 800; Butler v. State, 97 Ind. 373. See People v. Bircham, 12 Cal. 50.

The power given by Congress to the secretary of the treasury to remit penalties incurred by a steamship for carrying too many passengers is no invasion of the pardoning power belonging to the president. The Laura, 114 U. S. 417.

A statute authorizing the board of managers of the penitentiary to establish rules and regulations under which certain prisoners then or thereafter under sentence, who had served the minimum term provided by law for the crime for which they were convicted, might be allowed to go upon parole outside the buildings and inclosures, but to remain while on parole in the legal custody and under the control of the board, and subject at any time to be taken back within the inclosure of the institution, is not an encroachment upon the executive power to grant pardons, reprieves, and commutations. State v. Peters, 21 Repr. (Ohio) 591.

2. United States v. Lytle, 5 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 9; State v. Hallock, 16 Nev. 373.

A ministerial officer cannot be allowed to decide upon the validity of a law, and thus exempt himself from responsibility for disobedience to the command of a peremptory mandamus, his disobedience to the law being the cause of his inability to obey the command of the court. People v. Solomon, 54 Ill. 39.

3. Hartman's Appeal, 85 Pa. St.

4. Appointment to Office—The U. S. Const. art. 2, § 2, allowing the President to fill "vacancies which may happen during the recess of the Senate," applies to those happening during the session continuing after adjournment. Johnson v. Farrow, 4 Woods (U. S. Cir.), 491.

A commission issued during the recess of the Senate, to fill a vacancy in an office, continues until the end of the session of Congress, unless sooner determined by the President. In re Alab. Marshalship, 20 Fed. Repr. 379.

An appointment by the governor is an "election" within the meaning of art. 6, § 6, of the Kentucky constitution. Speed v. Crawford, 3 Met. (Ky.) 207.

Under a statute which empowers the governor, whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of supreme judge, to call an election after two months' notice, to appoint a person to fill the vacancy until the election of a successor, the governor cannot appoint a person to fill the unexpired term of a resigning judge. Calloway v. Sturm, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137.

An appointment to office by the executive is complete upon delivery of the commission. Weatherbee v. Cazin, 20 Cal. 503. See Marbury v. Madison (U. S.), 137.

Removal from Office.—The President has power to supersede or remove an officer of the army or navy by the appointment, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of his successor. Blakely v. United States, 103 U. S. 227.

Where the tenure of an officer appointed by the governor is not regulated by law, and there is no provision for his removal, he is removable only at the governor's pleasure. Keenan v. Perry, 10 Tex. 253.

And in such case the governor has the constitutional prerogative of approving or objecting to the acts of the legislature, he must exercise his right during the session of that body; his approval of an act after the adjournment of the legislature is a nullity.<sup>1</sup> The power of the executive to pardon from a fine, penalty, or forfeiture, after a judgment by which the right of an informer to share in the amount has become fixed, does not extend to remit the informer's share; he can discharge the share of the government only.<sup>2</sup> A pardon granted to one who is not specify the causes of removal; his decision is final. Keenan v. Perry, 24 Tex. 253.

Under a constitutional provision that the governor "may remove . . . all civil officers who received appointment from the executive for a term of years," an officer nominated by the governor and confirmed by the senate may be so removed. Harman v. Harwood 58 Md. 1.

The constitutional right of the appointing power to remove at pleasure is not abridged by an act providing for removal in a certain way, or for a certain cause. People v. Hill, 7 Cal. 97.

But the governor has no power to revoke a commission once regularly issued to an officer who is not removable at his pleasure, whether the appointing power be in the governor or elsewhere. Ewing v. Thompson, 43 Pa. St. 372. See People v. Jewett, 6 Cal. 291.

1. Hardee v. Gibbs, 50 Miss. 802; Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165. Compare Solomon v. Cartersville, 41 Ga. 157.

Under the constitution of New York the governor can approve a bill after the adjournment of the legislature, if within ten days from the time it was presented to him. People v. Bowen, 21 N. Y. 517.

Where the constitution requires that all bills be sealed with the great seal of the State before being presented to the governor, he may refuse to consider a bill presented without being thus authenticated. Hamilton v. State, 61 Md. 14.

A bill is not laid before the governor for his revision, nor presented to the governor, within the meaning of the constitutional provisions, by being sent from the senate or house to the secretary of the commonwealth; it must be laid before the governor personally. Opinion of the Judges, 99 Mass. 636.

In computing the ten days allowed to the governor in which to veto a bill, the first day should be excluded and the last day included. Beaudeau v. Cape Girardeau, 71 Mo. 392; Iron Mountain Co. v. Haight, 39 Cal. 540.

Return of Bill.—The "return" of a bill by the executive to the branch of the legislature in which it originated, in order to be within the spirit of the usual constitutional provision relating thereto, must be such a return as places the bill beyond the executive control, and in the possession, actual or potential, of the house. If the executive messenger is unable to deliver it to the house while in session, in consequence of an adjournment for the day on the last day allowed for its return by the governor, he should deliver it to some officer or other suitable person connected with the house. If redelivered to the governor and retained by him, no such return has been made as will prevent its becoming a law. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189, 198.

2. United States v. Harris, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 110; Cook v. Middlesex, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 637. Compare United States v. Thomasson, 4 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 336.

Under the clause of the constitution giving the president power to grant reprieves and pardons, he may grant a conditional pardon or commutation of sentence. Ex parte Wells, 18 How. (U. S.) 307.

The power to pardon does not carry with it the power of reprieve. Ex parte Howard, 17 N. H. 545.

The recital of a specific, distinct offence in a pardon by the President limits its operation to that offence, and such pardon does not embrace any other offence for which separate penalties and punishments are provided. Ex parte Weimer, 8 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 321. Compare United States v. Cullerton, 8 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 166.

The Effect of a Pardon granted by the governor is to relieve the accused of the punishment annexed to the offence for which he was convicted, and of all penalties and consequences, except political disabilities, growing out of the conviction and sentence. Edwards v. Commonwealth, 17 Repr. (Va.) 286.

The general assembly alone can restore the privilege of voting to one convicted of an infamous crime; the governor's pardon has not that effect. Opinion of Judges, 4 R. I. 583.

Delivery of Pardon.—A pardon issued by the President is to be considered as a de facto governor is valid irrespective of his not having a perfect title or evidence of title to the office.<sup>1</sup> The president as commander in chief of the army and navy may establish rules and regulations for their government; and the rules and orders made and issued by the secretary of war and of the navy are to be considered as emanating from him.<sup>2</sup> He is also invested by the constitution with the power to make treaties with foreign nations with the concurrence of the senate.<sup>3</sup> The government has all the rights of individuality in respect to depredations committed on its property, and in the absence of a statute imposing upon any particular officer the enforcement of these rights, such enforcement is ex necessitate rei the duty of the executive department.<sup>4</sup> The president speaks the deed, requiring delivery, either to the prisoner himself or to the prison-keeper having him in custody, in order to its completion. It may be revoked, even after it has been put in the marshal's hands to be delivered, the marshal being in relation thereto merely the President's messenger. Matter of De Puy, 3 Ben. (U. S. Dist.) 307.

Recommendation to Mercy.—What consideration should be given to a jury's written recommendation to mercy in a capital case, received from the judges by the governor and council, in passing upon an application for a commutation of the sentence, does not depend upon any question of law, nor upon any precedents from which any rule or principle of law can be derived, but upon a question of fact, the determination of which rests exclusively in the discretion of the governor and council. Opinion of the Justices, 120 Mass. 600.

1. Ex parte Norris, 8 S. Car. 408.

A legislative enactment, signed by the governor, remitting the sentence imposed in a criminal case, is equivalent to a pardon. People v. Stewart, 1 Idaho, N. S. 546.

2. United States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 291; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 556.

A declaration of war by Congress does not imply an authority to the president to extend the limits of the United States by conquering the enemy's country. Fleming v. Page, 9 How. (U. S.) 603.

The making by the president of rules and regulations for calling forth and drafting the militia is not the exercise of a power strictly and exclusively legislative. In re Griner, 16 Wis. 423.

The president's order authorizing the arrest, wherever found within the jurisdiction of the United States, of persons absconding themselves to avoid being drafted, was a legal and valid order. Al- len v. Colby, 47 N. H. 544. See v. Seward, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 563.

The president cannot revoke the sentence of a former president confirming the sentence of a court-martial. Runkle v. United States, 19 Ct. of Cl. 396.

Suspension of Habeas Corpus.—The power of suspending the writ of habeas corpus, under the constitution of the United States, is a legislative power, and is vested in Congress, and the president has no power to suspend the privilege of that writ. In re Kemp, 16 Wis. 35; Ex parte Merryman, Taney's Decision (U. S.); McCall v. McDowell, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 212; Ex parte Field, 5 Blatch (U. S.) 63. See Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 2. Story on the Const. § 1342, note.

3. Treaties—This power "embraces all sorts of treaties: for peace or war, for commerce or territory, for alliances, succors, for indemnity, for injuries, for payment of debts, for the recognition and enforcement of principles of public law, for any other purposes which the political interests of independent sovereigns may dictate in their intercourse with each other." 2 Story on Const. § 1508.

The construction of a treaty made by the executive department will be followed by the courts when such construction is not repugnant to the language and purpose of the treaty. Castro Uriarte, 16 Fed. Repr. 93.

A treaty may be superseded by a subsequent act of Congress. The Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 616; Clinton Bridge, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 150; United States v. Tobacco Farmers, 1 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 264.

4. Stephenson v. Little, 10 Mich. 403; State v. Dubuclet, 22 La. Ann. 602.

The governor cannot employ counsel to represent the State in a suit, nor give such counsel a lien on the judgment recovered. Compton v. State, 30 Ind. 601; Randall v. State, 16 Wis. 340.

acts through the heads of departments in reference to the business committed to them.<sup>1</sup>

6. Nature and Boundaries of Legislative Power.—The people of a State, in creating by their organic law a legislative department of government, confer upon it the whole of their inherently sovereign and uncontrolled power of legislation, except in so far as they have delegated this power in respect to certain subjects and under certain restrictions to the Congress of the United States, and except also in so far as they contemporaneously impose checks and limits upon the legislative authority. Hence the legislature of a State may enact any law (not infringing upon the other departments) of any character or on any subject, unless it is prohibited, either in express terms or by necessary implication, in the constitution of the United States or of that State. In other words, the constitutions are to be considered as limitations upon the legislative power of the State, not as grants of power.<sup>2</sup> The restric-as no power to make ing the lands of the ver is expressly constitute. McCashin v.

son, 13 Pet. (U. S.)
. Cutler, 2 Curt. (U.
ton v. Smith, 1 Pet.

impose independent id of a department to any rights secured Kendall v. United ) 524. See 2 Story

27 Barb. (N. Y.) 593; Taylor v. Porter, 4
Hill (N. Y.), 144; Cochran v. Van Surlay,
20 Wend. (N. Y.) 365; Page v. Allen, 58
Pa. St. 338; Philadelphia v. Field, 58 Pa.
St. 320; Commonwealth v. Drewry, 15
Gratt. (Va.) 1; State v. Gutierrez, 15 La.
Ann. 190; Leavenworth Co. v. Miller, 7
Kans. 479; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio
St. 14; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger,
34 Ind. 185; Mason v. Wait, 4 Scam. (Ill.)
134; Sears v. Cottrell, 5 Mich. 251;
Bushnell v. Beloit, 10 Wis. 195; People
v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; People v. Rogers, 13 Cal. 159; Pattison v. Yuba, 13 Cal.
175; Smith v. Judge, 17 Cal. 547; Cooley
Const. Lim. 87; Black on Const. Prohi- bitions, § 174.

An act of Congress organizing a Territorial government is to be regarded as the constitution of the Territory. But it differs from the constitution of the State governments in this, that the former contains a grant of powers, while the latter are restrictions of power primarily possessed. Ponder v. Graham, 4 Fla. 23.

Distinguished from Federal Constitution.
—The distinction between the United States constitution and the State constitution is, that the former confers upon Congress certain specified powers only, while the latter confers upon the legislature all legislative power. In the one case the powers specifically granted can only be exercised; in the other all legislative powers not prohibited. Peo- ple v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401; Page v.
Allen, 58 Pa. St. 338.

Continued Exercise of Power —The constant exercise of a power by the legislature, from the adoption of the constitution to the present time, ought to be deemed almost conclusive evidence of its

II, in case of an officer acting under the president, his authority is simply ministerial, he is liable for an excess or misuse of authority; but when his authority is discretionary he is not liable.
Droecker v. Solomon, 21 Wis. 621.

The approval of the secretary of the treasury is an indispensable condition to the validity of a sale made by the solicitor of the treasury of lands acquired by the United States in payment of debts; and the purchaser thereof is not bound to accept a deed without such approval. Unit- ed States v. Jonas, 19 Wall. (U. S.), 598.

A decision by the governor of a State that, in accordance with the decision of the appellate court on a similar law, a certain portion of a tax law was unconstitutional, and directing the auditor, who had oversight of the assessors, to instruct them to disregard that portion, is binding on auditor and assessors. State v.
Buchanan, 24 W. Va. 362.

8. Concord R. Co. v. Greeley, 17 N. H.
47; Thorpe v. Railroad, 27 Vt. 142; People
v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Leggett v. Hunt- er, 19 N. Y. 445; People v. Supervisors, tions upon legislative power embodied in the State constitution will be found treated under their appropriate heads throughout this title. The constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, and State legislation is subject to its prohibitions and limitations.<sup>1</sup> Treaties also are supreme law, and their rightful possession by that body. State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill (Md.), 487.

Implied Prohibitions.—It is not true that the inhibitions of the constitution must be always express; they are equally effective when they arise by implication. The remark of Lord Bacon, that "as exceptions strengthen the force of a general law, so enumeration weakens as to things not enumerated," expresses a principle of the common law applicable to the constitution. Page v. Allen, 58 Pa. St. 338.

Not Lost by Non-User.—The powers of government are never lost by non-user. Thus the fact that a State legislature does not exercise a reserved power of regulating the tolls charged by a railroad company, for twenty years after granting the charter, does not impair the power. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155.

All the duties or powers of any of the departments not disposed of or distributed to particular officers of that department are left to the disposal of the legislature. Ross v. Whitman, 6 Cal. 361.

Necessary Powers.—Where a clause of the State constitution allows the legislature to make "all such laws as may be necessary to carry this constitution into effect," the question of the necessity is within the legislative discretion. State v. Shields, 4 Mo. App. 259.

1. The laws of a State may be thus graduated with reference to their authority: (1) The constitution of the United States; (2) treaties; (3) laws of the United States; (4) the constitution of the State; (5) the statutes of the State; (6) provisional acts in force at the adoption of the State constitution, and not repugnant to any of the preceding; (7) the common law of England and such of the statute laws as were usually in force before the Revolution, with the foregoing limitation. Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194.

The States are not debarred from the exercise of any power possessed by them prior to the adoption of the Federal constitution, unless the exercise of such power is expressly or by necessary implication prohibited by the constitution, or comes practically in collision with the exercise of some power delegated to the general government. Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 507.

Bills of Credit may not be emitted by any State. Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10.

To constitute a bill of credit, within the meaning of the constitution, it must be issued by a State, involve the faith of the State, and be designed to circulate money on the credit of the State for the ordinary uses of business. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 518; Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 435; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1358-1363.

Bills issued by a banking corporation which has a capital paid in, and which is sued upon its debts, are not to be considered bills of credit, even though the corporation owns the entire stock, the legislature elects the directors, the faith of the State is pledged for the redemption of the bills, and they are made receivable for the payment of public dues. Darrington v. State of Kentucky, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 257; How. (U. S.) 12; Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 257; v. Arkansas, 15 How. (U. S.) 333; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. (U. S.) 205; Baily v. Milner, 35 Ga. 330; National Bank v. Mahan, 21 L. 751.

Bills of credit, as contemplated by the constitution, are such as are drawn upon the State upon the general credit thereof, where no specific fund is appropriated for the payment or ultimate redemption of the bills. Central Bank v. Little, 11 Ga. 346.

A bill drawn on the State, the redemption of which is to be made out of a specific fund pledged therefor, is not a bill of credit. Gowen v. Shute, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 397; State v. Cardozo, 5 S. Car. 297.

The prohibition against the emission of bills of credit applies with equal force to two or more States which confederate together, and on their faith and credit issue such bills. Baily v. Milner, 35 Ga. 330.

Bills of Attainder.—Concerning the prohibition against bills of attainder, see infra, § 1, and this article.

Concerning legislation impairing the obligation of contracts, see infra, § 2, and this article.

Compacts Between States.—The constitution requires that no agreement or compact between the States shall be entered into, unless it necessarily be by an express e disregarded or violated by the State legislative body, unless restricted by the constitution, abolish the acts of its predecessors; and there is no legislative act can be made irrevocable, except it in and substance of a contract.<sup>2</sup> The power of the disposing of the revenues of the State, and its disposition to such disposition, are complete and unlimited, of constitutional provisions.<sup>3</sup> of either house of the legislature that a person therein was duly elected is final, and cannot be the executive or judicial department.<sup>4</sup> By com-of the agreement; it om the legislation of subject. Virginia v. Vall (U. S.) 39.

Federal Constitution.—ntained in the first ten constitution of the e intended to be re-Federal government, authority of the States. W. (U. S.) 410; Colt v. Kenniston, 23 N. Y. Letzger, 1 Edm. Sel. Filson v. Wall, 34 Ala.

A legislative act which yment by contractors upon street improve-orks, but permits all o employed, is in con-y between the United peror of China, which ese resident here the mployed and labor for jects of any other na-fore void. Baker v. (U. S. Cir.) 566.

Stolley, 5 McLean Morgan v. Smith, 4 atman v. Kirner, 22 onst. Lim. 125.

te Water, 7 Ind. 570.

Debt—A provision of miting the State debt e State debt properly i not affect the power to allow the counties tract debts. Pattison 5; Robertson v. Rock-Slack v. Railroad, 13 Clapp v. Cedar Co., v. Janesville, 10 Wis. unham, 27 Ill. 474; Miller, 7 Kans. 479. Vapello Co., 13 Iowa, icago, 51 Ill. 34.

The legislature has no power to appropriate money for debts forbidden to be contracted by the constitution. Nou-gues v. Douglass, 7 Cal. 65.

The legislative assembly alone is judge as to whether existing taxation and other income afford sufficient funds, without additional taxes, to pay deficiencies as well as current expenses. Burch v. Earhart, 7 Oreg. 58.

The legislature has power to buy a State-house, within the price limited in the constitution, or to rent buildings. Harris v. Dubuclet, 30 La. Ann. 662.

In the absence of any constitutional provision, the legislature may control the moneys of the State in the hands of an individual, and may compromise suits instituted for its recovery. Governor v. McEwen, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 241.

4. Opinion of the Justices, 56 N. H. 570; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; State v. Jarrett, 17 Md. 309.

The power of a legislative body to judge of the qualifications of its own members is not exhausted by admitting a member to his seat, but continues during the entire term of office. State v. Gilmore, 20 Kans. 551.

The requirement that members of the legislature shall take the oath to support the constitution is merely directory, and the omission to take the oath does not affect the validity of their legislation. Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618. See Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293.

It is competent for the legislature to fix the date from which the terms of office of its members shall begin. State v. Robinson, 1 Kans. 17.

The House of Representatives of Massachusetts have the power to expel a member; and the reasons for expulsion and the question whether the member was duly heard before being expelled cannot be inquired into by the courts. Hiss v. Bartlett, 3 Gray (Mass.), 468.

In parliamentary law, the members of the legislature are privileged from arrest on civil process during the session of that body for a reasonable time before and after to enable them to go and return from the same.<sup>1</sup> The legislature has power to correct its journals by amendment at the same or a subsequent session. It also has power to compel witnesses to attend and testify before either house or one of its committees, and to punish them for contempt of its authority.<sup>2</sup>

When the business of the legislature, at a special session convened by the governor, is not restricted by some constitutional provision, it may enact any law at such special session that it might enact at a regular session. The powers of the legislature not derived from the governor's proclamation, it is not confined to the special purposes for which it may have been convened by him.

4) Legislative Control of Municipal Corporations.—The legislature has power to compel the municipal bodies to perform the duties and obligations as local governments under their charters, and to regulate, meet, and discharge the duties and obligations properly resting upon them as such, whether legal or merely equitable. It may also require them to exercise the power of taxation whenever or wherever it may be deemed necessary or expedient.<sup>3</sup> Acts of the legislature authorizing counties, cities, and towns to subscribe to the stock of railroads running through, to, or through them, to issue bonds, and to provide for payment by taxation of the individuals or property within their limits, are, in the absence of any constitutional provision to the contrary, undoubtedly constitutional and valid.<sup>4</sup> When the co-

Conley Const. Lim. 134. A senator while in attendance upon the legislature in the discharge of his public duties, at the seat of government of the state, is not privileged against service of process in a civil suit by virtue of a constitutional provision exempting senators and representatives from arrest in going to and returning from a session of the legislature. Gentry v. Griffith, 101 Cal. 461.

Turley v. Logan Co., 17 Ill. 151.

Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.), 226; Ex parte McCarthy, 29 Cal. 395.

The supreme court has no authority to review the proceedings of the State Senate in refusing to allow counsel to appear who had been summoned before a committee. Ex parte McCarthy, 29 Cal. 395.

Compare Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.), 226.

Norford v. Unger, 8 Clarke (Iowa). See People v. Blanding, 63 Cal. 100; Jones v. Theall, 3 Nev. 233; Adams v. Hoyer, 2 Kans. 17.

Committees have no power to act as courts during the recess of the legislature unless specially authorized. Marshall v. Harwood, 7 Md. 466.

5. Cooley Const. Lim. 230; Kilgob v. Mobile Co., 3 Woods (U. S. Cir. Ct. 5th Cir.) 555; Lycoming v. Union, 15 Pa. St. 16; Guilford v. Supervisors, 13 N. Y. 12; Sinton v. Ashbury, 41 Cal. 530; People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401; Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. v. Elizabeth, 42 N. J. 235.

But the legislature cannot impose upon a county a liability which had no previous existence. Sadbury Supervisors v. Deane, 96 Pa. St. 400; Hoagland v. Sacramento, 52 Cal. 142.

Where a new town or county is formed out of part of an old one, it is proper that a due proportion of the municipal debt should go with the territory taken for the new town or county. How the proportion should be ascertained is left to the legislature to determine. State v. Elvins, 3 Vroom (N. J.), 362; People v. Alameda, 26 Cal. 641.

6. Amey v. Allegheny, 24 How. (U. S.) 364; Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Bl. (U. S.), 510; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 175; Thomason v. Lee Co.

owers the legislature to establish but one system of county government, to be as nearly uniform as practicable; uniformity is not required.<sup>1</sup> The charter of a corporation is not a contract within the meaning of the clause against impairing contracts.<sup>2</sup>

Power Regulating Courts, Judges, and Jurisdiction.—The constitution establishes a particular court and fixes its powers; it is not competent for the legislature to pass any law changing the court, or either enlarging or abridging its powers. The judiciary system created by the constitution 17; Bridgeport v. Railroad, 15; Clarke v. Rochester, 436; Gould v. (N. Y.) 442; Grant v. (N. Y.) 232; Bank of B. N. Y. 38; People v. 551; Commonwealth Pa. St. 61; Moers v. 188; Commonwealth 32 Pa. St. 213; Sharp- a, 21 Pa. St. 147; s. c., ; Goddin v. Crump, 8 Caldwell v. Justices, 4 3q. 323; Hill v. Com- I. Car. 367; State v. (S. Car.) 491; Powers 23 Ga. 65; Cotton v. 6 Fla. 610; Stern v. 591; Gibbons v. Rail- 10; Ex parte Selma, Ala. 696; Opelika v. 11; Police Jury v. Mc- v. 341; San Antonio v. 19; San Antonio v. ; Talbot v. Dent, 9 B. Slack v. Railroad, 13 Maddox v. Graham, Allison v. Railroad, 10 Nichol v. Mayor, 9 52; Lauderdale Co. v. (Tenn.), 153; Leaven- ler, 7 Kans. 479; Cin- Commissioners, 1 Ohio Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 607; anati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 9 Ind. 74; Petty v. , Prettyman v. Super- ; Robertson v. Rock- Johnson v. Stark Co., 1 v. Lewis, 24 Ill. 208; 1, 27 Ill. 474; Pattison Cal. 175, 188; Robin- Cal. 379; Napa Valley , 30 Cal. 435; 1 Dillon § 153; 2 Redfield on 1 Rorer on Railr. 128 7. Vernon 27 Iowa, 28; ed, 25 Wis. 167; Peo- tlich, 452. , Comstock, 56 Wis.

590; Milwaukee County Supervisors v. Pabst, 45 Wis. 311.

Fixing the boundaries of counties, and dividing such counties into towns and providing for town organization, are properly within the sphere of the powers of the legislature, though not expressly specified by the constitution. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Langdale Co., 56 Wis. 614.

It is competent for a State legislature to transfer the control of the streets of a city or village to park commissioners for boulevard and driveway purposes not inconsistent with the ordinary use of such streets, the city or village assenting. People v. Walsh, 96 Ill. 232.

An act of the legislature fixing a county seat is not unconstitutional because it was passed without any consultation with the people of the county and without giving them an opportunity to petition the legislature; nor because two places were named in the act, and the choice between them left to the popular vote. Ex parte Hill, 40 Ala. 121.

One legislature cannot impose restrictions on the powers of a municipal corporation which a future legislature cannot modify or abrogate, except where a vested right or the obligation of a contract might be thereby divested or impaired. State v. Pittsburg, 31 La. Ann. 1.

2. Rader v. Road District, 36 N. J. L. 273; Berlin v. Gorham, 34 N. H. 266; Marietta v. Fearing, 4 Ohio, 427; Trustees v. Taitman, 13 Ill. 27; Louisville v. University, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 642; People v. Morris, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 331; St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507; Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 29 Vt. 12; Brighton v. Wilkinson, 2 Allen (Mass.), 27; Reynolds v. Baldwin, 1 La. Ann. 162; Cooley's Const. Lim. 193; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 44; 3 Parsons on Contracts, *529-531; 1 Dillon on Munic. Corp. §§ 24, 30, 37; 2 Story on the Const. § 1393.

3. Commonwealth v. Commissioners, 37 Pa. St. 237; Gibson v. Templeton, 62 Tex. 555; State v. Bank of East Ten-of the United States is entirely disconnected from, and independent of, the judiciary of the several States; and Congress cannot confer jurisdiction upon the State courts, nor can the State legislatures confer jurisdiction upon the federal courts.<sup>1</sup> Where the constitution provides that the judicial power of the State shall be vested in specified courts "and in such other courts as the legislature may from time to time establish," the legislature may vest part of the jurisdiction of the constitutional courts, or a concurrent jurisdiction, in those tribunals which it creates by statute or by a general law. Smith v. Judge, Cal. 547.

An act allowing judges of the superior courts to hold special terms at discretion is constitutional. Grinad v. State, 34 Cal. 270.
Or to review their decrees in equity after the expiration of the term. Longworth v. Sturges, 4 Ohio St. 690. Goodman v. Morris, 59 Ga. 60.
There is no provision in the constitution of Maine which forbids the legislature to confer on courts-martial the power to punish by fine. Alden v. Fitts, 25 Me. 488.
A statute providing that in the case of a tie in the election of clerks of court the court shall decide, is constitutional. Lewis v. State, 12 Mo. 128.
1. United States v. Peters, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 115; Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 300; Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 1; Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604.
Whether this State can grant jurisdiction to the courts of another State, can grant to another State the right to authorize her courts to act on certain matters in this State, or to constitute a court in this State to act upon the rights and property of citizens of such other State in this State, quære. Eaton, et al. v. R. Co. v. Hunt, 20 Ind. 457.
2. Commonwealth v. Green, 58 Pa. 226; Sharpe v. Robertson, 5 Grant (Vt.) 518; State v. Washington Co., 101 Ind. 69; Rabe v. Fyler, 10 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 440. See State v. La Crosse, 11 Wis.
Where the legislature, by permission of the constitution, empowers the supreme court to appoint commissioners to estimate when requested by county boards, the jurisdiction of the court is not created by the county boards, but by the fundamental law. In re Church, N. Y. 1.
In Indiana, a statute giving the mass commissioners authority to grant writs of habeas corpus is unconstitutional, conferring on them judicial power. Shoultz v. McPheeters, 79 Ind. 373. Gregory v. State, 94 Ind. 384; s. c.,

Tennessee, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 573; Ward v. Thomas, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 565; Gibson v. Emerson, 2 Engl. (Ark.) 172; State v. Jones, 22 Ark. 331; Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297; Deck v. Gherke, 6 Cal. 666; Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230. See 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1773, 1774; Durousseau v. United States, 6 Cranch (U. S.), 307; United States v. Moore, 3 Cranch (U. S.), 159, 170; Ex parte McCardle, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 506.

Thus, where the constitutional jurisdiction of the supreme court is appellate only, the legislature cannot confer upon it original jurisdiction in any case. Ward v. Thomas, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 565; State v. Bank of East Tennessee, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 573.

But the legislature may point out the mode in which the appellate jurisdiction shall be exercised, as when by appeal and when by writ of error. Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297.

The legislature cannot confer upon courts created by statute jurisdiction exclusive of that which the constitution gives to courts established by the constitution itself. Montross v. State, 61 Miss. 429.

It is not necessary for the legislature to act to enable the court to exercise its constitutional duties and powers. State v. Gleason, 12 Fla. 190.
A law allowing intermediate appeals to inferior courts is not an infringement of the constitutional jurisdiction of the supreme court, if an ultimate appeal to that tribunal is not denied. Yalabusha v. Carbry, 3 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 259. See Anderson v. Berry, 2 McCarter (N. J.), 232; Page v. Matthews, 40 Ala. 547; Ex parte Anthony, 5 Pike (Ark.), 358.

The constitutional ordinance that "divorces shall not be granted but in cases provided for by law, by suit in chancery," necessarily implies authority to provide by law in what cases they may be obtained. Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349.

A discretionary power bestowed by statute on the court may be taken away in any particular case by a special act or by a general law. Smith v. Judge, Cal. 547.

An act allowing judges of the superior courts to hold special terms at discretion is constitutional. Grinad v. State, 34 Cal. 270.

Or to review their decrees in equity after the expiration of the term. Longworth v. Sturges, 4 Ohio St. 690. Goodman v. Morris, 59 Ga. 60.

There is no provision in the constitution of Maine which forbids the legislature to confer on courts-martial the power to punish by fine. Alden v. Fitts, 25 Me. 488.

A statute providing that in the case of a tie in the election of clerks of court the court shall decide, is constitutional. Lewis v. State, 12 Mo. 128.

1. United States v. Peters, 5 Cranch (U. S.), 115; Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 300; Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 1; Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604.

Whether this State can grant jurisdiction to the courts of another State, can grant to another State the right to authorize her courts to act on certain matters in this State, or to constitute a court in this State to act upon the rights and property of citizens of such other State in this State, quære. Eaton, et al. v. R. Co. v. Hunt, 20 Ind. 457.

2. Commonwealth v. Green, 58 Pa. 226; Sharpe v. Robertson, 5 Grant (Vt.) 518; State v. Washington Co., 101 Ind. 69; Rabe v. Fyler, 10 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 440. See State v. La Crosse, 11 Wis.

Where the legislature, by permission of the constitution, empowers the supreme court to appoint commissioners to estimate when requested by county boards, the jurisdiction of the court is not created by the county boards, but by the fundamental law. In re Church, N. Y. 1.

In Indiana, a statute giving the mass commissioners authority to grant writs of habeas corpus is unconstitutional, conferring on them judicial power. Shoultz v. McPheeters, 79 Ind. 373. Gregory v. State, 94 Ind. 384; s. c.,

The legislature has no power to legalize any judicial proceedings that were void for want of jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> Nor to prescribe a form of process at variance with that designated by the State constitution.<sup>2</sup> Where a judge has been elected by the legislature, that body may curtail the territory of his jurisdiction down to the constitutional minimum, although it diminishes his compensation.<sup>3</sup> The legislative department has no constitutional power to impose on judicial officers any duties that are not strictly judicial in their character.<sup>4</sup> Courts are not bound to give written opinions in the cases they decide, and the legislature has no power to compel them to do so.<sup>5</sup>

(c) Local, Special, and Class Legislation.—Where there is no express constitutional restriction against the passage of local or special laws, the courts cannot hold such laws void for want of constitutional power to enact them; and the authority to enact laws strictly local implies the same authority to make local exceptions to a general law.<sup>6</sup> The term "local," as applied to a bill or act,

Am. Rep. 162. Compare Bell v. Payne, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 414.

A statute providing for the appointment of a special chancellor by the parties in a cause, or by lot if they cannot agree, to sit in the trial of the cause when the chancellor is interested or otherwise disqualified, does not violate the constitutional provision establishing a superior court of chancery, and providing that the chancellor shall be elected by the electors of the State. Montgomery v. Commercial Bank, 1 Sm. & Mar. Ch. (Miss.) 632.

A statute providing for the appointment of referees is not unconstitutional on the ground of creating a diversion of judicial power from the legitimate channels as pointed out in the constitution; the referees are subordinate officers of the court. Carson v. Smith, 5 Minn. 78.

A trial of a right of property before a sheriff is not a judicial proceeding, and therefore is not affected by that part of the constitution which limits the courts of the State. Rowe v. Bowen, 28 Ill. 116.

1. Maxwell v. Goetschius, 40 N. J. L. 383; McDaniel v. Carrell, 19 Ill. 226; Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen (Mass.) 361; Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407; Richards v. Rote, 68 Pa. St. 248; Pryor v. Downey, 50 Cal. 388; Israel v. Arthur, 7 Colo. 5; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 208; Cooley Const. Lim. 107. See infra, § 13, (b), of this article.

But where the jurisdiction has attached and there has been a formal defect in the proceedings, not affecting the substantial equities of the parties, it may be cured by a retroactive statute. Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407; State v. Union, 33 N. J. L. 350.

2. Manville v. Battle Mountain Co., 17 Fed. Repr. 126.

The legislature may constitutionally authorize an execution issued by a city or county court to run all over the State. Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

The legislature has the power to reasonably regulate, but not to abolish, either directly or indirectly, the use of the writ of certiorari. State v. Jersey City, 42 N. J. L. 118.

3. Foster v. Jones, 79 Va. 642; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 637.

But when the constitution has created an office, and fixed its term, and has also declared the grounds and mode of removal of an incumbent before the expiration of his term, the legislature has no power to remove or suspend the officer for any other reason or in any other mode. Lowe v. Commonwealth, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 237. See State v. Emerson, 39 Mo. 80.

4. Hayburn's Case, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 409; In re Cincinnati Citizens, 2 Flip. (U. S. Cir.) 228.

5. Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24.

A case which has been submitted for decision to the supreme court is not subject to any control by the legislature. Lanier v. Gallatas, 13 La. Ann. 175.

6. Beyman v. Black, 47 Tex. 558; Orr v. Rhine, 45 Tex. 345.

A provision of a State constitution that "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the State," does not inhibit the passage of appropriate local acts. Ohio v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

A prohibition in a State constitution against the passage of special laws does means one which touches only a portion of the territory of a State or of its citizens; an act may be public and yet local.<sup>1</sup> A statute in relation to the counties or cities of a State, which affects only a portion of them, or which expressly or impliedly excludes a portion from its operation, is local and special within the meaning of the constitutional inhibitions.<sup>2</sup> The prohibition cannot be evaded not affect special laws passed prior to the adoption of the constitution. Ex parte Burke, 59 Cal. 6; Brown v. Denver, 7 Colo. 305; People v. Jobs, 7 Colo. 475.

The fact that the representatives of a county sanction a local act applicable to it does not affect its constitutionality. Hamilton v. County Court, 15 Mo. 3.

1. Kerrigan v. Force, 68 N. Y. 381.

The meaning of the word "local," as applied to legislative bills, may be reached in two ways: (1) by ascertaining what the framers of the constitution desired to guard against by placing such a provision in it, and thus finding the meaning with which they charged the word; (2) by ascertaining what meaning has been given to the word by writers and courts when applied to a statute. People v. Chautauqua Co., 43 N. Y. 10.

Local and Temporary Distinguished.—The fact that a statute is limited as to the time of its duration does not make it a local or a special law; such an act is termed a temporary one. A local or special statute is one limited in the objects to which it applies; a temporary statute is limited merely in its duration. Necessarily a local or special law may be perpetual, or a general law may be temporary. People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 388.

Local and Special Distinguished.—The Indiana curative statute of March 21, 1879, "legalizing the practice of circuit courts in calling causes for issues, and in entering judgments on the first day of the term," is unconstitutional for the reason that it is both local and special in its provisions. It is special because it does not apply to all "judgments, orders, or decrees" which may have been or may be taken on the first day of the term; and it is local, also, because it does not in terms legalize and validate all the judgments, orders, or decrees of all the circuit courts of the State which had been so taken, but only of such of said courts as had "adopted rules of practice making the summons in civil causes returnable to the first day of the term." Mitchell v. McCorkle, 69 Ind. 184.

2. Regulating Fees of Officers.—An act regulating the salaries or fees of municipal or county officers which is applicable to but a single city or county, or to only a portion of the State, is unconstitutional as being special and local. Contieri v. New Brunswick, 44 N. J. L. 1, 58; People v. Hoffman, 24 Hun (N. Y.), 142; Gaskin v. Anderson, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; Gaskin v. Meek, 42 N. Y. 186. Compare Conner v. New York, 5 N. Y. 285.

Classification of Cities.—The only proper classification of cities and towns is by population. Geographical distinctions cannot be resorted to without entering the domain of special legislation. Commonwealth v. Patton, 88 Pa. St. 258; Wheeler v. Philadelphia, 77 Pa. St. 338; Kilgore v. Magee, 85 Pa. St. 401; People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585.

But an act excluding perpetually from its operation counties containing more than 150,000 or less than 10,000 inhabitants is a local law. The perpetual exclusion of certain counties from the operation of a law is not a classification of counties. Morrison v. Bachert, 112 Pa. St. 322.

Local Laws Regulating Internal Affairs of Towns.—The constitutional provision against enacting any "private, local, or special laws regulating the internal affairs of towns and counties" applies also to cities. State v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 1.

A statute conferring upon all cities having a population of not less than 25,000 inhabitants the power of issuing bonds to fund their floating debt is in violation of that provision. State v. Trenton, 42 N. J. L. 486.

Statutes Held Not Local.—The Kansas statute as to registration, while applying only to cities of the first and second classes, is not within the constitutional inhibition against the enactment of general laws not having a uniform operation. State v. Butts, 31 Kans. 537. Compare State v. Jersey City, 45 N. J. L. 297.

An act empowering justices of the peace and others to commit to the county jail in lieu of the workhouse, in certain cases, held not to be special legislation, though applicable only to counties having no workhouses. State v. Gibbs, 46 N. J. L. 513.

The statute of Illinois providing for summary convictions for refusing to work on public roads, the same being applicable to all counties in the State acting under township organization, is not a local or special law. Reynolds v. Foster, 89 Ill.

by declaring the act to be a general law. Any statute which can apply to but a portion of the State, though purporting to be a general statute, is special legislation.<sup>1</sup> In several of the States the legislature is forbidden to pass any special act conferring corporate powers. This provision applies only to private and not to municipal corporations.<sup>2</sup> The constitutions of several States provide that "all laws of a general nature shall be uniform in their operation." A statute is general and uniform in its operation when it operates equally upon all persons who are brought within the relations and circumstances provided for, though it may not affect every citizen or every portion of the State.<sup>3</sup> Where the 257. See Potwin v. Johnson, 108 Ill. 70.

An act which applies to fifty-eight of the sixty counties of the State cannot be deemed a local act. People v. Newburgh Plank Road Co., 86 N. Y. 1.

Police Power.—Statutes of a certain character, though local or special in their operation, may still be sustained on the ground of the police power. State v. Aubuchon, 8 Mo. App. 325; People v. Harper, 91 Ill. 357.

1. Belleville R. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20; Devine v. Commissioners, 84 Ill. 590; Gibbs v. Morgan, 39 N. J. Eq. 126; Woodard v. Brien, 14 Lea (Tenn.), 520; Topeka v. Gillett, 32 Kans. 431.

An act which assumes to give a lien for certain kinds of work, and which, although it has an enacting clause applicable to the entire State, yet contains a section excluding from its operation one or more counties either specifically by name or by excluding from its operation counties having a population greater than a certain number, is in violation of the constitutional provision against local and special legislation. Davis v. Clark, 18 Repr. (Pa.) 667.

The Missouri statute of 1881 (p. 172) was an act to regulate the appointment of notaries public in all cities having a population of 100,000 or more, and it provided that the office of any notary public in such city, holding a commission bearing date prior to the passage of the act, and whose term of office had not expired at the time the act became a law, should be abolished; the act could only apply to St. Louis. Held, that the court would take judicial notice of that fact ascertained from the census reports, and that the act was special legislation and unconstitutional. State v. Herrmann, 75 Mo. 340.

2. State v. Newark, 40 N. J. L. 71; Read v. Plattsmouth, 107 U. S. 568.

Such a provision does not prohibit the legislature from passing a special act changing the name of an existing corporation and giving it power to purchase the franchises of another existing corporation. Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. 146. Compare In re Union Ferry Co., 32 Hun (N. Y.), 82.

An act enabling a particular foreign corporation to sue and be sued within the State is not a private or local bill. Fall Brook Coal Co. v. Lynch, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 520.

An act purporting to authorize a single ferry at a designated point on a particular river is void under a constitution which prohibits the legislature from chartering or licensing ferries by local or special laws. Frye v. Partridge, 82 Ill. 267.

Private Highway Bills.—A constitutional provision against the passage of a private or local bill "laying out, opening, etc., roads, highways, or alleys" does not include city streets or avenues. In re Woolsey, 95 N. Y. 135; In re Lexington Avenue, 92 N. Y. 629.

A special act authorizing a plank-road company to mortgage its road does not conflict with the constitutional provision against authorizing "by private or special law the sale or conveyance of any real estate belonging to any person," but must be treated as an amendment of the charter. Joy v. Jackson, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 155.

3. McAunich v. Railroad, 20 Iowa, 338; Cordova v. State, 6 Tex. App. 207; State v. Mining Co., 16 Nev. 432; Lake v. State, 18 Fla. 501. See Kelley v. State, 6 Ohio St. 269.

The word "operation," as used in the constitutional provision that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation, refers to the practical working and effect of a law. Geebrick v. State, 5 Iowa, 491.

A statute authorizing five per cent damages to be taxed as costs against the losing party in litigated cases in San Francisco acts equally and uniformly upon all parties upon whom it acts at all, and is constitutional. Corwin v. Ward, 35 Cal. 198.

An act fixing the rate of interest which constitution empowers the legislature to pass special acts "in cases where a general law cannot be made applicable," the legislature is the exclusive judge of the necessity of special legislation in a given case.<sup>1</sup>

(d) Delegation of Powers.—It is an established principle of constitutional law that the power conferred upon the legislature to enact laws cannot be delegated by that department to any other body or authority.<sup>2</sup> But this principle does not restrict the authority may be charged by pawnbrokers is no violation of a constitutional provision for "uniform laws." Jackson v. Shawl, 29 Cal. 267.

Revenue Laws.—By the requirement of a "uniform operation," as applied to revenue laws and tax statutes, it was intended that laws of this character should, as near as possible, affect persons and property alike. But approximation is all that can be expected. A revenue law which should be absolutely equal in its operation is impossible. People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; People v. Whyler, 41 Cal. 351; Kirby v. Shaw, 19 Pa. St. 258; Commonwealth v. Savings Bank, 5 Allen (Mass.), 428; Allen v. Drew, 44 Vt. 174, 186; Cooley on Taxation, 164 et seq.

Soldiers.—A law which extends to a particular class, as soldiers, the privilege of voting, when out of the State, for State and county officers, is not unconstitutional by reason of not extending the same privilege to all the electors of the State when absent from the State. Chandler v. Main, 16 Wis. 398.

Railroads.—Where a statute imposes on railroad companies the duty of fencing their track, and provides that they shall be liable not only for damages resulting from neglect of such duty, but also for a reasonable attorney fee in any case brought to recover such damages, the provision regarding the attorney fee is not unconstitutional; it is not a case of singling out a certain class of corporations and imposing upon them a peculiar liability, but it is in the nature of a penalty imposed for the neglect of a statutory duty. Peoria, etc., R. v. Duggan, 18 Repr. (Ill.) 357. See Thorpe v. Railroad, 27 Vt. 156; Cooley's Const. Lim. 579. See also POLICE POWER.

Exclusive Privileges.—A clause in the constitution which declares that "no man or set of men are entitled to separate public emoluments or privileges from the community but in consideration of public services," has no reference to the private relations of the citizens, nor to the action of the legislature in passing laws regulating the domestic policy and business affairs of the people or any portion of them. Williams v. Cammack, 27 Miss.

209; Martin v. O'Brien, 34 Miss. 21. Compare Smith v. Smith, 1 How. (Miss.) 102. See Bank of Newbern v. Taylor, 1 Car. Law Repos. 246; Gordon v. Winchester, 12 Bush (Ky.), 114; Louisville, Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas-light Co., 115 U. S. 683; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 54; Cooley Const. Lim. 393-396. See, infra, §§ 9 (g), and 12 (a).

1. St. Louis v. Shields, 62 Mo. 247; Mosier v. Hilton, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 657; Johnson v. Railroad, 23 Ill. 202; Hess v. Pegg, 7 Nev. 23; In re Sticknoth, 7 Nev. 223. Compare State v. Newark, 40 N. J. L. 71.

The courts have authority to decide whether an act is for a local or private purpose, and therefore within a constitutional provision which requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature for a bill appropriating money for local or private purposes. The legislature must indeed decide in the first instance, but their decision is not final or conclusive. People v. Allen, 42 N. Y. 378.

2. State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 362; State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33; Thorne v. Cramer, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 112; Bradley v. Baxter, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483; People v. Stout, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 349; Parker v. Commonwealth, 6 Pa. St. 507; Commonwealth v. McWilliams, 11 Pa. St. 61; Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; State v. Swisher, 17 Tex. 441; State v. Armstrong, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 634; Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, 1 Ohio St. 77; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 482; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa. 165; Geebrick v. State, 5 Iowa. 491; State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa. 203; State v. Weir, 33 Iowa. 134; State v. Wilcox, 45 Mo. 458; People v. Collins, 3 Mich. 343; Ex parte Cox, 65 Cal. 21; Brown v. Fleischner, 4 Oreg. 132; Cooley's Const. Lim. 117; Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 61-63; Dillon on Munic. Corp. §§ 60, 567, 618.

A statute of Minnesota provided for the taking up of certain State bonds and issuing new ones in lieu of them; but it was doubtful whether this could be done legally without submitting the question to a vote of the people. The act thereof the legislature, in creating municipal corporations, to confer upon them the right of local government and the power to make by-laws and ordinances not inconsistent with the laws of the State. This is not regarded as a delegation of power.<sup>1</sup> So the legislature may, in its discretion, recall to itself and exercise so much of the powers it has conferred on municipal corporations as are not secured to such corporations by the constitution.<sup>2</sup> Statutes creating municipal corporations, or imposing liabilities upon them, or authorizing them to incur obligations or make improvements, may be referred to the people of the districts immediately affected, to decide by their votes whether they will accept the incorporation or assume the burdens; but the legislature must enact a complete and valid law according to the prescribed usages, and it must derive its whole vigor and vitality from the legislature, and no additional efficacy from the popular vote.<sup>3</sup> A private act of incorporation fore provided that the decision of this question should be left to the judges of the supreme court, or, in case they should decline to act, to an equal number of judges of the district courts, and that the matter should be submitted to the people or not according as the judges decided. Held, that the act delegated legislative power to the judges mentioned, and was therefore unconstitutional. State v. Young, 29 Minn. 474.

An act of the legislature conferring on the district court the power to incorporate towns is unconstitutional, because the constitution confers that power on the legislature, and delegated power cannot be delegated. People v. Nevada, 6 Cal. 143; State v. Simons, 32 Minn. 540. See Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 302.

The creation of a railroad commission to fix reasonable tolls for freight and passenger transportation is not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. Georgia R. v. Smith, 70 Ga. 694.

Neither is the giving of power to the governor to make pilotage regulations. Martin v. Witherspoon, 135 Mass. 175.

An act of Congress authorizing the erection of a bridge over navigable waters may lawfully devolve upon the secretary of war the duty of determining, from a plan of the proposed bridge, to be submitted by the bridge company, whether or not it conforms to a condition in the act that the navigation of the river shall not be injured, there being an express reservation to Congress of power to amend or repeal the act. People v. Kelly, 5 Abb. (N. Y.) New Cas. 383.

1. State v. Noyes, 30 N. H. 279; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Durach's Appeal, 63 Pa. St. 491; Burgess v. Pue, 2 Gill (Md.), 11; Jones v. Richmond, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 517; New Orleans v. Turpin, 13 La. Ann. 56; Perry v. Rockdale, 62 Tex. 451; Bradley v. McAtee, 7 Bush (Ky.), 667; Triggally v. Memphis, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 382; Bliss v. Kraus, 16 Ohio St. 55; Dalby v. Wolf, 14 Iowa. 228; State v. Wilcox, 45 Mo. 458; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 108; Mills v. Charleton, 29 Wis. 415; State v. Neill, 24 Wis. 149; Cooley's Const. Lim. 191.

A legislature which itself has power to impose a poll tax may authorize a municipality to impose one. Perry v. Rockdale, 62 Tex. 451.

2. People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377.

3. Lammert v. Lidwell, 62 Mo. 188.

Vote on Acceptance of Charter.—It is not an unlawful delegation of power for the legislature to provide that a proposed city charter shall be submitted for adoption or rejection to the popular vote. Gorham v. Springfield, 21 Me. 58; Call v. Charlbourn, 46 Me. 206; Bank of Chenango v. Brown, 26 N. Y. 467; Commonwealth v. Painter, 10 Pa. St. 214; Commonwealth v. Judges, 8 Pa. St. 391; Patterson v. Society, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 385; Burgess v. Pue, 2 Gill (Md.), 11; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78; Clarke v. Rogers, 81 Ky. 43; Lafayette, etc., R. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Guild v. Chicago, 82 Ill. 472; Morford v. Unger, 9 Iowa. 82; State v. Scott, 17 Mo. 521; State v. Wilcox, 45 Mo. 458; Hobart v. Supervisors, 17 Cal. 23; Cooley's Const. Lim. 118.

Division of Counties.—The question whether a county or township shall be divided and a new one erected, or whether two shall be consolidated, or new territory be added to an existing division, may properly be referred to the popular vote. State v. Elwood, 11 Wis. 17; Smith v. McCarthy, 56 Pa. St. 359; State v. Reynolds, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 1; State may be made to depend upon its acceptance by the corp

But the legislature has no constitutional power, in enacti eral law applicable to all the people of the State, to con taking effect upon the casting of a popular vote in its favor

v. McNeill, 24 Wis. 149; Commonwealth v. Judges, 8 Pa. St. 391; Call v. Chadbourne, 46 Me. 206.

Location of County Seat.—Whether the county seat shall be located at a particular place, or after its location be removed elsewhere, may be left by the legislature to the decision of the voters immediately concerned. Commonwealth v. Painter, 10 Pa. St. 214; People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37.

A statute changing from one town to another the holding of terms of the supreme court in and for the county is not unconstitutional in making the change depend on the performance of certain acts by the citizens of the latter town, as to providing accommodations, etc. Walton v. Greenwood, 60 Me. 356.

Local Option.—A statute providing that the citizens of the several counties shall decide by their votes whether or not the retailing of intoxicating liquors shall be permitted in said counties, is unconstitutional, as being an unlawful delegation of legislative power. Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; Parker v. Commonwealth, 6 Pa. St. 507; Commonwealth v. McWilliams, 11 Pa. St. 61; State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33; Geebrick v. State, 5 Iowa. 405; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 484; State v. Field, 17 Mo. 529.

Municipal Aid to Railroads.—A statute allowing towns through which a certain railroad is to pass to subscribe to its stock, provided a certain proportion of the resident tax-payers vote to do so, is not a delegation of legislative power; it is a grant of a privilege to the towns, taking effect immediately, but providing that their election to use the privilege shall be signified in a certain manner. Starin v. Genoa, 23 N. Y. 439; San Antonio v. Jones, 28 Tex. 19.

1 Angell & Ames on Corp. § 81.

The principle that a State legislature cannot delegate its legislative power does not forbid it to grant a franchise dependent on a condition of obtaining consent from another body. For the legislature to create a corporation with power to lay a street railroad, subject to the condition of obtaining the assent of the city to the use of the street, does not involve delegating legislative power to the city. Philadelphia v. Passenger R. Co., 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 14.

The repeal of a charter may depend upon a contingency. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583.

8 Barto v. Himrod, 8 I. Thorne v. Cramer, 15 Barb. Santo v. State, 2 Iowa, 165 Wall. 48 Cal. 279, 313; State v. Swish, 9 Iowa, 203; State v. Field, 17 Mo. 441; State v. Brown, 26 of Chenango v. Brown, 26 People v. Stout, 23 Barb. (I. State v. Wilcox, 45 Mo. 458 State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 357 Noyes, 30 N. H. 292; Bull Gratt. (Va.) 78; Johnson v. R. (N. Y.) 680; State v. Reynolds (Ill.) 1; Robinson v. Bidwe 349; Smith v. Janesville, 26 See Cooley's Const. Lim. §§

Test of Conditional Legislation. true that a statute may be pas effect upon the happening o event, but this does not mea every event that may be na event should be one which sh such a change of circumstance law-makers, in the exercise of judgment, can declare it to b expedient that the law shall when the event shall occur. is legislature cannot transfer to responsibility of deciding what is expedient and proper, with either to present conditions contingencies. For the legisla that they deem a law to be provided the people shall deen ent, amounts to an abandon legislative functions. A statu to take effect upon a subsequ must be, when it comes from of the legislature, a law in take effect in futuro. On th of the expediency of the law laure must exercise its own definitely and finally. If the made to take effect on the oc an event, the legislature m it expedient if the event shall b inexpedient if it shall not happ can appeal to no other man judge for them in relation to or future propriety, or neces must exercise that power them thus perform the duty impo them by the constitution. F of a law drawn to take effect approved by a popular vote.

a legislative act is, by its terms, to take effect in any contingency, it is not unconstitutional to make the time when it shall take effect depend upon the event of a popular vote.<sup>1</sup>

7. Powers of Congress.—The government of the United States is one of enumerated powers, the national constitution being the instrument which specifies them, and the power of Congress to pass any law must be sought alone in some express grant in the constitution, or be found necessary to carry into effect such powers as are there conferred.<sup>2</sup> Where, by the constitution, power is given to Congress over a subject, not exclusive in its terms nor inconsistent with State action, the States have power to legislate upon that subject until Congress exercises the power conferred respecting the expediency of the law is expected to happen. The expediency or wisdom of the law, abstractly considered, does not depend on a vote of the people, it is unwise before the vote is taken, it is equally unwise afterward. The legislature has no more right to refer such a question to the whole people than to a single individual. Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 9, 313. See Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 10. Compare State v. Parker, 26 Vt.

's Const. Lim. 123; State v. Wall, 48 Cal. 9, 313.

Thompson, 103 U. S. 47; Hunter's Lessee, 1 Wheat. 130; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 306; Bank of Kentucky, 11 U. S. 157; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 U. S. 713; People v. Flagg, 46 Pa. St. 338; Allen, 58 Pa. St. 477; Cooley's 9; 2 Story on the Const. § in the constitution. If it be, the question is decided. If it be not expressed, the next inquiry must be, whether it is properly an incident to an express power and necessary to its execution. If it be, then it may be exercised by Congress. If not, Congress cannot exercise it." 2 Story on the Const. § 1243.

Thus the act of Congress of Aug. 15, 1876, c. 287, § 6, prohibiting certain officers of the United States from "requesting, giving to or receiving from any other officer . . . money or property or other thing of value for political purposes," was held constitutional, as being within the power of Congress to pass laws to carry into effect its delegated powers. Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. 371. And see Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145.

On the other hand, U. S. Rev. Stats. § 5519, providing that "if two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire . . . to deprive . . . any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws," they shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, was held unconstitutional, as not being within any of the powers delegated to Congress. United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629.

Right to Decide upon Extent of Powers Delegated.—It has been claimed that as the government of the United States is one of delegated powers, the right to decide ultimately upon the extent of powers granted has not been delegated to the Federal government, nor prohibited to the States, and is preserved to the States by the provisions of the Tenth Amendment. See Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

But this is, perhaps, to be regarded as one of the political questions that were definitely settled by the recent events in our national history. The government of the Union is to judge of the extent and the proper exercise of its powers. 1 Story on the Const. § 432. See Crane

Implied Powers.—Power is given to Congress to "make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this constitution to the government of the United States in any department or officer thereof." Const. U. S. art. 1, § 8. Concerning this Story says: "The plain import of the clause is, that Congress shall have all incidental and instrumental powers necessary and proper to carry into execution all the express powers. It neither enlarges any power specifically granted, nor is it a grant of any new power to Congress; but it is merely a declaration of the removal of all uncertainty, that the means of carrying into execution the otherwise granted are included in the grant. Whenever, therefore, a question arises concerning the constitutionality of a particular power, the first question is, whether the power be expressed upon it.<sup>1</sup> But in cases of concurrent authority, when Congress exercises its power, it thereby prohibits and supersedes all State legislation on the same subject.<sup>2</sup>

The power conferred upon Congress by the constitution "to regulate commerce with foreign nations" includes the power to regulate navigation, and embraces all commercial intercourse with foreign powers, the transportation and entry both of freight and passengers, the nationalization of American ships, and the recording of the muniments of title to the same, and the laws of quarantine, pilotage, wrecks, and embargoes.<sup>3</sup> (For a detailed considand Moses' "Comparative Politics," p. 236 et seq.

In the exercise of its admitted powers Congress may undoubtedly deprive an individual of the opportunity to enjoy a right that belongs to him as a citizen of a State, even of the right of suffrage. Huber v. Reily, 53 Pa. St. 112.

Congress cannot, by legislative act, coerce any State officer as such to perform any duty. The State officer may perform it if he thinks proper, and it may be a moral duty to perform it; but if he refuses, no law of Congress can compel him. Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66.

1. Weaver v. Fegley, 29 Pa. St. 27; People v. Sheriff, 1 Parker (N. Y.), 659; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Sturgis v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 1. On the subject of concurrent and exclusive powers, consult 1 Story on the Const. §§ 455-447; The Federalist. No. 32.

2. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Sturgis v. Crowninshield, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 419; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S. Cir.) 313; In re Kirk, 1 Parker (N. Y.), 67; Freeman v. Robinson, 7 Ind. 321; 1 Story on the Const. § 439.

Where the legislature of a State has acted upon a subject which, by the constitution of the United States, is within the jurisdiction of Congress, but as to which Congress has not exercised its power, a subsequent act of Congress on that subject does not operate as a repeal of the State statute. Such action of Congress indicates an intention to assume the exercise of the power conferred by the constitution, and the State law becomes from that time inoperative; but no change of policy on the part of the State is indicated, such as would render it inconsistent to enforce the provisions of a statute which had been repealed. Hence a penalty incurred for a violation of the State law before the passage of the act of Congress may be recovered after its passage. Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446.

When any right or privilege is subject to the regulation of Congress, it is not competent for State laws to impose conditions which shall interfere with the rights or diminish their value. Cranston v. Smith, 37 Mich. 309.

3. United States v. Craig, 22 Repr. (U. S. Cir.) 707; 2 Story on the Constitution, §§ 1056-1102; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

Navigation.—The power of controlling navigation is incidental to the power to regulate commerce; hence the power of Congress over the vessel is coextensive with that over the cargo. Brig Wilson v. United States, 1 Brock. (U. S. Cir.) 423; The Bark Chusan, 2 Story (U. S. Cir.) 455; Moor v. Veazie, 32 Me. 343; Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. (U. S.) 568.

On What Waters.—The power is restricted to such waters as can be employed in commerce between a State and foreign nations or some other State; it does not extend to those waters within a State from which a vessel cannot be navigated to a foreign port or to another State. Moor v. Veazie, 32 Me. 343; King v. American Transportation Co., 1 Flip. (U. S. Cir.) 1.

But while navigating the high seas between ports of the same State, a vessel of the United States is, together with the business in which she is engaged, subject to the regulating power of Congress. Lord v. Goodall S. S. Co., 102 U. S. 541; Pacific Coast S. S. Co. v. California R. Comm'rs, 18 Fed Repr. 10.

So far as it may be necessary to protect the products of other countries and States from discrimination by reason of their foreign origin, the power of the national government over commerce with foreign nations, etc., reaches the interior of every State in the Union. Guy v. Baltimore, 100 U. S. 434.

Registration of Vessels.—The act of Congress of July 29, 1850, requiring the transfer of a vessel to be recorded in the office of the collector of customs where the vessel is registered or enrolled, is constitutional. White's Bank v. Smith, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Blanchard v. The Martha Washington, 1 Cliff. (U. S. Cir.) 463; Foster v. Chamberlain, 41 Ala. 158; Shaw v. McCandless, 36 Miss. 296.

To determine what shall be evidence of title to vessels is within the power of Congress to regulate commerce; hence the act of 1850, as to recording mortgages, controls the State Statute of Frauds. Mitchell v. Steelman, 8 Cal. 363.

Pilotage.—Congress has authority to pass laws regulating pilotage under its constitutional control over commerce. Cisco v. Roberts, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 494; 2 Story on the Const. § 1070.

But the grant to Congress of this control did not of itself deprive the States of the power to regulate pilots. Cooley v. Philadelphia, 12 How. (U. S.) 299.

Embargoes.—An act of Congress laying an embargo, whether for a limited or an indefinite time, and whether upon foreign or domestic voyages, is valid and constitutional. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 191; United States v. The William, 2 Hall's Law Journal, 255; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1075, 1289-1292.

Passenger Traffic.—The term "commerce," as used in the Federal constitution, is not limited to an exchange of commodities only, but includes as well "intercourse" with foreign nations; and the term "intercourse" includes the transportation of passengers. People v. Raymond, 34 Cal. 492.

Immigration.—A State statute imposing a tax on every alien passenger who shall come by vessel from a foreign country to a port of the State, and holding a vessel liable therefor, is void as a regulation of foreign commerce. People v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59; Passenger Cases, 7 How. (U. S.) 283; People v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 8 Sawy. (U. S. Cir.) 630.

But a law of New York which required a report to be made of the passengers brought from abroad into the port of New York, and prescribed a fine for neglecting compliance, was held constitutional. New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 102; Mayor v. Staples, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 169.

A statute which imposes a burdensome and almost impossible condition on the ship-master as a prerequisite to his landing his passengers, with an alternative of paying a small sum of money for each one of them, is a tax on the shipowner for the right to land such passengers. Such a statute of a State is a regulation of commerce, and, when applied to passengers from foreign countries, is a regulation of commerce with foreign nations. Legislation on the subject which it covers is confided exclusively to Congress by that clause of the constitution which gives to that body the "right to regulate commerce with foreign nations." It cannot be defended as falling within the police power of the State, for legislation is prohibited to the State over all matters on which it is granted exclusively to Congress. Henderson v. Mayor of New York, 92 U. S. 259; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275.

But Congress itself has power, under the commerce clause, to inhibit any class or degree of immigrants from coming into the United States. United States v. Craig, 22 Repr. (U. S. Cir.) 707. Or to tax them. Edye v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580.

Tonnage Duties.—Any duty, tax, or burden imposed under the authority of the States which is in its essence a contribution claimed for the privilege of arriving and departing from a port of the United States, and which is assessed on a vessel according to its carrying capacity, is void unless the consent of Congress be obtained. Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 577; Hackley v. Geraghty, 34 N. J. L. 332.

A State statute entitling port-wardens to receive a certain sum or fee for every vessel coming into port, whether called on to perform any service or not, is a regulation of commerce and unconstitutional. Steamship Co. v. Port Wardens, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 31.

A State law which authorizes a State officer at a port to make a survey of sea-going vessels there arriving and of damaged goods found on board,—not for the purpose of certifying the quantity and value of the things inspected for the protection of consumers, but to furnish official evidence for the parties immediately concerned, and where goods are found damaged to provide for their sale,—is not an inspection law such as a State may pass, but a regulation of commerce, and unconstitutional. Foster v. New Orleans, 94 U. S. 246.

The Power Exclusive.—The power of Congress to regulate foreign and interstate commerce is exclusive, and the States are entirely prohibited from legislating on the subject. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; People v. Downer, 7 Cal. 169; Mitchell v. Steel- eration of the power of Congress to regulate commerce among the several States, the reader is referred to the title INTERSTATE COMMERCE.) Such of the other powers of Congress as have been made the subject of judicial discussion are mentioned in the note.<sup>1</sup> man, 8 Cal. 363; Railroad Commissioners v. Railroad Company, 19 Repr. (S. Car.) 795; 2 Story on the Const. § 1072. Compare Henderson v. Spofford, 59 N. Y. 131; People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46.

Until action has been taken by Congress, the legislation of a State, not directed against commerce or any of its regulations, but relating generally to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, is of obligatory force within its territorial jurisdiction, notwithstanding it may remotely and indirectly affect the operations of foreign or interstate commerce, or persons engaged in such commerce. Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99.

State Taxation of Imports.—The constitutional prohibition against the levying by States of duties on imports or exports relates to foreign not to interstate commerce. Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622. See infra, § 11 of this title. See also Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 419; Smith v. People, 1 Park. (N. Y.) 583; Wynhamer v. People, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 567.

A State law imposing a tax upon premiums received for insuring imports is not a regulation of commerce. People v. National Ins. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.), 188.

A State tax on the gross receipts of a State corporation engaged in transporting freight and passengers between this and foreign countries is not a regulation of foreign commerce. Philadelphia & Southern Mail S. S. Co. v. Commonwealth, 104 Pa. St. 109.

1. Regulation of Commerce.—The power to regulate commerce among the States is vested exclusively in Congress, and a State cannot legislate upon a matter of interstate commerce even where Congress has not acted upon the subject. Railroad Commissioners v. Railroad Company, 19 Repr. (S. Car.) 795; 2 Story on the Const. § 1072, and notes. Compare License Cases, 5 How. (U. S.) 504. See Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 42; Steamship Co. v. Portwardens, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 31; Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. 236.

Bankruptcy.—The several States have power to legislate on the subject of bankrupt and insolvent laws, subject, however, to the authority conferred upon Congress by the constitution to adopt a uniform system of bankruptcy, which authority when exercised is paramount, and State enactments in conflict with those of Congress upon the subject are superseded and become inoperative. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Smith, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 131; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 229; Meekins v. Creditors, 19 La. Ann. 497; 2 Story on Const. § 1114.

Since there is nothing in the Federal constitution to prohibit Congress from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts, it is universally conceded that a national bankrupt law, when there is one in existence, with provisions compulsory upon creditors, is valid and constitutional. In re Beckerford, 1 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 45; In re Owens, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 518; Keene v. Mould, 16 Ohio, 12; Morse v. Hovey, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 404; In re Reiman, 7 Ben. (U. S. Dist.) 455; Darling v. Berry, 4 McCrary (U. S. Cir.), 470.

Federal Judicial Power.—Where a question to which the judicial power of the Union is extended by the constitution forms an ingredient of the original cause, it is in the power of Congress to give the circuit courts jurisdiction of that cause, although other questions of fact or of law may be involved in it. Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738; Mayor v. Cooper, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 252; Connor v. Scott, 4 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 242; Dillon on Removal of Causes, § 30.

Congress may vest exclusively in the courts of the United States all the judicial power of the Union; and it seems that no part of the criminal jurisdiction of the United States can, consistently with the constitution, be delegated to the State tribunals. Stearns v. U. S., 2 Paine (U. S. Cir.), 300.

Removal of Causes.—The power of Congress to authorize the removal of cases, to which the Federal judicial power conferred by the constitution extends, from the State courts to the Federal courts, has been frequently declared by the supreme court, and the constitutionality of the Removal Acts of 1789, 1833, 1863, 1866, 1867, and 1875 is established beyond question. Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10; Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303; State v. Hoskins, 77 N. Car. 530; Hodgson v. Millward, 3 Grant (Pa.), 412; State v. Common Pleas, 15 Ohio St. 377;

Dillon on Removal of Causes, §§ 9, 32, 36.

Punishment of Counterfeiting.—Congress has the constitutional power to enact laws for the punishment of passing, or of bringing into the United States with intent to pass, counterfeit coin. United States v. Marigold, 9 How. (U. S.) 560.

The power of Congress to "provide for the punishment of counterfeiting" does not preclude a State from passing a law to punish the offence of circulating counterfeit coin of the United States. The two offences—of counterfeiting the coin, and of passing counterfeit money—are essentially different in their character. The former is an offence directly against the government by which individuals may be affected; the latter is a private wrong by which the government may be remotely, if in any degree, reached. Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. (U. S.) 410. See Moore v. People, 14 How. (U. S.) 13.

It has been held that the State as well as the National courts have jurisdiction to try persons charged with making counterfeit money. Sizemore v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.) 26; People v. White, 34 Cal. 183. But compare 2 Story on the Const. § 1123; State v. Brown, 2 Oreg. 221; Mattison v. State, 3 Mo. 421.

Legal Tender.—It is within the constitutional power of Congress to make treasury notes of the United States a legal tender in payment of debts. Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 457 [overruling Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 604]; Dooley v. Smith, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 605; Bigler v. Waller, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Railroad Co. v. Johnson, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 195; Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U. S. 421; George v. Concord, 45 N. H. 434; Carpenter v. Bank, 39 Vt. 46; Hague v. Powers, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 427; Metropolitan Bank v. Van Dyck, 27 N. Y. 400; Shollenberger v. Brinton, 52 Pa. St. 9; Thayer v. Hedges, 23 Ind. 141; Brown v. Welch, 26 Ind. 116; Hintragen v. Bates, 18 Iowa, 174; Verges v. Giboney, 38 Mo. 458; Van Huse v. Kanouse, 13 Mich. 303; Breitenbach v. Turner, 18 Wis. 140; Lick v. Faulkner, 25 Cal. 404; Maynard v. Newman, 1 Nev. 271.

Weights and Measures.—A State has the right to regulate weights and measures until Congress exercises its power over that subject. Weaver v. Fegely, 29 Pa. St. 27; 2 Story on the Const. § 1122.

Federal Taxation.—"Congress is authorized to lay and collect taxes, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. This does not interfere with the power of the States to tax for the support of their own governments; nor is the exercise of that power by the States an exercise of any portion of the power that is granted to the United States. In imposing taxes for State purposes they are not doing what Congress is empowered to do. Congress is not empowered to tax for those purposes which are within the exclusive province of the States." Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, 199. See 1 Story on the Const. § 926. And see, infra, § 11 of this article.

Power to Borrow Money.—The power of the United States to borrow money cannot in any way be controlled or interfered with by the States. The granting of the power is incompatible with any restraining or controlling power, and the declaration of supremacy in the constitution is a declaration that no such restraining or controlling power shall be exercised. 2 Story on the Const. § 1055; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 449; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 200; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; People v. Commissioners, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 244; Bank v. Supervisors, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 26.

Naturalization Laws.—It is well settled that the power of Congress to establish a uniform rule of naturalization is exclusive, and the States cannot legislate on that subject. Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 259; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 48; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S. Cir.) 313; Thurlow v. Massachusetts, 5 How. (U. S.) 585; Smith v. Turner, 7 How. (U. S.) 283; 2 Story on the Const. § 1104. As to the jurisdiction of State courts, see Weaver v. Fegely, 29 Pa. St. 27; Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 300; Beavins' Petition, 33 N. H. 89.

Patents and Copyrights.—It has been suggested that the power of Congress to grant patents and copyrights is not exclusive, but concurrent with that of the States, so, always, that the acts of the latter do not contravene the acts of Congress. Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 507; 2 Story on the Const. § 1154.

A State enactment that all "judicial decisions shall be free for publication by any person" is not repugnant to the copyright laws. Little v. Gould, 2 Blatchf. (U. S. Cir.) 165.

The power of Congress to legislate on the subject of patents is plenary. McClurg v. Kingland, 1 How. (U. S.) 202. It may make special grants. Bloomer v. Stolley, 5 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 158. And special extensions. Blanchard v. Warner, 1 Blatchf. (U. S. Cir.) 258;

Although a treaty is the law of the land, under the Federal Constitution, yet Congress may abrogate it, so far as it is municipal law, provided its subject-matter is within the legislative power of Congress.<sup>1</sup>

Evans v. Eaton, Pet. C. C. 322. It may give its grants a retrospective effect. Blanchard v. Sprague, 2 Story (U. S. Cir.), 164; McClurg v. Kingsland, 1 How. (U. S.) 202.

Power to Raise and Support Armies.—The action of Congress in empowering the President to call forth the militia of the several States under circumstances justifying such a call, is in pursuance of its constitutional powers. Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, 60; Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 19; Duffield v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 590; Vanderheyden v. Young, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 150; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 1; 2 Story on Const. § 1209. See Kneedler v. Lane, 45 Pa. St. 238.

Power to Declare War.—The power to declare war involves the power to prosecute it by all means and in any manner in which war may be legitimately prosecuted. It therefore includes the right to seize and confiscate all property of the enemy, and to dispose of it at the will of the captor. Miller v. United States, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 268; Tyler v. Defrees, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 331; The Ned, Blatchf. Prize Case 119; Wilson's Case, 4 Ct. of Cl. 559; Willman v. Wickerman, 44 Mo. 484; Knoefel v. Williams, 30 Ind. 1.

The proclamation by President Lincoln of the emancipation of slaves within all the territory held by the insurgents, was sustained by the courts as a war measure. See Slabach v. Cushman, 12 Fla. 472; Dorris v. Grace, 24 Ark. 326; Weaver v. Lapsley, 42 Ala. 601; Morgan v. Nelson, 43 Ala. 586; Hall v. Keese, 31 Tex. 504; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 200.

Pensions.—The act of Congress providing for the punishment of every guardian having the charge and custody of the pension-money of his ward, who embezzles the same or fraudulently converts it to his own use, is constitutional, and Congress has power to invest the proper circuit court with jurisdiction to try and punish him therefor. United States v. Hall, 98 U. S. 343.

Exclusive Legislation over Purchased Territory.—The power of Congress to exercise exclusive legislation over places ceded or purchased from the States is conferred on that body as the legislature of the Union, and cannot be exercised in any other character. A law passed in pursuance of it is the supreme law of the land and binding on all the States, and cannot be defeated by them. Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 424; 2 Story on the Const. § 1226.

The States cannot take cognizance of any acts done in the ceded places after the cession; and the inhabitants of such places cease to be citizens of the States, and can no longer exercise any of the political rights under the laws of the States. Commonwealth v. Clary, 8 Pa. 72; Sinks v. Reese, 19 Ohio St. 175; 2 Story on the Const. § 1227.

But the provision that Congress may exercise exclusive legislation over places purchased, etc., does not apply to places ceded by a State but not purchased by the State, in such case, while granting exclusive jurisdiction, may reserve the right to tax the franchises and property of corporations situated within the territory. Fort Leavenworth R. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525.

And if there has been no cession of the State of the place, although it has been constantly occupied and used under purchase or otherwise, by the United States for a fort, arsenal, or other constitutional purpose, the State jurisdiction still remains complete and perfect. 2 Story on Const. § 1227; People v. Godfray, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 225; Commonwealth v. Young, 1 Hall's Journal, 47.

Congress is without power to delegate general legislative authority to the government of the District of Columbia, hence an act of a general nature passed by the legislative assembly of the District, such, for instance, as the act making judgments liens on real estate, is unconstitutional. Roach v. Van Renswick, 4 Mac. Dist. Col.), 171.

National Corporations.—Congress has power to create a corporation which to do so is an appropriate measure to carry into execution the enumerated powers of that body. McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 416; Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 518; Farmers' Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 2; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1259, 1260. See Daly v. National Ins. Co., 64

1. Cherokee Tobacco, 11 Wall. 616; Edye v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 566; Webster v. Reid, 1 Morris 467.

The privilege of members of Congress of exemption from arrest is not violated by the service of citations or declarations in civil cases.<sup>1</sup> The State courts have no jurisdiction to decide whether the election of a United States senator by the legislature conforms to the regulations of Congress or is void; such questions belong exclusively to the United States senate.<sup>2</sup> No express power is conferred upon either house of Congress to punish for contempt, but such a power may probably be sustained by legitimate implications from the constitution.<sup>3</sup>

8. Constitutional Rules of State Comity.—In all relations not regulated by the Federal constitution, the States occupy the position of independent powers in close alliance and friendship, hence the principles of international law apply with greater force between the people of the several States than as between the subjects of foreign nations.<sup>4</sup> Yet comity between the States, so far as it concerns rights, privileges, and immunities not guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, must yield to the laws and policy of the State in which it is sought to be invoked.<sup>5</sup> That clause of the constitution of the United States which directs the surrender of a fugitive from justice on the demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled contains no grant of power, but is the mere regulation of an existing right on the part of the State making the surrender.<sup>6</sup>

1. Gentry v. Griffith, 27 Tex. 461; Case v. Rorabacker, 15 Mich. 537; Merritt v. Giddings, 4 MacArthur (Dist. Colum.), 55.

The privilege from arrest privileges members against all process, the disobedience to which is punishable by attachment of the person, such as a subpoena ad respondendum or ad testificandum, or a summons to serve on a jury, because the member has superior duties to perform in another place. 1 Story on the Const. § 860.

An indictment of a member of Congress for bribery is not arrested by the privileges secured by the constitution. State v. Smalls, 11 S. Car. 262.

2. In re Executive Communication, 12 Fla. 686.

3. 1 Story on the Const. § 845 et seq. See Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168; Wilckens v. Willett, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 596; Dunn v. Anderson, 6 Wheat (U. S.) 204.

4. Shaw v. Brown, 35 Miss. 246.

5. Donovan v. Pucher, 53 Ala. 411.

A State may pass laws in regard to its own citizens which will be binding and obligatory on them when they are without its territorial limits, and for the violation of which they may be punished in its courts whenever the State can find them within its jurisdiction. Chandler v. Main, 16 Wis. 398.

A State cannot, by taking assignments of, or by assuming the prosecution of, debts due its citizens from another State, acquire the right to sue such other State. New Hampshire v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76.

6. In re Fetter, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 311.

Requisition Imperative.—When the governor of a State makes a requisition under the Federal constitution on the governor of another State for the return of a fugitive from justice who had escaped from the former to the latter State, if the requisition is made with all the necessary formalities, it is his imperative duty to comply without inquiring whether the fugitive has committed a crime according to the laws of the State to which he fled. Johnston v. Riley, 13 Ga. 97; Ex parte Swearingen, 13 S. Car. 74; In re Voorhees, 3 Vroom (N. J.), 141.

But an inquiry by the State courts whether or not a person charged is really a fugitive from justice is not prohibited. Hartman v. Aveline, 63 Ind. 344.

Who is a Fugitive.—When a person infringes the criminal laws of a State, and departs therefrom without waiting to abide the consequences of his act, he is a fugitive from justice. In re Voorhees, 3 Vroom (N. J.), 141.

A citizen and resident of Iowa, who is charged with having been constructively guilty of an offence in another State,

(a) Rights of Citizens of Other States.—Under the Federal constitution, the citizens of one of the United States have, in another of the United States, the same rights and privileges which the citizens of the latter possess.<sup>1</sup> The supreme court will not desc upon which a requisition is based, but who never in fact has fled therefrom, is not a fugitive from justice within the meaning of the constitution. Jones v. Leonard, 50 Iowa, 106.

What Crimes.—The alleged offence need not be an offence at common law; it is sufficient that it is a crime against the State from which the accused has fled. Matter of Clark, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 221; Johnson v. Riley, 13 Ga. 97; Matter of Fetter, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 311.

But it must have been actually committed within the State reclaiming the alleged offender. Ex parte Smith, 3 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 133.

State or Territory.—The Cherokee Nation is neither a "State" nor a "Territory" as these words are used in the constitution. Hence the constitution does not authorize the governor of Arkansas to honor the demand of the chief of the Cherokee Nation for the extradition of a fugitive. Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. Repr. 298.

For a criminal offence committed within the District of Columbia, the offender, if found beyond the District, may be removed there for trial. In re Buell, 3 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 116.

Habeas Corpus from Federal Court.—A person arrested under a warrant of extradition from one State of the Union to another is "in custody under or by color of the authority of the United States," and the Federal courts have jurisdiction to inquire by habeas corpus into the legality of the custody. In re Doo Woon, 18 Fed. Repr. 898.

1. Const. U. S. art. 4, § 2; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1804-1807; Lemmon v. People, 20 N. Y. 562.

In the leading case it is said: "What are the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States? We feel no hesitation in confining these expressions to those privileges and immunities which are in their nature fundamental; which belong of right to the citizens of all free governments; and which have at all times been enjoyed by the citizens of the several States which compose this Union, from the time of their becoming free, independent, and sovereign. What these fundamental principles are, it would perhaps be more tedious than difficult to enumerate. They may, however, be all comprehended under the following general heads: protection by the government the enjoyment of life and liberty, with right to acquire and possess property of every kind, and to pursue and obtain happiness and safety; subject nevertheless to such restraints as the government may justly prescribe for the general good of the whole. The right of a citizen of one State to pass through or to reside in any other State, for purposes of trade, agriculture, professional pursuits, otherwise; to claim the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus; to institute and maintain actions of any kind in the courts of the State; to take, hold, and dispose of property, either real or personal; an exemption from higher taxes or impositions than are paid by the citizens of the State,—may be mentioned as some of the particular privileges and immunities of citizens, which are comprehended by the general description of privileges deemed to be fundamental, which may be added the elective franchise as regulated or established by the laws or constitution of the State in which it is to be exercised." Corfield v. Corliss, 4 Wash. (U. S. Cir.) 371, 380. McCready v. Commonwealth, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 985; Conner v. Elliott, 18 How. (S.) 591.

A limited and not a full operation must be given to these words in the constitution. They do not mean the right of election, of being elected, or of holding offices. They mean that the citizens of all the States shall have the peculiar advantage of acquiring and holding real as well as personal property, and such property shall be protected and secured by the laws of the State in the same manner as the property of the citizens of the State is protected. They mean that such property shall not be liable to any taxes or burdens to which the property of the citizens of the State is not subject. Campbell v. Morris, 3 G. & M.H. (Md.) 354.

The history, objects, and construction of this clause explained in Douglas v. Douglass, 1 Del. Ch. 465.

Citizenship, Federal and State.—There is, in our political system, a government of each of the several States and a government of the United States. The former is distinct from the other, and has citizens of its own, who owe it allegiance, and whose rights, within its jurisdiction, and define those rights and privileges in a general classification, preferring to decide each case as it may come up.<sup>1</sup> A State cannot impose, for the privilege of doing business within its limits, a heavier license tax upon non-residents than is required of its own citizens.<sup>2</sup> And a State tax which necessarily discriminates in favor of the products and manufactures of the taxing State and against the introduction and sale of goods produced or manufactured in other States, is within the constitutional inhibition and void.<sup>3</sup> Cor-must protect. The same person may be at the same time a citizen of the United States and a citizen of a State; but his rights of citizenship under one of these governments will be different from those he has under the other. The government of the United States, although it is, within the scope of its powers, supreme and beyond the States, can neither grant nor secure to its citizens rights or privileges which are not expressly or by implication placed under its jurisdiction. All that cannot be so granted or secured are left to the exclusive protection of the States. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542.

1. Conner v. Elliott, 18 How. (U. S.) 591; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418.

Right of Interstate Travel.—Every citizen of the United States, and every citizen of each State in the Union, has the constitutional right as an attribute of personal liberty, to pass freely from or through the State, without imprisonment or restraint except by due process of law, and this right is subject only to such legislative regulations as may be imposed in the exercise of the police power, or remotely affected by the legitimate exercise of the power of taxation by the State. This right may be referred to several constitutional provisions, and among them to the clause securing interstate citizenship. Joseph v. Randolph, 16 Repr. (Ala.) 227. See Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418, 430; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 35.

Right of Suffrage.—The right of a citizen to vote depends on the laws of the State in which he resides, and is not granted to him nor guaranteed by the constitution of the United States. All that is guaranteed is that he shall not be deprived of suffrage by reason of his race, etc. United States v. Crosby, 1 Hughes (U. S. Cir.), 448.

Access to the Courts.—The Tennessee statute which restricts the right of commencing the process of foreign attachment to citizens of the State is not repugnant to the Federal constitution. Kincaid v. Frances, Cooke (Tenn.), 49.

Assessment of Lands.—The provision of a statute, that "all lands belonging to non-residents shall be valued by three householders of the election township within which the lands are situated, to be appointed by the sheriff, and such valuation, provided it is not less than three dollars per acre, shall govern the sheriff in assessing the same," is not in conflict with the constitutional provision under consideration. Redd v. St. Francis Co., 17 Ark. 416.

Common Property of the State.—The constitutional provision that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States does not entitle the citizens of the various States to share in the common property of citizens of a particular State. Thus it is competent for a State to confine the right of fishing in the navigable waters of the State to its own citizens. McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391; State v. Medbury, 3 R. I. 138.

2. Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418; State v. North, 27 Mo. 464; McGuire v. Parker, 32 La. Ann. 832; Daniel v. Richmond, 78 Ky. 542; State v. Lancaster, 20 Repr. (N. H.) 316; Crow v. State, 14 Mo. 237; Gould v. Atlanta, 55 Ga. 678; Marshalltown v. Blum, 58 Iowa, 184.

An act pronounced void all contracts made by pedlars without a license. Subsequently an amendatory act was passed relieving from its operation citizens of the State. Held, that the amendment was void, as discriminating against citizens of other States. Rash v. Holway, 20 Repr. (Ky.) 9.

3. Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446; Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344; Wellton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; In re Watson, 15 Fed. Repr. 511; State v. McGinnis, 37 Ark. 362; Ex parte Rollins, 20 Repr. (Va.) 765; Vines v. State, 67 Ala. 73; Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 95.

A statute of a State which imposes a license tax upon all travelling merchants, agents, etc., who travel therein and sell or offer to sell goods by sample or otherwise, to be delivered at a future time, without any discrimination against the porations are not "citizens" within the meaning of the constitution and a State may grant or refuse to corporations of another State the privilege of engaging in any business within its limits, and grants the right, may grant it on terms.<sup>1</sup> Comity does not require a State to extend any greater privileges to the citizens of another State than it grants to its own.<sup>2</sup>

(b) Sister State Judgments.—The constitution of the United States (art. 4, § 1) prescribes that "full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State." The act of Congress of May 1790, declared that "the said records and judicial proceedings . . . shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of the State from whence the said records are or shall be taken." Without this act of Congress, the judgments of each State would be regarded as foreign judgments in the courts of every other State.<sup>3</sup> But it is now held by all the State courts, following the Federal decisions, that a judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction in one State is conclusive on the merits in every other State, when made the basis of an action, and in such an action the merits cannot be inquired into.<sup>4</sup> In suing on a judgment for goods or products of other States, is not unconstitutional with respect to goods sold by such travelling agents for their employers doing business in another State, to be shipped at a future day to the purchaser. In re Rudolph, 6 Sawy. (U. S. Cir.) 295; Ex parte Thornton, 4 Hughes (U. S. Cir.), 220. See Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676; Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344.

1. Paul v. Virginia 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168; Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 410; Liverpool Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 566; Warren Mfg. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 2 Paine (U. S. Cir.) 501; Commonwealth v. Milton, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 212; People v. Imlay, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 68; Slaughter v. Commonwealth, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 767; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 521; Fire Department v. Helfenstein, 16 Wis. 136.

2. Lemmon v. People, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 270.

3. Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 586; Smith v. Lathrop, 44 Pa. St. 326; Taylor v. Barron, 30 N. H. 78; Thurber v. Blackbourne, 1 N. H. 242; Seever v. Clement, 28 Md. 426.

4. Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 481; Hampton v. McConnel, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 234; McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290; Sweet v. Brackley, 53 Me. 346; Cleaves v. Lord, 43 Me. 290; Taylor v. Barron, 30 N. H. 78; Blodgett v. Jordan, 6 Vt. 580; Hoxie v. Wright, 2

Vt. 269; Bissell v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 433; Commonwealth v. Green, 17 Mass. 265; Brainard v. Fowler, 119 Mass. 265; People of North America v. Wheeler, 28 C. 433; Rathbone v. Terry, 1 R. I. 433; Brinkley v. Brinkley, 50 N. Y. 156; Dobson v. Pearce, 12 N. Y. 156; Andrews v. Montgomery, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 162; Baxter v. Linah, 16 Pa. St. 162; Evans v. Tatem, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 525; Rogers v. Burns, 27 Pa. St. 525; Wells v. Stillman, 65 Pa. St. 105; Chesapeake & Potomac v. Brumagim, 21 N. J. Eq. 520; Pritchard v. Clark, 5 Harr. (Del.) 63; Wernwaag v. Pawling, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 500; Zimmerman v. Helser, 32 Md. 274; De Endre v. Wilkinson, 2 Pat. & H. (Va.) 663; Wells v. Sugg, Phill. (N. Car.) 98; McLure v. Benceni, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 215; Brasswell v. Downs, 11 Fla. 215; West Feliciana R. Co. v. Thornton, La. Ann. 736; Cook v. Thornhill, Tex. 293; Rogers v. Coleman, Har. (Ky.) 418; Williams v. Preston, 3 Mar. (Ky.) 600; Fletcher v. Ferrell, Dana (Ky.), 372; Rankin v. Barnes, Bush (Ky.), 20; Topp v. Bank, 2 S. (Tenn.), 184; Butcher v. Bank, 2 K. 70; Nunn v. Sturges, 22 Ark. 209; Spencer v. Brockway, 1 Ohio, 209; Pelton v. Platner, 13 Ohio, 209; Bowling v. Stevenson, 24 Ohio St. 474; Anderson v. Fry, 6 Ind. 76; Welch v. Sykes, Gilm. (Ill.) 197; Bimeler v. Dawson, cam. (Ill.) 536; Zep p v. Hager, 70

ment of a court of record in another State, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to aver that the court had jurisdiction of the person or subject-matter; for jurisdiction is presumed to have existed until the contrary is clearly shown by way of defence to the action.<sup>1</sup> But in an action on a judgment of a court of a sister State, it is always open to the defendant to deny the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment.<sup>2</sup> A judgment rendered in one State 223; Indiana v. He'mer, 21 Iowa, 370; Barney v. White, 46 Mo. 137; Cone v. Hooper, 18 Minn. 533.

Is Pendency.—The pendency of a suit in one State cannot be pleaded in bar or abatement of a second action in another State, between the same parties and for the same cause of action. McJilton v. Love, 13 Ill. 486; Brown v. Joy, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 221; Walsh v. Durkin, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 99; Smith v. Lathrop, 44 Pa. St. 326; Goodall v. Marshall, 11 N. H. 99; Hatch v. Spofford, 22 Conn. 485. Compare Earl v. Raymond, 4 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 231.

Justice of the Peace—A judgment of a justice of the peace of another State, although the court be not one of record, is a judicial proceeding within the constitution, and full faith and credit is to be given to it. Stockwell v. Coleman, 10 Ohio St. 33; Clark v. Parsons, 1 Rice (S. Car.), 16. Compare Robinson v. Prescott, 4 N. H. 450. See Bigelow on Esoppel (3d Ed.), 257 et seq.

Federal Courts.—The Federal tribunals are not regarded as foreign to each other or to the State courts. Hence the judgment of a United States court, when sued on in a State court or in another Federal court, is entitled to full faith and credit, and conversely. Dudley v. Lindsey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 486; Thompson v. Lee Co., 22 Iowa, 206; St. Albans v. Bush, 4 Vt. 58; Amory v. Amory, 3 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 266; United States v. Dewey, 6 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 501; Owens v. Gotzian, 4 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 436.

Plea to the Record.—In an action on a judgment recovered in a sister State, nil debet is not a good plea, because it would throw open the merits of the controversy; the only proper form of the general issue is nil tibi record. Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 381; Hampson v. McConnell, 3 Wheat (U. S.) 234; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290; Maxwell v. Stewart, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Davis v. Lane, 2 Ind. 548; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Brainard v. Fowler, 119 Mass. 265; Benton v. Burgot, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 240; Bank of North America v. Wheeler, 28 Conn. 433; Shumway v. Stillman, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 292; Newcomb

v. Peck, 17 Vt. 302; Zepp v. Hager, 70 Ill. 223; Evans v. Tatem, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 252; Kemp v. Mundell, 9 Leigh (Va.), 12; Buchanan v. Port, 5 Ind. 264.

1. Williams v. Preston, 3 J. J. Mar. (Ky.) 600; Reid v. Boyd, 13 Tex. 241; Sumway v. Stillman, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 292; Butcher v. Bank, 2 Kans. 70; Gunn v. Howell, 27 Ala. 663; Scott v. Coleman, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 356; Phelps v. Duffy, 11 Nev. 80; Horton v. Critchfield, 18 Ill. 133.

But if the court (in a sister State) rendering the judgment was one of limited, inferior, or statutory jurisdiction, or if the proceedings were in derogation of the common law, jurisdiction will not be presumed, but must be affirmatively shown. Commonwealth v. Blood, 97 Mass. 538; Pelton v. Platner, 13 Ohio, 209; Gunn v. Howell, 27 Ala. 663; Gay v. Lloyd, 1 Greene (Iowa) 78.

2. D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. (U. S.) 165; Board of Public Works v. Columbia College, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 521; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 457; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 350; Knowles v. Gaslight Co., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 58; Hill v. Mendenhall, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 453; Bischoff v. Wethered, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 812; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Folger v. Ins. Co., 99 Mass. 267; Mowry v. Chase, 100 Mass. 79; Carleton v. Bickford, 13 Grav. (Mass.) 591; Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149; Bissell v. Wheelock, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 277; McDermott v. Clary, 107 Mass. 501; Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 380; Rathbone v. Terry, 1 R. I. 73; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272; Shumway v. Stillman, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 292; Starbuck v. Murray, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 148; Borden v. Fitch, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 121; Reel v. Elder, 62 Pa. St. 308; Noble v. Oil Co., 79 Pa. St. 534; Guthrie v. Lowry, 84 Pa. St. 533; Wernwag v. Pawling, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 500; Davis v. Smith, 5 Ga. 274; Millet v. Ewing, 16 Miss. 421; Norwood v. Cobb, 15 Tex. 500; Barrett v. Openheimer, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 298; Pennywit v. Foote, 27 Ohio St. 600; Westcott v. Brown, 13 Ind. 83; Lawrence v. Jarvis, 32 Ill. 304; Welch v. Sykes, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 197; Bimeler v. Dawson, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 536.

against a resident of another State, who was not served with process and did not appear in the action, either personally or by an authorized attorney, is not binding out of the State where rendered, although the acquisition of jurisdiction may have been by some mode (e.g., publication) recognized as valid by the laws of that State; and such absence of jurisdiction will bar an action on such judgment in any other State.<sup>1</sup> The plea of fraud is not admissible to a judgment of a sister State, unless it could be set up in

In an action on a judgment of a sister State, a plea denying the jurisdiction of the court must, by certain and positive averments, negative every fact from which the jurisdiction might arise. Welch v. Sykes, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 197; Struble v. Malone, 3 Iowa, 586; Shumway v. Stillman, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 292; Prickett v. Pope, 3 Ala. 552.

If the defendant traverses the fact of jurisdiction of his person, the plaintiff may produce evidence to show that jurisdiction in fact attached. Knowles v. Gaslight Co., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 58; McDermott v. Clary, 107 Mass. 501; Sears v. Dacey, 122 Mass. 388.

If the record states that the defendant appeared by attorney, it is conclusive proof that the attorney did appear for him; but it is only prima facie evidence that the attorney was authorized to appear for him, and this latter fact the defendant is at full liberty to disprove. Welch v. Sykes, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 197; Thompson v. Emmert, 15 Ill. 416; Harshey v. Blackmarr, 20 Iowa, 172; Shumway v. Stillman, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 447; Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 380; Hall v. Williams, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Boylan v. Whitney, 3 Ind. 140.

The defendant is not estopped to deny the jurisdiction, notwithstanding the record contains recitals of the facts necessary to confer jurisdiction. Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457; Knowles v. Gaslight Co., 19 Wall. 58; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714; Dennison v. Hyde, 6 Conn. 508; Coit v. Haven, 30 Conn. 190; McDermott v. Clary, 107 Mass. 501; Gilman v. Gilman, 126 Mass. 26; Ferguson v. Crawford, 70 N. Y. 253; Kerr v. Kerr, 41 N. Y. 272.

1. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714; Bischoff v. Wethered, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 812; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 308; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 457; Knowles v. Gaslight Co., 19 Wall. 58; Empire v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 87; Thompson v. Emmert, 4 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 96; McVicker v. Beedy, 31 Me. 314; Whitler v. Wendell, 7 N. H. 257;

Rangeley v. Webster, 11 N. H. 257; Newcomb v. Peck, 17 Vt. 302; Prickett v. Hickok, 37 Vt. 292; Wood v. Watkins, 17 Conn. 500; Aldrich v. Kinney, 4 Conn. 380; Frothingham v. Barnes, 9 R. I. 1; Rathbone v. Terry, 1 R. I. 73; Carroll v. Bickford, 13 Gray (Mass.), 591; Pennoyer v. Brewer, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 390; Hoffman v. Hoffman, 46 N. Y. 30; Reber v. Wright, 68 Pa. St. 471; Scott v. Newcomb, 72 Pa. St. 115; Davidson v. Sharpe, 14 Ired. (N. Car.) 14; Miller v. Miller, 242; Dearing v. Bailey (S. Car.), 242; Ponce v. Underwood, 55 Ga. 497; Williams v. Preston, 3 J. J. (Ky.) 600; Rogers v. Coleman, 15 Ohio (Ky.) 418; Arndt v. Arndt, 15 Ohio; Zepp v. Hager, 70 Ill. 223; Windstetter v. Taylor, 28 Mo. 82; Outwhite v. Pratt, 13 Mich. 533; Tyler v. Pratt, 30 Mich. 63; Jones v. Spencer, 15 Wis. 583; Cook v. Cook, 8 Cal. 449.

If jurisdiction is obtained against a non-resident by attachment of his property only, the judgment rendered there will have no extra-territorial force sufficient to bind the property attached or disposed of. Galpin v. Page, 18 U. S. 350; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 308; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 725; Story Conf. of Law, 549.

A decree of divorce, pronounced by a competent court, in favor of a citizen against a non resident, where service of process was made by a reasonable constructive notice, and in the absence of any fraud or collusion, is valid and binding both at home and abroad. Chapman v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714; Harding v. Auld, 9 Me. 140; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 1; Thompson v. State, 28 Ala. 12; Sturges v. Schlachter, Phill. (N. Car.) 520; Gordon v. Crow, 57 Mo. 200; Tolen v. Tolson, 407; Beard v. Beard, 321; Wakefield v. Ives, 35 Mich. 238; Burien v. Shannon, 115 Mass. 463; Hood v. Hood, 110 Mass. 463; Wright v. Wright, 24 Mich. 180; Shaffer v. Shaffer, 24 Wis. 372; People v. Baker, 78; 2 Bishop on Mar. & Div. 58.

courts of the State rendering the judgment.<sup>1</sup> The Statute of Limitations of the State of the forum may be pleaded to an action on a judgment of a sister State if the statute is so framed as to include judgments.<sup>2</sup> The reader is referred to the title JUDGMENTS for a full discussion of this subject.<sup>3</sup>

9. Civil Rights and their Guaranties.—The civil rights of free citizens are defined and guaranteed by the constitutions of the several States and of the Union. They were not, however, created by those instruments, but existed before them, as the inalienable rights of men under a free government. Thus the right of the people peaceably to assemble for lawful purposes, and to prefer petitions, existed long prior to the adoption of the constitutional enactments.<sup>4</sup>

164; Cooley's Const. Lim. 401, and note; 2 Kent's Comm. 110, note.

1. Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290; Maxwell v. Stewart, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Anderson v. Anderson, 8 Ohio, 108; Bicknell v. Field, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 440; McRae v. Mattoon, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 53; Sandford v. Sandford, 28 Conn. 6; Granger v. Clark, 22 Me. 128; Benton v. Burgot, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 240.

2. McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312; Napier v. Gidiere, 1 Spears (S. Car.) Eq. 215; Reid v. Boyd, 13 Tex. 241.

But where a State statute enacted that "no action shall be maintained on any judgment or decree rendered by any court without this State against . . . a resident of this State, in any case where the cause of action would have been barred by any act of limitation of this State, if such suit had been brought therein," it was held that this act was unconstitutional, as it denied "full faith and credit" to the judgments of other States. Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290; Dodge v. Coffin, 15 Kans. 277.

3. For the law and practice in regard to sister State judgments the following may be consulted: Bigelow on Estoppel, chap. 6; Freeman on Judgments, chap. 26; Herman on Estoppel; Wharton on Evidence, chap. 10; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1302-1314; Story on Conf. of Laws, chap. 15. The leading cases are: Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 481; McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 312; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 457; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714.

4. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542.

Right of Petition.—The First Amendment to the constitution prohibited Congress from abridging the right to assemble and petition, and was not intended to limit the action of the State governments in respect to their own citizens, but to operate upon the national government alone. It left the authority of the States unimpaired, added nothing to the already existing powers of the United States, and guaranteed the continuance of the right only against congressional interference. The people, for their protection in the enjoyment of it, must therefore look to the States, where the power for that purpose was originally placed. The right of the people peaceably to assemble for the purpose of petitioning Congress for a redress of grievances, or for anything else connected with the powers or duties of the national government, is an attribute of national citizenship, and as such under the protection of and guaranteed by the United States. The very idea of a government republican in form implies that right, and an invasion of it presents a case within the sovereignty of the United States. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542.

But a petition instigated by malice and resulting in harm to the object thereof, is not the right of any citizen. Vanarsdale v. Lavery, 69 Pa. St. 103.

Freedom of Speech.—"The constitutional liberty of speech and of the press, as we understand it, implies a right to freely utter and publish whatever the citizen may please, and to be protected against any responsibility for so doing, except so far as such publications, from their blasphemy, obscenity, or scandalous character, may be a public offence, or as by their falsehood and malice they may injuriously affect the standing, reputation, or pecuniary interests of individuals." Cooley's Const. Lim. 422. See also 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1880-1892; 2 Kent's Comm. 17 et seq.

Imprisonment for Debt.—A constitutional provision that there shall be no

(a) Due Process of Law.—The American constitutions all to the citizen an immunity against the deprivation of his property except by "due process of law" or "the law of the land." The process of law in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of government as the settled maxims of law and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs.<sup>2</sup> The constitutional restriction against imprisonment for debt, except in case of fraud, applies only to debts growing out of contract express or implied. Lower v. Wallick, 25 Ind. 68; People v. Cotton, 14 Ill. 414.

It does not apply to imprisonment as a means of enforcing payment of fine and costs by persons convicted of misdemeanors. Mosley v. Gallatin, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 494; McCool v. State, 23 Ind. 127.

But to allow an arrest when the action is for wilful injury to person or character, is in conflict with the constitutional provision in California. Ex parte Prader, 6 Cal. 239.

Quartering of Soldiers.—The provision against quartering soldiers in private houses in times of peace is but a branch of the constitutional principle that the military shall, in time of peace, be in strict subordination to the civil power. Cooley Const. Lim. 309; 2 Story on the Const. § 1900.

Suspension of Habeas Corpus.—The provision of the Federal constitution against the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus applies only to the absolute denial of the writ, and has no reference to the delay involved in a review by a higher court of the judgment of a lower one upon the writ. Macready v. Wilcox, 33 Conn. 321.

Oath of Allegiance.—The statute of California providing that attorneys at law and litigants shall take an oath of allegiance to the government of the United States is not unconstitutional. Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293. See Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 277; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 333.

1. Stimson's Amer. Statute Law, § 130; Const. U. S. XIVth Am.

2. Cooley Const. Lim. 356; Ex parte Ah Fook, 49 Cal. 403. See Wynchamers v. People, 13 N. Y. 432.

The term "law of the land" means general and public laws operating equally upon every individual of the community. Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59.

"Due process of law" or the "law of the land" does not mean the general body of the law, common and statutory, as it was at the time the constitution took effect. For that would seem to give the right of the legislature to amend or repeal the law. The term refers to fundamental rights which that jurisprudence of which ours is a development has always recognized. Brown v. Commrs., 50 Miss. 468.

The terms "due process of law" and "law of the land," as constitutional provisions, are of equivalent import, and interchangeable. Davidson v. New Orleans, 9 S. 97; Murray's Lessee v. Hoboken Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 276; Griffin v. Briggs, 1 Curt. (U. S. Cir.) 311; Staten v. Cold, (Tenn.) 234; Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 256; Parsons v. Sell, 11 Mich. 129; Sears v. Co, 11 Mich. 251; Banning v. Taylor, 10 Mich. 292.

Does Not Mean Merely an Act of the Legislature.—The phrase "due process of law" means more than a special law passed for the very purpose of authorizing the deprivation; it means the law in its regular course of administration through the courts of justice which hears before it condemns, passes upon inquiry, and renders judgment on trial. Clark v. Mitchell, 64 Mich. 1; Atchison, etc., R. v. Baty, 6 Mich. 1; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 4; Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. C.) 1; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59.

"The first matter of inquiry is the meaning of the term 'due process of law.' If it has no broader meaning than the process prescribed by act of the legislature, it is the end of the case; for such a construction would render the constitutional guaranty mere words, for it would then mean no State could deprive a person of life, liberty, or property unless the State shall choose to do so. It has repeatedly and uniformly been adjudicated that the term 'due process of law' and 'law of the land' have a broad and comprehensive meaning, and originated in that great charter of rights, Magna Charta, and operated as a restriction on each branch of government." In re Ziebold, 19 R. (U. S. Cir.) 742.

ment extends to executive and administrative as well as judicial proceedings.<sup>1</sup>

By the State and Federal constitutions all judicial power is vested in the courts, from whence alone process may issue to deprive a person of life, liberty, or property.<sup>2</sup> Due process of law, in judicial proceedings, implies jurisdiction and trial; that is, that a party shall be properly brought into court, and when there shall have the right to set up any lawful defence to any claim against him.<sup>3</sup> The rules of evidence cannot be regarded as being of the essence of any right which a party may seek to enforce; hence they

1. Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183.

The State cannot deprive an owner of his property without process of law through the medium of a constitutional convention any more than it can through an act of legislation. Clark v. Mitchell, 69 Mo. 627.

The fifth and seventh amendments to the constitution of the United States were designed as restrictions upon legislation by the Federal government, and not upon State governments in respect to their own citizens. North Missouri R. v. Maguire, 49 Mo. 490.

2. Hodgson v. Millward, 3 Grant (Pa.), 406. See In re Hatch, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 89.

When the legislature of a State enacts laws for the government of its courts while exercising their respective jurisdictions, which, if followed, will furnish parties the necessary constitutional protection of life, liberty, and property, it has performed its constitutional duty; and if one of its courts, acting within its jurisdiction, makes an erroneous decision in this respect, the State cannot be deemed guilty of violating the constitutional provision, that no State shall deprive a person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194.

3. Wright v. Cradlebaugh, 3 Nev. 341; Ames v. Port Huron Co., 11 Mich. 139; People v. Supervisors, 70 N. Y. 228.

Jurisdiction.—Due process of law, when applied to legal proceedings, means a course of legal procedure according to those rules and principles which have been established by our jurisprudence for the protection and enforcement of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a competent tribunal to pass upon their subject-matter, and if that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant he must be brought within its jurisdiction by service of process within the State or by his voluntary appearance. Hence a personal judgment is without any validity if it be rendered by a State court in an action upon a money demand against a non-resident of the State who was served by a publication of the summons, but upon whom no personal service of process within the State was made, and who did not appear. But the State, having within her territory property of a non-resident, may hold and appropriate it to satisfy the claims of her citizens against him, and her tribunals may inquire into his obligations to the extent necessary to control the disposition of that property. And substituted service by publication, or in any other authorized form, is sufficient to inform a non-resident of the object of proceedings taken where property is once brought under the control of the court by seizure or some equivalent act. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714. See Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 313. See § 8, (b), of this article, and cases cited.

The provisions of a statute that where two or more persons are sued in the same action, on a joint contract, and process is served on either, judgment may be rendered against all, execution shall be issued against all, and may be levied on the partnership property, do not violate the constitutional requirement of due process of law. Brooks v. McIntyre, 4 Mich. 316.

Partition.—An act providing that, in actions for partition, service of notice may be made by publication, is not unconstitutional. Mason v. Messenger, 17 Iowa 261.

Actions in Rem.—Laws authorizing proceedings in rem may be enforced against the property seized when the real owner may not be informed thereof. Gray v. Kimball, 42 Me. 299.

Divorce against Non-Resident, on constructive service of process, validity of, see supra, § 8, (b).

Curative Statutes.—An act of the legislature undertaking to validate a judgment of a court void for want of jurisdiction, is an attempted exercise of judicial power, are at all times subject to modification and control by the legislature.<sup>1</sup>

Many instances of legislative interference with private rights are justifiable as exercises of the police power. The legislature may declare the possession of certain articles of property, either absolutely or in particular places and under particular circumstances, to be unlawful, because they would be injurious, dangerous, and may provide for the seizure and confiscation and destruction thereof, so it be by due legal process.<sup>2</sup> and also contravenes the constitutional requirement of due process of law. Pryor v. Downey, 50 Cal. 388; Cooley Const. Lim. 382-3.

1. Kendall v. Kingston, 5 Mass. 533; Commonwealth v. Williams, 6 Gray (Mass.), 1; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 349; Webb v. Den, 17 How. (U. S.) 576; Fales v. Wadsworth, 23 Me. 533; Hickox v. Tallman, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 608; Pratt v. Jones, 25 Vt. 303; Karney v. Paisley, 13 Iowa, 89; Cooley Const. Lim. 367.

But it is not competent for the legislative power to declare what shall be conclusive evidence of a fact. Wantlan v. White, 19 Ind. 470; Little Rock, etc., R. v. Payne, 33 Ark. 816.

While the legislature may not by the mere machinery or rules of evidence override and set at naught the restrictions of the constitution, or arbitrarily make conclusive evidence of a fact anything which in the nature of things has no connection with that fact nor reasonably tends to prove it, yet it may make that which, according to the ordinary rules of human experience, reasonably tends to prove a fact, conclusive evidence of it. In re Linn County, 13 Kans. 500.

The legislature has power to determine by statute what shall be received as presumptive or prima facie evidence in civil cases. Hand v. Ballou, 12 N. Y. 541; Howard v. Moot, 64 N. Y. 262; Cooley Const. Lim. 367.

The power of giving greater effect to evidence than it possesses at common law has been frequently exercised by legislatures, and such exercise is clearly constitutional. State v. Cunningham, 25 Conn. 195.

It is in the power of the legislature to abolish or modify the rule which excludes parol evidence to vary the terms of a written contract. Gibbs v. Gale, 7 Md. 76.

Tax Deeds.—It is in the power of the legislature to make a tax deed prima facie evidence that all the proceedings have been regular, and that the purchaser has acquired under them a complete title. Hand v. Ballou, 12 N. Y. 543; Forbes v.

Halsey, 26 N. Y. 53; Delaplaine, 7 Wis. 54; Allen v. Armstrong, 508; Adams v. Beale, 19 Iowa; Berg v. Rogers, 9 Mich. 332; v. Cross, 10 Wis. 289; Lacey, 1 Mich. 140; Wright v. Dunham, 414; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 4 Sams v. King, 18 Fla. 557.

But a statute which should make a deed conclusive evidence of a title, and preclude the owner of the title from showing its invalidity, is void, because being not a law of evidence, but an unconstitutional expropriation of property. Groesbeck, 13 Mich. 329; Case v. Dean, 16 White v. Flynn, 23 Ind. 46; Hill, 21 Iowa, 70; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 46 Mo. 291; McCreedy, 29 Iowa, 356; Wright v. Crandall, Nev. 349.

Congress and the State Legislatures have power exists in Congress to determine by law what shall or shall not be received in a State court. Latham v. Illinois, 29; Bowlin v. Commonwealth, Bush (Ky.), 5.

2. Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray (Mass.); Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 663; Stone v. Mississippi, 101.

An act which allows the seizure of liquors kept and sold without warrant of liquor is unconstitutional. v. O'Neil, 22 Repr. (Vt.) 58; Bemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 520; Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97; State v. Paul, 5 R. I. 185; Starin, 5 R. I. 497; People v. B. B. Reynolds, 330; Reynolds v. Geary, 179.

But if the act does not prohibit notice to the owner, nor for a time question whether the liquors seized are held in violation of law, it is consistent with the constitution. Greene, 2 Curt. (U. S. Cir.) 187; State v. B. B. Reynolds, 3 R. I. 64.

A statute authorizing the seizure and destruction of fish used in catching fish in violation of law is unconstitutional if no process

The enforced collection of taxes levied for public and lawful purposes does not deprive a person of his property without due process of law, if the owner is afforded an opportunity to contest the legality of all the essential steps.<sup>1</sup> But statutes declaring the forfeiture of lands to the State for the non-payment of taxes, without any judicial ascertainment of the fact of delinquency, are unconstitutional.<sup>2</sup> And if the law under which the tax is levied is made for notice or trial. Teck v. Anderson, 57 Cal. 251; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 115.

So of a statute allowing a police magistrate, upon information or personal knowledge, to cause a gaming table or device to be seized and destroyed without any judicial condemnation. Lowry v. Rainwater, 70 Mo. 152; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 420.

The constitutional provision prohibiting the deprivation of property is not infringed by a proper law regulating a business which may render property used to carry on the business less valuable. If the business is still allowed to be carried on, and the property still allowed to exist, and its possession is not disturbed, the owner cannot be said to be deprived of his property. Munn v. Illinois, 69 Ill. 80; s. c., 94 U. S. 113; Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 32; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814; Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 36; Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U. S. 746; New Orleans Gas-light Co. v. Louisiana Light & Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650.

A statute making railroad companies liable in double damages for stock killed in consequence of their neglect to fence their tracks is constitutional. Missouri Pacific R. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512; Humes v. Railroad, 82 Mo. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 369; Meyers v. Union Trust Co., 82 Mo. 237. Compare Atchison, etc., R. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37. See Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 27; Cooley on Const. Lim. 579.

A statute requiring a plank-road company to remove its toll-gate beyond municipal limits is invalid, as taking property without due process of law. Detroit v. Detroit Plank Road, 43 Mich. 140.

1. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78; Lagar v. Reclamation District, 111 U. S. 301; Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 48.

A statute for raising public revenue by the assessment and collection of taxes, which gives notice of the proposed assessment to an owner of property to be affected by requiring him at a time named to present a statement of his property, with his estimate of its value, to a designated official charged with the duty of receiving the statement; which fixes time and place for public sessions of other officials at which the statement and estimate are to be considered when the official valuation is to be made, and where the party interested has a right to be present and to be heard; and which affords him opportunity in a suit at law, for the collection of the tax, to judicially contest the validity of the proceedings, does not necessarily deprive him of his property without due process of law. Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97.

Where, as in California, the law makes no provision for notice to railroad corporations whose lines extend into more than one county, and provides no opportunity for a hearing at any stage of the proceedings relating to their assessment for taxation, the constitutional guaranty is infringed. Santa Clara Co. v. Southern Pacific R., 18 Fed. Repr. 385; San Mateo Co. v. Railroad, 8 Sawy. (U. S. Cir.) 238. See Moulton v. Parks, 64 Cal. 166.

A statute is unconstitutional which requires a person who is in the possession and uninterrupted enjoyment of his property to commence an action for the vindication of his rights, or be forever barred from questioning the validity of a tax assessment or sale. Baker v. Kelly, 11 Minn. 480.

2. Kinney v. Beverly, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 318; Barbour v. Nelson, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 60; Robinson v. Huff, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 38; Currie v. Fowler, 5 J. J. Mar. (Ky.) 145; Harlan v. Seaton, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 312; Griffin v. Mixon, 38 Miss. 424; St. Anthony Co. v. Greely, 11 Minn. 321; Baker v. Kelley, 11 Minn. 480; Hill v. Lund, 13 Minn. 451. Compare Wild v. Serpell, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 405; Hale v. Branscum, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 418; Usher v. Pride, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 190; Hodgdon v. Wight, 36 Me. 326; Adams v. Larrabee, 46 Me. 516. See Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 461 et seq.

void, any property taken to satisfy it is taken without due of law.

An ordinance authorizing the officers of a town to seize animals found running at large, without notice to the owner, is unconstitutional.<sup>2</sup>

Rights to property depend on a judicial and legal construction of the statutes existing when they vest, not on a legislative construction by a subsequent declaratory act.<sup>3</sup> The legislature has no constitutional power to pass a law subjecting the proceeds of the income of the wife's separate estate to the claims of the husband's creditors.<sup>4</sup> "Betterment laws," compensating the bona fide owner for permanent and beneficial improvements which have increased the value of the property, are valid and constitutional.

When property is condemned under the power of eminent domain, it cannot be said to be taken without the law of the land, but the property of a private citizen cannot, by the exercise of legislative power in any form, be taken from him and given to another private citizen.<sup>6</sup> (See also EMINENT DOMAIN.)

1. Dundee Mortgage Co. v. School District, 19 Fed. Repr. 359; Brady v. King, 53 Cal. 44; Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233.

2. Varden v. Mount, 78 Ky. 86; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 208; Donovan v. Vicksburgh, 29 Miss. 247; Rockwell v. Nearing, 35 N. Y. 302; Halloway v. Police Jury, 16 La. Ann. 203.

Escheat—A statute requiring clerks of courts, after money has remained in their offices a specified time, to pay the same over to the county treasurer, is based upon the principles of the doctrine of escheat, and is free from any constitutional objections. Deaderick v. County Court, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 202.

3. Hunt v. Hunt, 37 Me. 333; Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 22; Haley v. Philadelphia, 68 Pa. St. 45; McLeod v. Burroughs, 9 Ga. 213.

The repeal of a statute of limitation of actions on personal debts does not, as applied to a debtor, the right of action against whom is already barred, deprive him of his property unduly. Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620. See Cooley v. Const. Lim. 365, and cases cited.

A statute authorizing the sale of real estate upon the petition of the life-tenant, in opposition to the wishes of the owner of the fee, when the latter is under no disability, is unconstitutional. Gossom v. McFerran, 79 Ky. 236.

The legislature cannot extinguish a mortgagor's title. Ashuelot R. v. Elliot, 58 N. H. 451.

A statute making a garnishee liable to satisfy a judgment against the defendant in case the garnishee neglects to render a sworn account, does not deprive him of his property without due process of law. Vaughan v. Furlong, 12 N. H. 401. See Foulle v. Mann, 53 Iowa, 40.

4. George v. Ransom, 15 Cal. 401. Vested rights acquired in the property of a wife by virtue of the law existing at the time of the marriage cannot be taken away by subsequent legislation. McCarthy v. Bradt, 3 N. Y. 111; Metropolitan Bank v. Hitz, 1 Barb. 111; Holmes v. Holmes, 4 Barb. 295; White v. White, 5 Barb. 474; Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 401.

The legislature has no power to take away from a woman of her inchoate right of dower. Williams v. Courtney, 77 N. Y. 1. Compare Barbour v. Barbour, 4 N. Y. 111. A statute giving a deserted wife the rights of a feme sole trader is not a constitutional interference with the husband's interest in the wife's property prior to the act. Moore v. Ritner, 104 Pa. St. 298.

5. Brown v. Storm, 4 Vt. 37; Richardson v. Storm, 31 Vt. 306; White v. Corey, 2 N. H. 115; Bacon v. Under, 6 Mass. 303; Scott v. Mott, 1 Tex. 235; Saunders v. Wilson, 194; Fowler v. Halbert, 4 Bibb 111; Hunt v. McMahan, 5 Ohio, 111; Strong v. Jackson, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 111; Ross v. Irving, 13 Ill. 171; Shower, 18 Iowa, 261; Pace v. Pickness, 19 Wis. 219; Cooley v. Const. Lim. 386. See Billings v. Hall, 10 N. Y. 111.

6. Beckman v. Railroad, 3 N. Y. 73; Matter of Albany S. R. Co. v. Wend, (N. Y.) 149; Matter of Jones v. Wend, (N. Y.) 659; Pittsburgh & Erie R. Co. v. Pittsburgh & Erie R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 659; Pittsburgh & Erie R. Co. v. Pittsburgh & Erie R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 659.

(b) Searches and Seizures.—The constitution of the United States provides that the people shall be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures; and this guaranty is repeated in almost all the State constitutions.<sup>1</sup> Its main purpose was to make sacred the privacy of the citizen's dwelling and person against everything but process issued upon a showing of legal cause for invading it.<sup>2</sup>

(c) Jury Trial (Civil).—It is provided by the Federal constitution that, in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved.<sup>3</sup> It is well settled that this clause applies only to proceedings in the courts of the United States, and is not a restriction or limitation upon the several States, nor a regulation of the trial of actions in their courts.<sup>4</sup> But in the constitutions of a majority of

<sup>1</sup> Pa. St. 139; Hepburn's Case, 3 Bland (Md.), 95; Sadler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311; Cooper v. Williams, 5 Ohio, 393; Buckingham v. Smith, 10 Ohio, 297; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Nebr. 54.

That clause of the constitution which provides that the property of no person shall be taken for public use without just compensation has reference to property taken by right of eminent domain, and not to the collection of taxes. Nichols v. Bridgeport, 23 Conn. 189.

<sup>2</sup> 1. Const. U. S. IVth Am.; Stimson's Amer. Statute Law, § 71. See Cooley Const. Lim. 299 et seq.

<sup>3</sup> Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201.

The right to be secure against unlawful searches and seizures is not derived from the constitutions, having existed long before them, as a settled principle of the common law. United States v. Crosby, 1 Hughes (U. S. Cir.), 448; 2 Story on the Const. § 1902; Cooley Const. Lim. 303.

Concealment of Goods Held in Violation of Law—Certain articles which are treated as property, while used for lawful purposes, may be subjects of forfeiture and destruction if their use is deemed pernicious to the best interests of the community. And when attempts to use such articles for unlawful purposes, or in an unlawful manner, are so concealed that ordinary diligence fails to make such discovery as enables the law to declare the forfeiture, statutes authorizing searches and seizures have been held legitimate. But the exercise of this power must be properly guarded, that abuses may be prevented, and that a citizen shall not be deprived of his property without having an accusation against him, setting out the nature and charge thereof, and by the judgment of his peers and the law of the land, and he shall be secure in his person, house, papers, and possessions from unreasonable searches and seizures. Gray v. Kimball, 42 Me. 299. See Allen v. Staples, 6 Gray (Mass.), 491; State v. Brennan, 25 Conn. 278; Hibbard v. People, 4 Mich. 125.

Books and Papers.—It does not require actual entry upon premises and search for and seizure of papers to constitute an unreasonable search and seizure within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. A compulsory production of a party's private books and papers, to be used against himself or his property in a criminal or penal proceeding, or for a forfeiture, is within the spirit and meaning of the amendment. And it is equivalent to a compulsory production of papers to make the non-production of them a confession of the allegations which it is pretended they will prove. Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616.

Military Order.—The provision of the U. S. constitution against unreasonable searches and seizures cannot be understood to prohibit a search or seizure made in attempting to execute a military order authorized by the constitution and a law of Congress, where the jury have found that the seizure was proper and reasonable. Allen v. Colby, 47 N. H. 544.

Fourth Amendment does not extend to the State governments, but was intended only for the legislature and judiciary of the United States. Reed v. Rice, 2 J. J. Mar. (Ky.) 45.

<sup>4</sup> Const. U. S. VIIth Amend.

<sup>5</sup> Twitchell v. Commonwealth, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 321; Edwards v. Elliot, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 532; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90; State v. Keyes, 8 Vt. 57; Commonwealth v. Whitney, 108 Mass. 5; Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243; Murphy v. People, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 815; Livingston v. Mayor of New York, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 85; Lee

the States there is found a guaranty that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.<sup>1</sup> This means a trial according to the course of the common law, and the same in substance as that which was in use when the constitution was adopted.<sup>2</sup> But it secures the right only in cases where a jury trial was customarily used, and could legally be claimed, at the time of the adoption of the constitution.<sup>3</sup> In equity cases, by the laws and practice prevailing in all

v. Tillotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 337; Foster v. Jackson, 57 Ga. 206; Boring v. Williams, 17 Ala. 510; State v. Carro, 26 La. Ann. 377; State v. Anderson, 30 La. Ann. Pt. I., 557; Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558; Whallon v. Bancroft, 4 Minn. 109; Huston v. Wadsworth, 5 Colo. 213.

The Seventh Amendment does not apply to a preliminary examination under the fugitive slave law, such a proceeding not being according to the course of the common law, but statutory. Miller v. McQuerry, 5 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 469.

This clause may, in just sense, be construed to embrace all suits which are not of equity or admiralty jurisdiction, whatever peculiar form they may assume to settle legal rights. Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 447.

The provision of this amendment, which declares that no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law, applies to facts tried by a jury in a cause in a State court. Justices v. Murray, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 274.

1. Stimson's Amer. Stat. Law, §§ 72, 73.

2. East Kingston v. Towle, 48 N. H. 64; Copp v. Hemriker, 55 N. H. 179; Murphy v. People, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 815; People v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 652; Byers v. Commonwealth, 42 Pa. St. 89; Rhines v. Clark, 51 Pa. St. 96; Howe v. Treasurer, 37 N. J. L. 145; Commissioners v. Seabrook, 2 Strobh. (S. Car.) 560; Tims v. State, 26 Ala. 165; Trigally v. Mayor, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 382; Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558; Ross v. Irving, 14 Ill. 171; Whitehurst v. Coleen, 53 Ill. 247; Stilwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461; Mead v. Walker, 17 Wis. 189; Whallon v. Bancroft, 4 Minn. 109; Koppikus v. Commissioners, 16 Cal. 248.

3. People v. Phillips, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 386; Harper v. Commissioners, 23 Ga. 566; Blanchard v. Raines, 20 Fla. 467; Trigally v. Memphis, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 382; Kimball, 3 Kans. 414; Ross v. Irving, 14 Ill. 171; Whitehurst v. Coleen, 53 Ill. 247; Mead v. Walker, 17 Wis.

189; Commissioners v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 178.

In preserving the trial by jury "as heretofore used," the constitution does not interfere with those tribunals which, at the time of its adoption, proceeded to judgment without the intervention of a jury. Commissioners v. Seabrook, 2 Strobh. (S. Car.) 560; Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194.

Not every case which is not a criminal case is a civil one, wherein by the constitution the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; but that term embraces such as were treated as civil cases when the constitution was adopted. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558. See Commissioners v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 178. Compare Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 283.

An act of the legislature clogging the right of trial by jury with onerous conditions will not be pronounced unconstitutional unless it totally prostrates the right, or renders it wholly unavailing. Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194.

Eminent Domain.—In proceedings for the condemnation of property under the power of eminent domain, the property owner has no constitutional right to a trial by jury, unless, as is the case in some States, the constitution expressly gives it. Backus v. Lebanon, 11 N. H. 19; Livingston v. Mayor of New York, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 85; Penna. R. Co. v. First German Congregation, 53 Pa. St. 445; Scudder v. Trenton Co., 1 N. J. Eq. 694; Buffalo Bayou R. Co. v. Ferris, 26 Tex. 588; Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Trout, 32 Ark. 17; Dronberger v. Reed, 11 Ind. 420; Hymes v. Aydelott, 26 Ind. 431; Des Moines v. Layman, 21 Iowa, 153; Louisiana Plank Road Co. v. Pickett, 25 Mo. 535; Heyneman v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579; Kendall v. Post, 8 Oreg. 141. Compare Lamb v. Lane, 4 Ohio St. 167.

Collection of Taxes.—In the assessment and collection of taxes the constitutional provisions relating to jury trial do not apply. Grace v. Newton, 135 Mass. 490; Cocheco Mfg. Co. v. Strafford, 51 N. H. 455; Harper v. Elberton, 23 Ga. 566; State v. Moss, 69 Mo. 495; Com- the States (except New Hampshire) before the adoption of their constitutions, a trial by jury was not used. The constitutional provision preserving the right of trial by jury does not therefore missioners v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 178; Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 45-50, 432.

Claims against Government.—In the trial of claims against the government, the claimant has no constitutional right to a trial by jury; he can only establish his claim in the mode pointed out by the statute. McElrath v. United States, 102 U. S. 426; Bledsoe v. State, 64 N. Car. 392; Pelham v. State, 30 Tex. 422.

A statute authorizing the appointment of a jury of six men to ascertain and determine, out of court, the amount of damage to property done by a mob, is constitutional. In re Pennsylvania Hall, 5 Pa. St. 204.

Contested Elections.—An act providing for the final determination of the question of the election of public officers, is not unconstitutional in not giving a trial by jury. Ewing v. Filley, 43 Pa. St. 384; State v. Lewis, 51 Conn. 113; Allison v. State, 17 Repr. (Ga.) 393; State v. Gleason, 12 Fla. 190. Compare People v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 57 N. Y. 361; State v. Burnett, 2 Ala. 140; State v. Head, 22 La. Ann. 54; People v. Ciott, 16 Mich. 309.

Quo Warranto.—In a proceeding of this character, the defendant has no constitutional right to a jury trial. State v. Lupton, 64 Mo. 415; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 253; State v. Vail, 53 Mo. 97; State v. Johnson, 26 Ark. 281. Compare People v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 57 N. Y. 361; State v. Burnett, 2 Ala. 140; People v. Doesburg, 16 Mich. 133.

Mandamus.—The act of Congress concerning the practice in Territorial courts, in recognizing the right of trial by jury in cases cognizable at common law, does not include proceedings in mandamus. Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. Ter. 242.

Contempt of Court.—The infliction of summary punishment for a contempt of court is not an infringement of the constitutional guaranty of jury trial. State v. Doty, 3 Vroom (N. J.), 403; Garrigus v. State, 93 Ind. 239.

Remedies against Sureties.—Sureties on certain kinds of bonds, such as sheriffs' bonds, writ of error bonds, and bonds for costs, may have judgment rendered against them on such bonds without a jury trial. Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 235; Gildersleeve v. People, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 35; Johnston v. Atwood, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 225; Murray v. Askew, 6 J. J. Mar. (Ky.) 27; Young v. Wise, 45 Ga. 81; Whitehurst v. Coleen, 53 Ill. 247. Compare Hughes v. Hughes, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 42.

A statute giving to sureties the right to recover, by summary process, money paid by them for their principal, is constitutional. McCord v. Johnson, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 241.

Summary Proceedings.—A statute authorizing summary proceedings by motion against a sheriff and his sureties for official misconduct, is not a violation of the constitutional guaranty of jury trial. Lewis v. Garrett, 5 How. (Miss.) 434; Lewis v. Fellows, 6 How. (Miss.) 261.

The legislature may give a corporation, created for the public benefit, a summary mode of collecting its debts. Hank of Newbern v. Taylor, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 266.

Supplementary Proceedings.—Upon proceedings supplementary to execution, the debtor is not entitled to a jury trial. Kennesaw Mills v. Walker, 19 S. Car. 104.

An action by a judgment creditor to subject property fraudulently sold to the payment of his judgment, which but for such fraud would have been subject to levy on execution, is not a proceeding supplementary to execution, and trial by jury is a matter of right. Scott v. Indianapolis Wagon Works, 48 Ind. 75.

Divorce Proceedings.—In an action for divorce, or to annul a marriage, a trial by jury is not a constitutional right. Coffin v. Coffin, 55 Me. 361; Leffel v. Leffel, 35 Ind. 76; Cassidy v. Sullivan, 64 Cal. 266.

Inquisition of Lunacy.—An inquest of lunacy by a board of commissioners is no violation of the constitutional right of trial by jury. Black Hawk Co. v. Springer, 58 Iowa, 417. See Gaston v. Babcock, 6 Wis. 503.

Dower.—In an action for admeasurement of dower the defence was that the plaintiff had, by an ante-nuptial agreement, released her claim to dower. Held, that the defendants were entitled to a jury trial. Kinne v. Kinne, 2 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 393.

Insolvent Laws.—The provision of the insolvent laws which authorizes the issuing of a warrant to take possession of all the estate of the debtor, on the petition of a creditor, without a trial by jury on the facts alleged in the petition, is constitutional. O'Neil v. Glover, 5 Gray (Mass.), 144.

extend to such cases, and the legislature may provide that a suit in equity may be tried by the court without the intervention of a jury.<sup>1</sup> But the legislature cannot convert a legal right into an equitable one so as to infringe upon the right of jury trial.<sup>2</sup>

Compulsory references, in cases requiring the examination of long accounts, were well known and sanctioned by statute in some of the States before the adoption of their constitutions. Such references may therefore be authorized by their legislatures without contravening the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury. But in other States it is held that a compulsory reference of issues of fact to the determination of a single person is a violation of the constitutional rights of the parties. A statute authorizing

1. Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 283; Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., 2 Cliff. (U. S. Cir.) 351; Dunnell v. Keteltas, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 205; McCarty v. Edwards, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 236; Wynkoop v. Cooch, 69 Pa. St. 450; Lucken v. Wichman, 5 S. Car. 411; Kimball v. Connor, 3 Kans. 414; Hixon v. George, 18 Kans. 253; Helm v. Huntington Bank, 91 Ind. 44; Hearock v. Hosmer, 109 Ill. 245; Conran v. Sellew, 28 Mo. 320; Weil v. Kune, 49 Mo. 158; Stilwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461; Lake v. Tolles, 8 Nev. 285. Compare Marston v. Brackett, 9 N. H. 336; Hoit v. Burleigh, 18 N. H. 389. See Bellows v. Bellows, 58 N. H. 60.

2. Norris's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 275.

In a suit brought to foreclose a mortgage there is no constitutional right to a trial by jury. Carmichael v. Adams, 91 Ind. 526; Middletown Bank v. Bacharach, 46 Conn. 513; Stilwell v. Kellogg, 14 Wis. 461; Conn. Ins. Co. v. Cross, 18 Wis. 109.

Questions concerning trust funds belong to a court of equity, and do not require a jury trial. Sands v. Kimbark, 27 N. Y. 147.

The rule that in equitable suits a jury will not be called as a matter of right, applies to an action alleging the cancellation and delivery of a note by mistake and asking for relief. Weil v. Kune, 49 Mo. 158.

On petition for the allowance of a claim against property in the hands of a receiver, a jury trial is not a matter of right. Kennedy v. Railroad, 2 Flap. (U. S. Cir.) 704. See Litchfield v. Degendorf, 18 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 358.

The constitutional right of trial by jury applies to an action to abate a nuisance and recover the damages occasioned thereby, although the complaint is in form as for equitable relief, and the prayer for damages may be regarded as incidental thereto. Hudson v. Caryl, 44 N. Y. 553; Hyatt v. Myers, 73 N. Car. 232.

A suit on a guardian's bond is equitable but a common-law suit, and in a trial by jury is a matter of course. Galway v. State, 93 Ind. 161.

Although an action for partition is an equitable action, yet under the statute where issues of fact are presented by the pleadings, a jury trial may be demanded. Hewlett v. Wood, 62 N. Y. 75.

3. Lee v. Tillotson, 24 Wend. 337; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 624; Walker, 17 Wis. 189; Supervisors v. Dunning, 20 Wis. 210; Perkins v. State, 57 N. H. 55.

But a law compelling a person to state upon a claim which properly may be the subject of an action, without assent, is contrary to the constitutional provision securing him a right to a trial by jury according to the course of the common law. People v. Haws, 37 Barb. 440; McMartin v. Bingham, 27 N. Y. 234.

The legislature has no power to require a claim to be made by individuals against a municipal corporation for damages on account of the failure of the corporation to award a contract to them, or that the damages shall be ascertained by arbitrators, to be appointed as provided in the act, without requiring the assent of the corporation. Baldwin v. York, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 359.

4. Bernheim v. Waring, 79 N. Y. 56; Smith v. Bryce, 17 S. Car. 523; Pfeiffer v. Maltby, 38 Tex. 523; Norris, 19 Cal. 140; Graves v. R. Co., 5 Mont. 556; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 100.

An act making an auditor's report prima facie evidence of the facts in a suit by him, on the trial before the jury, is unconstitutional. King v. Hopkinton, 18 N. H. 334, where Foster, C. J., said: "If the jury can be compelled to base their verdict not upon the issue between the parties, but upon the question whether an auxiliary decision on an issue is right, giving to that a actions to be tried by referees upon the consent of the parties is not repugnant to the constitutional provision securing trial by jury.<sup>1</sup>

Many cases hold that the courts have no authority to order a peremptory nonsuit against the will of the plaintiff; he has a right by law to a trial by jury, and to have the case submitted to them; he may agree to a nonsuit, but cannot be compelled to submit to it.<sup>2</sup> Statutes which authorize a justice of the peace, or other inferior court, to decide questions without a jury, but which give an appeal from his judgment to a court which tries by jury, are constitutional.<sup>3</sup> decision as evidence of its own correctness such weight as the legislature choose to prescribe, the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury is a delusion." And see Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 283; Deverson v. Railroad, 58 N. H. 129.

The courts of the United States cannot deprive either party of the right of trial by jury, by sending the issue to referees, without his explicit consent. United States v. Rathbone, 2 Paine (U. S. Cir.), 578.

1. Home Ins. Co. v. Security Ins. Co., 23 Wis. 171.

2. Doe v. Grymes, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 469; D'Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 476; Mitchell v. Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 117; Girard v. Gettig, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 234; Widdifield v. Widdifield, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 248; Irving v. Taggart, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 360; Thweat v. Finch, 1 Wash. (Va.) 219; Ross v. Gill, 1 Wash. (Va.) 87; Phillips v. Jordan, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 42; Bacon v. Parker, 2 Overt. (Tenn.) 57; Scruggs v. Brackin, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 528. Compare Pratt v. Hull, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 334; Stuart v. Simpson, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 176; Perley v. Little, 3 Me. 97; Brown v. Frost, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 126.

Facts are for the jury; the law applicable to them is for the court; hence when the court ordered a nonsuit, on the ground that, under the law as applicable to all the facts of the case that a jury could have found from the evidence, there was no liability on the part of the defendant, such order was held not to violate the constitutional right of jury trial. Munn v. Pittsburgh, 40 Pa. St. 364; Naugatuck R. v. Waterbury Co., 24 Conn. 468.

A statute allowing the judge, on disagreement of the jury, to decide the cause is not unconstitutional. Joseph v. Bidwell, 28 La. Ann. 382.

A statute which enables the court to make the record conform to what was tried before the jury and found by the verdict does not infringe the right of trial by jury. Parks v. Boynton, 98 Pa. St. 370.

Directing a Verdict.—After the evidence was in, on a trial before a jury, the court ordered a verdict for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court whether, on the evidence, the defendant was liable, and then rendered judgment for the defendant. Held, that the plaintiff was unlawfully deprived of his right to a trial by jury. Baylis v. Insurance Co., 113 U. S. 316.

Assessment of Damages by Court.—The right of trial by jury is not impaired by a law giving to the court the right to assess damages without a jury in case of default. Hopkins v. Ladd, 35 Ill. 178; Seeley v. Bridgeport, 20 Repr. (Conn.) 360; Raymond v. Railroad, 43 Conn. 596.

So in replevin, when plaintiff discontinues. Campbell v. Head, 13 Ill. 122; Lamy v. Remuson, 2 New Mex. 245.

In cases of debt or covenant, where the amount is liquidated by the act or deed of the parties, a court may proceed without a jury to assess the damages. Harrison v. Chiles, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 200.

3. Beers v. Beers, 4 Conn. 535; State v. Brennan, 25 Conn. 278. Emerick v. Harris, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 416; Biddle v. Commonwealth, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 405; Stuart v. Baltimore, 7 Md. 500; Thomas v. Bibb, 44 Ala. 721; Keddie v. Moore, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 41; Wilson v. Simonton, 1 Hawks (N. Car.), 482; Monford v. Barney, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 444; State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa, 203.

In several States there is no constitutional right to trial by jury when the amount in controversy does not exceed a certain sum. Stimson's Amer. Stat. Law, § 73. Hence an act which does not allow an appeal to a jury from a justice's judgment not exceeding that sum, is not unconstitutional. Curtis v. Gill, 34 Conn. 49.

The adoption of a State constitution providing that the right of trial by jury

The word "jury," as used in the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury, means a jury of twelve men.<sup>1</sup> Trial by jury may be waived by the parties in all civil cases.<sup>2</sup>

(d) Liberty of Conscience.—The constitutional guaranties for the free exercise of religious profession and worship without discrimination do not interdict all legislation connected with religion, nor do they avoid legislation tending to promote religion.<sup>3</sup> Mo-

"shall be preserved inviolate" does not prohibit the legislature from increasing the amount requisite to entitle a defeated party in an action before a justice to appeal and obtain a jury trial. Guile v. Brown, 38 Conn. 237.

A statute requiring the appellant from a magistrate's judgment to give security for the prosecution of his appeal and for costs, is not unconstitutional as infringing on jury trial. Hapgood v. Doherty, 8 Gray (Mass.), 373.

The repeal of a statute which gave suitors in the supreme court a second trial as of course is valid. Matthews v. Tripp, 12 R. I. 256.

1. Opinion of Justices, 41 N. H. 550; People v. Justices, 74 N. Y. 406; People v. Kennedy, 2 Parker (N. Y.), 312; Dowling v. State, 5 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 664; Work v. Ohio, 2 Ohio St. 307; Lamb v. Lane, 4 Ohio St. 167; Vaughn v. Scade, 30 Mo. 600; Campau v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 276; May v. Railroad, 3 Wis. 219.

Whenever facts are to be found in any proceeding in which a jury was not required by the common law, a jury of any number may be authorized within the discretion of the legislature. And as juries did not belong to courts held by justices of the peace, a law requiring a less number than twelve to constitute a jury in such courts would not be unconstitutional. Work v. State, 2 Ohio St. 296; Knight v. Campbell, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 16.

A statute providing that three fourths of a jury may find a verdict in a common-law action is unconstitutional. Kleinschmidt v. Dunphy, 1 Mont. Ter. 118; Opinion of the Justices, 41 N. H. 550.

Composition of the Jury.—The constitutional provision that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate does not necessarily mean trial by a jury of the vicinage. Juries were originally selected from the vicinage because, being so selected, they were more likely to know about the matter for trial. That reason no longer operates. The principal reason for trial in the vicinage now is the convenience of parties and witnesses. Taylor v. Gardiner, 11 R. I. 182. Com- pare Swart v. Kimball, 43 Mich. 48; See Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243.

(Nota bene, that this view cannot be extended to criminal trials. See, § 10 (b).)

An act which prohibits those who are not tax-payers from serving on a jury conflicts with the Federal constitution and is void. Reece v. Knott, 3 Ky. 451.

Neither the right of trial by jury nor the principles of local self-government are infringed by the Michigan statute authorizing jurors to be drawn from a board of jury commissioners appointed by the governor. People v. Hall, 53 Mich. 48; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 95.

2. Leahy v. Dunlap, 6 Colo. 194; Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 104 Ga. 194.

A statute providing that, in civil actions, a party shall not be entitled to a trial by jury unless he files, within a certain time prescribed, a notice that he demands such trial, is constitutional and valid. Foster v. Morse, 132 Mass. 354; 42 Am. Rep. 438.

Jury Fees.—There is no valid objection to charging a party who demands a jury trial a reasonable jury fee. Anderson v. Corrison, 7 Minn. 456.

A statute giving special juries to either party, on motion, by paying the costs of the same, does not violate the constitutional right of trial by jury. King v. Stifel Brewing Co., 15 Mo. 125.

The Tennessee act, "to tax the party with the jury fees in all cases of civil suits," was held unconstitutional. Neely v. State, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 174.

Affidavit of Defence.—An act allowing judgment to be entered without a trial on the failure of the defendant to file an affidavit of defence within the specified time, does not violate the constitutional guaranty. Lawrence v. Borm, 8 St. 225; Randall v. Weld, 86 Pa. 51; Dortic v. Lockwood, 61 Ga. 293.

3. Ex parte Andrews, 18 Cal. 569; See 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1870-1871; Cooley Const. Lim. 467-478.

The Bill of Rights of New Hampshire (art. 6), while it empowers the lethe States of the Union have enacted statutes prohibiting the transaction of business, or the pursuit of ordinary secular avocations, on Sunday. The constitutionality of these laws is unquestioned.<sup>1</sup> The same is true of statutes defining and punishing blasphemy.<sup>2</sup>

(e) Right to Obtain Justice without Purchase.—A statute which prescribes entrance fees and continuance fees for suits at law and in equity does not violate the constitutional provision that every citizen "ought to obtain justice freely and without purchase, completely and without denial, promptly and without delay."<sup>3</sup>

And it is held that a statute providing that, before any person claiming title to land sold for taxes can prosecute or defend a suit against the tax-title claimant, he shall deposit in court the amount of the purchase-money, together with all taxes and costs accruing since the sale and the value of improvements made by the purchaser, is not unconstitutional under this provision of the constitu-ture to authorize the several towns, parishes, bodies corporate, or religious societies within the State to make adequate provision at their own expense for the support and maintenance of public Protestant teachers of religion, does not directly or by implication forbid the legislature to authorize such towns, etc., to make provision for the support of any other religious teachers besides Protestants. Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 9.

The courts will not compel an individual to attend worship in any place, nor remain connected with any church, nor to receive any one as his pastor. Feizel v. Trustees, 9 Kans. 592.

Bible in the Schools.—A statute providing that the Bible shall not be excluded from the public schools, but that no pupil shall be required to read it contrary to the wishes of his parent or guardian, is constitutional. Moore v. Monroe, 64 Iowa, 367; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 444. See Cincinnati v. Minor, 23 Ohio St. 211.

1. Commonwealth v. Colton, 8 Gray (Mass.) 488; Neuendorff v. Duryea, 69 N. Y. 557; People v. Hoym, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 76; Lindenmuller v. People, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 548; Specht v. Commonwealth, 8 Pa. St. 312; Commonwealth v. Wolf, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 48; State v. Fearson, 2 Md. 310; Bode v. State, 7 Gill (Md.) 326; State v. Williams, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 400; City Council v. Benjamin, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 508; Hall v. State, 3 Kelly (Ga.), 18; Frolickstein v. Mayor, 40 Ala. 725; Gabel v. Houston, 29 Tex. 335; Elsner v. State, 30 Tex. 524; Bohl v. State, 3 Tex. App. 683; State v. Bott, 31 La. Ann. 663; Megowan v. Commonwealth, 2 Met.

(Ky.) 3; Shover v. State, 5 Engl. (Ark.) 259; States v. Anderson, 30 Ark. 131; McGarrick v. Wason, 4 Ohio St. 566; Piqua v. Zimmerlin, 35 Ohio St. 507; Vogelsong v. State, 9 Ind. 112; Eitel v. State, 33 Ind. 201; State v. Ambs, 20 Mo. 214; Ex parte Andrews, 18 Cal. 678; Ex parte Hird, 19 Cal. 130; Ex parte Burke, 59 Cal. 6; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 231; Parker v. State, 25 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 722, and note; 2 Bishop Criminal Law, § 951; Cooley Const. Lim. 476. Compare Ex parte Newman, 9 Cal. 502.

2. Commonwealth v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 213; People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns (N. Y.) 290; State v. Chandler, 2 Harring. (Del.) 553. See Cooley Const. Lim. 472-3.

As the constitution of Kentucky excuses those from bearing arms who have conscientious scruples on the subject, a fine for not attending a militia muster cannot be imposed on such a person. White v. McBride, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 61.

The rejection of a witness as incompetent, by reason of his want of religious belief, is no violation of religious freedom. Thurston v. Whitney, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 104.

3. Perce v. Hallett, 13 R. I. 363; Willard v. Redwood Co., 22 Minn. 61.

This provision does not make unconstitutional an act which authorizes the court, for cause shown, to require security for costs from a party suing in the court. Such an act is a proper safeguard against vexatious prosecutions. A person cannot be said to purchase justice when he simply secures his opponent's costs, in case he fails in the suit. Conley v. Woonsocket Co., 11 R. I. 147; Gesford v. Critzer, 2 Gilm. (Ill.) 698.

tion.<sup>1</sup> A constitutional declaration that every person for injury done him shall have adequate remedy by due process of law, does not operate in the courts to sustain an action of which the legislature has not given the court jurisdiction; its effect is to devolve duty upon the legislature of providing juridical remedies, but until these are prescribed the courts cannot act.<sup>2</sup>

(f) Right to Bear Arms.—The right to bear arms is not granted by the constitution, nor is it in any manner dependent upon the instrument for its existence. The Second Amendment means no more than that it shall not be infringed by Congress, and has no other effect than to restrict the powers of the national government.<sup>3</sup> A statute prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons is no infringement of the constitutional right of the citizen; it is a measure of police, prohibiting only a particular mode of bearing arms which is found dangerous to the peace of society.<sup>4</sup>

(g) Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments.—The Fourteenth Amendment prohibits a State from depriving a person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and from denying any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law; but it adds nothing to the rights of one citizen as against another. It simply furnishes an additional guaranty against any encroachment by the States upon the fundamental rights which belong

1. Craig v. Flanagan, 21 Ark. 319; Pope v. Macon, 23 Ark. 644; Coats v. Hill, 41 Ark. 149; Smith v. Smith, 19 Wis. 615. Compare Reed v. Tyler, 56 Ill. 288; Conway v. Cable, 37 Ill. 82; Lassiter v. Lee, 68 Ala. 287; Weller v. St. Paul, 5 Minn. 95. See Dunn v. Snell, 74 Me. 22; Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 550 et seq.

The legislature has constitutional power to tax rights in action, and to enact that an affidavit that all taxes upon a demand in suit have been paid shall be filed before the plaintiff is allowed to proceed in the cause. Walker v. Whitehead, 43 Ga. 538. Compare Lathrop v. Brown, 10 Am. Law Reg. 638.

2. State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. Ann. 698.

3. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 165. See Cooley Const. Lim. 350; 2 Story on the Const., §§ 1896-1898.

But in view of the fact that all citizens capable of bearing arms constitute the reserved military force of the national government, as well as in view of its general powers, the States cannot prohibit the people from keeping and bearing arms so as to deprive the United States of their rightful resource for maintaining the public security. Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252.

4. Wright v. Commonwealth, 77 Pa. St. 470; State v. Speller, 86 N. Car. 697;

Nunn v. State, 1 Kelly (Ga.), 243; Harris v. Georgia, 53 Ga. 572; State v. Reid, Ala. 612; Chatteaux v. State, 52 Ala. 388; State v. Jumel, 13 La. Ann. 30; English v. State, 35 Tex. 472; Ayme v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 154; State v. Buzzard, 4 Pike (Ark.), 18; Fife v. State, 31 Ark. 455; Wilson v. State, 33 Ark. 557; Haile v. State, 38 Ark. 564; 2 42 Am. Rep. 3; State v. Wilforth, 74 Mo. 528; 1 c. 41 Am. Rep. 330. Compare Bliss v. Commonwealth, 2 Litt (Ky.), 10; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 165. But a law which should prohibit the wearing of weapons openly upon a person would be unconstitutional. Nunn v. State, 1 Kelly (Ga.), 243.

Weapons not Military.—"The provision protects only the right to keep such arms as are used for purposes of war, and such only as are distinguished from those which are employed in quarrels and brawls and fights between maddened individuals, since such only are properly known by the name of arms, and such only are adapted to promote the security of a free state. In like manner, the right to bear arms refers only to the military way of using them, not to their use in bravado and affray." 2 Bishop's Crim. Law, 124.

The language of the constitution does not include dirks, daggers, or bow-knives. English v. State, 35 Tex. 472; Cockrum v. State, 24 Tex. 394.

every citizen as a member of society. The duty of protecting all their citizens in the enjoyment of an equality of rights was originally assumed by the States, and it still remains there. The only obligation resting upon the United States is to see that the States do not deny the right. This the amendment guarantees, but no more. The power of the national government is limited to the enforcement of this guaranty.<sup>1</sup> It does not require that the State shall secure infallibility in the practical administration of its laws; nor can its failure to do so in any particular case be deemed a denial of the equal protection of the laws.<sup>2</sup> The prohibitory provisions

1. United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542. The Fourteenth Amendment does not add to the privileges or immunities of citizens, but only furnishes additional protection for the privileges already existing. Thus, it does not give women the right to vote in States where the organic law forbids it. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 162.

2. Green v. State, 16 Repr. (Ala.) 390.

Equal Protection of the Laws.—A State may establish one system of law in one portion of its territory, and another system in another, provided always that it neither encroaches upon the proper jurisdiction of the United States, nor abridges the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, nor deprives any person of his rights without due process of law, nor denies to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws in the same district. Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 22.

State Regulation of Business.—The Fourteenth Amendment applies to all citizens of the United States, and is intended to protect them in their privileges and immunities as such, against the action as well of their own State as of other States in which they may happen to be. These privileges and immunities do not consist merely in being placed on an equality with others, but embrace all the fundamental rights of a citizen of the United States as such. One of these fundamental rights is the right to pursue any lawful employment in a lawful manner, or in other words, the right to choose one's own pursuit subject only to constitutional regulations and restrictions. Live Stock Association v. Crescent City Co., 1 Abb. (U. S.) 388. Compare Munn v. People, 69 Ill. 80.

A municipal ordinance to regulate the carrying on of public laundries within the limits of the municipality violates the provisions of the Federal constitution, if it confers upon the municipal authorities arbitrary power, at their own will, and without regard to discretion in the legal sense of the term, to give or withhold consent as to persons or places, without regard to the competency of the persons applying, or the propriety of the places selected for the carrying on of the business. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356.

An act providing that no corporation shall, directly or indirectly, in any capacity, employ any Chinese or Mongolian laborer, is void, as conflicting with the treaty with China and with the Fourteenth Amendment. In re Parrott, 6 Sawyer (U. S. Cir.), 149. See People v. Brady, 40 Cal. 198.

Service on Juries.—Any State statute which denies to colored citizens the right or privilege of participating in the administration of the laws by serving on grand or petit juries, because of their race or color, is a discrimination against them which is forbidden by the Fourteenth Amendment. Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339; Green v. State, 73 Ala. 26; Commonwealth v. Johnson, 78 Ky. 509.

And such discrimination is ground for quashing the panel or an indictment found by a jury so constituted. Green v. State, 73 Ala. 26.

In Commonwealth v. Wright, 79 Ky. 22; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 203, it was held that a white man cannot complain of the exclusion, by statute, of negroes from the grand jury indicting him. Compare Haggard v. Commonwealth, 79 Ky. 366.

And the Nevada jury law, denying to Mongolians the right to serve as jurors, was held constitutional in State v. Ah Chew, 16 Nev. 50; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 488.

A denial of a motion made by a colored man in a State court, on his being indicted for murder, that some portion of the jury be composed of his own race, was held not to be a denial of any right secured to him by the Federal constitution or any law. A mixed jury in a particular case is not essential to the equal protection of the laws. It is a right to which any colored man is entitled that, of the Fourteenth Amendment did not instantly, on the day of promulgation, vacate all offices held by persons within the cat of prohibition, and make all official acts performed by them in the selection of jurors to pass upon his life, liberty, or property, there shall be no exclusion of his race and no discrimination against them because of color. But that is a different thing from a right to have a jury composed in part of colored men. Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313. See Cavitt v. State, 15 Tex. App. 190.

Where the State supreme court had declared unconstitutional a State statute discriminating against colored persons in the selection of a jury, and that the officer summoning the jurors should disregard race and color, it was held that a colored person prosecuted in the State court subsequent to such declaration could not claim, in advance of the trial, that any of his equal civil rights were denied; and hence he could not remove the cause to the Federal courts under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 641. Bush v. Kentucky, 107 U. S. 110. See Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370. See also Dillon on Removal of Causes (4th Ed.), §§ 32-36.

Public School System.—Under the recent amendments, the State legislature, in establishing and prescribing regulations for public schools, cannot exclude colored children from the benefit of the public-school system on account of their color only. A law providing separate schools for white and for colored children is not unconstitutional. Equality, and not identity, of rights and privileges is what is guaranteed to the citizen. But unless separate schools for colored children have been established, at the public expense, giving equal facilities for education as are afforded by the schools for whites, colored children are entitled to admission to the latter. Ward v. Flood, 48 Cal. 36; People v. Gallagher, 93 N. Y. 438; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 232; Cory v. Carter, 48 Ind. 327; Claybrook v. Owensboro, 16 Fed. Repr. 297.

Civil Rights Act, Constitutionality of.—The first and second sections of the "Civil Rights Bill" of March 1, 1875,—the first section guaranteeing to all persons the full and equal enjoyment of all inns, public conveyances, places of amusement, etc., and the second section providing the punishment for violations of the provisions of the first section,—are unconstitutional and void. They cannot be sustained under either of the late amendments to the Constitution. For the legislation attempted does not profess to be corrective of any constitu tional wrong committed by the but proceeds ex directo to declare certain acts committed by individuals shall be deemed offences. Civil Cases, 109 U. S. 3; United States v. Washington, 4 Woods (U. S. Cir. Cully v. Railroad, 1 Hughes (U. S. 536. Compare United States v. Comer, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 519.

But the act of Congress of 1866, known as the "Civil Rights Act" was held to be constitutional in its provisions, and to be an appropriate method of exercising the power conferred on Congress by the Thirteenth Amendment. United States v. Rhodes, (U. S.) 28; Ex parte Turner, 10 Dec. (U. S.) 157.

The right to make a separation between public conveyance between white and colored passengers can be upheld when the carrier in good faith furnishes accommodations equal in quality and convenience to both classes. The S. Fed. Repr. 843; Logwood v. Railroad, Fed. Repr. 318; Murphy v. Railroad, Fed. Repr. 637.

Citizenship.—Prior to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment, only those born within the United States were not citizens of any State nor of the United States, nor could they become citizens under the then existing laws. Marshall v. Donovan, 10 Bush (Ky.)

The promotion of colored persons to citizenship is an admission of their equality with the rights and privileges of white persons in the same manner and to the same extent. They cannot be distinguished from other citizens, by legislation, for the causes which previously characterized their want of citizenship. Burns v. Alabama, 48 Ala. 195.

No white person born within the limits of the United States and subject to its jurisdiction, or naturalized, owes any status of citizenship to the recent amendments to the Federal Constitution. Valkenburg v. Brown, 43 Cal. 43; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94; Heard v. Detroit, 26 Mich. 51.

Corporations not Citizens.—An incorporated company is not a citizen of the United States, nor a person, within the meaning of § 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 10 (U. S. Cir.), 85.

But it is a "person" within the meaning of the Civil Rights Act. Northern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, (U. S. Cir.) 480.

that day null and void.<sup>1</sup> See, on the general subject, 2 Story on the Constitution, §§ 1928-1974.

The Fifteenth Amendment does not confer the right of suffrage; but it invests citizens of the United States with the right of exemption from discrimination in the exercise of the elective franchise on account of their race, color, or previous condition of servitude.<sup>2</sup>

10. Constitutional Guaranties in Criminal Cases.—Although the earlier amendments to the Federal constitution, having to do with criminal trials, operate only as restrictions upon the national government (see next section), yet the Fourteenth Amendment forbids any State to deprive a person of his liberty without due process of law.<sup>3</sup> And the constitutional rights of persons accused of crime are amply secured by the organic law of the several States.<sup>4</sup>

(a) Presentment or Indictment.—The Fifth Amendment to the constitution of the United States—that “no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury”—was not designed as a limitation upon the State governments in reference to their own citizens, but exclusively as a restriction on Federal power.<sup>5</sup> But a

Miscegenation.—A State statute prohibiting the intermarriage of a white person and a negro is not in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment or the Civil Rights Act. Ex parte Kinney, 3 Hughes (U. S. Cir.), 9; Ex parte Francois, 3 Woods (U. S. Cir.), 367; Ex parte Hobbs, 1 Woods (U. S. Cir.), 537; State v. Gibson, 36 Ind. 389; Lomas v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 287. Compare Burns v. State, 48 Ala. 195.

An act providing a greater punishment for adultery between a white person and a negro than for adultery between those of the same race is constitutional, not being a discrimination against any particular race, but simply providing a penalty for an offence which could only exist when the parties were of different races. Pace v. Alabama, 106 U. S. 583; Ellis v. State, 42 Ala. 525.

1. Cæsar Griffin's Case, Chase's Dec. (U. S.) 368.

2. United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214. See United States v. Rhodes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 28; Wood v. Fitzgerald, 3 Oreg. 568; Anthony v. Halderman, 7 Kans. 50; Cooley Const. Lim. 599; 2 Story on the Const. § 1972.

Constitutionality of U. S. Rev. Stats. § 5508, see Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651.

3. A statute which provides that no convict shall be discharged from the State prison until he has remained the full term for which he was sentenced, excluding the time he may have been in solitary confinement for any violation of the rules and regulations of the prison, is in derogation of the constitutional provision that a man shall not be deprived of his liberty without due process of law, and is for that reason void. Gross v. Rice, 71 Me. 241. See Knox v. State, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 202.

The Maine statute which authorizes two or more overseers of the poor, by a writing under their hands, to commit to the workhouse tramps and vagrants, is in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. The ex parte determination of two overseers of the poor is not “due process of law.” Portland v. Bangor, 65 Me. 120.

4. See Stimson's Amer. Stat. Law, §§ 120-150.

5. Twitchell v. Commonwealth, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 321; State v. Paul, 5 R. I. 185; State v. Keeran, 5 R. I. 497; State v. Shumpert, 1 S. Car. 85; State v. Jackson, 21 La. Ann. 574; State v. Anderson, 30 La. Ann. Pt. I. 557; Jane v. Commonwealth 3 Met. (Ky.) 18; State v. Barnett, 3 Kans. 250; Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 184; Boyd v. Ellis, 11 Iowa, 97; State v. Millain, 3 Nev. 409.

Infamous Crime.—A crime punishable by imprisonment in a State prison or penitentiary, with or without hard labor, is an infamous crime, within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment. Mackin v. United States, 117 U. S. 348; United States v. Tod, 21 Repr. (U. S. Cir.) 199.

A misdemeanor need not be prosecuted by presentment or indictment, not being an infamous crime. Territory v. Farnsworth 5 Mont. 303.

Embezzlement is not an infamous similar guaranty, in equivalent language, has been incorporated in the constitutions of nearly all the States.<sup>1</sup> The terms "presentment" and "indictment" are used in constitutional phraseology in their common law sense, and necessarily presuppose and include the action of a grand jury.<sup>2</sup> But it is well settled that, as to means, the legislature may make them punishable either by indictment or information.<sup>3</sup> The constitutional provision that an indictment shall fully and plainly, substantially and formally describe the offence with which the prisoner is charged is peremptory, though it does not change the rules of the common law.

crime. United States v. Reilly, 20 Fed. Repr. 46.

An affidavit made solely upon information derived from others whose names are not given, by a person who swears that he has good reason to believe, and does believe, that a certain person, naming him, has committed an offence against the laws, describing it, does not meet the requirements of the constitution. In re Rule of Court, 3 Woods (U. S. Cir.), 502.

1. Stimson's Amer. Stat. Law, § 128.

The Missouri Bill of Rights provides that offences shall be prosecuted by indictment or information. Held, that Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 2025-6, authorizing prosecutions based on an information in the form of an affidavit of a private person, are unconstitutional. State v. Briscoe, 80 Mo. 643.

Neither the provision of the Wisconsin constitution that no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offence "without due process of law," nor the Fourteenth Amendment, has the effect to prevent the State from punishing felonies by criminal information, without presentment or indictment by a grand jury. Rowan v. State, 30 Wis. 129.

A statute which directs that when the accused is indicted under a wrong name, and he gives his true name when arraigned, it shall be entered on the minutes and the prisoner tried under his true name, is not unconstitutional. People v. Kelly, 6 Cal. 210.

2. Eason v. State, 6 Engl (Ark.) 481. See 2 Story on the Const. § 1784.

3. State v. Ebert, 40 Mo. 186; King v. State, 17 Fla. 183.

A statute relating to juvenile offenders, and purporting to give to inferior tribunals jurisdiction of offences punishable by infamous punishment, is unconstitutional. Commonwealth v. Horregan, 127 Mass. 450.

Quo Warranto.—An information in the nature of a quo warranto, brought to try the right to an office or franchise, though in form a criminal proceeding, is the nature of a civil remedy, and belongs not within the constitutional requirement of presentment or indictment. State v. Hardie, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 42; Baugh v. Vincennes v. State; 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 4.

4. Commonwealth v. Davis, 11 Mass. 438; State v. Learned, 4 Mass. 426; Murphy v. State, 28 Miss. 637.

Sufficiency of Indictment.—An indictment which fails to charge the essential elements of a crime is insufficient, though its form is that prescribed by statute. Williams v. State, 12 Tex. 395.

An act which authorizes a criminal prosecution upon a complaint against a person in particular, and not containing a charge of the substantive facts necessary to constitute the offence, is unconstitutional. Greene v. Briggs, 1 U. S. Cir. 311.

A statute providing that, in indictments for conspiracy, the particular offence designed to be committed need not be alleged, is unconstitutional. State v. State, 79 Ind. 198.

But an act providing that "in an indictment for murder it shall not be necessary to set forth the manner in which or the means by which the death of the deceased was caused" is not unconstitutional. State v. Schnelle, 24 W. Va. 11.

An act providing that any person indicted for a felony and acquitted of the offence charged, and convicted of the residue, may be adjudged guilty of the offence (if any) substantially charged in the residue of the indictment is valid. Commonwealth v. Lane, 11 Gray (Mass.) 11.

A statute purporting to make the offence of theft include the incomplete offence of embezzlement is unconstitutional and void; and notwithstanding provisions of the code, a conviction for embezzlement cannot be had upon an indictment for theft. Huntsman v. State, 12 Tex. App. 619 (overruling White v. State, 11 Tex. App. 414).

(b) Trial by Jury.—The Sixth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, securing the right of trial by jury in criminal cases, does not restrict the State governments, but only applies to the Federal government and its officers.<sup>1</sup> The constitutional guaranties in the various States, that the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, or shall remain inviolate, refer to the right as it existed at the adoption of the constitution.<sup>2</sup> Where the right of trial by jury is secured by the fundamental law, it invariably means a jury of twelve men, unless expressly otherwise indicated.<sup>3</sup> It is also the constitutional right of the accused to be tried by an impartial jury. But an act allowing the court to admit a juror as competent although he has formed and expressed an opinion of the guilt or innocence of the accused, if the court is satisfied that he will render an impartial verdict, is no violation of this right.<sup>4</sup> Further, the trial

A substantial statement of the offence, in an indictment for a misdemeanor, or certainty to a common intent, is all that is required. Gallagher v. State, 26 Wis. 423.

If an indictment is lost after a defendant has pleaded thereto, it may be supplied by substitution. The statute authorizing this practice is not unconstitutional. Schultz v. State, 15 Tex. App. 258.

1. Murphy v. People, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 815.

The power given to courts-martial to punish by fine is not within the provisions of the Federal constitution securing jury trial. Rawson v. Brown, 6 Shep. (Me.) 216.

Upon the general subject of trial by jury in criminal cases, see Cooley's Const. Lim. 309 et seq.; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1779-1782. See an article on "The Right of Trial by Jury," in 5 Criminal Law Mag. 771. See also Bishop on Criminal Procedure.

2. State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39.

The phrase "trial by jury," as used in the New York constitution, refers as well to all other incidents of the trial as to the number of men necessary to constitute the jury. The trial must be upon indictment or presentment of a grand jury, and in a court of record with common-law jurisdiction. People v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 652.

3. Work v. State, 2 Ohio St. 296; Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128; Brown v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 561; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351; People v. Kennedy, 1 Park. (N. Y.) 312; May v. Railroad, 3 Wis. 219; State v. Cox, 3 Engl. (Ark.) 436; People v. O'Neil, 48 Cal. 257. See State v. Starling, 15 Rich. (S. Car.) 120.

A statute which provides for the drawing of the names of seventeen persons to serve as grand jurors, and that not more than seventeen nor less than fifteen persons shall be sworn on any grand jury, is constitutional. Brucker v. State, 16 Wis. 333.

4. Cooper v. State, 16 Ohio St. 328; McHugh v. State, 42 Ohio St. 154; Palmer v. State, 42 Ohio St. 596. See Eason v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 466.

A statute prohibiting exceptions to the rulings of inferior courts, in refusing to set aside an indictment for a defect in the formation of the grand jury, is unconstitutional. The legislature may prescribe the time and manner of determining objections to the qualifications of jurors, but it cannot take away the right of objecting. Palmore v. State, 29 Ark. 248.

A statute providing that no person shall sit as a juror in a capital case who has opinions which would preclude him from returning a verdict of guilty or fixing the punishment at death is constitutional. Greenley v. State, 60 Ind. 141.

The right to an impartial jury is one that belongs to the government as well as the accused. Jewell v. Commonwealth, 22 Pa. St. 94.

The defendant was tried by a jury of Mexicans, who did not understand English, and the proceedings were all interpreted to them. Held, no violation of the constitutional right of trial by jury. Territory v. Romine, 2 New Mex. 114.

Challenges to Jurors.—States which limit and restrict the number of peremptory challenges to be allowed to the defendant are not unconstitutional. Dowling v. State, 5 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 664.

Neither are statutes which allow peremptory challenges to the prosecution. Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147; Jones v. State, 1 Ga. 610; Hudgins v. State, 2 Ga. 173; Warren v. Commonwealth, 37 Pa.

must be speedy. By a speedy trial is intended a trial conducted according to fixed rules, regulations, and proceedings of law, free from vexatious, capricious, and oppressive delays manufactured by the ministers of justice.<sup>1</sup> Whether or not it is expressly provided in the constitution that in criminal actions the accused shall have the right to be tried by a jury of the vicinage, still it is incident to the right to a jury trial when such right is secured in other terms.<sup>2</sup> The constitutional guaranty of jury trial in criminal

St. 45; Hartzell v. Commonwealth, 40 Pa. St. 462.

1. Stewart v. State, 8 Engl. (Ark.) 720; Nixon v. State, 10 Miss. 497; United States v. Fox, 3 Mont. 512.

The circuit court was adjourned because of bad weather, backwardness in gathering the crops, and a belief that the public interests would be best served by such adjournment. A prisoner confined under an indictment for murder demanded a trial, and upon refusal and adjournment, applied upon habeas corpus to the chancery court to be set at liberty. The chancellor refused to discharge him, but admitted him to bail, although ordinarily he would not have been entitled to bail. It was held that, although the adjournment without affording the prisoner an opportunity for trial was objectionable, yet that his rights had been preserved by the action of the chancellor. Ex parte Caples, 58 Miss. 358.

Continuances.—A statute giving trial judges discretionary power to refuse continuances in criminal cases neither deprives the citizen of compulsory process for his witnesses nor of the right of trial by jury. Lillard v. State, 17 Tex. App. 114. See Venters v. State, 20 Cent. Law Jour. 493; 1 Tex. Ct. Repr. 90.

Public excitement alone is not a sufficient ground for the continuance of a criminal case. Brinkley v. State 54 Ga. 371; Thomas v. State, 27 Ga. 287. See John v. State, 1 Head (Tenn.). 49.

2. Swart v. Kimball, 44 Mich. 443.

Place of Trial.—An offence against the United States, committed within the territorial jurisdiction thereof, must be tried in the State and district where committed. United States v. Bird, 1 Sprague (U. S. Dist.), 299.

The constitutional requirement that "the district shall have been previously ascertained by law" means that it shall be so ascertained before the commission of the offence for which a party is held for trial in such district. United States v. Maxon, 5 Blatch. (U. S. Cir.) 360.

A provision in a State constitution, securing to criminals a public trial within the county or district where the offence was committed, in its enforcement, covers cases arising under State laws as well as matter within the jurisdiction of Federal courts. Gut v. State (U. S.) 35.

A statute providing that offences committed within one hundred rods of a dividing line between two counties may be prosecuted in either county, does not infringe the constitutional provision for trial in the county where the offence was committed. State v. Robinson, 447; State v. Stewart 60 Wis. 50 Am. Rep. 386. Compare Brinkley v. People, 110 Ill. 29; State v. West Va. 782; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 782.

An act authorizing the trial of a person guilty of larceny in the State, of any vessel in the course of a voyage to be had in any county through which such vessel shall pass, or at which the voyage shall terminate, is constitutional. Steerman v. State, 10 Mo. 50; v. Hulse, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 309; Cameron, 2 Chand. (Wis.) 172.

Where an offence against the United States is committed on the high seas, the offender must be tried in the district where he was first apprehended and brought into legal custody. United States v. Bird, 1 Sprague (U. S. Dist.) 299; United States v. Thorpe, 1 Sumn. (U. S. Cir.) 168.

Jury of the Vicinage.—The right to a jury of the vicinage imports that only the traverse jury trying a case shall be the grand jury indicting him, and that the vicinage or neighborhood shall be the same. People, 89 Ill. 90.

But this provision applies to a person charged with a crime, and not to a convicted felon, and does not oust a term of imprisonment in a penitentiary. Ruffin v. State, 21 G. 790.

Change of Venue.—When a person has a right to be tried in the county where the offence was committed is secured by the constitution, he cannot be deprived of that right except by his own consent in open court. When there is a change of venue the record must show that the prisoner applied for a change and the reasons assigned therefor.

includes the right to have the deliberations of the jury continued, when once they have begun the trial and heard any evidence, until the occurrence of a sufficient legal reason for their discharge, and the chance of a verdict of acquittal at their hands during all that time; and hence the unauthorized discharge of the jury is equivalent to an acquittal.<sup>1</sup> And if the legislature cannot take away the right of trial by jury, neither can it impose such impediments as unreasonably to impair it, in criminal prosecutions.<sup>2</sup> A statute which authorizes a criminal trial without jury in the first instance, but gives the defendant an unqualified and unfettered right of appeal and a trial by jury in the appellate court, is not unconstitutional.<sup>3</sup>

In most of the States it is held that the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury was not intended to apply to the prosecution of minor and trivial offences, such as breaches of police regulations, disorderly conduct, vagrancy, disturbing religious meetings, and ordinary breaches of the peace.<sup>4</sup> Nor does it apply to offences created by statute since the adoption of the constitution, except in the specified cases.<sup>5</sup> It seems that, in criminal cases, a trial by jury cannot be waived by the defendant; the court has no jurisdiction unless aided by a jury.<sup>6</sup>

State v. Denton, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 539; Wheeler v. State, 24 Wis. 52; Ex parte Rivers, 40 Ala. 712. Compare People v. Long Island R. Co., 4 Park. (N. Y.), 150; People v. Baker, 3 Park. (N. Y.), 181; People v. Webb, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 179; State v. Miller, 15 Minn. 344. See Smith v. Judge, 17 Cal. 547; Wheeler v. State, 42 Ga. 307.

It is the right of the prosecution, as well as of the defendant, to have the trial take place in the county where the crime was committed, and when the accused applies to change the venue, he must make a clear case that by reason of popular passion or prejudice he cannot have a fair and impartial trial in that county. People v. Sammis, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 560.

A statute which requires a defendant, after change of venue, to be tried on a certified copy of the indictment, does not impair any of his constitutional rights. Bramlett v. State, 31 Ala. 376.

1. McCauley v. State, 26 Ala. 135; Grant v. People, 4 Park. (N. Y.) 527; Geiger v. State, 25 Ga. 667. Compare Price v. State, 36 Miss. 531.

2. Saco v. Wentworth, 37 Me. 165; Greene v. Briggs, 1 Curt. (U. S. Cir.) 311. See State v. Wright, 13 Mo. 243.

3. Jones v. Robbins, 8 Gray (Mass.), 329; Emporia v. Volmer, 12 Kans. 622.

4. State v. Conlin, 1 Williams (Vt.), 318; In re Dougherty, 1 Williams (Vt.), 325; People v. Webb, 16 Hun (N. Y.), 43; Duffy v. People, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 355;

People v. Justices, 74 N. Y. 406; Byers v. Commonwealth, 42 Pa. St. 89; In re Glenn, 54 Md. 572; Commissioners v. Harris, 7 Jones (N. Car.), 281; State v. Gutierrez, 15 La. Ann. 190; State v. Noble, 20 La. Ann. 325; Monroe v. Meuer, 35 La. Ann. 1192; Trigally v. Memphis, 6 Cold. (Tenn.), 382; Inwood v. State, 42 Ohio St. 186; State v. McCarty, 2 Blackf. (Ind.), 5; State v. Benicke, 9 Iowa, 203; Bryan v. State, 4 Iowa, 349; Ex parte Ah Peen, 51 Cal. 280.

An act providing that keepers of houses of ill fame may be punished summarily as disorderly persons is unconstitutional and void; the offence being indictable at common law, the accused has the right of trial by jury. Warren v. People, 3 Park. (N. Y.) 544.

A jury in a police magistrate's court does not fall under the constitutional provision for trial by jury, and any number of jurors that the legislature may deem proper to fix may compose the jury. State v. Gutierrez, 15 La. Ann. 190.

For a contempt of court the party may be committed to prison without a jury trial. Ex parte Grace, 12 Iowa, 208.

5. Tims v. State, 26 Ala. 165.

6. State v. Carman, 17 Repr. (Iowa) 711; State v. Stewart, 17 Repr. (N. Car.) 725; Brimmingsstool v. People, 1 Mich. N. P. 260; State v. Lockwood, 43 Wis. 403; State v. Davis, 66 Mo. 684; Williams v. State, 12 Ohio St. 403; Tyra v. Commonwealth, 2 Met. (Ky.) 1; State v.

Under a constitutional guaranty that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have a right to compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, he cannot claim from the State payment of the fees of the witnesses summoned in the defence.<sup>1</sup> His constitutional right "to be heard in person and by counsel" means only a hearing upon the facts duly presented in evidence.<sup>2</sup>

(d) Right to be Present at Trial.—In cases of felony, where the prisoner's life or liberty is in peril, he has the right to be present, and must be present, during the whole of the trial, and until the final judgment. If he is absent, there is a want of jurisdiction over the person, and the court cannot proceed with the trial, or receive the verdict, or pronounce judgment.<sup>3</sup> And the record must affirmatively show that the accused was personally present. But

Evidence of Deceased Witness.—The admission of testimony in a criminal trial before a jury to prove what a deceased witness testified at the preliminary examination of the accused before a magistrate, is constitutional. Commonwealth v. Richards, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 434; State v. Horman, 27 Mo. 120. See also State v. Frederic, 69 Me. 400; State v. Polson, 29 Iowa, 133.

Dying Declarations.—The admission of dying declarations as evidence in a murder trial is not repugnant to the constitutional provision giving the accused the right to be confronted with the witnesses against him. Green v. State, 66 Ala. 40; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 744; Robbins v. State, 8 Ohio St. 131; Walston v. Commonwealth, 16 B. Mon (Ky.) 15.

Documentary Evidence.—This provision of the constitution does not apply to the proof of facts in their nature documentary and which can only be proved by the original or by a copy officially authenticated in some way. People v. Jones, 24 Mich. 215. See Johns v. State, 55 Md. 350.

1. State v. Waters, 39 Me. 54.

2. Wilson v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 332.

A witness was fully cross-examined by the prisoner's counsel, and then permission was refused for the prisoner to examine him himself. Held, that this was no violation of the constitutional right of defence by himself, his counsel, or both. Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 18.

3. Cooley Const. Lim. 319; Andrews v. State, 2 Sneed (Tenn.), 550; Jacobs v. Cone, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 335; Witt v. State, 5 Cold (Tenn.) 11; State v. Alman, 64 N. Car. 364; Gladde v. State, 12 Fla. 577; Maurer v. People, 43 N. Y. 1.

Where a prisoner who is convicted of a felony is not present in court when the jury return their verdict, such verdict and the judgment thereon are void. Stewart v. State, 7 Cold. (Tenn.) 338; State v. Bray, 67 N. Car. 283; State v. Ford, 30 La. Ann. 311; State v. Johnson, 35 La. Ann. 208.

The absence of the defendant from the court-room during the argument of counsel to the jury, the trial being for an offence not capital, is not ground for a new trial unless it clearly appears that he was prejudiced thereby. State v. Paylor, 89 N. Car. 539.

A motion for a new trial upon an indictment, after verdict and before sentence, may be made in the absence of the defendant. Territory v. Chenoweth, 19 Repr. (New Mex.) 347; 1 Bishop's Crim. Proc. § 276.

He need not be present at proceedings touching change of venue. State v. Elkins, 63 Mo. 159. Compare Ex parte Bryan, 44 Ala. 404.

Nor when the jury, in charge of an officer, are sent to visit the scene of the alleged crime. State v. Adams, 20 Kans. 311.

Prisoner Sick.—Where a defendant is taken sick during his trial on a charge of felony, and is too unwell to be present in court at every stage of the trial, the cause should either be temporarily continued to await his convalescence, or a juror withdrawn and the case continued. Brown v. State, 38 Tex. 482.

Prisoner Unruly.—Where a prisoner, on trial for perjury, was so disorderly in his conduct that it became necessary to remove him from the court-room during a portion of the trial, after the jury had been impanelled, held, on a motion in arrest of judgment and for a new trial, that no error was committed. United States v. Davis, 6 Blatchf. (U. S. Cir.) 464.

4. State v. Jones, 61 Mo. 232; State v. Johnson, 35 La. Ann. 208.

a charge of a mere misdemeanor or breach of a municipal ordinance may be tried in the absence of the accused person if he has been legally arrested.<sup>1</sup>

(e) Cruel and Unusual Punishments.—The provision of the Federal constitution which forbids the imposition of cruel and unusual punishments does not apply to the States, but to national legislation.<sup>2</sup> While no person can be twice lawfully punished for the same offence, yet he may be twice lawfully punished for the same act, when it is of such a character as to constitute two distinct offences.<sup>3</sup>

(f) Ex Post Facto Laws.—By the provisions of the Federal constitution the passage of any ex post facto law is expressly prohibited both to the Federal Congress and to the legislatures of the several States.<sup>4</sup> The term is a technical one, and relates only to legislative and criminal proceedings which impose punishments or forfeitures, and not to civil proceedings which affect private rights retrospectively.<sup>5</sup> Acts regulating criminal procedure do not generally

1. Bloomington v. Heiland, 67 Ill. 278. Compare Slacovitch v. State, 46 Ala. 227.

2. Pervear v. Commonwealth, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 475; Commonwealth v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.), 482.

Whipping is not a "cruel or unusual punishment." Foot v. State, 59 Md. 264; Garcia v. Territory, 1 New Mex. 415. On the general topic, see Cooley Const. Lim. 328-330; Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; Dane v. People, 5 Park (N. Y.) 364; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1903-4.

A. obtained three dollars by false pretences, was convicted, and sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. The statute under which the sentence was imposed named two years as the minimum term of imprisonment and omitted to name any maximum term. It was held that the argument that A. might have been sentenced to imprisonment for life, and that such a punishment would have been cruel and unusual, within the constitutional inhibition, afforded no ground for interference with the sentence imposed. State v. Williams, 77 Mo. 310.

Where a general act prescribed a certain punishment for a particular crime, and a special act authorized the infliction by the recorder of a certain city of a greater punishment for the same crime, held that this was not a cruel and unusual punishment. In re Bayard, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 546.

3. State v. Inness, 53 Me. 536.

The damages allowed in a civil case by way of punishment have no necessary relation to the penalty incurred for the wrong done to the public, but are called punitive damages by way of distinction from pecuniary damages, and are to characterize them as a punishment for the wrong done to the individual. Hence such damages can in no just sense be said to be in conflict with the constitutional or common law inhibition against inflicting two punishments for the same offence, although the defendant is liable to a criminal prosecution for the act on account of which the damages are given. Hendrick v. Kingsbury, 21 Iowa, 379; Chiles v. Metc. (Ky.) 146.

4. Const. U. S. art. I, §§ 9, 10; son's Amer. Stat. Law, § 142.

On the general subject of ex post facto laws, see Black on Constitution Inhibitions, §§ 222-247; Cooley's Const. Lim. 264-273; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1344-6; also an article in 5 Crim. Mag. 325.

5. Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88; Baltimore & Susquehanna R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. (U. S.) 395; Case v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. (U. S.) 133; Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. 172; Locke v. Dane, 9 Mass. 360; Port v. Hubbell, 5 Conn. 240; Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 47; Ex parte School Distr., 57 Pa. St. 433; Ex parte Receivers, 3 N. J. Eq. 114; Ex parte Nelson, 9 Gill (Md.), 299; Tufts v. Harris, 13 Ga. 1; Commonwealth v. Bailey, 81 Ky. 395.

An act which prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors which may have been manufactured previous to its passage is not an ex post facto law. State v. Keeran, 5 R. I. 185; State v. Keeran, 5 R. I. 185.

Neither is a statute authorizing take of this character unless they alter the situation of the accused to his disadvantage.<sup>1</sup> The prohibition extends to the aggravation of punishments; but the legislature may lawfully substitute a different punishment for past offences, which may be less or equal to the penalty prescribed when the offence was committed, but must not be greater.<sup>2</sup> Statutes establishing a test-oath of past loyalty, for crimes happening prior to its passage. Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349. Compare Dickinson v. Dickinson, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 327. See 1 Bishop Mar. & Div. § 698.

Nor an act altering the compensation of public officers. Commonwealth v. Bailey, 81 Ky 395.

Nor a registry act, although retrospective. Tucker v. Harris, 13 Ga. 1.

Definition.—In the leading case it is said: "I will state what laws I consider ex post facto laws within the words and the intent of the prohibition. (1) Every law that makes an action done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal, and punishes such action. (2) Every law that aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed. (3) Every law that changes the punishment, and inflicts a greater punishment than the law annexed to the crime when committed. (4) Every law that alters the legal rules of evidence, and receives less or different testimony than the law required at the time of the commission of the offence, in order to convict the offender. All these and similar laws are manifestly unjust and oppressive. . . . But I do not consider any law ex post facto, within the prohibition, that mollifies the rigor of the criminal law; but only those that create or aggravate the crime, or increase the punishment, or change the rules of evidence for the purpose of conviction." Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 390.

A statute cannot be ex post facto if its operation is prospective only. Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221.

1. A statute creating a new court, or giving jurisdiction to an existing court, to try past offences, is not an ex post facto law. Commonwealth v. Phillips, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 28.

Nor is an act reviving the jurisdiction of a superior court, so as to enable it to try persons for offences committed during a period when an inferior court had exclusive jurisdiction to try them. State v. Sullivan, 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 281.

Nor an act changing the venue in a criminal trial, though passed after the commission of the offence or the finding of the indictment. Gut v. Minnesota, 9

Wall. (U. S.) 35. See also Potter v. State, 42 Ark. 29.

Nor an act allowing an amendment to a pending indictment. State v. Manning, 14 Tex. 402. See State v. Johnson, 81 Mo. 60, Martin v. State, 22 Tex. 214. See Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 232.

Or the correction of an erroneous sentence. Ex parte Bethurum, 66 Mo. 545.

A statute allowing to the State a reasonable number of peremptory challenges to petit jurors in criminal actions, although it expressly extends to the trial of cases where the offence was committed, or the indictment found, prior to its passage, is not an ex post facto law. State v. Ryan, 13 Minn. 370, Walston v. Commonwealth, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 15; State v. Wilson, 48 N. H. 398, Commonwealth v. Dorsey, 103 Mass. 412.

But an act providing that the rule of law prohibiting a conviction in a criminal case on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice should not apply to misdemeanors, is inoperative in a trial for a misdemeanor committed before its passage. Hart v. State, 40 Ala. 32. See Robinson v. State, 84 Ind. 452.

A law repealing the Statute of Limitations, or extending the time previously limited for the prosecution of criminal offences, is unconstitutional as applied to a case where the period prescribed by the law as it stood when the offence was committed has already completely expired, because ex post facto. Moore v. State, 13 Vroom (N. J.), 203; u. c., 39 Am. Rep. 558; State v. Sneed, 25 Tex. (Supp.) 66; State v. Keith, 63 N. Car. 140; Commonwealth v. Duffy, 96 Pa. St. 506. See Wharton on Crim. Law, § 444 a, note b.

2. State v. Kent, 65 N. Car. 311; Turner v. State, 40 Ala. 21; Caldwell v. State, 55 Ala. 133.

Mitigation of Punishment.—Any change in the law which reduces or mitigates the punishment for past offences cannot be regarded as ex post facto. State v. Arlin, 39 N. H. 179; Hair v. State, 16 Nebr. 601; Boston v. Cummins, 16 Ga. 102; Strong v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 193; Keen v. State, 3 Chand. (Wis.) 109; Woart v. Winnick, 3 N. H. 473; Clarke and making it a condition precedent to the right to hold public office, serve as a juror, practise as an attorney, or act as a professor, teacher, or clergyman, are unconstitutional and void, as partaking of the nature both of bills of attainder and ex post facto laws.<sup>1</sup>

11. Constitutional Limitations on the Taxing Power.—The power of taxation is an essential and inherent attribute of sovereignty, and belongs as matter of right to every independent political commu-

v. State, 23 Miss. 261; Maul v. State, 25 Tex. 166.

A statute which imposes anything else for the death penalty is a mitigation of the punishment. Commonwealth v. Gardner, 11 Gray (Mass.) 438; Commonwealth v. Wyman, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 237; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 240. Compare Shepherd v. People, 25 N. Y. 706.

The substitution of whipping for a long term of imprisonment is also regarded as a mitigation. State v. Williams, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 418. Compare Herber v. State, 7 Tex. 69. See Strong v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 193.

"It would be perfectly competent for the legislature, by a general law, to remit any separable portion of the prescribed punishment. For instance, if the punishment were fine and imprisonment, a law which should dispense with either the fine or the imprisonment might, I think, be lawfully applied to existing offences; and so, in my opinion, the term of imprisonment might be reduced, or the number of stripes diminished in cases punishable in that manner. Anything which, if applied to an individual sentence, would fairly fall within the idea of a remission of a part of the sentence, would not be liable to objection. And any change which should be referable to prison discipline, or penal administration, as its primary object, might also be made to take effect on past as well as future offences, as changes in the manner or kind of employment of convicts sentenced to hard labor, the system of supervision, the means of restraint, or the like. Changes of this sort might operate to increase or mitigate the severity of the punishment of the convict, but would not raise any question under the constitutional provision we are considering." Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95, 105. See Ratzky v. People, 29 N. Y. 124; Shepherd v. People, 25 N. Y. 406; Kuckler v. People, 5 Park. (N. Y.) 212.

Punishment of Second Offences.—A law is not objectionable as ex post facto which, in providing for the punishment of future offences, authorizes the offender's conduct in the past to be taken into account, and the punishment to be graduated accordingly. Thus, a statute providing that where a person has been once convicted of a penitentiary offence, he shall, on a repetition of the crime, receive a punishment in addition to the one prescribed by law for the last offence, is not ex post facto as applied to a case where the second offence was committed after the passage of the law. Ross's Case, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 165; Rand v. Commonwealth, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 738; Ex parte Gutierrez, 45 Cal. 430; People v. Butler, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 347; Cooley Const. Lim. 273.

Right to have Jury fix Penalty.—Where the law imposes upon the jury the duty of fixing the penalty, within certain limits, by their verdict, it confers upon the prisoner a valuable right, which cannot constitutionally be taken away by ex post facto legislation. Marion v. State, 16 Nebr. 349. See Garvey v. People, 6 Colo. 559; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 531; Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221.

1. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 277; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 333; Pierce v. Carskadon, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 234. For full discussion see Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 244.

A statute which denies the right of suffrage, as a consequence of conduct that precedes the statute, is not properly speaking, an ex post facto law. Washington v. State, 75 Ala. 582; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 479; Anderson v. Baker, 23 Md. 531; Blair v. Ridgely, 41 Mo. 63; State v. Woodson, 41 Mo. 227; State v. Neal, 42 Mo. 119; Randolph v. Good, 3 W. Va. 551. Compare Green v. Shumway, 39 N. Y. 418.

A statute prescribing certain qualifications for all those who propose to follow a particular avocation within the State, e. g., medicine, and prohibiting all who do not possess such qualifications from so doing, under a penalty, must make an exception in favor of those who, at the time of its passage, may be lawfully engaged in such business; otherwise it will be, as to them, ex post facto and void. Byrne v. Stewart, 3 Desau. (S. Car.) 466; Commonwealth v. Wasson, 29 Pitts. L. J. 434; Fox v. Territory, 5 West Coast Repr. 339.

nity.<sup>1</sup> But, from the composition of the American Union, the individual State cannot tax the property, agencies, or operations of the Federal government, nor so adjust its revenue system as to obstruct, embarrass, or nullify those operations or functions.<sup>2</sup> Real property owned by the United States, though situated within the territorial limits of a State, cannot be taxed by that State; and this disability remains effective until the United States has made

1. Cooley Const. Lim. 479; Fox's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 337, 352; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 428.

The Federal courts are without power to control or restrain the taxing power of a State exercised within constitutional limits. Bank of Commerce v. New York, 2 Black (U. S.), 620.

2. McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 428; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 35; Dobbins v. Commissioners, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 435; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 200; Cooley on Taxation, 83.

Without permission of the Federal government the States cannot tax the national banks. Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; Austin v. Boston, 14 Allen (Mass.), 359; State v. Newark, 39 N. J. L. 380; Nat'l Bank v. Mobile, 62 Ala. 284.

But it is within the constitutional power of Congress to waive the right of exempting public stocks from State taxation, and this has been done by the act of 1864, so far as stockholders in national banks can be considered as the owners of public stocks held by such banks. Utica v. Churchill, 33 N. Y. 161; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; Nat'l Bank v. Commonwealth, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353.

The State cannot tax the salaries or emoluments of national officers. Dobbins v. Commissioners, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 435. See Melcher v. Boston, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 73.

Nor the loans of the United States, raised for its own purposes. Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 449; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 200; People v. Commissioners, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 244; Bank v. Supervisors, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 26; German Bank v. Burlington, 54 Iowa, 609. See State v. Jackson, 33 N. J. L. 450; Commonwealth v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.), 298.

Nor revenue stamps or treasury notes. Palfrey v. Boston, 101 Mass. 329; Montgomery Co. v. Elston, 32 Ind. 27; Bank of New York v. Supervisors, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 26; Ogdan v. Walker, 59 Ind. 460; Horne v. Green, 52 Miss. 452.

Nor telegraphic messages sent by the government. Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460.

But the State may include the property of Federal agencies in its general taxation, when there is no act of Congress to the contrary, and when such taxation will not injuriously affect the operations of the national government. Thomson v. Pacific R. Co., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 579; Railroad Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 5.

Federal Taxation.—Conversely, Congress has no power to lay taxes upon the property, officers, agencies, or operations of the State governments, so as to defeat or embarrass their functions. Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.), 86; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418; Railroad Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 5; Freedman v. Siegel, 10 Blatch. (U. S. Cir.) 327; Warren v. Paul, 22 Ind. 276; State v. Gaston, 32 Ind. 1; Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 505; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Cold. (Tenn.) 325; Smith v. Short, 40 Ala. 385; Jones v. Keep, 19 Wis. 390; Sayles v. Davis, 22 Wis. 217; Moore v. Quirk, 105 Mass. 49; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 499.

Congress has no power to require a revenue stamp to be affixed to process of the State courts. Cooley Const. Lim. 483; Smith v. Short, 40 Ala. 385; Warren v. Paul, 22 Ind. 279; Jones v. Keep, 19 Wis. 390; Fifield v. Close, 15 Mich. 505; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Cold. (Tenn.) 325. Compare Hoyt v. Benner, 22 La. Ann. 353.

Nor to declare that a written instrument shall not be received in evidence in a State court unless stamped. Atkins v. Plympton, 44 Vt. 21; Griffin v. Ranney, 35 Conn. 239; Green v. Holway, 101 Mass. 250; Moore v. Moore, 47 N. Y. 467; Hale v. Wilkinson, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 75; Haight v. Grist, 64 N. Car. 739; McElvain v. Mudd, 44 Ala. 48; Davis v. Richardson, 45 Miss. 499; Holt v. Hart, 33 La. Ann. 673; Hunter v. Cobb, 6 Bush (Ky.), 239; Sporrer v. Eifer, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 633; Bumpas v. Taggart, 26 Ark. 398; Craig v. Dimmock, 47 Ill. 308; Clemens v. Conrad, 19 Mich. 170; Duffy v. Hobson, 40 Cal. 240.

Taxia

, title trained tate e e para comm xes d ig up ation.
onstit

3.) 232
31. Se lepr. 7
35; E larke v
; Stan
l. 1;
) 206;
lar Co.

inutes a erty of / have the su ssional bough
of it, ion, an is taxa
State."
98; P
nan v.
Co. v.
ordon.
h, 31 I
d. 73
lex. 36
e right it of i
all. (U
U. S. 2
impos isadva tes wh ned St straint ind as onferre ss." W
454; V
In re
: v. M

See C e also Cir.)
. 627;
liver v ss.), 26
S.) 41
(2d Ed

prohibition against legislation impairing the obligation of contracts is also a limitation upon the taxing power of the States.<sup>1</sup> Finally, it is always an implied limitation that taxation can only be laid for a public purpose.<sup>2</sup>

12. Laws Impairing the Obligation of Contracts.—The constitution of the United States prohibits the several States from passing any law impairing the obligation of contracts.<sup>3</sup> If a State adopts a new constitution, and any of its provisions are found to impair the validity of existing contracts, such provisions will be as much within the prohibition as would a simple act of the legislature.<sup>4</sup> But there is nothing in the constitution which forbids Congress to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts.<sup>5</sup> Nor does the prohibition apply to any laws which have a prospective operation only.<sup>6</sup>

(a) Contracts of the State with Corporations.—The charter of a private corporation is a contract, within the meaning of the constitution of the United States, between the State granting the charter and the corporation created by it, and any constitutional provision or act of the legislature that impairs it, whether by enlarging the power of the State over the body corporate, or by abridging its franchises, or otherwise altering it in a material point, is repugnant to the constitution and void.<sup>7</sup> But if the

1. Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432; Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672. See, infra, § 12 et seq.

2. Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 655. See, in general, Cooley on Taxation (2d Ed.) 103 et seq.

3. Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10. On the general subject of laws impairing the obligation of contracts, see Black on Constitutional Prohibitions, §§ 1-170; 2 Story on the Const. §§ 1374-1399; Cooley Const. Lim. 273-294; Wade on Retroactive Laws.

4. Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. (U. S.) 331; Railroad Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 511; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 610; Clay Co. v. Savings Society, 104 U. S. 579; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650, 972; New Orleans Water Works v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674; Fisk v. Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131; Lehigh Valley R. v. McFarlan, 31 N. J. Eq. 706; Grigsby v. Peak, 57 Tex. 142; Delmas v. Insurance Co., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 661.

And the fact that the new constitution was sanctioned by Congress does not affect the question. Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 610.

Nor is it permitted to impair the obligation of contracts by an amendment to the State constitution. State v. Young, 29 Minn. 474.

An ordinance passed by a municipal corporation is void if it impairs the obligation of existing contracts. Hestonville R. v. Philadelphia, 89 Pa. St. 210.

But an act in force before the adoption of the Federal constitution cannot be regarded as within the prohibition. Owings v. Speed, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 420. See League v. De Young, 11 How. (U. S.) 185; Herman v. Phalen, 14 How. (U. S.) 79.

5. Evans v. Eaton, 1 Pet. C. C. 322, 327. See Hopkins v. Jones, 22 Ind. 310.

6. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; People's Savings Bank v. Tripp, 13 R. I. 621; Churchman v. Martin, 54 Ind. 380. See Wartman v. Philadelphia, 33 Pa. St. 202.

7. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.), 133; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 518; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 514; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. (U. S.) 301; Trustees v. Indiana, 14 How. (U. S.) 268; Piqua Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. (U. S.) 369; Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 116; Hawthorne v. Calf, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 10; The Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 51; Miller v. State, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 478; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 206; Greenwood v. Freight Co., 105 U. S. 13; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louis-

State has reserved the right to repeal, alter, or amend the charter of the corporation, the exercise of this power does not impair the iana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650; New Orleans Water Works v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674; Lincoln Bank v. Richardson, 1 Me. 79; Yarmouth v. North Yarmouth, 34 Me. 411; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 189, 205; Backus v. Lebanon, 11 N. H. 19; Grammar School v. Burt, 11 Vt. 632; Wales v. Stetson, 2 Mass. 146; King v. Bank, 15 Mass. 447; Nichols v. Bertram, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 342; Central Bridge v. Lowell, 15 Gray (Mass.), 106; Brighton v. Wilkinson, 2 Allen (Mass.), 27; Washington Bridge Co. v. State, 18 Conn. 53; Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583; People v. Manhattan Co., 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 351; Brown v. Hummel, 6 Pa. St. 86; Commonwealth v. Cullen, 13 Pa. St. 133; Iron City Bank v. Pittsburgh, 37 Pa. St. 340; Chincelamouche Lumber Co. v. Commonwealth, 100 Pa. St. 438; Zabriskie v. Railroad, 18 N. J. Eq. 178; Lehigh Valley R. v. McFarlan, 31 N. J. Eq. 706; Bailey v. Railroad, 4 Harr. (Del.) 389; Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Norris v. Trustees, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 7; Regents v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 365; Bank of the Dominion v. McVeigh, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 457; Mills v. Williams, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) 558; Bank of State v. Bank of Cape Fear, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 75; Attorney General v. Bank of Charlotte, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 287; State v. Heywood, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 389; Young v. Harrison, 6 Ga. 130; State v. Tombeckbee Bank, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 30; Commercial Bank v. State, 6 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 569; New Orleans, etc., R. v. Harris, 27 Miss. 517; Mayaville Turnpike Co. v. How, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 426; Louisville v. University, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 642; Edwards v. Jagers, 19 Ind. 407; Bruce v. Schuyler, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 221; Bruffett v. Railroad, 25 Ill. 353; Miners' Bank v. United States, 1 Greene (Iowa), 553; Gorman v. Railroad, 26 Mo. 441; Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 225; People v. Jackson Plank Road, 9 Mich. 285; Flint Plank Road Co. v. Woodhull, 25 Mich. 99; McRoberts v. Washburne, 10 Minn. 23. Compare Mechanics' Bank v. Debolt, 1 Ohio St. 591; Toledo Bank v. Bond, 1 Ohio St. 622. But see Morgan v. Auditor, 5 Ohio St. 444; Ross Bank v. Lewis, 5 Ohio St. 447.

Three Contracts Involved.—Besides the contract of the State with the corporation, there is to be considered the contract subsisting between the shareholders themselves, as also any contract existing between the corporation and any third party. None of these may be impaired by the legislature. See 2 Morawetz on Corp. § 1047; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 15.

Corporate Powers.—A corporation is protected by the constitution in the use and enjoyment of all such rights and powers as are specifically granted by its charter, and any legislation which takes away those rights or curtails those powers is invalid. Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. (U. S.) 301; Commonwealth v. Erie Trans. Co., 107 Pa. St. 112; Pennsylvania R. v. B. & O. R., 60 Md. 263.

The same is true of the rights and powers incidental to the company's business, and proper and necessary to carry into effect the powers granted by the charter. Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. (U. S.) 301; Bank of the Republic v. Hamilton, 21 Ill. 53; Payne v. Baldwin, 3 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 661. See The Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 51.

A statute arbitrarily dissolving the corporation would be illegal for this reason. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 18; 2 Morawetz on Corp. § 1048. See Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 225.

Forfeiture of Charter.—An act making that a cause of forfeiture of charters which was not previously so, is invalid as applied to existing corporations. State v. Tombeckbee Bank, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 30; Aurora Turnpike Co. v. Holthouse, 7 Ind. 59; People v. Jackson, etc., Co., 9 Mich. 285.

But this does not prevent the legislature from altering the remedy for enforcing a forfeiture against a corporation, for any cause of forfeiture existing at the time of granting the charter. Aurora Turnpike Co. v. Holthouse, 7 Ind. 59. And see Mobile & Ohio R. v. State, 29 Ala. 573.

Corporate Elections.—When the charter of a corporation prescribes the method of conducting elections of officers and directors, and regulates the manner in which the stockholder may use his votes, or when the same is established by a general law in force at the organization of the company, the rule cannot be changed by an act of the legislature without the consent of the corporation. Hays v. Commonwealth, 82 Pa. St. 518; Sheriff v. Loundes, 16 Md. 357; State v. Greer, 78 Mo. 188.

Grant when Revocable.—A grant of a obligation of the contract.<sup>1</sup> And the legislature may authorize mere license or gratuity to an incorporated company, which imposes no new duty or additional burden upon it, and is without consideration, is revocable at the will of the legislature. Philadelphia Passenger Co.'s Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 123. See Derby Turnpike Co. v. Parks, 10 Conn. 522; Gregory v. Shelby College, 2 Met. (Ky.) 589; State v. Morris, 77 N. Car. 512.

So long as the contract remains executory, it may be revoked by the legislature, if not founded on an executed consideration. Trustees v. Rider, 13 Conn. 87; Chincelamouche Lumber Co. v. Commonwealth, 100 Pa. St. 438; Slack v. Railroad, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1.

Corporations Subject to General Laws.—Corporations, like natural persons, are subject to the operation of the general laws of the land. And their constitutional immunity from legislative interference cannot be carried so far as to exempt them from the proper and reasonable control of the State in cases where their privileges have been perverted or abused, or the rights of third persons are in danger of being compromised through their actions. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 23; Chicago Life Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574; Bank of the Republic v. Hamilton, 21 Ill. 53; Rodemacher v. Railroad, 41 Iowa, 301; 2 Morawetz on Corp. § 1061.

Ample power resides in the legislature to regulate and control a corporation in the use of its franchises and powers whenever their exercise trenches upon the public health, morals, or safety. New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650, 672; Gorman v. Railroad, 26 Mo. 450.

The legislature has power to reasonably limit and regulate the tariff of tolls and charges to be exacted by public carriers for hire for transportation within the State. Stone v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 116 U. S. 307; Stone v. Illinois Cent. R., 116 U. S. 347; Beekman v. Railroad, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 45, 75.

But not to render it illegal for the corporation to exact any toll, or to lay any charge upon a designated class of persons or property. Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 264; Attorney-General v. Turnpike Co., 55 Pa. St. 466; Powell v. Sammons, 31 Ala. 552.

Nor to reduce the tolls below a reasonable limit. Stone v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 116 U. S. 307.

The legislature has power to require all existing railroad corporations to fence their tracks and to maintain cattle-guards, under penalty of damages for loss occasioned by neglect. Gorman v. Railroad, 26 Mo. 441; Thorpe v. Railroad, 27 Vt. 140; Norris v. Railroad, 39 Me. 273; Madison, etc., R. v. White-neck, 8 Ind. 217; Kansas Pacific R. v. Mower, 16 Kans. 573; Penna. R. v. Riblet, 66 Pa. St. 164; New Albany, etc., R. v. Tilton, 12 Ind. 3; Cooley Const. Lim. 579.

And to require locomotives to whistle or ring. Galena, etc., R. v. Appleby, 28 Ill. 283.

And to regulate crossings. Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Southwest R., 77 Pa. St. 173.

Personal Liability of Stockholders.—The legislature may constitutionally pass a law imposing a personal liability on stockholders of existing corporations for debts contracted by the company after the law takes effect. Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; Shufeldt v. Carver, 8 Ill. App. 545; Fogg v. Sidwell, 8 Ill. App. 551; Child v. Coffin, 17 Mass. 64; Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 200; Stanley v. Stanley, 26 Me. 196; Hathorn v. Calef, 53 Me. 471.

Or taking away this liability where it already exists. Coffin v. Rich 45 Me. 507.

Remedies against Corporations.—In furtherance of the due administration of justice, the legislature has power to enact laws changing, modifying, repealing, or adding to the remedies against existing corporations for the enforcement of rights against them or the redress of wrongs attributable to them. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 28. See Gowen v. Railroad, 44 Me. 140; Reapers' Bank v. Willard, 24 Ill. 433; Portland, etc., R. v. Grand Trunk R., 46 Me. 69; Ex parte Northeast R., 37 Ala. 679; Sanders v. Ins. Co., 44 N. H. 238; Louisville Co. v. Ballard, 2 Met. (Ky.) 165; Union Canal Co. v. Gilfillan, 93 Pa. St. 95; Grannahan v. Railroad, 30 Mo. 546; Branin v. Railroad, 31 Vt. 214; Peters v. Railroad, 23 Mo. 107; Southwestern R. v. Paulk, 24 Ga. 356.

A statute which continues the life of a business corporation for a limited period after the expiration of its charter, for the purpose of winding up its affairs, is valid and constitutional. Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 245; 2 Morawetz on Corp. § 1076.

It is no infringement of the constitutional rights of a corporation to levy a tax on its capital stock or other property. Portland Bank v. Apthorp, 12 Mass. 252; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507.

1. Perrin v. Oliver, 1 Minn. 302; As- corporation to alter its original enterprise or exercise changes or powers, and such a change in its charter, threatening its most essential features, if accepted by the corporation, impair no contract.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> R. v. Elliott, 58 N. H. 451; Griffin v. Co., 3 Bush (Ky.), 592; Miners' v. United States, 1 Morris (Iowa), Commonwealth v. Fayette Co. R., 1 St. 452.

As power may be reserved in the constitution. Delaware R. v. 2, 5 Harr. (Del.) 454.

If several charters are granted in it, it is enough if the power of reserve is reserved in any part of the same provided the language of the clause is sufficiently comprehensive to include the whole act. Ferguson v. Bank, 31 (Tenn.), 609.

the power may be reserved by a general law applicable to all corporations. Miller v. State, 15 Wall. (U. S.) State v. Comm'r of Railroad Tax, 37 N. J. L. 228; State v. Person, 1 J. L. 134.

The power of the legislature to alter a charter, when the power to do so is expressly reserved to the State, may be exercised in all cases, to any extent, to carry out the original purposes of the corporation, and to secure the due administration of justice in respect to the claims of the creditors of the corporation and the proper disposition of its assets. See Hyatt v. McMahon, 25 (N. Y.) 457; Worcester v. Railroad, 109 Mass. 103; Fitchburg R. v. Junction R., 4 Allen (Mass.), 198; Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 1 S. 347; In re Oliver Lee & Co.'s, 21 N. Y. 9; 2 Morawetz on Corp. 11.

If the reservation of this right does not authorize the legislature to force the corporation into new enterprises not within the original objects of its incorporation. Zabriskie v. Railroad, 18 N. 178; Ames v. Railroad, 21 Minn. Miller v. Railroad, 21 Barb. (N. Y.)

Where two irrepealable charters are consolidated, a new company is thereby created, which becomes subject to any law of amendment existing in the statute at the date of the consolidation. Atlantic & Gulf R. v. Georgia, 1 S. 359; Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S.

Where the right to repeal or amend a charter depends upon some contingency, the act or omission of the company, it is the right to judge whether that contingency has occurred belongs to the legislature, not to the courts. Erie R. v. Casey, 26 Pa. St. 287, 302; Bank v. United States, 1 G. (Iowa), 553; Lothrop v. Stedman, Conn. 583; McLaren v. Pennington, Paige (N. Y.), 102; Crease v. Babcock, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 334, 344. Flint Plank Road Co. v. Woodhull, Mich. 99; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill (Md.) 122; Regents v. Williams, 9 & J. (Md.) 365.

1. Pennsylvania College Cases, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 190; Ehrenzeller v. U. Canal Co., 1 Rawle (Pa.), 181; Attorney General v. Clergy Society, 10 Rich. (Car.) 604; Zabriskie v. Railroad, 1 J. Eq. 178; 2 Morawetz on Corp. § 11.

And the assent of the corporation to the proposed alteration of its charter may be inferred from such acts or omissions as would raise a similar presumption in the case of natural persons. United States v. Dandridge, 12 W. (U. S.) 64; Bangor, etc., R. v. State, 47 Me. 34; Commonwealth v. Cullen, Pa. St. 133; Vermont & Canada R. v. Vermont Cent. R., 34 Vt. 2; Palfray v. Paulding, 7 La. Ann. 363; State v.oley, 25 Minn. 387; Covington v. Road, 10 Bush (Ky.), 69.

Power of Majority of Corporation to Accept Amendment.—If no power to alter or amend the charter is reserved to the legislature, and if the amendment proposed is of such a nature as to effect a radical and fundamental change in the structure, functions, or field of operation of the corporation, then the assent of the amendment by a majority of the stockholders will have the effect to bind only those assenting thereto, and the dissenting minority will be discharged from their contract of subscription. Clearwater v. Meredith, 1 V. (U. S.) 25, 40; Railway Co. v. Allen, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 233; Printing House Trustees, 104 U. S. 711; Mowre v. Railroad, 4 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 86; As v. Burbank, 2 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) Old Town R. v. Veazie, 39 Me. Union Locks v. Towne, 1 N. H. Stevens v. Railroad, 29 Vt. 546; Midsex Turnpike Co. v. Locke, 8 Mass. Troy, etc., R. v. Kerr, 17 Barb. (N. 581; Buffalo R. v. Potter, 18 Barb. Y.) 21; Hartford, etc., R. v. Crossw

The prohibitory clause of the Federal constitution applies only to private rights and private contracts; and the charters of such bodies as are essentially public in their nature and purposes are not contracts, nor protected from legislative interference.<sup>1</sup>

Hill (N. Y.), 383; Indiana Turnpike Co. v. Phillippe, 2 Pen. & W. (Pa.) 184; Brown v. Fairmount Min. Co., 10 Phila. (Pa.) 32; Lanman v. Railroad, 30 Pa. St. 43; Turnpike Co. v. Arndt, 31 Pa. St. 317; Kean v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 407; Black v. Delaware Canal Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 455, 466; Charlotte Bank v. Charlotte, 85 N. Car. 433; Thompson v. Guion, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 113; Winter v. Railroad, 11 Ga. 438; Waring v. Mobile, 24 Ala. 701; New Orleans, etc., R. v. Harris, 27 Miss. 517; Hester v. Railroad, 32 Miss. 380; State v. Accommodation Bank, 26 La. Ann. 288; Fry v. Railroad, 2 Met. (Ky.) 314; Witter v. Railroad, 20 Ark. 488; Marietta, etc., R. v. Elliott, 10 Ohio St. 57; McCray v. Railroad, 9 Ind. 358; Booe v. Railroad, 10 Ind. 93; Shelbyville Turnpike Co. v. Barnes, 42 Ind. 498; Tuttle v. Michigan Air Line, 35 Mich. 247; Kenosha, etc., R. v. Marsh, 17 Wis. 13.

But those changes in the charter which are not calculated to exert any material influence upon the contract subsisting between the shareholders; which, without directly extending or abridging the powers of the corporation, yet invest it with additional privileges, immunities, and opportunities in the exercise of its corporate functions; which are useful to the public and beneficial to the company and in furtherance of the understanding of the subscribers as to the object to be effected; and which, in brief, are not radical and fundamental,—these may be accepted by a majority of the corporators with the effect to bind all the stockholders whether assenting or not. Bank v. Richardson, 1 Me. 79; Bucksport R. v. Buck, 68 Me. 81; Fall River Iron Works v. Railroad, 5 Allen (Mass.), 221; Agricultural R. v. Winchester, 13 Allen (Mass.), 29; Poughkeepsie Plank Road Co. v. Griffin, 24 N. Y. 150; Irvine v. Turnpike Co., 2 Pen. & W. (Pa.) 466; Clark v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 10 Watts (Pa.), 364; Everhart v. Railroad, 28 Pa. St. 339; Taggart v. Railroad, 24 Md. 564; Wilton v. Railroad, 33 Ga. 470; Waring v. Mobile, 24 Ala. 701; State v. Accommodation Bank, 26 La. Ann. 288; Fry v. Railroad, 2 Met. (Ky.) 322; Woodfork v. Bank, 3 Cold. (Tenn.) 488; Greeneville, etc., R. v. Johnson, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.)

332; Peoria v. Preston, 35 Iowa, 115; Joy v. Railroad, 11 Mich. 155.

An amendment to the charter of a railroad company, whereby the general course or direction of the roadway, or its terminus, is sought to be altered, is radical and fundamental, and releases dissenting subscribers. Middlesex Turnpike Co. v. Locke, 8 Mass. 267; Plank Road Co. v. Arndt, 31 Pa. St. 317; Thompson v. Guion, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 113; Stephens v. Railroad, 29 Vt. 545; Hester v. Railroad, 32 Miss. 380; Champion v. Railroad, 35 Miss. 692; Winter v. Railroad, 11 Ga. 45; Buffalo R. v. Potter, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 21; Marietta, etc., R. v. Elliott, 10 Ohio St. 57.

But not an extension of the time for completing the road. Agricultural R. v. Winchester, 13 Allen (Mass.), 33.

Consolidation with another company is a radical and fundamental change. Clearwater v. Meredith, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 25; Pearce v. Railroad, 21 How. (U. S.) 441; Mowrey v. Railroad, 4 Biss (U. S. Cir.) 83; Knoxville v. Railroad 22 Fed. Repr. 758; Tuttle v. Michigan Air Line, 35 Mich. 247; New Jersey, etc., R. v. Strait, 35 N. J. L. 322, McCray v. Railroad, 9 Ind. 358; Lanman v. Railroad, 30 Pa. St. 42.

But a dissenting stockholder may, by his conduct, estop himself to object to the amendment. Bedford R. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 29; Houston v. Jefferson College 63 Pa. St. 428; Danbury, etc., R. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 435; Hayworth v. Railroad, 13 Ind. 348; Gifford v. Railroad, 10 N. J. Eq. 176; Zabriskie v. Railroad, 18 N. J. Eq. 178.

1. Black on Const. Prohibitions, §§ 44-50; 3 Parsons on Contr. *529; Rader v. Road Distr., 36 N. J. L. 273; Berlin v. Gorham, 31 N. H. 266; Marietta v. Fearling, 4 Ohio, 427; Trustees v. Talman, 13 Ill. 27; Louisville v. University, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 642, Cooley Const. Lim. 192.

As regards municipalities, it has always been held that the law of the State creating them and conferring upon their officers a part of the sovereign authority as mandatories of the government is not a contract, and consequently the legislature may amend, modify, or repeal their charters at its pleasure. Brown v. Hummel, 6 Pa. St. 86; Moers v. Reading, 21

It is within the power of the legislature, when not forbidden by the organic law of the State, to grant to a corporation exclusive rights and privileges in the pursuit of its business, and such a grant constitutes a contract which no subsequent legislature can revoke or impair.<sup>1</sup> It is also competent for the legislature to exempt the property of a corporation, or a part thereof, from all future taxation, or from all assessment beyond a certain amount, or during a certain period, and such an engagement, if express and positive, constitutes an irrevocable and inviolable contract under the Federal constitution.<sup>2</sup>

Pa. St. 188; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. St. 169; Yarmouth v. North Yarmouth, 34 Me. 411; Berlin v. Gorham, 34 N. H. 266; Paterson v. Society, 24 N. J. L. 385; Bass v. Fontleroy, 11 Tex. 698; Moore v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 726; Marietta v. Fearing, 4 Ohio, 427; St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507.

But not so as to relieve the municipality from the payment of its just debts already accrued, nor change the existing means for the enforcement and collection of those debts in such a manner as to materially impair the rights of the creditors. Williams' Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 214; St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507; Trustees v. Aberdeen, 13 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 645; Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524. Compare Wallace v. Sharon, 84 N. Car. 164.

1. West River Bridge v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 531; Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 51; Bridge Co. v. Hoboken Land Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 181; Piscataqua Bridge v. N. H. Bridge, 7 N. H. 35; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co., 27 N. Y. 87; Boston & Lowell R. v. Salem & Lowell R., 2 2 Gray (Mass.). 1; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 189; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650; New Orleans Water Works v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674.

A municipality cannot ordinarily grant monopoly privileges to a corporation. Norwich Gas Light Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co., 25 Conn. 19; Birmingham & Pratt Mines St. R. v. Birmingham St. R., 22 Repr. (Ala.) 712.

Rule of Construction.—A grant is to be construed strictly against the corporation and in favor of the State; nothing will pass against the State by implication; the State will not be presumed to have parted with any portion of its sovereign power; and the privileges granted in an act of incorporation will not be deemed exclusive, unless it appears from the charter, in terms too clear and explicit to be mistaken, that it was the actual and deliberate intention of the legislature to preclude the State from granting similar franchises to any subsequent corporation. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 420; Rice v. Railroad, 1 Black (U. S.) 358; Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 536; De Lancey v. Ins. Co., 52 N. H. 581; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co., 27 N. Y. 87, 92; Dyer v. Tuskaloosa Bridge, 2 Port. (Ala.) 296; Collins v. Sherman, 31 Miss. 679; Gaines v. Coates, 51 Miss. 335; State v. Southern, etc., R., 24 Tex. 80.

If the rights and privileges granted to a corporation are not made exclusive by the specific terms of the grant, the legislature is not debarred from conferring similar franchises upon a rival company, notwithstanding the effect of the latter grant may be to injure the business and diminish the profits of the first company. Washington Turnpike Co. v. Maryland, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 210; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 420; Fort Plain Bridge Co. v. Smith, 30 N. Y. 44; Matter of Hamilton Avenue, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 405; Thompson v. Railroad, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 679; Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Railroad, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 554; Turnpike Co. v. Railroad Co., 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 392; Tuckahoe Canal Co. v. Tuckahoe R., 11 Leigh (Va.), 42; s. c., 36 Am. Dec. 374; Shorter & Smith, 9 Ga. 517.

2. New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 164; Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. (U. S.) 133; McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 143; Wilmington, etc., R. v. Reid, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 264; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 244; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 206; Pacific R. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 36; Erie R. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 492; Northwestern University v. People, 99 U. S. 309; St. Anna's Asylum v. New Orleans, 105 U. S. 362; Iron City Bank v. Pittsburgh, 37 Pa. St. 340; Commonwealth v. Pottsville Water Co., 94 Pa. St. 516; Commonwealth v. Girard Bank, 1 Pears. (Pa.) 323; Seymour v. Hartford, 21 Conn. 481;

The exercise by the State, at any time, of its police power can never be construed into a violation of the Federal constitution, as impairing the obligation of contracts, notwithstanding its effect may be to repeal existing charters or otherwise invade the terms of legislative engagements.<sup>1</sup>

Atwater v. Woodbridge, 6 Conn. 223; Osborne v. Humphrey, 7 Conn. 335; O'Donnell v. Bailey, 24 Miss. 386; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490; Memphis & Little Rock R. v. Berry, 41 Ark. 436; State v. Crittenden County Court, 19 Ark. 360.

Rule of Construction.—It is never to be presumed that the legislature has, in this respect, fettered its power in the future except upon clear and irresistible evidence that the engagement was in the nature of a private contract, as distinguished from a mere act of general legislation, and that such, in the particular instance, was the actual and deliberate intention of the State authorities. Dela-ware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 206; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 514; Philadelphia & Wilmington R. v. Maryland, 10 How. (U. S.) 376; Wilmington, etc., R. v. Reid, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 264; Erie R. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 492; Union Passenger R. v. Philadelphia, 101 U. S. 528; Vicksburg, etc., R. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665; People v. Roper, 35 N. Y. 629; State v. Newark, 26 N. J. L. 519; Jones Mfg. Co. v. Commonwealth, 69 Pa. St. 137.

But if the charter provides that the corporation shall pay to the State a certain percentage on its stock or profits, "which shall be in lieu of all taxes" to which the company or its stockholders would otherwise be subject, this is an express renunciation by the State of the right to impose further duties, and a subsequent act increasing the measure of taxation is unconstitutional. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. (U. S.) 331; Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. (U. S.) 369.

Necessity of Consideration.—The grant of a privilege against taxation must have been founded upon an adequate consideration. If none such exists, the exemption is a mere spontaneous concession on the part of the legislature, does not constitute a contract, and may be revoked at will. Christ Church v. Philadelphia, 24 How. (U. S.) 300; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 430; People v. Comm'rs of Taxes, 47 N. Y. 501; Washington University v. Rowse, 42 Mo. 208.

Exemption not Transferable.—Immunity from taxation conferred on a corporation by the legislature is not a franchise. It is personal to the corporation, and does not inhere in the property so as to pass by a transfer of it. Chesapeake & Ohio R. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176; Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217.

1. Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814; Boyd v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Stone, 20 Fed. Repr. 270; Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 184; Thorpe v. Railroad, 27 Vt. 149; Lake Hill v. Cemetery Co., 70 Ill. 191.

Constitutional Limits of Police Power.—The public health and the public morals are the two subjects embraced within the strict and constitutional meaning of the term "police power;" and the grant by the State to an individual or a corporation of the privilege (whether exclusive or not) of pursuing any species of business, the conduct of which must necessarily be attended with more or less injury to one or both of these subjects, is not a contract; and a subsequent statute revoking the grant or burdening it with restrictions is not invalid. Black on Const. Prohibitions, §§ 62, 63; Cooley Const. Lim. 577; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650. See Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 32; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 663; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814; Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U. S. 746; Boyd v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645; People v. Jackson Plank Road, 9 Mich. 307.

The police power does not extend to matters affecting the mere convenience of the public. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 64.

Prohibitory liquor laws are constitutional, notwithstanding their effect is to repeal or impair charter rights or annul previous contract obligations. Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25; State v. Paul, 5 R. I. 185; State v. Keeran, 5 R. I. 497; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 330; Reynolds v. Geary, 26 Conn. 179; Rowland v. State, 12 Tex. App. 418; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa. 165; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Gutzwiller v. People, 14 Ill. 142.

Under the police power the legislature may authorize the suppression of lotteries, notwithstanding contract rights. Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814. Or

A franchise granted to an incorporated company is a species of property, and may be taken by the State under the power of eminent domain, subject to the conditions necessary for the legal exercise of that power; and when adequate compensation is provided, the obligation of the contract is not impaired, but recognized.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Legislative Contracts with Private Persons.—The prohibitory clause of the Federal constitution, protecting the obligation of contracts from impairment, applies equally to all classes of contractual engagements, including those to which the State itself is a party, and whether the other party be one of its individual citizens, or a corporation, or another State.<sup>2</sup> That a State may make a valid and binding engagement, in the nature of a contract, with one of its own citizens, is well settled. Rights once vested, privileges once granted or sanctioned by the law of the State, if within the removal or discontinuance of slaughter-houses. Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U. S. 746. Or the discontinuance of ancient cemeteries. Coates v. Mayor of New York, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 585.

Without repealing the charter, the legislature may, under the police power, so direct the affairs of the corporation that the use of its franchise and privileges shall not be detrimental to the health or safety of the people. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 69; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650, 671. See Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 184; Commonwealth v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., 120 Mass. 383.

1. West River Bridge v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 507; Richmond R. v. Louisa R., 13 How. (U. S.) 71; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650, 673; Enfield Toll Bridge Co. v. Railroad, 17 Conn. 40; Backus v. Lebanon, 11 N. H. 19; Piscataqua Bridge v. N. H. Bridge, 7 N. H. 35; Central Bridge Co. v. Lowell, 4 Gray (Mass.), 474; Boston Water Power Co. v. Railroad, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 360; In re Citizens' Passenger R., 2 Pitts. (Pa.) 10; In re Towanda Bridge, 91 Pa. St. 216; In re Twenty-second Street, 102 Pa. St. 108; Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; Sharter v. Smith, 9 Ga. 517; Cooley Const. Lim. 281; 3 Parsons on Contracts, *537; 2 Morawitz on Corp. § 1086; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 72.

An exclusive bridge franchise may be condemned; or a toll bridge may be made free to the public. Piscataqua Bridge v. N. H. Bridge, 7 N. H. 35;

West River Bridge v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 507; In re Towanda Bridge, 91 Pa. St. 216; Central Bridge Co. v. Lowell, 4 Gray (Mass.), 474.

The right of the State to open streets in cities, for the accommodation of public travel, in the exercise of its power of eminent domain, will not be lost because an act of the legislature has granted to a certain corporation perpetual immunity against the opening of streets through its cemetery. In re Twenty-second Street, 102 Pa. St. 108.

A franchise consisting of the privilege of exemption from taxation may also be condemned under the power of eminent domain. 3 Parsons on Contracts, *543.

There is nothing in the nature of the case to distinguish a grant of a monopoly to a corporation, as respects its appropriation by the State under the power of eminent domain, from an ordinary franchise not in terms made exclusive; except this, that the exclusiveness of the grant is simply one element of value, to be taken into account in assessing the compensation for its resumption. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 76; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Co., 115 U. S. 650, 673; Cooley Const. Lim. 281.

Where a radical change in the charter is proposed, the dissenting minority of stockholders may be worked out by condemning their stock under the eminent domain. Black v. Delaware Canal Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 455. See 2 Morawitz on Corp. § 1089.

2. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; United States v. Great Falls Co., 21 Md. 119.

the constitutional limits, may be forfeited, but cannot be arbitrarily divested or withdrawn by any future legislation.<sup>1</sup>

When a State or city puts into operation a plan for the finding of its floating debt, this constitutes, when accepted, a new contract with each individual creditor, substantially beyond the further control of the legislature, and not to be altered or impaired by any subsequent modification or repeal.<sup>2</sup> Where the charter of a State bank makes its paper receivable for all debts to the State, this provision cannot be repealed as to bills in circulation at the time.<sup>3</sup> An act of the legislature forbidding a city to levy taxes to pay judgments against it is unconstitutional when, as the law stands, the effect of such legislation is to deprive the creditor of the only effectual means of collecting his debt.<sup>4</sup>

1. Woodruff v. State, 3 Pike (Ark.), 285; Brooklyn, etc., R. v. Railroad, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 358; Drew v. Railroad, 32 P. F. Smith (Pa.), 46; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 9; Bruce v. Schuyler, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 221; Stannire v. Taylor, 3 Jones (N. Car.), 207; Warren v. Lyons, 22 Iowa, 351; State v. Barker, 4 Kans. 379; Georgia Penitentiary Co. v. Nelms, 71 Ga. 301.

A mere promise or offer on the part of the State, while it remains unaccepted and before any consideration has passed, may be revoked and annulled without the violation of any constitutional sanction. Durkee v. Board of Liquidation, 103 U. S. 646; Brinsfield v. Carter, 2 Kelly (Ga.), 143; Montgomery v. Kasson, 16 Cal. 189; People v. Auditor, 9 Mich. 327; Cooley Const. Lim. 284.

2. People v. Woods, 7 Cal. 579; People v. Bond, 10 Cal. 563; Babcock v. Middleton, 20 Cal. 643; People v. Otis, 90 N. Y. 48; McCracken v. Moody, 33 Ark. 81; Dillingham v. Hook, 32 Kans. 185; Gurnee v. Speer, 68 Ga. 711; Smith v. Appleton, 19 Wis. 468; State v. Young, 29 Minn. 474; Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145; Youngs v. Hall, 9 Nev. 212; Amy v. Shelby Co., 114 U. S. 387; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432; Brewer v. Otoe, 1 Nebr. 373; New Orleans v. City Hotel, 28 La. Ann. 423.

Virginia Coupon Cases.—Antoni v. Wright, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 833; Wise v. Rogers, 24 Gratt. (Va.) 169; Clarke v. Tyler, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 137; Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 766; Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 270; Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572; Harvey v. Virginia, 20 Fed. Repr. 411. For full discussion see Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 87. See also article by Prof. Pomeroy in 17 Am. Law Review, 684.

3. Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. (U. S.) 190; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. (U. S.) 304; Graniteville Co. v. Roper, 15 Rich. (S. Car.) 138; Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 454. See Tennessee v. Snead, 96 U. S. 69; South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433.

4. Souter v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Favrot v. East Baton Rouge, 34 La. Ann. 491; Wood v. Mayor, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 463; Hadfield v. Mayor, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 501. Compare Sharp v. Contra Costa County, 34 Cal. 284. See New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600; New Orleans v. Holmes, 13 La. Ann. 502; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203.

But this does not apply to the case of raising money by taxation to pay a judgment founded on a tort, because a judgment in tort is not a contract. Louisiana v. Mayor of New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285.

After an appropriation has been made by the legislature to meet the requirements of a contract entered into by the State, and after the funds have been received into the treasury, it cannot deprive the party entitled thereto of the funds by repealing the appropriation. McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11; Dodd v. Miller, 14 Ind. 433. Compare Young v. Territory, 1 Oreg. 213.

When a municipal corporation, having general power to levy taxes to pay its debts, enters into a contract, the legislature cannot take away or substantially impair the right to compel the corporation, by mandamus, to exert its taxing power. Rahway Tax Assessors v. State, 44 N. J. L. 395.

Nor repeal or modify the taxing power of the corporation to such an extent as to deprive the holder of the contract of all adequate and efficacious remedy. Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716; Goodale v. Fennell, 27 Ohio St. 426.

There are certain cases in which the State has been allowed to depart from the express terms of its contracts, on the ground that such change is expedient for the public economy, or necessary for the due regulation of its internal affairs.<sup>1</sup> Permission accorded to sue the State is not a contract, and may be revoked at will.<sup>2</sup>

The appointment or election of a public officer does not create any contract between the government and himself, within the meaning of the prohibitory clause, that he shall continue the incumbent of that office for the period named, or that his duties shall remain the same, or that the emoluments of the office shall not be changed.<sup>3</sup>

1. The legislature has constitutional power to pass an act changing the location of the seat of justice of a county, although a contract for the purchase of a particular site had already been made by the commissioners. State v. Jones, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 414.

A right of exemption from jury duty by five years' service in certain fire companies, chartered with that right, may be repealed by the legislature even in reference to a person who has performed that service. Dunlap v. State, 76 Ala. 460.

The legislature may take away an immunity given from working the roads. Ex parte Thompson, 20 Fla. 887.

Where the legislature had conferred power upon the board of supervisors to publish the delinquent tax list of the county, and the board had contracted with the publisher of a newspaper for such publication, but before publication the act conferring that power upon the board was repealed, it was held that the repealing act was not in violation of the contract for publishing, and that the publisher in entering into the contract must be deemed to have acted with reference to the fact that the matter of publishing the list was within the control of the legislature. Pott v. Sheboygan Co., 25 Wis. 506.

2. Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. (U. S.) 527. See Western Arkansas Bank v. Sebastian Co., 5 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 414.

3. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. (U. S.) 402; Conner v. New York, 5 N. Y. 285; Benford v. Gibson, 15 Ala. 521; State v. Smedes, 26 Miss. 47; Supervisors v. Luck, 9 Va. Law Jour. 186; Farewell v. Rockland, 62 Me. 206; State v. Hermann, 11 Mo. App. 43; People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 470; People v. Haskell, 5 Cal. 357; Commonwealth v. Bailey, 81 Ky. 395; Barker v. Pittsburgh, 4 Pa. St. 49; Harvey v. Rush Co., 32 Kans. 159; People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 269; Coffin v. State, 7 Ind. 157; Donahue v. Will Co., 100 Ill. 94. Compare King v. Hunter, 65 N. Car. 603; Cotten v. Ellis, 7 Jones (N. Car.), 545; Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93; Vann v. Pipkin, 77 N. Car. 408.

Where a particular office has been created by statute, the legislature may, in their discretion, abolish the office, without regard to the tenure or expectations of the incumbent. State v. Hermann, 11 Mo. App. 43; Bryan v. Cuttell, 15 Iowa, 538; Conner v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 355.

Or may pass an act lengthening or abridging the term of office. Territory v. Pyle, 1 Oreg. 149; People v. Van Gaslin, 5 West Coast Repr. 651.

Or increasing the burdens or duties of the office without enhancing the compensation, or diminishing the compensation without lessening the duties. Turpen v. Comm'rs, 7 Ind. 172; Conner v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 355; Bryan v. Cuttell, 15 Iowa, 538.

Or declaring the office vacant and appointing another person to fill the vacancy. People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 470; Attorney-General v. Squires, 14 Cal. 13; People v. Haskell, 5 Cal. 357; Bryan v. Cuttell, 15 Iowa, 538.

Or reducing the salary or compensation of a statutory officer after he has entered upon his term of service. Commonwealth v. Bacon, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 322; People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 269; Commonwealth v. Bailey, 81 Ky. 395; State v. Smedes, 26 Miss. 47; Harvey v. Rush Co., 32 Kans. 159; Barker v. Pittsburgh, 4 Pa. St. 49; Foster v. Jones, 79 Va. 642.

If the emoluments of the office are derived from fees, the legislature has authority to abolish some of the fees and reduce others, or do to away with them altogether and substitute a compensation by salary. Conner v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 355.

But salary actually earned before the change may be recovered. Fisk v. Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. (U. S.) 402.

Constitutional Offices.—When the constitution of the State provides for the

(c) Legislative Interference with Contracts between Individuals.—The laws which subsist at the time and place of the making of a contract, and where it is to be performed, enter into and form a part of it as if they were expressly referred to or incorporated in its terms.<sup>1</sup> And any statute is unconstitutional, as impairing the obligation of contracts, which introduces a change into the express terms of the contract, its legal construction, its validity, its discharge, or (within certain limits) the remedy for its enforcement.<sup>2</sup> election or appointment to a particular office, or fixes the term or salary, the legislature has no power to change it in any of these respects. Warner v. People, 2 Denio (N. Y.), 272; Howard v. State, 10 Ind. 99; State v. Draper, 11 Am. Law Reg. 552.

But although the legislature cannot abolish, either directly or virtually, a constitutional office, yet it is held that when an office is created by the constitution and defined as to term and salary, the people in their sovereign capacity may, by the adoption of a new constitution, terminate both, without regard to the rights, interests, or expectations of the incumbent. Conner v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 355; Coffin v. State, 7 Ind. 157.

But when the tenure and salary of an office are fixed by a statute, though the office itself is created by the constitution, it is equally within the legislative control, as to such tenure and compensation, as in the case of offices created by statute, except that the office could not be virtually abolished by a colorable reduction of the compensation, or by taking it away altogether. Conner v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 355; Warner v. People, 2 Denio (N. Y.), 272.

1. Van Hoffman v. Quincey, 4 Wall. 535; 2 Story on the Const. § 1385.

2. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 102; 2 Story on the Const. § 1385.

The extent of the change is immaterial; any deviation from the terms of the contract impairs its obligation. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, 84; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190.

Laws changing Terms of Contract.—Any provision in a statute substantially defeating the ends contemplated by the parties to a contract, as by making necessary the performance of new conditions, not required by the law of the contract, impairs its obligation. Robinson v. Magee, 9 Cal. 81. See Nelson v. Allen, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 360.

A statute which authorizes the redemption of property sold upon foreclosure of a mortgage, where no right of redemption previously existed, or which extends the period for redemption beyond the time formerly allowed, cannot constitutionally apply to a sale under a mortgage executed before its passage. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. (U. S.) 311; Howard v. Bugbee, 24 How. (U. S.) 461; Coddington v. Bispham, 36 N. J. Eq. 574; Malony v. Fortune, 14 Iowa, 417; Mundy v. Monroe, 1 Mann. (Mich.) 68. Compare Heyward v. Judd, 4 Minn. 483; Berthold v. Holman, 12 Minn. 335; Berthold v. Fox, 13 Minn. 501.

The same is true of laws extending the time for redemption from tax sales. Dikeman v. Dikeman, 11 Paige (N. Y.), 484; Robinson v. Howe, 13 Wis. 341.

An act changing the legal rate of interest cannot affect contracts entered into before its passage, although they may become due and payable after the enactment. Roberts v. Cocke, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 207; Cecil v. Deyerle, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 775; Myrick v. Battle, 5 Fla. 345. See Conn. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51; Wood v. Kennedy, 19 Ind. 68.

The legislature has no power, by retrospective statute, to dispense with the requirement of due notice to drawers and indorsers of notes and bills, or to change the time within which notice must be given. 2 Daniel on Nego. Instr. § 970 a, citing Duerson v. Alsop, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 230; Farmers' Bank v. Gunnell, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 144; Cook v. Googins, 126 Mass. 410.

But a law under which the signer of a note made in one State and payable generally to a citizen of another State or order may be charged as the trustee of the payee, is not unconstitutional as impairing contracts. Philbrick v. Philbrick, 39 N. H. 468.

There is no constitutional provision guarding the common-law right of dower; it is not a part of the marriage contract, but results from the operation of laws existing at the time of the husband's death. Consequently a law affecting this subject may constitutionally apply to cases where the marriage was contracted before its passage, but the death of the husband occurred after it went into operation. Melizet's Appeal, 17 Pa. St. 449;

A State insolvent law discharging the person and property of the debtor, upon his compliance with its requirements, is valid and constitutional when applied to contracts made subsequently to its passage, within the State, and wholly between citizens thereof; but it can have no effect upon contracts entered into by the debtor before its passage, or with a citizen of another State, or not to be performed within the State.<sup>1</sup>

Barbour v. Barbour, 46 Me. 9; Lawrence v. Miller, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 516; Magee v. Young, 40 Miss. 164.

Laws Affecting Construction of Contracts—No act of the legislature can alter the nature and legal effect of an existing contract, to the prejudice of either party, nor give to such contract a judicial construction which shall be binding on the parties or on the courts. King v. Bank, 15 Mass. 447; Weaver v. Maillot, 15 La. Ann. 395.

But a law which merely establishes a rule of evidence with respect to certain past transactions cannot be said to impair the obligation of contracts. Herbert v. Easton, 43 Ala. 547.

A law requiring a written promise to revive a debt barred by bankruptcy may apply to past transactions. Kingley v. Cousins, 47 Me. 91; Cooley Const. Lim. 293.

So of a statute making the protest of an inland promissory note evidence of the facts therein stated. Fales v. Wadsworth, 23 Me. 553.

So of an act allowing the defence of want of consideration to be pleaded to all actions on sealed contracts. Williams v. Haines, 27 Iowa, 251.

Or a statute providing that a creditor may compound or compromise with a joint-contractor or co obligor without releasing the others, and that the right of contribution shall not be affected thereby. Yuille v. Wimbish, 77 Va. 308.

Laws Impairing Validity of Contracts.—An act declaring that certain circumstances which, at the making of the contract, would have rendered its consideration illegal, and so prevented its enforcement by process of law, shall no longer constitute a defence to an action upon it, is valid. Hill v. Smith, 1 Morris (Iowa), 70.

A statute which repeals existing usury laws, and destroys defences to existing contracts on the ground of usury, does not deprive parties of vested rights nor impair the obligation of contracts. Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9; Bank v. Allen, 28 Conn. 97; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149; Andrews v. Russell, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 474;

Wood v. Kennedy, 19 Ind. 68; Danville v. Pace, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 1; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 48 Ill. 331; Woodruff v. Scruggs, 27 Ark. 26.

But the legislature cannot declare that certain facts shall be a defence to actions brought on previously existing contracts. Cornell v. Hichens, 11 Wis. 353; McNealey v. Gregory, 13 Fla. 417; McElvain v. Mudd, 44 Ala. 48; Fitzpatrick v. Hearne, 44 Ala. 171; Curry v. Davis, 44 Ala. 282; Calhoun v. Calhoun, 2 S. Car. 283; Henderson v. Ins. Co., 25 La. Ann. 343; Forcheimer v. Holly, 14 Fla. 239.

A law requiring previously executed conveyances to be recorded, in order to be valid against subsequent purchasers, does not impair the obligation of contracts. Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 280, 290; Stafford v. Lick, 7 Cal. 479; Rochereau v. Delacroix, 26 La. Ann. 584; Vance v. Vance, 32 La. Ann. 186.

So of a law requiring a judgment to be docketed in each county where it is sought to bind real estate of the defendant. Tarpley v. Hamer, 9 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 310.

Or requiring the acknowledgment of deeds and mortgages. Parrott v. Kumpf, 102 Ill. 423.

Discharge of Contracts.—Statutes which change the rules relating to the discharge of contracts, the medium of payment, or the measure of damages, are unconstitutional if applied to contracts made before their passage. Dundas v. Bowler, 3 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 397; Abercrombie v. Baxter, 44 Ga. 36. See Swift v. Fletcher, 6 Minn. 556.

But the legislature may, after a contract is made, change the laws, which determine the amount of costs recoverable in an action upon it, or take away all costs. Rader v. Road District, 36 N. J. L. 273; Gardenshire v. McCombs, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 83.

1. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; McMillan v. McNeil, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 209; Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Smith, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 131; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 348; Frey v. Kirk, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 509; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223.

Marriage is not a contract within the constitutional prohibition.<sup>1</sup> And the legislature may constitutionally authorize divorces to be granted by the courts, dissolving marriages previously contracted, for causes happening before the passage of the act, and which, at the time of their occurrence, furnished no ground for such a proceeding.<sup>2</sup> Judgments cannot be considered as contracts within the meaning of the clause.<sup>3</sup>

(d) Remedies and Remedial Process.—The remedy provided by law for the enforcement of a contract is no part of its obligation, and whatever pertains merely to the remedy may be changed, modified, or abrogated by the legislature, in its discretion and to any extent, provided a substantive remedy be still left to the creditor, and such changes may constitutionally apply to existing contracts.<sup>4</sup> But if the parties to a contract include in it, in express

State insolvent laws cannot affect debts contracted before their passage. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Smith, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 131; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S. Cir.) 313; Roosevelt v. Cebra, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 108; Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253; Hammett v. Anderson, 3 Conn. 304; Medbury v. Hopkins, 3 Conn. 472.

They are invalid as against foreign creditors. Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Cook v. Moffatt, 5 How. (U. S.) 295; Sloane v. Chimiquy, 22 Fed. Repr. 213; Donnelly v. Corbett, 7 N. Y. 500; Hicks v. Hotchkiss, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 297; Larrabee v. Talbot, 5 Gill (Md.) 426; Guernsey v. Wood, 130 Mass. 503; Felch v. Bugbee, 48 Me. 9; Whitney v. Whiting, 35 N. H. 467; Pratt v. Chase, 44 N. Y. 597.

Although the contract was made and, by its terms, expressly to be performed, in the State where the debtor resides and where he obtains his discharge in insolvency, yet, if the creditor be a citizen of another State, the debt is not discharged. Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 409; Stoddard v. Harrington, 100 Mass. 88; Guernsey v. Wood, 130 Mass. 503; Kelley v. Drury, 9 Allen (Mass.), 28; Pratt v. Chase, 44 N. Y. 597; Newmarket Bank v. Butter, 45 N. H. 236; Felch v. Bugbee, 48 Me. 9; Chase v. Flagg, 48 Me. 182.

But foreign creditors may submit their claims to the jurisdiction of the insolvency court, and are then bound. Whitney v. Whiting, 35 N. H. 457; Pratt v. Chase, 44 N. Y. 597; Keating v. Vaughn, 61 Tex. 518.

1. Adams v. Palmer, 51 Me. 480; Cronise v. Cronise, 54 Pa. St. 255; Cabell

v. Cabell, 1 Met. (Ky.) 319; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349; Noel v. Ewing, 9 Ind. 37; Rugh v. Ottenheimer, 6 Oreg. 231; Starr v. Hamilton, Deady (U. S. Cir.), 268; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87; Cooley Const. Lim. 284, Black Const. Prohibitions, § 125; 2 Wharton on Contr. § 1069; 3 Parsons on Contr. § 545; 1 Bishop, Mar. & Div. § 667. Compare Ponder v. Graham, 4 Fla. 23; Bryson v. Bryson, 44 Mo. 232.

2. Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.), 181; Berthelemy v. Johnson, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.), 90; Jones v. Jones, 2 Tenn. 2; West v. West, 2 Mass. 223; Smith v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 248; Bigelow v. Bigelow, 108 Mass. 38; Hunt v. Hunt, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 662; 1 Bishop, Mar. & Div. § 696. Compare Clark v. Clark, 10 N. H. 380.

3. Garrison v. New York, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 196; Louisiana v. Mayor of New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285; State v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 709; Sprott v. Reid, 3 Greene (Iowa), 489; McAfee v. Covington, 71 Ga. 272; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 263; Black on Const. Prohibitions, §§ 129-133. Compare Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 224.

4. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122, 200; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. (U. S.) 311, 315; Van Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 610; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 314; Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595; Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203; Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714; Antoni v. Greenbow, 107 U. S. 766; Oriental Bank v. Freeze, 18 Me. 109; Long's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 114; Huntsinger v. Brock, 3 Grant (Pa.), 243; Cutts v. Hardee, 38 Ga. 350; Rathbone v. Bradford, 1 Ala.

terms, the remedy to be sought upon its breach, or the means to be used for securing its performance, subsequent legislation changing the remedial process they have agreed upon is, as to them, inoperative.<sup>1</sup>

It is competent for the legislature to pass a statute requiring suit to be brought, or other steps to be taken, upon causes of action already accrued at the date of its passage, within a less period of 312; Coosa River Steamboat Co. v. Barclay, 30 Ala. 120; Ward v. Hubbard, 62 Tex. 559; Williams v. Waldo, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 264; Templeton v. Horne, 82 Ill. 491; Holland v. Dickerson, 41 Iowa, 367; Penrose v. Erie Canal Co., 56 Pa. St. 48; Woodruff v. Scruggs, 27 Ark. 26; James v. Stull, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 482; Rader v. Road District, 36 N. J. L. 273; Heyward v. Judd, 4 Minn. 483.

Statutes taking away all remedy on a contract are unconstitutional. Johnson v. Bond, 1 Hempst. (U. S. Cir.) 533; Bruce v. Schuyler, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 221. Robinson v. Magee, 9 Cal. 81.

But parties have no vested right to a particular remedy, and the legislature may take away the specific remedy previously existing and substitute for it another and equally substantive remedy. Lockett v. Usry, 28 Ga. 345; Bruce v. Schuyler, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 221; Van Rensselaer v. Snyder, 13 N. Y. 209; Paschall v. Whitset, 11 Ala. 472; Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 214; Leathers v. Bank, 40 Me. 386.

Although the new remedy substituted by the legislature for the one in existence when the contract was made may be deemed less convenient and easy of execution than the old one, and may in some degree render the collection of debts more tardy and difficult, yet it will not follow that the law is unconstitutional. Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. (U. S.) 311; Penrose v. Erie Canal Co., 56 Pa. St. 48; James v. Stull, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 482; State v. Wiley, 19 Repr. (N. J.) 122.

But a statute which imposes upon an existing remedy so many and such radical conditions or restrictions for its prosecution as to render it practically worthless, and leaves the right of the creditor not worth pursuing, is unconstitutional and void as applied to previous contracts. Huntzinger v. Brock, 3 Grant (Pa.), 243; Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524; Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill. & J. (Md.) 1; Johnson v. Winslow, 64 N. Car. 27; Oatman v. Bond, 15 Wis. 20.

There is a distinction in favor of the constitutionality of an act which prolongs or revives a remedy, as compared with one which cuts off or takes away the remedy. Caperton v. Martin, 4 West Va. 138; Hope v. Johnson, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 125; United States v. Samperyac, 1 Hempst. (U. S. Cir.) 118; Hepburn v. Curtis, 7 Watts (Pa.), 300; Bolton v. Johns, 5 Pa. St. 145; Blann v. State, 39 Ala. 353; Bartlett v. Lang, 2 Ala. 401.

Where a just right or moral obligation already exists, the legislature has constitutional power to devise and provide a remedy for it. Lycoming v. Union, 15 Pa. St. 166; Sutherland v. DeLeon, 1 Tex. 250.

Special or extraordinary remedies, placed in the hands of a particular class of creditors, may be taken away by a retroactive statute, if a substantive remedy remains. South Carolina v. Gailard, 101 U. S. 433; Stocking v. Hunt, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 274; Deichman's Appeal, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 395; Chattaroi R. Co. v. Kinner, 81 Ky. 221; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337; South & North Alabama R. Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832.

The legislature has constitutional power to change and regulate the practice and modes of procedure in civil actions in the courts, and such modifications may well apply to past transactions, and even to the future steps of actions already instituted. United States v. Conway, 1 Hempst. (U. S. Cir.) 313; Lewis and Nelson's Appeal, 67 Pa. St. 153; Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Hecht, 92 U. S. 168; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. McNamara, 11 Ind. 543; Levering v. Washington, 3 Minn. 323.

And to pass statutes regulating the joinder of parties to suits on causes of action already accrued. Woods v. Bine, 5 How. (Miss.) 285; McMillan v. Sprague, 4 How. (Miss.) 647; Hancock v. Ritchie, 11 Ind. 48; Augusta Bank v. Augusta, 49 Me. 507; Crawford v. Bank, 7 How. (U. S.) 279.

1. Billmeyer v. Evans, 40 Pa. St. 324; Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313; Lewis v. Lewis, 47 Pa. St. 127; Hunt v. Thomas, 3 Phila. (Pa.) 121; Taylor v. Stearns, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 244; Pool v. Young, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 588; Boice v. Boice, 27 Minn. 371. Compare Conkey v. Hart, 14 N. Y. 22.

time than was by law allowed for such action at the time when the contract was made or liability incurred, provided the period be not so unreasonably shortened as practically to deprive parties of a remedy altogether.<sup>1</sup>

Statutes closing the courts or suspending the operation of civil process or the rendition of judgments, for a reasonable time, are not unconstitutional; for they affect the remedy only, and not so injuriously as to render it worthless.<sup>2</sup> But statutes are unconsti-

1. Jackson v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 280; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 457; Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. (U. S.) 163; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 290; Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 596; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628; Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633; Lewis v. Broadwell, 3 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 568; Samples v. Bank, 1 Woods (U. S. Cir.), 523; Barker v. Jackson, 1 Paine (U. S. Cir.), 559; Beal v. Nason, 14 Me. 344; Cummings v. Maxwell, 45 Me. 190; Sampson v. Sampson, 63 Me. 328; Willard v. Harvey, 24 N. H. 344; Bell v. Roberts, 13 Vt. 582; Call v. Hagger, 8 Mass. 423; Rexford v. Knight, 11 N. Y. 308; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 324; Miller v. Commonwealth, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 488; Kenyon v. Stewart, 44 Pa. St. 179; Korn v. Browne, 64 Pa. St. 55; State v. Jones, 21 Md. 432; Griffin v. McKinzie, 7 Ga. 163; McKenny v. Compton, 18 Ga. 170; George v. Gardner, 49 Ga. 441; Briscoe v. Anketell, 28 Miss. 361; State v. Bermudez, 12 La. Ann. 352; DeCordova v. Galveston, 4 Tex. 470; Lockhart v. Yeiser, 2 Bush (Ky.), 231; Lewis v. Harbin, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 564; Pearce v. Patton, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 162; Walker v. Bank, 2 Engl. (Ark.) 500; Blackford v. Peltier, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 36; Webb v. Moore, 25 Ind. 4; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 376; Stearns v. Gittings, 23 Ill. 387; Mattby v. Cooper, 1 Morris, (Iowa), 59; Stephens v. Bank, 43 Mo. 385; Holcomb v. Tracy, 2 Minn. 241; Stone v. Bennett, 13 Minn. 153; Smith v. Packard, 12 Wis. 371.

The rule is the same in regard to a statute prescribing a new period of limitation where none before existed. Willard v. Harvey, 24 N. H. 344; Kenyon v. Stewart, 44 Pa. St. 179; Korn v. Browne, 64 Pa. St. 55.

But if the statute so reduces the period of limitation that the time will already have run against a particular cause of action, this will be tantamount to an entire extinguishment of the remedy, and therefore unconstitutional. Chapman v. Douglas Co., 107 U. S. 348; Price v. Hopkins, 13 Mich. 318; Osborn v. Jaines, 17 Wis.

573; Cook v. Kendall, 13 Minn. 324; Auld v. Butcher, 2 Kans. 125.

As to what is a reasonable time to allow for suit on existing causes of action, see Berry v. Ransdall, 4 Met. (Ky.) 292; Pearce v. Patton, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 162; Morris v. Carter, 46 N. J. L. 260; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 153.

When a right of action has once become barred by the Statute of Limitations in force when the liability was incurred, it is not competent for the legislature, by repealing the statute altogether, or by extending the time beyond its original limits, to revive such right of action. Wright v. Oakley, 5 Met. (Mass.) 400; Kinsman v. Cambridge, 121 Mass. 558; Davis v. Minor, 1 How. (Miss.) 183; Sprecker v. Wakely, 11 Wis. 432; Hill v. Kricke, 11 Wis. 442; Knox v. Cleveland, 13 Wis. 245; Parish v. Eager, 15 Wis. 532; Woart v. Winnick, 3 N. H. 473; Cooley Const. Lim. 365. See Swickard v. Bailey, 3 Kans. 507.

But the statute may be repealed or extended before any rights have become barred. Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 1; Pleasants v. Rohrer, 17 Wis. 577; Power v. Telford, 60 Miss. 195.

2. Grimball v. Ross, Charl. (Ga.) 175; Ex parte Woods, 40 Ala. 75; Halloway v. Sherman, 12 Iowa, 282; Baumbach v. Badle, 9 Wis. 599; Starkweather v. Hawes, 10 Wis. 125; Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Mart. (La.) 530; Newkirk v. Chapron, 17 Ill. 344; Barkley v. Glover, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 44. Compare Coffman v. Bank, 40 Miss. 29; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; Wood v. Wood, 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 148; State v. Carew, 13 Rich. (S. Car.) 498. See Black on Const. Prohibitions, §§ 156-161.

An act providing that no civil process should be issued or enforced against any person in the military service of the State or of the United States during the term he should be engaged in such service (the term being definitely limited) was no infringement of constitutional rights. Coxe v. Martin, 44 Pa. St. 322; Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313. Compare Hasbrouck v. Shipman, 16 Wis. 296. See Clark v. Martin, 3 Grant (Pa.), 393.

tutional, as impairing the obligation of contracts, which purport to grant a stay of execution to debtors upon judgments rendered before the passage of the act, or upon judgments to be subsequently recovered upon contracts formed before it went into operation.<sup>1</sup> The legislature may pass a law abolishing imprisonment for debt on contracts made or judgments rendered when imprisonment of the debtor was one of the remedies to which his creditor was by law entitled to resort.<sup>2</sup> But an act increasing the amount or value of the debtor's property which is exempt from levy and sale on execution cannot constitutionally be made to apply to the collection of judgments entered before its passage.<sup>3</sup>

1. Webster v. Rose, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 93; Jacobs v. Smallwood, 63 N. Car. 112; McClain v. Easley, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 520; Ex parte Woods, 40 Ala. 70; Hudspeth v. Davis, 41 Ala. 389; Luter v. Hunter, 30 Tex. 688; Canfield v. Hunter, 30 Tex. 712; Culbreath v. Hunter, 30 Tex. 713; Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Mart. (La.) 530; Stevens v. Andrews, 31 Mo. 205; Thorne v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 127; Townsend v. Townsend, Peck (Tenn.), 1; Baily v. Gentry, 1 Mo. 164.

In some jurisdictions an attempt is made to discriminate in favor of remedial statutes which grant a stay of execution for a period that is neither indefinite nor unreasonable in its extension. Thus the opinion is advanced that a law postponing the collection of judgments for a prescribed term (as a year), and when adequate security is furnished does not amount to such an invasion of the remedy as will leave it practically worthless. United States v. Conway, 1 Hempst. (U. S. Cir.) 313; Farnsworth v. Vance, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 108; Chadwick v. Moore, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 50; Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313; Bunn v. Gorgas, 41 Pa. St. 441; Williams's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 214. But see Black on Const. Prohibitions, §§ 157, 158.

An act granting a stay of execution is of course constitutional and binding so far as it relates to future contracts. Barry v. Iseman, 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 129.

If the agreement of the parties, by its express terms, provides that judgment may be entered without stay of execution after the day of payment, it is not competent for the legislature, by a subsequent act, to disregard this stipulation and grant a stay. Lewis v. Lewis, 47 Pa. St. 127; White v. Crawford, 84 Pa. St. 433; Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313.

2 Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 370; Beers v. Haughton, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 329; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.)

200; Gray v. Munroe, 1 McLean (U. S. Cir.), 528; Woodfin v. Hooper, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 13; Fisher v. Lackey, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 373; Newton v. Tibbatts, 2 Engl. (Ark.) 150; Bronson v. Newberry, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 38; Ware v. Miller, 9 S. Car. 13; Brown v. Dillahunty, 4 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 713; People v. Carpenter, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 619.

3. Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 610; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595; Baldwin v. Flagg, 43 N. J. L. 495; Barnes v. Barnes, 8 Jones (N. Car.), 366; Wilson v. Brown, 58 Ala. 62; Johnson v. Fletcher, 54 Miss. 628; Lessley v. Phipps, 49 Miss. 790; Homestead Cases, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 266; Vedder v. Alkenbrack, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 327; Quackenbush v. Danks, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 128; Danks v. Quackenbush, 1 N. Y. 129; Forsyth v. Marbury, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 324.

But in some States it is held that if the exemption is not unreasonable in amount it is not open to constitutional objections. Morse v. Gould, 11 N. Y. 281; Harde-man v. Downer, 39 Ga. 425; Hill v. Kessler, 63 N. Car. 437; Stephenson v. Osborne, 41 Miss. 119; Cusic v. Douglas, 3 Kans. 123; Root v. McGrew, 3 Kans. 215; Coriell v. Ham, 4 Greene (Iowa), 455; Rockwell v. Hubbell, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 197.

But a statute exempting the debtor's whole property is invalid. State v. Bank of the State, 1 S. Car. 63; Penrose v. Erie Canal Co., 56 Pa. St. 46; Lockhart v. Tinley, 15 Ga. 496.

Appraisement Laws.—Where a contract is solvable in money, and, by the law in force when it was made, the debtor's property is liable to be seized and sold on execution to the highest bidder to satisfy any judgment recovered on the contract, a subsequent statute which forbids property to be sold on execution unless it will bring two thirds of the valuation set upon it by appraisers, pursuant to directions contained in the law, though professing to act only on the 13. Retroactive Laws.—There is nothing in the constitution of the United States to prohibit the several States from passing retroactive laws so long as they do not impair the obligation of contracts or partake of the nature of ex post facto laws or bills of attainder.<sup>1</sup> But retroactive laws, under that specific name, are forbidden by the constitutions of seven States.<sup>2</sup> It is an inflexible remedy, amounts practically to a denial of the rights secured by the contract, or to so serious an obstruction as to render it obnoxious to the constitutional prohibition. McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. (U. S.) 608; Moore v. Fowler, 1 Hempst. (U. S. Cir.) 536; Rawley v. Hooker, 21 Ind. 144; Robards v. Brown, 40 Ark. 423; Willard v. Longstreet, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 172. Compare Williams v. Waide, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 264. See Sproul v. Reid, 3 Greene (Iowa), 489; Chadwick v. Moore, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 49; Jones v. Davis, 6 Neb. 33; Contin v. Munger, 1 Tex. 598; Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 168.

1. Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 380; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 88; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 539; Baltimore & Susquehanna R. v. Nesbit, 10 How. (U. S.) 395; Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. (U. S.) 456; Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 172; Drehman v. Stifle, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 595; Randall v. Krieger, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 137; Beach v. Woodhull, Pet. C. C. 2; Albee v. May, 2 Paine (U. S. Cir.), 74; People v. Supervisors, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 85; Grim v. School Dist., 57 Pa. St. 433; Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407; Wilson v. Hardesty, 1 Md. Ch. 66; Baughner v. Nelson, 9 Gill (Md.), 299; Reed v. Beall, 42 Miss. 472; State v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 709; State v. Squires, 26 Iowa, 340.

2. Colorado, Louisiana, Missouri, New Hampshire, Ohio, Tennessee, and Texas. See Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 172.

In those States where retroactive laws are specifically and formally prohibited there are nevertheless certain classes of statutes of that character which are held valid and constitutional as being salutary and wholesome regulations and not within a just construction of the inhibition. See Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; Simpson v. Bank, 56 N. H. 466; Rairden v. Holden, 15 Ohio St. 207; Trustees v. McCaughy, 2 Ohio St. 152; Butler v. Toledo, 5 Ohio St. 225; Brandon v. Green, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 130; Wynne v. Wynne, 2 Swan (Tenn.), 405; De Cordova v. Galveston, 4 Tex. 470; Sutherland v. De Leon, 1 Tex. 250; New Orleans v. Cordeviollie, 13 La. Ann. 268; New Orleans v. Poutz, 14 La. Ann. 853;

Hughes v. Cannon, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 589; Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 778; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio, 599; Jones v. Jones, 2 Tenn. 2.

But whether or not retroactive laws are specially prohibited, the legislature cannot pass any law divesting settled rights of property. Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; Bay v. Gage, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 447; Kenyon v. Stewart, 44 Pa. St. 179; Boston Franklinite Co. v. Condit, 19 N. J. Eq. 394; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; Hinton v. Hinton, Phill. (N. Car.) 410; Houston v. Boyle, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 496; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 9; Paschal v. Perez, 7 Tex. 348; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio, 599; Wright v. Marsh, 2 Greene (Iowa), 94; Tilton v. Swift, 40 Iowa, 78.

"But suppose that a retroactive law, without coming under any of the heads already adverted to, is objected to on the ground that it is contrary to the spirit of the constitution and the implications necessarily drawn from it, or to the fundamentals of justice and good government, or to those cardinal principles of the social compact which antedate all laws, and enter into the very framework of representative government. If, in the particular State, there exists no prohibition against retroactive laws, is it within the province of the judiciary to declare such an act unconstitutional? This question is by no means free from doubt. But the preponderance of authority returns an affirmative answer." Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 177; Regents v. Johnson, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 365; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149, 155; Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 225; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 386; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 657; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 43; Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 244; Bowman v. Middleton, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 252; Ham v. McClaws, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 98. Compare Sharpless v. Mayor of Philadelphia, 21 Pa. St. 147, 161; Commonwealth v. McCloskey, 2 Rawle (Pa.), 369; Bridgeport v. Railroad, 15 Conn. 475; Louisville, etc., R. v. County Court, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 687. See Cooley Const. Lim. 164 et seq.

rule that a statute will be construed as prospective and operating in futuro only unless the intention of the legislature to give it a retroactive effect is expressed in language too clear and explicit to admit of a reasonable doubt.<sup>1</sup> And where the retroactive character of a statute is clearly indicated on its face, and although it is free from constitutional objections, yet it will always be subjected to the most circumscribing construction that can possibly be made consistent with the intention of the legislature.<sup>2</sup>

(a) The Invalid Classes of Retroactive Laws.—The legislature has no power to pass a law impairing vested rights of property.<sup>3</sup>

1. Auffmordt v. Rasin, 102 U. S. 620; United States v. Starr, 1 Hempst. (U. S. Cir.) 469; Torrey v. Corliss, 32 Me. 33; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; Atkinson v. Dunlop, 50 Me. 111; Colony v. Dublin, 32 N. H. 432; Briggs v. Hubbard, 19 Vt. 86; Whitman v. Hapgood, 13 Mass. 461; Medford v. Learned, 16 Mass. 215; Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Conn. 558; Plumb v. Sawyer, 21 Conn. 351; Hubbard v. Brainerd, 35 Conn. 576; State v. Smith, 38 Conn. 397; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; Watkins v. Haight, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 138; Quackenbush v. Danks, 1 Denio (N. Y.) 128; Sayre v. Wisner, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 661; Ray v. Gage, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 447; Norris v. Beryea, 13 N. Y. 273; New York, etc., R. v. Van Horn, 57 N. Y. 473; Jarvis v. Jarvis, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 462; Oliphant v. Smith, 6 Watts (Pa.), 449; Bedford v. Shilling, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 401; Ogle v. Turnpike Co., 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 256; Kenyon v. Stewart, 44 Pa. St. 179; Tyson v. School Directors, 51 Pa. St. 9; Haley v. Philadelphia, 68 Pa. St. 137; State v. Scudder, 32 N. J. L. 203; Vreeland v. Bramhall, 39 N. J. L. 1; Baugh v. Nelson, 9 Gill (Md.), 299; Clark v. Baltimore, 29 Md. 277; Williams v. Johnson, 30 Md. 500; Merwin v. Ballard, 66 N. Car. 398; Ex parte Graham, 13 Rich. (S. Car.) 277; Davis v. Minor, 1 How. (Miss.) 183; Garrett v. Beaumont, 24 Miss. 377; Oyon's Succession, 6 Rob. (La.) 504; Slack v. Railroad, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; Allbyer v. State, 10 Ohio St. 588; Lewis v. Brackenridge, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 220; State v. Barbee, 3 Ind. 258; Aurora Turnpike Co. v. Holthouse, 7 Ind. 59; Garrett v. Doe, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 335; Guard v. Rowan, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 499; Bruce v. Schuyler, 4 Gilm. (Ill.) 221; Thompson v. Alexander, 11 Ill. 54; Conway v. Cable, 37 Ill. 82; Bartruff v. Remy, 15 Iowa 257; Bennett v. Fisher, 26 Iowa 497; State v. Auditor, 41 Mo. 25; State v. Blakeman, 52 Mo. 578; State v. Ferguson, 62 Mo. 77; State v.

Atwood, 11 Wis. 422; Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55; Thorne v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 127; Cooley Const. Lim. 370.

But a statute applying to future transactions does not operate retroactively merely because they relate to antecedent events, or because part of the requisites of its action are drawn from time before its passage. Johnston v. United States, 17 Ct. of Cl. 157.

2. Hedger v. Remaker, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 255.

To a statute explicitly retroactive to a certain extent and for a certain purpose, the court will not, by construction, give a retroactive operation to any greater extent or for any other purpose. Thames Mfg. Co. v. Lathrop, 7 Conn. 550.

3. Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; Boston Franklinite Co. v. Condit, 19 N. J. Eq. 394; Norman v. Heist, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 171; Houston v. Bogle, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 496; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 9; Paschal v. Perez, 7 Tex. 348; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio. 599; Wright v. Marsh, 2 Greene (Iowa), 94.

What are Vested Rights—A statute is not objectionable as retroactive because it purports to operate on prior contingent or qualified rights, but only where it operates to divest settled and vested rights. Clarke v. McCreary, 12 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 547.

A right cannot be regarded as vested, in the constitutional sense, unless it amounts to something more than such a mere expectation of future benefit or interest as may be founded upon an anticipated continuance of the existing general laws. Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 213; Cooley Const. Lim. 359.

But a statute regulating the descent and distribution of property cannot be so modified by subsequent enactment as to divest estates which have already passed to the heir. Rock Hill College v. Jones, 47 Md. 1.

A will does not take effect, nor are

An act of the legislature declaring the interpretation to be placed upon a previous statute, is not obligatory upon the courts with respect to the application of the first statute to transactions which there any rights acquired under it, until the death of the testator, and its construction must depend upon the law as it stands at the time of that event; hence a statute passed after the making of a will, but before the death of the testator, by which the common law in this respect is changed, will operate upon the will. Loveren v. Lamprey, 22 N. H. 434. See Blackman v. Gordon, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 43.

The husband's interest in the wife's personalty, owned at the time of marriage, is a vested right which cannot be disturbed by subsequent legislation. Metropolitan Bank v. Hitz, 1 Mackey (Dist. Columb.), 111. See Holmes v. Holmes, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 295; White v. White, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 474; Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 208.

But it is otherwise as to his expectant interest in the after-acquired personalty of the wife; this is not vested until acquisition. Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 208; Norris v. Beryea, 13 N. Y. 273. Compare Dunn v. Sargeant, 101 Mass. 336.

Tenancy by the courtesy is not a vested right until it has become initiate by the birth of a possible heir. Cooley Const. Lim. 361; Strong v. Clem, 12 Ind. 37; Wyatt v. Smith, 25 W. Va. 813; Tong v. Marvin, 15 Mich. 60.

The wife has no vested right of any kind to dower in the estate of her husband before his decease; and until that event her right may be modified or abolished by the legislature. Barbour v. Barbour, 46 Me. 9; Talbot v. Talbot, 14 R. I. 57.

When a party, by statutory provisions, becomes entitled to recover a judgment, in the nature of a penalty, for a sum greater than that which is justly due to him, the right to the amount which may be recovered does not become a vested right until judgment is obtained; hence a repeal of the statute conferring the right will purge all past transactions of their penal character under it, unless they have already passed to judgment. Oriental Bank v. Freeze, 18 Me. 109; Pierce v. Kimball, 9 Me. 54; Confiscation Cases, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 454; United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 88; West Troy Fire Dept. v. Ogden, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 21; Engle v. Schurtz, 1 Mich. 150; Washburn v. Franklin, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 599; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149;

Bank of St. Mary's v. State, 12 Ga. 475. Compare Dow v. Norris, 4 N. H. 16; Lakeman v. Moore, 32 N. H. 410.

A right to a threefold forfeiture of all the interest reserved on a contract, on account of usury, is not a vested right. Parmelee v. Lawrence, 44 Ill. 405.

"When the period prescribed by the Statute of Limitations has once run, so as to cut off the remedy which one might have had for the recovery of property in the possession of another, the title to the property, irrespective of the original right, is regarded in law as vested in the possessor, who is entitled to the same protection in respect to it which the owner is entitled to in other cases. A subsequent repeal of the limitation law could not be given a retroactive effect, so as to disturb this title. It is vested as completely and perfectly and is as safe from legislative interference as it would have been if it had been perfected in the owner by grant or any species of assurance." Cooley Const. Lim. 365.

A statute abolishing tenure in tail, and changing estates so held into estates in fee-simple, is valid and constitutional. De Mill v. Lockwood, 3 Blatch. (U. S. Cir.) 56.

And a statute making joint heirs tenants in common may constitutionally embrace estates existing at its passage; it impairs no vested rights, but renders the tenure more beneficial. Stevenson v. Cofferin, 20 N. H. 150; Holbrook v. Finney, 4 Mass. 567; Anable v. Patch, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 363.

The right of a creditor to any particular remedy is not a vested right. The State is bound to afford substantive and available remedies to the suitors in her courts; but no party can claim a vested right in the permanence of a particular system of courts, or the continuance of a special mode of procedure, or the perpetuation of any remedy or remedial process which can be modified or abolished without impairing or taking away the right itself, when public policy or the convenience of justice demands a change. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 192; De Cordova v. Galveston, 4 Tex. 470; Paschal v. Perez, 7 Tex. 348; Rairden v. Holden, 15 Ohio St. 207; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; Henchall v. Schmidtz, 50 Mo. 454; Bird v. Keller, 77 Me. 270; Searcy v. Stubbs, 12 Ga. 437; Chaffee v. Aaron, 62 Miss. 29.

occurred, or rights of action which accrued, prior to the second.<sup>1</sup> In regard to statutes attempting to reverse judicial proceedings, granting new trials or appeals, or opening or annulling judgments, see, supra, § 4 (a). A statute which, operating upon facts existing at the time of its passage, attempts to impose upon one person a debt or duty to another, where there was no right and no obligation in existence before the passage of the act, is in violation of the constitutional prohibitions.<sup>2</sup>

(b) The Valid Classes of Retroactive Laws.—Curative and confirmatory statutes, within certain limits, are valid and constitutional. The rule is thus stated: If the thing wanting, or which failed to be done, and which constitutes the defect in the proceedings, is something the necessity for which the legislature might have dispensed with by prior statute, then it is not beyond the power of the legislature to dispense with it by subsequent statute; and if the irregularity consists in doing some act, or in the mode or manner of doing some act, which the legislature might have made immaterial by prior law, it is equally competent to make the same immaterial by a subsequent law.<sup>3</sup> Statutes conferring authority upon the

1. Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 327; Kelsey v. Kendall, 48 Vt. 24; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 494; West Branch Boom Co. v. Dodge, 31 Pa. St. 285; Reiser v. Saving Assn., 39 Pa. St. 137; Haley v. Philadelphia, 68 Pa. St. 45; Dequindre v. Williams, 31 Ind. 444; McManning v. Farrar, 46 Mo. 376; Lincoln Building Assn. v. Graham, 7 Nebr. 173. Compare Baker v. Herndon, 17 Ga. 568.

Retroactive declaratory statutes must not be allowed to affect vested rights. Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 22; Haley v. Philadelphia, 68 Pa. St. 45; McLeod v. Burroughs, 9 Ga. 213.

2. Ryan v. State, 5 Nebr. 276; Towle v. Railroad, 18 N. H. 547.

But where a moral obligation exists, the legislature may give it legal effect by a retroactive statute. Lycoming v. Union, 15 Pa. St. 166; New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 654.

3. Cooley Const. Lim. 371; Green v. Abraham, 43 Ark. 420; Exchange Bank Tax Cases, 21 Fed. Repr. 99.

Curative Acts.—If the judicial proceedings which the confirmatory act is designed to remedy were absolutely void, for want of jurisdiction or other reason, then the attempted cure cannot be effected, and the rights of the parties must stand as they were. McDaniel v. Corell, 19 Ill. 226; Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen (Mass.), 361; Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407; Richards v. Rote, 68 Pa. St. 248; Pryor v. Downey, 50 Cal. 388; Israel v. Arthur, 7 Colo. 5; Sherwood v. Fleming, 25 Tex.

(Supp.) 408; Wright v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. 452; Yeatman v. Day, 79 Ky. 186; Dupy v. Wickwire, 1 D. Ch'p. (Vt.) 237.

But in cases where the jurisdiction has attached and there has been a formal defect in the proceedings, where the equity of the party is complete and all that is wanted is legal form, it is within the recognized power of the legislature to correct such defect and to provide a remedy for the legal right. Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407; State v. Union, 33 N. J. L. 350; Selsby v. Redlon, 19 Wis. 17; Beach v. Walker, 6 Conn. 197; Booth v. Booth, 7 Conn. 350; Mather v. Chapman, 6 Conn. 54; Hannibal, etc., R. v. Marion Co., 36 Mo. 294.

Statutes passed for the purpose of healing defects in the acknowledgments of prior deeds or other conveyances, or excusing other informalities in their execution or registration, are constitutional. Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio, 599; Ferguson v. Williams, 58 Iowa, 717; Brinton v. SeEVERS, 12 Iowa, 389; Barton v. Morris, 15 Ohio, 408; Journey v. Gibson, 56 Pa. St. 57; Barnet v. Barnet, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 72; Maxey v. Wise, 25 Ind. 1; Dulany v. Tilghman, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 461.

It is said that if the defects in the deed were such as to render it positively ineffectual to convey the grantor's title, a subsequent curative statute would be objectionable as depriving the party of his property without due process of law. Russell v. Rumsey, 35 Ill. 362; Alabama Ins. Co. v. Boykin, 38 Ala. 510; Orton courts to grant divorces for causes occurring before the passage of the authorizing statute, and which, at the time of their happening, furnished no ground for the dissolution of the marriage relation, are not objectionable on account of their retroactive operation.<sup>1</sup>

v. Noonan, 23 Wis. 102. But compare Barnet v. Barnet, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 72; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 88; Davis v. Bank, 7 Ind. 316; Dentzel v. Waldie, 30 Cal. 138; Goshorn v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St. 641.

But such statutes cannot be allowed to affect the vested rights of third parties. Cooley Const. Lim. 378; Meighen v. Strong, 6 Minn. 177; Green v. Drinker, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 440.

Statutes are valid which confirm deeds that are irregular only through an imperfect compliance with the peculiar statutory provisions governing the acknowledgments of married women. Johnson v. Richardson, 44 Ark. 365; Barnet v. Barnet, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 72. See Russell v. Rumsey, 35 Ill. 362; Pearce v. Patton, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 162; Goshorn v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St. 641; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio, 599; Dentzel v. Waldie, 30 Cal. 138.

But if the invalidity of the conveyance arises from a want of power in the grantor to convey the particular estate, and not from any informality in its execution, nor merely from a disability imposed by the policy of the law, it is not in the power of the legislature to confer retroactive efficacy on the deed; both because the rights of third parties are necessarily involved, and because the legislature could not, in advance, have authorized such a conveyance. Black on Const. Prohibitions, § 211; Shonk v. Brown, 61 Pa. St. 320; Routson v. Wolf, 35 Mo. 174.

Laws passed to remedy the defective execution of powers, when intended to carry out the manifest intention of the parties, and not affecting vested rights, are constitutional. State v. Newark, 27 N. J. L. 185; Smith v. Callaghan, 24 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 50.

The legislature has constitutional authority to pass a statute affecting the execution of wills, and to give it a retrospective effect upon testaments already made at the time of its passage, but which have not yet taken effect by the death of the testator. Long v. Zook, 13 Pa. St. 400; American Baptist Union v. Peck, 10 Mich. 341; Loveren v. Lamprey, 22 N. H. 434. See McCarty v. Hoffman, 23 Pa. St. 507; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; State v. Warren, 28 Md. 338; Southard v. Railroad, 26 N. J. L. 13.

And to remedy the defective exercise of corporate powers. Syracuse Bank v. Davis, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 188; Mitchell v. Deeds, 49 Ill. 416; Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 728; Gardner v. Haney, 86 Ind. 17; Schenley v. Commonwealth, 36 Pa. St. 29.

And to cure irregularities and defects in the previous assessments of property for taxation and the levy of taxes thereon. Boardman v. Beckwith, 18 Iowa, 292; Musselman v. Logansport, 29 Ind. 533; Chamberlain v. Taylor, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 24; Butler v. Toledo, 5 Ohio St. 225; Strauch v. Shoemaker, 1 Watts & S. (Pa.) 175; Montgomery v. Meredith, 17 Pa. St. 42; Walter v. Bacon, 8 Mass. 472; Locke v. Dane, 9 Mass. 360; Patterson v. Philbrook, 9 Mass. 153; Brevoort v. Detroit, 23 Mich. 322; State v. Newark, 34 N. J. L. 237.

But if the fault is in the nature of the tax itself, it cannot be obviated by subsequent act. May v. Holdridge, 23 Wis. 93; Cooley Const. Lim. 382.

Where a person has designed and attempted to enter into a particular contract, but has failed to bind himself, in the contemplation of the law, either in consequence of a personal disability on his part, or of considerations of public policy existing at that time, or by reason of the neglect of some legal formality or requirement, he cannot complain of a subsequent statute validating the contract and fixing his liability. See Mechanics' Bank v. Allen, 28 Conn. 97; Andrews v. Russell, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 474; Grimes v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 371; Thompson v. Morgan, 6 Minn. 292; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 48 Ill. 331; Curtis v. Leavitt, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 195; Gibson v. Hubbard, 13 Mich. 215; Harris v. Rutledge, 19 Iowa, 389; Lewis v. McElvain, 16 Ohio, 347; Estep v. Hutchman, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 435; New Orleans v. Clarke, 95 U. S. 644.

The legislature may legalize irregular marriages. Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; Brower v. Bowers, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 214.

1. Jones v. Jones, 2 Tenn. 2; Berthelemy v. Johnson, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 90; Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349; West v. West, 2 Mass. 223; Bigelow v. Bigelow, 108 Mass. 38; 1 Bishop Mar. & Div. §§ 670-680, and 696-700. Compare Clark v. Clark, 10 N. H. 387; Greenlaw v. Greenlaw, 12 N. H. 200; Jarvis v. Jarvis, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 462; Given v. Marr, 27

A State may constitutionally pass a retroactive law impairing her own rights.<sup>1</sup>

CONSTRAINT.—Compulsion; restraint; abridgment of liberty or hindrance of the will.<sup>2</sup>

CONSTRUCTION.—The erection or creation of anything.<sup>3</sup> The Me. 212; Sherburne v. Sherburne, 6 Me. 210.

1. Davis v. Dawes, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 401; Lewis v. Turner, 40 Ga. 416; Mayers v. Bryne, 19 Ark. 308.

Authorities on Constitutional Law.—Story on the Constitution; Cooley's Constitutional Limitations; Cooley's Constitutional Law; Sedgwick, Statutory and Constitutional Law; Pomeroy's Constitutional Law; Desty's Federal Constitution; Black on Constitutional Prohibitions; Bump, Notes of Constitutional Decisions; Wade on Retroactive Law; Tiedman on Police Power.

2. On the question of the validity of a trust deed made by a married woman, wherein the certificate of privy examination, instead of following the words of the code that she "acknowledged the execution of the said deed to have been done by her freely, voluntarily, and understandingly, without compulsion or constraint from her said husband," substituted the word "restraint" for the word "constraint." The court, Cooper, Ch., after showing that while the omission of one of the words included in the form is fatal, yet the substitution of a word of similar meaning is not matter of substance, and that a prior act on the same subject actually employed the word "restraint," said: "The question is consequently narrowed down to this: Is the word 'restraint' the same word in substance as 'constraint,' the word prescribed by the form? . . . One of the meanings which both Sheridan and Johnson give to the verb 'constrain' is, to restrain. And all of our lexicographers give as one of the meanings of the noun 'restraint' an abridgment of liberty or hindrance of the will. It is in this sense that it was used in the form of certificate of 1833, and in that view is perhaps more appropriate than 'constraint,' which, except we give it the sense of 'restraint,' is identical in meaning with the word 'compulsion,' with which it is connected. The meaning of the two words, at one time identical, has been so differentiated by usage of the best writers as now to convey, when correctly used, distinct ideas. But as elements of the vulgar tongue they are still so nearly alike as to be applied without discrimination to the same purpose. To say that an act is done without 'constraint,' or without 'restraint,' would convey the same meaning, namely, without 'any abridgment of liberty or hindrance of the will,' which is one of the recognized definitions of restraint. I am of opinion, therefore, that, while the words are different, the sense is one, and that the certificate is valid." Edmonson v. Harris, 2 Tenn. Ch. 427.

3. Where a jury had allowed plaintiffs the sum of $500 for a "right of way" taken by a railroad company over their lands, on an instruction of the court that, "if the strip appropriated by the railroad company is timber land, the jury will consider the fact in estimating the damages, and that the railroad take with the appropriation of the land the right to destroy or appropriate the entire timber on the strip, if the company should deem it necessary or convenient so to do, this instruction was held error, and likely to mislead the jury; for, said Wright, J., "If the instruction in this case had used only the language that the company had the right to appropriate the timber on the strip if deemed necessary or convenient, it would have been little if any objectionable when or if taken in connection with the further thought, that such appropriation was to be for the purposes named in the statute. But even when thus considered it is liable to the construction that such appropriation might be for any purpose deemed necessary or convenient by the company. And this certainly is not the meaning of the law. The company has no right to determine the necessity for the use except as connected with the two objects named in the act. But if we look at the instruction a little more closely, it will be found to be still more objectionable. Under it the jury could give damages, in view of the fact that the company had the right to destroy the entire timber on the strip if deemed necessary or convenient. This language, it seems to us, loses sight of those rights which are surrendered on the one hand by the proprietor of the land, and acquired on the other by the company. By this appropriation the public, or in this instance the com-act of putting a meaning on, or of explaining in a certain way.<sup>1</sup>

CONSTRUCTIVE. (See also FRAUD; TRUSTS.)—(1) Inferred; not directly expressed.<sup>2</sup>

pany, acquires only the right of way. The property in the soil and the timber growing thereon remain unchanged, except that the company may in some instances, if necessary, for the purposes named in the statute, appropriate the timber found thereon. The right of property in the timber is, however, not necessarily changed by the appropriation, any more than that in the soil. And there is certainly no warrant anywhere for the conclusion that such appropriation gives the right to destroy the timber. Unless necessary for the purpose of 'construction' or repairs, the proprietor may remove the timber and use it as his own; it being understood by the word 'construction' as here used, more is meant than the mere making of the road-bed. The 'construction' of the road implies its preparation and readiness for use; and not only so, but its use in a convenient and safe manner. Hence, though such timber might not be necessary for the 'construction' of the track, it might be necessary to remove it for the safe running of the locomotive and cars. The right to thus remove does not, however, carry with it the right to destroy, nor yet to appropriate it to the use of the company for the purpose of firewood or the like." Preston v. Dubuque & Pacific R. Co., 11 Ia. 15.

1. In holding that a statute requiring notice of an appeal to be given "two weeks prior to" the term to which the appeal is addressed is mandatory and not directory, the court, Beasley, C. J., said: "Upon the argument before the court, an effort was made, on two grounds, to avoid the effect of this clear, statutory expression. The first position taken was, that the legislative direction with respect to the time for which notice of the appeal is to be given is not mandatory, but merely directory. There have been a number of decisions which have, under special circumstances, held that neither the exact time nor the exact mode prescribed by statutes for the doing of acts directed to be done is necessarily essential to the validity of the transaction. Upon looking into the cases referred to, and on examination of others standing in the same line, I find they all rest upon the common principle that the legislative will is to be ascertained not from the meaning of the text of the statute alone, but from such words interpreted in view of the general object of the particular act. The adjudications are the results, not of acts of interpretation, which is the mere finding of the true sense of the special form of words used, but of acts of 'construction,' which Dr. Lieber, in his Hermeneutics, has properly defined as 'the drawing of conclusions respecting subjects that lie beyond the direct expression of the text—conclusions which are in the spirit, though not within the letter of the text.'" Proprietors of Morris Aqueduct v. Jones, 7 Vroom (N. J.), 206.

2. Constructive Fraud Distinguished from Actual. See ACTUAL, vol. i. p. 184, (g).

Constructive Delivery. See ACTUAL DELIVERY.

"Constructive delivery" is a general term comprehending all those acts which, although not truly conferring a real possession of the thing sold on the vendee, have been held, constructioe juris, equivalent to acts of real delivery. In this sense constructive delivery includes symbolical delivery and all those traditiones fictæ which have been admitted into the law as sufficient to vest the absolute property in the vendee, and bar the rights of lien and stoppage in transitu, such as marking and setting apart the goods as belonging to the vendee, charging him with warehouse rent, etc. Bolin v. Huffnagle, 1 Rawle (Pa.), 1.

Constructive Possession Distinguished from Actual. See ACTUAL POSSESSION.

Constructive Notice. See ACTUAL NOTICE.

Lord Chief Baron Eyre has defined "constructive notice" to be "in its nature no more than evidence of notice, the presumption of which is so violent that the court will not allow even of its being contradicted." Quoted and approved in Nelson v. Allen, 1 Verg. (Tenn.) 360; Jordan v. Pollock, 14 Ga. 145; Conroy v. Port Henry Iron Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 27; French v. Loyal Co., 5 Leigh (Va.), 627; Garrard v. Pittsburgh & Connellsville R. Co., 29 Pa. St. 154; First Nat. Bank of Allegheny v. Farmers' Dep. Nat. Bank, 5 Cent. Rep. 505.

"Constructive notice" is a legal inference from established facts; and when the facts are not controverted, or the

(2) One of the divisions of trusts.<sup>1</sup>

CONSULS AND AMBASSADORS.

Definition, 764.

Consul, 764.

Ambassador, 764.

Ambassadors—Division, 765.

Extraordinary, 765.

Ordinary, 765.

Ambassadors—Ministers—Distinguished, 765.

United States Law Concerning, 766.

Provisions of the United States Constitution, 766.

United States Statutes, 766.

Consular Officers, 766.

Diplomatic Officers, 767.

Duties of Consular Officers, 767.

Diplomatic and Consular Officers—Provisions, 767.

Consular Courts, 768.

Ambassadors—Immunities and Privileges, 772.

Consuls—Privileges, 774.

1. Definition.—(a) Consul.—A consul is a commercial agent of a country, residing in a foreign seaport, whose duty it is to promote commercial intercourse of the state, and especially of the individual citizens. Consuls may be divided into consuls-general, consuls, or vice-consuls, whose functions are nearly the same.<sup>2</sup> A consul is a person commissioned to reside in a foreign country, as an agent of a government to protect the rights, commerce, merchants, and seamen of the state he represents, and to aid in any commercial and sometimes in diplomatic transactions with such foreign nation.<sup>3</sup> A consul is an officer appointed to reside in foreign seaports, to protect and extend the commerce carried on between the subjects of the country which appointed him, and those of the country or place in which he is to reside.<sup>4</sup> Consuls are commercial agents appointed by the sovereign to reside in the seaports of foreign countries, with a commission to watch over the commercial rights and privileges of the nation deputing them.<sup>5</sup> A consul is a commercial agent appointed by a government to reside in a seaport of a foreign country, and commissioned to watch over the commercial rights and privileges of the nation deputing him.<sup>6</sup>

(b) Ambassador.—Ambassadors are functionaries by whom intercourse between sovereignties is conducted.<sup>7</sup> An ambassador is a minister of the highest rank employed by a nation to represent it, and to manage its interests at the court or seat of government of some other nationality.<sup>8</sup> Ambassadors are diplomatic ministers alleged defect or infirmity appears on the face of the instrument and is matter of ocular inspection, the question is one for the court. Whether under a conceded state of facts the law will impute notice to the purchaser is not a question for the jury. Birdsall v. Russell, 29 N. Y. 220.

Constructive Possession Distinguished from Actual. See ACTUAL POSSESSION.

Constructive Total Loss. See ACTUAL.

1. A "constructive trust" is one that arises when a person, clothed with a fiduciary character, by fraud or otherwise gains some advantage to himself. Courts construe this to be an advantage for the cestui que trust or a "constructive trust." Burks v. Burks, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 353.

2. Woolsey's Int. Law, sec. 95.

3. Webster's Dictionary.

4. Wharton's L. Dict.

5. 1 Kent, 42.

6. Bouvier's L. Dict.

7. Woolsey's Int. L.

8. Webster's Dict.

sent by one sovereign power to another, with authority by letters of credence to treat on affairs of State.<sup>1</sup> An ambassador is a public minister sent abroad by some sovereign state or prince, with legal commission and authority to transact business on behalf of his country with the government to which he is sent.<sup>2</sup>

2. Ambassadors.—Definition.—(1) An ambassador extraordinary is one employed on political or extraordinary occasion, or residing at a foreign court for an indeterminate period.

(2) An ordinary ambassador is one that has a permanent mission.<sup>3</sup> Ambassadors are either ordinary, who reside in the place whither they are sent, for the protection of commerce, which is their greatest care, or extraordinary. The latter is employed upon some special matter, as condolence, congratulations, and the like.<sup>4</sup>

3. Ambassador—Minister Plenipotentiary—Distinguished.—According to European authority, a minister plenipotentiary is not of equal rank with an ambassador. The Congress of Vienna of 1815 and of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1818 make this division: 1. Ambassadors and papal legates, or nuncios. 2. Envoys, ministers, and other accredited agents to the sovereigns. 3. Ministers resident accredited to sovereigns. 4. Chargés d'affaires accredited to the department of foreign relations. The distinction of ambassadors, ministers plenipotentiary, envoys extraordinary, and resident ministers has reference to diplomatic precedence and etiquette, and not to their essential powers and privileges.<sup>5</sup>

1. Wharton's L. Dict.

2. Bouvier's L. Dict.

3. Vattel's Droit des Gens, liv. 1, 4, c. 6, secs. 70-79.

4. Wharton's L. Dict.

5. Marten's Précis du Droit des Gens, Modernes de l'Europe fondé sur les Traités et l'Usage, 201-207.

The United States government send ministers plenipotentiary to the courts of the great powers, and chargés d'affaires to the inferior nationalities. Sparks's Diplomatic Correspondence, viii. 108.

The Congress of Vienna of 1815 settled the question of precedence among the diplomatic corps. The diplomatic representatives should take rank according to the date of the official notice of their arrival. This agreement was signed by eight European powers. Wheaton's Elements of Int. Law, 265; Recueil des Pièces Officielles, viii. No. 17.

Note.—Ministers plenipotentiary from the United States are ranked lower than ambassadors, even from an inferior nation. See 1 Whart. Dig. Int. Law, tit. Diplomatic Officers.

In the United States it would seem that the distinction recognized in Europe between an ambassador and a minister is not accepted. A foreign minister is usually called an ambassador. Brightly's Dig. Laws U. S.

And a minister is defined as a representative of a sovereign or government at a foreign court; a delegate; an ambassador. Webster's Dict.

One European publicist says that chargés d'affaires and ministers resident are diplomatic representatives of the third class. Pinheiro-Ferreira's Cours de Droit Public. But this Portuguese publicist meant, undoubtedly, simply ministers, and not ministers plenipotentiary, who, it would seem by implication, would rank as diplomatic agents of the second class.

The consular office appears to have arisen about the middle of the twelfth century in Italy, and was generally established all over Europe in the sixteenth century. Formerly in Great Britain the crown appointed all consuls upon the indorsement of great commercial houses. Now they are appointed directly by the government without any such indorsement. Wharton's Law Dict.

In the United States the President,

4. United States Law Concerning.—(a) Provisions of the United States Constitution.—The judicial power of the United States shall extend to all cases affecting ambassadors, and to all cases affecting ministers and consuls. "In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, . . . the United States supreme court shall have original jurisdiction."<sup>1</sup>

(b) United States Statutes.—The diplomatic officers, including consular, are distinguished by the United States statutes. Consul-general, consul, and commercial agent are full, principal, and permanent consular officers, and to be distinguished from subordinate and substitutes.

Deputy consul and consular agent denote consular officers subordinate to their principals, "exercising the powers and performing the duties within the limits of their consulates or commercial agencies respectively, the former [deputy consuls] at the same ports or places, and the latter at ports or places different from those at which such principals are located respectively."

Vice-consuls and vice-commercial agents are consular officers who are substituted temporarily to fill the places of consuls-general, consuls, or commercial agents, when temporarily absent or relieved from duty.

(1) Consular Officers are consuls-general, consuls, commercial agents, deputy consuls, vice-consuls, vice-commercial agents, and consular agents, and none others.

(2) Diplomatic Officers are ambassadors, envoys extraordinary, ministers plenipotentiary, ministers resident, commissioners, chargés d'affaires, agents, and secretaries of legation, and none others.

No person in the diplomatic service of the United States shall wear any uniform or official costume not authorized by Congress.<sup>2</sup>

Every consul-general, consul, and commercial agent must give a bond, with sureties who are permanent residents of the United States, to be approved by the secretary of state, who shall deposit

"by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," "shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls. . . ." U. S. Const. art. 2, sec. 2, pt. 2.

Originally a consul had large judicial and commercial powers. He exercised entire municipal authority over his countrymen in the country where he was sent. The great commercial changes and the shifting of circumstances, together with the prevalence of civil order in the several Christian nations, have greatly modified the consular office and curtailed its powers. Generally, in these times, the judicial powers which are vested in consuls accredited to any nation are given by express provisions of treaties between the nations concerned. Warden's Origin and Nature of Consular Establishments.

Consuls were known in ancient Athens, and were located in commercial ports in which the Athenians traded, to protect their merchants in mercantile transactions. 3 St. John's Hist. of the Manners and Customs of Ancient Greece, 282.

The introduction of the practice of resident ministers adopted by nations is credited to Ferdinand the Catholic. 1 Prescott's Hist. Ferdinand and Isabella, 352.

1. Art. iii. sec. 2.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. (1874), t. 18, c. 1.

them with the secretary of the treasury. These bonds are in amount from one thousand to ten thousand dollars. Every vice-consul also is required to give bond. Certain consuls are also prohibited from transacting business as a merchant or factor, and the like. It is also provided that all consular officers whose respective salaries exceed one thousand dollars per annum shall be prohibited from transacting business on their own account.

The president has general authority to appoint consular clerks and the like.<sup>1</sup>

5. Duties of Consular Officers.<sup>2</sup>—(1) Every consular officer shall keep a detailed list of all the seamen and marines shipped and discharged by him.

(2) He shall keep a list of the vessels arriving and departing, their registered tonnage, and the number of their seamen and mariners, and those protected, and whether United States citizens or not, and shall make returns to the secretary of the treasury.

(3) To take possession of the personal estate left by any citizen of the United States, other than any seamen belonging to any vessel, who shall die within the jurisdiction of their consulate, leaving no legal representative, partner in trade, or trustee appointed to take care of the deceased's effects.

(4) To take an inventory of the same, assisted by two merchants of the United States whenever practicable.

(5) To collect the debts due the estate in the country where the party died, and to pay all debts owing from the estate.

(6) When necessary, sell perishable property at once, and the rest at the expiration of a year, and transmit the balance after the settlement of all debts to the treasury of the United States, unless a legal representative appear to claim the balance.

Consular officers are forbidden to exercise any diplomatic functions, or to hold any diplomatic correspondence or relation on the part of the United States, in, with, or to the government or country to which he is appointed, when there is a diplomatic officer appointed and acting. In the absence of the diplomatic officer, the consul can only act by express authority from the president.<sup>3</sup>

6. Diplomatic and Consular Officers—Provisions.—These officers must not be absent from their post of duty for a longer period than ten days at any one time, without permission previously obtained from the president.

The compensation allowed these officers shall be in full for all the services rendered and personal expense incurred. All fees collected by diplomatic and consular officers for and in behalf of the United States shall be collected in coin of the United States, or at its representative value in exchange.

Every secretary of legation and consular officer can take the oath of any person whenever he deems it necessary, or perform any notarial act which any notary public is required or authorized by law to do within the United States. Every such oath, affirmation, affidavit, deposition, and notarial act administered, when certified under his hand and seal of office, shall be valid, and of like force and effect within the United States, to all intents and purposes, as if administered by any competent officer within the United States.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat. (1874), t. 18, c. 2.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat. (1874), t. 18,

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. (1874), t. 18, c. 1. c. 2.

These officers are forbidden to correspond with any newspaper or private person regarding the affairs of the government where they are located.<sup>1</sup>

Modern consuls generally legalize by their seal, for use within their own country, acts of judicial or other functionaries; they may authenticate marriages, births, and deaths among their countrymen. They receive protests of masters of vessels, grant passports, and act as depositaries of ship papers. They may reclaim deserters from vessels, provide for destitute sailors, and discharge them and send them home when they have been cruelly treated. They act in behalf of the owners of stranded vessels, and administer on personal property left within their consulates, where no legal representative is left, and where treaty stipulations permit.<sup>2</sup>

Consuls are supposed to watch the commercial interests of the state which they represent. To assist their countrymen with advice on all doubtful occasions. To see that the conditions of commercial treaties are properly observed. To see that those under their official protection are not subjected to any unnecessary or unjustifiable demands in conducting their business. To represent their grievances to the authorities at the place where they reside, or to the ambassador of the sovereign appointing them, or to the court on which the consulship depends, or to the government at home.<sup>3</sup>

7. Consular Courts.—Consuls have jurisdiction of controversies, difficulties, or disorders arising at sea or in the waters or ports of other nations between the master or officers and any of the crew, or between any of the crew themselves, of any vessel belonging to the nation represented by such consular officer, provided no treaty stipulation contravenes such action.

1. U. S. Rev. St. t. 18, c. 3.

2. Woolsey's Int. Law, § 96.

3. Wharton's L. Dict. t. Consul.

It is laid down that a British consul must make himself master of the language used by the court and magistracy of the country where he resides. He is required to acquaint himself with the treaties and laws of nations, and the specifications of duties on exported and imported goods. To protect his countrymen from insult, within his jurisdiction. To see that his countrymen do not injure the native citizens. To see that British seamen have justice accorded them.

The consul must attend all arbitrations where property is concerned between masters of British ships and the freighters, being inhabitants of the place where he resides. 1 Chitty Com. Law. 58.

Consuls from the United States are authorized to make certificates of certain facts in certain cases, which receive faith and credit in the courts of the United States. But these consulate certificates are not to be received in evidence unless they are given in the performance of a consular function. U. S. v. Hand, 2 Wash. C. C. 435.

By treaty between the United States government with China, Japan, Siam, Egypt, and Madagascar, the ministers and consuls of the United States, in those countries, shall have, in addition to other powers and duties, judicial powers. These officers are empowered to arraign and try all citizens of the United States charged with offences against law committed in such countries, respectively, and to sentence the offenders in the manner authorized. They can also execute the provisions of the treaties in regard to civil rights, whether of person or property. Their jurisdiction in both criminal and civil matters shall, in all cases, be exercised and enforced in conformity with the laws of the United States, which are hereby, so far as necessary to execute such treaties, and so far as they are suitable to carry the same into effect, respectively adopted. But where the United States laws are not adapted, the common law and the law of equity and admiralty shall be extended in like manner over such citizens and others in those countries. And in case this does not answer the ends of justice, then such officers may decree such regulations as shall supply the defects. Officers consular at islands or in uncivilized countries have a limited civil jurisdiction. In some cases an appeal is allowed to the minister. Ministers are allowed jurisdiction over certain offences against foreign governments committed by citizens of the United States, provided no treaty stipulation prevents. In the countries named in the above paragraphs the United States ministers have appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases. Punishments are inflicted by fines and imprisonment. The minister can also carry out the execution of criminals, and punish for contempts. Marshals of consular courts are appointed by the President. The regulations of these courts are established by the ministers, who make the regulations public, and transmit them to the United States secretary of state. In carrying out the laws as established under this act the word "minister" is the person invested with and exercising the principal diplomatic function. The word "consul" is the person invested by the United States with, and exercising the functions of, consul-general, vice-consul-general, consul, or vice-consul.<sup>1</sup>

1. U. S. Rev. Stat. tit. 47, sec. 4079 et seq.

Giving judicial powers to United States consuls is provided by treaty in China, Japan, Siam, Turkey, Persia, Tripoli, Tunis, Morocco, and Muscat, and in uncivilized countries. This consular jurisdiction of civil and criminal cases is to conform to the United States law when it applies, otherwise by the common law, including equity and admiralty. Where these laws will not apply, the defects are to be reached and the judgment enforced by suitable decrees. Many of these cases are appealable to the ministers. Lawrence's Wheaton, note 74; 12 U. S. Stat. at Large, 72.

It is not understood that consular or diplomatic officers have civil or criminal jurisdiction, virtute officii, not even with their attachés. Wheaton, Dana's note 128.

Generally all consular officers representing Christian nations are supposed to have administrative and judicial powers so far as their own countrymen are concerned. Attorney-General Cushing, 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 342; 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 380.

This same doctrine is held by Great Britain. The Laconia, 1 Brown & L. 117; Barber v. Lamb, 8 C. B. Rep. N. S. 95. In the case of the Laconia, 1 Brown & L. 117, it was held that the supreme consular court at Constantinople has, by virtue of 6 & 7 Vic. c. 94. and orders in council of August, 1860, jurisdiction in cases of collision within Turkish waters, and can exercise such jurisdiction both in rem and in personam. 7 L. T. N. S. 164; 33 L. J. Adm. Cas. 11. A neutral residing in an enemy's country, as consul of a neutral state, and who also traded there as a merchant, is to be regarded as an enemy. Sorensen v. Reg., 11 Moore P. C. C. 141.

The Ottoman government allows Great Britain to have jurisdiction between British subjects and subjects of other Christian states, which jurisdiction is exercised by consular courts. Passayanni v. Russian Co., 2 Moore P. C. C. N. S. 161; 9 Jur. N. S. 1160. It was also decided in this case that there is no compulsory power in English consular courts over any person except English subjects; but a Russian or other foreigner may of his own accord submit to the jurisdiction of such court with the consent of his sovereign.

A defendant, relying on a judgment of a tribunal summoned by a foreign consular court as a bar to a party proceeding in England, is required to establish that said tribunal had jurisdiction by treaty, usage, or voluntary submission. Barber v. Lamb, 8 C. B. N. S. 95; 6 Jur. N. S. 981; 29 L. J. C. P. 234; 8 W. R. 461.

A foreign consular court at Constantinople, acting judicially, orders the giving of a bond in the nature of bottomry upon a cargo owned by a subject of a foreign state which recognized the consular court as its own; said cargo being upon a ship of said state lying in the port of Constantinople. The bond was sought to be impeached by action in a British colonial court, the owners alleging that the consular court had no jurisdiction. It was held that the presumption was that the consular court had jurisdiction, although outside of Turkey such presumption might not exist in the dominions of a European power. Messina v. Petrocchino, 4 L. R. P. C. 144; 20 W. R. 451.

By the rule adopted in the United States the consul of a decedent's country can intervene of right, apart from treaty, only by way of surveillance, and without jurisdiction. 11 U. S. Stat. at L. 52, 63; 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 98.

Consular certificates are evidence only so far as made by statute. Callett v. Ins. Co., 1 Paine C. C. 594; Brown v. The Independence, 2 Crabbe (U. S. Dist. C.), 54; Levy v. Burley, 2 Sumn. C. C. 355.

United States consuls having no judicial power, cannot have jurisdiction of offences of seamen in foreign ports, nor exempt the master of the ship from his own responsibility. The William Harris, Ware (U. S. Dist. C.), 367. If, however, an American vessel seeks port of necessity for repairs, the American consul may, it would appear, according to usage, direct a survey to ascertain the damages, as part of his official duty. Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. C. C. 27. In an English case it was held that a United States consul was not, as consul, permitted by the English law to administer upon the personality of a domiciled citizen of the United States, dying in England. The crown must take charge of the personal estate in trust, for payments of debts, if any, and distribution, according to the owner's domicile. Aspinwall v. The Queen's Proctor, 2 Curteis, 241.

Foreign consuls and like officials have exclusive jurisdiction, in the United States, over controversies, difficulties, and troubles between officers and any of the crew, or between any of the crew, of vessels of their nationality, where treaty stipulations accord this power. 13 U. S. St. at L. c. 116.

A foreign consul, recognized by the United States government, may assert and defend, in the courts of the United States, the rights of property of the subjects of his country, and may bring suits for such purpose, without any special authority or instructions from the party in interest. The Bello Corrunes, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 168.

As to consul's right to intercede in behalf of his countrymen. Robson v. The Huntress, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 59; Elizabeth, Blatchf. Prize Cas. (U. S. Dist. C.) 250; Adolph, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 87.

Seamen have often had resort to the admiralty courts to collect their wages. It has been held in these courts that when a sailor shipped for a voyage ending in a home port, his protest would be respected in the absence of special circumstances, such as a clear deviation, cruelty, or breaking up the voyage, although there might be a doubt as to the validity of the articles of agreement. The Becherdass Ambaidass, 1 Lowell (U. S. Dist. C.), 566; The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 435.

In Dainess v. Hall, 91 U. S. 13, the supreme court held that judicial powers are not necessarily incident to the office of consul, notwithstanding the fact that such powers are usually conferred upon consuls of Christians in pagan and Mahometan countries, to settle controversies between their own countrymen or subjects residing or commorant there, and also for the punishment of crimes. These judicial powers have their existence and power from treaty stipulations and positive laws of the nations concerned. The treaty between the United States and the Ottoman empire, of 1862, concedes to the United States the same privileges, in respect to consular courts, with regard to civil and criminal jurisdiction of said courts, which are enjoyed by other Christian nations; and the act of Congress of June 22, 1860, establishes the necessary arrangement for the exercise of such jurisdiction. But it was further held that such jurisdiction is, in terms, only such as is allowed by the laws of Turkey, or its usages in its intercourse with other Christian nations, and hence such laws or usages must be shown in order to know the precise extent of consular jurisdiction. Courts cannot ordinarily take judicial notice of foreign laws and usages, and the party claiming the benefits of such laws by way of justification must plead them so that the court can see that the case is within their provisions. In this case the consul-general of the United States, in Egypt caused certain goods to be attached. The plaintiff and the parties at whose suit the attachment was issued were citizens of the United States and not residents nor sojourners in the Turkish dominions. Hence an action to recover the value of the goods. As a defence the consul-general pleaded his official character, as giving him jurisdiction to entertain the attachment suit. This plea was defective in as much as it did not set forth the laws and usages upon which he relied. This case came from the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

In this case the United States supreme court quote from the instructions of the British Foreign Office to their consuls in the Levant in 1844, as cited by Mr. Phillimore, as follows:

"The right of British consular officers to exercise any jurisdiction in Turkey in matters which in other countries come exclusively under the control of the local magistracy, depends originally on the extent to which that right has been conceded by the sultans of Turkey to the British crown; and, therefore, the right is strictly limited to the terms in which the concession is made. The right depends, in the next place, on the extent to which the queen, in the exercise of the power vested in her majesty by act of Parliament, may be pleased to grant to any of her consular servants authority to exercise jurisdiction over British subjects." 2 Int. Law, p. 273, § 276.

The general doctrine in force in the Levant, of the extritoriality of foreign Christians, has given rise to the following system of municipal and legal administration:

"1. Turkish tribunals for questions between subjects of the Porte and foreign Christians.

"2. Consular courts for the business of each nation of foreign Christians.

"3. Trial of questions between foreign Christians of different nations in the consular court of the defendant's nation.

"4. Mixed tribunals of Turkish magistrates and foreign Christians, at length substituted in part for cases between Turks and foreign Christians.

"5. Finally, for causes between foreign Christians, the substitution at length of mixed tribunals in place of the separate courts,—an arrangement introduced first by the legations of Austria, Great Britain, France, and Russia, and then tacitly acceded to by the legations of other Christian nations." Consuls' Manual of Dec. 1862, §§ 169-171.

By a late act of Congress consular courts in China are given jurisdiction in cases of trafficking in opium by citizens of the United States. U. S. Law of 1887, § 3. p. 409.

For further law on the extent of consular jurisdiction, see Hall's Int. L. Appen. V.; Consular Convention between Austria-Hungary and the United States of July 11, 1870.

The jurisdiction given to United States ministers and consuls is limited to persons owing allegiance to the United States. 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 474.

A similar jurisdiction is exercised over their subjects by France and Germany. 2 Fœlix. p. 294; Bar's Int. L. § 138.

The treaty between the United States and Belgium does not give jurisdiction on foreign consuls to take cognizance of offences committed against the local laws of this country. It makes no provision for a consular court, nor does it authorize the consul to act even as a committing magistrate. In re Wildenhuis, 28 Fed. Rep. 924.

A party was tried and convicted before a consular general court at Kanagawa, Japan, for aiding a United States paymaster to desert. The case was appealed to the United States minister, Hon. R. B. Hubbard, who decided he had no appellate jurisdiction. Japan Weekly Mail, Sept. 18, 1886.

8. Ambassadors—Immunities and Privileges.—It is a definite principle of law, that ambassadors are exempt from all local jurisdiction, civil and criminal.<sup>1</sup> Any writ or process, issued from any of the courts of the United States or of any particular State, for the arrest or imprisonment of any ambassador or other public minister, or any domestic servant thereof, or against his goods or chattels, is null and void. The parties suing out such writs are deemed and held violators of international law, and become liable to imprisonment not exceeding three years, and to a fine in the discretion of the court. But citizens of the United States who contract debts previous to having entered the diplomatic service, whose debts remain unpaid, cannot have any benefit from this act. No one is liable to punishment under this act for having prosecuted the servant of an ambassador or other public minister, unless the name of such servant is registered in the office of the secretary of state, and by him transmitted to the office of the district marshal, in which district the minister resides. Assaults on ambassadors and other public ministers are punished by imprisonment not exceeding three years, and a fine in the discretion of the court.<sup>2</sup> The common law of England recognizes the rights of ambassadors by annulling all legal process sued out against them which may infringe the immunities of a foreign minister or any of his train.<sup>3</sup> All legal processes for the arrest of any ambassador or any of his domestics, or for the seizure of his goods or chattels, are utterly void. All such prosecutors shall be deemed violators of the law of nations, and disturbers of public repose, and are subject to such penalties and corporal punishment as the lord chancellor and the chief justices, or any two of them, shall think fit.<sup>4</sup>

According to the rules of interpretation, a statute fixing the salary of an officer at a named sum, there being no limitation as to time, should not be deemed abrogated or suspended by subsequent acts, which merely appropriate a less amount for the services of that officer for particular fiscal years, and which contain no words which expressly, or by implication, modified or repealed the previous law. United States v. Lantson, 118 U. S. 389.

1. 1 Kent, 15.

2. 1 U. S. Stat. at L. 117; Brightly's Digest, 40; U. S. Rev. (1878) sec. 4062 et seq.

3. 2 Bl. Com. b. iv. 70.

4. 7 Anne, c. 12.

The inviolability of ambassadors was a great international question in the fifteenth and the sixteenth century. Lord Coke held to the doctrine that if an ambassador committed any crime which was not merely malum prohibitum, he thereby forfeited his privileges and dignity as an ambassador, and could be punished as any private alien, and that he was bound to answer civilly to his contracts that were good, jure gentium. 4 Inst. 153.

During the reign of Queen Anne a Russian ambassador was arrested. He gave bail and then complained to the queen. The prosecutors were arrested and imprisoned. But how far this was criminal in the prosecutors was never determined. 1 Bl. Com. b. i. 254.

In 1653, in England, Sa being a brother of the Portuguese ambassador, and one of his train, fell into a quarrel with a certain party and wounded him, who was saved from death by persons interfering. The next night Sa with fifty followers came to the same place and killed one person and wounded many others. The Portuguese ambassador was compelled to deliver up the delinquents, and Cromwell resolved that Sa should be tried by the law of the land. Sa was convicted, sentenced, and hung. It seems that if he had been the ambassador his position would have protected him. 1 Mahon's Hist. of Eng. c. 8.

In 1717 Count Gyllenberg, the Swedish minister, was arrested in England, and the court then held that a foreign minister who conspires against a government at which he is accredited has clearly violated the laws of nations. Hence he is no longer entitled to the protection of the laws of nations. Woolsey's Int. L. sec. 92, c.

But the nations do not now arrest ambassadors and make them answer. The most that can be done under the modern doctrine of nations is to seize the offending minister and send him and his papers out of the state; that is, when the minister has committed an offence that endangers the safety of the state where he resides, and especially when the danger to the state is imminent. Halleck's Int. L. 211; Wheaton's Int. L. pt. 3, c. 1, sec. 15.

If ambassadors should be so regardless of their duty and of the object of their privileges as to insult the government where they reside, or openly attack the laws, they may be suppressed by refusal to treat with them, and an application can be made to their sovereign for their recall; or if the occasion is urgent, they may be dismissed and be required to depart from the country within a reasonable time. Grotius, b. 2, c. 18, secs. 1-6.

Generally, now, it is the opinion and practice of civilized nations, that if ambassadors commit grave crimes, whether against the state or moral order, they must be sent home to their sovereign for judgment, and that only self-defence will allow the killing of such an official. Woolsey's Int. L. 92, a.

The safety of the State is considered superior to all other considerations, and if the machinations of an ambassador endanger the State he may be remanded home to his sovereign, for he cannot be made amenable to the civil or criminal jurisdiction of the country where he resides. This is the settled rule of public law ever since the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when an attempt was made to subject the Scotch and the Spanish ambassadors to criminal and civil jurisdiction. Ward's Hist. of the Laws of Nations, ii. 486; Hall's Int. L. pt. 2, c. 9; Grotius, b. 2, c. 18, sec. 4; Bynkershoek's De Foro Legatorum, c. 8, 17, 18; Vattel, b. 4, c. 7, secs. 92-103; Schooner Exchange v. McFaddon, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 116.

It is a contempt of the government for a foreign minister, while a resident in the United States, to give his ideas to the people through the newspapers. His intercourse and correspondence must be with the executive department of the government exclusively. 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 43.

The secretary of legation is also exempt from any civil or criminal prosecution in the courts of the nation, when his superior is an ambassador representing some other sovereign. Ex parte Cabrera, 1 Wash. C. C. 232.

If an ambassador or any of his retinue assaults any party, the party assaulted has a right to defend himself, but he must use only force enough for self-defence. United States v. Liddle, 2 Wash. C. C. 205. The public ministers representing other nations may bring suits as plaintiffs in the courts of the United States, and in the country where they are accredited. In the United States the Federal courts have jurisdiction of such suits. U. S. Const. art. 3, sec. 2.

The attachés of an ambassador are not exempt from criminal or civil prosecution unless their names are registered with the secretary of state. U. S. v. Lafontaine, 4 Cranch C. C. 173; U. S. v. Jeffers, 4 Cranch C. C. 704.

An ambassador's household and all attachés of the legation are exempt from prosecution, civil and criminal. Bar's Int. L. 492, note (u); U. S. v. Benner, 1 Bald. C. C. 240; Ex parte Cabrera, 1 Wash. C. C. 232.

This exemption does not cease even when the ambassador has his passport. Dupont v. Pichon, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 321. So strict is the law of nations in protecting the rights of ambassadors, that suit cannot be brought against them when passing through a country on their way to their destination as minister in another country. Holbrook v. Henderson, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 619. All the property of an ambassador identified with his person, is exempt from seizure and protected. U. S. v. Hand, 2 Wash. C. C. 435. Even if a party assaults an ambassador, ignorant of his official status, he is guilty, ignorance being no defence. U. S. v. Ortega, 4 Wash. C. C. 531; U. S. v. Liddle, 2 Wash. C. C. 205.

If an ambassador has liabilities arising out of business engagements at the place of his residence as minister, he is exempt from suit. Magdalena Steam Co. v. Martin, 2 El. & El. 94; Hallock's Int. L. c. 9, secs. 14, 19 et seq. But the law has otherwise been interpreted. It is held that if the ambassador voluntarily attorns to the jurisdiction, then in that case he is responsible, and suit can be brought against him and his goods. Taylor v. Best, 14 C. B. (Eng.) 487. But this is not the rule in the United States. By act of Congress of April 30, 1790, sec. 27, a foreign minister and all attachés of the legation cannot waive their privilege of protection from civil and criminal process, because these privileges

9. Consuls—Privileges.—It is settled by the law of nations that a consul has no more immunities or privileges than any other person who enters a country under a safe-conduct.<sup>1</sup> In civil and criminal prosecutions consuls are equally subject to the laws of the country where they reside as other aliens.<sup>2</sup> Consuls enjoy no inviolability of person nor any immunity from jurisdiction unless belong to their sovereignty who sends them. U. S. v. Benner, 1 Baldw. C. C. 234; Valarino v. Thompson, 7 N. Y. 576; Wheaton, Dana's note. 129; Hall's Int. L. pt. 2, c. 9; Halleck's Int. L. c. 9, sec. 16 et seq.

It is a principle of international law that an ambassador, while residing within a foreign state, is considered as a subject of his own country, retaining his original domicile. The government he represents has exclusive cognizance of his conduct and control of his person. Grotius, b. 2, c. 18, secs. 1-6; Wicquefort's De l'Ambassadeur, liv. 1, sec. 27; Vattel, b. 4, c. 7, secs. 81-135.

If an ambassador enters into business, his property in that line of trade is liable to seizure as in the case of any other alien. Bynkershoek's De Foro Legatorum, c. 8; Vattel, b. 4, c. 8.

In the case of Holbrook v. Henderson, 4 Sand. (N. Y.) 619, it was held that an ambassador was protected in going through a country to his destination. The minister was from the republic of Texas, accredited to France. In New York he was arrested for debt on his return to Texas, and the court discharged him. It was held that going through a country in time of peace did not require a passport for the protection of a person. Passports, though named in our law, are unknown in practice. The protection is implied by natural and municipal law, and it is the duty of nations to enforce international law as part of the law of the land. The court further held that the doctrine of international law, as laid down by Grotius, is exploded. Grotius says, b. 2, c. 18, sec. 5, that the obligation to protect ambassadors extends only to the power to whom the embassy is sent, and does not extend to the power through whose territory the ambassador presumes to pass without passport. The court says this doctrine is harsh, narrow, and not now the rule.

The privileges of an ambassador are not considered to extend to debtors as to debts incurred prior to their entering the minister's service. Nor do these immunities extend to persons who were under previous obligations, as sailors, soldiers, apprentices, minors, a wife, and the like. Nor do these immunities extend to a laborer engaged to work in the garden attached to a minister's residence. U. S. v. Hand, 2 Wash. C. C. 435; 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 89-91; Wheaton's Elements Int. L. (3d Ed.) 264-387; 2 Ward's Hist. 552; Vattel, b. 4, c. 8, sec. 113.

A nation may lawfully refuse to receive an ambassador, and such refusal is not a just cause for war. This act would undoubtedly excite unfriendly feelings, unless accompanied with conciliatory explanations. 1 Kent, 40; Wheaton, Dana's note, 137.

Note.—Austria refused to receive an ambassador from the United States in 1886, giving no cause. See Dip. Correspondence.

How far a nation is bound by the ambassador's actions is a question of great importance. A general letter of credence is given the minister, but confers no power to bind his sovereign conclusively. To bind his government he must have a distinct and special power to bind his sovereign definitely, without the necessity of ratification by his government. 1 Kent, 41.

Any engagement entered into by the ambassador has no binding effect until ratified by his principal. Vattel, b. 4, c. 6, sec. 77. The international doctrine now held is that a treaty is not binding, although signed by the minister plenipotentiary, until ratified by his sovereign. The Eliza Ann, 1 Dodson (Adm. Eng.), 244; Vattel, b. 2, c. 12, sec. 156; Martens, b. 2, c. 1, sec. 3. But when a treaty has been concluded under a full power by the minister plenipotentiary, it cannot be rejected in honor, without sufficient reasons, such as violation of instructions by the ambassador, mutual error, or a moral or physical impossibility. Wheaton's Elements (3d Ed.), 303.

1. 1 Kent, 45.

2. 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 45, 302; Wicquefort's De l'Ambassadeur, liv. 1, sec. 5; Bynkershoek's De Foro Legatorum, c. 10; Martens's Droit des Gens, liv. 4, c. 3, sec. 148; Vineash v. Becker, 3 Maule & Selw. (Eng.) 284; U. S. v. Ravara, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 297; Clarke v. Cretico, 1 Taunt. (Eng.) 106; Com. v. Kosloff, 5 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.), 546; State v. De La Foret, 2 Nott & McCord (S. C.) 217.

given them by treaty.<sup>1</sup> They have nevertheless that inviolability of person which renders it possible for them to perform their consular duties.<sup>2</sup> A sovereign in receiving a consul tacitly engages to allow him all the liberty and safety necessary in the proper discharge of his functions.<sup>3</sup>

1. Woolsey's Int. L. sec. 96.

2. Heffner, sec. 244.

3. Vattel, b. 2, c. 2, sec. 34.

Vattel's doctrine is hardly that adopted at present. He says a consul's functions require that he should be independent of the ordinary criminal jurisdiction of the country, and that he should not be molested unless he violates the laws of nations by some great crime. Vattel, b. 2, c. 2, sec. 34. This doctrine of Vattel's is confirmed by De Steck, basing his conclusions on the commercial treaties in Europe since 1664. Essai Sur les Consuls, sec. 7, p. 62.

While the United States government does not fully indorse Vattel's and De Steck's doctrine, yet it is a provision in the United States constitution that the supreme court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction in all cases affecting consuls and ambassadors. This Federal jurisdiction is to be exclusive—not including the State courts. Hall v. Young, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 80; Com. v. Kosloff, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 546; Davis v. Packard, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 276; Sartori v. Hamilton, 1 Greene (N. J.), 107; U. S. v. Ravara, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 297.

The privilege of a consul to exemption from liability to prosecution in State courts is not personal which can be waived. If he does not plead such exemption, and judgment is rendered against him, this is no waiver. Nothing can waive this privilege. Miller v. Sells, 66 Cal. 341; Durand v. Halbach, 1 Miles (Pa.), 46; Valarino v. Thompson, 7 N. Y. 576; Griffin v. Dominguez, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 656. This rule is not changed though there be other defendants. Naylor v. Hoffman, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 510. But if a consul brings suit in a State court it has jurisdiction. Sagory v. Wissman, 2 Benedict (U. S. Dist. C.), 240.

The Federal courts have jurisdiction of suits brought against consuls. Graham v. Stucken, 4 Blatchf. C. C. 50; Bixby v. Janssen, 6 Blatchf. C. C. 315; Gittings v. Crawford, Taney C. C. 1; St. Luke's Hospital v. Barklay, 3 Blatchf. C. C. 259.

When a foreign consul files a bill in equity in a State court it would seem that the court has jurisdiction of a cross-bill. Sagory v. Wissman, 2 Benedict (U. S. Dist. C.), 240.

Foreign consuls cannot in the United States exercise admiralty jurisdiction except by force of treaty. Glass v. Betsey, 3 Dall. (Pa.) 6.

A consul was sued in the United States district court by one of his own countrymen, and the court took jurisdiction. Lorway v. Lousada, 1 Lowell (U. S. Dist. C.), 77; U. S. v. Lafontaine, 4 Cranch C. C. 173; Wheaton's Int. Law, pt. 3, ch. 1.

Whenever the president recognizes a representative from a foreign sovereign, then the courts are bound to take notice of the official capacity of the agent. U. S. v. Ortega, 4 Wash. C. C. 531. See note to same case in 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 468, for a general discussion of this subject.

At many places American consuls are forbidden to traffic or carry on business. 11 U. S. Stat. at L. c. 127, sec. 5.

This is also the English law. Abdy's Kent, 142, note 2.

But the American consuls are generally permitted to trade. Coppell v. Hall, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 542; The Pioneer, Blatchford Pri. (U. S. Dist. C.) 666.

The same liberty is given to British consuls as a general thing. The Baltica, 11 Moore P. C. 141; The Aina, 1 Spinks (Adm.), 313.

But when a consul enters into trade his official character gives no protection to that of merchant when both are united in one and the same person. The Indian Chief, 3 Rob. Chr. (Adm.) 27; Arnold & Ramsay v. U. Ins. Co., 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 363; 1 Chitty's Com. L. 57.

Usually in commercial treaties between the United States and other countries it is generally stipulated for the privilege of their consuls' trading. And the consuls are subject to the same laws and usages as other persons of their own nation. See Treaty between United States and Hanover, May 20, 1840, art. 6.

American consuls abroad are not allowed a salary, but are paid by fees, except the one in London, who has a salary. 1 Kent, 44, note a.

This law is greatly modified now, and many consuls, vice-consuls, and commercial agents draw salaries. For instance, the consuls-general at Havana, London, Paris, and Rio de Janeiro get six thousand dollars each per annum. See U. S. Law of 1886 and 1887, p. 481, schedule B.

CONTAGIOUS DISORDERS. See HEALTH; QUARANTINE, etc.

CONTEMPLATION.—The act of purposing, designing, or looking forward to anything.<sup>1</sup>

It is not a cause for ill-will between nations if consuls are refused recognition. An English consul was refused by Russia because it was alleged that he was hostile to the Russian government. Turkey refused a consul sent by the United States to Beirut, because he was a clergyman, and might be too much of a missionary. Austria rejected a consul from the United States because of his political opinions, he having previously been an Austrian subject. Schuyler's Am. Dip. 96.

1. Contemplation of Insolvency.—In an action for damages for the unlawful conversion by the defendant of certain personal property claimed by the plaintiffs, which the plaintiffs had purchased from a plate-glass company, but which the defendants levied on while still in the possession of the company and sold by the sheriff, the defendants claimed that any sale or transfer made by the company was void (2 R. S. [5th Ed.] 600, § 4), as at the time of the sale the company was in "contemplation of insolvency"—in fact was insolvent. But the court held that mere knowledge of the imminency of insolvency ought not to prejudice an honest customer where the insolvency has not actually occurred, or the affairs of the company remain in the hands of its officers in the usual course of business, without the interference of a court; Robertson, J., saying, "'Contemplation of insolvency' must also mean something more than expectation of its occurrence: it must include provision against its results so far as the transferee is concerned, and that can only be applicable where he is already a creditor, and the object is to take his debt out of the equal ratable distribution of the assets of the company when insolvent." Heroy v. Kerr, 21 How. Pr. Rep. (N. Y.) 409.

Contemplation of Bankruptcy.—So where A and B, being partners in trade and apprehending embarrassment in their business, conveyed all their stock and real estate and certain notes to certain of their creditors to secure them against certain debts and liabilities, as sureties and indorsers on the notes on A and B, and afterward suits were commenced upon certain of the debts so secured, on which judgment was rendered and execution was levied, but before judgment was rendered A and B became bankrupts under the act; and the personal chattels so assigned were previous to the bankruptcy sold, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the said debts,—it was held that the assignment was an act in "contemplation of bankruptcy" within the United States Bankrupt Act of 1841, ch. 9, and in preference of certain creditors, and was therefore void; the court, Story, J., saying: "These conveyances are in no just sense ordinary dealings and transactions in the common course of business. They were notoriously made with the intent to give a preference to certain creditors. They were voluntarily made, . . . without any consideration. . . . We must treat all these conveyances, therefore, as nearly contemporaneous, and known to the defendants to contain a transfer of all the property of the bankrupts with some trifling exceptions, and to be intended to give certain creditors a preference in contemplation of a breaking up of their business, and their immediate insolvency. What is this but a case of conveyances made giving a preference in 'contemplation of bankruptcy' in the sense of the second section of the act? The defendants must be presumed to know the law, and cannot set up their ignorance as a justification. They must be presumed to know the natural, nay the necessary, results of these conveyances to be, that they were acts of bankruptcy within the meaning of the first section of the Bankrupt Act, for which a proceeding might be had by the creditors of the bankrupt in invitum. The very facts put them upon inquiry, and diligent inquiry, to know whether the bankrupts must not thereby contemplate a state of immediate insolvency, and a direct preference of a few over the other creditors, which would be unlawful. Nay, the facts were so awakening and striking that no persons not choosing voluntarily to shut their eyes could doubt that the bankrupts were ruined in business, and unable to proceed farther; and that if they did not intend to seek as volunteers the benefit of the Bankrupt Act, their creditors had a right to proceed against them in invitum for the unlawful preference. 'Contemplation of bankruptcy' in the sense of the Bankrupt Act is not limited or confined to those cases only where the bankrupts contemplate and intend to be volunteers in bankruptcy, nor even where they contemplate future proceedings by their creditors against themselves in invitum under the act; but it extends also to cases where the bankrupts contemplate a complete and total stoppage of their business

CONTEMPLATION OF BANKRUPTCY. See BANKRUPTCY, Vol. II. p. 67.

CONTEMPT. (See also ATTACHMENT.)

Definition, 777.

Contempt of Legislature, 777.

In the United States, 777.

In England, 778.

Inferior Legislatures, 779.

Contempt of Court—Instances of Contempts Committed by, 780.

Those Acting in Some Special Capacity, 780. [780.]

Inferior Judges or Magistrates,

Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Clerks and other

Officers of the Court, 780.

Attorneys, Solicitors, and Counsellors at Law, 782.

Jurymen, 782.

Witnesses, 783.

Parties, 784.

Any Person, 785. [788.]

Instances of What are Not Contempts,

Proceedings in Contempt, 790.

The Penalty for Contempt, 795.

Purging, 797.

Power of the Courts, 799.

Inferior Courts, 800.

Miscellaneous, 802.

1. Definition.—Contempt is disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent language or behavior in the presence of a legislative or judicial body, tending to disturb its proceedings or impair the respect due to its authority,<sup>1</sup> or a disobedience to the rules or orders of such a body, which interferes with the due administration of law.<sup>2</sup>

2. Contempt of Legislature.—In a constitutional government, where the legislature has such powers only as are conferred by the constitution, either expressly or by necessary implication, the power to punish for contempt is limited to cases expressly provided for by the constitution, or to cases where the power is necessarily implied from these constitutional functions, and to the proper performance of which it is essential.<sup>3</sup> and trade, and mean, under such circumstances, to provide for preferences to particular creditors injurious to the interests of their other general creditors, whether any proceedings are or shall be in futuro instituted by or against them under the Bankrupt Act or not. In short, 'contemplation of bankruptcy' means a contemplation of becoming a broken up and ruined trader, according to the original signification of the term; a person whose table or counter of business is broken up bankus ruptus." Everett v. Stone, 3 Story (U. S.), 446.

The words in "contemplation of bankruptcy," as used in the bankrupt law, mean a contemplation of a state of bankruptcy merely, and not an intention to take the benefit of the bankrupt law. And this means more than an inability to pay debts promptly: it contemplates a thorough breaking up of business. McClean v. Lafayette, 3 McLean C. C. (U. S.) 587.

1. Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 204; Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 1; Crosby's Case, 3 Wils. 188; Munay's Case, 1 Wils. 299; Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. 9; 2 Story's Comm. 305, 317.

2. Wharton's Criminal Law (7th Ed.), § 3426.

3. Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray

(Mass.), 226, Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 106 U. S. 220; In re Stanford and the Pacific R. Commission decided, Aug. 29, 1887, in U. S. Circuit Ct. at San Francisco, not yet reported.

Mr. Justice Field, reviewing and approving the case of Kilbourn v. Thompson (113 U. S. 168), says:

"This case will stand for all time as a bulwark against the invasion of the right of the citizen to protection in his private affairs against the unlimited scrutiny of investigation by a Congressional committee. The courts are open to the United States as they are to the private citizen, and both can there secure by regular proceedings ample protection of all rights and interests which are entitled to protection under a government of a written constitution and laws."

Sawyer, Judge, says, quoting from opinion of the Chief Justice in the Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 718: "The United States cannot any more than a State interfere with private rights, except for legitimate governmental purposes."

In the matter of the application of the Pacific Railway Commission for an order upon a witness before it to answer certain interrogatories propounded to him,

(a) In the United States.—The power is conferred on the Senate and the House of Representatives, and upon the corresponding legislative bodies of the respective States, to punish its own members for disorderly conduct, or for failure to attend its sessions. Neither house has any general power to punish for contempt;<sup>1</sup> and the legality of the action of either house may be examined and determined by the supreme court.<sup>2</sup>

1. Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 204; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 38; Ex parte Nugent, 1 Am. L. J. 107; Brown v. Brown, 4 Ind. 627; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196; Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; Kernsdl v. Cason, 25 Ind. 362; Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.), 226; State v. Matthews, 37 N. H. 450; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463; s. c., 32 Hun (N. Y.) 563; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168; Const. of the U. S. art. i. sec. v. § 2; Const. of Penna. art. ii. sec. ii.

2. The tendency of modern decisions everywhere is to the doctrine that the jurisdiction of a court or other tribunal to render a judgment affecting individual rights is always open to inquiry, when the judgment is relied on in any other proceeding. Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. (U. S.) 495; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 457.

“The House of Representatives is not the final judge of its own power and privileges, in cases in which the rights and liberties of the subject are concerned, but the legality of its action may be examined and determined by this court. The house is not the legislature, but only a part of it, and is therefore subject in its action to the law in common with all other bodies, officers and tribunals within the commonwealth.” Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.), 226.

The most thoroughly considered case on the subject in the United States is perhaps Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, the substance of which is as follows:

K., for refusing to answer certain questions put to him as a witness by the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, concerning the business of a real-estate partnership of which he was a member, and to produce certain books and papers in relation thereto, was, by an order of the house, imprisoned for forty-five days in the common jail of the District of Columbia. He brought suit to recover damages therefor against the sergeant at-arms, who executed the order, and the members of the committee who caused him to be brought before the house, where he was adjudged to be in contempt of its authority. Held, that although the house can punish its own members for disorderly conduct, or for failure to attend its sessions, and can decide cases of contested elections and determine the qualifications of its members, and exercise the sole power of impeachment of officers of the government, and may, where the examination of witnesses is necessary to the performance of these duties, fine or imprison a contumacious witness, there is not found in the constitution of the United States any general power vested in either house to punish for contempt.

An examination of the history of the English Parliament and the decisions of the English courts show that the power of the House of Commons, under the laws and customs of Parliament to punish for contempt, rests upon principles peculiar to it, and not upon any general rule applicable to all legislative bodies.

The Parliament of England, before its separation into two bodies, since known as the House of Lords and the House of Commons, was a high court of judicature, the highest in the realm, possessed of the general power incident to such a court of punishing for contempt. On its separation the power remained with each body, because each was considered to be a court of judicature and exercised the functions of such a court.

Neither house of Congress was constituted a part of any court of general jurisdiction, nor has it any history to which the exercise of such power can be traced. Its power must be sought alone in some express grant in the constitution, or be found necessary to carry into effect such powers as are there granted.

The court, without affirming that such a power can arise in any case other than those already specified, decides that it can exist in no case where the house, attempting to exercise it, invokes its aid in a matter to which its authority does not extend, such as an inquiry into the private affairs of the citizen.

The constitution divides the powers of the government which it establishes into three departments,—the executive, the legislative, and the judicial,—and unlim-

(b) In England.—The power of the two Houses of Parliament under the laws and customs of Parliament to punish for contempt rests upon principles peculiar to it, and not upon any general rule applicable to all legislative bodies; having been before its separation into two bodies, since known as the House of Lords and the House of Commons, the highest court of judicature in the realm, possessed of the general power incident to such a court to punish for contempt. Upon its separation, each house was considered to be a court of judicature, and exercised the functions of such a court.<sup>1</sup> The question of the jurisdiction of the house is always ited power is conferred on no department or officer of the government. It is essential to the successful working of the system that the lines which separate those departments shall be clearly defined and closely followed, and that neither of them shall be permitted to encroach upon the powers exclusively confined to the others. That instrument has marked out, in its three primary articles, the allotment of power to those departments, and no judicial power, except that above mentioned, is conferred on Congress, or either branch of it. On the contrary, it declares that the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish.

The resolution of the house under which K. was summoned and examined as a witness, directed its committee to examine into the history and character of what was called "the real-estate pool" of the District of Columbia, and the preamble recites as the grounds of the investigation, that Jay Cooke & Co., who were debtors of the United States and whose affairs were then in litigation before a bankruptcy court, had an interest in the pool or were creditors of it. The subject-matter of the investigation was judicial, and not legislative. It was then pending before the proper court, and there existed no power in congress, or in either house thereof, on the allegation that an insolvent debtor of the United States was interested in a private business partnership, to investigate the affairs of that partnership, and consequently no authority to compel a witness to testify on the subject.

It follows that the order of the house declaring K. guilty of a contempt of its authority, and ordering his imprisonment by the sergeant-at-arms, is void, and affords the latter no protection in an action by K. against him for false imprisonment. The provision of the constitution that for any speech or debate in either house the members shall not be questioned in any other place exempts them from liability elsewhere for any vote, or report to or action in their respective houses, as well as for oral debate. Therefore the plea of the members of the committee that they took no part in the actual arrest and imprisonment of K., and did nothing in relation thereto beyond the protection of their constitutional privilege, is, so far as they are concerned, a good defence to the action.

A similar ruling is to be found in the opinion of Justice Field, of the United States supreme court, delivered in the United States circuit court, at San Francisco. Aug. 29, 1887, in the case of Stanford and the Pacific R. Commission, not yet reported.

1. Brass Crosby's Case, 3 Wils. 188; Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 1; Sheriff of Middlesex, 11 A. & E. 273; Lord Coke, 4 Inst. 23, 47; Stockdale v. Hansard, 9 Ad. & E. 1; Rielly v. Carson et al., 11 Moo. P. C. 63; Fenton v. Hampton, 11 Moo. P. C. 347; Doyle v. Falconer, L. R. 1 P. C. 328; Stewart v. Blain, 1 McAr. (D. C.) 453; Rex v. Flower, 27 How. St. Tri. 986.

A warrant of arrest under the hand and seal of the Speaker, attested by the clerk and directed to the sergeant-at-arms, is legal, although it does not show on its face on what evidence it was founded, nor set forth specially in what the alleged contempt consisted. Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 204; Howard v. Sir Wm. Grosset, 10 Q. B. 359; U. S. Rev. St. §§ 101, 103.

The duration of imprisonment for contempt to a legislative body terminates upon the close of the existing session. Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 204; Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.), 226; Stockdale v. Hansard, May's Treatise on Privileges of Parliament, p. 75; Rex v. Crosby, 3 Wils. 188; Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East. 1. See in re Sanborn, Monthly Law Reporter (Boston), May, 1860.

open to the inquiry of the courts, in a case where that question is properly presented.<sup>1</sup>

(c) Inferior Legislatures.—The power of committal for contempt under any circumstances does not belong to inferior legislatures, such as town councils or town meetings. The remedy for disturbance in such case is binding over to keep the peace, or indictment for disturbing a meeting.<sup>2</sup>

3. Contempt of Court.<sup>3</sup>—Courts of justice have an inherent power to punish all persons for contempt of their rules and orders, for disobedience of their process, or for disturbing them in their proceedings.<sup>4</sup>

Contempts may be committed—

(I.) BY THOSE ACTING IN SOME SPECIAL CAPACITY.<sup>5</sup>—(a) In

And it seems that the power cannot be exerted beyond imprisonment, and it is often regulated by statute. 1 N. Y. Rev. St. 154, § 13. Nugent, Ex parte, 1 Am. L. J. 107. The powers and privileges of Parliament were very elaborately and ably discussed in Howard v. Grosset, 10 Ad. & E. N. S. 359, 411.

1. Sheriff of Middlesex, 11 Ad. & E. 273.

2. 3 Wharton's Criminal Law (7th Ed.), § 3445.

3. Definition.—Contempt of court is a disobedience to the court, or an opposing or despising the authority, justice, or dignity thereof. It commonly consists in a party's doing otherwise than he is enjoined to do, or not doing what is commanded or required by the process, order, or decree of the court; sometimes it arises by one or more, their opposing or disturbing the execution or service of the process of the court, or using force to the person that serves it. Sometimes by using words importing scorn, reproach, or diminution of the authority to the court, its process, orders, officers, or ministers, upon executing or serving such process or orders. It is also a contempt to abuse the process of the court by wilfully doing any wrong in executing it, or making use of it as a handle to do wrong or to do anything under color or pretence of authority of the court, without such process or authority. Viner's Abr. vol. v. p. 442; 4 Blk. Com. 283; 4 B. & A. 329, 331; 3 Wheeler Am. C. L. 320; Ex parte Cohen, 5 Cal. 494; 3 Wheeler Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; Lyon v. Lyon, 21 Conn. 185, 198; 3 Scam. (Ill.) 395; In re Yeates, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 317, 325; 4 Paige (N. Y.), 405; 5 Paige (N. Y.), 54, 56, 311, 313, 489; 11 Price, 68; Trimble v. Barnard, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 127.

A contempt of court is a specific criminal offence, and the imposition of a fine for such contempt is a judgment in a criminal case. Fischer v. Hayes, 6 Fed. Rep. 63.

4. The power to proceed in contempt is incident to every judicial tribunal, derived from its very constitution, without any express statutory aid. The doctrine in these broad terms is generally asserted, and is believed to be sound; the narrower doctrine, about which there is no dispute, is, that this power is inherent in all courts of record. 2 Bishop Cr. Law (7th Ed.), § 247; Passmore Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. 9; Mariner v. Dyer, 2 Greenl. (Me.) 165; State v. White, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 123; Yates v. Lansing, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 395; 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 337; 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 317; State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 166; Clark v. People, 1 Breese (Ill.), 266; U. S. v. Hudson, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 32, 34; Rex v. Cotten, W. Kel. 133; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Exp. Adams, 25 Miss. 883; Morrison v. McDonald, 21 Me. 550; State v. Woodfin, 5 Ired. (N. C.) 199; Gate v. McDaniel, 3 Port. (Ala.) 356; Stuart v. People, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 395; Gorman v. Luckett, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 638; State v. Mathews, 37 N. H. 450; Watson v. Williams, 36 Miss. 331; Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; In re Moore, 63 N. C. 397; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 505; Church v. Muscatine, 2 Iowa, 69; People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 195; State v. Morrill, 16 Ark. 384; Ex parte Wright, 65 Ind. 508; 22 Me. 550; 5 Ired. (N. C.) 199; State v. Morrill, 16 Ark. 384; 25 Ala. 81; 25 Miss. 383; 37 N. H. 450.

5. As regards those in official position, it may be laid down that all corrupt conduct, oppression, or injustice in execution of office by color thereof, gross or wilful neglect of duty, and generally all misbehavior in office, constitute a contempt of court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 207, 12, 17; 4 Blk. 28, etc.

ferior Judges or Magistrates, by acting unjustly, oppressively, or irregularly in administering those portions of justice which are intrusted to their distribution; or by disobeying the writs issuing out of the superior courts, by proceeding in a cause after it is put a stop to, or removed by writ of prohibition, certiorari, error, supersedeas, and the like; any corrupt or iniquitous practices of subordinate judges are contempts of that superintending authority whose duty it is to keep them within the bounds of justice.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Clerks, and other Officers of the Court, by abusing the process of the law, or deceiving the parties, by any acts of oppression, extortion, collusive behavior, or culpable neglect of duty.<sup>2</sup>

1. The power of courts over this offence may be exerted to punish the perversion, maladministration, or denial of justice by inferior judges or magistrates, "since the superior courts have a general superintendence over all inferior jurisdictions." 2 Hawk. 217.

Refusing to seal a bill of exceptions without sufficient cause is a contempt on the part of the court of common pleas, and the supreme court (of New York) will award a mandamus to compel the court of common pleas to sign it. In this case the bill of exceptions was untrue, which was held sufficient cause for the refusal. People v. Judges of Westchester, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 118; People v. Judges of Washington Co., 2 Caines (N. Y.), 97. See also Conrow v. Schloss, 55 Pa. St. 28.

Disobedience of a peremptory mandamus from the supreme court of Georgia held a contempt in Exp. Carnochan, Charlton, 315. See State v. Hunt, Cox (N. J.), 287; Patchin v. Mayor, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 664; State v. Smith, 9 Iowa. 334.

Misconduct of inferior judges or magistrates, such as usurping jurisdiction, disobeying writs, disregarding adjudications of superior courts, and refusing to proceed on causes. Swift v. State, 63 Ind. 81; People v. Judges, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 97; Brinkley v. Brinkley, 47 N. Y. 40; Paley on Convictions (1866), 329.

2. Sheriffs.—Contempt of sheriff in not paying over money, or neglecting to collect it on execution. Ex parte Thurmond, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 605.

Serving a writ improperly, or refusing to serve it at all, or making a false return. State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 316; Summers ex parte, 5 Ired. (N. C.) 146; Pitman v. Clarke, 1 McMullen (S. Car.), 316; People v. Marsh, 2 Cow. (N. Y.), 493; State v. Williams, 2 Speers (S. Car.), 26.

For (sheriff) not returning a writ, a rule for an attachment was granted, though twelve years had elapsed since the issue of the writ. Brockway v. Wilber, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 356.

To pocket a venire is a contempt. Kepple v. Williams, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 29.

To pertinaciously refuse or culpably neglect to collect a debt in gold or silver. Rice v. McClintock, Dudley (S. Car.), 354. To make a levy after the appointment of a receiver. Com. v. Young, 33 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 160; Russel v. E. A. Railroad Co., 1 Eng. L. & E. 101. Carelessly allowing a prisoner to escape. Craig v. Malbie, 1 Ga. 544.

It is a contempt on the part of a sheriff to seize goods in the hands of a receiver with notice of his appointment, unless the writ be issued by special leave of the court, even though the title of the plaintiff be paramount to that of the receiver. Com. v. Young, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 606.

Clerks and other Officers.—Gross neglect on the part of a prothonotary of a court may constitute official misconduct under the Pennsylvania act of April 3, 1809, relative to contempt. Com. v. Snowden & Brews. (Pa.) 218.

Embezzlement or misappropriation of funds, or failure to pay them over when so ordered, is a contempt on the part of a receiver appointed by the court. Cartwright's Case, 114 Mass. 230; Pitman's Case, 1 Curtis C. C. 186.

For clerk of a court to fraudulently withhold money belonging to an estate. State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 166; Connor v. Archer, 1 Speers (S. Car.), 89.

Improper conduct or disobedience to the court of clerks, masters, or referees. Willand ex parte, 11 C. B. 544; Smith ex parte, 28 Ind. 47; Newbury in re, 4 A. & E. 100; People v. Nevins, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 154.

(c) Attorneys, Solicitors, and Counsellors at Law, who are also officers of the respective courts, by gross instances of fraud and corruption, injustice to their clients, or other dishonest practice.<sup>1</sup>

(d) Jurymen, in collateral matters relating to the discharge of their office; such as making default when summoned, refusing to be sworn or to give any verdict, eating or drinking without the County commissioners are officers within the meaning of the act. Hummel's Case, 9 Watts (Pa.), 416. See Freeman v. Hays, 2 Clark (Pa.), 253; Austin's Case, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 191; McLaughlin's Case, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 272.

Where an officer of the court so conducts himself during the trial of a cause as to inflict if not stopped irreparable injury, attachment for contempt is the proper remedy because the only remedy. R. v. Clement, 4 B. & Ald. 218.

The deputy-marshal is an officer of the district court, amenable to its jurisdiction for malfeasance in office; and this jurisdiction may be exercised by summary order or attachment for contempt. 2 Brock. Marsh. C. C. 1; 3 McLean, 365; The Laurens, Abb. Adm. (N. Y.) 508.

Disobedience of an inferior officer of the court. Swift v. State, 63 Md. 91.

1. Malpractice of attorneys, as in withholding papers or money from clients. Pitman's Case, 1 Curtis C. C. 186; The Laurens, 1 Abbot U. S. 302. Publications by attorneys derogatory to court. Biggs ex parte, 64 N. Car. 202; Moore ex parte, 64 N. Car. 398.

When the attorney undertakes to procure the bail himself, he assumes, in addition to his ordinary duty, the responsibility of knowing whom he presents to the court. In re Lucas Hirst, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 18; In re Jared Ingersoll, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 18; In re O'Grady & Deringer, 4 W. N. C. Pa. 199, 200.

While an attorney was arguing a motion in a State court for the appointment of a receiver of an insolvent corporation, proceedings against which had already been taken in the bankrupt court, of which fact the attorney had knowledge, he was served with an injunction from the bankrupt court. He informed the justice of the fact, ceased his argument, and handed up his papers, one of which was a draft order for the appointment of a receiver. Held, he had deliberately disregarded the order of the bankrupt court, and was guilty of contempt. S. Side R. Co., 7 Ben. (N. Y.) 391; 10 Bnkr. Reg. 274.

Disrespectful language to the court by an attorney; how punishable. Ex parte Selden, 6 Pittsb Leg. Int. (Pa.) 18. An attorney cannot be punished by suspension for disobeying the exigency of a writ of subpoena. Commonwealth v. Newton, 1 Gr. (Pa.) 453; In re Davies' Case, 93 Pa. St. 126, 121; Dickens' Case, 67 Pa. St. 169; Gates' Case, 17 W. N. C. (Pa.) 142; In re Serfass, 19 W. N. C. (Pa.) 476.

An attorney writing and publishing strictures on the opinion of the court, in order to prejudice a cause. Matter of Darby, 3 Wheel. C. C. 1; Reg. v. Wilkinson, 41 Up. Can. Q. B. 42; Higginson's Case, 2 Atk. 469. Solicitors and officers of courts by gross fraud and corruption, doing injustice to clients. Ex parte Pater, 5 Best & Smith, 299. Entering a dismissal of action in disrespectful language. Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; Lockwood v. State, 1 Ind. 161. For unprofessional and disrespectful language before the court. Redman v. State, 28 Ind. 205; Brown v. Brown, 4 Ind. 627; Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252. Filing an indecent petition for divorce. Brown v. Brown, 4 Ind. 627. Instituting a fictitious suit. Smith v. Junction R. Co., 29 Ind. 546; Smith v. Brown, 3 Tex. 360; Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. (U. S.) 254. Suing out an attachment for a witness who has not been served with process. Butler v. People, 2 Col. 295. Failing to pay or replevy a judgment in a bastardy proceeding. Reynolds v. Lamont, 45 Ind. 308. Making use of a false instrument in order to prevent the course of justice. Rex v. Mawbey, 6 Term R. 619. Appearing and confessing judgment without authority. Denton v. Noyes, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 296. For an attorney to refuse to defend a poor person on appointment by the court without a fee, or to advise a client of the legal consequences of a forfeiture of a recognizance, is not a contempt. Blythe v. State, 4 Ind. 525; Ingle v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 574. Attorneys are officers of the court, and can only be deprived of their offices by judgment of the court after opportunity to be heard has been afforded. Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 378; Ex parte Heyfron, 7 How. (Miss.) 127; Fletcher v. Dangerfield, 20 Cal. 427.

Privilege.—Solicitors attending at police court. Freston in re, 11 Q. B. D. 545; Bateman v. Phillips, 4 Taunt. 137.

leave of the court, and especially at the cost of either party, and other misbehaviors or irregularities of a similar kind; but not in the mere exercise of their judicial capacities, as by giving a false or erroneous verdict.<sup>1</sup>

(e) Witnesses, by making default when summoned, refusing to be sworn or examined, or prevaricating in their evidence when sworn.<sup>2</sup>

1. For a juror to corruptly confer with a party to a cause on trial, about the cause and the verdict to be rendered, is a contempt under Rev. St. 725. Re May, 1 Fed. Rep. 737.

During the progress of the trial of an indictment for an assault, a juror viewed the locality where it was committed. Held, not a contempt. People v. Oyer & Terminer Ct., 101 N. Y. 245; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 691.

One exempt from jury service by reason of his membership in a military company is not guilty of contempt if, having been summoned, he does not attend to make excuses (Lewis, P. J., dissenting). Miller v. Com., 80 Va. 33. If a juror, charged with a cause, leaves his associates and mingles with the community, or hold communication with persons outside, he commits a contempt of court. State v. Helvenston, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 48. See 2 Hawk P. C. (Curw. Ed.) p. 212. Holding a communication after retiring, with persons other than officers of the court. State v. Helvenston, R. M. Charlton (Ga.), 48. Conversing with a bystander during the trial of a cause; leaving the court without consent of the court. Barlow v. State, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 114; Exp. Hill, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 355. And so for a juror voluntarily to express an opinion as to the guilt of a prisoner for the purpose of disqualifying himself. U. S. v. Devaughan, 3 Cr. C. C. 84.

2. The refusal of a witness to answer proper questions before a grand jury is punishable as a contempt under the statutes as committed in a proceeding upon an indictment. People v. Kelley, 1 A. L. Reg. N. S. 534, or 24 N. Y. 74; Lockwood v. State, 1 Ind. 64.

For a witness not to attend when subpoenaed, or when under recognizance to attend. Yates v. Lansing, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 395; Yates v. People, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 337; R. v. Harland, 8 Dowd. P. C. 328.

For a witness, when ordered to leave the court during the examination of other witnesses, to remain in. Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196.

For a witness when attending to refuse to be sworn. Roelker ex parte, 1 Sprague

(U. S.), 276; Burr's Trial, 354; Judson ex parte, 3 Blatchf. C. C. 89, 148; Peck ex parte, 3 Blatchf. C. C. 113; Walker ex parte, 25 Ala. 81; Langdon ex parte, 25 Vt. 680. When sworn, to refuse to answer. U. S. v. Coolidge, 2 Gall. C. C. 364. Insolent demeanor of witness before a grand jury, and refusal to answer their questions. U. S. v. Caton, 1 Cranch C. C. 150; Ala. Code, § 4136; Newsom v. State, 78 Ala. 407.

In Pennsylvania it is provided by statute (act Feb. 24, 1870, Pamph. L. 34) that persons summoned as witnesses in certain criminal cases, and who abscond, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. "This is intended to apply to cases where the party in contempt could not be reached by attachment" Com. v. Phillips, 3 Pittsburg (Pa.) 426.

A Jew who refuses to be sworn as a witness on Saturday. Stansbury v. Marks, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 213. A person not a Quaker, who had conscientious scruples against taking an oath, on account of a vow that he never would do so, and therefore refused to be sworn, was committed for contempt, the liberty of affirming being restricted to Quakers, under the laws of Massachusetts. U. S. v. Coolidge, 2 Gall. C. C. 364. See also Wilson Bryan's Case, 1 Cranch C. C. 151.

The refusal of a witness to appear before an examiner is punishable as a contempt. Bowen v. Thornton, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 575. But not where there has been a substantial answer to the question, or it is not within the range of the examiner's duties. Loughlin v. Maybin, 39 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 256.

A witness not appearing in response to subpoena of a magistrate or notary not guilty of contempt. Trimble v. Barnard, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 127.

A witness committed for contempt, for disorderly behavior in court, is privileged while returning at the expiration of his imprisonment. R. v. Wigley, 7 Car. & P. 4.

Refusal to obey a subpoena issued by a Federal court is an offence against the Federal government within the meaning

(f) Parties to any suit or proceedings before the court, as by misbehavior, interfering with the course of justice,<sup>1</sup> disobedience to any rule or order made in the progress of a cause; non-payment of costs awarded by the court upon a motion,<sup>2</sup> or non-observance of section 1014 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. In re Ellerbe, 13 Fed. Rep. 530.

1. For a party, when books are submitted to his inspection by order of court, to break open parts sealed up, not relating to the subject of litigation, is a contempt. Dias v. Merle, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 494.

Threatening letter addressed and sent pending the suit to the defendant by the plaintiff, is a contempt of court. Smith v. Lakeman, 26 L. J. Ch. 305.

One who deceives the court by pretending to be sick, and thereby procures the postponement of a civil case, is guilty of criminal contempt, but he should not be proceeded against and adjudged guilty during his absence. Welsh v. Barber, 52 Conn. 147; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 567.

Bringing an action in the name of another without his consent. Scott v. John, 15 Ala. 566; Butterworth v. Stagg, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 291. Or bringing an action in the name of a fictitious person, for the purpose of indirectly affecting a pending controversy, is a contempt. Smith v. Junction R. Co., 29 Ind. 546. See also Coxe v. Phillips, Rep. temp. Hardw. 237; Brewster v. Kitchin, Comb. 425.

Defendant participating in a rescue and escaping from the custody of the sheriff. State v. Bergen, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 209.

Violence in matters relating to the procedure of the court. Adams v. Hughes, 1 B. & B. 24; Watson ex parte, 1 D. N. S. 805.

A co-respondent in a suit for divorce, immediately after the service of the citation, caused advertisements to be published denying the charges made in the petition, and offering a reward for information which would lead to the discovery and conviction of the authors of them. Held, that these advertisements constituted a contempt of court. Brodribb v. Brodribb & Wall., 11 P. D. 66, 55 L. J. P. 47, 34 W. R. 580; 50 J. P. 407.

2. An order was passed directing defendant to pay the money into court, or show cause for not doing so. The defendant refused to obey the order on the ground that the complainant was not entitled to the money, and that he had paid it away to the persons who were entitled. Thereupon a peremptory order was passed, requiring him to bring the money into court, but in indulgence to him, a proviso was annexed that a bond with security should be deemed a compliance with the order; this order was also disobeyed by defendant, and his answer was put in assigning the same reason as before for refusing to comply. Held, that the defendant was guilty of contempt in parting with the fund, whilst the question as to its disposition was pending before the court. The question who was entitled to the fund, was a question to be determined by the court upon a hearing of the cause. The only question upon passing the order for paying the money into court was the best method of securing the trust fund to await the decision of that question. The defendant could not be allowed to decide the question of title for himself, and set up his opinion as an excuse for disobeying the order to pay. Wartman v. Wartman, Taney C. C. 362.

A rule for contempt for failure to pay money into court will be discharged when it is made apparent that there is an absolute inability to make the payment, but this must clearly appear. Smith v. Smith, 92 N. Car. 304.

It is not a contempt which the city court of New York has power to punish for defendant to put in a verified answer, known to be false, in order to obtain delay to put property out of the way, and thus defeat the collection of plaintiff's judgment. Moffat v. Herman, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 107, reversing s. c., 17 Abb. (N. Y.) 62; Redman v. State, 28 Md. 205; Brown v. Brown, 4 Ind. 627; State v. Garland, 25 La. Ann. 532.

To disobey rules or orders, obedience to which is essential to the progress of the case. Price v. Hutchinson, L. R. 9 Eq. 534; State v. Sparks, 27 Tex. 627.

Disobedience to an order of court for summary payment, which payment cannot be otherwise enforced. People v. Compton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 512; Woodworth v. Rogers, 3 Wood. & M. C. C. 135; Peter v. Muller, 1 Bond C. C. 601; Mead v. Nbriss, 21 Wis. 310.

Disobedience to an order for specific conveyance. Remley v. Dewart, 41 Ga. 466; Ford v. Ford, 10 Abb. Pa. N. S. (N. Y.) 74; 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 169.

Where the defendant in a habeas corpus makes an evasive or false return thereto, of awards duly made by arbitrators or umpires after having entered into a rule for submitting to such determination.<sup>1</sup>

II. BY ANY PERSON.—As in the face of the court by rude and contumelious behavior, by obstinacy, perverseness or prevarication, by breach of the peace, or any wilful disturbance whatever;<sup>2</sup> or in the absence of the party, as by disobeying or treating with disrespect the writs, rules, or process of the courts;<sup>3</sup> by interfering he may be committed for contempt in order to compel obedience to the writ. U. S. ex rel. Wheeler v. Williamson, 3. A. L. Reg. O. S. 729.

Certiorari is in the nature of a superseas, and an attachment will lie against one who, with notice of its issue, proceeds in the matter which has been removed for review. State v. Lambert, 46 N. J. L. 59.

A judgment debtor may be committed for contempt for wilfully disobeying an order in proceedings in aid of execution in requiring him to apply property in his possession, not exempt, to the satisfaction of the judgment. State v. Burrows, 33 Kan. 10.

Under the practice in the courts of equity of the United States, no order is necessary fixing the time within which the main decree rendered in the cause must be performed, before a party can be in contempt for non-performance. Souter v. La Crosse R., Woolw. C. C. 80, 83.

Injunction against trustees by name; breach by new trustees. Avory v. Andrews, 51 L. J. Ch. 414.

A disobedience to an injunction is none the less a contempt of court because the act is done in good faith and not prohibited by the order, or under advice to that effect. Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. Mfg. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 316; Wells, Fargo & Co. v. O. R. & N. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 20.

1. When one disobeys an order to perform the awards of referees. McClure v. Guleck, 2 Harrison (Ind.), 340; Shriver v. State, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Yeates v. Russell, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 461; Rex v. Meyers, 1 T. R. 265; Mendell v. Tyrell, 9 M. & W. 217; McArthur v. Campbell, 4 Nev. & M. 208.

2. Insulting language to a judge relative to his conduct in a suit pending before him, even though out of court, is a contempt punishable by fine and imprisonment. Commonwealth v. Dandridge, 2 Va. Cas. 408. "Every insult offered to a judge in the exercise of the duties of his office is a contempt." Charlton's Case, 2 Myl. & Cr. 316.

It is a contempt to strike an attorney in the court-room, although the cause of the assault have no relation to the proceeding in which the attorney is engaged. U. S. v. Patterson, 26 Fed. Rep. 509; Rex v. Davidson, 4 B. & A. 329.

Contempt by disrespectful language spoken in court is not excused by the fact that the judge was ill-tempered and discourteous. Holman v. State, 105 Ind. 513.

To call another a liar in the presence of the court and in the hearing of its officers is a contempt. Violent language and an assault made, in a hall adjoining the court-room and within the hearing of the court, it then being in session, is a contempt which the court may punish, within the meaning of the act of March 2, 1831. U. S. v. Emerson, 4 Cranch C. C. 188; People v. Boscowitch, 20 Cal. 436.

For an acquitted prisoner to swear vengeance on the prosecuting witnesses within the precincts of the court, is a contempt. U. S. v. Emerson, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 188. It seems that it is a contempt for a man to seize his own property by force in open court. Com. v. Wilson, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 83.

3. Wilfully disobeying an order of court in proceedings in aid of execution requiring property to be applied to satisfaction of the judgment. State v. Burrows, 33 Kan. 10.

Refusing to obey an order directing defendant to pay money into court or show cause for not doing so. Wartman v. Wartman, Taney C. C. 362.

Where, as in New York, the statute makes it a criminal contempt wilfully to disobey "a process or order lawfully issued or made" by a court of record, disobedience in obeying a subpoena issued by the district attorney in a criminal case is not within the statute. Sherwin v. People, 100 N. Y. 351.

Where a corporation, its officers, agents, and employes, having been enjoined from maintaining a certain dam by notice served on it, caused it to be removed, and shortly thereafter the president resigned his position, transferred with, or perverting such writ or process to the purposes of private malice, extortion, or injustice;<sup>1</sup> by speaking or writing contemptuously of the court or judges acting in their judicial capacity, by printing false accounts (or even true ones without proper permission) of causes then depending in judgment;<sup>2</sup> and by anything, in his stock, entered into an agreement for the purchase of the land, including the locality from which the dam had been removed, and reconstructed the dam, held, that he was properly punishable for contempt. Morton v. Tulare County Superior Ct., 65 Cal. 496.

Disobedience to an order of court for summary payment, which payment cannot be otherwise enforced. People v. Compton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 512; Woodworth v. Rogers, 3 Wood. & M. (U. S.) 135; Potter v. Muller, 1 Bond (U. S.), 601; Mead v. Norris, 21 Wis. 310. Doing what one has been enjoined from doing. Davis v. Mayor, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 457; People v. Compton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 512. Disobedience to an order of court for specific conveyance. Remley v. De-wall, 41 Ga. 466; Ford v. Ford, 10 Abb. Pr. U. S. (N. Y.) 74. Publication of proceedings ordered not to be published. Wellesley. In re, 2 Rus. & M. 639.

How Michigan statute makes a personal demand for alimony a prerequisite to a commitment for contempt in not paying it. Edison v. Edison, 56 Mich. 185.

Under its power over trusts, a court of equity may direct the manner of investigating the assets of an embarrassed savings-bank, when requested to do so by its managers; and for making loans unauthorized by the order of the court, and on other securities than those ordered to be taken, the president thus violating the order may be dealt with as for contempt. Una v. Dodd, 39 N. J. Eq. 173.

The delivery of property which has been sold under decree of partition may be enforced by an attachment for contempt. Edwards v. Dykeman, 95 Ind. 509.

1. If the process be impeded, no case can be tried. Hence it is a contempt punishable by summary commitment to interfere with process. Price v. Hutchinson, L. R. 9 Eq. 534; Buck v. Buck, 60 Ill. 115; People v. Bradley, 60 Ill. 390; State v. Sparks, 27 Tex. 627; Adams v. Hughes, 1 B. & B. 24; Watson, Ex parte, 1 D. N. S. 805; Kitcat v. Sharp, 52 L. J. Ch. 134; McGregor v. Barrett, 6 C. B. 262.

2. Publications.—A publication in a newspaper in the city where the supreme court of appeals is sitting, charging that three out of the four judges attended a political caucus more than a year before, and advised the action out of which the case then pending arose, promising the caucus to hold its action legal, and also charging that the court agreed to decide the case for political purposes before a certain political convention, held to be contempt of court, summarily punishable as "misbehavior in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct or interrupt the administration of justice." State v. Frew, 24 W. Va. 416; s. c., Am. Rep. 257.

It is a contempt to make a publication reflecting on the court, jury, etc., with reference to a pending suit, or tending to influence the decision. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 77; and U. S. v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 5; s. c., 4 Iowa, 209; s. c., 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 23; Bayard v. Passmore, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 438; In re Moore, 63 N. C. 397; State v. Morrill, 16 Ark. 384; People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 195. Contra, Ex parte Hickery, 12 Miss. 751.

Since the act of March 2, 1831, the courts of the United States have no longer power to punish a publication respecting a pending suit as a contempt. Ex parte Poulson, 15 Haz. Pa. Reg. 380.

The New York Revised Statutes, vol. ii. (4th Ed.) p. 467, provide that every court of record may punish summarily, for the publication of false or grossly inaccurate reports of its proceedings.

The Penna. Act of Assembly of June 16, 1836, provides that no publication out of court, respecting the conduct of the court or any of its officers, jurors, witnesses, or parties in any cause pending in court, exposes the party to summary punishment, and the only remedy for the person aggrieved is by indictment or action at law.

To publish testimony which the court has ordered not to be published when the injury cannot be otherwise redressed. In re Wellesley, 2 Rus. & M. 639.

While proceedings are pending, it is contempt of court to publish anything in reference to the parties to or the subject-matter of a pending litigation, which short, that demonstrates a gross want of that regard and respect which, when once courts of justice are deprived of, their authority is entirely lost among the people.<sup>1</sup> tends to excite a prejudice against those parties or their litigation. Tichborne v. Tichborne, 39 L. J. Ch. 398, 22 L. T. 55. After affidavits filed and before hearing to publish an article attributing falsehood to the persons who have made the affidavits. Felkin v. Herbert, 10 Jur. N. S. 62. See Vernon v. Vernon, 40 L. J. Ch. 118; Tyrone Election Petition in re Macartney v. Corry, 7 Ir. R. Ch. 240; Metzler v. Gounod, 30 L. T. 264; Brook v. Evans, 29 L. J. Ch. 616; 6 Jur. N. S. 1025; Littler v. Thompson, 2 Beav. 129. Advertising for subscriptions to prosecute action not contempt. Plating Co. v. Farquharson, 17 Ch. D. 49. Advertisement for evidence. 17 Ch. D. 49.

1. Interference with Property over which the Court has Supervision.—One who, after an examination concerning his property in proceedings supplementary to execution, and pending the decision of the referee on the creditors' motion that certain property disclosed be ordered turned over, disposes of it, is guilty of contempt, and may be punished accordingly. Ex parte Kellogg, 64 Cal. 343.

The U. S. circuit court will punish for contempt strikers who interfere with a railroad in the hands of the court's receiver. Re Higgins, 27 Fed. Rep. 443.

A master's attempting to remove his slave beyond the jurisdiction of the court pending a petition for freedom, attached for contempt. Richard v. Van Meier, 3 Cranch C. C. 214; Thornton v. Davis, 4 Cranch C. C. 500.

To carry off a ward in chancery, attachment being the only mode of enforcing obedience. Jones, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 237; Littler v. Thomson, 2 Beav. 129; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196.

Where rioters and strikers stopped the trains on a railroad operated by receivers. Secor v. Toledo, etc., R., 4 L. & E. Repr. 283; Re Doolittle, 23 Fed. Rep. 544; U. S. v. Kane, 23 Fed. Rep. 748; Re Wabash R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 217.

Removal of goods pending interpleader. Day v. Carr, 7 Ex. Ch. 883.

Interference with receiver in bankruptcy held a contempt. Hayward, Ex parte, etc., 45 L. T. 326.

Other Improper or Unfair Practices.—It is contempt to write and send to a grand jury an accusatory, threatening, and insulting letter relative to the subject of their investigation. Ex parte Tyler, 64 Cal. 434.

Unfair practice towards a witness who is to give testimony in court, or oppression under color of its process, although those practices and that oppression were acted out of the district in which the court is sitting; provided the person who has thus demeaned himself should come within the jurisdiction of the court. U. S. v. Burr, 1 Burr's Trial, 355.

To obtain an opinion of the court affecting the rights of persons, not parties, to the pretended controversy, declared punishable as contempt of court. Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. (U. S.) 251; Cleveland v. Chamberlain, 1 Black (U. S.) 419.

False personation and perjury as a surety. Com. v. Davis, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 18.

Proposing to a juror to signal from the window of the jury-room how the jury stand with regard to the verdict. State v. Doty, 32 N. J. 403; Reg. v. Martin, 5 Cox C. C. 356.

A purchaser at a master's sale, under decree of court, may be attached for non-compliance with the terms. Haeg v. Commissioner, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 112; Brasher v. Cortlandt, 2 Johns Ch. (N. Y.) 505.

It is a contempt for a witness or a bystander to communicate with a grand juror touching a complaint under examination before them without their request. Bergh's Case, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 266. Speaking disrespectfully, or publishing in a newspaper defamatory notices concerning them, is a contempt. Van Hook's Case, 3 City Hall Rec. (N. Y.) 64; Matter of Spooner, 5 City Hall Rec. (N. Y.) 109. But see Story v. People, 79 Ill. 45.

A contempt of court, where a habeas corpus is pending for the custody of a child, to advise the respondent, by telegram, to avoid the process of the court; such contempt, however, is only punishable by fine. Com. v. Curtis, 37 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 83.

The disturbance of a meeting of examiners in an election case will be punished as a contempt. Ex parte Roach, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 440.

If one procures a witness already subpoenaed to absent himself from the trial in disobedience to the subpoena. Burk v. State, 47 Md. 528; McConnell v.

4. Instances of what are not Contempts.—A disobedience of an order of a court which had no jurisdiction—where there is want of authority.<sup>1</sup> Acting against an erroneous order of court.<sup>2</sup> An offence to the court where there is another remedy.<sup>3</sup> The non-ap-

State, 46 Ind. 298; Com. v. Braynard, Thatcher Crim. Cas. (Mass.), 148.

Barrister threatening master. Curtis v. Bligh, 3 Jur. 1152.

Disobedience to orders. Spokes v. Banbury, etc., 35 L. J. Ch. 105; Cardigan (Earl) v. Bywater, 7 C. B. 794; Wellend, Ex parte, 11 C. B. 544; Clare v. Blakesley, 1 Scott N. R. 397; Bowker v. Tebbutt, 2 D. & L. 787; Blade v. Gray, 6 Jur. 587; Stokes v. Woodson, 7 T. R. 6; Welch v. Buck, 10 W. R. 714; Harvey v. Hall, 11 L. R. Eq. 31, and 23 L. T. 391; Rogers v. Rogers, 23 L. T. 796; Gumpertz v. Best, 1 T. & C. 619; Cobbett v. Hudson, 13 Q. B. 457; Harvey v. Morris, 23 W. R. 21.

1. Unless the court making an order had jurisdiction of the case the disobedience of the order will not be punished as a contempt. Evans v. Pack, 7 Repr. (Mich.) 70; In re Morton, 10 Mich. 208; Bear v. Cohen, 65 N. Car. 511. Meddling with property constructively attached is not a contempt under Rev. Stat. § 725. Steam Stone Cutter Co v. Windsor Mfg. Co., 3 Fed. Repr. 298; 18 Blatchf. C. C. 291.

Property held by a constable having been seized by him without a warrant, on arresting one charged with felony is not in the custody of the law, in such sense as to render replevying it a contempt of court. Brent v. Beck, 5 Cranch C. C. 461.

Where, as in New York, the statute makes it a criminal contempt wilfully to disobey "a process or order lawfully issued or made" by a court of record, disobedience in obeying a subpoena issued by the district attorney in a criminal case is not within the statute. Sherwin v. People, 100 N. Y. 351.

A witness summoned before a grand jury, not at the request of that body, but on the motion of the attorney-general, is summoned without authority, and if he refuses to testify, is not punishable as for a contempt. State v. Marner, 13 Lea (Tenn.), 52.

One must be personally served with an order before he can be charged with contempt in not obeying it. McCaulay v. Palmer, 40 Hun (N. Y.), 38; Sanford v. Sanford, 40 Hun (N. Y.), 540.

2. Where in pursuance of a decree of the supreme court of the United States an injunction had been issued forbidding the rebuilding of a bridge, and subsequent to the decree but before the injunction an act of Congress had been passed making lawful such rebuilding, a majority of the court held that the re-erection of the bridge in disobedience of the injunction was not a contempt. State of Pennsylvania v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 421.

Where upon an appeal from a decree declaring a patent to be infringed, and an order enjoining such infringement and a judgment of contempt for violation of such injunction, the patent is declared invalid, it follows that there has been no contempt. Worden v. Searls, 121 U. S. 14.

3. The rule for an attachment was discharged, the offence being indictable at common law. In re Lucas Hirst, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 216. The orphans' court will not attach for the non-production of an alleged will; the party aggrieved must resort to his statutory remedy. McDonald's Est., 38 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 34.

Attachment for contempt for insufficient answers to interrogatories refused; more specific answers ordered. Grede v. Ins. Co., 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 438.

A husband will not be punished as for contempt in not paying costs and counsel-fees which, in an action for a separation, he was ordered to pay; an execution affords the appropriate remedy. Jacquin v. Jacquin, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 378.

The Atlantic Mutual Life Ins. Co. was adjudicated bankrupt upon the petition of one of its officers. The adjudication was subsequently set aside and the proceedings vacated. Upon application of the marshal for an order requiring the petitioner to pay the marshal's fees for serving the notices, and that such order be enforced by attachment, held, that the court had no power to grant an attachment in such a case; that the marshal had an adequate remedy by action, to which he must resort. Re Atlantic Mutual Life Ins. Co., 17 Bankr. Reg. 368.

Under art. 635 et seq., La. Code, the proper remedy where one refuses to deliver up property called for by a writ of possession is by an action for damages or by distraint of other property. Where pearance of the governor of the commonwealth in his official capacity to a subpoena duces tecum.<sup>1</sup> The refusal to appear when such refusal is the assertion of a constitutional right.<sup>2</sup> For further instances see notes.<sup>3</sup>

a writ of sequestration has been issued in a succession cause, a stranger refusing to deliver up movable property alleged by a party to be in his possession cannot lawfully be committed therefor as for contempt of court, and if so committed he will be released on certiorari and habeas corpus. Re Hero, 36 La. Ann. 352. (Bermudez, C. J., and Manning, J., dissenting.)

1. For failure of governor or secretary of commonwealth to appear in official capacity in obedience to a subpoena duces tecum. Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 23.

2. Refusal to attend before a grand jury in assertion of a constitutional right. People v. Kelley, 24 N. Y. 74.

One exempt from jury-service by reason of his membership in a military company is not guilty of contempt if, having been summoned, he does not attend to make excuses. Lewis, P. J., dissenting. Miller v. Commonwealth, 80 Va. 33.

3. H. filed a libel against I. and a yacht to recover possession of the yacht; a decree was rendered dismissing the libel, and authorizing I. to give a bond and receive possession of the vessel from the marshal, and also authorizing H. to give a bond and receive such possession in case I. failed to do so. I. not giving the bond, H. gave it and received the vessel; H. also appealed from the decree, and the return was duly made to the circuit court. I. then took the vessel by force from one of the sureties on the bond, to whom H. had delivered her. H. then applied for an attachment against I. for contempt of court. Held, that the giving of the bond substituted the bond for the vessel, and the taking of her by I. after the bond had been given was not a contempt of court. U. S. v. Towns, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 444.

A receiver was appointed in New York of the assets of a firm that had property there and in Pennsylvania. The receiver took possession of the New York property, and one of the firm delivered to him the Pennsylvania property, and then confessed judgments under which certain firm creditors seized it. It did not appear that the debts on which the confessions were based were not just debts of the firm. Held, that the partner so acting was not guilty of a contempt of the authority of the court appointing the receiver. O'Callaghan v. Fraser, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 483.

It is not a contempt which the city court of New York has power to punish for defendant to put in a verified answer, known to be false, in order to obtain delay to put property out of the way and thus defeat the collection of plaintiff's judgment. Moffat v. Herman, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 107, reversing s. c., 17 Abb. (N. Y.) 62.

An executor because of insolvency failing to pay a debt due from himself to the testator cannot be proceeded against as for a contempt, the statute making him liable, and providing that he may be ordered by decree to pay over. Rugg v. Jenks, 4 Demorest (N. Y.), 105.

Presenting an affidavit for a change of venue, on the ground of prejudice in the mind of the judge, is not a contempt of the court to which it is presented. Ex parte Curtis, 3 Minn. 274.

For a witness to leave court when permitted by the party summoning him. State v. Nixon, Wright (Ohio), 763.

If the order of the court disobeyed were doubtful, or could be construed in any way consistent with innocence of intention on the part of the violator, the court should not punish for contempt. Weeks v. Smith, 3 Abb. P. R. 211.

Under statutes of New York it is not a contempt for a witness to refuse to answer before a justice of the peace. Rutherford v. Holmes, 5 Hun, 317. For cases arising under Inter. Rev. Acts see U. S. v. Stanwood, 13 Int. Rev. Rec. 77, and Bright, Dig. Fed. Dec. Supp., tit. "Contempt."

Where a judgment is rendered removing an official from office, and another is appointed to the vacancy knowing that a supersedeas has issued, the appointee is not guilty of contempt for assuming to perform the duties of the office where the writ has not been lodged in the office of the clerk of the court where the record remains. Until so lodged the writ is inoperative. Foster v. Kansas, 112 U. S. 201.

If the judges of the circuit court disagree as to whether there has been an

5. Proceedings in Contempt.<sup>1</sup>—From the distinction between direct contempts or contempts in facie curiæ and constructive or consequential contempts, arises a difference in the method of procedure thereon: a direct contempt, which is committed in the presence of the court, it will of its own motion notice and punish summarily;<sup>2</sup> infringement of a patent in disregard of an injunction, there cannot be a judgment of contempt. California, etc., Co. v. Molitor, 113 U. S. 609.

A violation of an injunction, induced by the stratagem of the plaintiff, is not ground for an attachment. Sparkman v. Higgins, 2 Blatchf. C. C. 29

A probate judge has no power to imprison a person for contempt in refusing to deliver to a receiver money found on proceedings in aid of execution to have been placed in his hands in fraud of creditors. White v. Gates, 42 Ohio St. 109.

Advertising for subscriptions to prosecute action, and also for evidence. Plating Co. v. Farquharson, 17 Ch. D 49.

An attorney advised his client who was under indictment for assault and battery, if he could not procure a continuance to escape and forfeit his recognizance, which would work a continuance. Held, he was not guilty of contempt in giving such advice. Ingle v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 574.

A receiver of a railway was in the habit of making deposits with a bank designated by the court as a bank of deposit in such cases. The officers of the bank wrecked it, being guilty of gross malfeasance in office, and these deposits were lost. Held, that the officers were not liable for contempt of court. Southern Development Co. v. Houston & Texas Central R. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 344. See Re Western, etc., Ins. Co., 38 Ill. 289.

The failure of a prisoner under recognizance to appear at the proper time and place does not constitute a contempt of court. Ex parte Dill, 32 Kan. 668; s. c., 49 Am. Repr. 505.

It is not contempt of court to serve a person while attending at the court as a party in a cause, or as a witness, with a summons. The privilege extends to exemption from arrest, and no further. Blight v. Fisher, Peter's C. C. 41.

A rule for contempt for failure to pay money into court will be discharged when it is made apparent that there is an absolute inability to make the payment, but this must clearly appear. Smith v. Smith, 92 N. Car. 304.

Perjury is not a contempt of court. Fenner, J., dissenting. State v. Lazarus, 37 La. Ann. 314.

Sending an insulting or threatening letter to a judge after the matter has been decided, is not contempt. 2 M. & A. 311.

To criticise in a newspaper the ruling of a judge in a case not pending is not contempt. Contra if pending. Ex parte Poulson, 15 Haz. Pa. Reg. 380.

Where the statute authorizes the court to punish for a criminal contempt a person guilty of a wilful disobedience to its lawful mandates, a juror cannot be so punished who acquires information out of the court-room pending a trial, no injunction or order having been given by the court. People v. Oyer & Terminer Court, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 277.

A mere omission to plead where the objection of the bill is to compel an answer is no contempt. Perrin v. Oliver, 1 Minn. 202.

1. As to the practice in proceedings for contempt, see Comm. v. Snowden, 1 Brews (Pa.) 218; Pierce v. Post, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 494.

2. Comm. v. Davis, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 18; Comm. v. Curtis, 37 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 83.

When a judge in the legitimate exercise of his jurisdiction is defiantly disobeyed, he may commit the offender instantly to prison for contempt of court. Watt v. Ligertwood, 2 L. R. H. L. 361.

When a contempt is committed in the presence of the court, the court has immediate jurisdiction of the person of the offender, and although he leaves the courtroom and absconds before any action had, yet the court may in his absence sentence him for contempt, and may do it within any reasonable time before the end of the term, and without process issued for his arrest; and in case of such contempt the offender may be instantly apprehended and imprisoned at the discretion of the court. Middlebrook v. State, 43 Conn. 257. Where one in open court is ordered to execute an assignment and refuses to do so, no rule to show cause is necessary in proceedings against him for contempt. Tolman v. Jones, 14 Ill. 147; Wilson, In re, 7 Q. B. 984; 14 L. J. Q. B. 201; 9 Jur. 394; Crawford, In re, 13 Q. B. 613.

those not so committed, as well as constructive contempts, must usually be brought before the court by affidavits,<sup>1</sup> and thereupon a rule is made on the offender to appear and answer, or a rule to show cause why an attachment should not issue against him;<sup>2</sup> only in very flagrant instances of contempt the attachment issues in the first instance.<sup>3</sup> In general, personal service of a rule to show cause why an attachment should not issue for contempt is necessary. Upon proof that the party evades service, or of other reasons, the court may make a special order that service be made by leaving at the last place of abode, or the like. But it will not proceed with a rule granted in the ordinary way, which has not been personally served, upon mere proof that such service could not be made.<sup>4</sup>

To award an attachment is at the discretion of the judge, or may be awarded on his own knowledge or a bare suggestion.<sup>5</sup> The

Where the sentence of the court adjudicates the contempt, setting forth the facts, a warrant is not essential; an order of court is sufficient. Regina v. Wilson, 51 E. C. L. Rep. 619; Cobbett. In re, 7 Q. B. 187. So, too, if a contempt be committed in the presence of the court an order is sufficient. 8 Conn. 379; 2 Daly (N. Y.). 530.

The summary punishment for contempt is not an infringement of the State constitution which guarantees to the citizen a trial by jury. State v. Doty, 32 N. J. L. 403; State v. Matthews, 37 N. H. 450; Patrick v. Warner, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 397; Neal v. State, 4 Eng. (Ark.) 259; Ex parte Grace, 12 Iowa, 208; State v. Becht, 23 Minn. 411; King v. Railroad, 7 Biss. C. C. 329.

Where the court cannot exercise a summary jurisdiction over a party who is not one of its own officers, although the matter is pending there. Sharp v. Hawkes, 5 D. P. C. 186.

1. When the contempt is not committed in facie curiæ, it must be proved by affidavits of persons who witnessed it; a clear case must be shown. Re Judson, 3 Blatchf. C. C. 148.

A substantial and general statement in the affidavit is sufficient to give jurisdiction. Strait v. Williams, 18 Nev. 43.

To sustain a motion for contempt on account of the violation of an injunction issued to restrain the infringement of a patent, it must appear clearly and indisputably that the infringement continues. Smith v. Halkyard, 19 Fed. Rep. 602.

2. In cases of contempt of an inferior court in usurping jurisdiction, "it seems to be rather the more usual way, first to award a writ of prohibition to such court, and afterwards an attachment upon its proceeding after such prohibition. 2 Hawk. P. C. 217; Reg. v. Lefroy, 8 Q. B. 131; 4 Moak, 250; Exp. Swenarton, 40 N. Y. 40.

The resignation of his office by an officer of the court does not oust the court of jurisdiction to proceed against him by attachment for contempt for any acts of misconduct committed by him while in office. The Laurens, 1 Abb. Adm. 508; People v. Pearson, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 189.

3. 4 Blk. 287; 2 Hawk. 222; 1 Tidd's Prac. (3d Am. Ed.) 38; In re Judson, 3 Blatchf. C. C. 148; Comm. v. Dandridge, 2 Va. Cas. 408; State v. Mather, 37 N. H. 450; Clay's Case, Pr. Dec. 221; Crow v. State, 24 Tex. 12. And even some constructive contempts the court will take notice of and punish of its own motion. Exp. Steinman et al., 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 145.

4. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141.

When the officers of the company (a corporation) conceal themselves to prevent service upon them, hehl, that service upon one who has repeatedly appeared as an attorney of the company was sufficient. Golden Gate Mining Co. v. Yuba Co. Superior Ct., 65 Cal. 187.

5. Bowery Bank v. Richards, 6 Thompson (N. Y.), 59; 3 Hun (N. Y.), 366. In chancery it is discretionary with the court whether or not to issue an attachment for contempt without the service of a preliminary order to show cause. Rob v. Pepper, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 407.

A judge on the rota, sitting in chambers, has no jurisdiction to commit for contempt. Tryon Election Petition, In re, Macartney v. Correy, 7 Ir. R. C. L. 242.

The practice must always be strict in the process of attachment is only to bring the party into court;<sup>1</sup> if he is present in court the process is not necessary,<sup>2</sup> otherwise it is indispensable that the accused be arrested or summoned, except in cases of contempt in facie curiæ.<sup>3</sup> When brought in either by attachment or the rule to appear, or the rule to show cause, he is committed or bailed that he may answer on oath interrogatories in the nature of a charge or accusation touching the alleged contempt,<sup>4</sup> and he may demand that the prosecutor file interrogatories.

steps before an attachment is awarded, and all the documents upon which it is awarded must be filed with the court. U. S. v. Caldwell, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 333.

On a motion for an attachment for contempt in a civil suit the proceedings are deemed to be on the civil side of the court until the court directs an attachment; and the papers until then must be entitled with the names of the parties. If the rule to show cause is entitled in behalf of the government, as in criminal proceedings, the defendant on objecting is entitled to have it vacated. U. S. v. Wayne, Wall. C. C. 134.

An attachment issued without a previous rule to show cause was irregular, and set aside. Frey's Estate, 4 W. N. C. (Pa.) 415; May's Est., 10 L. Bar. 22.

Rule for an attachment for non-payment of alimony cannot be served in another jurisdiction. Russell v. Russell, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 156.

An attachment does not authorize the marshal to detain the party after return day, unless upon an order of commitment by the court. Ex parte Burford, 1 Cranch C. C. 456. The proper practice to punish for contempt in violating an injunction is by motion to commit, upon proper notice to the parties. Worcester v. Truman, 1 McLean C. C. 483; Gray v. Railroad, 1 Woolw. C. C. 63; U. S. v. Berry, 24 Fed. Rep. 730; Folger v. Hoogland, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 235; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 8; Durant v. Supervisors, 1 Woolw. 372; Winslow v. Narpon, 113 Mass. 411; McDermott v. Clav, 107 Mass. 501; 5 Duer (N. Y.), 629; 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 209; 16 Ill. 534; 1 Ind. 574; 3 Texas 360; Deeds v. Deeds, 1 Greene (Iowa), 395; 18 Miss. 103; 25 Vt. 680; 20 Conn. 185; 22 E. L. & E. 150; Edwards v. Dykeman, 95 Ind. 509; Comyn's Dig. Attach. (A. 1).

Attachment for contempt in failing to pay over counsel fees will not be granted until order to pay has been served. Waltram v. Waltram, 19 W. N. C. (Pa.) 181.

Motion to commit after motion for leave to issue an attachment. Buist v. Bridge, 43 L. T. 432.

1. Bowery Bank v. Richards, 6 Thompson (N. Y.). 59; s. c., 3 Hun (N. Y.). 366.

2. Though an attachment is the usual process to bring a party into court, where he has not made a true return, yet if he is present in court no such process is necessary, but the court may pass an order directing him immediately to purge his supposed contempt and answer interrogatories. U. S. v. Green, 3 Mass. 482.

3. The arrest and imprisonment must be made by some warrant, mittimus, or act of record, a copy of which ought to be given to the officer committing the offender, for his security. 6 Dane's Abr. 528, ch. 193; 7 Dane's Abr. 307, 8 ch. 220; art. 5.

Officers representing a corporation defendant are not in court for punishment for contempt unless they personally knew of the order the disobedience of which is alleged. Fanshawe v. Tracy, 4 Biss. C. C. 490.

A person cannot be arrested on attachment from a circuit court in a State outside of the circuit of the court issuing the attachment for contempt in not appearing in that court, pursuant to a motion served on him in the former circuit to answer in a prize cause. The circuit courts have a jurisdiction which is limited in respect to locality in reference to the person or thing against whom the court proceeds, and the just construction of the judicial system of the United States confines the process of the courts within the limits of the circuit or district in which he is required to appear. Moreover there is no provision of law for the removal of a person so arrested to the circuit or district in which he is required to appear. Ex parte Graham, 3 Wash. C. C. 456.

Persons guilty of contempt may be arrested at any time thereafter when they come within the jurisdiction of the court. Bowery Bank v. Richards, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.); s. c., 3 Hun (N. Y.). 366. Even though the contempt were committed out the jurisdiction. 1 Burr's Trial. 352.

4. Bowery Bank v. Richards, 6 Thompson (N. Y.), 59 and 3 Hun (N. Y.), 366.

If by his answers on oath to these he purges himself from criminality, he must be discharged.<sup>1</sup> But interrogatories cannot be forced upon him.<sup>2</sup> If he will not ask them, and the contempt is proved by affidavit or other testimony of the prosecutor, the court will give judgment against him.<sup>3</sup> If a mere acknowledgment of the fact of a contempt will give the court all needful information (as in the case of a rescous), the defendant may be admitted to make such acknowledgment and receive his judgment without answering interrogatories; but if he wilfully and obstinately refuses to answer, or answers in an evasive manner, he is then guilty of a high and repeated contempt.<sup>4</sup>

The party is entitled to be heard, but must appear in proper person, and not by attorney;<sup>5</sup> he has no right to be heard by coun-

1. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141.

The appellate court, where counsel has been adjudged guilty of contemptuous language, etc., in open court, will not accept counsel's statement of the language used, as opposed to the judge's statement placed on the record, as required by the statute. Holman v. State, 105 Ind. 513.

Disobedience of an order is none the less punishable as a contempt because the act complained of was committed in the belief or under advice that the order did not prohibit it. Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. 9 Fed. Rep. 316, 20 Pat. Off. Gaz. 1380, 12 Repr. 517.

If an inability to pay money in compliance with an order of court existing at the time when the order to pay is disobeyed, is relied upon to excuse the disobedience, it must be set up in answer to the application for an attachment. Defendant will not be discharged from a commitment on allegation of such inability. If, however, the defendant has become an insolvent debtor since the commitment and his property has been transferred to a trustee in insolvency, the court should discharge him from the commitment for contempt, because these facts would create a legal inability to comply with the order to pay. Wartman v. Wartman, Taney C. C. 362.

In a proceeding for contempt against a judgment debtor for failing to comply with the judgment, a satisfaction by the plaintiff and an assignee of the judgment on file and of record, is a sufficient answer to the charge of contempt made by one not a party to the suit, but who claims under another assignment of the judgment, the alleged priority of which is disputed. Ex parte Tibble, 67 Cal. 261.

An order of the court is necessary for the discharge, under the Debtors' Act, 1869, s. 4, of persons who have been imprisoned twelve months for contempt of court for not paying money into court, which they had been ordered to pay. Thompson, In re, Nalty v. Aylett, 43 L. J. Ch. 721.

One who by marrying again in another State, in defiance of a decree of divorce, has rendered himself unable to pay the alimony ordered, is entitled to no consideration when proceeded against for contempt, and his inability to pay constitutes no excuse. Ryer v. Ryer, 33 Hun (N. Y.), 116.

Upon a rule issued against an attorney for contempt of court he cannot be punished for general misbehavior in his office of attorney. He cannot be called upon to answer an offence specified, and when the answer comes in without any further notice or opportunity of defence or explanation, be punished for another and distinct offence. Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 364.

2. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141.

3. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141.

Appeal lies from refusal to commit. Ashworth v. Outram, 5 Ch. D. 943; Jarmain v. Chatterton, 20 Ch. Div. 493.

4. U. S. v. Dodge, 2 Gall. C. C. 313.

5. When a contempt is committed out of court, final judgment thereon cannot be rendered without an opportunity for a hearing. Ex parte Kilgore, 3 Texas Ct. App. 247. See McConnell v. State, 46 Md. 298; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196; Ex parte Wiley, 36 Ind. 528; Pollard, In re, 2 L. R. P. C. 106.

In matters of favor equity may refuse a hearing to one in contempt. Pickett v. Ferguson, 45 Ark. 177; Pollard, In re, 2 L. R. P. C. 106.

6. Vin. Abr. Contempt F. 7; People

sel.<sup>1</sup> nor has he any right to a trial by jury.<sup>2</sup> When in a court of equity he has answered the interrogatories on oath, his answers may be contradicted and disproved by affidavits of the adverse party; whereas in courts of law if he clears himself by his answers the complaint is totally dismissed.<sup>3</sup>

The offence must be judicially established before final judgment can be rendered.<sup>4</sup> A party in contempt may protect himself and make any motion designed to show that an order adjudging him in contempt was erroneous.<sup>5</sup>

Where a party is ordered to pay a sum of money and committed by way of enforcing such order, the commitment is in the nature of a capias ad satisfaciendum, and if unable to pay, he may be discharged as insolvent; but he cannot be discharged on this ground where his contempt is wilful; he is then in the position of one fined on conviction of a criminal offence.<sup>6</sup> When a party is

v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 195; Vertner v. Martin, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 103.

1. And it has been held in Alabama that he has no constitutional or statutory right to be heard by counsel in the matter of contempt. Ex parte Hamilton, 51 Ala. 66.

2. Nor under the constitution of the United States has he any right to a trial by a jury. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141. See also U. S. v. Oswald, 1 Dal. C. C. 319.

3. 4 Blk. 288. See Thomas' Lessee v. Cummings, 1 Yeates (Pa.), 40; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196; Buck v. Buck, 60 Ill. 105; Stuart v. People, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 395; U. S. v. Dodge, 2 Gall. C. C. 313; Cartwright's Case, 14 Mass. 230. Process of contempt in chancery has in England been regulated by a number of modern statutes. 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV. 4 c. 36; 2 and 3 Wm. IV. c. 58; 23 and 24 Wm. IV. c. 149.

4. Anderson v. Knox Co., 70 Ill. 65.

5. Brinkley v. Brinkley, 47 N. Y. 40; Halden v. Eckford, L. R. 7 Eq. 425.

A commissioner to make sale of realty, ordered (to be) imprisoned for alleged contempt in failing to pay over money under what was a void decree, is entitled to have the order reviewed. Ruhl v. Ruhl, 24 W. Va. 279. See Garston v. Garston, 4 S. & T. 73; Cavendish v. Cavendish et al., 15 W. R. 182.

6. Matter of Watson, 3 Lansing (N. Y.), 408; Ex parte Hilles, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 419; Stevenson's Est., 7 W. N. C. (Pa.) 65; Wilson v. State, 57 Ind. 71; United States v. Wayne, Wall. Sr. 134; People v. Craft, 7 Paige (N. Y.), 325; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196; Crook v. People, 16

Ill. 534; Pitt v. Davison, 37 N. Y. 235; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 38; Case of Crosby, 3 Wilson 188; Clark v. People, 1 Breeze (S. Car.), 266. See Stuart v. People, 4 Ill. 395; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Ex parte Adams, 25 Miss. 883; Gorham v. Luckett, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 638; Watson v. Williams, 36 Miss. 331; In re Moore, 63 N. Car. 397; State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.); Matter of Stephens, 1 Ga. 584.

Many acts are both contempts of court and indictable crimes; others, while analogous to contempts in their nature and tendencies, are indictable, but no more. Reg. v. Gray, 10 Cox C. C. 184; State v. Early, 3 Harring. (Del.) 562. The indictment and the proceeding for contempt are entirely distinct, and neither will be a bar to the other. 1 Bish. Cr. L. § 264, § 1067; State v. Woodfin, 5 Ired. (Ky.) 199; State v. Williams, 2 Speers (S. Car.), 26; Rex v. Pierson, Andr. 310. See Vertner v. Martin, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 103; Foster v. Com., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 77.

Ex parte contempt of court being a criminal offence, no person can be punished for such unless the specific offence charged against him is distinctly stated, and an opportunity given him of answering. Pollard, In re, 2 L. R. P. C. 106. Hrounsall Cowp. 829; In re King, 8 Q. B. 129; In re Wright, 1 Exch. 653; Reg. v. Martin, 5 Cox C. C. 356.

Indictment.—Words "in contempt," etc., necessary in. 1 Biss C. P. 647. Attachments for contempt generally partake of the nature of criminal rather than civil arrests. An arrest for contempt made on Sunday not contrary to 29 Car. II. ch. 7, § 6 prohibiting arrest on Sunday, committed for contempt the adjudication of the court is conviction, and the commitment in consequence thereof is execution.<sup>1</sup>

6. The Penalty for Contempt is usually fine or imprisonment, or both, at the discretion of the court.<sup>2</sup> The commitment, like the contempts themselves, may be properly distributed into two save for treason, felony, or breach of the peace. A contempt is in the nature of breach of the peace. Ex parte Whitchurch, 1 Atk. 55. A statute prohibiting the arrest of women on any mesne process or process of execution does not apply to attachments for contempt. Clark v. Grant, 38 N. J. L. 257.

Contempts are of two kinds—civil and criminal. A criminal contempt is of the nature of a breach of the peace, and hence a member of Parliament is not privileged from a commitment for a criminal contempt. Mr. Long Wellesley's Case, 2 Russ & My. 667; Catmus v. Knatchbull, 7 T. R. 448; Walker v. Lord Geo. Grosvenor, 7 T. R. 171.

A witness committed for contempt for disorderly behavior in court is privileged while returning at the expiration of his imprisonment. R. v. Wigley, 7 Car. & P. 4.

1. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 38.

In a commitment for contempt by a superior court it is not necessary to set out on the warrant the cause of commitment; contra as to an inferior court, "to which credit is not to be given for conforming itself to the appointed limits of its jurisdiction," and whose proceedings must therefore be set forth to show that they are regular and authorized. Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 3, 40. See also Doyle v. Falconer, L. R. 1 P. C. 328; 2 Hawk. P. C. 168; Howard v. Gossett, 10 Ad. & E. (N. S.) 359; Cams Wilson's Case, 7 A. & E. (N. S.) 1018.

A justice of the peace cannot commit for a contempt without a warrant in writing. Mayhew v. Locke, 2 Marsh. 37.

In proceedings in equity between parties to the suit for contempt in not obeying an order in the cause, the fine for such contempt can be imposed by an order made in the original suit. Fisher v. Hayes, 6 Fed. Rep. 63.

An order adjudging defendant to be in contempt for non-payment of alimony directed by final decree to be paid, must adjudge that the failure of defendant to pay such alimony has defeated, impaired, impeded, or prejudiced the rights or remedies of plaintiff. Mendel v. Mendel, 25 N. Y. W. Dig. 314.

A person committed for contempt cannot be bailed. 20 Am. L. Reg. 44.

The process of attachment for contempt seems to be as ancient as the laws themselves, and was confirmed as a part of the laws of the land by Magna Charta. 4 Blk. Comm. 286.

The acts of 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV. c. 36. and 23 and 24 Vict. 149. make provisions for the relief of prisoners in contempt of the court of chancery; and as to the ecclesiastical courts, see 2 and 3 Wm. IV. c. 93. and 3 and 4 Vict. c. 93. and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38.

2. Cartwright's Case, 114 Mass. 238; 7 Cranch, 32 & 34; U. S. v. Mann, 2 Brock. 9; In re Pitman, 1 Curtis C. C. 186; Yates v. Lansing, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 395; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 203; Hills v. Parker, 111 Mass. 508. "And sometimes by corporeal or infamous punishment." 4 Blk. Com. 287. And see People v. Bennett, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 282.

An order adjudging contempt, and directing proceedings to ascertain what amount should be imposed as a fine, does not prevent the court from subsequently fixing the amount and directing commitment until it is paid. Fisher v. Hayes, 6 Fed. Rep. 63; 19 Blatchf. C. C. 13; 20 Pat. Off. Gaz. 601. If the punishment imposed exceeds that permitted in the case of a criminal contempt, it must be presumed on habeas corpus that the court proceeded under the law relating to civil contempts; and if the order fails to show the facts required by the statute, there must be a discharge. Ex parte Swenarton, 40 Hun (N. Y.), 41. An order which in effect is merely a final judgment for the payment of money, whether the proceeding in which it is made is of equitable or legal cognizance, ought not to be enforced by imprisonment, upon the theory of treating non-payment as a contempt. Re Hellmar, 17 Bankr. Reg. 262; Re Atlantic Mut. L. Ins. Co., 17 Bankr. Reg. 368.

While the court may order one into imprisonment until he shall have returned certain property, it cannot fine and imprison him by way of punishment, nor imprison him until he shall have paid the costs of the contempt proceedings, as this would be imprisonment for debt, which the Missouri Constitution prohibits. Ex parte Crenshaw, 80 Mo. 447.

classes: either they are the punishment for an act of misconduct, or it is their object to enforce the performance of a duty. The confinement in the one case is for a fixed time, supposed to be commensurate with the offending; in the other it is without prescribed limitation, and is determined by the willingness of the party to submit himself to the law.<sup>1</sup> The period of the imprisonment may reach beyond the term at which the contempt was committed.<sup>2</sup> Imprisonment for non-payment of a fine imposed for contempt is not a punishment, but an incident to the power to fine.<sup>3</sup>

The imposition of a fine for contempt is a judgment in a criminal case, which the court has no power to vary, after the expiration of the term at which the fine was imposed.<sup>4</sup> A contempt of a court of the United States is an offence against the United States, and after the offender has been adjudicated in contempt and committed in punishment thereof, or until payment of a fine imposed therefor, his case is subject to the pardoning power of the president.<sup>5</sup>

The punishment for certain contempts, such as the disobedience of an order of court for the payment of costs, the non-performance of the awards of arbitrators, or, in short, the refusal of a party to do something which he is ordered to do for the benefit or advan-

1. United States v. Williamson, 4 Am. L. Reg. 17; Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. 23, 24; Commonwealth v. Small, 26 Pa. St.

For any direct and positive contempt a defendant may be committed during the pleasure of the court, for disobedience of an order, till he obey. Tom's Appeal, 50 Pa. St. 285.

A witness refusing to answer may be committed till he answer. Lott v. Burrell, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 167; People v. Phelps, 4 Thompson (N. Y.), 467. A witness was committed for contempt in refusing to answer questions, to remain committed until she should make answer to such legal and proper interrogatories "as shall be propounded to her," etc. Held, that the commitment was invalid; that it should have been limited to the time when she should be willing to answer the questions actually propounded. People v. Davidson, 35 Hun (N. Y.), 471.

When the only statute in relation to the examination of insolvent debtors provides that if the debtor refuses to appear he may be committed for not more than five days, and that any witness refusing to appear may be punished as for a contempt a witness may not be committed for more than five days. Cole v. Egan, 52 Conn. 219.

Commitment till further order of court is good. Yates' Case, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 317; Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. 24; Tom's

App. 30 Pa. St. 285. Contra, In re Alexander, 2 A. L. Reg. 44; Matter of Hammel, 9 R. I. 248.

Warrant of commitment "to remain until further order of this court" is good. Green v. Elgie, 5 Q. B. 99. See Republic of Costa Rica, v. Erlanger, 46 L. J. Ch. 375.

2. Ex parte Maulsby, 13 Md. 642.

3. Imprisonment for non-payment of a fine imposed for contempt is not a punishment, but an incident to the power to fine, and properly authorized. Ex parte Sweeney, 18 Nev. 74. When a statute authorizes or prescribes the infliction of a fine as a punishment for a contempt of court, it is lawful for the court inflicting it to direct that the party stand committed until the fine is paid, although there is no specific affirmative grant of power in the statute to make such direction. U. S. v. Conway, 6 Fed. Rep. 49.

4. Fisher v. Hayes, 6 Fed. Rep. 63. See Matter of Rodes, 65 N. Car. 518; Morris v. Whitehead, 65 N. Car. 637.

5. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 38. As the pardoning power vested in the president is exclusive, it follows that the court cannot remit the penalty or discharge the offender from imprisonment upon proof of his inability to pay the fine. Re Mullee, 7 Blatchf. C. C. 23; 1 Am. L. T. U. S. Cts. 123; 8 Int. Rev. Rec. 23.

tage of the opposite party, is rather to be looked upon as a civil execution for the benefit of the injured party,<sup>1</sup> though carried on in the shape of a criminal process for a contempt of the court, for which reason, being civil, is not affected by a general act of pardon.<sup>2</sup> The order in such case is not punitive, but coercive.<sup>3</sup>

7. Purging.—Although a contempt have been committed, the defendant has the privilege of purging it if he can, on interrogatories put to him.<sup>4</sup> If he declares that nothing improper was intended and that he acted in good faith, the declaration is in many instances sufficient.<sup>5</sup> Where he relies on an excuse he must

1. Buck v. Buck, 60 Ill. 105; Phillips v. Welch, 11 Nev. 187; 4 Blk. 285; Howard v. Durand, 36 Ga. 346; Tom's Appeal, 50 Pa. St. 285; Robins v. Gorman, 25 N. Y. 588; Androscoggin v. Androscoggin R. Co., 49 Me. 392.

Where the statutes of Michigan order the payment to an injured party, the imposition of a criminal fine in addition is unlawful. Haines v. Haines, 35 Mich. 138.

Where an attorney is required by order of court to pay the costs to which his client was unjustly subjected, growing out of the resistance of the attorney to the substitution of a new one, the payment of such costs may be enforced by an attachment for contempt, notwithstanding the abolition of imprisonment for debt. Bogart v. Electrical Supply Co., 23 Blatchf. C. Ct. 552; s. c., 27 Fed. Rep. 722.

A witness who refuses to answer questions propounded on his examination in a special proceeding, while guilty of a contempt, is not guilty of a criminal contempt. The fine imposed should be limited to the amount necessary to indemnify. King v. Flynn, 37 Hun (N. Y.), 329. The court cannot punish a judgment debtor for contempt in failing to obey an order in supplementary proceedings requiring him to appear and submit to an examination by fining him the full amount of the judgment as indemnity to the judgment creditor, unless it is made to appear that the said creditor has sustained loss or injury to that amount by the failure of the debtor to obey such order. Fall Brook Coal Co. v. Hecksher, 25 N. Y. W. Dig. 351.

The enforcement of civil rights and remedies by means of proceedings for contempt is forbidden by the statutes of Arkansas.

In New York the power to enforce a civil remedy by proceedings as for contempts exists under 2 Rev. St. 534, 538. People v. Compton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 512; Ludlow v. Knox, Abb. App. Dec. 326.

2. Buck v. Buck, 60 Ill. 105; Phillips v. Welch, 11 Nev. 187; 4 Blk. 285.

3. Howard v. Durand, 36 Ga. 346; Tome's App., 50 Pa. St. 285; Robins v. Gorman, 25 N. Y. 588. Androscoggin, etc., R. Co. v. Androscoggin, etc., R. Co. 49 Me. 392.

Where the civil rights are concerned, a mandamus may issue from the supreme court to an inferior one to punish for contempt. Ex parte Chamberlain, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 49.

4. Columbia W. P. v. Columbia, 4 Rich. (N. H.) 388; People v. Compton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 512; State v. Coulter, Wright (Ohio), 421; State v. Goff, Wright (Ohio), 78; Coulson v. Graham, 2 Chil. 57; Rex v. Wheeler, 1 W. Bl. 311; Rex v. Morley, 4 A. & E. 849; Matter of Pitman, 1 Curtis C. C. 186; Crow v. State, 24 Tex. 12; State v. Earl, 41 Ind. 464; Burk v. State, 47 Ind. 528.

Where the proceeding is discontinued, the person committed for contempt in not answering as a witness should be discharged, as he can no longer purge his contempt. In re Hall, 10 Mich. 210.

The Iowa Code, §§ 3490, 3496, provides that one charged with contempt, whether in or out of the presence of the court, may make a written explanation. Held, that unless opportunity is given him to do so, a fine cannot lawfully be imposed even for insulting conduct in the court's presence. Russell v. French, 67 Iowa, 102.

5. People v. Few, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 290; St. Clair v. Piatt, Wright (Ohio), 532. And see State v. Trumbull, 1 Southard (N. J.), 139; Ex parte Beebees, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 127; Ex parte Woodruff, 4 Pike (Ark.), 630; Clare v. Blakesly, 1 Scott N. R. 393; Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141; Spink v. Francis, 19 Fed. Rep. 678.

On an attachment for contempt the court will not hear collateral evidence, but if the respondent by oath discharge himself of the contempt, no proceedings can be had against him. If from collateral evidence appear in court in his own person;<sup>1</sup> he is made his own witness in his own cause. If he be innocent he will have no trouble in disclaiming the contempt and avowing his innocence. The question is the quo animo. His purpose is known to himself, and he is permitted to purge himself by his own avowal;<sup>2</sup> usually his answer must be taken as true, and cannot be traversed; the answer, however, must be credible and consistent with itself, or the court may draw its own inferences from the facts stated.<sup>3</sup> In courts of chancery, at least, his oath is not conclusive in his favor, but may be contradicted by other evidence.<sup>4</sup> And where private right is to be enforced the party interested cannot be defeated in this way.<sup>5</sup> perjury appears, he will be recognized to answer. U. S. v. Dodge, 2 Gall. C. C. 313.

Where an injunction has been violated and no regret for the wrong done or offer to repair it was made, a mere disavowal of an intentional wrong will not purge it. People v. Freer, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 519; Andrews v. Knox Co., 70 Ill. 65; Watson v. Citizens' Savings Bank, 5 S. Car. 159.

Where a police officer under instructions and order of one of the police commissioners, whom he supposed it was his duty to obey, and meaning no disobedience to the court, committed what would, under ordinary circumstances, have been a contempt, he was allowed to purge. Matter of Felton, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 303.

Where persons have been guilty of a technical contempt (herein violating an injunction), but declare on oath that they were not aware of the violation, and submit to the direction of the court, they will be allowed to purge the contempt by undoing or reversing their acts, if doing so is practicable. Vose v. Reed, 1 Woods C. C. 647.

A sheriff was attached for contempt in not paying over money or neglecting to collect it on execution. Though the contempt would generally be purged only when the injured party was put in as good a position as if the sheriff had done his duty, the court held that he might be discharged on purging himself of contempt and showing inability to pay the money. Ex parte Thurmond, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 605; Ex parte Hilles, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 419.

A stranger to a suit cannot purge himself of contempt in reference to order or process made or issued therein, by showing that the court had no jurisdiction, where the court is one of general jurisdiction and acts within it. Ex parte Stickney, 40 Ala. 160, 169.

Contempt in not performing decree of court may be purged by showing the party's inability to do so. O'Callaghan v. O'Callaghan, 69 Ill. 554.

Words apparently scandalous or offensive, but susceptible of a different construction, may be explained by the speaker or writer, and he be relieved of the charges of contempt on sworn disavowal of intent to commit it. But where the words are necessarily offensive and insulting, such disavowal may excuse but cannot justify. Re Woolley, 11 Bush (Ky.), 95, 110, citing People v. Freer, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 484. See Gould v. Twine, 22 W. R. 398; Britnell v. Walton, 18 W. R. 446; Felkin v. Herbert, 10 Jur. N. S. 62.

1. People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 195; Vertner v. Martin, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 103.

2. Re Woolley, 11 Bush (Ky.), 95, citing Mr. Wirts' argument in the case of Judge Peck before the high court of impeachment.

An unwilling compliance with a decree of a court of equity after service of a writ of attachment for refusing to obey will not purge the contempt; where an injunction is disobeyed, the motive or intent in so doing does not as a rule alter the responsibility. Snowman v. Harford, 57 Me. 397; Reg. v. Weston, 8 Jur. 1122; Reg. v. Hemsworthy, 3 C. B. 745.

3. Re May, Fed. Rep. 737.

A disclaimer of "intentional disrespect or design to embarrass the administration of justice" is no excuse where the contrary would appear on a fair interpretation of the language used. People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 195.

4. Emery v. Bowen, C. J. 5 Ch. (N. S.) 349.

5. People v. Freer, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 485, 518; U. S. v. Coolidge, 2 Gall. C. C. 364; Buffum's Case, 13 N. H. 14; Mungeam v. Wheatly, 1 Eng. L. & E. 516, 15 Jur. 110; People v. Compton, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 512; State v. Simmons, 1 Pike (Ark.), 265. See McClure v. Gulick, 2 Harrison (Md.), 340; Ex parte Chamberlain, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 49.

One who is ordered to pay over money

8. The Power of the Court to Punish for Contempt is exercised for two purposes: 1. To indicate the dignity of the court for disrespect shown to it or its orders.<sup>1</sup> 2. To compel the performance of some order or decree of the court which it is in the power of the party to perform, and which he refuses to obey.<sup>2</sup>

All superior courts or courts of record<sup>3</sup> possess this power, not to the administrator belonging to the estate cannot purge himself of contempt by showing that he has paid it away illegally, or that he has no money. Wise v. Chaney, 67 Iowa, 73.

As regards the question whether a contempt has or has not been committed, it does not depend upon the intention of the party, but upon the act he has done. Wartman v. Wartman, Taney C. C. 362; Gould v. Twine, 22 W. R. 398; Britnell v. Walton, 18 W. R. 446; Reg. v. Weston, 8 Jur. 1122; Reg. v. Hemsworthy, 3 C. B. 745; Rex v. Plunket, 3 Burr. 1329; Felkin v. Herbert, 10 Jur. N. S. 62.

1. Every court has a right to protect itself from any violation of its decency and propriety. Brown v. Brown, 4 Ind. 627; State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 166; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196; Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; Kernodle v. Cason, 25 Ind. 362; Redman v. State, 28 Ind. 205.

2. Although there is no act the performance of which by the defendant is important to be enforced in the interest of the other party, yet a fine may be imposed to indicate the dignity of the court. Re Chiles, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 157; United States v. Jacobi, 4 Am. L. T. 156; 14 Int. Rev. Rec. 45.

Every court has an inherent power to punish for contempt to its rules and orders. State v. Johnson, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 155; Crossart v. State, 14 Ark. 541; Neel v. State, 4 Eng. (Ark.) 263; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 505; United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 32; Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; Brown v. Brown, 4 Ind. 627; State v. Earl, 41 Ind. 464; In re Moore, 63 N. Car. 397; United States v. Dodge, 2 Gall. C. C. 313; Ex parte Kearny, 7 Gall. C. C. 38; Yeates v. Lansing, 9 Gall. C. C. 395; s. c., 6 Gall. C. C. 357; Clark v. People, 1 Ill. 340; Taylor v. Moffett, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 305; Reg. v. Wilkinson, 41 Up. Can. Q. B. 44; Ex parte Jones, 13 Ves. 237; Felkin v. Herbert, 10 Jur. N. S. 62; Tichborne v. Mostyn, L. R. 7 Eq. 55, n.; Reg. v. Castro, L. R. 9 Q. B. 219.

And for constructive contempts. Respublica v. Passmore, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 441; United States v. Oswald, 1 Dall. C. C. 319; Tenney's Case, 23 N. H. 162; Hol- lingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 141; Knott v. People, 83 Ill. 532; s. c., 2 Am. Cr. R. 184.

Upon the refusal of a witness to appear before an examiner, the court will issue an attachment. Bowen v. Thornton, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 575.

An auditor has power to issue an attachment against a witness failing to appear before him after due service of a subpoena. In re Hulburt, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 254.

Where a commissioner of a United States court has power to commit a citizen for an alleged contempt. Ex parte Doll, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 595.

Where the court has jurisdiction of the person it may, by the ordinary process of injunction and attachment for contempt, compel a defendant to desist from commencing an action at law, either in that or any foreign jurisdiction. Mead v. Merritt, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 402.

3. The district court is a court of record, and not an inferior court; although a subordinate, it cannot be considered an inferior court in a judicial sense. McLaughlin v. District Court, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 272.

A witness who refuses to be sworn in a court of record is guilty of contempt, punishable by fine or imprisonment, and the same power is vested in an alderman or commissioner appointed to take depositions under a rule of court. Comm. v. Roberts, 2 Clark (Pa.) 34.

The court of oyer and terminer and of general jail delivery is a superior court, and consequently in a warrant of commitment by the presiding judge for contempt the adjudication of contempt may be general, and the particular circumstances need not be set out. M'Alleece, In re, 7 Ir. R. C. L. 146; Rex v. Clement, 4 B. & A. 218; Fernandez, In re, 6 H. & N. 717, 4 L. T. 296.

A quarter sessions has the power of imposing a fine upon a barrister who, in the performance of his duty, is guilty of a contempt of court. Pater, In re, 5 B. & S. 299.

County courts have a limited power to punish for contempt. Reg. v. Lefroy, 8 L. R. Q. B. 134; Martin v. Bannister, 4 Q. B. D. 491.

subject to the supervision or control of any other court, unlimited at common law, save by the definition of the term "contempt of court,"<sup>1</sup> the presumption omnia esse rite acta always prevailing concerning their proceedings, and that they have jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> Legislative acts have tended to restrict the powers of the courts, usually, as in the United States courts, to cases of misbehavior of officers and parties, and the misbehavior of any person in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice.<sup>3</sup>

The exercise of the power lies solely in the discretion of the judge before whom the contempt is committed, and will not be examined or re-examined by any other court,<sup>4</sup> except when the

1. Rex v. Almon, Wilmot's Notes, 243; State v. Matthews, 37 N. H. 400; Crosby's Case, 3 Wilson, 188; Ex parte Batdorff, 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 417; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 505.

2. It is not requisite that the cause of commitment be set forth in the warrant: it is sufficient that the commitment be for contempt, for, as regards superior courts, the presumption omnia esse rite acta always prevails concerning their proceedings, and that they have jurisdiction. Regina v. Paty, 2 Ld. Raym. 1105; Brass Crosby's Case, 3 Wilson, 188; Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 41; Ex parte Nugent, 1 Am. L. J. (N. S.) 107, 121; Wilson's Case, 7 Ad. & E. (N. S.) 984; Yates's Case, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 368; s. c., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 395; State v. Tipton, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 166; Hunter v. State, 6 Ind. 423; Gist v. Bowman, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 182; Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 3; Jordan v. State, 14 Tex. 436; Ex parte Martin, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 456.

Pending an appeal for an order committing defendant in a divorce suit for contempt in not paying alimony, the lower court has jurisdiction to make a similar order for not paying alimony accruing after the taking of the appeal. Ross v. Griffin, 53 Mich. 5.

But the jurisdiction and power of the court do not depend upon the question whether the offence might or might not be punished by indictment. Rex v. Ossulston, 2 Stra. 1107; Rex v. Pierston, Andr. 310.

3. "The said courts" (the courts of the United States) "shall have power to impose and administer all necessary oaths, and to punish by fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, contempts of their authority, provided that such power to punish contempts shall not be construed to extend to any cases except the misbehavior of any person in their presence, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of said courts in their official transactions, and the disobedience or resistance by any such officer, or by any party, juror, witness, or other person, to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of the said courts." Rev. Stat. § 725. See Oswald's Case, 4 Lloyd's Debates, 141 et seq. (See Act 16th June, 1836, Penna. Legislature, P. L. 793.)

4. Where a cause has been removed from a State to a Federal court pending an application to punish one of the parties for contempt in disobeying an order of the State court, the Federal court has no jurisdiction to hear and determine such application. Kirk v. Milwaukee Dust Collector Mfg. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 501.

A proceeding in contempt for interfering with a receiver appointed by a United States circuit court is criminal in character, and cannot be heard under the law in a division of a district other than the one in which the acts amounting to a contempt were committed. United States v. Berry, 24 Fed. Rep. 780.

A contempt of court is a substantive criminal offence, and the power to punish it belongs to the court in which it is committed. Passmore Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. g; State v. McKinnon et al., 8 Oregon, 487.

The district court of the United States, like all other courts, has authority to punish a party for contempt in disobeying its process, and its judgment upon an offender of that class is conclusive, and cannot be re-examined in a State court. Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. g.

"I apprehend that there is not an instance in the English law of a judge in vacation undertaking to decide upon the legality of a commitment in execution by the judgment of any court of record, and much less of a court of the highest degree." Ex parte Kearney, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 317, 357, 358; Lord Mayor's Case, 3 Wilson, 188.

proceedings are so grossly defective as to be void.<sup>1</sup> The only other remedy, according to the English and more generally received American doctrine, for any error, injustice, abuse of discretion, oppressive or corrupt conduct on the part of the judge of a court of the superior order, is by resort to an impeachment before the legislature.<sup>2</sup>

Inferior Courts.—Justices of the peace acting judicially, although their courts are inferior ones and not of record, have in England and some of the States power to punish summarily, by imprisonment, for contempts committed before them;<sup>3</sup> while in other of the States they have not such power,<sup>4</sup> but may bind the offender over, and compel him to find sureties for his good behavior.<sup>5</sup>

1. Cossart v. State, 14 Ark. 540; Ex parte Rowe, 7 Cal. 181; Ex parte Smith, 53 Cal. 204; Jordan v. State, 14 Texas, 436; Patton v. Harris, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 607; Middlebrook v. State, 43 Conn. 257; Tyler et al. v. Hamersley, 44 Conn. 393; City of London, 8 Rep. 383; Rex v. Dean of Dublin, 1 Stra. 536.

2. Case of Judge Peck, of the United States District Court, before the House of Representatives, in 1831, 6 Am. Law. Reg. O. S. 636, which led to the act of March 2, 1831, limiting the power of the courts over contempts.

3. Rex v. Revel, 1 Stra. 420; Reg. v. Rogers, 7 Mod. 28; 1 Gab. Cr. Law, 287; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 88, 112, 631; Rex v. Cotton, W. Kel. 133; Harwood's Case, 1 Mod. 79; Lining v. Benham, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 1; State v. Johnson, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 385; 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 155; Clarke v. People, 1 Breesse (S. Car.), 266; State v. Copp, 15 N. H. 212; 1 Chit. C. L. Am. Ed. 88, n.; State v. Applegate, 2 McCord (S. Car.), 110; Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 100; In re Cooper, 32 Vt. 253; Rex v. Clement, 4 B. & Ald. 218, 229.

Justices of the peace, acting judicially, have the same power as courts of record. Murphy v. Wilson, 46 Ind. 537; 2 Bish. C. L. (6th Ed.) § 244. And disobedience to their orders is indictable. Rex v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 799.

The power of an inferior court to commit for contempt does not extend to contempt out of court. Reg. v. Lefroy, L. R. 8 Q. B. 134.

4. A justice of the peace in Pennsylvania has no power to punish a person summarily by imprisonment for a contempt committed before him. Semble, that the remedy is of binding the contumacious party over to answer at court, and to be of good behavior in the mean time, without the issuing of a special warrant. Albright v. Lapp, 26 Pa. St. 99; Comm. v. McClure, 10 W. N. C. (Pa.) 466.

The process of committal is one too liable to be abused to be intrusted to an inferior magistrate. Brooker v. Comm., 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 175; Fitler v. Probasco, 2 Browne (Mass.) 137; People v. Webster, 3 Parker (N. Y.), 503; Rutherford v. Holmes, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 317. Contra, Bowen v. Hunter, 45 How Pr. (N. Y.) 193.

A court of a justice of the peace has no power to adjudge a person in contempt, and to punish him therefor, save in the cases prescribed by statute; and a justice will be liable for a false imprisonment if he causes the imprisonment of a person without a compliance with the requirements of the statute. Rutherford v. Holmes, 66 N. Y. (21 Sick.) 368. See Tracy v. Williams, 4 Conn. 113.

"When a witness neglects to appear before a magistrate or notary our practice is first to grant a rule to show cause why an attachment should not issue. We do not grant an attachment in the first instance, as when he is subpoenaed to appear in court and fails to do so. We then make an order on him to appear before the notary or magistrate. It is not until the order is disobeyed that the witness is in contempt of court, and then, of course, an attachment will issue. The reason why a witness who refuses to appear before the court itself is attached forthwith, without a rule or order being obtained, is that the proceeding is under the immediate eye and control of the court which is cognizant of the facts; whilst the failure to appear before the magistrate or notary must be established by proof aliunde, which the witness has the right to be informed of, and to controvert, if he can, before he is attached. The motion, therefore, cannot be granted, but a rule to show cause may be taken. Trimble v. Barnard, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 127."

5. Richmond v. Dayton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 393.

Where a person obstructs the proceed-

When a court acts ministerially, and not judicially, it cannot commit for contempt.<sup>1</sup> Where an inferior court has power to punish for contempt, its exercise of the power is subject to the supervision of the superior courts.<sup>2</sup>

If on appeal it appears that the court below had jurisdiction, the court above will not further consider whether the order should or should not have been made; no other court can, or ought, to undertake, in a collateral way, to question or review an adjudication of a contempt made by another competent jurisdiction.<sup>3</sup>

9. Miscellaneous.—The design and effect of statutory alterations has been to narrow the definition of the offence, diminish the classes of persons to whom it can be imputed, and restrict the power over it of the courts, especially by limiting their power to fine and imprisonment.<sup>4</sup>

The party against whom the attachment issues, and who has ings of a magistrate's court, the justice may, without issuing a warrant, hold the offender to bail to answer for the offence, and to be of good behavior in the mean time. Comm. v. McClure, 10 W. N. C. (Pa.) 466.

1. Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; Clarke v. People, 1 Breese (S. Car.), 266; Gorham v. Lockett, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 638. See In re Moore, 63 N. C. 397; Stuart v. People, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 395; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Watson v. Williams, 36 Miss. 331.

A magistrate acting ministerially and not judicially stands on a different ground, and cannot commit for contempt. Fidler v. Probasco, 1 Browne (Mass.) 137; Comm. v. Stuart, 2 Va. Cas. 320.

2. A court of superior jurisdiction may review the decision of one of inferior jurisdiction on a matter of contempt. Comm. v. Newton, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 453; Ex parte Rowe, 7 Cal. 181. Though not on habeas corpus. Jordan v. State, 14 Texas, 436; Ex parte Smith, 53 Cal. 204.

The supreme court of the United States will not grant a habeas corpus where a party has been committed for a contempt adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction. In such a case this court will not inquire into the sufficiency of the cause of commitment. Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheaton (U. S.) 38; Patton v. Harris, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 607.

When the supreme court will inquire as to whether a subordinate court has jurisdiction. Middlebrook v. State, 43 Conn. 257; Tyler et al. v. Hamersley, 44 Conn. 393; City of London, 8 Rep. 383; Rex v. Dean of Dublin, 1 Stra. 536; 8 Mod. 27. See Hummel & Bishoff's Case, 9 Watts (Pa.), 416; Comm. v. Newton, 1

Grant (Pa.), 453; Ex parte Steinman, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 145.

Every court of competent jurisdiction is an exclusive judge of contempts against itself. Williamson's Case, 26 Pa. St. 9. But the supreme court, where the commitment is by a court over which they possess appellate jurisdiction, may inquire into the regularity of the proceedings, and also as to the jurisdiction. Comm. v. Newton, 1 Grant (Pa.), 453. The proper mode of doing so is by certiorari. Hummel's Case, 9 W. (Pa.) 416.

3. On appeal in contempt proceedings, if the court below had jurisdiction, the court above will not further consider whether the order should or should not have been made. Tolman v. Jones, 114 Ill. 147.

No other court or judge can or ought to undertake in a collateral way to question or review an adjudication of a contempt made by another competent jurisdiction. Crosby's Case, 3 Wils. 186; 14 East, 1; Gist v. Bowman, 2 Bay (S. Car.), 182; State v. White, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 136; Cossart v. State, 14 Ark. 538, 544; Yeates v. People, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 337; 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 395; Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 204; McLoughlin's Case, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 276; Kearney's Case, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 38.

4. The power of the United States court in matters of contempt is limited by Rev. St. § 725, to punishment by fine and imprisonment. It has no power to impose any punishment by way of damages or compensation to the plaintiff in the original action. United States v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 853. The power of the United States court is also circumscribed by State laws. Mallony Mfg. Co. v. Fox, 20 Fed. Rep. 409.

CONTENTS—CONTENTION—CONTEST—CONTIGUOUS.

committed a contempt, is not entitled to costs. Contra, if party innocent.<sup>1</sup> A contempt by defendant for non-payment of costs may be waived by plaintiff.<sup>2</sup>

CONTENTS.—Contained within limits.<sup>3</sup>

CONTENTION.—A violent effort to obtain something, or to resist a person, claim, or injury; contest; quarrel.<sup>4</sup>

CONTEST.—To make a subject of dispute, contention, or litigation; to call in question; to controvert; to oppose; to dispute.<sup>5</sup>

CONTIGUOUS.—In actual or close contact; touching; adjacent; near.<sup>6</sup>

1. Deeds v. Deeds, 1 Iowa, 394; Marshall v. Railroad Co., 18 E. L. & E. 500.

Where defendant was innocent of contempt the costs were put on the party applying for the attachment. State v. Nixon, Wright (Ohio), 763.

A fine for contempt of an injunction may properly include the plaintiff's costs and counsel fees incurred in consequence of defendant's resistance to the application for an attachment. Doubleday v. Sherman, 8 Blatchf. 45.

Under New York statutes counsel fees so named cannot be included; they may, however, form part of the costs. People v. Railroad Co., 14 Hun (N. Y.), 371. See also, as to costs, Jackson v. Mawby, 1 Ch. D. 86; M——, In re, 46 L. J. Ch. 24; Bowden v. Russell, 46 L. J. Ch. 414; 36 L. T. 177; Hall v. Hall, 11 L. R. Eq. 290; Corkery v. Hickson, 10 Ir. R. C. L. 174; Vernon v. Vernon, 40 L. J. Ch. 118.

2. A defendant in contempt for non-payment of costs filed his answer, and left a copy at the office of the plaintiff's solicitor. The plaintiff's solicitor did not return the copy nor move to take the answer off the file, but kept it without reading it till after the time for deeming it sufficient had elapsed. Held, that the plaintiff had waived the contempt, and that the defendant was in a position to move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution if the plaintiff did not proceed in proper time. Roberts v. Albert Bridge Co., 8 L. R. Ch. 753; 42 L. J. Ch. 767.

Authorities for Contempt.—For discussion of the law of "Contempt of Court," see Mr. Chauncey's article, 20 Am. Law Reg. 81 et seq., "History of Law of Contempts in the United States courts traced and discussed;" Goodyear v. Day, 6 Am. Law Reg. O. S. 632. For general subject of Contempt, 3 Wharton's Criminal Law (7th Ed.), § 3426 et seq., and 2 Bish. Criminal Law (7th Ed.), §§ 241, 273.

3. Webster.

The words "contents unknown," being annexed to a bill of lading, imply that the master only meant to acknowledge the shipment in good order of the cases as to their external condition. He might justify himself by showing that the contents were not in good order. Clark v. Barnwel, 12 How. (U. S.) 273.

4. Webster.

5. Webster.

Contested Elections.—The phrase "contested elections" has no technical or legally defined meaning. An election may be said to be "contested" whenever an objection is formally urged against it which, if found to be true in fact, would invalidate it. This must be true both as to objections founded upon some constitutional provision as well as upon any mere statutory enactment. It is further defined as meaning "to defend as a suit or other judicial proceeding; to dispute or resist as a claim by due course of law; to litigate." The power, therefore, "to determine contested elections" . . . necessarily carries with it jurisdiction over every possible objection which may under the constitution or any statute be urged against the so-called election of any person. Per Niblack, J., Robertson v. State, 10 N. E. Rep. 600.

6. Webster.

Contiguous Proprietors.—Contiguous proprietors, under a statute which forbids the closing of public roads without the consent of the contiguous property owners, mean those whose land actually touches the road, or through whose land the road passes. Vicinal are not necessarily contiguous proprietors. Ruxedale v. Seip, 32 La. Ann. 435.

In Insurance Policy.—The word "contiguous," when used in a policy of fire-insurance in reference to a building, means in close proximity, in actual close contact. A policy of fire-insurance con-

CONTINGENCY.—An event which may occur; a possibility; a casualty. Contingent on an event which is possible or liable, but not certain to occur; that which is unforeseen, undetermined, or dependent on something future.<sup>1</sup> (See also CLOSES; DEVISE; ESTATES; REMAINDERS.)

CONTINGENT. See REMAINDERS.

CONTINUANCES.

Definition, 804.

Regulated by Statute, etc., 804.

Same Principles in Civil and Criminal Cases, 805.

Application for, 805.

How and When Made, 805.

Affidavit for, 806.

Counter-affidavits, 807.

Grounds for, 808.

Absence of Counsel, 808.

Absence of Witness, 809.

Absence of Party, 811.

Popular Excitement, 812.

Surprise, 813.

Public Holiday, 813.

Nearness to Time of Crime, 813.

Newly-discovered Evidence, 814.

To Enable Party to Procure Depositions, 814.

To Await Depositions, 815.

Loss or Absence of Papers, 815.

Agreement of Counsel, 815.

To Await Termination of Other Proceedings, 816.

Amendment of Pleadings, 816.

Mistake, 817.

Inability to Understand Nature of Oath, 817.

Review of Discretionary Action in Regard to, 818.

Requisite Diligence, 819.

Avoiding by Admissions, 820.

1. Definition.—Continuance is the adjournment of a cause from one day to another of the same or subsequent term. The postponement of the trial of a cause.<sup>2</sup>

2. Usually Regulated by Statute, etc.—Continuances are usually tained a clause prohibiting, unless by special agreement, indorsed on the policy, "the generating or evaporating within the building, or contiguous thereto, of any substance for a burning gas, or the use of gasoline for lighting." Plaintiffs after the issuing of the policy constructed works fifty feet from the building for the manufacture of gas from gasoline. The gas was conducted to the building by pipes. In an action on the policy, held that the gas-works were not contiguous to the building within the meaning of said clause. Arkell v. Commerce Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 191.

1. Webster.

Contingent Expense.—A contingency is a fortuitous event which comes without design, foresight, or expectation. A contingent expense must be deemed to be an expense depending upon some future uncertain event. People v. Yonkers, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 272.

Contingent Demand.—The word "contingent," when applied to a use, remainder, devise, bequest, or other legal right or interest, implies that no present interest exists, and that whether such interest or right ever will exist, depends upon a future uncertain event. The legal definition of the word concurs with its ordinary acceptance in showing that the term "contingent" implies a possibility. The term "contingent demand" would therefore be inapplicable when a present claim exists, or when it is certain to arise in future; and is only appropriate when there is no claim in presenti, and when it is uncertain whether in fact any ever will arise. Jorneson v. Blowers, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 692.

Contingent Liability.—A contingent liability contracted by a bankrupt in its legal signification means an obligation of the bankrupt arising from his contract, the duty to perform which is dependent as to when or whether the obligation shall become absolute upon the occurrence of an event, the happening of which is a matter of some uncertainty. Haywood v. Shreve, 15 Vroom (N. J.), 104.

2. Bouv. Dic.

In the ancient practice, continuances were entered upon the record, and a variety of forms adapted to the different stages of the suit were in use. 1 Chitty Plead. 421; 3 Black. Comm. 316.

It has been laid down that no crime is so great, and no proceedings so instantaneous, but that the trial may be put off for sufficient reasons. 1 Chitt. Crim. Law, 491.

regulated by statute;<sup>1</sup> when such is the case, and a showing is made for such purpose which fully complies with the requirements of the statutes, and nothing is produced against it, the party is generally deemed to have established his right thereto. Ordinarily the same reasons which would be sufficient for a continuance on the part of the defendant will be so applied for by the prosecution.

But where a party has been in custody for a considerable time, charged with a capital offence, the trial will not be postponed at the instance of the prosecution, though the indictment has been but recently found.<sup>2</sup>

But a peremptory rule for trial will never be enforced so strictly as to work injustice. If any unforeseen accident or casualty intervenes, which puts it out of the power of the party to prevent it, a continuance will be granted.<sup>3</sup>

3. Same Principle Applied in Civil and Criminal Cases.—The doctrine of putting off trials is the same in principle in both civil and criminal cases.<sup>4</sup>

4. Application for Continuance.—(a) How and When Made.—An application for continuance must be made by motion,<sup>5</sup> and upon affidavit.<sup>6</sup> And it should be made before trial if possible,<sup>7</sup> for the court is not bound to wait after the case has been called for trial for a party to prepare an affidavit for a continuance.<sup>8</sup> It is too late usually after one of the jury has been sworn,<sup>9</sup> and such affidavit may be made by an agent<sup>10</sup> or any other person.<sup>11</sup>

1. The doctrine of putting off, postponing, or continuing causes or trials, as it is called in the legal nomenclature of different States and countries, rests much upon the discretion and rules of practice of the court where the cause is pending, especially after the first application to postpone, or where this is attended with circumstances which take it out of the ordinary course. State v. Hildreth, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 429; State v. Patterson, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 177; Green v. State, 13 Miss. 382; Baxter v. People, 8 Ill. 368; McKinney v. People, 7 Ill. 540; State v. Thomas, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 295; Fiott v. Com., 12 Gratt. (Va.) 564.

But the discretion in such cases cannot override a clear legal right, or dispense with a plain rule of law. Fox v. State, 9 Ga. 373.

2. People v. Fuller, 2 Park. (N. Y.) 16.

This is upon the constitutional ground that by the constitutions of all the States a person indicted for a crime is entitled to a "speedy trial."

3. Farr v. McDowell, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 31; Bowen v. Douglass, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 44; Nixin v. Hallett, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 218; Livingston v. Delefeld, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 6; Torrey v. Morehouse, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 242; Hammond v. Hawes, Wall. C. Ct. 1.

4. Rex v. D'Eon, 1 W. Bl. 515; 3 Burr. 1145; State v. Lewis, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 1, 2; People v. Kelley, Jud. Repos. 51; 1 Chitty Cr. Law, 490; Smith's Case, 3 Wheel. Cr. Cas. 114, 171.

"The case of D'Eon is a leading case on this subject, and contains principles which have since prevailed in relation to putting off trials. . . . Wilmot, J., said the rule is the same in criminal and civil cases; and Yates, J., said whatever indulgence the law gives to defendants in civil cases, it ought a fortiori to give in criminal. Ch. J. Savage, in People v. Vermilyea, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 383.

5. Burlingame v. Turner, 2 Ill. 588.

6. The court will not hear oral explanations of an affidavit for continuance. Smith v. Barker, 3 Day (Conn.), 280.

An application for a continuance is insufficient unless accompanied by an affidavit of the truth of the facts relied on. Ralston v. Lothain, 18 Ind. 303.

7. Lucas v. Cassady, 12 Iowa, 567; Huff v. Freeman, 15 La. Ann. 240; Watson v. Welsh, 10 Mo. 454.

8. Myers v. Schneider, 21 Mo. 77.

9. Coleman v. Hess, 1 Browne (Pa.), 240; Fink v. Hall, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 437.

10. Espy v. State Bank, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 274.

11. Lockhart v. Wolfe, 82 Ill. (1876); 37

(b) Affidavit for.—Facts stated in an affidavit in support of a motion for a continuance for the purposes of the motion will be taken as true.<sup>1</sup> An affidavit for a continuance on account of absent witnesses, which fails to show that either their personal attendance or testimony will probably be obtained if time be granted, is insufficient.<sup>2</sup>

Where an affidavit for a continuance of a case is based upon information derived from others, it should give their names and whereabouts, and also sufficient reason for not procuring their own affidavits to facts communicated, which should be done if possible.<sup>3</sup>

An application for continuance on account of absent witness is defective if it fails to show whether or not the subpoenas had been served, or whether diligence to secure service had been used; and it is also defective if it does not show that it was issued by the proper authority.<sup>4</sup>

In order to force the continuance of a cause the affidavit upon which the application is founded must state all the facts required in the statute to be stated.<sup>5</sup> Such affidavit must be sworn to,<sup>6</sup> and must show that the facts expected to be proved by absent witnesses cannot be otherwise proven,<sup>7</sup> and that the testimony of Guyer v. Cox, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 184; Wheaton v. Cross, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 154. Contra, Shepherd v. Cook, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 242.

1. Hair v. State, 14 Neb. 503; Quincy Whig Co. v. Tillson, 67 Ill. 351; Wick v. Weber, 64 Ill. 167.

For the purpose of deciding a motion for a continuance the affidavits must generally be taken as true; but when several affidavits are filed for the purpose of obtaining a continuance, which are inconsistent with each other, the court is not bound to treat both as true. It is presumed that in making the showing for the continuance the defendant will make the strongest possible statement in his own favor that the facts will warrant, and so far as the showing is equivocal or uncertain, the intendments must be taken against it. Dacy v. People (Ill. Supreme Ct. 1886), 6 N. E. Rep. 165. See COUNTER-AFFIDAVITS.

The affidavit made by a defendant in order to obtain a postponement of his trial is not necessarily to be taken as true, but it is necessary that the court be satisfied. Com. v. Gross, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 281.

2. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540; State v. Tilghman, 6 Iowa, 496; State v. Sater, 8 Iowa, 420; Lee v. Quirk, 20 Ill. 392.

The affidavit should show the probability of obtaining the desired evidence within a given time. Deming v. Patterson, 40 Ind. 251; Burris v. Wise, 2 Ark. 33.

And a continuance is seldom granted beyond the next term. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 494.

3. Comstock v. State, 14 Neb. 205; Borron v. Mertens, 14 La. Ann. 306; Parker v. McKellvain, 17 Tex. 157.

An affidavit for the continuance of a cause on the ground of the absence of a witness, in which the affidavit speaks only from information and belief, and which does not show what steps have been taken to ascertain the whereabouts of such witness, is not sufficient. McKinlay v. Shank, 24 Ind. 258.

4. Williams v. State, 10 Tex. App. 114.

An application for continuance for the absence of a witness must show that the witness has had reasonable notice by subpoena, and what is reasonable notice depends upon all the circumstances of the case. Conner v. Sampson, 22 Tex. 20.

5. Kent v. Faver, 5 Pac. R. (N. M.) 470.

An affidavit for a continuance, concluding with "the application is not made for delay, but that the law may be administered," where the statute required the language to be "that justice may be done," was held insufficient. Turner v. Eustis, 8 Ark. 119.

6. Reed v. Haynie, Hempst. 700.

7. People v. Quincy, 8 Cal. 89; Fleming v. State, 11 Ind. 234; Eames v. Hennessy, 22 Ill. 628; Thompson v. Abbott, such witnesses are material,<sup>1</sup> and must state the facts with such certainty that the opposite party may admit them and go to trial,<sup>2</sup> and that the party cannot safely go to trial without them.<sup>3</sup>

Affidavits are construed strictly and most strongly against the applicant,<sup>4</sup> and it is not strengthened by any presumption in its favor.<sup>5</sup> It must show positively that due diligence has been exercised by the party applying.<sup>6</sup> It should also show that the party applying has a good cause of action or defence,<sup>7</sup> and that it is not made for delay.<sup>8</sup> The affidavit should also state, when made on account of the absence of a material witness, at what time he will return.<sup>9</sup> The statements should be made definite and specific enough that an indictment for perjury will lie if they are false.<sup>10</sup>

(c) Counter-affidavits.—Upon the hearing of a motion for a continuance, based upon affidavits alleging the existence of excitement and prejudice against the accused throughout the county, the court may receive and consider counter-affidavits in determining the propriety of granting or denying such motion.<sup>11</sup>

11 Iowa 193; Campion v. Angier, 16 Tex. 93.

An affidavit for continuance on the ground of absent witness is fatally defective where it fails to show that there are no other persons by whom the same facts could be proved. State v. Mensbell, 8 Pac. Rep. (Nev.) 627.

1. State v. Pettibone, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 300; Hubbard v. State, 7 Ind. 160; Steele v. People, 45 Ill. 152.

2. McBain v. Enloe, 13 Ill. 76; Olds v. Glaze, 7 Iowa, 86.

3. Wilson v. Koehnlein, 1 W. Va. 145.

4. Mason v. Anderson, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 293; S. P. Owens v. State, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 233.

5. Fisk v. Berryhill, 10 Iowa, 203.

6. Fiott v. Com., 12 Gratt. (Va.) 364; Weeks v. State, 31 Miss. 490; Hurd's Case, 5 Leigh (Va.), 715; People v. Barker, 1 Cal. 403. See DUE DILIGENCE.

7. Ballston Bank v. Marine Bank, 16 Wis. 125.

8. Zuinwalt v. State, 5 Tex. App. 521; Peck v. State, 5 Tex. App. 611.

9. 1 Black. Rep. 514; 1 Barnard Rep. 39.

10. Ingalls v. Noble, 15 N. Rep. 351; s. c., 14 Nev. 272.

11. State v. Wells (Iowa Supreme Ct. 1883), 6 Criminal Law Mag. 39.

"The defendants applied for a continuance on the ground of excitement and prejudice existing against them in the county where the indictment was pending, which would prevent them from having a fair trial. The application was based upon affidavits of the defendants stating at length the existence of the excitement and prejudice, and the facts upon which their belief was founded. These affidavits were supported by the affidavits of five citizens of the county, including defendants' attorneys. Objections were filed to the continuance, and the same were overruled, and "thereupon, on its own motion, and against the objections of the defendants' counsel, the court allowed the attorneys for the State to file counter-affidavits as to the condition of the public sentiment, excitement, and prejudice, if any, against the defendants." Then was filed the affidavit of sixty residents of the county, by the State, contradictory to those filed by the defendants. A motion to strike the counter-affidavits from the files was overruled. When a motion for continuance is filed, supported by an affidavit of the party, on the ground of the absence of a material witness, such affidavit is not traversable, but is presumed to be true. State v. Bowers, 17 Iowa, 48; State v. Scott, 44 Iowa, 93; State v. Dakin, 52 Iowa, 395.

In such cases the statute declares what must be stated in the affidavit, and this done, the continuance follows as a matter of course, if the court is satisfied the statute has been complied with. Code, § 2750. The application before us is not based on the section of the code referred to, but upon section 2749, which provides that a continuance may be granted "for any cause which satisfies the court that substantial justice will thereby be more nearly obtained." Under this section there is a judicial discretion reposed in the court, which when exercised will not be reversed unless such discretion is abused. We are not aware that it has ever been held that counter-affidavits

The general rule, however, is that such affidavits cannot be heard.<sup>1</sup>

5. Grounds for Continuance.—(a) Absence of Counsel.—A continuance shall not be granted because of the absence of leading counsel for the defence, when it appears that the defendant was faithfully represented by other counsel, and it does not appear that he was prejudiced.<sup>2</sup>

The mere absence of counsel without the consent of client will not be sufficient.<sup>3</sup> But the illness of counsel,<sup>4</sup> where there is but one, or the leading counsel where there is more than one, where the sickness is so sudden that another cannot, under the circumstances, render justice to the case,<sup>5</sup> likewise the death of counsel, will be a good cause.<sup>6</sup> Neither business engagements of counsel,<sup>7</sup> nor absence of counsel with the papers in the

could not be filed when the application for a continuance has been made, which is addressed to the discretion of the court, to the end that "justice will thereby be more nearly obtained." The statute does not require an affidavit to be filed in support of the motion, and in what way is the court to be informed that justice will be more nearly obtained by granting the continuance is left to the discretion of the court. We are not required to determine whether counter-affidavits can be filed in every case where the application is addressed to the discretion of the court, but only whether this can be done under the circumstances in the case before us. . . . We have examined the affidavits, and are not prepared to say the court abused its discretion in overruling the motion for continuance." State v. Wells, Sup. Ia. 1883.

1. Salisbury v. Com., 1 Ky. L. J. 181; Territory v. Kinney, 9 West Coast Rep. (New Mex. Sup. Ct. 1886) 268; Manning v. Jameson, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 285; Linville v. Golding, 11 Ind. 374.

The decisions are conflicting on this subject, and cannot be reconciled. On the one hand it is said to be the settled common-law practice to admit such proofs and such counter-proofs,—Hide v. State, 16 Tex.,—and the other that it cannot be controverted. State v. Simion, 30 La. Ann. 296; Bishop v. State, 9 Ga. 121.

2. Walker v. State, 13 Tex.

The absence of counsel is not a ground of continuance where a party has been assisted by other counsel, and had no evidence which would have produced a different result if his counsel had been present. Sager v. O'Connell, 7 La. Ann. 453.

Cases in which the leading counsel are absent with leave cannot be tried in their absence, unless by consent of the party employing them, or by consent of other counsel of such party, but must be continued. Summerlyn v. Dent, 36 Ga. 54.

Causes will not be postponed, without consent, for the absence of one or several counsel. State v. Adams, 5 Harr. (Del.) 107. Absence of counsel is not a favored excuse for not proceeding to trial. McKay v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Caines (N. Y.), 384; Hammond v. Hawes, 1 Wall. C. C. 1.

3. Allen v. State, 10 Ga. 85; Bullock v. State, 10 Ga. 46; Wright v. State, 18 Ga. 383.

If the case is a simple one, such as any practising lawyer would be competent to try without special preparations, a continuance will not be granted. Jarvis v. Shacklock, 60 Ill. 378.

4. Say. Rep. 63; Bac. Abr. Trial (H); Thompson v. Thornton, 41 Cal. 626; Rice v. Melendy, 37 Ia. 166.

The defendant's counsel was taken ill on the morning of the trial, and informed the defendant that he could not try his case. He advised the defendant that he had a good defence on the merits. The defendant endeavored to get other counsel, but was unsuccessful. A continuance should have been granted. Thompson v. Thornton, 41 Cal. 626.

5. Allen v. State, 10 Ga. 85; Shults v. Moore, 1 McLean (U. S.), 520; Printup v. Mitchell, 19 Ga. 586; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 226.

"When the leading counsel in a case is prevented from attending the court by sickness, and the counsel in attendance is not prepared to go on with the trial, it is sufficient ground for continuance." Shults v. Moore, 1 McLean (U. S.), 520.

6. Hunter v. Fairfax, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 305.

7. Burchard v. Boyce, 21 Ga. 6.

case, will be sufficient.<sup>1</sup> But when the absence is by virtue of a prior engagement, and there appears no want of due diligence on the party applying, it will be sufficient.<sup>2</sup>

Absence in the legislature will not do.<sup>3</sup> Betrayal of counsel will be a good cause for continuance.<sup>4</sup>

(b) Absence of Witnesses.—Continuances on the ground of absent witnesses who are out of the State and beyond the process of the court will only be enforced in strong and clear cases, in which three elements must concur: (1) Materiality and admissibility of the evidence; (2) due diligence; (3) affirmative showing that the absent witnesses can and will be produced at a future term.<sup>5</sup> If a

1. Horshaw v. Cook, 16 Ga. 526.

The fact that the senior counsel who has prepared and studied the case, and has the papers, absents himself from court to attend important business before another tribunal, is not a ground of continuance where such absence was anticipated by the party employing him, for several weeks before the session of the court. Haggerty v. Scott, 10 Tex. 525.

2. Rossett v. Gardner, 3 W. Va. 531.

3. Sharman v. Morton, 31 Ga. 34; Stockley v. Goodwin, 78 Ill. 127.

That the attorney of a party to the suit is engaged in arguing an important case in another court, the conflict in the hearings being caused by an adjournment of the regular term, is good ground for continuance. Hill v. Clark, 51 Ga. 122.

When counsel are actually engaged in trying a case in another court, they are entitled to have a case which has been called in their absence kept open until the other is at an end. Gerlach v. Engelhoffer, 7 Phil. (Pa.) 241; Williams v. Baker, 67 Ill. 238.

4. State v. Lewis, 74 Mo. 222.

It is not error to refuse a postponement asked for on the ground that new counsel who have recently been employed in consequence of the death of the original counsel have not as yet been able to obtain papers which were placed in his keeping, and are important for use on the trial, where such papers are not competent as evidence, but can only be used as memoranda for information of counsel. Williams v. Baltimore P. R., 9 W. Va. 33.

5. State v. Duffy, La. Ann. 1887; 1 South. Rep. 184.

The authorities, positively and with great reason, discountenance continuances on the ground of the absence of witnesses who are not within the process of the court. As said in one case, 'If trials for capital offences could be postponed on affidavits of this sort, very few cases would ever be tried at all, and none at the first court after the arrest of the offender unless he was willing. . . . No compulsory process can issue to obtain their testimony. The presumption is that they would not attend at another court, or they would have attended at the trial when the life of the defendant was in jeopardy.' State v. Files, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 304.

The rule is that three things must concur to support such a continuance: (1) That the witness is really material (including, of course, admissibility of his expected evidence), and appears to the court to be so; (2) that the defendant has been guilty of no neglect; (3) that the witness can be had at the time to which the trial is deferred. King v. D'Eon, 1 W. Bl. 510; Mull's Case, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 695; 3 Wharton Crim. Law. § 3022 et seq.; 1 Bish. Crim. Pr. § 951; Whar. Crim. Pl. & Pr. 589.

The judge a quo concluded that none of these requisites sufficiently appeared in the affidavits and facts of this case, and expressed his conviction that the application was made for delay. We fail to discover any such manifest error or injustice as would alone authorize us to interfere with the discretion of a trial judge in a question of continuance. State v. Chevallier, 36 La. Ann. 86; State v. Johnson, 36 La. Ann. 853; State v. Clark, 37 La. Ann. 129; Sherwin v. People, 69 Ill. 55; Payne v. Natl. Bank, 16 Kan. 147.

Materiality.—A continuance will not be granted on account of the absence of a witness if the facts expected to be proved by him would not be evidence in the case. Warburton v. Aken, 1 McLean (U. S.) 75; Ward v. Moory, 1 Wash. T. 538.

To sustain an application for continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness, it must be shown that due diligence has been used to procure his attendance; that he is material; that the same fact cannot be proved by any other person relies upon the promise of a witness to be present at a trial, he cannot obtain a continuance if the witness does not attend.<sup>1</sup> But if he appears at the trial and then suddenly disappears a continuance will be granted.<sup>2</sup>

A statement that an absent witness, being an accountant, has not had time to make certain necessary examinations of account-books, does not show a valid excuse for failure to procure his attendance.<sup>3</sup>

A continuance will not be granted, generally, for an absent witness unless a subpoena has been issued<sup>4</sup> for him and served.<sup>5</sup>

A party is not entitled to a continuance on account of the absence of seafaring witnesses, unless he has attempted to secure their depositions.<sup>6</sup>

The death of a material witness, occurring unexpectedly, and so short a time before the trial as to prevent the procuring the attendance of another witness who could testify to the facts expected to be proved by the deceased, is sufficient ground for a continuance.<sup>7</sup> A continuance will not be granted in a criminal witness in attendance; and that the party making the application cannot safely go to trial in the absence of such witness. Tompkins v. Burgess, 2 W. Va. 187; People v. Lee, Cal. Sup. Ct. 1886.

The statement of a witness that a third party had admitted to him the commission of the offence for which the accused was on trial, is inadmissible because hearsay; and hence a continuance should not be granted for its production. Aikin v. State, 10 Tex. App. 610.

Where a homicide has occurred in an affray, and a participant is indicted for murder and brought to trial thereon, all the spectators of the affray are material witnesses, and where the defendant has subpoenaed them at the earliest opportunity, and used due diligence to obtain their attendance, he is entitled to a continuance on account of their absence. Sutton v. People, N. E. Rep. (1887) 376.

The fact that a witness was absent who could prove the signature to a deed but not the delivery, and who has not been summoned, is no ground for a continuance. Chambers v. Handley, J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 98.

A continuance sought for on the ground of the absence of witnesses is properly refused, when the motion for the continuance disclosed that the evidence would not have availed the party making the application. Ware v. Kelley, 22 Ark. 411; Earp v. Com., 9 Dana (Ky.) 301.

Future Attendance.—An affidavit for continuance on account of the absence of a witness in another State or county must state facts showing whether or not there is reasonable ground for believing that the future attendance of the witnesses can be procured. A statement by the defendant in his affidavit that he is "confident" that he can procure such attendance is not sufficient. State v. O'Neil, 9 West Coast Rep. (Oreg. Sup. Ct. 1886) 151.

Where the evidence is material, and diligence has been used to secure witness's attendance, the continuance should be granted if there is reasonable ground to believe that the presence of the witness will be had by a continuance, though he may be a non-resident. White v. Com., 4 Ky. L. J. 1883, 256.

1. Day v. Gelston, 22 Ill. 102; State v. Cross, 12 Iowa, 66; Mackubin v. Clarkson, 5 Minn. 247. Freeland v. Howell, Anth. (N. Y.) 198.

A continuance will not be granted because a witness has said that he would be present at the trial and that he had been subpoenaed by the opposite party. The party desiring the testimony of the witness should secure his presence at the trial. Moore v. Goelitz, 27 Ill. 18; Campbell v. Blanke, 13 Kan. 62.

2. Searles v. Munson, 17 Ill. 558.

3. Brown v. Shearon, 17 Ind. 239.

4. Bone v. Hillen, 1 Treadw. (S. Car.) 198.

5. Golding v. Castro, 20 La. Ann. 458.

6. Deans v. Scriba, 2 Call (Va.), 415; King of Spain v. Oliver, Pet. C. Ct. 217; McKay v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Caines (N. Y.), 384.

7. Long v. McDonald, 39 Ga. 186.

case because of the absence of a witness who will testify to the good character of the deceased.

(c) Absence or Inability of Party.—Where a case has been set ten days in advance of trial and parties notified thereof, the absence of the defendant when the case is called is no ground for continuance.<sup>2</sup>

That the defendant is excitable, whether from her state of health or otherwise, will not be sufficient to procure a continuance.<sup>3</sup>

Neither is it a cause for continuance, in a prosecution for murder, that for the six weeks since the time of the homicide the defendant has been in jail, without friends or relatives to hunt up witnesses and make like preparations, and that his attorney has been busy in court.<sup>4</sup>

The death of a party is cause for continuance,<sup>5</sup> but not necessarily so.<sup>6</sup> Attendance upon Congress as a member will not be sufficient for a continuance.<sup>7</sup> Neither will the fact that the defendant is in jail in a distant county grant him a continuance as a matter of right.<sup>8</sup> But absence of a party in the military service of State<sup>9</sup> or the United States will be sufficient.<sup>10</sup> And where a

1. McNealy v. State, 17 Fla. 198.

2. Hayes v. State, 68 Ga. 833.

Where a defendant, about a week before the trial of his case was reached, left the State on business without making any inquiry of his attorneys as to the probability of his case being reached, or furnishing them with the names of his witnesses, by whom his defence could have been established, so that no preparation was made, held, he was not entitled to a continuance. Partridge v. Wing, 75 Ill. 236.

The question presented is as to whether the court erred in overruling the defendants' motion for a continuance. The affidavit for continuance was made by one of the defendants, and shows in substance that the defendant was a material witness and was then absent; that the action was brought in the name of one Beeson, the plaintiff's intestate; that a short time before the term at which the motion was made Beeson died; that after the commencement of the term the defendant was advised by his counsel that the case would not be tried that term the plaintiff not having entered his appearance; that the defendant was engaged in an itinerant business in the State, and was at the time of the making of the affidavit, as the affiant understood, about one hundred miles south of Des Moines; that his attorney had tried to keep him notified, but that the case had been called earlier than was expected. It was held that insufficient cause was shown for his absence. Brant v. McDowell (Iowa, 1887), 2 N.R. 1100.

3. Harvey v. State, 67 Ga. 639; Allis v. Meadow, etc. (Wis. 1887), 29 N. Rep. 543.

4. Burchfield v. State, 82 Ind. 580.

The plaintiff's death, and consequent substitution of his administrator, do not constitute a sufficient ground for the continuance of an action. Masterson v. Brown, 51 Iowa, 442.

5. Worthy v. Tate, 42 Ga. 392.

Where counsel moved a continuance on the ground of sickness of his client, and stated in his place he could not safely go on to trial because he needed his client to prove his plea of relief, and the opposing counsel offered to admit such facts, it was held that the motion for a continuance was properly overruled. Kitchen v. Hutchins, 44 Ga. 620.

6. Alexander v. Patten, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 338.

Where the death of the appellant is suggested, and his administrator is made a party, he is entitled to a continuance to the next term. Warren v. Ball, 40 Ill. 117; Shaoler & Hall Quarry v. Brewster, 32 N. Y. 472.

Death of a party, for whose use a suit is brought in the name of another, is not a reason for continuance at the instance of such party's representative; but if the defendant objects to going to trial because there is no responsible party on the record, the court may in its discretion continue the cause until such party is introduced. Christine v. Whitehall, 16 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 98.

7. Nares v. Edsall, 1 Wall. Jr. (U.S.) 189.

8. Long v. State, 38 Ga. 491.

9. Crawford v. Brady, 35 Ga. 184.

10. Lucas v. Cassady, 12 Iowa, 567.

In an action against a firm, one mem-party and his witnesses are absent they must be accounted for before a continuance can be granted.<sup>1</sup>

(d) Popular Excitement.—The law allowing continuances to be had on this ground is intended to apply only to those great crimes which agitate the public mind to a higher degree.<sup>2</sup> Public excitement alone is not sufficient.<sup>3</sup>

But where there is just and reasonable cause to apprehend that, owing to the excited state of the public mind, a jury may not be as free to render justice to the prisoner as to the State, a continuance to a future term should be granted for the purpose of affording an opportunity for the excitement to cool down.<sup>4</sup> A second continuance will, however, not be granted on this ground.<sup>5</sup> And where this ground is alleged the proofs to sustain the application must exhibit specific facts; a general statement by a witness that excitement or prejudice exists is insufficient. A continuance may be granted on the ground of the publication of a libel tending to influence the minds of the jurors.<sup>6</sup> ber of which was in the military service of the United States, his copartner appeared and admitted a portion of the plaintiff's claim, and judgment was rendered therefor. Held, on appeal, that under the statutes of Iowa the defendant in the military service of the United States was entitled to a continuance of the action against him during such service, and that a continuance as to one of the firm operated as a continuance against both, and that said judgment should be reversed. Butler v. McColl, 15 Iowa, 431.

The defendant for a continuance stated that he had been unable to prepare for trial in consequence of severe bodily affliction, under which he had labored ever since, and long before the process had been served; that he believed he had a meritorious defence, and could be ready for trial at the next term, and that the affidavit was not made for delay. Held, that the affidavit was insufficient. Pine v. Pro, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 426.

1. Cietes v. Lanier, 1 Taylor (Vt.) 16; Post v. Wright, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 111; People v. Rales, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 26.

2. Poole v. State, 18 Ga. 567.

3. Thomas v. State, 27 Ga. 287; Revel v. State, 26 Ga. 275; Thompson v. State, 24 Ga. 297.

4. Comm. v. Durham, Thach. Cr. Cases (Mass.), 516; John v. State, 1 Head (Tenn.), 49.

When a trial for murder was brought on at the first term of the court after the indictment was found, and the next month after the crime was committed, and it appeared that the accused was in jail during the whole of the intervening term, and that there was considerable excitement in the public mind, it was held that there was good ground for a continuance. Bishop v. State, 9 Ga. 121.

But on the trial of a slave for the murder of a white man, a continuance, applied for on account of excitement and prejudice in the public mind, was refused, neither the statements of counsel nor the affidavits which were furnished showing that material testimony could be procured or that a different case could in any wise be made out by a continuance. Jim v. State, 15 Ga. 535.

5. Bishop v. State, 9 Ga. 121.

In Wright v. State, 18 Ga. 385, the court said that popular excitement had never been made the ground for a continuance in that State except at the first term, and that too when the crime had been but recently perpetrated. When, therefore, on a trial for murder it appeared that the killing took place in February, that the indictment was found next June, and that the trial at which the continuance was asked was had the January following, and the continuance was claimed not so much on account of the excitement resulting from the offence as because of the newspaper agitation of the subject, occasioned by the prisoner's subsequent escape and recapture, the court held, that there was a sufficient cooling time between February and January—eleven months; and as all that transpired within that interval was the legitimate fruits of the defendant's own wrongdoings, there was no proper excuse for postponing the trial.

6. 4 T. R. 285; 1 Burr 510; 3 Brod. & Bing. 272.

(e) Surprise.—Surprise resulting from unexpected testimony will, notwithstanding the trial is in progress, be a cause of continuance.<sup>1</sup> Likewise unauthorized departure of a material witness in the course of a trial will be sufficient cause.<sup>2</sup> Where a party or his counsel was surprised as to the time or place of holding the court a continuance ought to be granted.<sup>3</sup> The rejection of testimony as incompetent is not sufficient.<sup>4</sup> But a continuance will not be granted to enable one to procure testimony to impeach an adverse witness.<sup>5</sup> When evidence legally admissible is introduced to establish facts not disclosed by the pleadings, it should, however, be granted.<sup>6</sup> A motion for continuance on the ground of surprise must be supported by affidavit or other evidence of the fact.<sup>7</sup> The recent filing of a pleading unless affecting the party will be sufficient.<sup>8</sup>

(f) Public Holiday.—Where a statute makes a day a public holiday, a cause in progress may be continued over such day.<sup>9</sup>

(g) Nearness to Time of Crime.—A motion made for a continuance, made at the first trial of a prosecution for a capital offence charged to have been committed nine days before, ought to be granted.<sup>10</sup>

1. Childs v. State, 10 Tex. App. 183; Branch v. Du Bose, 55 Ga. 21.

2. Eldridge v. State, 12 Tex. App. 208.

But a continuance will not be granted because counsel is surprised at the testimony of his adversary, and because other testimony, by interrogatories sued out by the opposing party, has not arrived, though the counsel states that he expects to show by the other witnesses of the opposing party contradictory evidence to that proven by the witness who surprised him. Branch v. Du Bose, 55 Ga. 21.

3. Ross v. Anstill, 2 Cal. 183.

4. McCutchin v. Bankston, 2 Ga. 244.

5. McCurdy v. Terry, 33 Ga. 49.

6. Davis v. Millaudon, 14 La. Ann. 808.

7. People v. Symonds, 22 Cal. 348.

8. A party not affected by an answer filed on the day of trial. Johnson v. Rankin, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 86. Or an amendment. Cummings v. Rice, 9 Tex. 527.

Where, after a referee has made his report, additional testimony is offered by one party and admitted, and the other objects to its admission and asks for a continuance to enable him to produce testimony to meet it, a continuance will not be granted unless the party moving for it makes an affidavit of surprise, or shows that he could probably controvert it with additional evidence. McKinney v. Jones, 55 Wis. 39; Sapp v. Aikin (Iowa, 1885), 28 N. Rep. 24; Cheney v. Drywood, etc. (Minn. 1883), 26 N. Rep. 236.

9. A statute of the State, made February 22, the birthday of Washington, a public holiday, and prescribed that no public business, except in case of necessity, should be transacted on that day. The defendant was indicted for murder, and his trial was continued through the 22d of February, a verdict being rendered on the 23d. Held, that the trial judge was necessarily the judge of the necessity for continuing the trial, and that such a continuance did not constitute a mistrial. State v. Sorenson, 15 Chic. L. J. 370.

10. The motion which was made for a continuance went into details to show the verity of the grounds, and was supported by the oath of the accused, which was fortified by that of counsel. It appears from the showing made that it was not until the 8th day of October, the day preceding that fixed for the trial, that the accused could make definite arrangements with counsel for his defence, and that the latter could not, in the short delay ensuing between the occurrence of the act and day assigned for trial prepare the defence in such a manner as the gravity of the case demanded, involving the life of a citizen; that the counsel could not procure necessary books in time, although due diligence had been used; and could not safely proceed to trial in an unprepared condition, as the case, it was alleged, involves many nice and intricate questions of law, requiring long, patient, and careful study and consideration of authorities.

From the foregoing recitals it appears

(h) Newly-discovered Evidence.—Newly-discovered evidence may be ground for a continuance of a case, even after trial has commenced.<sup>1</sup>

Also when it was discovered so recently before the trial that a deposition could not be taken.<sup>2</sup>

The discovery of a material witness in another State is a good cause for continuance.<sup>3</sup> It will, however, not be granted unless diligence is exercised.<sup>4</sup>

(i) To Enable Party to Procure Evidence.—A continuance will be granted for the absence of evidence only when proper legal means to obtain it have been used, or it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that such means would have been ineffectual; inadvertently omitting to produce evidence in possession of the party himself is insufficient.<sup>5</sup> The evidence must be material,<sup>6</sup> and a cause may be continued after hearing for further proof.<sup>7</sup> The party applying must have used due diligence.<sup>8</sup> Sufficient time after the

that the accused was convicted on the 9th day following the commission of the crime for which he was indicted, and that the application was made for a continuance on the first calling of the case for trial.

In State v. Ferris, 16 La. Ann. 425, the court said, in reference to accusals in criminal cases: "The law securing to them the assistance of counsel did not intend to extend a barren right, for of what avail would be the privilege of counsel . . . if on the spur of the moment, without an opportunity of studying the case, the former should be compelled to enter into the investigation of the case?"

In a more recent prosecution, State v. Simpson, 38 La. Ann., this court held that the right to be heard by counsel, guaranteed by the constitution to the accused, is not an empty formality, but an inestimable privilege, and that counsel should be allowed reasonable time to prepare the defence. State v. Brooks (Supreme Ct. La. 1887), 1 S. Rep. 421.

It is left to the sound discretion of the judge to determine what time should be allowed counsel, appointed by him to defend the accused, for the purpose of preparing the defence, and also grant or refuse an application for a continuance on that score, made on the day of trial. State v. Wilson, 33 La. Ann. 261.

1. Holmes v. Dobbins, 19 Ga. 630.

2. Alcorn v. Rafferty, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 220.

A case against an administrator was continued because he had discovered only a few days before material evidence among the intestate's papers. Homquiber v. Gerard, 2 Wash. C. C. 164.

3. Campbell v. Sproat, 1 Yeates (Pa.),

20; People v. Vermilyea, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 369.

4. Potter v. Coward, 1 Meigs (Tenn.), 22.

That the materiality of the evidence for which a continuance is asked was not ascertained by the affiant "until the present term of the court," does not dispense with showing of diligence to procure it. Wheeler v. Styles, 28 Tex. 240.

An affidavit for continuance of a chancery suit on the ground of newly discovered evidence must disclose the nature of the evidence, and show that it could not have been discovered sooner by the use of due diligence. Rossett v. Greer, 3 W. Va. 1.

The fact that a case has been four years in court is no reason for a refusal of further continuance, provided proper grounds are shown for it, as when it is asked for to obtain newly discovered evidence, and when the party applying is not chargeable with delay. Hooper v. Memphis, 19 Ga. 85.

5. Kuhland v. Sedgwick, 17 Cal. 123; State v. Norman, 16 Ind. 192.

A continuance was properly refused where the party desiring the testimony of a witness absent in a distant parish, instead of taking out a commission to examine him, dispatched a special messenger to bring the witness; by doing so he took upon himself the risk of the witness being in court. Jeter v. Heard, 12 La. Ann. 3.

6. Bird v. McElvaine, 10 Ind. 40; Mann v. Waters, 30 Ga. 220; Bollston Bank v. Marine Bank, 16 Wis. 125; Trammel v. Pilgrim, 20 Tex. 158.

7. Washburn v. Holmes, Wright (Ohio), 67.

8. When a cause is called for trial, a filing of the pleadings should always be allowed to the testimony of witnesses that are material.<sup>1</sup>

(j) To Await Depositions.—A deposition expected, material to the merits, and to obtain which proper diligence has been used, is a good ground for a continuance.<sup>2</sup> But it must be shown that the testimony is material.<sup>3</sup> And it must also appear that the deposition was taken at the time designated in the notice.<sup>4</sup> Depositions taken without notice to the opposite party,<sup>5</sup> or where the party taking it has been deprived of his testimony by a mere trick, will be a ground for a continuance.<sup>6</sup> And even a second continuance may be granted to await the coming of a deposition.<sup>7</sup>

(k) Loss or Absence of Papers.—If, because of the destruction of papers, the defendant has been unable to ascertain the nature of the suit, he is entitled to a continuance.<sup>8</sup> But not if they have been taken away by the attorney applying for it.<sup>9</sup> Neither will a case be continued because no declaration is filed in the case that is at issue.<sup>10</sup>

(l) Agreements of Counsel.—Agreements made by counsel will be sufficient to grant a continuance,<sup>11</sup> but they must be in writ-

continuance should be granted to either party for the purpose of procuring the necessary evidence, which he proves that he has used due diligence to obtain, but which he has been prevented from obtaining by lack of time or unforeseen circumstances. Montgomery v. Ins. Co., 18 La. Ann. 227.

Where a motion was made for a continuance to allow the defendant to ascertain the existence of a fact, in order that it might be proved, if found to exist, it was held that such motion could not be granted, and that motions for continuances could never be granted except for very strong reasons. Mayrant v. Gurignard, 3 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 112; Spengler v. Davy, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 381.

1. Ill. Mu. Fire Co. v. Marseilles Man. Co., 6 Ill. 236.

2. Marsh v. Hubbert, 4 McLean (U. S.), 364.

3. Morgan v. Voss, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 109; Hawley v. Sterling, 2 Cal. 470.

4. Kisskaden v. Grant, 1 Kan. 328. A notice was served to take depositions on Dec. 9, and thereafter taking was to be continued from day to day, if necessary, until completed. The officer's return stated that the plaintiff appeared by attorney, and the adjournment from day to day, the plaintiff making appearance as aforesaid until Dec. 16. It was held that the return was insufficient, as showing a ground for continuance.

5. Straus v. Marine Ins. Co., 1 Cranch C. Ct. 343; Barrell v. Simonton, 3 Cranch C. Ct. 681.

6. Kenton v. Spencer, 6 Ind. 321.

7. Where a party has used extraordinary diligence to procure the execution and return of a commission issued to take depositions in a foreign country, a second continuance of the cause will be allowed. Blagg v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 Wash. 5; Waskun v. Diamond, Hempst. 701.

8. Suggett v. Bank of Ky., 8 Dana (Ky.), 201.

9. Wright v. Clark, 2 Greene (Iowa), 86.

Where, on the ground of loss of papers, among which was the deposition of a witness for the defendant, which had been deposited in the clerk's office, and by the clerk charged to the defendant's attorney, who disavowed all knowledge of them, the defendant applied for a continuance, it was held that the party applying for a continuance ought to satisfy the court that the necessity for it had not been occasioned by his fault. Baker v. Johnson, 16 Tex. 133.

10. Close v. Douglass, Wright (Ohio), 738; Harvey v. Snow, 1 Yeates (Pa.), 156.

11. Hort v. Jones, 2 Bay (Conn.), 440.

A stipulation made on Oct. 18 to continue a cause, and that any motion which could be made in the October term might be made at the next term, was held to allow of such motion only as could have been made on or after Oct. 18, and not to cover those the right to make which had been already lost at the time of the stipulation. Reynolds v. Lawrence, 15 Cal. 359.

ing;<sup>1</sup> and an agreement that the cause will not be hurried or pressed is insufficient.

(m) To Await Determination of Other Proceedings.—A suit will not be continued because a suit for the same matter is pending in equity, where a plea of such suit would not avail in abatement.<sup>2</sup>

Where cross-actions are pending, either of them may be continued on the defendant's motion until he shall obtain judgment in his action.<sup>4</sup> And where the same land is attached by several creditors, the subsequent attaching creditors may continue their actions until the actions on which the prior attachments are made are continued.<sup>5</sup> An administrator may have a case against his estate continued until he ascertains whether the estate is solvent.<sup>6</sup>

(n) Alterations or Amendment of Pleadings.—After a substantial amendment to a petition, the defendant is entitled to a continuance.<sup>7</sup> But such an amendment must be a material one.<sup>8</sup> A matter of form will not be sufficient,<sup>9</sup> and it must be made near

1. Peralty v. Marcia, 3 Cal. 185; Griswold v. Lawrence, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 507.

2. Hort v. Jones, 2 Day (Conn.), 440.

Where the plaintiff's suits were pending between different plaintiffs and the same defendant, and the same counsel appeared in all the suits, and agreed that the defence pleaded and answer filed in one suit, which was not the first on the docket, should be considered as pleaded and filed in all, and that the suit should be first tried, and that the judgment rendered therein should be rendered in the other cases, and afterwards the plaintiff, against the defendant's will, who had three days' notice of the motion, moved the court to take up one of the other cases first, which motion was allowed by the court, whereupon the defendant moved for a continuance for time to plead and make defence, to which plaintiff replied that the pleadings already prepared in the other cases could be used in this. Held, that a continuance was properly refused. Hancock v. Winans, 20 Tex. 320.

3. Davis v. Hunt, 2 Bailey (S. Car.), 412.

4. Adams v. Manning, 17 Mass. 178; Winslow v. Hathaway, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 211; Goodenow v. Buttrick, 7 Mass. 140.

5. Barnard v. Fisher, 7 Mass. 71; Hoyt v. Gelston, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 178.

6. Blossom v. Goodwin, 1 Mass. 502; Hunt v. Whitney, 4 Mass. 624.

If, while a trustee process is pending, the principal debtor sues the trustee to recover the property or debt attached, the trustee may have the action continued. Winthrop v. Carlton, 8 Mass. 456.

7. Wyatt v. Harden, Hempst. 17;

Croell v. Marks, 2 Ill. 525; Tunstall v. Hamilton, 8 Mo. 500; Ill. Mutual Ins. Co. v. Marseilles Man. Co., 6 Ill. 236.

When the nature of an action is changed by an amendment it is considered as a new cause, and may be continued, although at the fifth term after its commencement. Schneitzel v. Purcell, 1 Cranch C. Ct., 246; Lambart v. Smith, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 347.

8. Russel v. Martin, 3 Ill. 492; Roberts v. Ward, 8 Black. (Ind.) 333; Hawks v. Lavelle, 8 Ill. 227; McKinney v. Harter, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 385; Eames v. Morgan, 37 Ill. 260; Epperly v. Little, 6 Ind. 344; Watts v. McKemay, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 561; Cabanis v. Lyon, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 332; Coff v. Couts, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 235; McMahan v. Murphy, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 535.

9. Scott v. Cromwell, 1 Ill. 7; Richard v. Nixon, 20 Pa. St. 19.

An amendment by setting out the bond on which suit is brought entitles the defendant to a continuance. Rountree v. Stuart, 1 Ill. 43. Otherwise of an amendment of a declaration by changing the word "twenty" to "twenty-five," and inserting the words "promise to pay," if a copy of the note is filed with the application. Crane v. Graves, 1 Ill. 37.

Inserting in a declaration on a note at the trial of the suit the words "without defalcation, for value received, payable and negotiable at, etc.," is a material amendment, entitling the party to a continuance. Ohio R. Co. v. Palm, 18 Ill. 22.

An amendment by correcting a misspelling of the plaintiff's name does not entitle the party to a continuance. Beck the time of trial.<sup>1</sup> And the amendment or alteration must be such as will cause surprise to the opposite party, not enabling him to prepare for trial.<sup>2</sup>

(o) Mistake.—When it appears in the progress of a trial that a cause, if required to proceed, will suffer from the honest mistake of the party or his counsel, a continuance should be granted.<sup>3</sup> But the mistaken advice of counsel not to prepare for trial is insufficient.<sup>4</sup>

(p) Inability of Witness to Understand the Nature of an Oath.—A continuance will sometimes be granted where a witness whose evidence is material has no sense of the obligation of the nature of an oath.<sup>5</sup>

v. Williams, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 374; Nimmo v. Worthington, 1 Ind. 376.

Or by striking out the names of a part of the defendants. Taylor v. Jones, 1 Ind. 17.

An amendment of a mere repetition of a word is no ground. Chalmers v. Lane, 5 Mo. 289.

Also allowing the plaintiff to sign it is insufficient. Harvey v. Renfro, 7 Mo. 187.

1. A material change in the petition, made less than ten days before the beginning of the term, entitles the party to a continuance. Lick v. Architectural, etc., 24 Ill. 551. Likewise a replication after rule day. Veach v. Haebaugh, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 402.

When a declaration is amended after plea pleaded, the defendant is entitled to a continuance. Holmes v. Lansing, 1 Johns. Cas. (N.Y.) 248; Le Roy v. Delaware, etc., 2 Wash. 223.

A cause had been two terms at issue; at a subsequent term an amendment was made in the answer entirely changing the ground of defence, and on application of the plaintiff the cause was continued. Makepeace v. State, 8 Ind. 41.

A replication filed at a subsequent term will be sufficient. Bundine v. Blumenthous, 8 Mo. 695.

2. Kirkpatrick v. Holman, 25 Ind. 293.

A plea claimed to be defective, by its substance sufficiently apprising the opposite party of what he must meet, was allowed to be amended. The opposing party filed an affidavit that he had up to and during the trial fully relied upon these defects to defeat the bill, and moved a continuance. Held, that neither the circumstances nor the affidavit showed such grounds for surprise as to render the refusal of the continuance erroneous. Gillett v. Robbins, 12 Wis. 354.

3 C. of L.—52

3. Earnest v. Napier, 15 Ga. 306; Bergin v. Riggs, 40 Ill. 61; Kelsey v. Berry, 40 Ill. 69.

4. Musgrave v. Perkins, 9 Cal. 211.

The fact that the counsel of the party advised him that a case would not stand for trial at special term is no ground for a continuance. It is a mistake of law in which there is no merit. Hall v. Mount, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 73.

5. Leache's Cases, 435; 3 Wharton Crim. Law (7th Ed.), § 3034.

Insufficient Causes.—A cause will not be continued for the following reasons:

Because a report of the recent trial of another cause, depending on the same facts and principles, has been published in a newspaper. Hurst v. Wickerly, 1 Wash. C. C. 276.

On the ground that after the trial has begun a juror is found to be incompetent. Hook v. Stovall, 26 Ga. 704.

Because the defendant has made application for the benefit of the bankrupt law. Givens v. Robbins, 5 Ala. 676.

On the ground that the plaintiff could not discover the place of the residence of his witnesses. Smith v. Potts, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 123.

Because the presiding judge has in another case expressed an opinion on one of the points involved. Simons v. Sheftall, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 90.

To allow a party who has an equitable defence to enjoin the proceeding at law. Dudley v. Love, 35 Ga. 148.

Because a full report of the decision of the supreme court, in a case remanded for new trial, has not been received in the court below. Walker v. Floyd, 3 Ga. 237.

Because a copy of the note on which the action is brought is given with the names only of the payers written on the back. Roberts v. Thompson, 28 Ill. 79.

Because of the conscientious scruples of a Jew to appear and attend the trial of 6. Review of Discretionary Action in Regard to Granting Continuances.—Quite a number of the courts hold that it is within the discretion of the trial court, and that its decision cannot be reviewed on error.<sup>1</sup> But the better doctrine seems to be that it will only not be reviewed where the discretion has not been abused to the prejudice of the person applying;<sup>2</sup> and that an improper refusal is a matter of error.<sup>3</sup>

But the improper granting of a continuance is never subject to review;<sup>4</sup> and the refusal of the court to grant a continuance after a cause is at issue is not a matter for which error can be assigned.<sup>5</sup> The discretion of the judge in granting or refusing continuances is to be exercised more rigidly after long delays, or several continuances granted, than upon the first application.<sup>6</sup> his cause on Saturday. Phillips v. Gratz, 2 Pa. 412.

Because a prochein ami for an infant plaintiff has been appointed at the term to which the writ was returnable. Harvey v. Coffin, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 566.

Because the party who asks for a continuance has been summoned and sworn as a grand juror in a mayor's court. Browne (Pa.), 272.

On the ground that the party in a suit at law, a few days before the time appointed for the trial, filed a bill in chancery for a discovery of usury, as auxiliary to his defence, unless he makes affidavit that the usury had recently come to his knowledge. Ross v. Norvell, 3 Munf. (Va.) 170; Swearingen v. Swearingen, Wright (Ohio), 108.

Because evidence is expected to arise out of an order or decree of the chancellor beneficial to him who asks a continuance. McMechen v. McLaughlin, 4 Harr. & M. (Md.) 166.

Because the plaintiff's attorney furnished the defendant's attorney with a copy of the declaration that varied from the record in some unimportant particular. Ogden v. Gibbons, 5 N. J. L. (2 South.) 518.

For want of security of costs, unless the omission has prevented a preparation for trial. Graham v. Douglass, Wright (Ohio), 758; Cox v. Fenwick, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 183, 297.

1. Sims v. Hundley, 6 How. (U. S.) 1; Thompson v. Selden, 20 How. (U. S.) 194; Campbell v. Strong, Hempst. (U. S. C. C.) 265; Wardlaw v. Hammond, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 454; Knox v. Arnold, 1 Wis. 70; Evans v. Bolling, 5 Ala. 550; Wilkowski v. Halle, 37 Ga. 678; Porter v. Lee, 16 Pa. St. 412; State v. Duncan, 6 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 98; Bohr v. Steamboat, etc., 15 Miss. 715; Baxter v. People, 8 Ill. 368.

A motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, under all the circumstances of the case; and although an appellate court will supervise the action of the court on such motion, it will not reverse a judgment on that ground unless it is plainly erroneous. Davis v. Walker, 7 W. Va. 447.

2. Magruder v. Snapp, 9 Ark. 108; Holmes v. People, 10 Ill. 478; Spence v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 282; Turner v. Eustice, 8 Ark. 119; Fountain v. Anderson, 33 Ga. 372; State v. Vigoreux, 13 La. Ann. 309; McDaniel v. State, 16 Miss. 401; Loeffner v. State, 10 Ohio St. 598.

Where a sufficient prima facie cause for a continuance has been shown on affidavit, which has been refused by the trial court, the supreme court will not reverse the judgment if it satisfactorily appears at the trial that the reasons for which the continuance was asked were false and fabricated, and for delay. Porter v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 496.

3. Bradbury v. Dougherty, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 467; Riggs v. Fenton, 3 Mo. 28.

Where a witness for the defence was induced to leave the court before testifying by a person who was aiding the prosecution, and the defendant made affidavit that the witness's attendance could not afterwards be procured, and that her evidence would show that the accused took the life of the deceased in necessary self-defence, it was held error to overrule defendant's motion to discharge the jury and continue the case. Joseph v. Com. (Ky. App. 1886), 1 S. W. Rep. 4.

4. Johnson v. Strader, 3 Mo. 359; Holt v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 6, 159; Wimbenly v. Collier, 24 Ga. 169.

5. Woods v. Young, 4 Cranch C. Ct. 237; McCourcy v. Doremus, 10 N. J. L. (5 Hals.) 245; Burrow v. Hill, 13 How. (U. S.) 54; McDougald v. Central Bank, 5 Ga. 185. I should think that even in such cases there might be instances even in the States adopting this rule where error might be found.

6. Wilson v. Koehnlein, 1 W. Va. 145.

The granting a delay of a trial until the party can obtain the attendance of a witness unexpectedly absent will be left to the discretion of the judge.<sup>1</sup> Under some statutes, certain requirements being complied with, no discretion is given the judge;<sup>2</sup> and where the court has discretion, it is presumed to be rightly exercised until the contrary clearly appears.<sup>3</sup> An improper refusal will be caused by the witness appearing and testifying.<sup>4</sup>

7. Requisite Diligence.—A party desiring a continuance of a cause is bound to show that he has made reasonable exertions to prepare for trial, or show some good reason for not making such exertions.<sup>5</sup>

And when it is asked on account of an absent witness, it should show such a state of facts and circumstances as will prove that he has used due diligence to obtain the testimony.<sup>6</sup>

1. Leggett v. Boyd, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 377.

2. Under section 2050 of the Compiled Laws of 1884, where in a criminal prosecution a motion and affidavit for a continuance upon the ground of the absence of material witnesses are filed, the opposing party cannot deny the truth of the matters alleged in the application. In such case, where a proper showing is made, the trial court must grant the continuance. Territory v. Kinney, 9 West Coast Rep. (1884) 268.

3. State v. Dunn, 80 Mo. (1884) 681.

Only upon clear proof of an arbitrary abuse of right will the appellate court interfere with the exercise of the discretion of the lower court in refusing to grant a continuance. Byers v. McPhee, 4 Col. 204.

4. Weeks v. State, 31 Miss. 490.

5. Dunlap v. Davis, 10 Ill. 84; Toledo, etc., v. Fisher, 13 Ind. 258; Coady v. Walker, 20 Tex. 205.

6. Burris v. Wise, 2 Ark. 33; Pence v. Christman, 15 Ind. 257.

The degree of diligence required from the party applying for a continuance on account of an absent witness must depend on the circumstances of the case. Greater diligence should be required on a second or any subsequent application. The party should state that he expects to be able to secure the attendance of his witness at the next term, that the witness was not sent away by his permission, and all the facts showing the materiality of his evidence, and that the application is not made for delay. If within the reach of process, an attachment should be issued for the witness. Shook v. Thomas, 21 Ill. 87.

Where a defendant in a criminal action asks and obtains a continuance of one week to take a deposition of six witnesses, and at the expiration of that time admits that no steps have been taken to take the depositions, and applies for a further continuance to take depositions of witnesses, five of whom are the same as those in respect of whom time had previously been granted, the continuance is properly refused. The Gold Brick Case, Sup. Tenn. 1887, 3 S. W. Rep. 349.

Witnesses for whose evidence a continuance was asked resided in a county other than that in which the action was pending. Process for them was secured by the defendant, and by him delivered to the sheriff of the forum, who promised to transmit the process to the sheriff of the county where the witnesses resided. Non-service was the basis of the application for a continuance. Held, that diligence was not shown. Hailes v. State, 10 Tex. App. 490.

To authorize a continuance, the party applying must show reasonable diligence in procuring the attendance of witnesses, and in preparing for trial. Kelly v. Saunders, 35 Mo. 200; Doe v. Johnson, 3 Ill. 522; Babcock v. Babcock, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 52; Puhain v. Webb, 26 Tex. 95.

Defendant was served with process July 30; the term of court commenced August 13th following, when application was made for continuance on account of absent witnesses, it appeared that the witnesses in question lived a five hours' ride from the court town; that defendant knew it, and had taken no measures to secure their attendance. Held, that due diligence was not shown. Kirkland v. Kline, 16 Ind. 313.

An affidavit that a witness had promised to attend court, but owing to inclement weather, or some other cause unknown, had failed to do so, and but for relying on such promise the plaintiff

A subpoena must be issued, unless a good reason for not doing so be shown to exist;<sup>1</sup> but time enough must be allowed that service could be made.<sup>2</sup> And it must appear positively that due diligence has been exercised before the rulings of the trial court will be interfered with.<sup>3</sup>

8. Avoiding by Admission.—A continuance will not be granted on account of the absence of a witness if the adverse party will admit that the witness would testify as is supposed by the party moving for a continuance.<sup>4</sup> And in some States it is held that it is not sufficient that the opposite party should merely admit that the witness would have testified to the specific facts: there must be an admission that these facts are absolutely true, and that they cannot be contradicted;<sup>5</sup> and this seems to be the majority would have had a deposition taken, etc., does not show a case of diligence to warrant a continuance. Educational Assoc., etc., v. Hilshark, 4 Kan. 36.

An affidavit of the defendant in a criminal case, that he is "informed and believes" that he obtained an attachment for certain witnesses and mailed it to the sheriff, without stating the grounds of his belief or who mailed it, does not show diligence to entitle him to a continuance. Labbaite v. State, 6 Tex. App. (1879) 257.

An affidavit of a defendant in a criminal case stated that he did not know until Saturday that certain of his material witnesses had removed from the State, and that his case had been set down for trial on the next Tuesday. Held, that he set forth a good ground for a continuance. State v. Dakin, 52 Iowa, 395.

An affidavit stated that the witness was somewhere in the State of Tennessee, but deponent did not know in what county; that deponent had been in jail two months awaiting the term of court at which he would be arraigned; but it did not appear that either the accused or his counsel had written, making any inquiry as to the whereabouts of the desired witness, nor did he furnish any excuse for not so doing. Held, that there was no show of sufficient diligence. Hall v. State, 8 Ind. 439.

1: Lampson v. People (Cal. 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 593; Blum v. Bassett, 3 S. W. (1886) 35; Adams v. Peck, 4 Iowa, 551; Mugg v. Graves, 22 Ind. 236.

The mere fact that the witness is the sheriff of the county does not excuse the want of ordinary diligence to procure his presence upon the trial; the application for continuance should state that he was accustomed to attend the services of the court, and that the applicant expected him to be in attendance. Adair v.

Cooper, 25 Tex. 548; Bone v. Hillen, 1 Treadw. (S. Car.) Const. 198.

2. But where an attorney of the court was a witness and promised to attend, it was necessary that a subpoena should have been served on him in order to obtain a continuance on account of his absence. White v. Lynch, 2 Del. 183.

An application for a continuance, setting forth that a process for an absent witness had been promptly placed in the hands of the sheriff, but not stating whether it had been returned, does not show sufficient diligence. Cooper v. State, 7 Tex. App. 194.

Neither will service of a subpoena on a witness residing in another county than that of the forum, with no attachment. Chaplain v. State, 7 Tex. App. 87.

3. Solomon v. Norton (Ariz. 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 108.

4. Farrand v. Bouchell, Harp. (S. C.) 83; O'Neal v. New York, etc., 3 Nev. 141; Olds v. Com., 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 465; Baldwin v. Walden, 30 Ga. 829; People v. Brown, 59 Cal. 345; Hamilton v. State, 3 Ind. 552; State v. Mooney, 10 Iowa, 506; State v. McComb, 18 Iowa, 43; State v. Brett, 6 La. Ann. 653; State v. Hatfield, 72 Mo. 518.

5. Willis v. People, 2 Ill. 399; Supervisors v. Miss. R., 21 Ill. 338; Brent v. Heard, 40 Miss. 370; Pool v. Devers, 30 Ala. 672; Nare v. Horton, 9 Ind. 563; Murphy v. Murphy, 31 Mo. 322; Warren v. State, 29 Tex. 464.

"The practice of making concessions in such cases is novel, and, I apprehend, not well calculated to advance justice. But if to be encouraged, it seems to me that the prosecutor should admit all that the defendant can possibly obtain by the witness, which is the truth of the facts proposed to be proved. Such seems to have been the opinion of the court in Brill v. Lord, 14 Johns. (N. Y.)

rule.<sup>1</sup> Some States have also held that the defendant in a criminal case could not be forced into trial by even admitting the truth of what the absent witness will swear if present.<sup>2</sup>

341." C. J. Savage in People v. Vermilyea, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 387.

In order to avoid a postponement, at the request of the defendant, to procure the testimony of an absent witness, the prosecutor must admit the truth of the facts stated in the affidavit; and in such case evidence in rebuttal to impeach the absent witness is incompetent and inadmissible. Powers v. State, 80 Ind. (1883) 77.

1. See cases under n. 5, preceding page. Contra, Olds v. Com., 3 Marsh. (Ky.) 467.

If, upon the motion for a continuance of a cause, upon affidavit that a material witness is absent, the opposite party, to prevent a continuance, admits that the absent witness, if present, would testify as stated in the affidavit, he is not thereby precluded from offering evidence at the trial, to disprove or explain away the force of the testimony which he has admitted the witness would give. Besitor v. Sardo, 2 Cranch C. Ct. 260.

When application is made for a continuance on account of absent witnesses the court may, in the exercise of its discretion, require the other party to admit the truth of the facts proposed to be proved by the absent witness, or merely that these witnesses, if present, would swear to these facts; but an admission that the absent witness would swear to those facts is not an admission of their absolute truth. Starr v. State, 25 Ala. 38.

2. Domiges v. State, 15 Miss. 475; Goodman v. State, 1 Meigs (Tenn.), 195; Dewarren v. State, 29 Tex. 464; Wassells v. State, 26 Ind. 35; People v. Dodge, 28 Cal. 445.

"It is difficult to see any good reason for either of these latter rulings, unless the statutes clearly and unmistakably lead to such a position. To require the State to admit the absolute truth of the supposed testimony of an absent witness in order to prevent a postponement, would be to require it to give to the statement of others, regarding what the witness would swear to, a higher credit and a greater probative force than the direct testimony of the witness himself would have, if delivered by him in person." Merritt A. Thompson, Esq., in 6 Crim. Law Mag. 805.

Contra, in Ohio, in Comerford v. State, it was held that "in a criminal as in a civil case an application for the postponement of a trial to a subsequent term is addressed to the discretion of the court.

And in a criminal case, where such motion is made on behalf of the accused to enable him to procure the attendance, or, under section 144 of the Criminal Code, the deposition of a witness who resides out of the State, and whose testimony he has not been able to obtain, it is not error for the court to require the applicant to set out in his affidavit, filed in support of the motion, the facts he expects to prove by such witness; or refuse to grant the motion, in case the prosecution elects to admit upon trial that the witness would so testify, and to treat the statement of facts so set out as his deposition." 23 Ohio St. 599.

When, in such case, the prosecutor was permitted, on the argument of the case to the jury, against the objection of the accused, to comment upon such affidavit, and to read the whole of it to the jury, held that it was not error to the prejudice of the accused. "The accused has the right to confront his accusers, but it does not follow therefrom that the witnesses for the defendant have the right to confront the witnesses for the prosecution. It is safe to say that a defendant will make a much better case for himself in his affidavit for a continuance than he could with his witnesses in court; and if, notwithstanding what he says, he can prove in his affidavit the Territory is willing to go to trial, and to admit that his witness would, if present, testify as he sets forth, no injury could be done the defendant. If his witnesses were not myths, if they really had being and existence, he would generally gain more than he would lose by not exhibiting them before a jury. It is easy enough for a criminal defendant to set forth in an affidavit the names of witnesses who are absent from the Territory and in a foreign country,—as in this case,—and the higher the crime, the further away the witnesses are declared to be; and if such showing can compel the continuance of criminal cases, then there can be no more criminal trials in this Territory. The defendant should be given a reasonable opportunity to prepare for trial, and to procure the attendance of his witnesses, if the court is satisfied that he has any witnesses, and that his application is not a sham. The trial court should exercise a sound and legal discretion in this regard. No guilty man is ever ready for trial. Every continuance of his cause brings him so much nearer to an acquittal. The trial court

CONTINUE—CONTINUOUS—CONTINUALLY.—To remain in a given place; to carry on or extend from one time, place, or condition to another. Without break, cessation, or interruption; constantly prolonged.<sup>1</sup>

CONTRABAND OF WAR. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

CONTRACTOR. (See also MASTER AND SERVANT; NEGLIGENCE.)—One who, as an independent business, undertakes to do specific jobs of work, without submitting himself to control as to the petty details.<sup>2</sup> must judge whether his application for a continuance is made merely for delay or in good faith, to the end that justice may be done; and unless there is a legal discretion in this regard, appellate courts will not interfere." Temling v. Hauling (Mont. Terr. 1887), 12 Pac. Rep. 755. See dissenting opinion on this case.

Where an affidavit for the continuance of a case, on the ground of the inability to procure the testimony of the absent witness, contains a statement of what is expected to be proved by the witness, and such statement is given in evidence on the trial as the testimony of the witness, its credibility may be attacked in the same manner as that of a deposition, by impeaching the veracity of the witness. Insurance Co. v. Wright, 33 Ohio St. 533.

In a criminal case defendant filed an affidavit for a continuance, on account of absence of witnesses, the prosecution consenting that it might be used as the deposition of said witnesses. Held, the affidavit could not be impeached on the grounds (1) that defendant might with reasonable diligence have procured the attendance of the witnesses, or taken their depositions; (2) that he had good reason to believe that if the witnesses would testify, the testimony would be untrue; (3) that there were no such persons in existence as those named in the affidavit. State v. Roark, 23 Kan. (1880) 147.

See, generally, ADJOURNMENT; CRIMINAL PRACTICE; PRACTICE; TRIAL.

1. Webster.

"Continuous" means something the use of which is constant and uninterrupted. Suffield v. Brown, 4 De G. J. & S. 199.

Continuous Injury.—By the term "continuous injury" is not meant never ceasing, but recurring at repeated intervals, so as to be of repeated occurrence, and so as to be of the same sort of damnification to the plaintiff as an actual continuous mischief would be. Wood v. Sutcliffe, 8 Eng. L. & Eq. 220.

Continuing Guaranty.—One who enters into what is called a "continuing guaranty" is one who undertakes to be responsible for moneys to be advanced or goods to be sold to another from time to time. Buck v. Buck, 18 N. Y. 343.

Continuing Trustee.—A continuing trustee is one who continues to act in the trusts after the completion of his appointment. In re Coates v. Parsons, 56 Law Jour. Rep. Chan. (N. S.) 242.

The words "continuing trustee" apply to a person who continues to act in a trust together with trustees or a trustee newly appointed, and not to a person who is not to continue to be a trustee after new trustees are appointed, but who ceased to be a trustee at the moment they were appointed. In re Coates v. Parsons, 34 Ch. Div. 376.

"Continuous Carriage" as used in Interstate Commerce Act.—This act does not include or apply to all carriers engaged in interstate commerce, but only such as use a railway or a railway and water craft "under command, control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment" of property from one State to another; nor does it apply to the carriage of property by rail wholly within one State, although shipped from or destined to a place without the State, so that such place is not in a foreign country. Ex p. Koehler, 30 Fed. Rep. 367.

Continuous Easement.—See EASEMENT.

2. He represents the will of his employer only as to the result and not as to the means. Shearm. & R. on Neg. § 76.

Job Work.—Where in unloading a vessel, handling goods, or cutting and delivering timber, the employee exercises distinct and independent employment, and is not under immediate control, direction, or supervision of the employer, it is not work of a servant, but of a contractor. De Forrest v. Wright, 2 Mich. 368.

Even though paid by the job the employee is a servant if he is at all times subject to the employer's control, works in the mode he directs, and employs such men as he indicates. Sadler v. Henlock, 4 El. & B. 570.

The doctrine exists in favor of municipal corporations employing contractors. Painter v. Pittsburg, 46 Pa. St. 213.

See MASTER AND SERVANT.

CONTRACT (GENERAL PRINCIPLES).

NOTE.—The reader of the article on Contract is especially referred to Pollock's "Principles of Contract," edited by Gustavus H. Wald, Esq., of the Cincinnati Bar (Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati). Mr. Wald's notes of all the latest American and English cases will be found of great value as supplementing and enlarging the original work. His annotations have been prepared with great care and ability. The writer of this article is under many obligations to this work, and has, with the permission of Mr. Wald and the publishers, made liberal extracts from it.

- Definition of Legal Rights*, 824. [824.
Rights in Personam and In Rem. Executed and Executory Contracts, 824.
Executory Contracts—Definition—Obligation, 825.
Contracts Formal and Informal, 825.
Classification of Common Law Contracts, 825.
Contracts under Seal, 825.
Definition of Deed, 826.
Peculiarities Incident to Contracts under Seal, 827.
No Consideration Necessary—Illegal Consideration—Failure of Consideration, 827.
Estoppel, 828.
Deed Cannot be Varied or Discharged by Parol, 829.
Priority in Administration of Decedents' Estates, 829.
Limitation of Actions, 829.
Merger, 829. [Deeds, 829.
Authority of Agents to Execute Contracts of Record—Definition, 830.
Examples, 830.
Peculiarities, 830.
Simple Contracts—Consideration Necessary, 830.
Consideration—Definition, 831.
Adequacy—Promise to which One is Already Bound—Forbearance—Compromise of Disputed Claims, 831.
Past Consideration—Moral Obligations—Effect of Subsequent Promise, 838.
Classification of Simple Contracts, 841.
Agreement Consists of Offer and Acceptance, 841. [842.
Express and Implied Agreements, Proposal and Acceptance—Character of Proposal, 842.
Conditions of Proposal, 846.
Proposal to Unascertained Person—Offers of Reward—Bidding at Auction—Letters of Credit, 846.
Revocation of Proposal, 850.
Acceptance of Proposal—Agreement to Draw Formal Writing, 852.
Communication of Acceptance—Contracts by Post and Telegraph—Law of Place, 856. [858.
Proposal or Acceptance by Conduct, Rules do not Apply to Contracts by Deed, 859.
Implied Promises—Promises Implied in Law—Implied from Conduct—Work, etc., Done at Request—Presumption may be Rebutted—No Promise Implied between Parent and Child, 860.
Capacity of Parties, 862.
Infants, 862.
Married Women, 862.
Lunatics and Drunkards, 862.
Agents and Corporations, 862.
Persons Affected by Contract—Parties and Assignees—Third Persons, 863.
Construction of Contracts—Province of Court to Construe, 867.
Unlawful Agreements—Contrary to Positive Law, 869.
Injury to Third Persons, 870.
Fraud upon Creditors, 870.
Dealings by Agent against Duty, 871.
Fraud on Marital Rights, 872.
Prohibited Marriages, 872.
Contrary to Statute, 872.
Wagering Contracts, 873.
Contracts against Public Policy, 875.
Restraint of Trade, 882.
General Rules Relating to Illegality, 886.
Discharge of Contract—Meaning of Term, 889.
Discharge by Agreement—Express Rescission of Executory Contracts, 889.
Rule as to Executed Contracts, 890.
Negotiable Instruments, 890.
Change of Terms, 890.
New and Inconsistent Contract, 891.
Change of Parties, 892.

Definition of Legal Rights.*CONTRACT. Executed and Executory Contracts.

Form of New Agreement—Contracts under Seal—Statute of Frauds, Provisions for Discharge, 893. [892. Non-fulfilment of Specified Term, 893. Occurrence of Particular Event, 894. Option to Discharge—Domestic Service, 894. Discharge by Performance, 895. Payment—Of Less than is Due—By Promissory Note, 895. Tender, 896. Impossibility, 897. Known to Both Parties, 897. Legal Impossibility, 897. Non-existence of Subject-matter, 897. Known to One Party, 898. Effect of Change in Law, 898. Temporary Change, 899. Subsequent Impossibility, 900. Absolute Undertakings, 900. Duty Imposed by Law, 901. Destruction of Subject-matter, 901. Personal Capacity of Parties, 902. Option to Perform in One of Two Ways, 903. Impossibility Caused by Party, 903.

Discharge by Breach—Forms of Breach, 903. By Renunciation, 909. Impossibility Created by one Party, By Non-performance, 908. [907. Effect of Breach—Absolute Promises, Conditional Promises, 909. [909. Conditions Subsequent, 909. Conditions Concurrent, 910. Conditions Precedent, 911. Breach in Vital Matter, 914. Entire Contracts, 916. Acceptance of Partial Performance, Breach in Minor Matter, 922. [920. Effect of Accepting Substantial Performance, 923. Severable Contracts, 925. Discharge of Right of Action, 928. Discharge by Operation of Law, 928. Merger, 928. [928. Alteration of Written Instrument, Appointing Debtor Executor, 928. Marriage, 928. Arrest for Debt, 929. Bankruptcy, 929. Rescission for Misrepresentation, 929. Mistake—Duress—Undue Influence, 933.

1. Definition of Legal Rights.—Jurisprudence is concerned only with such rights as are recognized by law and enforced by the power of a State. A "legal right" is a capacity residing in one man of controlling, with the assent and assistance of the State, the actions of others.<sup>1</sup>

2. Rights In Personam and In Rem.—Rights may be divided into two classes—rights in personam and rights in rem. The former are those rights which are available against a certain individual; the latter those which are exercisable over an object and available against all the world, but not against one person more than another.<sup>2</sup>

3. Executed and Executory Contracts.—Contracts are either executed, which create rights in rem, or executory, which create rights in personam.<sup>3</sup> Executed contracts are not properly contracts

1. Holland on Jurisprudence, 69.

2. A servant has a right to his wages available against one certain individual—his master. This is therefore a right in personam. The owner of a horse, a garden, or other species of property, has a right to the use and enjoyment of that property; but this right is not available against one person more than another. It is a right against all the world, and therefore a right in rem. Holland on Jurisprudence, 122, 208; Leake on Cont. 1-6.

3. Thus, a man agrees to buy a horse from another, pays the price, and takes the horse to his own stable. Here a contract has taken place, but the buyer has become the owner of the horse and the seller has become the owner of the money. The transaction is at an end; the contract is executed. The horse is the property of the buyer: he has a right to it available against all the world—a right in rem. Suppose the seller agrees to deliver the horse, and the buyer to pay the price at a future time. The agreement gives the buyer a right to have the horse at the time, but it does not vest the ownership of the animal in him. The contract is executory. He has a right to at all. The term is used to signify rights in property which have been acquired by means of contract. The parties are no longer bound by a contractual tie. Nevertheless executed contracts are within the meaning of the clause in the constitution of the United States which forbids any State to pass a law impairing the obligation of contracts.<sup>1</sup>

4. Executory Contracts—Definition—Obligation.—Executory contracts, or contracts in the usual and proper sense, signify agreements or promises which create rights in personam. Every agreement or promise enforceable by law is a contract. That which renders an agreement enforceable by law is called its obligation.<sup>2</sup> An agreement or promise which has no obligation is called a nudum pactum.

5. Contracts Formal and Informal.—Contracts may be divided into formal and informal, the obligation of the one consisting of the forms and ceremonies which are observed at its making, the obligation of the other arising from facts and circumstances independent of the form.

6. Classification of Common-law Contracts.—Contracts at the common law are of three classes: 1, contracts under seal; 2, contracts of record; and, 3, simple contracts. The first two classes are formal contracts, and the third informal.

7. Contracts under Seal, Deeds, or Specialties.—The contract under seal or deed is one of the earliest, if not the earliest, forms of contract known to the common law.<sup>3</sup> It is a formal contract; that is, it derives its obligation from the sealing and delivery.

enforce his agreement, but the right is available against the seller only, and is therefore a right in personam. Holland on Jurisp. 208.

1. In Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.), 87, a State by statute granted lands to particular grantees, and subsequently revoked the grant. Held, that the grant was a contract, and could not be revoked. "Since the constitution uses the general term 'contract,' without distinguishing between those which are executory and those which are executed, it must be construed to comprehend the latter as well as the former." Per Marshall, C. J. See also Terret v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.), 43-52. In Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 518, Marshall, C. J., says, at p. 656: "If a doubt could exist that a grant is a contract, the point was decided in the case of Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.), 87, in which it was laid down that a contract is either executory or executed; . . . but whether executed or executory, . . . they both are equally within the provision of the constitution of the United States which forbids the State governments to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts." In McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 143, a State, in order to promote the drainage and sale of certain swamp lands, passed an act exempting such lands from taxation for ten years, and issued transferable scrip receivable for them. Held, that the repeal of the exemption act so far as it concerned land paid for by scrip issued before the repeal impaired the contract of the State with the holders of such scrip. See Pomeroy on Const. 349 seq., where the cases are collected and reviewed. As to what constitutes a contract within the meaning of this clause, and what laws impair its obligation, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

2. An obligation is defined by the Roman lawyers as juris vinculum quo necessitate adstringimur alicujus solvendæ rei. The obligation is the bond or chain with which the law joins together persons or groups of persons in consequence of certain voluntary acts. See Maine Ancient Law (10th Ed.), ch. ix., p. 323. For meaning of obligatio see Hunter's Roman Law (2d Ed.), bk. ii., p. 451 seq.

3. In primitive societies the law does not lend its aid to enforce promises or

8. Definition of Deed.—A deed is a writing or instrument written on paper or parchment, sealed and delivered, to prove and testify the agreement of the parties whose deed it is to the things contained in the deed. A deed cannot be written upon wood, leather, cloth, or the like, but only upon parchment or paper, for the writing upon them can be least vitiated, altered, or corrupted.<sup>1</sup> agreements unless they are accompanied with certain prescribed formalities. The form is regarded as of greater importance than the promise itself. If the form is observed, no further inquiry is made. If the form is not observed, the promise cannot be enforced. As civilization advances forms are gradually dispensed with, and men become more and more inclined to regard the promise as the real source of the obligation. Maine Ancient Law (10th Ed.), 313; Pollock on Conts. 132 seq. The formal contract of the common law was the deed—the writing sealed and delivered. When the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a sum certain, for wrongfully detained property which belonged to the plaintiff, the latter had a remedy in the action of debt. Pollock on Conts. 137, 139, 140. For early forms of contract and action of debt, see Holmes Com. Law, lecture vii., 247 seq. But where there was no question of property—where a man simply promised to do some act in the future—his promise could not be enforced unless it was made by deed. Pollock on Cont. 141, 142. For a long time no executory contract was binding unless it was made by deed. Such promises derived their obligation from the formality of the deed. In the course of time promises by word of mouth, without any formality, came to be enforced; but as we shall see hereafter, such promises were not binding without a consideration. Their obligation arose not from the promise, but from the consideration.

The history of contract in the Roman law is similar. The Romans started with only formal contracts. Hunter Introduction to Roman Law (3d Ed.), 96. The oldest of these is the verbal contract effected by means of a stipulation—that is, a formal question and answer: "Do you promise to give me your slave Stichus? I promise." This was a binding contract. If the promisor simply said, "I promise to give you my slave Stichus," his promise lacked the requisite formality and could not be enforced. Maine Ancient Law, 328; Hunter Roman Law, 459. Next in order of time is the literal or written contract, which consisted of an entry in the books of the creditor of a sum due him, and a corresponding entry in the books of the debtor. Or, finally, the debtor was not allowed to dispute the entry in the creditor's books if it were made with his consent. Hunter Roman Law, 466-526; Maine Ancient Law, 330, 331. No other formalities were necessary. Next came the contract re—the real contract, whose obligation consisted not in the observance of any forms, but in the fact that the plaintiff had performed his part of the agreement. A promise to lend could not be enforced unless made in the form of a stipulation; but if the loan were actually made, the law would compel the borrower to repay according to his promise. Performance by one party imposed an obligation upon the other. Maine Ancient Law, 331; Hunter Roman Law, 471 seq., 527 seq. Finally, we have the consensual contracts, in which all formalities are dispensed with, their obligation arising from the mere agreement of the parties. Maine Ancient Law, 332. The consensual contracts were four in number: 1. Emptio venditio (sale); 2. Locatio conductio (hire); 3. Societas (partnership); and 4. Mandatum (agency). Mandate or agency is classed with the consensual contracts by Justinian, but Hunter thinks it belongs more properly with the equitable contracts or contract re. Hunter Roman Law, 533. In the other three consensual contracts a valuable consideration is essential from their very nature. In the contract of sale the seller receives the price in return for his goods; in hiring, the laborer receives his wages in return for his work; in partnership, two or more persons combine their property or one contributes property and another labor; in either case there is a valuable consideration moving from each partner. Hunter Roman Law, 490 seq.; 516, 534.

1. Co. Litt. 35, b; 17, 1 b; Sheppard's Touchstone, 50; Leake on Conts. 135. The contents of a deed may be written or printed in ink or in pencil. Schneider v. Norris, 2 M. & S. 286.

A written contract is not binding until delivered; nor, if its delivery is con-

9. Peculiarities Incident to Contracts under Seal.—There are certain peculiarities incident to a contract under seal.

10. No Consideration Necessary—Illegal Consideration—Failure of Consideration.—It needs no consideration to support it.<sup>1</sup> But if a consideration in fact exists it must be a lawful one. If the ditional, until the condition has been fulfilled. McFarland v. Sikes, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Conn.) 252.

Where an agreement is recited in a sealed instrument, the recital will not make the agreement a specialty, unless it appears that the recital was intended to renew the agreement under seal. Douglas v. Hennessy, 11 East. Rep. (R. I.) 298.

An agreement involving the sale and purchase of lands used throughout the word "covenant," purported to bind the "heirs" of the respective parties as well as their personal representatives, and was declared to be the "act of the parties, in witness whereof" they thereunto set their hands and seals. Held, that the agreement operated as a deed, although no actual seal or scroll was affixed. Jerome v. Ortman, 33 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 759. For the requisites to a valid deed see title DEED.

1. Pillans v. Microp, 3 Burr. 1670; Cooch v. Goodman, 2 Q. B. (42 E. C. L. R.) 590; Sherbrick v. Salmond, 3 Burr. 1639; Fallowes v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 475; Sharrington v. Strotten, Plowden Rep. 308.

A merely gratuitous contract under seal is enforceable at common law. Aller v. Aller, 40 N. J. L. 446; Burkholder's Exr. v. Plank, 69 Pa. St. 225.

"What effect has want of consideration by the common law in regard to a bond on a judgment? Certainly none to destroy the conclusiveness of the seal or of the recovery. A voluntary bond is both at law and in equity a gift of the money." Gibson, C. J., in Sherk v. Endress, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 255; Harrell v. Watson, 63 N. Car. 454; Parker v. Flora, 63 N. Car. 474; Harris v. Harris, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 737.

A voluntary bond from a father to his child, though it must be postponed to creditors, yet is good against heirs, legatees, and all who stand in no higher equity than the obligor himself. Candor's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 119; Carter v. King, 11 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 125; Walker v. Walker, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 335; Wing v. Chase, 35 Me. 260.

A bond showing on its face that it was given in consideration of the release of a previous valid agreement more burdensome than the bond, cannot be impeached for want of consideration. Buechel v. Buechel, 65 Wis. 532.

Though courts of equity will not set aside a contract merely because it is voluntary, yet they will not compel specific performance of such a contract. Jeffreys v. Jeffreys, Cr. & Ph. 138; per Knight-Bruce, L. J., in Kekewick v. Manning, 1 D. M. & G. 176; 21 L. J. C. 581; Walrond v. Walrond, Johns. 18; 28 L. J. C. 97.

No consideration is required for the validity of a complete declaration of trust, yet an incomplete voluntary gift creates no right which can be enforced. Dorsey v. Packwood, 12 How. (U. S.) 126, 137; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.), 227; Est. of Webb, 49 Cal. 541; Crooks v. Crooks, 34 Ohio St. 610, 615; Wadhams v. Gay, 73 Ill. 415; Carhart's App., 78 Pa. St. 100, 119; Young v. Young, 80 N. Y. 422; Perry on Trusts, § 96 seq.

Where specific performance in equity is sought, a voluntary covenant stands scarcely or not at all on a better footing than an unsealed instrument. Per Knight-Bruce, L. J., Kekewick v. Manning, 1 D. M. G. 176, 188; Short v. Price, 17 Tex. 397; Hays v. Kershaw, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258-261; Black v. Cord, 2 H. & G. (Md.) 100; Buford's Heirs v. McKee, 1 Dana (Ky.), 107; Bayler v. Commonwealth, 40 Pa. St. 37; Lamprey v. Lamprey, 29 Minn. 151.

There are some deeds which require a consideration. Those deriving their effect from the Statute of Uses—that is, a bargain and sale, and a covenant to stand seized to uses—are void without a consideration, the first requiring a pecuniary one and the latter a consideration of blood or marriage. Shep. Touch. 510; 2 Blk. Com. 338; Sm. on Confs. 17.

Contracts in restraint of trade also are void without consideration, although under seal. Mitchell v. Reynolds, 1 P. Wms. 181; 1 S. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 778; Mallan v. May, 11 M. & W. 665; Palmer v. Stebbins, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 188.

A consideration must appear on the face of the agreement, and a declaration on a bond in restraint of trade, settling forth no actual consideration, is bad on demurrer. Gompers v. Rochester, 56 Pa. St. 194.

consideration is unlawful the contract is void.<sup>1</sup> So a failure of consideration is a good defence.<sup>2</sup>

11. Estoppel.—A party is estopped from denying the truth of the recitals and statements made in his deed, in any legal proceedings upon the deed, between the same parties in the same right, or those claiming through them.<sup>3</sup>

1. Collins v. Blautern, and notes, 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 715. As to what considerations are illegal, see, infra, ILLEGALITY.

2. The reason why equity forbids a recovery on a specialty when the consideration fails is not because a consideration is essential to such instrument, but because the parties are shown to have contracted on that basis, and the failure of the end involves that of the means. Yard v. Patton, 13 Pa. St. 285.

Chancery will not interfere unless it is shown that the instrument was executed on the faith of some promise or stipulation that has not been fulfilled. Kennedy v. Howell, 20 Conn. 349; Candor's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 119.

Future illicit cohabitation is a bad consideration, yet a recovery may be had on a bond given to a mistress, unless there is evidence of undue influence on the one hand, or a stipulation for the continuance of the unlawful connection on the other. Fisher v. Bridges, 3 E. & B. 642; Wyant v. Leshner, 23 Pa. St. 338; Doe v. Horn, 1 Ind. 363; Shenk v. Mingle, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 29.

Mere continuance of cohabitation was held not enough to raise a presumption that a bond was given in consideration of future cohabitation, and the bond was held good. Vallance v. Blagden, 26 Ch. D. 353; 50 L. T. N. S. 574.

3. Co. Litt. 352, a; notes to Doe v. Oliver, and Duchess of Kingston's Case, 2 Sm. L. C. 317; Lainson v. Tremere, 1 A. & E. 792; Bowman v. Taylor, 2 A. & E. 278. The estoppel in a deed extends to its recitals. Stowe v. Wyse, 7 Conn. 214; Jackson v. Parkhurst, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 209; Carver v. Jackson, 4 Peters (U. S.), 1. The estoppel does not extend to proceedings by a party in a different right. Metters v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 686; 32 L. J. Ex. 138. Nor to proceedings by persons not parties to the deed or claiming through them. Heath v. Crealock, L. R. 10 Ch. 22. Nor to proceedings for other purposes collateral to the deed. Carpenter v. Buller, 8 M. & W. 209; Exp. Morgan, L. R. 2 C. D. 72. Although for such purposes the contents of the deed might be evidence. The effect of a deed in estoppel is also restricted to such recitals and statements as are intended to be agreed upon as true against one or other of the parties; and this intention is to be gathered from construing the deed. Stronghill v. Buck, 14 Q. B. 781. The party to a deed is in most cases estopped from controverting any statement therein, or showing that it was executed with a different intent or object from that which the deed itself imports. Hayne v. Maltby, 3 T. R. 438; Com. Dig. Estoppel; 1 Saund. 216, n. 2; Willes, 9. Except in cases of duress, fraud, or illegality, which defences the law admits, notwithstanding the security has the appearance of having been deliberately framed. 3 T. R. 418. The current of authority in America has much relaxed the strictness of the English cases on this subject. Thus it may be considered as settled that evidence is admissible either on the part of the grantor or grantee to show that the consideration named in a deed was really greater or less than there expressed. Bullard v. Briggs, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 533; Wade v. Merwin, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 288; Clapp v. Tinnall, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 247; McCrea v. Purmonk, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 460 (where many cases are cited and commented on); White v. Miller, 22 Vt. 380; Wilkinson v. Scott, 17 Mass. 249; Prichard v. Brown, 4 N. H. 397; Burbank v. Gould, 15 Me. 118; Belden v. Seymour, 8 Conn. 310; Meeker v. Meeker, 16 Conn. 383; Beach v. Packard, 10 Vt. 96; Bingham v. Weiderwax, 1 N. Y. 509; Watson v. Blaine, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 131; Jack v. Dougherty, 3 Watts (Pa.), 158; Bolton v. Johns, 5 Pa. St. 145; Harvey v. Alexander, 1 Rand. (Va.) 219; Wilson v. Shelton, 9 Leigh (Va.), 342; Curry v. Lyles, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 404; Moore v. McKie, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 238. Unless such evidence is introduced either directly or indirectly for the purpose of defeating the operation of the instrument as a conveyance, as by showing it void for want of a sufficient consideration. Wilt v. Franklin, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 502; Hurn v. Soper, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 276. Thus a grantee may prove the expressed consideration to be greater for the purpose of increasing his damages on the covenants in the deed,—Belden v. Seymour, 8 Conn. 310,—while, on the other hand, the grantor may prove it less for the purpose of diminishing

12. Deed Cannot be Varied or Discharged by Parol.—A deed cannot be varied or discharged by a parol agreement; but only by an instrument under seal.<sup>1</sup>

13. Priority in Administration of Decedents' Estates.—Contracts under seal or specialty debts are in some places given priority over simple contract debts in the administration of the personal estates of decedents.<sup>2</sup>

14. Limitation of Actions.—A right of action arising from a contract under seal is barred if not exercised within twenty years; if it arises from a simple contract it is barred after six years.<sup>3</sup>

15. Merger.—Where parties have made a simple contract for any purpose, and afterwards have entered into an identical engagement by deed, the simple contract merges in the deed and becomes extinct.<sup>4</sup>

16. Authority of Agents to Execute Deeds.—A deed is necessary for authorizing an agent to execute a deed for another.<sup>5</sup> them. Morse v. Shattuck, 4 N. H. 229; Harlow v. Thomas, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 70; Murphy v. Branch Bank of Mobile, 16 Ala. 90; Den v. Shotwell, 23 N. J. 465; In re Young's Est., 3 Md. Ch. D. 461; Hammond v. Woodman, 41 Me. 177; Harwell v. Fitts, 20 Ga. 723; Farrington v. Barr, 36 N. H. 86; Thompson v. Allen, 12 Ind. 539. The consideration clause in a deed estops the grantor from denying that a consideration has been received. In all other respects it is open to explanation or correction by parol evidence, and it may be shown that the consideration has not been actually paid, or that it has been overpaid by fraud or mistake. Goodspeed v. Fuller, 46 Me. 141; Irvine v. McKeon, 23 Cal. 472; Carbrey v. Willis, 7 Allen (Mass.), 364; Allen v. Allen, 45 Pa. St. 468; Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224; Simson v. Eckstein, 22 Cal. 580. See Smith Conts. 20, 21; Leake Conts. 153, 154. See title ESTOPPEL.

1. See, infra, DISCHARGE OF CONTRACTS, where the limitations of this doctrine are stated. Sm. on Conts. 30; Leake on Conts. 154.

2. This priority has been taken away in England by the statute 32 & 33 Vict. c. 46, and specialty debts are put upon the same footing with simple contract debts. At the common law, if a man by contract under seal bound himself and his heirs, the heir might be charged with the liability in an action of debt or covenant to the value of all the freehold land he took by descent. The creditor's remedy was extended by statute so as to include the devisee as well as the heir. 3 W. & M. 14; 1 W. IV. c. 47. Contracts under seal, in which the obligor binds himself and not his heirs, gave no remedy against the heir or devisee, the only remedy being against the executor or administrator in respect of the personal assets, but with priority over simple contracts. Co. Litt. 209 a; 383, b; 386, a. By statute 3 & 4 W. IV. c. 104, real estate is made assets for the payment of all debts, simple contract as well as specialty. In this country lands are in general liable for the debts of a decedent, whether due by matter of record, specialty, or simple contract. In the two latter cases, although they create no lien during the debtor's life, yet by his death they become liens on the real estate which descends to the heir or passes to the devisee, subject to the payment of the debts of the ancestor according to the local laws of the State. The remedies for the enforcement of specialty debts are governed by the statutes of the different States, but the tendency of those statutes is to abolish the priority in favor of specialty debts over debts by simple contract when the specialty is not a lien upon property. Sm. Conts. 34 n. See title DECEDENTS' ESTATES.

3. The time within which actions must be brought depends, of course, upon the statutes of the various States. See title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

4. See, infra, DISCHARGE OF CONTRACTS. See title MERGER.

5. Steiglitz v. Egginton, 1 Holt N. P. C. 141; Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207; Rowe v. Ware, 30 Ga. 278; Harshaw v. M'Kisson, 65 N. Car. 688. Where an agent having only parol authority to bind his principal executes a contract under seal, if not essential to the validity of it it should be regarded as mere surplusage, and the contract held good as a simple

17. Contracts of Record—Definition.—A record is a memorial or remembrance on rolls of parchment, and such memorial is not a record until enrolled in the proper office.<sup>1</sup>

18. Examples.—Contracts of record comprise judgments, recognizances, statutes merchant and staple, and recognizances in the nature of statute staple.<sup>2</sup>

19. Peculiarities.—Contracts of record have certain peculiar incidents: 1. They prove themselves, i.e., their bare production without any further proof is sufficient evidence of their existence, should it be controverted. 2. They may be enforced by scire facias—a writ which lies on a record only.<sup>3</sup> An obligation of record may be discharged by a deed of release, although a deed is a matter of inferior degree.<sup>4</sup>

20. Simple Contracts—Consideration Necessary.—Simple or parol contracts are those whose validity does not depend upon their form, but upon the presence of a consideration. With the exception of contracts under seal and contracts of record, every contract requires a consideration to support it.<sup>5</sup> contract. Long v. Hartwell, 34 N. J. 116. See also Thomas v. Joslin, 30 Minn. 388. See title AGENCY.

1. Co. Litt. 260 a; Q. v. Hughes et al., 36 L. J. P. C. 23; Com. Dig. "Record." A statute provision requiring a deed or contract to be recorded for safe keeping, and notice to purchasers, does not thereby make it a record in the technical sense of that term. And it has been so held even in cases in which the legislature have directed the process upon such deed or contract to be by scire facias, a writ which at common law lies on a record only. Thus in Pennsylvania it has been decided that nul tiel record is no plea to a scire facias on a mortgage. Frear v. Drinker, 8 Pa. St. 520. The registry of a mechanics' lien is no record, and to a scire facias on it the plea of nul tiel record is a nullity. Davis v. Church, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 240. See title RECORD.

2. Anson on Conts. 37; 2 Blk. Com. 465. The judgment of a court of record is treated for some purposes as a contract. 2 Blk. Com. 464, 465; Leake on Conts. 125, 155; Morse v. Tappan, 3 Gray (Mass.), 411; Gebhard v. Garnier, 12 Bush (Ky.), 321; Stuart v. Landers, 16 Cal. 372; Burnes v. Simpson, 9 Kan. 658. Thus a judgment awarding a sum of money to the plaintiff imposes an obligation on the defendant to pay that sum. But a judgment is not, properly speaking, a contract. Roe v. Hulbert, 17 Ill. 572-580; In re Kennedy, 2 S. Car. 216; Burnes v. Simpson, 9 Kan. 658; Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155, 168; Dudley v. Lindsey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 486-489. At an early period of English law, statutes merchant and statutes staple, which are both contracts of record for the payment of debts, were commonly in use. Subsequently recognizances in the nature of a statute staple were established. These may have been resorted to in some of the States in early times (see Kilty Rep. Stats. 143), but are now unknown. The only contract of record now to be met with is a recognizance, i.e., "a debt of record entered into before some court, judge, or magistrate having authority to take the same." Com. v. Emery, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 431; Pace v. Mississippi, 25 Miss. 54. Recognizances are most frequently employed in criminal cases obligating the parties and witnesses, and their bail and other sureties for them, to appear in court to prosecute, defend, pay adjudged costs, testify, and the like. 1 Bishop Crim. P.roc. § 264, and note.

3. An action of debt is also maintainable, or in some States there is a statutory proceeding. Bishop Crim. P.roc. § 264, note. By statute in Pennsylvania, and perhaps in some other State, scire facias is the method of proceeding to foreclose a mortgage. See Bouvier's Law Dict. sub voce; Bispham's Eq. (3d Ed.) § 156.

4. Barker v. St. Quintor, 12 M. & W. 441; Shep. Touch. 322; Sewall v. Sparrow, 16 Mass. 24-26; State v. Moody, 69 N. Car. 529.

5. "All contracts are by the laws of England distinguished into agreements by specialty and agreements by parol, nor is there any such third class as some of the counsel have endeavored to maintain, as contracts in writing." Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 350, n. See remarks

21. Consideration<sup>1</sup>—Definition.—"A valuable consideration, in the sense of the law, may consist either in some right, interest, profit, or benefit accruing to one party, or some forbearance, detriment, loss, or responsibility given, suffered, or undertaken by the other."<sup>2</sup>

22. Adequacy—Promise to which One is Already Bound—Forbearance—Compromise of Disputed Claims.—As a general rule, the law will not inquire into the adequacy of the consideration, although gross inadequacy may be evidence of fraud.<sup>3</sup> But an agreement to of Prof. Langdell, Sel. Cas. Cont. p. 1013 seq., and of Prof. Ames, 2 Cas. Bills and Notes, p. 872 seq., amounting, in the writer's opinion, to a demonstration of the fact that on principle negotiable bills of exchange and promissory notes are binding of their own force, and require no consideration.

Some contracts are required by statute to be in writing, but the writing is only evidence of the contract, and consideration is as necessary as if the contract rested merely in spoken words. See title STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

An executory agreement, supported only by a meritorious as distinguished from a valuable or pecuniary consideration, cannot be enforced either at law or in equity, and an executory covenant falls within the operation of the rule. Wilbus v. Warren, 9 East. Rep. (N. Y.) 425.

"Love and affection" for a deceased brother's widow is not a sufficient consideration to support a bond and a mortgage securing it; and neither a partial payment of interest on the bond by some of the obligors, nor the mutual promise of all, nor the acceptance of the trust by the trustee who was directed to invest the proceeds of the bond for the use of the beneficiary, is sufficient to supply the want of consideration. Cotton v. Graham, 2 S. W. Rep. (Ky.) 647.

A promise to pay the debt of another must be supported by valuable consideration. Strough v. Brown, 38 Hun (N. Y.), 307.

1. As to the origin and early history of consideration, see O. W. Holmes, Jr., "The Common Law," lec. vii. p. 247 seq.; "The History of Contracts," by John W. Salmond, 3 Law Quar. Rev. 166; Hare on Contracts, 117 seq.; Pollock on Contracts, Appendix, note F.

2. Currie v. Misa, L. R. 10 Ex. 162. Consideration means not so much that the promisee is benefited as that the promisor suffers a detriment.

Consideration may be either the doing of an act or the giving of a promise. When the consideration consists of performance, the promise becomes binding when the act is performed. If A promise to pay B a sum of money if he will do a particular act, and B does the act, the promise thereupon becomes binding though B at the time does not engage to do the act. Train v. Gold, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 380, 385. Where several stockholders agree each to contribute for sale, for the benefit of the corporation, a certain number of shares, one cannot repudiate the agreement after the others have acted on it. Conrad v. La Rue, 52 Mich. 83. Where the consideration consists of a promise, it is the promise and not the performance thereof which is the consideration of the counter-promise. Matthews' Admr. v. Meek, 23 Ohio St. 272, 292; Philpot v. Gruening, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 570. See, infra, OFFER AND ACCEPTANCE, p.

For examples of consideration, see infra, n. 3.

3. Westlake v. Adams, 5 C. B. N. S. 248, 265; 24 L. J. C. P. 271, per Byles, J., "It is enough that there is actually a consideration, that such consideration is legal, and that it has some value." Tindal, C. J., in Hitchcock v. Coker, 6 A. & E. 438; Skeate v. Beale, 11 A. & E. 983. If there be any consideration the court will not weigh the extent or value of it. Phillips v. Bateman, 16 East, 356, 372; Payne v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 423; Callisher v. Bischoffsheim, L. R. 5 Q. B. 449; Hesser v. Steiner, 5 W. & S. (Pa.), 476; Silvis v. Ely, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 420; Downing v. Funk, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 69. "There is no case where mere inadequacy of price independent of other circumstances has been held sufficient to set aside a contract between parties standing on equal ground and dealing with each other without any imposition or oppression." Per Rogers, J., in Hind v. Holdship, 2 Watts (Pa.), 104; Wolford v. Powers, 85 Ind. 294; Williams v. Jensen, 75 Mo. 681; Lawrence v. McCallmont, 2 How. (U. S.) 426, 452; Goree v. Wilson, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 597; Worth v. Case, 42 N. Y. 362, 369; Smock v. Pierson, 68 Ind. 405; Train v. Gold, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 380, 384; Perkins v. Clay, 4 N. H. 518, 520; Giddings v. Giddings' Admr. 57 Vt. 227; Cates v. Bales, accept a smaller sum in payment of a larger is not binding<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the consideration is something new or different, it is good.<sup>2</sup> On this principle a negotiable instrument for a less sum may be a satisfaction of a greater.<sup>3</sup> A promise to do what one is already bound to do is not a consideration.<sup>4</sup> good and valuable consideration, sufficient to support the promise to pay as a new agreement, separate and independent from plaintiff's agreement with the village. Hooker v. Russell, 30 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 358.

A gift of bonds inter vivos, invalid by reason of no delivery having been made, is not a sufficient consideration to support an executory contract by the donor to pay the donee the value of the bonds in return for their use and appropriation by him for the purposes of his own business. Flaggers v. Blandy, 12 N. E. Rep. (Ohio) 321.

A promise to pay a certain sum to a university, to be used exclusively to liquidate a then indebtedness of the university, but if used for any other purpose the sum to be refunded to the donor, held to be without sufficient consideration, though the sum was used to create a fund for said liquidation. Johnson v. Otterbein Univ., 41 Ohio St. 527.

A. promised to give £20,000 to a fund of the Congregational Union, and paid certain instalments of the amount, but died leaving £8000 unpaid and unprovided for. The Union claimed that sum from A.'s executors, alleging that they had been led by A.'s promise to contribute larger sums to churches than they would otherwise have done, that money had been given and promised by other persons in consideration of A.'s promise, and that the committee of the Union had incurred liabilities in consequence of A.'s promise. Held, that the promise was without consideration. In re Hudson, 54 L. J. Ch. 811; 33 W. R. 819.

1. Smith v. Bartholomew, 1 Met. (Mass.) 276; Harriman v. Harriman, 12 Gray (Mass.), 341; Smith v. Phillips, 77 Va. 548; Mechanics' Bank v. Huston, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 389; Foakes v. Beer, L. R. 9 App. Cas. 605; 1 Sm. L. C. (8 Am. Ed.) 648; Shepard v. Rhodes, 7 R. I. 470; Schnell v. Nell, 17 Ind. 29; Wolford v. Powers, 85 Ind. 294, 301. See, infra, DISCHARGE OF CONTRACTS.

2. Pinnel's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 117, a. Payment of a lesser sum in satisfaction of a greater cannot be a satisfaction of the whole; but the gift of a horse, hawk, or robe in satisfaction is good, because it shall be intended that the thing which the plaintiff has agreed to take will be more beneficial to him than the money in respect of some circumstance, or otherwise he would not have so agreed. See Singleton v. Thomas, 73 Ala. 205; Earl v. Peck, 64 N. Y. 596.

An agreement between judgment debtor and creditor that in consideration of the debtor paying down part of the judgment debt and costs, and on condition of his paying to the creditor or his nominee the residue by instalments, the creditor will not take any proceedings on the judgment, is nudum pactum, being without consideration, and does not prevent the creditor after payment of the whole debt and costs from proceeding to enforce payment of the interest upon the judgment. Foakes v. Beer, 9 App. Cas. 605, following Pinnel's Case, 5 Rep. 117, a, and Cumber v. Wayne, 1 Str. 426.

Where certain drafts were paid by the financial agents of a railroad corporation in consideration of the release of the balance of the contract in payment of which the drafts were drawn, the corporation being then insolvent, and the agents having no funds in their hands out of which they could have paid the drafts, held, that the voluntary payment by the financial agents of the drafts out of their own means, and not out of the means of the railroad corporation, was a sufficient consideration to support the release. Indianapolis Rolling Mill Co. v. St. L., Ft. S. & W. R. Co., 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; s. c., 120 U. S. 256.

3. Goddard v. O'Brien, 9 Q. B. D. 37; Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 23; Thompson v. Percival, 5 B. & Ad. 925; Sheehy v. Mandeville, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 253; Mechanics' Bank v. Huston, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 389; Notes to Cumber v. Wayne, 1 Sm. L. C. (8 Am. Ed.) 633, 640 seq.; Article by Elisha Greenhood, Esq., 17 C. L. J. 302.

If a creditor agrees to relinquish a part of his debt on receiving a new or additional security for the balance, or if he agrees to receive a chattel of less value than his debt in satisfaction of his debt, his promise will have a good consideration and will be held to be valid. Day v. Gardner, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 365.

4. Deacon v. Gridley, 15 C. B. 295; Judgment on 7th plea in Mallalieu v. Hodgson, 16 Q. B. 689; Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 91 N. Y. 392, 401; Withers v.

Adequacy.*CONTRACT. Promise to which One is already Bound.

Ewing, 40 Ohio St. 400; Conover v. Stillwell, 34 N. J. L. 54; Crosly v. Wood, 6 N. Y. 369; McCaleb v. Price, 12 Ala. 753; City v. Lenze, 27 Ohio St. 383; Cobb v. Cowdry, 40 Vt. 25, 28; Runnamaker v. Cordray, 54 Ill. 303; Ford v. Garner, 15 Ind. 298; Reynolds v. Nugent, 25 Ind. 328. A promise of extra pay to sailors in consideration of their agreeing to finish a voyage for which they had signed articles is without consideration. Bartlett v. Wyman, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 260. So a promise to pay a witness for attendance at court more than the fees prescribed by law. Dodge v. Stiles, 26 Conn. 463; Sweeney v. Hunter, 1 Murphey (N. Car.), 181. Or any promise made in consideration of the payment in whole or in part of a debt already due. Warren v. Hodge, 121 Mass. 106; Smith v. Bartholomew, 1 Met. (Mass.) 276; Smith v. Tyler, 51 Ind. 512; State v. Davenport, 12 Iowa, 335; Pabodie v. King, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 426; Pomeroy v. Slade, 16 Vt. 220; Barron v. Vandverk, 13 Ala. 232; Price v. Cannon, 3 Mo. 453; Pemberton v. Hoosier, 1 Kans. 108; Leining v. Gould, 13 Cal. 598; Watts v. French, 19 N. J. Eq. 407; Jenness v. Lane, 26 Me. 475; Parmalee v. Thompson, 45 N. Y. 58; Jenkins v. Clarkson, 7 Ohio, 72; Trumbull v. Brock, 31 Ohio St. 649; Smith v. Phillips, 77 Va. 548; Thompson v. Robinson, 34 Ark. 44.

A promise by a judgment debtor to pay part of the judgment is no consideration for an agreement to make him a deed of the land. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Rink, 110 Ill. 538.

A promise by a debtor to a creditor to pay what he owes affords no consideration for the creditor's promise to convey land to the debtor. Tucker v. Bartle, 85 Mo. 114.

If a purchaser of chattels, who has agreed to weigh them in order to determine the price, weighs them on incorrect scales, the promise of the seller, upon discovering the error, to pay him a certain sum if he will reweigh them on correct scales is not supported by a sufficient consideration. Billings v. Filley, 32 N. W. Rep. (Neb.) 567.

A promise of reward to an officer for arresting a criminal whom the duties of his office require him to apprehend is both without consideration and against public policy. Gilmore v. Lewis, 12 Ohio, 281; Marking v. Needy, 8 Bush (Ky.), 22; Pool v. Boston, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 219; Day v. Ins. Co., 16 Minn. 408; Smith v. Whilden, 10 Pa. St. 39.

A constable will not be allowed to recover upon a quantum meruit for services which he has performed in his official capacity, especially if an agreement is made to pay him a greater sum for services than the statutes allow him for his fees. Andrews v. Wilcoxson, 33 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 533; Kick v. Merry, 23 Mo. 72; Bent v. Wakefield, etc., Bank, 4 C. P. D. 1; Stamper v. Temple, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 113. And see Davies v. Burns, 5 Allen (Mass.), 349; Callaghan v. Hallet, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 104. Consenting to rescind an unlawful agreement is no consideration for a promise. Hooker v. De Palos, 28 Ohio St. 257, 258. But the doing or undertaking of anything beyond what one is already bound to do, though of the same kind and in the same transaction, is a good consideration. A promise to reward a constable for rendering services beyond his ordinary duty in the discovery of an offender is binding. England v. Davidson, 11 A. & E. 856; Davis v. Munson, 43 Vt. 676; Brown v. Godfrey, 33 Vt. 120; Gregg v. Pierce, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 387; Morrell v. Quarles, 35 Ala. 544. Compare Hatch v. Mann, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 44.

A contract by the marshal of a city for reward of his services in the detection and conviction of a murderer in another county, is not void as against public policy, his duty not requiring him to perform these services. Bronnenberg v. Coburn, 11 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 29. So is a promise of extra pay to a ship's crew for continuing a voyage after the number of hands has been so reduced by accident as to make the voyage unsafe, so that the crew are not bound to proceed under their original articles. Hartley v. Ponsonby, 7 E. & B. 872. So a promise of reward to a fireman for recovering at the peril of his life a body from a burning building. Reif v. Page, 55 Wis. 496. See also Texas C. P. & Mfg. Co. v. Mechanics' Fire Co., 54 Texas, 319; Pilie v. New Orleans, 19 La. Ann. 274. An agreement to give a debtor time in consideration of his paying the same interest that the debt already carries is inoperative. Kellogg v. Olmstead, 25 N. Y. 189; McCann v. Lewis, 9 Cal. 246; Abel v. Alexander, 45 Ind. 523; Hume v. Mazelin, 84 Ind. 574; Crossman v. Wohlleben, 90 Ill. 537; Hunt v. Postlewait, 28 Iowa, 427; Hale v. Forbis, 3 Mont. 395; Wilson v. Powers, 130 Mass. 127. Otherwise when there is an express or implied stipulation that the debt shall not be paid until the time fixed by the agreement arrives. McComb v. Kittredge, 14 Ohio, 348; Fawcett v. Freshwater, 31 Ohio St. 637; Pierce v. Goldsberry, 31 Ind. 52; Chute v. Pattee, 37 Me. 102; Fowler v. Brooks,

Forbearance to exercise a right is a good consideration.<sup>1</sup>

13 N. H. 240; Keim v. Andrews, 59 Miss. 39. Where a contract is made for the sale of corn upon condition that a given sum is paid down in advance, and the purchaser, not having the money, is given until the next morning to get the same, no new consideration is necessary for the extension of the time of performance. Biederman v. O'Conner, 117 Ill. 493; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 876. An agreement to give time or accept reduced interest in consideration of having some new security would be good. Gates v. Hamilton, 12 Iowa, 50; Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462, 476.

The surrender of an old note is sufficient consideration for a new one executed by the surety, who, knowing the facts but mistaking the law, erroneously supposed himself liable when in fact he was discharged. Churchill v. Bradley, 58 Vt. 403. An antecedent debt constitutes a good and sufficient consideration for a new contract. So held where one negotiable instrument was given in payment of another past due and protested. Merchants' Bk. v. McClelland, 13 Pac. Rep. (Colo.) 723.

An agreement to give time would be good if made in consideration of the payment of the same interest in advance or of a promise to pay increased interest. Warner v. Campbell, 26 Ill. 282; Dickerson v. Commissioners, 6 Ind. 128; Wright v. Bartlett, 43 N. H. 548; Clarkson v. Creely, 35 Mo. 95; Royal v. Lindsay, 15 Kans. 591; Bank v. Mallett, 34 Me. 547; Williams v. Scott, 83 Ind. 405; Hubbard v. Ogden, 22 Kans. 363; Preston v. Henning, 6 Bush (Ky.), 556; Mfg. Co. v. Bradley, 105 U. S. 175.

A. and several others being liable as makers of two notes aggregating $350, the holder of the notes agreed to release A., and also to release a lien which he held as security for the notes, if A. would pay $100 cash and give his note for $115, payable at an earlier date than the last maturing of the joint notes. Held, that there was sufficient consideration to support the promise to release, as the original notes were satisfied to the extent of $215 earlier than they matured, and the original obligors other than A. still continued liable for the balance. Kirchoff v. Voss, 3 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 548.

A promise to do what one is already bound by contract with a third person to do has been held to be a good consideration. Scotson v. Pegg, 6 H. & N. 295. The following cases hold that it is not a good consideration: Davenport v. First Congregational Society, 33 Wis. 387; Johnson's Admr. v. Sellers' Admr., 33 Ala. 265; Gordon v. Gordon, 56 N. H. 170, 173. There are cases which hold that where one party to a contract refuses to perform his part, a promise by the other party to pay something beyond the consideration agreed upon if he will go on and perform is binding. Munroe v. Perkins, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Cooke v. Murphy, 70 Ill. 96; Holmes v. Doane, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 135; Lattimore v. Harsen, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 330; Coyner v. Lynde, 10 Ind. 282; Lawrence v. Davey, 28 Vt. 264; Bishop v. Busse, 69 Ill. 403; Stewart v. Keteltas, 36 N. Y. 388, 392; Rollins v. Marsh, 128 Mass. 116; Moore v. Detroit Locomotive Works, 14 Mich. 266; Goebel v. Linn, 47 Mich. 489. Compare Endress v. Belle Isle Ice Co., 49 Mich. 279. These cases are perhaps open to the objection that they hold the doing of what one is legally bound to do a consideration for a promise. Ayres v. Railroad Co., 52 Iowa, 478; McCarty v. Hampton Bldg. Assn., 61 Iowa, 287; Festerman v. Parker, 10 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 474; Erb v. Brown, 69 Pa. St. 216; Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 91 N. Y. 392. See, infra, DISCHARGE OF CONTRACTS.

1. Mather v. Lord Maidstone, 18 C. B. 273. The commonest case of this kind of consideration is forbearing to sue. The allowance of time in which to pay a debt is a valuable consideration. Lipsmeier v. Vehslage, 27 Fed. Rep. 175. The forbearance must be for a definite or ascertainable time; forbearance for a reasonable time is sufficient. Oldershaw v. King, 2 H. & N. 517; Hake v. Hotchkiss, 23 Vt. 231; Sidwell v. Evans, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 383; King v. Upton, 4 Me. 387; Lonsdale v. Brown, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 148; Elting v. Vanderlyn, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 237; Calkins v. Chandler, 36 Mich. 320; Glasscock v. Glasscock, 66 Mo. 627; Willis v. Ross, 77 Ind. 1; Hockenbury v. Meyers, 34 N. J. L. 346; Cathcart v. Thomas, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 172; Howe v. Taggart, 133 Mass. 284; Shupe v. Galbraith, 32 Pa. St. 10; Cary v. White, 52 N. Y. 138; Mecorney v. Stanley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 85; Manter v. Churchill, 127 Mass. 31; Gilman v. Kibler, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 19; Edgerton v. Weaver, 105 Ill. 43. Compare Holzworth v. Koch, 26 Ohio St. 33; Boyd v. Freize, 5 Gray (Mass.), 553; Breed v. Hilhouse, 7 Conn. 523; Lomax v. Smyth, 50 Iowa, 223; Johnston Harvester Co. v. McLean, 57 Wis. 258. A promise to forbear generally, without naming any particular time, has been construed to mean perpetual forbearance. Clark v. Russell, 3 Watts (Pa.), 213.

The compromise of a disputed claim is a good consideration.<sup>1</sup>

A promise not to prosecute a demand which has no existence in law or fact is no consideration. Forth v. Stanton, 1 Wms. Saund. 210; Hamaker v. Eberly, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 509; Jones v. Ashburnham, 4 East. 455; Palfrey v. Railroad Co., 4 Allen (Mass.), 55; Tucker v. Ronk, 43 Iowa, 80; Prater v. Miller, 25 Ala. 320; Jarvis v. Sutton, 3 Ind. 289; Kidder v. Blake, 45 N. H. 530; Stewart v. Bradford, 26 Ala. 410; Sullivan v. Collins, 18 Iowa, 228; Long v. Towl, 42 Mo. 545; Foster v. Metts, 55 Miss. 77; Gunning v. Royal, 59 Miss. 45; Mulholland v. Bartlett, 74 Ill. 58; Cline v. Templeton, 78 Ky. 550; Smith v. Easton, 54 Md. 138; Ecker v. McAllister, 54 Md. 362; Schroeder v. Fink, 60 Md. 436; Graham v. Johnston, 8 Eq. 36; Edwards v. Baugh, 11 M. & W. 641; Leake on Cont. 625.

Where a loan company claims that its agent, who is liable to it for arrears of interest on the loans effected by him, is responsible to it for interest on mortgages, which interest had all been realized by the company by being embraced in various decrees of foreclosure under which the company had sold the properties and bid them in for the full amount of the decrees, the claim of the company for such interest is groundless and colorless; and a compromise based thereon, and notes made in pursuance thereof, are void for want of consideration, even though made to avoid litigation. U. S. Mortgage Co. v. Henderson, 12 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 88.

Forbearance to file a bona fide though invalid claim is good consideration for a promise. Hewett v. Currier, 63 Wis. 386.

A contract of license provided for a forfeiture by the licensee of all rights thereunder upon his default in any quarterly payment of royalties. Such default was made and the patentee gave notice, but subsequently withdrew it at the request of the licensee, who promised to pay the amount due. The patent was subsequently declared void. Held, that the withdrawal of the forfeiture was of itself sufficient consideration to support the promise to pay. Hyatt v. Dale Tile Mfg. Co., 12 N. E. Rep. (N. Y.) 705.

The compromise of a disputed claim, made bona fide, is a good consideration for a promise, whether the claim be in suit, or litigation has not been actually commenced, even though it would ultimately appear that the claim was wholly unfounded. The detriment to the party consenting to a compromise arising from the alteration in his position, forms the real consideration which gives validity to the promise. Grandin v. Grandin, 9 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 756; s. c., 11 East. Rep. 561.

An agreement to relinquish a timber culture claim was held a sufficient consideration for a contract. Palmer v. March, 34 Minn. 127.

The waiver of a legal right on the part of a promisee is a sufficient consideration for a promise made on account of such waiver. Vogel v. Meyer, 23 Mo. App. 427.

The sale and relinquishment of an inchoate homestead or other possessory right upon the public domain, together with the ranch and other improvements thereon, were held to constitute a good and valid consideration for a promissory note. Paxton Cattle Co. v. First Nat. Bk. of Arapahoe, 33 N. W. Rep. (Neb.) 271.

1. A compromise of a disputed claim or the discontinuance of a suit already brought may uphold a promise, although the demand was unfounded. Cook v. Wright, 1 B. & S. 559; Longridge v. Dorville, 5 B. & Ald. 117; Callisher v. Bischoffsheim, L. R. 5 Q. B. 449; Payne v. Bennet, 2 Watts (Pa.), 427; Rice v. Bixler, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 445; Worrall's Accounts, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 111; Jones v. Rittenhouse, 87 Ind. 348; Bank v. Geary, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 98; Grasselli v. Lowden, 11 Ohio St. 349; Adams v. Morton, 37 Iowa, 255; Fleming v. Ramsey, 46 Pa. St. 252; Logan v. Matthews, 6 Pa. St. 417; Fisher v. May, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 448; Taylor v. Patrick, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 168; Craus v. Hunter, 28 N. Y. 389; Ins. Co. v. Watson, 59 N. Y. 390; Feeter v. Weber, 78 N. Y. 334; Russell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 504; Holcomb v. Stimpson, 8 Vt. 141; Blake v. Peck, 11 Vt. 483; Bellows v. Sowles, 55 Vt. 391; Miller v. Hawker, 66 Ill. 185; Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 272; Richardson v. Comstock, 21 Ark. 69; Hewett v. Currier, 32 Alb. L. J. (S. C. Wis.) 178; Morris v. Munroe, 30 Ga. 630; Stover v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 213; McClellan v. Kennedy, 8 Md. 230, 248; Smith v. Penn, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 402; Warren v. Williamson, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 427; Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 546; Lipsmeier v. Vehslage, 29 Fed. Rep. 175.

A bona fide compromise of a real claim is a good consideration, whether the claim would have been successful or not.

23. Past Consideration—Moral Obligation—Effect of Subsequent Promise.—The consideration must consist of a present or future act; a past act cannot serve as a consideration for a promise.<sup>1</sup>

Miles v. New Zealand Alford Estate Co., 32 Ch. D. 266.

Where an action has been commenced by a landlord against his tenant for damages for misuser and bad cultivation, an arrangement by which the litigation is to be stopped and the lease surrendered without fraud, carries with it a sufficient consideration to support it. Baumier v. Antian, 31 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 888; s. c., 8 West. Rep. 115.

With regard to the settlement of a disputed boundary-line, it was held that the mutual concessions of the parties in fixing the disputed boundary-line, and the relinquishment by one of them of his claim to the disputed strip of land, were sufficient consideration to support the promise of the other to pay the value of the strip. Finley v. Funk, 12 Pac. Rep. (Kans.) 15.

Where plaintiff put furnaces into defendant's building, with warranty that they would heat the building suitably; if not, that they should be removed, if he were notified before Jan. 1; and after Jan. 1 the defendant company notified him that they did not comply with the warranty, excusing its failure to do so before on the ground that the weather was not cold enough to test the furnaces,—it was held that a compromise made in good faith under these circumstances, by which plaintiff agreed to accept a less sum than the contract price, unless it should show to defendant thereafter that the furnaces would heat the building as stipulated, was supported by sufficient consideration. "The law favors such settlements of controversies, and finds a consideration for the contract looking to the compromise in the mutual agreement of the parties to abide the result of the settlement." Richardson & Boynton Co. v. Indep. Dist. of Hampton, 31 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 871. The parties must believe that the claim is a good one, and it must be such a claim as they could reasonably regard as serious. Wade v. Simeon, 2 C. B. 548; Davisson v. Ford, 23 W. Va. 6, 17; Ex parte Banner, 17 Ch. D. 490. If the party knows or ought to know that the claim has no foundation, it is not a consideration. Pitkin v. Noyes, 48 N. H. 294; McKinley v. Watkins, 13 Ill. 140; Headley v. Hockley, 50 Mich. 43; Ormsbee v. Howe, 54 Vt. 182; Feeter v. Weber, 78 N. Y. 334.

1. A past consideration will not support an express promise. Johnson v. Johnson's Admr., 31 Pa. St. 450; Chamberlin

v. Whitford, 102 Mass. 448; Summers v. Vaughn, 35 Ind. 323; Hopkins v. Richardson, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 485; Shealy v. Toole, 56 Ga. 210; Barlow v. Smith, 4 Vt. 139; Bulkley v. Landon, 2 Conn. 404; Roscorla v. Thomas, 3 Q. B. 234. When a part of the consideration is past and a part is not, it is enough to sustain a promise. Loomis v. Newhall, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 159; Wiggins v. Keizer, 6 Ind. 252; Roberts v. Griswold, 35 Vt. 496. If the nature of the transaction is such as to give rise to an obligation, the law will imply a promise to fulfil it; if it is not, a subsequent promise will not create the liability which was wanting in the first instance. Hayes v. Warren, 2 Strange, 933; Docket v. Voyel, Cro. Eliz. 885; Jereny v. Goochman, Cro. Eliz. 442; Hunt v. Bate, Dyer, 272; B. Comstock v. Smith, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 87. Where a son of full age fell sick among strangers and was supported by them until he died, a subsequent promise of repayment by the father was without consideration. Mills v. Wyman, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 207. "The rule of the law seems now well established, although it may formerly have been left in doubt, that the past performance of services constitutes no consideration even for an express promise, unless they were performed under the express or implied request of the defendant, or unless they were done in performance of some duty resting on him." Shaw, C. J., in Mills v. Wyman, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 207. See also Dearborn v. Bowman, 3 Met. (Mass.) 155; Loomis v. Newhall, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 159; Dodge v. Adams, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 429; Balcom v. Craggin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 295; Shepherd v. Young, 8 Gray (Mass.), 152; Bartholomew v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 28; Carson v. Clark, 1 Mo. 159; Snevily v. Reed, 9 Watts (Pa.), 396; Geer v. Archer, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 420; Ingraham v. Gilbert, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 151. Goods furnished a third party at the maker's request are a good consideration for a note given in payment therefor. Lipsmeier v. Vehslage, 29 Fed. Rep. 175. A service rendered voluntarily without a request is not a consideration for a subsequent promise, unless the promisor accepts the benefit under circumstances which leave him free to refuse. The use of goods sent without orders is evidence of an acceptance which may supply the want of a request; but the case is different where one constructs a building on the land of another without his knowledge or assent, or erects a structure differing materially from that specified in the agreement under which the work was done. Bryant v. Stillwell, 24 Pa. St. 319; Shaw v. The Turnpike, 2 Pa. 454; Munroe v. Butt, 8 E. & B. 738; Smith v. Brady, 17 N. Y. 173; Trustees v. Bennett, 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 512.

Past Consideration*CONTRACT. will not Support Express Promise.

When the plaintiff relies on a subsequent promise it must be coextensive with the consideration, and such as to time, manner, and amount as the law would imply had no express promise been given. Hopkins v. Logan, 5 M. & W. 241; Jackson v. Cobbin, 8 M. & W. 790. A warranty given after the sale is not binding on the vendor. Roscorla v. Thomas, 3 Q. B. 234; Hunt v. Bate, Dyer, 272, B; Thornton v. Jenyns, 1 M. & G. 166; Kaye v. Dutton, 7 M. & G. 807; Ehle v. Judson, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 97; Vandakin v. Soper, 1 Aiken, 287. A promise by a husband to pay an antenuptial debt of his wife will not make the debt his own. Cole v. Shurtleff, 41 Vt. 311. A promise by an executor to pay a debt due by his testator does not impose a personal obligation. Rann v. Sughes, 7 T. R. 350, m. A promise by a debtor to pay the debt to a third person, or by a third person to pay a debt, is invalid. Hopkins v. Logan, 5 M. & W. 241.

Although a subsequent promise will not alter the contract, it may be material evidence of what the contract is. Where a note was given for past services, the fact that it was given was held to raise a presumption that there had been a previous understanding that such compensation should be made. Pitts v. Pitts, 21 Ind. 309.

If A advances to B a sum of money towards the purchase of a house by B, this is a sufficient consideration for a subsequent promise by B to pay the amount, although the deed was taken in the name of A as security for the advance, and the debt is not extinguished. Hennessey v. Connor, 139 Mass. 120.

When an act is done at the request of another, the law will imply a promise to pay what the service is reasonably worth, but a subsequent promise to give a specific sum may be binding. It operates by reducing to certainty what the parties have left undetermined. In Lampleigh v. Brathwait, Hobart, 105. 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Ed.) 267, the declaration averred that whereas the defendant had previously slain one Patrick Mahune, and after the said felony done instantly required the plaintiff to labor and do his endeavor to obtain the king's pardon for the said felony, to wit, in riding and journeying at his own charges from London to Boston, where the king then was, and to London back, and so to and from Newmarket, to obtain the pardon of the defendant, and afterwards the defendant in consideration of the premises promised the plaintiff £100, which he had not paid. Held, that the promise related back to the request, and was binding. See also Elderton v. Emmens, 4 C. B. 479; Townsend v. Hunt, Cro. Car. 408; Riggs v. Bullingham, Cro. Eliz. 715; Sidenham and Worlington's Case, 2 Leon. 224. A promise of a sum certain in consideration of an antecedent marriage contracted at the defendant's request, is binding. Marsh v. Karenford, Cro. Eliz. 59; Waters v. Howard, 8 Gill. 262. An act done at the request of another will not be a consideration, unless the intention was to charge him, or his credit was the inducement to the act. When the relation between the parties is one of charity or beneficence, it cannot be made legally obligatory by the most express promise. Bushnell v. Bishop Hill Colony, 28 Ill. 204; Russell v. Clark, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 69; Hamor v. Moore, 8 Ohio St. 239. A subsequent promise may, however, be evidence of the understanding of the parties. Hatch v. Purcell, 1 Foster (N. H.), 544; Wilson v. Edmonds, 4 Foster (N. H.), 517; Paul v. Stackhouse, 38 Pa. St. 302. The rule that a past transaction will not sustain any promise which the law would not imply cannot be evaded by the introduction of a nominal consideration or of a consideration which is inadequate to the promise. Shepard v. Rhodes, 7 R. I. 470. In Schnell v. Nell, 17 Ind. 29, a promise by a husband to pay a legacy left by his wife in consideration of one cent, of natural love and affection, and of the services she had rendered to him during her life, was held to be without consideration. A promise to fulfil an obligation which could be enforced in equity is in some cases binding. Geer v. Archer, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 420; Stewart v. Eden, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 150; Hudson v. Critcher, 8 Jones (N. Car.), 485; La Touche v. La Touche, 3 H. & C. 576. Thus if the principal debtor promises the surety to discharge the debt when due, the latter may sue at once if the promise is not fulfilled. Keller v. Rhoads, 39 Pa. St. 513; Swift v. Crocker, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 241; Haseltine v. Guild, 11 N. H. 390. So an assignee of a chose in action who receives a promise of payment from the debtor may enforce it by suit in his own name. Crocker v. Whitney, 10 Mass. 316; Cromelien v. Mauger, 17 Pa. St. 169; Tierman v. Jackson, 5 Peters (U. S.), 580.

An existing debt is not a consideration for any promise which the law will not

It was at one time held that a moral obligation would support a subsequent express promise. This doctrine has been generally repudiated,<sup>2</sup> although it is still occasionally to be met with.

Although a subsequent promise is not a good consideration, it may operate as a waiver of a defence that would otherwise be valid.<sup>4</sup> Thus a promise to pay a debt which has been barred by the Statute of Limitations,<sup>5</sup> or by a discharge in bankrupt-imply from it. Hopkins v. Logan, 5 M. & W. 241; Roscorla v. Thomas, 3 Q. B. 234. The doctrine that a past consideration will not support a promise may seem at variance with the forms of pleading, which aver that the defendant being indebted to the plaintiff promised to pay. But in such cases the promise relied on is not the express promise, but the promise which the law implies from the existence of the debt. If the express promise is different from that which the law implies, it is without consideration, and cannot be enforced. Where a debt is barred by the Statute of Limitation, a promise to pay in goods will not revive it. Reeves v. Hearne, 1 M. & W. 323; Earle v. Oliver, 2 Ex. 71; Short v. McCarthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626; Titus v. Ash, 4 Foster (N. H.), 319.

1. Hawkes v. Saunders, Cowp. 290; Atkins v. Banwell, 2 East, 505; Cooper v. Martin, 4 East, 76; Wing v. Mill, 1 B. & Ald. 104; Lee v. Muggeridge, 5 Taunt. 36; Doty v. Wilson, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 378; Willing v. Peters, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 177; Trumbull v. Tilton, 1 Foster (N. H.), 128; Cunningham v. Garvin, 10 Pa. St. 366, 368; Greeves v. McAllister, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 591; Montgomery v. Lampton, 3 Met. (Ky.) 519; Stewart v. Eden, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 150; Bently v. Morse, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 468; Glass v. Beach, 5 Vt. 172; Hemphill v. McClimans, 24 Pa. St. 367; Vance v. Wills, 8 Ala. 399.

2. The fallacy of the doctrine was exposed in a note to the case of Wennall v. Adney, 3 Bos. & P. 247, 249, where it was shown that the cases where a past consideration had been upheld on the ground of moral obligation were all cases of a precedent consideration, which would have given rise to an implied promise but for the intervention of some positive rule of law which might be waived by the party for whose benefit it was introduced. See also Mills v. Wyman, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 207; Hatchell v. Odorn, 2 Dev. & Bat. (N. Car.) 302. As was said by Lord Denman in Eastwood v. Kenyon, 11 A. & E. 438, if it were true that a moral obligation will support a promise every promise would be legally binding, because every promise carries with it a moral obligation. It is now generally held that to render a subsequent promise valid some act must have been done or service rendered on the faith of an express or implied request, and that when this element is wanting it will not be enough to show that the defendant was morally bound to remunerate the plaintiff, and ratified the obligation by an express promise. Hamor v. Moore, 8 Ohio St. 239; Updike v. Titus, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 151; Nightingale v. Barney, 4 Greene (Iowa), 106; Paul v. Stackhouse, 38 Pa. St. 302; Geer v. Archer, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 420, 424; Dearborn v. Bowman, 3 Met. (Mass.) 165; Wiggins v. Keizer, 6 Ind. 252; Eakin v. Fenton, 15 Ind. 59; Ingraham v. Gilbert, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 151; Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 84; Watkins v. Halstead, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 311; Cook v. Bradley, 7 Conn. 57; Loomis v. Newhall, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 159; Dodge v. Adams, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 429; Bates v. Wilson, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 376; Holt v. Robinson, 21 Ala. 106.

3. The moral duty of a father to provide for his child is a sufficient consideration for a promise to pay money. Knowles v. Erwin, 43 Hun (N. Y.), 150. Cases are sometimes decided on this ground, when they fall within the well-recognized exceptions to the rule that a past consideration will not support a promise. See for instances cases of promises to pay debts after a discharge in bankruptcy, infra.

4. One cannot render a contract without consideration valid by promising not to take advantage of the want of consideration. Belknap v. Bender, 75 N. Y. 451. Or a contract which is contrary to the policy of the law. Shister v. Vandike, 94 Pa. St. 447. But when a consideration moves from the plaintiff under circumstances which would render the defendant liable but for some positive rule of law, he may affirm the contract by a subsequent promise. See infra.

5. Winnall v. Adney, 3 Bos. & P. 247; Kingston v. Wharton, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 208; Maxim v. Morse, 8 Mass. 127; Yates v. Hollingsworth, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 216; Walbridge v. Harroon, 18 Vt. 448; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Flint, 17 Vt. 508; Johnson v. Evans, 8 Gill. (Md.)

cy,<sup>1</sup> is good. But a promise to pay a debt which the creditor has by his own act effectually released is without consideration.<sup>2</sup> So a promise made by a woman when single to perform a promise previously made by her while married is not binding without a new consideration.<sup>3</sup> Such a promise has been sustained when the original promise was an engagement binding her separate estate.<sup>4</sup>

24. Classification of Simple Contracts.—Simple contracts may be divided into two classes: 1, those arising from agreement; and, 2, those arising independently of agreement or implied in law.

25. Agreement Consists of Offer and Acceptance.—The most essential element of agreement is the consent of the parties. If two or more parties express their consent to a common purpose with a view to forming a contract, this is an agreement. An agreement usually consists of an offer by one party and an acceptance by the other. Indeed every agreement may be reduced to an acceptance of an offer. The agreement is perfect as soon as the offer is accepted.<sup>5</sup>

155; Ross v. Ross, 20 Ala. 105; Phelps v. Williamson, 26 Vt. 230; 1 Sm. L. C. (8 Am. Ed.) 988; Turner v. Chrisman, 20 Ohio, 332.

One who admits his liability for and promises to pay a debt just before the Statute of Limitations is about to bar a suit, admits and promises on a consideration. Parsons v. Frost, 55 Mich. 230.

A promise by one debtor to pay the whole or part of a joint debt which has been barred by the Statute of Limitations is binding. Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 C. & M. 623.

1. Trueman v. Fenton, Cowp. 544; Field's Est., 2 Rawle (Pa.), 351; Bolton v. King, 105 Pa. St. 78; 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 1462.

The moral obligation to pay a debt is sufficient consideration to support the promise of a bankrupt, made after his discharge from bankruptcy, to pay a debt from which he had been discharged. Wislizenus v. O'Fallon, 3 S.W. Rep. (Mo.) 837.

A moral obligation supports a promise after a discharge in bankruptcy. Post v. Losey, 12 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 121.

2. Snevily v. Reed, 9 Watts (Pa.), 396; Valentine v. Foster, 1 Met. (Mass.) 520; Stafford v. Bacon, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 532; Shepard v. Rhodes, 7 R. I. 470; Warren v. Whitney, 24 Me. 561; Montgomery v. Lampton, 3 Met. (Ky.) 519; Wright v. Clarke, 34 Miss. 116; Carver v. Bank, S. C. Ohio, 9 Wkly. Law Bull. 80; Ingersoll v. Martin, 58 Md. 67; Hale v. Rice, 124 Mass. 292; Mason v. Campbell, 27 Minn. 54; Stafford v. Bacon, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 532. Contra, Willing v. Peters, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 177; Baeder v. Barton, S. C. Pa., 25 Alb. L. J. 377; 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 165.

3. Musick v. Dodson, 76 Mo. 624; Kennerly v. Martin, 8 Mo. 698; Maher v. Martin, 43 Ind. 314; Hetherington v. Hixon, 46 Ala. 297; Hayward v. Barker, 52 Vt. 429; Felton v. Reid, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 269; Waters v. Bean, 15 Ga. 358; Littlefield v. Shee, 2 B. & Ad. 811. Contra, Goulding v. Davidson, 26 N. Y. 604; Hemphill v. McClimons, 24 Pa. St. 367; Lee v. Muggeridge, 5 Taunt. 36; Brown v. Bennett, 75 Pa. St. 420; Front v. McDonald, 83 Pa. St. 144; Wilson v. Burr, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 386.

4. Vance v. Wells, 8 Ala. 399; Forrest v. Robinson, 4 Porter (Ala.), 44; Sadler v. Houston, 4 Porter (Ala.), 208; 1 L. C. Eq. (5 Am. Ed.) 742; Viser v. Bertrand, 14 Ark. 267; Hubbard v. Bugbee, 55 Vt. 506.

A promise by a married woman, having a separate estate, to pay for necessities furnished her upon the credit of her separate estate, is a sufficient consideration for a new promise after the death of her husband. Sherwin v. Sanders, 9 Atl. Rep. (Vt.) 239; s. c., 11 East. Rep. 473.

A mortgage of her separate estate by a married woman to secure her husband's debt is not in South Carolina a "contract as to her separate estate." Aultman & Taylor Co. v. Rush, 2 S. E. Rep. (S. Car.) 402.

5. Pollock on Contrs. 4, 5; Anson on Contrs. 11.

6. In an action against a railroad company to recover damages for failure to provide transportation for A.'s cattle as agreed, A. testified that he met S., the general freight agent, on May 27, and told him he wanted twenty-three cars on May 30, eight at Mound City and fifteen

26. Express and Implied Agreements.—An agreement may be either express or implied: express, where it consists of words written or spoken, expressing an actual agreement of the parties: implied, when it is evidenced by conduct manifesting an intention of agreement.<sup>1</sup>

27. Proposal and Acceptance.—A proposal, to be made binding by acceptance, must be intended to affect legal relations; it must be the offer of a contract.<sup>2</sup> Its terms must be sufficiently certain to en-at Maitland, for Chicago, and asked him if he could get them ready. S. said he could, and called the clerk to take down the order, and asked A. if he would have the cattle there, and was told he would, and that he wanted the cars on Monday so he could bed them. S. told him he could have the cars, and to see the agent at Mound City and Maitland, which A. did. Held, that the evidence proved a valid contract, the consideration of which was the mutual promises of the parties. Baker v. Kans. City, etc., R. Co., 3 S. W. Rep. (Mo.) 486.

A written proposal for plans contained the provision that each architect should receive $500 dollars for his plans, irrespective of relative merit, and that "the architect who is successful shall not receive $500, but he shall be engaged as architect and superintendent, and shall be paid." Held, that the architect whose plans were accepted had a right of action for a refusal to employ him. Walsh v. St. Louis Expos. and Mus. Hall Assoc., 16 Mo. App. 502.

The acceptance of a legally made bid for a proposed building was held not in itself to constitute a contract, but to entitle the bidder to one in accordance with the proposals. Hughes v. Clyde, 41 Ohio St. 339.

Upon the amalgamation in 1882 between the S. and C. banking companies, A., a holder of 100 shares in the S. bank, received a circular asking whether he would exchange his shares in the S. bank for shares in the C. bank, which took over the business of the other. A. died shortly afterwards without having sent any reply to the circular. On Feb. 27, 1883, a letter was sent on behalf of A.'s executors to the C. bank, "enclosing certificate for 100 shares of the S. bank in the name of" A., "and will thank you to let us have shares in your bank in exchange." On Feb. 28 the manager replied that when probate had been exhibited to the London agents of the bank he would send share certificates in the bank "in the name of the executors individually." A certificate was made out to the executors of 100 shares in the C. bank, and an entry made in the share register with the description "executors of A." The executors wrote that they objected to have the certificate in their names, and requested the bank to forward them one in the name of A. The directors accordingly ordered the certificate to be cancelled and one made out in the name of A. for 100 shares. On summons by the liquidator for rectification of the register by striking out the name of A. and putting in place of it the names of the executors as holders of the 100 shares, held, that the letters of Feb. 27 and 28 constituted by application and acceptance a completed contract between the executors and the bank that 100 shares should be taken in the name of the executors individually, and further that such completed contract was not and could not have been afterwards rescinded by the company. In re Cheshire Banking Co., 32 Ch. D. 301.

1. "The only difference between an express and an implied contract is in the mode of proof. An express contract is proved by direct evidence, an implied contract by circumstantial evidence. Whether the contract be proved by evidence direct or circumstantial, the consequences resulting must be the same." Per Parke, B., in Manzetti v. Williams, 1 B. & Ad. 425. See Bixby v. Moore, 51 N. H. 402.

"An implied promise does not differ from an express promise except in the evidence by which it is proved." Chilcot v. Trimble, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 502.

Contracts implied from conduct must be distinguished from contracts implied in law. The latter are not properly contracts at all. See, infra, IMPLIED PROMISES. For examples of contracts implied from conduct, see, infra, PROPOSAL AND ACCEPTANCE.

2. A mere statement of intention made in the course of conversation will not constitute a binding promise, though it be acted upon by the party to whom it was made. In Week v. Tibold, 6 Roll. Abr. 6, the defendant told plaintiff that he would give £100 to him who married his daughter with his consent. Plaintiff married the daughter and claimed the £100. Held, that he could not recover. "It is not reason that the defendant should be bound by such general words, spoken to excite suitors." Velv. 11; Richards v. Richards, 46 Pa. St. 78, 82.

A baker hired a man for a year under a contract that the employment should terminate within that time on the burning of the bakery. The bakery having burned, held, that a request that the man should stay until things could be got straight, when something should be found for him to do, could not be regarded as a waiver of the contract, even though the man waited five weeks, and refused other offers of employment. Edwards v. Block, 73 Ga. 450.

Loose expressions of intention and purposes do not constitute a contract. Recknagle v. Schmalz, 33 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 365.

But where A, being about to sue C was told by B, C's father, who had taken from C a bill of sale of all his property, "You keep quiet and you will have your money. I guess I am worth it," and A, relying on B's promise, forbore further proceedings, it was held that A could maintain an action against B. Bowen v. Tipton, 64 Md. 275.

It must be considered in particular cases whether some act or announcement of one of the parties is really the proposal of a contract, or only an invitation to other persons to make proposals for his consideration. In Denton v. G. N. R. Co., 5 E. & B. 860; 25 L. J. Q. B. 129, the plaintiff arranged, on the faith of the company's time-tables, to take the 7.20 from Peterborough to Hull; he applied for a ticket and offered to pay the proper fare. The company's clerk refused to issue the ticket for the reason that the 7.20 train no longer went to Hull. The plaintiff missed an appointment at Hull and sustained damage. Held, that he was entitled to recover. The time-table was a proposal, and was accepted by a tender of the fare. This view was not necessary to the actual decision, for it was only necessary to decide whether the plaintiff could succeed in any form of action, and there was no doubt that he could recover in tort for a false representation. See Heirn v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17. In Gordon v. Railroad Co., 52 N. H. 596, it was held that the company would not be liable for failure to transport the plaintiff (who was the holder of a season ticket over its road) in accordance with its published time-table, if it "had done all that due care and skill could do" to transport him punctually. "The publication of a time-table in common form imposes upon a railroad company the obligation to use due care and skill to have the trains arrive and depart at the precise moments indicated in the table, but it does not import an absolute and unconditional engagement for such arrival and departure, and does not make the company liable for want of punctuality which is not attributable to their negligence." Compare Sears v. Railroad Co., 14 Allen (Mass.). 433. In Crocker v. Railroad Co., 24 Conn. 249, the defendants had established and given public notice of a regulation that the fare on their line from N. to N. L. would be fifty cents to passengers purchasing tickets before entering their cars, but to others fifty-five cents. Plaintiff took a seat in the train at N., and after it had started, being called upon by the conductor offered to pay fifty cents and refused to pay more for his fare from N. to N. L., and was thereupon removed from the train by the defendants' servants. An action of trespass having been brought by him for having been wrongfully removed from the train, it appeared that plaintiff, on going a reasonable time before the time of departure of the train to defendants' office, where tickets were usually sold, found it closed, and was unable then or afterward at any time before the train left to procure a ticket, of which fact he informed the conductor when the latter demanded his fare. The regulation of the defendants was admitted to be lawful and reasonable. Held, "1. That as common carriers the defendants were under no legal obligation to furnish tickets or carry passengers from N. to N. L. for less than fifty-five cents each. 2. That the plaintiff's claim to such a passage for fifty cents rested entirely on the assumed engagement of the defendants to furnish tickets, and the plaintiff's endeavor to procure one defeated by the defendants. 3. That said regulation of the defendants was not a contract creating a legal debt or duty, but a mere proposal which might be suspended or withdrawn by closing the defendants' office and the retirement of their agent therefrom. 4. That the proposal being withdrawn, the parties were in the same condition as before it was made; the defendants, continuing common carriers, were bound to carry the plaintiff for fifty-five cents, but not otherwise. 5. That The plaintiff refusing said sum, the conductor had a right to remove him from the cars, using no unnecessary force for that purpose, and for such removing the able the court to say what the agreement is.<sup>1</sup> And it must not defendants were not liable in an action for trespass." Compare Railroad Co. v. Dalby, 19 Ill. 353; Railroad Co. v. South, 43 Ill. 176; Railroad Co. v. Rogers, 28 Ind. 1; 38 Ind. 116; Railroad Co. v. Richard, 46 Ind. 293; Du Larans v. Railroad Co., 15 Minn. 49; Swan v. Railroad Co., 132 Mass. 116. In Marlow v. Harrison, 1 E. & E. 295, 28 L. J. Q. B. 18; in Exch. 1 E. & E. 309, 29 L. J. Q. B. 14, a sale by auction was announced as without reserve, the name of the owner not being disclosed. The lot was put up, but in fact bought in by the owner. The plaintiff, who was the highest real bidder, sued the auctioneer as on a contract to complete the sale as the owner's agent. Held, that he was entitled to recover, holding in effect that where the sale is without reserve the contract is completed, not by the acceptance of the bidding, but by the bidding itself, subject to the condition that no higher bona fide bidder appears. In Mainprice v. Westly, 6 B. & S. 420; 34 L. J. Q. B. 229, held that an auctioneer whose principal is disclosed by the conditions of sale does not contract personally that the sale shall be without reserve. When an auctioneer in good faith advertises a sale of certain goods, he does not by that advertisement enter into any contract with those who attend the sale that the goods shall be actually sold. Harris v. Nickerson, L. R. 8 Q. B. 286. A simple offer of stock in trade for sale by tender does not amount to a contract to sell to the person who makes the highest tender. Spencer v. Harding, L. R. 5 C. P. 561. In Moulton v. Kershaw, 59 Wis. 316 (48 Am. Rep. 516), the defendants wrote to the plaintiff as follows: "In consequence of a rupture in the salt trade we are authorized to offer Michigan fine salt in full cargo lots of eighty to ninety-five bbls., delivered in your city, at eighty-five cents per bbl., to be shipped per C. & N. W. R. Co. only. At this price it is a bargain, as the price in general remains unchanged. Shall be pleased to receive your order." On the following day the plaintiff telegraphed: "Your letter of yesterday received and noted. You may ship me 2000 bbls. Michigan fine salt, as offered in your letter. Answer." It was held that the letter and telegram did not together make a contract; the letter was construed as being in the nature of an advertisement that the writers were in condition to supply salt at the price named, and requesting the person to whom it was addressed to deal with them, but not an offer by which, if accepted, defendants were to be bound.

A wrote B, "At what price will you fill my orders for gauge-glasses?" to which B replied: "We will supply you with gauge-glasses at the same rates we supply C," and subsequently wrote: "Our understanding with C is bill at sight immediately on receipt of goods, and we hope you will comply with the same conditions." Held, that there was no completed contract created by A's sending an order, and on his failing to pay by sight bill B was not bound to fill further orders. Ashcroft v. Butterworth, 136 Mass. 511. See also Ahearn v. Ayres, 38 Mich. 692; Beaupre v. Telegraph Co., 21 Minn. 155. And see per Compton, J., in Denton v. G. N. R. Co., 5 E. & B. 860.

If a tradesman agrees to supply on certain terms such goods as a customer may order during a future period, the better opinion is that this is not a promise, but an offer. If the customer does order, the condition of the offer is fulfilled, and there is a complete contract. G. N. R. Co. v. Witham, L. R. 9 C. P. 16. Compare Chicago & G. E. R. Co. v. Dane, 43 N. Y. 240; Smith v. Morse, 20 La. Ann. 220; National Furnace Co. v. Keystone Mfg. Co., 23 A. L. Reg. (S. C. Ill.) 800, 801; Drake v. Vorse, 53 Iowa, 417. See Bailey v. Austrian, 19 Minn. 535.

The tender is simply a continuing offer during the period named, subject to revocation at any time, but while unrevoked converted into a distinct contract by each order of goods from time to time. Thayer v. Burchard, 99 Mass. 508; Keller v. Ybarra, 3 Cal. 147. Compare Railroad Co. v. Dane, 43 N. Y. 240; Railroad Co. v. Mitchell, 38 Tex. 86; Campbell v. Lambert, 56 La. Ann. 35; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 1.

1. The parties may have come to a real agreement, but they must take the consequences of not having made it intelligible. Adams v. Adams, 26 Ala. 272; Sherman v. Kitzmiller, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 45; Buckmaster v. Consumers' Ice Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.), 313; Whelan v. Sullivan, 102 Mass. 204; Cummer v. Butts, 40 Mich. 322; Bumpus v. Bumpus, 19 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 29. See, in general, Baxter v. Bishop, 65 Iowa, 582; Clay v. Ricketts, 66 Iowa, 362.

In Gutking v. Lynn, 2 B. & Ad. 232, the buyer of a horse promised that if the horse was lucky to him he would give £5 more at the buying of another horse. Held to be "much too loose and vague be illusory, or dependent upon a condition which in fact reserves an unlimited option to the promisor.<sup>1</sup>

to be considered in a court of law." "The 'buying of another horse' is a term to which the court cannot assign any definite meaning." An agreement to sell an estate, reserving "the necessary land for making a railway," is too vague. Pearce v. Watts, 20 Eq. 472. An agreement to take a house "if put into thorough repair," and if the drawing-rooms were "handsomely decorated according to the present style," is too uncertain. Taylor v. Partington, 7 D. M. & G. 328. An agreement to execute a deed of separation containing the usual covenants is not too vague. Hart v. Hart, 18 Ch. D. 670, 684.

A father's agreement that the child should not be an expense to the town during such time as, under the statute laws of the State, the father would be liable for its support, limiting his liability, however, to the amount to which under those laws he would be liable, was held not void for indefiniteness, as in referring to the statute it contemplated a determination of the extent of liability in the mode provided by the statute. Town of Hamden v. Merwin, 8 Atl. Rep. (Conn.) 770; s. c., New Eng. Rep. 534.

1. In Taylor v. Brewer, 1 M. & S. 290, a committee had resolved that for certain services "such remuneration be made as shall be deemed right." Held, that this gave no action to the person who had performed the services, because the committee alone were to judge whether any or what recompense was right. See also Roberts v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 315, 28 L. J. Ex. 164.

A promise of this kind, though it creates no enforceable contract, is so far effectual as to exclude the promisee from falling back upon any contract to pay a reasonable remuneration which would be inferred from the transaction if there were no express agreement at all. Where, by the terms of the agreement, an article is to be furnished which shall be satisfactory to the defendant, if he refuses, though from mere caprice, to be satisfied therewith, neither the contract price nor reasonable remuneration can be recovered. Zaleski v. Clark, 44 Conn. 218; McCarren v. McNulty, 7 Gray (Mass.), 139; Brown v. Foster, 113 Mass. 136; Gibson v. Cranage, 39 Mich. 49; Wood Reaping, etc., Co. v. Smith, 50 Mich. 565; Gray v. Railroad Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.), 70. Contra, Daggett v. Johnson, 49 Vt. 345. See 33 Am. Rep. 353, note; 42 Am. Rep. 158, note. Where one executed an instrument under seal acknowledging an indebtedness to another, and promising to pay the same whenever, in his opinion, circumstances should enable him to do so, such instrument was held to impose no legal obligation enforceable by action. Nelson v. Von Bonnhorst, 29 Pa. St. 352.

In Moorhouse v. Colvin, 15 Beav. 341, 348, affirmed by L. J., 15 Beav. 350, n., a testator having made a will by which he left a considerable legacy to his daughter, wrote a letter in which he said, after mentioning her other expectations, "This is not all: she is and shall be noticed in my will, but to what further amount I cannot precisely say." The legacy was afterwards revoked. It was contended on behalf of the daughter's husband, to whom the letter had with the testator's authority been communicated before the marriage, that there was a contract binding the testator's estate to the extent of the legacy given by the will as it stood at the date of the letter. Held, that the testator's language expressed nothing more than a vague intention. "He expressly promises such provision only as he in his will and pleasure shall think fit." See Graham v. Graham, 34 Pa. St. 475; Thompson v. Stevens, 71 Pa. St. 161. Service rendered on a mere expectation of a legacy is not good cause of action; but if there be an express promise to pay for it by a legacy, which promise is broken, an action will lie. Stone v. Todd, 8 Atl. Rep. (N. J.), 300.

A promise to dispense with performance of an act so long as it may please the promisor is no consideration for a counter-promise. Lydick v. Railroad Co., 17 W. Va. 427.

These cases were decided upon the ground that the promisor alone was to decide whether any remuneration at all should be given. Each case must be decided upon its own circumstances; and when a man agrees to do work for another, and says (in effect), I expect to be paid what is reasonable, and am content to take your estimate as that of a reasonable man, he can recover the value of his work upon a quantum meruit. See 3 Blk. Com. 161; 1 Chitty on Plead. (16th Am. Ed.) 352; Bryant v. Flight, 5 M. & W. 114; Jewry v. Bulk, 5 Taunt. 302; Millar v. Cuddy, 43 Mich. 273; Butler v. Winona Mill Co., 28 Minn. 205.

Under a contract to deliver goods of such quality as to be satisfactory to cer-

28. Conditions of Proposal.—The proposer may prescribe a certain time within which the proposal is to be accepted, and the manner and form in which it is to be accepted.<sup>1</sup> He may prescribe a particular place for acceptance, and if he do, an acceptance elsewhere will not bind him.<sup>2</sup> In the absence of an express stipulation as to time, the proposal is limited to a reasonable time.<sup>3</sup>

29. Proposal to Unascertained Person—Offers of Reward—Bidding at Auction—Letters of Credit.—A proposal need not be made to an ascertained person, but no contract can arise until it has been accepted by an ascertained person.<sup>4</sup> When an offer of reward is tain officers, the law requires the latter to exercise a fair, just, and honest judgment on the subject; in case of an adverse decision in good faith, the purchaser is not obliged to accept, but if their rejection is fraudulent, the purchaser is not excused by it. B. & O. R. Co. v. Brydon, 65 Md. 198.

If by the terms of a construction contract the decision of the architect is made "final, binding, and conclusive on the parties," it is no defence to an action for the price, alleging the architect's acceptance of the work, to aver that in certain particulars the work does not conform to the specifications of the contract. Vulcanite Paving Co. v. Phila. Traction Co., 8 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 777.

Under a contract making an engineer's decision upon disputed questions final and conclusive, such decision will be binding and conclusive in the absence of fraud, or such gross mistake as would necessarily imply bad faith. Hot Springs R. Co. v. Maher, 3 S. W. Rep. (Ark.) 639.

A stipulation in a contract that the final estimates of work by engineers of a railroad shall be conclusive as against contractors "without recourse or appeal," does not deprive the latter of the right to bring suit where the engineers act in bad faith. Louisv., Ev. & St. L. R. Co. v. Donnegan, 9 West. Rep. (Ind.) 641; s. c., 12 N. E. Rep. 153.

1. Where the proposal stipulated for an acceptance by return mail, and the acceptance was not posted until two days after the receipt of the proposal, it was held that the promisor was not bound. Macclay v. Harvey, 90 Ill. 525. And see Carr v. Duval, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 77, 82. Though the proposer may prescribe a form of acceptance, he cannot prescribe a form of refusal so as to fix a contract on the other party if he does not refuse in some particular way or within some prescribed time. Thus where a person wrote to another offering to buy a horse, and stating that if he received no answer he should assume that his offer was accepted, to which letter no answer was returned, held, that there was no contract. Felthouse v. Bindley, 11 C. B. N. S. 869, 875; 31 L. J. C. P. 204. A written order for goods delivered to the selling agent of a manufacturer, with the understanding that the agent was to hold it for three or four days subject to the order of the signer, and to destroy it if the latter should so decide, is not a contract, nor an offer, until delivered to the manufacturer with the consent of the signer. Morris v. Brightman, 9 N. E. Rep. (Mass.) 512; 3 New Eng. Rep. 302.

2. Eliason v. Henshaw, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 225; Langdell Sel. Ca. on Cont. 70. The real question in cases of this kind is whether the condition as to time, place, or manner of acceptance was in fact part of the terms of the proposal.

3. Bailly's Cas., 5 Eq. 428; 3 Ch. 592; Ramsgate Hotel Co. v. Montefiore; Same v. Goldsmid, L. R. 1 Ex. 109; Moxley v. Moxley, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 309; Railroad Co. v. Dane, 43 N. Y. 240; Loring v. Boston, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 409; Averill v. Hedge, 12 Conn. 424; Mizzel v. Burnett, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 240; Minnesota Oil Co. v. Collier Lead Co., 4 Dillon (U. S.), 431; Ferrier v. Storer, 63 Iowa, 484.

4. It is important to distinguish that executory contracts are of two kinds, bilateral and unilateral. When the consideration on each side is a promise, the contract is bilateral; a binding promise, the consideration of which is anything else than a promise, is a unilateral contract. See Langdell Sel. Ca. Cont. 1092-1094. In a bilateral contract both parties must be bound at the same time, or neither is bound. Tucker v. Woods, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 190; Livingston v. Rogers, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 583; Keep v. Goodrich, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 397; James v. Fulcro, 5 Tex. 512; Turnpike Co. v. Coy, 13 Ohio St. 84, 92; Jones v. Durgin, 16 Mo. App. 370; Board of Commis. of Cass Co. v. Crockett, 12 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 486.

A party who is not himself bound by the acceptance of a contract to sell land by one claiming to be his agent, but who in fact had no authority to accept on the terms proposed, cannot afterwards, when he finds the contract is advantageous to him, affirm it and recover damages from the vendor for his failure to make a conveyance as agreed, as, to render a contract valid, both parties must be bound thereby. Athe v. Bartholomew, 33 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 110.

An executory contract to be valid must be binding on both parties. King v. Warfield, 8 Cent. Rep. (Md.) 801.

A written agreement not showing upon its face mutuality of obligation, or other consideration, may be supported as a contract by another written contract made at the same time, and shown to have been a consideration for the former agreement. Bolles v. Sachs, 33 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 862.

In a unilateral contract the offeree is not bound to perform at all, nor until performance by him is the offerer bound; but upon performance by the offeree the proposal of the offerer is converted into a binding promise. "Thus, if A promises B to pay him a sum of money if he will do a particular act, and B does the act, the promise thereupon becomes binding, although B at the time of the promise does not engage to do the act." Train v. Gold, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 380, 385; Turnpike Co. v. Coy, 13 Ohio St. 84, 93; Cottage Street Church v. Kendall, 121 Mass. 528-530; Barnes v. Perrine, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; L'Amoureux v. Gould, 7 N. Y. 349; Todd v. Urber, 95 N. Y. 181, 191, 192; Miller v. McKenzie, 95 N. Y. 575; Beckwith v. Brackett, 97 N. Y. 52; Morse v. Bellows, 7 N. H. 549; Mathews v. Fitch, 22 Cal. 86; Perkins v. Hadsell, 50 Ill. 216.

A promise by an owner of land if a church was built thereon to convey it and the land as soon as the society was organized, was held supported by a sufficient consideration where the church was so built on subscriptions and donations. Whitsitt v. Pre-emp. Presb. Church, 110 Ill. 125.

A promissory note executed in pursuance of a promise to subscribe $2500 toward the payment of a church debt on condition that the church would raise the balance by voluntary subscriptions, which condition is performed, is founded upon a sufficient consideration, and binding upon the maker. Roberts v. Cobb, 35 Alb. L. Jour. (N. Y.) 75; 103 N. Y. 600.

Where there is a contract between two parties to a controversy over land to the effect that one of them shall make a "give or take" offer, and, in consideration of making such offer, shall receive from the other a quitclaim deed to part of the land, he becomes entitled to the deed immediately on making such offer; both the contract and the deed being founded on sufficient consideration. Buckingham v. Ludlum, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 851; 41 N. J. Eq. 348.

Powers v. Bumcratz, 12 Ohio St. 273; White v. Baxter, 71 N. Y. 254; Weaver v. Wood, 9 Pa. St. 220; Brogden v. Railway Co., 2 App. Cas. 666, 691. "If I say that if you will furnish goods to a third person I will guarantee the payment, you are not bound to furnish them; but if you do furnish them in pursuance of the contract, you may sue me on the guarantee." Per Patteson, J., in Morton v. Burn, 7 A. & E. 19. See also, per Maule, J., in Fishmongers' Co. v. Robertson, 5 M. & G. 131, 171.

If a person requests a creditor to forbear from suing the original debtor, and the creditor, though he does not bind himself to forbear, does, as a fact, forbear from suing the debtor, that constitutes a good consideration for that other person becoming a guarantor. It is not necessary that there should be a binding promise to forbear. Crears v. Hunter, 31 Solic. Jour. 642.

In Patton v. Hassinger, 69 Pa. St. 311, a man of full age became ill while working for the plaintiff, and was taken care of by him. His father, on learning what had occurred, declared, though not in the plaintiff's presence, that whoever took care of his son should be well paid. These words were related to plaintiff, who continued to provide for the son till he died. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover. Lent v. Padelford, 10 Mass. 230; Duval v. Trask, 12 Mass. 154; Train v. Gold, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 380; Morse v. Bellows, 7 N. H. 549; Barnes v. Perrine, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; Kennaway v. Treleavan, 5 M. & W. 498; Cooper v. Altimus, 62 Pa. St. 486. A unilateral contract may be retracted at any time before performance. Weaver v. Wood, 9 Pa. St. 220; Offord v. Davies, 12 C. B. N. S. 748.

An offer proposing a unilateral contract becomes a binding promise immediately upon the performance of the act or acts requested to be done; and therefore, unless communication to the proposer is one of the things requested, it is not necessary. See Reif v. Page, 55 Wis. 496; Harson v. Pike, 16 Ind. 140; Hayden v. Songer, 56 Ind. 42; Powers v. Bumcratz, 12 Ohio St. 372; Douglass made by advertisement for the procuring of information, apprehension of a criminal, or the like, there is a contract with any person who performs the condition mentioned in the advertisement.<sup>1</sup> A v. Howland, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 35; Yard v. Eland, 1 Ld. Ray. 368; 2 Am. L. C. (5th Ed.) 94-106; Langdell Sum. Law Cont. §§ 2, 4, 6, 12. A request for time followed by forbearance will uphold a promise by a third person to pay the debt although the creditor does not bind himself by a promise. Downing v. Funk, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 69; Clark v. Russel, 3 Watts (Pa.), 213. It is held in Massachusetts that forbearance in pursuance of a request is not a consideration unless the creditor binds himself to give time. Mecorney v. Stanley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 85; Manter v. Churchill, 127 Mass. 31; Boyd v. Freiz, 5 Gray (Mass.), 553. A guaranty of such advances as the creditor may think fit to make may be binding without other evidence of assent than the making of the advances. Johnston v. Nicholls, 1 C. B. 251; Chapman v. Sutton, 2 C. B. 634; Boyd v. Moyle, 2 C. B. 643; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 35; Smith v. Dann, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 543; Union Bank v. Coster, 3 N. Y. 203, 205; Caton v. Shaw, 2 Harris & G. (Md.) 13; Powers v. Bumcratz, 12 Ohio St. 273; Bright v. McKnight, 1 Sneed (Tenn.), 158; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Kercheval, 2 Mich. 504; Clark v. Russel, 3 Watts (Pa.), 213; Yard v. Eland, 1 Ld. Ray. 368; Bradbury v. Morgan, H. & C. 249; 2 Am. L. C. (5th Ed.) 107; Marshall v. McCleary, 42 Md. 374. It has, however, been held that a guaranty is not binding unless the assent of the person to whom it is addressed is communicated to the guarantor, or the circumstances are such as to excuse the want of notice by showing that he knew the intention of the creditor to accept and act under the guaranty. Douglass v. Reynolds, 7 Peters (U. S.), 113; Zee v. Dick, 10 Peters (U. S.), 482; Adams v. Jones, 12 Peters (U. S.), 207; Mussey v. Rayner, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 223; Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. (U. S.) 426; White v. Reed, 15 Conn. 457; Kay v. Allen, 9 Pa. St. 320; Lowe v. Beckwith, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 184; Oaks v. Weller, 13 Vt. 106, 16 Vt. 63; Lowry v. Adams, 22 Vt. 160; Emerson v. Graff, 29 Pa. St. 358; Kellogg v. Stockton, 29 Pa. St. 460; King v. Baterson, 13 R. I. 117; Thompson v. Glover, 78 Ky. 193; Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Jones, 61 Mo. 409; Same v. Richards, 115 U. S. 524; Cooke v. Orne, 37 Ill. 186. See also Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159; Hare on Confs., 315 seq. Where a guaranty is for the fulfilment of a contract already made or executed contemporaneously therewith or for the payment of an existing debt, or where the guaranty is upon a consideration distinct from the credit extended to the principal debtor, and moving directly between the guarantor and guarantee, notice of acceptance is unnecessary. Furst & Bradley Mfg. Co. v. Black, 12 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 504. See title GUARANTY.

1. Williams v. Carwardine, 4 B. & Ad. 621. The advertisement is a proposal which is accepted by the performance of the conditions. Per Willes, J., Spencer v. Harding, L. R. 5 C. P. 563. The performance of an act for the doing of which a reward is offered gives rise to a unilateral contract. The promise of a reward "was but an offer until its terms were complied with. When that was done it thenceforth became a binding contract, which the offerer was bound to perform his share of." Cummings v. Gann, 52 Pa. St. 484, 490. "Until something is done in pursuance of it, it is a mere offer, and may be revoked. But if before it is retracted one so far complies with it as to perform the labor for which the reward is stipulated, it is the ordinary case of labor done on request, and becomes a contract to pay the stipulated compensation." Wentworth v. Day, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 352, 354; Furman v. Parke, 21 N. J. L. 310; Gilmore v. Lewis, 12 Ohio, 281; Ryer v. Stockwell, 14 Cal. 134; Janvrin v. Exeter, 48 N. H. 83; Alvord v. Smith, 63 Ind. 58, 62; Hanson v. Pike, 16 Ind. 140; Loring v. Boston, 7 Met. (Mass.) 409; Powers v. Fowler, 4 E. & B. 511; Oldershaw v. King, 2 H. & N. 517; Wadsworth v. Allen, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 174; Goward v. Waters, 98 Mass. 596.

To entitle one to the reward he must show that the terms of the offer have been complied with. Cornelson v. Ins. Co., 7 La. Ann. 345; Jones v. Bank, 8 N. Y. 228; Furman v. Parke, 21 N. J. L. 310; Clanton v. Young, 11 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 546. The decisions in Symmes v. Frazier, 6 Mass. 344, and Hawk v. Marion County, 48 Iowa, 472, that where a reward is offered for the recovery of a sum of money lost, the finder of a part is entitled to a pro rata portion of the reward offered, cannot, it is believed, be sustained.

bid at auction accepted by the fall of the hammer constitutes a complete contract with the bidder to whom the lot is knocked down.<sup>1</sup> A letter of credit operates as a general offer of a contract, which may be accepted by any person acting upon it and negotiating bills drawn in conformity with its terms.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held in several cases that it is not necessary that the person who does the act for doing which the reward is offered should have had any knowledge of the offer in order to entitle him to the reward. Eagle v. Smith, 4 Houst. (Del.) 293; Auditor v. Ballard, 9 Bush (Ky.), 572; Russell v. Stewart, 44 Vt. 170; Dawkins v. Sappington, 26 Ind. 199. But this is utterly inconsistent with the idea that the obligation to pay the reward arises out of contract. "Where a contract is proposed to all the world in the form of a proposition any party may assent to it and it is binding, but he cannot assent without knowledge of the proposition." Howland v. Lounds, 51 N. Y. 604, 609; Fitch v. Snedaker, 38 N. Y. 248; Stamper v. Temple, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 113; Lee v. Flemingsburg, 7 Dana (Ky.), 28. That the act must be done not only with knowledge of but with the intention of accepting the offer, see Hewitt v. Anderson, 56 Cal. 476.

The cases turn on the question whether the party claiming the reward has in fact performed the required condition according to the terms of the advertisement. Lancaster v. Walsh, 4 M. & W. 16; Smith v. Moore, 1 C. B. 438; Thatcher v. England, 3 C. B. 254; 15 L. J. C. P. 241; Turner v. Walker, L. R. 1 Q. B. 641; 2 Q. B. 301; England v. Davidson, 11 A. & E. 856; Shuey v. United States, 92 U. S. 73; Loring v. Boston, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 409; Crawshaw v. Roxbury, 7 Gray (Mass.), 374; Jenkins v. Kebren, 12 Gray (Mass.), 330; Besse v. Dyer, 9 Allen (Mass.), 151; Kincaid v. Eaton, 98 Mass. 139; Pilie v. New Orleans, 19 La. Ann. 274; Salbadore v. Ins. Co., 22 La. Ann. 338; Goldsborough v. Cradie, 28 Md. 477; Bank v. Bangs, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 95; Bank v. Hart, 55 Ill. 62; Marvin v. Treat, 37 Conn. 96; Matter of Kelly, 39 Conn. 159; Ryer v. Stockwell, 14 Cal. 134; Morrell v. Quarles, 35 Ala. 544; Pierson v. March, 82 N. Y. 503.

One finding lost property for the restoration of which a reward is offered has a lien upon it so that he need not deliver it until the reward is paid. Wentworth v. Day, 3 Met. (Mass.) 352; Cummings v. Gann, 52 Pa. St. 484. A general proposal made by public advertisement may be effectually revoked by an announcement of equal publicity, such as an advertisement in the same newspaper, even as against a person who afterwards acts on the proposal not knowing that it has been revoked. Shuey v. U. S., 92 U. S. 73. Such an offer expires after the lapse of a reasonable time. Loring v. Boston, 7 Met. (Mass.) 409. Compare Matter of Kelly, 39 Conn. 159; Langdell Sel. Ca. Cont. 1073.

1. Payne v. Cave, 3 T. R. 148; Blossom v. Railroad Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 196; Fisher v. Seltzer, 23 Pa. St. 308; Grotenkemper v. Achtermeyer, 11 Bush (Ky.), 222.

2. Ex parte Asiatic Banking Corp., L. R. 2 Ch. 391; Maitland v. Chartered Bank of India, 38 L. J. Ch. 363. See Scott v. Pilkington, 2 B. & S. 11; Same v. Same, 15 Abb. Pr. 280. "A letter written within a reasonable time before or after the date of a bill of exchange, describing it in terms not to be mistaken, and promising to accept it, is, if shown to the person who afterwards takes the bill on the credit of the letter, a virtual acceptance, binding the person who makes the promise." Coolidge v. Payson, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 66, 75; Steman v. Harrison, 42 Pa. St. 49; Schimmelpennich v. Bayard, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 264; Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 111; Bayard v. Lathy, 2 McLean (U. S. C. C.), 462; Storey v. Logan, 9 Mass. 55; Bank v. Rice, 98 Mass. 288; Bank v. Richards, 109 Mass. 413; Greele v. Parker, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 414; Goodrich v. Gordan, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 6. It is well settled that if A give B a letter (which though addressed to B is designed to be shown to and acted upon by others) promising to pay any bills which B may draw or to stand as surety for any indebtedness which he may incur, an action will lie against A in favor of any person who gives value to B on the faith of and within the terms of the letter. Lawrason v. Mason, 3 Cr. (U. S.) 492; Lansdale v. Bank, 18 Ohio, 126; Dorland v. Mulhollan, 10 Ohio St. 192; Nisbett v. Galbraith, 3 La. Ann. 690; Smith v. Ledyard, 49 Ala. 279; Whilden v. Bank, 64 Ala. 1; Griffin v. Rembert, 2 S. C. 410; Nelson v. Bank, 48 Ill. 36; Bissell v. Lewis, 4 Mich. 450; Barney v. Newcomb, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 46; Russell v. Wiggin, 2 Story (U. S.), 213; Bank v. Lynch, 52 Md. 270; Lowry v. Adams,

30. Revocation.—A proposal may be revoked at any time before acceptance, but not afterwards.<sup>1</sup> Even if the proposer purports to give a definite time for acceptance, he is free to withdraw his proposal before that time has elapsed.<sup>2</sup> But the revocation of 22 Vt. 160; Cassel v. Dows, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 335; McNaughton v. Conkling, 9 Wis. 316; Bank v. Coster's Ex'rs, 3 N. Y. 203; Dist. Bank v. Kaufman, 93 N. Y. 273.

1. Before acceptance there is no agreement, and therefore the proposer cannot be bound to anything. Stitt v. Huidekopers, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 384; Crocker v. Railroad Co., 24 Conn. 249, 261; Johnson v. Pilkington, 39 Wis. 62; Railroad Co. v. Bartlett, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 224; Craig v. Harper, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 158; Foster v. Boston, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 33; Brown v. Rice, 29 Mo. 352; Houghwout v. Boisaubin, 18 N. J. Eq. 315; McDonald v. Bewick, 51 Mich. 79; Burton v. Shotwell, 13 Bush (Ky.), 271.

In an action against an irrigation company for failure to deliver water purchased, where it appears that there was a contract to be delivered to purchasers, restricting the liability of the company for failure to deliver water in certain cases, and providing for a pro rata distribution when there was an insufficiency of water to fill all the orders, the plaintiff, not having received such contract, is not bound by the terms thereof, although, as a stockholder of the company, he is cognizant of its provisions. Gray v. Salt R. V. C. Co., 12 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 607.

A gratuitous subscription, with only one signer, is but an offer, which, until accepted by the promisee in express terms, or by a performance of the conditions stipulated therein, is but a nudum pactum, and cannot be enforced against the will of the subscriber by suit at law. Broadbent v. Johnson, 13 Pac. Rep. (Idaho) 83.

A subscription becomes a contract when accepted by the beneficiary and acted upon by the incurring of an obligation or the expenditure of money. McCabe v. O'Conner, 69 Iowa, 134.

A, of Charleston, S. C., ordered of B, of Fredericksburg, Va., a cargo of corn at so much a bushel and at so much freight, to be shipped "on receipt" of the order. B could not fill the order at once, and wrote that he would try to do so. Two weeks later he wrote that he had procured the corn, and after waiting three days, after an answer should have been received by due course of mail, he resold the corn. Held, that his letter was a new proposal, which, not being accepted, reasonably could be withdrawn. Burmester v. Phillips, 25 Fed. Rep. 805.

If the offer is modified or withdrawn before an unconditional acceptance, there is no contract. Schenectady Stove Co. v. Holbrook, 101 N. Y. 45.

The same rule applies to a proposal to vary an existing agreement. Gilkes v. Leonino, 4 C. B. N. S. 485. Where, on a treaty for a sale, an article is taken on trial, with an option to purchase if liked, there is no contract, but only an offer until the option is determined. Hunt v. Wyman, 100 Mass. 198. But where the article is taken with an option to return if not liked, there is a contract in the first place, subject to a right of rescission. Withersby v. Sleeper, 101 Mass. 138.

2. If in the morning A offers goods to B for sale at a certain price, and gives B till four o'clock in the afternoon to make up his mind, yet A may sell the goods to C at any time before four o'clock, so long as B has not accepted his offer. Cooke v. Oxley, 3 T. R. 653. It is far from clear what the court meant to decide in that case, and it has been the subject of much criticism. For conflicting views see Benjamin on Sale (3d Ed.), 66; 4th Am. Ed., by Bennett, § 64 seq.; and Langdell's Summary of Law of Contracts, p. 246, § 182. The decision in Cooke v. Oxley has been generally condemned in this country. "The criticisms which have been made upon the case are sufficient to destroy its authority." 2 Kent, 477, n. (a). "It cannot be considered as of any authority." Railroad Co. v. Bartlett, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 224, 228. And see Metcalf on Contracts, 19-23; 1 Duer on Ins. 118; 2 Amer. Jurist, N. S. 17 seq. Every offer once made remains open until expressly or impliedly revoked. If not sooner expressly revoked, it is presumed to be revoked after the lapse of a reasonable time without acceptance. When an offer is in terms made to remain open until a fixed time, it comes to an end of itself at the end of that time, and there is nothing for the other party to accept. Longworth v. Mitchell, 26 Ohio St. 334, 342; Potts v. Whitehead, 20 N. J. Eq. 55, 59; Larmen v. Jordan, 56 Ill. 204. But a willingness to contract on the part of the party making the offer on the terms named in it is presumed to continue during the time limited. Railroad a proposal must be communicated before acceptance, otherwise it is too late, the contract being complete as soon as the offer is accepted.<sup>1</sup> A proposal is revoked by the death of the proposer before acceptance. So if the person to whom the offer is made dies before acceptance.<sup>2</sup>

Co. v. Bartlett, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 224, 227; Mactier's Admr. v. Frith, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 103, 122; Cheney v. Cook, 7 Wis. 357. In the absence of an intermediate express revocation, an acceptance of the offer within that time gives rise to a contract. In the modern civil law a promise to keep a proposal open for a definite time is treated as binding, the doctrine of consideration being foreign to that system. Indeed, there is held in every proposal to be an implied promise to keep it open for a reasonable time. Vangerow, Pand. § 603 (3, 253); L. R. 5 Ex. 337, n.; Railroad Co. v. Bartlett, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 224, 227. Of course, if there is a promise upon consideration to keep an offer open until a time named, an action would lie for a breach of the promise, although if the offer were revoked within the time an acceptance after the revocation would not make a contract.

1. An express revocation communicated after acceptance, though determined upon before the date of the acceptance, is too late. Wheat v. Cross, 31 Md. 99; Thomson v. James, 18 Dunlop, 1; Langdell Sel. Ca. Cont. 125. In Byrne v. Van Tienhoven, 5 C. P. D. 344, the defendants at Cardiff wrote to the plaintiffs at New York, on Oct. 1, 1879, offering for sale 1000 boxes of tin plates on certain terms. Their letter was received on the 11th, and on the same day the plaintiff accepted the offer by telegraph, confirming this by a letter sent on the 15th. Meanwhile the defendants, on Oct. 8th, had posted a letter withdrawing their offer of the 1st. This reached the plaintiff on the 20th. The plaintiff insisted on the completion of the contract; the defendants maintained that there was no contract, their offer having been withdrawn before the acceptance was either received or dispatched. Lindley, J., stated as follows the questions to be considered: 1. "Whether a withdrawal of an offer has any effect until it is communicated to the person to whom the offer has been sent. 2. Whether posting a letter of withdrawal is a communication to the person to whom the letter is sent?" The first he answered in the negative, on the principle "that a state of mind not notified cannot be regarded in dealings between man and man, and that an uncommunicated revocation is for all practical purposes and in point of law no revocation at all." See White v. Corliss, 46 N. Y. 467, 469, 470. The second he likewise answered in the negative, on grounds of both principle and convenience.

The prompt mailing of a letter accepting a proposed contract, where the negotiations are by letter, will complete the agreement unless there has been some intimation that the sale would not be made. A letter written after sending a proposed contract, withdrawing the proposition, will not effect a revocation if it is received after the mailing of a letter of acceptance. Kempner v. Cohn, 23 Repr. (Ark.) 104.

In Dickinson v. Dodds, 2 Ch. D. (C. A.) 463, A offered in writing to sell certain houses to B, the offer to be "left over" until a time named. Before the time had expired B heard that A had agreed to sell the property to C. B then within the time formally accepted A's offer, but A answered, "You are too late. I have sold the property." Held, that there was no contract. Mr. Pollock is of opinion that the ground of this decision is that knowledge in point of fact of the proposer's changed intention, however it reaches the other party, will make the proposer's conduct a sufficient revocation. Pollock on Contracts, 28. While Sir Wm. Anson thinks the case decides that where the parties are in immediate communication a proposal may be revoked without notice to the person to whom it has been made, and cites Cooke v. Oxley, 3 T. R. 653. Anson on Contracts, 17.

2. Per Mellish, L. J., in Dickinson v. Dodds, 2 Ch. D. 475; Pratt v. Trustees, 93 Ill. 475; Phipps v. Jones, 20 Pa. St. 260; Helfenstein's Est., 77 Pa. St. 328; Foust v. Board of Publication, 8 Lea (Tenn.), 552, 555.

If one subscribes for railroad stock on condition of the construction of a road along a certain route, and dies before his offer is delivered to and accepted by the company, the death revokes the subscription. Wallace v. Townsend, 43 Ohio St. 537; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 829.

A contract, terminable at the will of either party, is terminated by the death of one of the parties. Browne v. McDonald, 129 Mass. 66. There is no dis-

31. Acceptance of Proposal—Agreement to Draw Formal Writing.—The acceptance of an offer must be absolute and unqualified, for until there is such an acceptance, the negotiations of the parties amount to nothing more than proposals and counter-proposals.<sup>1</sup> distinct authority to show whether notice to the other party is material or not, but in the analogous case of agency the death of the principal puts an end ipso facto to the agent's authority, without regard to the time when it becomes known either to the agent or to third parties. Blades v. Free, 9 B. & C. 167; Campavari v. Woodburn, 15 C. B. 400; 2 Kent Comm. 646.

Death of agent terminates contract of agency. Adriance v. Rutherford, 57 Mich. 170. This is not true at the civil law. D. 46, 3, De solut. et liberat. 32. The Indian Contract Act, s. 208, illust. (c), adopts the rule of the civil law. That insanity of the proposer before acceptance will operate as a revocation of the offer, see Beach v. First M. E. Church, 96 Ill. 177; The Palo Alto, Davies, 343; also Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 9; Drew v. Mun, 4 Q. B. D. 669.

His representatives are not capable of acting upon it if the deceased had not accepted it in his lifetime. Humphrey v. Werner, 2 M. & G. 853.

1. Eliason v. Henshaw, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 225, 228; Harlow v. Curtis, 121 Mass. 320; Hutchinson v. Blakeman, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 80; Potts v. Whitehead, 23 N. J. Eq. 512; Plant Seed Co. v. Hall, 14 Kan. 553; Jenness v. Mt. Hope Iron Co., 53 Me. 20; Hough v. Brown, 19 N. Y. 111, 115; Johnson v. Stephenson, 26 Mich. 63; Eggleston v. Wagner, 46 Mich. 610; Barrow v. Ker, 10 La. Ann. 120; McCotter v. Mayor, 37 N. Y. 325; Bruner v. Wheaton, 46 Mo. 363; Falls Wire Mfg. Co. v. Broderick, 12 Mo. App. 378; Deshon v. Fosdick, 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 286; N. W. Iron Co. v. Meade, 21 Wis. 474; Baker v. Holt, 56 Wis. 100; Merriam v. Lapsley, 2 McCrary (U. S.), 606; Martin v. Northwestern Fuel Co. (C. C. U. S. D. Minn.), 22 Fed. Rep. 596; Foster v. Ulman, 64 Md. 523; Siebold v. Davis, 67 Iowa, 560; Derrick v. Monette, 73 Ala. 75.

Acceptance must be unequivocal, unconditional, and without variance from proposal. Strange v. Crowley, 7 West. Rep. (Mo.) 106.

Any modification proposed in an acceptance must be accepted by the offeror, before he can hold the acceptor to a contract. Nundy v. Matthews, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 74.

An offer to sell lands and acceptance.

"provided the title is perfect," does not constitute a binding contract. Corcoran v. White, 117 Ill. 118; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 858.

An instrument signed by A alone, and wherein he agrees to sell to B standing timber, and declares that he will make a contract with B, giving him the right to enter on the land, and cut and remove the timber upon payment being made by B, is not a contract, but simply an offer to make one. McDonald v. Bewick, 51 Mich. 79.

An offer to sell real estate by one person to another imposes no obligation upon the former so as to make him liable in an action for specific performance, unless it is accepted by the latter, according to the terms on which it is made, without qualification, or the introduction of any new term. Langellier v. Schaefer, 31 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 690.

The acceptance of an order "to be paid out of the last payment" is not an unconditional acceptance; and the words being ambiguous, evidence of the conversation between the parties at the time it was signed is admissible to aid in its construction. Proctor v. Hartigan, 9 East. Rep. (Mass.) 844.

Where one writes, offering to sell another a horse for a certain price, and the other replies that he might purchase the horse if it would suit him, which he is certain it will, this is not enough to show a contract. Stagg v. Compton, 81 Ind. 171.

In case of an offer by a person in one State to sell land in another State at a certain cash price, an acceptance, directing the deed to be sent to a bank in the latter State, to be delivered on payment of the price, will not create a binding contract, as the terms of the offer entitle the vendor to payment in his own State. Gilbert v. Baxter, 32 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 364.

A telegraphed to B to know the terms on which he would sell a large quantity of coal. B named a price. A said it was too much. B then by telegraph named a lower price, and went somewhat into details. A telegraphed back: "You can consider the coal sold. Will be in Cleveland and arrange particulars next week." Held, not a completed contract. Martin v. Northwestern Fuel Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 596.

A nagreement by one creditor to postpone his claim if "the other creditors would grant the extension desired," does not become binding because of an extension granted by one of the other creditors. Heyer v. Bromberg, 74 Ala. 524.

B, a resident of California, by letter addressed to A, at his place of residence in Iowa, offered to sell certain real estate to A for $5000. A telegraphed that he would take the property at that price, and added: "Money at your order at First National Bank here. Telegraph immediately when to expect deed."

Held, that B was entitled under his offer to have the money paid to him at his place of residence, and to deliver the deed there; and that as A's acceptance was not an acceptance of the offer as it did not bind B, and specific performance could not be enforced. v. Brossart, 67 Iowa, 678.

A was a judgment creditor of C; B to A a letter in the following terms: "If C leaves in your hands the 250 8 per cent preference shares. will obtain, within one month his date, with the sanction of C., for him of £1000 upon said order, pay that sum to you against the delivery of said order." C left the order in A's hands, and sanctioned the proposal contained in the letter. A then wrote to B as follows: "C brought me your letter on the 27th, and he has given me his written sanction to your obtaining the loan of £1000 for him referred to in that letter, and we shall be glad to hear that everything is in order." Held, that assuming A's letter to B to be a final acceptance of the offer contained in B's letter to A, there was consideration moving from A to support B's promise, such consideration being the implied undertaking on A's part when he received the order to keep it till required for the purpose of being handed over to the person who would advance the £1000 on its security. But held also, that A's letter to B was not an acceptance of the offer contained in B's letter to A, and that the two letters, therefore, did not constitute a contract. Harston v. Harvey, 1 A. & E. 404.

A freight agent of the defendant's railroad, in answer to inquiries from plaintiff, gave him certain rates from a certain point on the road to New Orleans. Ten days afterward plaintiff shipped goods from a different point for New Orleans, and obtained a bill of lading from one who had no authority to bind defendant. Held, that there was no contract with defendant. Robinson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 75 Mo. 494.

If A, who is lending his credit and aid to B, and who holds security from B for liabilities to be incurred, examines with B certain rags, the property of C, and offers therefor 6½ cents per pound, which is refused, and B subsequently, without his knowledge, purchases the rags for 7 cents per pound, pays in cash ¾ ct. of that price, and having charged to A the balance of 6½ cents, there is no contract binding on A, nor is he liable to C on a note given by him in payment of the balance while in ignorance of the circumstances of the sale. Patton v. Taft, 9 N. E. Rep. (Mass.) 517; 3 New Eng. Rep. 693.

Under partnership articles providing for dissolution on an offer in writing to buy or sell, one partner had sold the other an interest which was not wholly paid for, and subsequently offered to buy out that partner's share at the estimated value of its proportion to the whole business, which offer was accepted. Held, that as the offeror must have intended to have a deduction for the unpaid business, and the other party did not so understand it, the minds of the parties had never met, and the agreement would not be enforced. Braeutigam v. Edwards, 38 N. J. Eq. 542.

"Acceptance upon terms varying from those offered is a rejection of the offer." Bank v. Hall, 101 U. S. 43, 50; Baker v. Johnson Co., 37 Iowa, 186, 189; Cartmell v. Newton, 79 Ind. 1, 8; Falls Wire Mfg. Co. v. Broderick, 12 Mo. App. 378. And puts an end to it so that a subsequent acceptance upon the terms offered does not make a contract. Ortman v. Weaver (C. C. U. S. E. D. Mich.), 11 Fed. Rep. 358; Fox v. Turner, 1 Bradw. (Ill.) 153; Hyde v. Wrench, 3 Beav. 334; Sheffield Canal Co. v. Sheffield, etc., R. Co., 3 Rwy. & Canal Cases, 121.

An offer to sell 2000 to 5000 tons of rails at a certain rate and within a certain time, in reply to a request to quote price for 2000 to 5000 tons, is not accepted by an order for 1200 tons; and when such order is rejected, a subsequent order within the contract time for 2000 tons does not operate to revive the offer and to make a sale. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Columbus Rolling-Mill Co., 119 U. S. 149.

For collected English authorities, see Fry on Specific Performance, c. 2; see also Langdell's Select Cases on Contracts, 155. In Honeyman v. Marryat, 6 H. L. C. 112, a proposal for sale was accepted "subject to the terms of a con-

It may happen that though the parties are in fact agreed upon the terms, yet they do not mean the agreement to be binding in law till it is put into writing or into a formal writing. In such case the stipulation is a term of the assent, and there is agreement independent of that stipulation.

tract being arranged" between the vendor's and purchaser's solicitors. Held, no contract. An acceptance of an offer to sell land "subject to the title being approved by our solicitors" is not a qualified acceptance: it expresses the conditions annexed by law to contracts of this class, that a good title shall be shown by the vendor. Hussey v. Horne Payne, 4 App. Cas. 311, 322. See Crossley v. Maycock, 18 Eq. 180; Stanley v. Dowdeswill, L. R. 10 C. P. 102. Compare Smith v. Webster, 3 Ch. D. 49. In Appleby v. Johnson, L. R. 9 C. P. 158, the plaintiff wrote to the defendant, a calico-printer, and offered his services as salesman on certain terms, among which was this: "A list of the merchants to be regularly called on by me to be made." The defendant wrote in answer: "Yours of yesterday embodies the substance of our conversation and terms. If we can define some of the terms a little clearer it might prevent mistakes; but I think we are quite agreed on all. We shall therefore expect you on Monday. (Signed) J. Appleby. P. S. I have made a list of customers which we can consider together." Held, that there was no complete contract. In Addinell's Case, 1 Eq. 255, and Jackson v. Turquand, L. R. 4 H. L. 305, a bank issued a circular offering new shares to existing shareholders, in proportion to their interests, and also asking them to say if, in the event of any shares remaining, they would wish to have any more. Certain shareholders wrote in answer, accepting their proportion of shares, and also desiring to have a certain number of additional shares if they could on the terms noted in the circular. In reply to this the directors sent them notices that the additional shares had been allotted to them, and the amount must be paid to the bank by a day named, or the shares would be forfeited. Held, that as to the first or proportional set of shares the shareholders' letter was an acceptance constituting a contract, but as to the extra shares it was only a proposal; and as the directors' answers introduced a material new term (as to forfeiture of the shares if not paid for within a certain time), there was no binding contract as to these. See also Wynne's Case, 8 Ch. 1002; Beck's Case, 9 Ch. 392; Carr v. Duval, 14 Pet. (U. S.)

77; Slaymaker v. Irwin, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 369; Hyde v. Wrench, 3 Beav. 336.

An acceptance may be complete though it expresses dissatisfaction at some of the terms if the dissatisfaction stops short of dissent, so that the whole thing may be described as a "grumbling assent." Joyce v. Swann, 17 C. B. N. S. 84; per Lord St. Leonards, 6 H. L. C. 277-8 (in a dissenting judgment). An acceptance is not made conditional by adding words that in truth make no difference, as where the addition is simply immaterial. Oliver v. Beaumont, 1 De G. & S. 397; Clark v. Dales, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 42; Brisban v. Boyd, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 17; Fitzhugh v. Jones, 6 Munf. (Va.) 83; Matteson v. Scofield, 27 Wis. 671; Bruner v. Wheaton, 46 Mo. 363. Or a mere formal memorandum is inclosed for signature but not shown to contain any new term. Gibbons v. N. E. Metrop. Asylum District, 11 Beav. 1. If the person answering an unambiguous proposal accepts it with the addition of ambiguous words, which are capable of being construed consistently with the rest of the document and so as to leave the acceptance absolute, they will, if possible, be so construed. Eng. & For. Credit Co. v. Ardain, L. R. 5 H. L. 64, per Lord Westbury, at p. 79. See also Perrett's Case, 15 Eq. 250; Duke v. Andrews, 2 Ex. 290. The unconditional acceptance of a proposal is not deprived of its effect by the existence of a misunderstanding between the parties in the construction of collateral terms which are not part of the agreement itself. Baines v. Woodfall, 6 C. B. N. S. 657; 28 L. J. C. P. 338.

1. Chinnock v. Marchioness of Ely, 4 D. J. S. 638, 646; Water Comm'rs v. Brown, 32 N. J. L. 504; Eads v. Carondelet, 42 Mo. 113; Morrill v. Tehama Co., 10 Nev. 125; Congdon v. Davey, 46 Vt. 478; Fredericks v. Fasnacht, 30 La. Ann. pt. 1, 117; Bourne v. Shapleigh, 9 Mo. App. 764; MacMakin v. Timmins (S. C. Pa.), 50 Alb. L. J. 56; Hough v. Brown, 19 N. Y. 111. Whether such is the truth of the understanding is a question which depends on the circumstances of each particular case. Rossiter v. Miller, 3 App. Ca. 1124, 1152. "It is not to be supposed that because persons wish to have a formal agreement drawn at therefore they cannot be bound previous agreement if it is clear that an agreement has been made."

Cheney v. Hoke, 14 Ohio St. 292; Montague v. Weil, 30 La. Ann. pt. 150; Pratt v. Railroad Co., 21 N. Y. 305; Bell v. Offutt, 10 Bush (Ky.), 632; Blight v. Ashley, 1 Pet. (C. C.) 15; Mackey v. Mackey, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 158; Wharton v. Stoutenburgh, 35 N. J. Eq. 266; Cheney v. Eastern Transp. Line, 59 Md. 557; Paige v. Fullerton Woollen Co., 27 Vt. 485.

But the circumstance that the parties do intend a subsequent agreement to be made is strong evidence to show that they did not intend the previous negotiations to amount to an agreement.

Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. C. 238, 264, 268, per Lord Cranworth, C.; and see, per Lord Wensleydale, at pp. 305-6; Lyman v. Robinson, 14 Allen (Mass.), 254; Brown v. Railroad Co., 4 N. Y. 86; Methudy v. Ross, 10 Mo. App. 106.

Still more is this the case if the first record of the terms agreed upon is in so many words expressed to be "subject to the preparation and approval of a formal contract." Winn v. Bull, 7 Ch. D. 29.

A and B signed a written document, whereby B agreed to buy and A to sell an estate therein described at a specified price, "subject to a formal contract being prepared and signed by both parties, as approved by their solicitors." A correspondence ensued, in the course of which B's solicitor stated that B was "quite firm in adhering to the agreement he entered into," to give a certain sum per acre for the property, which amounted to less than the specified price. A formal contract was prepared in draft, but was not, nor was any other formal contract, signed by the parties or approved by their solicitors. In an action by A for specific performance of the agreement as modified by the correspondence, held, that there was no concluded agreement between the parties which was capable of being specifically enforced. Hawkesworth v. Chaffey, 54 L. T. N. S. 72. See also Bushell v. Pocock, 53 L. T. N. S. 860.

A and B agreed to take C into partnership at a future date, the agreement required by both sides to be drawn up by solicitors. The parties had not considered, and could not afterwards agree upon, several terms of the intended partnership. Held, that there was no concluded agreement between the parties. Connery v. Best, 1 C. & E. 291.

A written offer to take a building, to be altered, at a certain rent, plans to be agreed on, and an acceptance in writing of such offer, do not constitute a valid lease; and the owner having refused to give such lease before the plans were agreed upon, specific performance cannot be enforced. Mayer v. McCreery, 26 N. Y. W. Dig. 449.

But it is settled law that a contract may be made by letters, and that the mere reference in them to a future formal contract will not prevent their constituting a binding bargain. James, L. J., in Bonnewell v. Jenkins, 8 Ch. D. 70, 73.

The intention of preparing a merely formal contract does not alone show that the parol contract is not regarded by the parties as complete. In Cheney v. Eastern Transportation Line, 59 Md. 557. A made B an oral offer for the purchase of the hull and masts of a vessel, which was to remain open until the next day. B on the next day wrote a letter to A substantially embodying the conditions orally mentioned, and saying that he accepted A's offer. A replied, acknowledging B's letter as an acceptance, saying what he understood B to mean by a certain expression, and that he understood the masts to go with the hull, and saying also that he would have a formal contract prepared. B answered this, asking for the old iron, making no objection to A's interpretation of the expression referred to, and saying that of course the masts go with the hull. Other letters followed about various matters. Held, that the first two letters made a contract between the parties. The court said: "The reference by Robert to the preparation of a formal contract cannot negative the idea that the parties had already bindingly agreed on the matter, and so fully understood. In Bonnewell v. Jenkins [L. R. 8 Ch. Div. 70] (already cited), the judge says that a long series of cases has established, that a reference to a future contract is not enough to negative a present one. Reference is there made to Crowley v. Maycock, L. R. 18 Eq. 180."

Where the parties dealt for some time on the terms of a draft agreement which had never been formally executed, it was held that there was an actual though informal consent to a contract upon those terms. Brogden v. Metropolitan R. Co., 2 App. Ca. 666, Lord Cairns' opinion. Each case must depend upon its own circumstances. The question may be made clearer by putting it in this way—whether there is a final consent of the parties such that no new term or variation can be introduced in the formal document to be prepared. Lord Blackburn, 3 App. Ca. at p. 1151. See also

32. Communication of Acceptance—Contracts by Post and Telegraph—Law of Place.—The acceptance must be communicated to the proposer. An acceptance not communicated to the proposer does not make a contract.<sup>1</sup> When parties are communicating with each other by means of the public post or telegraph, all acceptance so despatched is complete as against the proposer from the time of its despatch out of the sender's control, notwithstanding any miscarriage or delay in its transmission happening after such despatch.<sup>2</sup>

Lewis v. Brass (C. A.), 3 Q. B. D. 667.

A written contract, although inartificially drawn, obscure, and capable of different interpretations in several particulars, yet its provisions embracing, although in very inadequate terms, every matter which the parties had definitely agreed to, and the circumstances surrounding its execution being consistent with no other conclusion, must be regarded as a completed agreement or contract, and not merely as an agreement to agree. Bean v. Clark, 30 Fed. Rep. 225.

1. M'Iver v. Richardson, 1 M. & S. 557; Mozley v. Tinkler, 1 C. M. & R. 692; Russell v. Thornton, 4 H. & N. 788, 798, 804; Hebb's Ca., 4 Eq. 9; Shupe v. Galbraith, 32 Pa. St. 10; Jennes v. Mt. Hope Iron Co., 53 Me. 20; McCulloch v. Ins. Co., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 278; Borland v. Guffey, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 394; Beckwith v. Cheever, 21 N. H. 41; Duncan v. Heller, 13 S. Car. 94; White v. Corlies, 46 N. Y. 467; Trounstone v. Sellers, 13 Kan. 447. This rule, however, is subject to an important exception where the parties are in correspondence through the post-office.

2. Adams v. Lindsell, 1 B. & Ald. 681. Defendants wrote to plaintiffs, "We now offer you 800 tons of wether fleeces, etc., receiving your answer in course of post." This letter was misdirected, and so arrived late. On receiving it plaintiff wrote accepting the proposal, but the defendants not receiving an answer, when they should have received it if their proposal had not been delayed, had in the mean time (between the dispatch and the arrival of the reply) sold the wool to another buyer. The plaintiff sued for non-delivery of the wool. Held, that the defendants were bound by their offer. "The defendants must be considered in law as making, during every instant of time their letter was travelling, the same identical offer to the plaintiffs, and then the contract is completed by the acceptance of it by the latter." In Dunmore v. Alexander, 9 Shaw & Dunlop, 190, an acceptance and revocation were written at different times, but posted and received at the same time; held, that the revocation was effectual. In Thompson v. James, 18 Dunlop, 1; Langdell Sel. Ca. on Cont. 125, it was held that a contract by letter is complete from the moment of posting the acceptance. Potter v. Sanders, 6 Ha. 1; Dunlop v. Higgins, 1 H. L. C. 381. A proposal to sell iron; the acceptance delayed by state of roads. Held, that the contract was concluded by posting the acceptance. Duncan v. Topham, 8 C. B. 225. As to applications for shares in companies made and answered by letter, see Hebb's Ca., 4 Eq. 9; Reidpath's Case, 11 Eq. 86; British & Amer. Tel. Co. v. Colson, L. R. 6 Ex. 108; Townsend's Ca., 13 Eq. 148; Harris's Case, 7 Ch. 587; Wall's Case, 15 Eq. 18. In Household Fire Ins. Co. v. Grant, 4 Ex. D. 216, an application for shares in the plaintiff company, whose office was in London, was handed by the defendant to a country agent for the company. A letter of allotment, duly addressed to the defendant, was posted from the London office, but never reached him. The company went into liquidation, and the liquidator sued for the amount due on the shares. Held, that the defendant must be taken to have authorized the sending by post of a letter of allotment, and that he was bound, although the letter wholly failed to reach its address. Acc. Vassar v. Camp, 11 N. Y. 441; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Washburn v. Fletcher, 42 Wis. 152; Haas v. Meyers (S. C. Ill.), 20 C. L. J. 94. 95. The American cases hold similarly in regard to proposal and revocation, and almost uniformly state the rule as to the acceptance to be that it takes effect from the time when it is dispatched, whether by post or by telegraph.

In Taylor v. Merchants' Fire Ins. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 390, the insurance company's agent wrote to the plaintiff offering to insure his house on certain terms. The plaintiff wrote and posted a letter accepting these terms, which was duly received. The day after it was posted, but before it was delivered, the house was burnt. Held, that the contract of insurance was complete. Trevor v. Wood, 39

The contract dates from the acceptance.<sup>1</sup> A contract is governed by the laws of the place where it is executed ;<sup>2</sup> a contract made by correspondence should be referred to the place whence the acceptance is despatched.<sup>3</sup>

N. Y. 307; Minnesota Oil Co. v. Collier Lead Co., 4 Dillon (U. S.), 431; Ins. Co. v. Tuttle, 40 N. J. L. 476; Hutchinson v. Blakeman, 3 Met. (Ky.) 80; Mactier's Adm'rs v. Frith, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 103; Hamilton v. Ins. Co., 5 Pa. St. 339; Stockham v. Stockham, 32 Mo. 196, 208; Bryant v. Booze, 55 Ga. 438; Abbott v. Shepherd, 48 N. H. 14; Moore v. Pierson, 6 Clarke (Iowa), 279; Ferrier v. Storer, 63 Iowa, 484; Levy v. Cohen, 4 Ga. 1; Hallock v. Ins. Co., 26 N. J. L. 268, 27 N. J. L. 645; Ins. Co. v. Jenks, 5 Ind. 96.

When a negotiation for the payment of a debt by the note of a third party is carried on by letter, the party to whom the offer has been made is held to have accepted it or rejected it from the time his answer is deposited in the mail. Hunt v. Higman, 30 N. W. Rep. (Iowa), 769.

A policy of life-insurance, upon due application, was issued under a contract with the local agent, whereby it was substantially agreed that the agent should pay the first quarter's premium and take the applicant's note for the same. The policy was mailed from the home office July 28, 1885, and received by the local agent Aug. 5, 1885, but was never actually delivered into the possession of the applicant, who was taken ill, Aug. 6, and died Sept. 9, 1885. Held, that as between the applicant and the company the policy became effective and binding when placed in the mail, July 28, 1885, and if not then, certainly when it reached the hands of the agent, Aug. 5, 1885. "As between the applicant and the company, this contract was complete. There was left no act for the applicant to perform, so far as the company was concerned." Yonge v. Eq. Life Ass. Soc., 30 Fed. Rep. 902.

Where there was an agreement between the agent of an insurance company and the insured that if he desired additional insurance after night-time he should post a letter to the agent asking for such insurance, and that the insurance should take effect for the amount named in the letter from the time it was posted, held, that such a letter deposited in the post-office unstamped, is not posted so as to effect insurance unless the plaintiff notified the agent of the depositing of the letter and of its contents before the loss. Blake v. Hamburg-Bremen Fire Ins. Co., 35 Alb. L. Jour. (Tex.) 82. See also 7 Amer. L. Rev. 433, "Contract by Letter," where the American and French opinions are collected. Opposed to the current of authority is McCullock v. Ins. Co., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 278, which holds that an acceptance by post has no effect until received by the proposer. See Wald's Ed. Pollock on Contrs. 36, note x. To be perfectly safe, a man who makes an offer of any importance by letter should expressly make it conditional on his actual receipt of an acceptance within some definite time. "The person making the offer may always, if he chooses, make the formation of the contract which he proposes dependent upon the actual communication to himself of the acceptance." "If an offer is made by letter in which the person making the offer requests an answer by telegraph, 'Yes' or 'No,' and states that unless he receives the answer by a certain date he 'shall conclude "No,"' the offer is made dependent upon an actual receipt of the telegram on or before the date named." Lewis v. Browning, 130 Mass. 173.

The proposer of a contract by telegraph was held bound to deliver at the price named in the telegram, though an error therein was made by the telegraph company. "We think the safer and more equitable rule, and the rule the public can most easily adapt itself to, is that, as between sender and receiver, the party who selects the telegraph as the means of communication shall bear the loss caused by the errors of the telegraph." Ayer v. West. U. Tel. Co., 10 Atl. Rep. (Me.) 497.

1. The contract does not relate back to the date of the proposal. Felthouse v. Bindley, 11 C. B. N. S. 869; 31 L. J. C. P. 204.

2. Shoe & Leather Nat. Bank v. Wood, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 119; Brown v. Am. Finance Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 516.

Where a contract for the loan of money was made in Massachusetts upon the condition that the note to be given therefor should be signed and returned to the lender in that State, the note, although signed in New Hampshire, became operative as evidence of the contract on being delivered to the lender, and such contract is governed by the laws of Massachusetts. Hill v. Chase, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 207.

3. Newcomb v. De Roos, 2 E. & E. 270; 29 L. J. Q. B. 4; Levy v. Cohen, 4 Ga.

33. Proposal or Acceptance by Conduct.—The proposal or acceptance of an agreement need not necessarily be written or spoken, but may be acted wholly or in part.<sup>1</sup>

1; Insurance Co. v. Tuttle, 40 N. J. L. 476; Shattuck v. Ins. Co., 4 Cliff. (U. S. C.) 598. Compare Milliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374; Bell v. Packard, 69 Me. 105. If a person residing in one State orders goods of one residing in another State, who there delivers the goods ordered to a carrier for the purchaser, the contract is made there, and its validity depends upon the law of the State of the settler's residence. Frank v. Hoey, 128 Mass. 263; Milliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374; Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 253; Finch v. Mansfield, 97 Mass. 89; Tuttle v. Holland, 43 Vt. 542; Webber v. Donnelly, 33 Mich. 469; Garbracht v. Commonwealth, 96 Pa. St. 449; Boothby v. Plaisted, 51 N. H. 436; Fuller v. Leet, 59 N. H. 163; Tegler v. Shipman, 33 Iowa, 194; State v. Hughes, 22 W. Va. 743; Pilgreen v. State, 71 Ala. 368. Contra to last case, in which goods were ordered to be delivered C.O.D. at the buyer's place of residence, is United States v. Shriver, 23 Fed. Rep. 134, which latter is believed to be the better decision.

1. One may be bound by a contract accepted and acted under by him, although only the other party thereto has signed it. Fairbanks v. Meyers, 98 Ind. 92.

For an example of an agreement inferred from conduct, see San Joaquin Val. Bank v. Bours, 65 Cal. 247.

If the trains of a defendant railroad company are accustomed to stop at the platform at which plaintiff desired to alight, although it was neither constructed nor owned by the company, an implied contract that passengers might stop there may be raised. L. & N. R. Co. v. Johnston, 79 Ala. 436.

One may be bound by a contract though he does not sign the written memorandum if he participates in the negotiation which leads to its being signed, is present at the signing, knows its terms, and intends to allow the parties who did sign to adjust the whole matter. So held under the circumstances, in Bean v. Clark, 30 Fed. Rep. 225.

Waiver of time limited in a parol contract may be proved not only by an express agreement, but by the conduct of the parties. Frost v. Thompson, 18 Ill. App. 410.

A written agreement made with a trustee of an intended company was held incapable of confirmation, having been entered into before the company was in existence, and the acts of the company done under the erroneous belief that the agreement was binding on them were held not evidence of a fresh agreement having been entered into on the same terms as the written agreement. In re Northumberland Ave. Hotel Co., 33 Ch. D. 16.

If A, of his own motion sends goods to B on approval, this is an offer which B accepts by dealing with the goods as owner. Sending an order for goods to a merchant is in effect an offer to purchase, and sending the goods is an acceptance of the offer and creates a contract of sale. Hart v. Mills, 15 M. & W. 87; Cresswell, J., in Harvey v. Johnston, 6 C. B. 304; Levy v. Green, 8 E. & B. 575; Gt. Northn. R. Co. v. Witham, L. R. 9 C. P. 16. The conduct must be unambiguous and unconditional. Warner v. Willington, 3 Drew, 523, 533.

Where the proposal is not express, it must be shown that the conduct relied on as conveying the proposal was such as to amount to a communication to the other party of the proposer's intention. Questions of this kind have arisen where public companies entering into contract for the carriage or custody of goods have sought to limit their liability by special conditions printed on a ticket delivered to the passenger or depositor at the time of making the contract. It is a question of fact in each case whether the notice given by the depositor was reasonably sufficient to inform the depositor at the time of making the contract that the depositor intended to contract only on special terms. Henderson v. Stevenson, L. R. 2 Sc. & D. 470 (1875); Harris v. G. W. G. Co., 1 Q. B. D. 575; Parker v. S. E. R. Co.; Gabell v. Same, 2 C. P. D. 416. Compare Burke v. S. E. R. Co., 5 C. P. D. 1; Watkins v. Rymile, 10 Q. B. D. 178, where the former cases are fully reviewed by Stephen, J.

W. bought from a railroad company a ticket from E. to B. and return, at a reduced rate. There was a condition in the ticket that it was good only on the trains advertised to stop at stations named therein. A train not advertised to stop at B. was signalled at that point by W., but failed to stop for him. Held, that W.'s rights on the ticket were limited by the conditions thereof, and he could not take advantage of the reduction in the rate and reject the conditions on which the reduction was made. Hence it was no breach of the special contract when the train refused to stop at B. on W.'s signal. Wilson v. N. O. & N. E. R. Co., 63 Miss. 352.

34. Rules do not Apply to Contracts by Deed.—The ordinary rules of proposal and acceptance do not apply to promises made by deed.<sup>1</sup>

It must be shown that the depositor knew and assented to the special terms, or at any rate that he knew there were some special terms, and was content to accept them without examination. Railroad Co. v. Campbell, 36 Ohio St. 647; Malone v. Railroad Co., 12 Gray (Mass.), 388; Brown v. Railroad Co., 11 Cush. (Mass.) 97; Madan v. Sherard, 73 N. Y. 329; Blossom v. Dodd, 43 N. Y. 264; Rawson v. Railroad Co., 48 N. Y. 212; Wilson v. Railroad Co., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 654; Railroad Co. v. Cox, 29 Ind. 360. Compare Steers v. Steamship Co., 57 N. Y. 1. The ticket is a mere token or voucher that the holder has paid his fare. Railroad Co. v. Campbell, 36 Ohio St. 647, 658; Pennsylvania Co. v. Wentz, 37 Ohio St. 333; Quimby v. Vanderbilt, 17 N. Y. 306; Rawson v. Railroad Co., 48 N. Y. 212; Elmore v. Sands, 54 N. Y. 512, 515; Burnham v. Railroad Co., 63 Me. 298; Wilson v. Railroad Co., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 654. It is well settled that a mere notice is not enough to relieve the carrier from his common-law liability without proof of its having been not only actually seen but also assented to by the other party. When goods are delivered to a common carrier under a notice, if any implication is to be indulged in "it is as strong that the owner intended to insist upon his rights as it is that he assented to their qualification." New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344, 383; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 234; Judson v. Railroad Co., 6 Allen (Mass.), 486, 491; Jones v. Voorhees, 10 Ohio, 145; Railroad Co. v. Barrett, 36 Ohio St. 448, 453; Railroad Co. v. Manufacturing Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 318; Moses v. Railroad Co., 32 N. H. 523; Same v. Same, 32 N. H. 523; Brown v. Express Co., 15 W. Va. 812. When, concurrently with his delivery of the goods to the carrier, a bill of lading containing restrictive conditions is given to the shipper and retained by him, it is held in some States that he is estopped to deny that he assented to its terms, and that evidence to show that he never read it is inadmissible. Ins. Co. v. Railroad Co., 72 N. Y. 90; Hill v. Railroad Co., 73 N.

Y. 351; Grace v. Adams, 100 Mass. 505; McMillan v. Railroad Co., 16 Mich. 80; Railroad Co. v. Brownlee, 14 Bush (Ky.), 590; O'Bryan v. Kinney, 74 Mo. 125; Wertheimer v. Railroad Co., 17 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 421. See Lawson Contracts of Carriers, § 102. On the other hand, compare Transportation Co. v. Dater, 91 Ill. 195; Railroad Co. v. Manufacturing Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 318; Express Co. v. Moon, 39 Miss. 822; Express Co. v. Haynes, 42 Ill. 89; Express Co. v. Stettaners, 61 Ill. 184. Where goods are delivered to a carrier under a verbal contract not limiting the carrier's liability, and afterwards a bill of lading containing restrictive conditions is given to the shipper, it requires for the release of the carrier from his common-law liability not only the express assent of the shipper, —Railway Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 594; Gott v. Dinmore, 111 Mass. 45; Gaines v. Transportation Co., 28 Ohio St. 418; Bostwick v. Railroad Co., 45 N. Y. 712; Railroad Co. v. Boyd, 91 Ill. 268,—but also, it would seem, a new consideration. Railroad Co. v. Reynolds, 17 Kan. 251. See 5 C. L. J. 134.

1. Doe d. Garnous v. Knight, 5 B. & C. 671 (a mortgage); Exton v. Scott, 6 Sim. 31 (the like); Hall v. Palmer, 13 L. J. Ch. 352 (bond to secure annuity after obligor's death); Fletcher v. Fletcher, 14 L. J. Ch. 66 (covenant for settlement to be made by executors); Xenos v. Wickham, L. R. 2 N. H. 296. "If A make an obligation to B and deliver it to C to the use of B, this is the deed of A presently; but if C offers it to B, then B may refuse it in pais" (i.e., without formality), "and thereby the obligation will lose its force." Butler & Baker's Ca., 3 Co. Rep. 26, quoted by Blackburn, J., L. R. 2 H. L. 312; Acc. Merrills v. Swift, 18 Conn. 257 (a mortgage); Ensworth v. King, 50 Mo. 477 (the like). Contra, Bell v. Bank, 11 Bush (Ky.), 34 (the like); Welch v. Sackett, 12 Wis. 270 (the like). Compare Sargeant v. Solberg, 22 Wis. 132. As to delivery of deeds, see 3 Washburn Real Prop. 288 seq.; Martindale Law of Conveyancing, §§ 208, 212. That a promissory note also differs from a simple contract in this respect, namely, that if delivered a payee may recover upon it, though not aware of its existence until after the maker's death, see Dean v. Caruth, 108 Mass. 242; Worth v. Case, 42 N. Y. 362; 2 Ames Cas. on Bills and

35. Implied Promises—Promises Implied in Law—Implied from Conduct—Work, etc., Done at Request—Presumption may be Rebutted—No Promise Implied between Parent and Child.—In certain cases the law will compel a man to perform a duty by implying a promise on his part to perform it.<sup>1</sup> In these cases there is no real contract, but the duty is enforced by means of a contractual action.<sup>2</sup> In other cases the conduct of the parties is of such a character that the law will presume that they were dealing on the basis of contract, and if no express promise has been made, the law will imply one.<sup>3</sup> Whenever work is done, services rendered, Notes, 878, s. v. Specialty, § 18. As to indorsee, see Lysaght v. Bryant, 9 C. B. 46; Williams v. Galt, 95 Ill. 172.

1. The following summary statements of the circumstances upon which the debt is implied were, and in some places still are, used under the common-law system of pleading: Debts for money paid by a person for the use of another; debts for money received by a person for the use of another; debts for money found to be due upon accounts stated between two persons. To which may be added debts due upon foreign judgments and other debts due under foreign law. See Leake on Contracts, 76. Cases under these heads will be found collected in the article on ASSUMPSIT.

2. "If the defendant be under an obligation from the ties of natural justice to refund, the law implies a debt founded in the equity of the plaintiff's case, as it were, upon a contract—quasis ex contractu, as the Roman law expresses it." Per Lord Mansfield in Moses v. Macfarlan, 2 Burr. 1008. See per Tindal, C. J., in Smith v. Jones, 11 L. J. C. P. 100; per Maule, J., in Lewis v. Campbell, 8 C. B. 545; Bixby v. Moore, 51 N. H. 402.

There are many cases in which there is no true contract, but in which it is just and expedient that an obligation analogous to contract should be imposed upon the person receiving the benefit. People v. Speir, 77 N. Y. 144, 150.

In an action for money had and received there need be no privity of contract alleged or proved other than such as arises out of the fact that the defendant has received the plaintiff's money, which in equity and good conscience he ought not to retain. Walker v. Conant, 31 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 786.

An action for money had and received is an equitable action, and lies whenever one person has money which ex æquo et bono belongs to another. Barnett v. Warren, 2 South. Rep. (Ala.) 457.

As a general rule, where one person's goods are lawfully seized for another's debt, the owner of the goods is entitled to redeem them, and to be reimbursed by the debtor against the money paid to redeem them, and, in the event of the goods being sold to satisfy the debt, the owner is entitled to recover the value of them from the debtor; and the right to indemnity exists although there may be no agreement to indemnify, and in that sense no privity between the owner of the goods and the debtor. Edmunds v. Wallingford, 14 Q. B. D. 811. See Inhab. of Milford v. Com., 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 781.

Where a surety signs a bond, an implied contract of indemnity takes effect immediately, and becomes a vested right. The constitutional prohibition against violating the obligation of a contract applies to a contract implied by the law. Berry v. Ewing, 8 West. Rep. (Mo.) 594. See ASSUMPSIT.

3. Whenever circumstances arise in the ordinary business of life in which, if two persons were ordinarily honest and careful, the one of them would make a promise to the other, it may properly be inferred that both of them understood that such a promise was given and accepted. Ex parte Ford, 16 Q. B. D. 307.

Implied Contracts from Conduct.—When a physician is called in generally and without limitation to his services, there is an implied engagement that he shall attend the patient through that illness, or until his services are dispensed with. Dale v. Donald Lum. Co., 48 Ark. 188.

Where a consulting physician renders medical and surgical services to a patient with his consent, and without objection or notice that such services are to be paid for by the attending physician, the law raises an implied promise on the part of the patient to pay him what the services are reasonably worth; and to overcome such promise it must be satisfactorily proved that the physician knew of and assented to a different arrangement. Garrey v. Stadler, 30 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 787.

A., in 1879, undertook to acquire the right to operate telephone exchanges in goods delivered, or money paid by one person at the request of another, provided such request be not made and acceded to as a gratuitous favor, a contract is implied to pay the value.<sup>1</sup> The presumption that the service for which the plaintiff seeks to recover was done under an implied promise that he should be paid for it may be rebutted by evidence that the relation between the parties was such as to exclude the inference that they were dealing on the footing of contract.<sup>2</sup> Between parent and child there can be no recovery for board or wages in the absence of an express agreement.<sup>3</sup>

K. C. and St. L. He was to secure the rights of the K. C. Telephone Exchange and the Am. Dist. Telegraph Co. of St. L. Accordingly A. organized the Bell Telephone Co., taking in four friends as stockholders. Before their stock was delivered an arrangement was effected for the consolidation of the Am. Dist. Tel. Co. with the Bell Telephone Co., the former receiving 250 shares of the latter. These 250 shares were deducted from shares of stock previously allowed to A., who had charge of and directed all these transactions. A. sued Bell Telephone Co. on an implied contract for the reasonable worth of the 250 shares. Held, no contract; the allotting of the 250 shares to the Am. Dist. Tel. Co. being simply a new arrangement in the creation of defendant and distribution of its stock, and not a contract between A. and defendant for 250 shares of stock. Eldred v. Bell Telephone Co. of Mo., 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; s. c., 119 U. S. 513. See, ante, PROPOSAL AND ACCEPTANCE BY CONDUCT.

1. Jewry v. Busk, 5 Taunt. 302; Kidder v. The Boom Co., 24 Pa. St. 193.

"If a man does work on the order of another, under such circumstances that it must be presumed that he looks to be paid as a matter of right, then a contract will be implied by that person." Addison on Contracts, 23.

If A with B's knowledge, but without any express request, does work for B such as people as a rule expect to be paid for, if B accepts the work or its result, and if there are no special circumstances to show that A meant to do the work for nothing or that B honestly believed that such was his intention, there is no difficulty in inferring a promise by B to pay what A's labor is worth. The doing of the work with B's knowledge is the proposal of a contract, and B's conduct is the acceptance. Day v. Caton, 119 Mass. 513; Holmes v. Board of Trade (S. C. Mo.), 18 C. L. J. 235. Services intended to be gratuitous at the time when they are rendered cannot subsequently be used to raise an implied promise to pay for them,—Potter v. Carpenter, 76 N. Y. 157; Osier v. Hobbs, 33 Ark. 215; Taylor v. Lincumfelter, 1 Lea (Tenn.), 83;—even though the person rendering them was moved to do so by reason of a state of facts mistakenly supposed to exist. St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum v. Wolpert, 80 Ky. 86. The like inference cannot be made if the work is done without B's knowledge. Compare dicta of Pollock, C. B. 25 L. J. Ex. p. 332; Davis v. School Dist. No. 2, 24 Me. 349, 351; Bartholomew v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 28; Holmes v. Board of Trade (S. C. Mo.), 18 C. L. J. 235; Hart v. Norton, 1 McCord. (S. Car.), 22.

When one pays money under a legal obligation assumed by him at the request of another and for his benefit, the law implies a promise to repay on the part of the person at whose request and for whose benefit the obligation is assumed. Wheeler v. Young, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 316.

2. Potter v. Carpenter, 76 N. Y. 157.

3. Udpike v. Titus, 2 Beas. (N. J.) 151; Hertzog v. Hertzog, 29 Pa. St. 465; Candor's Appeal, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 13; Leidig v. Coover, 41 Pa. St. 534.

The rule does not apply as one of law to more distant relatives; the question whether the relation is that of guest or servant is one of fact, depending on the intention of the parties as deduced from all the circumstances. Neal v. Gilmore, 79 Pa. St. 421, 427. See Swain v. Ettling, 32 Pa. St. 486.

In services interchanged between friends and neighbors as a matter of mutual accommodation, a promise will not be implied. Potter v. Carpenter, 76 N. Y. 157.

Where a grandfather takes his granddaughter into his family and treats her in all respects as one of his own children, a presumption arises against a promise on the part of the grandfather to pay the grandchild for services performed. Dod-

36. Capacity of Parties.—In several ways persons may be incapacitated wholly or partially from entering into binding contracts. These will be found fully discussed under the various heads to which they properly belong. Among such classes of persons may be enumerated—

37. Infants, whose contracts are voidable at their option,<sup>1</sup> subject to certain exceptions, for a discussion of which see INFANCY.

38. Married Women. See MARRIAGE.

39. Lunatics and Drunkards, whose contracts are voidable so far as they are incapable of understanding the terms thereof, and as their state is known by the other contracting party.<sup>2</sup> See DRUNKENNESS AND LUNACY.

40. Agents and Corporations.—For contracts by agents, see AGENCY; and for those entered into by corporations, see CORPORATIONS.

son v. McAdams, 2S. E. Rep. (N. Car.) 453.

The performance and receipt of services generally raises an implied promise by him who receives to compensate him who performs; but this implication may be rebutted. When the parties are parent and child, or members of the same family, the relationship excludes the implication of a promise. Except in cases of parent and child, there must be evidence beyond the relationship that the creation of no debt was intended. Curry v. Curry, 7 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 61; s.c., 11 East. Rep. 153.

Where services are rendered to one standing in loco parentis, there is no implied promise to pay for them. Fross's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 258.

Though such presumption may be overcome by the facts and circumstances of the case. Mills v. Joiner, 20 Fla. 479.

There can be no recovery without proving a contract. Sawyer v. Hebard, 58 Vt. 375; Moyer's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 290; Traver v. Shiner, 65 Iowa, 57; Davidson v. Westchester Gas Light Co., 99 N. Y. 558.

Where a daughter agreed to board and take care of her father for $30, and "to ask nothing more," the contract must be construed as fixing the price under the existing circumstances; and when by reason of the change in the condition of the testator, the care of him became more burdensome, she was held to be entitled to have the assistance of a servant, and to have the cost of his hire allowed against her father's estate upon his decease. Hopper v. Oldis, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 349.

1. Among the later cases on this point are Gray v. Turley, 8 West. Rep. (Ind.) 874; Shuford v. Alexander, 74 Ga. 293;

Rice v. Boyer, 9 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 420; Harner v. Dipple, 31 Ohio St. 72; Petrow v. Wiseman, 40 Ind. 148; Cole v. Pennoyer, 14 Ill. 158; Beardsley v. Hotchkiss, 96 N. Y. 201; Skinner v. Maxwell, 66 N. Car. 45, 47; Baker v. Kennett, 54 Mo. 82, 88.

2. Where a contract is honestly made with a person of unsound mind not judicially so declared, in ignorance of such mental incapacity, and a fair consideration has been paid to him and used for his benefit, there can be no rescission without an offer to restore the same; but where no such beneficial consideration has been received, there is no necessity for any tender in a suit by the heirs of such insane person to have the contract rescinded. Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 9 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 167.

A contract made by one so destitute of reason as not to know the consequences of his act, though his incompetency be produced by purely voluntary intoxication, is voidable. Bush v. Breinig, 9 East. Rep. (Pa.) 778. See also Bussinger v. Bank, 23 Reporter (Wis.), 51.

A drunkard is not incompetent, like an idiot or one generally insane, but only on proof that, at the time of making the contract, his understanding was clouded, or reason dethroned by actual intoxication. Wright v. Fisher, 32 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 605.

Though all express contracts by the insane are prohibited by statute, their estates may be held liable when the law implies a contract for services and necessities furnished in good faith, and under circumstances justifying them. Reando v. Mosplay, 2 S. W. Rep. (Mo.) 405.

A contract with a slave is null and void. Woodland v. Newhall's Adm'r, 31 Fed. Rep. 434.

41. Persons Affected by Contract—Parties and Assignees—Third Persons.—As a general rule, the parties to a contract are the only persons affected by it.<sup>1</sup> Persons not parties to a contract may subsequently acquire rights under it by novation,<sup>2</sup> and by assignment.<sup>3</sup> But as a general rule, strangers cannot sue on a contract.<sup>4</sup> Exceptions to this rule, however, exist in certain cases, as where the principal object of the contract between the promisor and the promisee is a benefit to a third person, he may sue upon it; so where property is put into the hands of one who promises to deliver it or pay out of it to a third person, and similar cases referred to in the note.<sup>5</sup>

1. A stranger may be liable in tort for procuring the breach of a contract. Lumley v. Gye, 2 E. & B. 216; Bowen v. Hall, 6 Q. B. D. 333; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Rice v. Manly, 66 N. Y. 82; Benton v. Pratt, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 385; Jones v. Blocker, 43 Ga. 331; Haskins v. Royster, 70 N. Car. 601; Jones v. Stanley, 76 N. Car. 355; Dickson v. Dickson, 33 La. Ann. 1261. Compare Burgers v. Carpenter, 2 S. Car.

7. As to when an agent is bound by a contract made for his principal, see AGENCY.

2. See NOVATION, supra; DISCHARGE OF CONTRACTS.

3. See ASSIGNMENT; COVENANTS RUNNING WITH LAND.

4. A stranger to a contract, who has suffered damage by the non-performance of it, cannot sue the defaulting party for the damage. Playford v. U. K. Electric Tel. Co., L. R. 4 Q. B. 706; Dickson v. Reuter's Tel. Co., 2 C. P. D. 62; 3 C. P. D. 1. See Alton v. Midland Railway Co., 19 C. B. N. S. 213. In America a contrary opinion prevails in the cases of telegraphic dispatches. Bigelow, L. C., on Law of Torts, 619 sqq.; Gray on Communication by Telegraph, ch. vii.

A entered into an executory contract with B for the purchase of land owned by the latter, and, before performance of the conditions on either side, contracted to sell the same land to C, and thereafter neglected or refused to complete his contract with B so as to acquire the title. Held, that the contracts were independent, and that an action could not be maintained by C against A and B to compel specific performance of the first-named contract by A, to the end that B's title might be acquired and transferred to C. McCarthy v. Couch, 33 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 777.

5. "The right of a party to maintain assumpsit on a promise not under seal, made to another for his benefit, although much controverted, is now the prevailing rule in this country." Hendricks v. Lindsay, 93 U. S. 143, 149; Bank v. Grand Lodge, 98 U. S. 123; Morrill v. Lane, 135 Mass. 93; Davis v. Clinton Waterworks Co., 54 Iowa, 59; Austin v. Sligman, 18 Fed. Rep. 519; Anderson v. Fitzgerald, 21 Fed. Rep. 294. Contra, in England, Tweddle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393. In Felton v. Dickinson, 10 Mass. 287, the promisee placed his son in the service of the promisor upon an agreement that at the end of the term of service the promisor would pay to the son a certain sum of money; held, that the son might recover the amount. See Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268; Hind v. Holdship, 2 Watts (Pa.), 104; Vincent v. Watson, 18 Pa. St. 96; Edmundson v. Penny, 1 Pa. St. 334; Wynn v. Wood, 97 Pa. St. 216; Beers v. Robinson, 9 Pa. St. 229; Esling v. Zantzinger, 13 Pa. St. 50; Comm. Bank v. Wood, 7 W. B. (Pa.) 89; Guthrie v. Kerr, 85 Pa. St. 303; Kountz v. Holthouse, 85 Pa. St. 235; Roth v. Barner, 12 W. N. C. (Pa.) 523; D. & H. Canal Co. v. Bank, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 97; Simson v. Brown, 68 N. Y. 355; Farley v. Cleveland, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 432; 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 639; Cumberland v. Codrington, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 254; Barker v. Bucklin, 2 Denio (N. Y.), 45; Frost v. Gage, 1 Allen (Mass.), 262; Carnegie v. Morrison, 2 Met. (Mass.) 381; Hincey v. Fowler, 15 Me. 285; Motley v. Ins. Co., 29 Me. 337; Bohanan v. Pope, 42 Me. 93; Railroad Co. v. Cole, 24 Vt. 33; Crocker v. Higgins, 7 Conn. 347; Steene v. Aylesworth, 18 Conn. 244; Clapp v. Lawton, 31 Conn. 95; Thompson v. Thompson, 4 Ohio St. 353; Putney v. Farnham, 27 Wis. 187; Kollock v. Parcher, 52 Wis. 393; Davis v. Calloway, 30 Ind. 112; Carter v. Eads, 65 Ala. 190; Lucas v. Chamberlain, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 276; Bett v. McLaughlin, 13 Nev. 427; Green v. Richardson, 4 Col. 584. In some States it is held that to entitle the third person to recover, his interest must be exclusive. Blymire v. Baistle, 6

Watts (Pa.), 182; Cummings v. Klapp, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 511; Ramsdale v. Horton, 3 Pa. St. 330; Finney v. Finney, 16 Pa. St. 380; Campbell v. Lacock, 40 Pa. St. 448; Morrison v. Beckey, 6 Watts (Pa.), 349; Robertson v. Reed, 47 Pa. St. 115; Torrens v. Campbell, 74 Pa. St. 470; Guthrie v. Kerr, 85 Pa. St. 303; Miss. C. Railroad Co. v. Southern Railroad Ass'n, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 107. See also National Bank v. Grand Lodge, 98 U. S. 123; Sacramento Co. v. Wagner, 67 Cal. 293; Schneider v. White, 12 Or. 503; Zell's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 532; Gregory v. Williams, 3 Mer. 582.

A person for whose benefit a promise to another, upon a sufficient consideration, is made, may maintain an action on the contract in his own name against the promisor; but the rule is not so far extended as to give a third person, who is only indirectly and incidentally benefited by the contract, a right to sue upon it. Burton v. Larkin, 13 Pac. Rep. (Kan.) 398.

Where by an agreement with B, C acquires all the rights and assumes all the obligations of B arising under a contract made between A and B, A or his assigns may hold C responsible for the breach of any of the obligations thus assumed. Jones v. Foster, 67 Wis. 296.

In case of action for breach of a contract according to its terms, a third person may maintain an action on a promise made to another, but an action cannot be maintained on a conditional contract, according to the terms of which the defendant is not liable to any person. Grim v. Thomas Iron Co., 8 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 595.

In order that a promise made by one person to another for the benefit of a third person shall constitute the first the debtor of the third, and entitle the third person to sue the first on such promise, it must appear that there was a clear intent upon the part of both the first and second that the first person shall become such debtor. The mere fact that the third might be benefited is not sufficient. Wright v. Terry, 2 South Rep. (Fla.) 6. Compare cases cited supra.

A provision in a contract between a municipality and a contractor that the municipality may retain money until the contractor shall have paid his laborers, does not give the laborers a right of action against the municipality in case the contractor is paid in full. Old Domin. Granite Co. v. Dist. of Col., 20 Ct. of Cl. 127.

Before the maturity of a note originally payable to B, but by him transferred to C, A, for a valuable consideration from B, promised B to pay it. The note was not made, and went to protest. B obtained the note and sued A on it, and on the contract. Held, that B had a cause of action, because (1) B's obligation to C as indorser of the note established C's privity to the contract, so that C would have been entitled to sue on the contract, to which right B succeeded; (2) B was promisee in the contract, and had become entitled to all the rights under it. Litchfield v. Flint, 11 N. E. Rep. (N. Y.) 59; s. c., 10 East. Rep. 469.

A and B, two railroad companies operating competing lines, entered into an agreement by which A was, for a specified compensation, to give to B a right of way over a portion of its tracks, and also the right to use the station at W.; further, A was to look after the freight and baggage of B and sell tickets for B at that point. C was the ticket-agent of A at W. When he left that employment he brought suit against B, claiming compensation for selling its tickets while serving A. Held, that without distinct proof of an actual promise by B to pay, and satisfactory proof of the consent of A that C should receive such payment, there could be no recovery. P. R. Co. v. Flanigan, 8 East. Rep. (Pa.) 197.

The following contract was entered into: "It is also agreed and understood that the said party of the first part (B) shall furnish said party of the second part (C) such sums of money as may be necessary to pay the current expenses of said second party, it being understood that said second party shall render a monthly account of expenses to said first party." These sums of money were to be furnished by B to C as loans to C, and not to purchase anything or to pay for anything for B's benefit. Held, that this contract does not authorize a third person to sue B for goods furnished by such third person to C, nor does such contract constitute C the agent of B to purchase goods, making B liable as principal debtor. Burton v. Larkin, 13 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 398.

To entitle a third person not named as party to a contract to sue either of the contracting parties, that third person must possess an actual beneficial right which places him in the position of cestui que trust under the contract. Gandy v. Gandy, 30 Ch. D. 57.

A provision in an act of Parliament may enable an outsider to sue. There is in such cases a statutory obligation of which the person named can take the benefit, but an agreement between A and B that B shall pay C gives C no right of action against B. Rotherham Alum and Chem. Co.; in re, 25 Ch. D. 111; 50 L. T. N. S. 219. Compare these cases with the American cases cited supra.

G. agreed with D. to erect buildings, and to pay for materials and labor, so that there should be no liens, and W. agreed with D. that G. should perform his contract. Held, that materialmen could not sue W. Weller v. Goble, 66 Iowa, 113.

An execution plaintiff deposited the execution with A as collateral. A collected it, but no entry of settlement was on it. After it came back to the hands of its original owner, he sold it to B. Held, that there was no privity whereby B could sue A. Grenade v. Hardaway, 73 Ga. 526.

Where A puts into the hands of B property which B promises either to deliver in specie to C, or to use as a fund out of which to pay something to C, C may sue. Beers v. Robinson, 9 Pa. St. 229; Blymire v. Boistle, 6 Watts (Pa.), 182; Allen v. Thomas, 3 Met. (Ky.) 198; Del., etc., Canal Co. v. Bank, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 97; Miller v. Billingsley, 41 Ind. 489; Johnso n v. Collins, 14 Iowa, 63; Brown v. O'Brien, 1 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 268; Justice v. Tallman, 86 Nor. (Pa.) 147; Warren v. Batchelder, 16 N. H. 580; Perry v. Swasey, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 36; Mellen v. Whipple, 1 Gray (Mass.), 317, 322; Crocker v. Higgins, 7 Conn. 342; Barker v. Bradley, 42 N. Y. 316; Thompson v. Gordon, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 196. See Morrill v. Lane, 136 Mass. 93. This is true a fortiori, where the promisor becomes a trustee for the third person. Justice v. Tallman, 5 Norris (Pa.), 147; Fitch v. Chandler, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 254; Putnam v. Field, 103 Mass. 556; Sailly v. Cleveland, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 156; Ætna Bank v. Fourth National Bank, 46 N. Y. 82; Draughan v. Bunting, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 10; Cross v. Truesdale, 28 Ind. 44; Donkersley v. Levy, 38 Mich. 55; See Bigelow v. Davis, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 561.

Where property is transferred to A by B, and as part of the consideration therefor A promises B to pay a debt which the latter owes to C, it is held that C has a right of action against A for the debt. Barker v. Bucklin, 2 Denio (N. Y.), 45; Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268; Dingeldein v. Railroad Co., 37 N. Y. 575; Eddy v. Roberts, 17 Ill. 505; Beasley v. Webster, 64 Ill. 458; Snell v. Ives, 85 Ill. 279; Shober, etc., Lith. Co. v. Kerting, 107 Ill. 344; Sanders v. Classon, 13 Minn. 379; Jordan v. White, 20 Minn. 91; Follansbee v. Johnson, 28 Minn. 311; Hind v.

Holdship, 2 Watts (Pa.), 104; Mason v. Hall, 30 Ala. 599; McDowell v. Law, 35 Wis. 171; Johnson v. Knapp, 36 Iowa, 616; Meyer v. Lowell, 44 Mo. 328; Rogers v. Gosnell, 58 Mo. 589; Joslin v. N. J. Car Spring Mfg. Co., 36 N. J. L. 141; Cross v. Truesdale, 28 Ind. 44; Carter v. Zublin, 68 Ind. 436; Alcalda v. Morales, 3 Nev. 132; Morgan v. Overman, 37 Cal. 534; Merriman v. Social Mfg. Co., 12 R. I. 175; Huckabee v. May, 14 Ala. 263; Allen v. Bucknam, 75 Me. 352. The view generally taken is to regard the promisor as trustee, and the debt assumed by him as part of the purchase-money. Ellwood v. Monk, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 235; Welsh v. R. Co., 25 Minn. 314; Bassett v. Hughes, 43 Wis. 319; Johnson v. Collins, 14 Iowa, 63.

A creditor may maintain an action against one who has agreed for a consideration to assume and pay the debts of the debtor. Redelsheimer v. Miller, 107 Ind. 485; Wood v. Moriarty, 9 Atl. Rep. (R. I.) 427. See Wheat v. Rice, 97 N. Y. 296; Fairchild v. Feltman, 32 Hun (N. Y.), 398.

And this right passes as an incident on an assignment of the debt by C. Barlow v. Mayers, 68 N. Y. 41.

If a contract between A and B be rescinded before C assents to or acts upon it, C no longer has a right of action against A. Trimble v. Strother, 25 Ohio St. 378; Davis v. Calloway, 30 Ind. 112; Durham v. Bischoff, 47 Ind. 211; Brewer v. Maurer, 38 Ohio St. 543; Gilbert v. Sanderson, 56 Iowa, 349; Jones v. Higgins, 80 Ky. 409; Talburt v. Ins. Co., 80 Ind. 434. Compare Pruitt v. Pruitt, 91 Ind. 595; Bay v. Williams, 24 A. L. Reg. 486.

But a rescission after C has acted upon the contract cannot affect his right of action against A. Bassett v. Hughes, 43 Wis. 319; Hartley v. Harrison, 24 N. Y. 170; Rogers v. Gosnell, 58 Mo. 589; Dodge's Admr. v. Moss, 21 C. L. J. 73. Compare Young v. Trustees, 31 N. J. Eq. 290; Crowell v. Hospital of St. Barnabas, 27 N. J. Eq. 650; Willard v. Worsham, 76 Va. 392; O'Neill v. Clark, 33 N. J. Eq. 444; Laing v. Byrne, 34 N. J. Eq. 52.

The legal right of a party to assert that the performance of a contract made between two others for his benefit cannot be revoked or modified without his consent, rests in the fact of an express promise on the part of the person whom he seeks to charge, and thus arises a privity of contract. Frank v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 7 N. Y. St. Repr. 815.

A contract held not alterable by parties who made it, without the consent of the persons who were to receive a benefit thereunder. Knowles v. Erwin, 43 Hun (N. Y.), 150.

Where the owner of property, upon which there is a mortgage to secure a debt for the payment of which he is liable, conveys the property to another, who assumes the payment of the mortgage debt, the grantee is held liable to the original mortgagee for the amount of the debt. Halsey v. Reed, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 446; Burr v. Burr, 24 N. Y. 178; Ricard v. Sanderson, 41 N. Y. 179; Campbell v. Smith, 71 N. Y. 26; Bowen v. Buck, 94 N. Y. 86; Kappworth v. Dressler, 2 Beasley (N. J.), 62; Helms v. Kearns, 40 Ind. 124; Josselyn v. Edwards, 57 Ind. 212, 218; Carnahan v. Tousey, 93 Ind. 561; Thompson v. Thompson, 4 Ohio St. 333; Anthony v. Herrman, 14 Kan. 494; Thompson v. Bertram, 14 Iowa 476; Urquhart v. Brayton, 12 R. I. 169; Bank v. Goff, 14 R. I. 516; Cooper v. Foss, 15 Neb. 515; Crawford v. Edwards, 33 Mich. 354; Unger v. Smith, 44 Mich. 22; Dean v. Walker, 107 Ill. 540; Twichell v. Mears, 8 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 211; Hayden v. Snow, 9 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 511; Fitzgerald v. Barker, 70 Mo. 685. Contra, Miller v. Whipple, 1 Gray (Mass.), 317; Pettee v. Pippard, 120 Mass. 522; Coffin v. Adams, 131 Mass. 133; Meech v. Ensign, 49 Conn. 191; Bay v. Williams, 24 A. L. Reg. 486.

The grantee becomes primarily liable for the debt, the grantor occupying the position of surety; and if the mortgagee gives time to the grantee who has assumed the debt, he thereby discharges the grantor. Murray v. Marshall, 94 N. Y. 611; Spencer v. Spencer, 95 N. Y. 353; Calvo v. Davies, 73 N. Y. 211; Paine v. Jones, 76 N. Y. 274; George v. Andrews, 60 Md. 26. Contra, Boardman v. Larrabee, 51 Conn. 39.

Failure of consideration of the promise of assumption (e.g., eviction by paramount title) releases the grantee from liability. Dunning v. Leavitt, 85 N. Y. 30; Crowe v. Levin, 95 N. Y. 423; Osborne v. Cabell, 77 Va. 462.

When the instrument, though absolute in form, is in fact only a mortgage, the grantee does not become liable. Root v. Wright, 84 N. Y. 72; Pardee v. Treat, 82 N. Y. 385; Garnsey v. Rogers, 47 N. Y. 233; Arnaud v. Grigg, 29 N. J. Eq. 482.

Where the vendor is not personally liable to the mortgagee, the latter cannot sue the vendee, who as between himself and his vendor assumes the payment of an existing mortgage debt. Carte v. Holahan, 92 N. Y. 498; Vrooman v.

Turner, 69 N. Y. 280; Trotter v. Hughes, 12 N. Y. 74; King v. Whitely, 10 Paige (N. Y.), 465; Norwood v. De Hart, 30 N. J. Eq. 412. But see Merriman v. Moore, 90 Pa. St. 78; Brewer v. Manrer, 38 Ohio St. 443, 452; Dean v. Walker, 107 Ill. 540. Though if the vendor be a married woman whose separate estate is liable for the debt, that is sufficient to enable the mortgagee to hold her vendee who has assumed its payment. Cashman v. Henry, 75 N. Y. 103; Brewer v. Maurer, 38 Ohio St. 543; Huyler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504; 28 N. J. Eq. 275. See, as to assumption of mortgages, Jones on Mortgages, §§ 740, 770.

If on a dissolution of a partnership one partner has given a bond with sureties to the other for the payment by the former of the firm's debts, it has been held that the creditors may sue the obligor in the bond. Deval v. McIntosh, 23 Ind. 529; Claplin v. Ostrom, 54 N. Y. 581; Kimball v. Noyes, 17 Wis. 695. Compare Merrill v. Green, 55 N. Y. 270; Robb v. Mudge, 14 Gray (Mass.), 534. See, contra, Shoemaker v. King, 40 Pa. St. 107; Torrens v. Campbell, 24 Sm. (Pa.) 470; Manny v. Frasier, 27 Mo. 419. See also Wynn v. Wood, 97 Pa. St. 216; Lehow v. Simonton, 3 Col. 346.

When an incoming partner agrees with an outgoing partner to pay one half of the debts of the old firm, on a consideration moving between them, a creditor of the old firm cannot maintain an action against the incoming partner. Edick v. Green, 38 Hun (N. Y.), 202.

A creditor of a firm cannot maintain an action upon an agreement made with the firm by one not a member to pay a portion of its indebtedness; as no one creditor can show from the contract that it was intended for his benefit or covers any part of his debt. Wheat v. Rice, 97 N. Y. 296.

That the right of one not a party to a contract to sue upon it does not extend to the case of a contract under seal, see Robb v. Mudge, 14 Gray (Mass.), 534. Northampton v. Elwell, 4 Gray (Mass.), 81; How v. How, 1 N. H. 49; Moore v. House, 64 Ill. 162; Fairchild v. Ins. Co., 51 Vt. 613; Flynn v. Ins. Co., 115 Mass. 449. Contra, Coster v. Mayor, 43 N. Y. 399; McDowell v. Law, 35 Wis. 171; Houghton v. Milburn, 54 Wis. 554, 561; Bassett v. Hughes, 43 Wis. 319; Rogers v. Gosnell, 51 Mo. 466; Garvin v. Mobley, 1 Bush (Ky.), 48; Huckabee v. May, 14 Ala. 263; Emmitt v. Brophy, 31 Alb. L. J. 197.

Creditors who are not actual parties to a bond made for payment to them may

42. Construction.—The construction of a contract is for the court, who are to be governed therein by certain well-defined rules of construction. A rule of construction is a rule for determining the inference to be drawn from a fact of a particular class, when duly brought under the notice of the court according to the rules of evidence—the fact, namely, that persons have used words or combinations of words such as come within the general proposition affirmed by the rule.<sup>1</sup> These rules depend necessarily to a great extent on the rules of evidence. (See also EVIDENCE.<sup>2</sup>) be equitably entitled to the benefit of the contract. Pulver, etc., v. Skinner, etc., 4 N. Y. St. Repr. 816; Emmitt v. Brophy, 42 Ohio St. 82.

Where partners create by agreement penalties to be paid by any partner who breaks a particular stipulation, they may empower one partner alone to sue for the penalty. Radenburst v. Bates, 3 Bing. 463, 470; Cross v. Jackson, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 478; Carr v. Bartlett, 72 Me. 120. The penalty must be made payable not to the whole firm, but to the members of the firm minus the offending partner. Warren v. Stearns, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 73.

1. Poll. on Con. 456. "The name 'rule of construction' is confined by general usage to rules for the interpretation of written documents, in matters on which, in the absence of a rule prescribed by authority, there might exist a reasonable doubt." Pollock on Cont.

2. "The construction of all written instruments belongs to the court alone, whose duty it is to construe all such instruments as soon as the true meaning of the words in which they are couched, and the surrounding circumstances, if any, have been ascertained as facts by the jury; and it is the duty of the jury to take the construction from the court either absolutely, if there be no words to be construed, as words of art or phrases used in commerce, and no surrounding circumstances to be ascertained; or conditionally, when those words or circumstances are necessarily referred to them. Unless this were so there would be no certainty in the law; for a misconstruction by the court is the proper subject, by means of a bill of exceptions, of redress in a court of error. But a misconstruction by the jury cannot be set right at all effectually." Per Parke, B., in Nielson v. Harford, 8 M. & W. 806. In Hutcheson v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 535, an offer had been made by letter to sell a quantity of "good barley." The letter in reply, after stating the offer contained the following: "of which offer we accept, expecting you to give us fine barley and good weight." Held, that although the jury might find the mercantile meaning of "good" and "fine" as applied to barley, yet they could not go further, and find that the parties did not understand each other. The question whether there was a sufficient acceptance was a question to be determined by the court upon a proper construction of the letters. And Parke, B., said, "The law I take to be this—that it is the duty of the court to construe all written instruments: if there are peculiar expressions used in it which have in particular places or trades a known meaning attached to them, it is for the jury to say what the meaning of these expressions was, but for the court to decide what the meaning of the contract was. It was right, therefore, to leave it to the jury to say whether there was a peculiar meaning attached to the word 'fine' in the corn market; and the jury having found what it was, the question whether there was a complete acceptance by the written document was a question for the judge." See Perth Amboy Man. Co. v. Condit, 1 N. J. L. 659; Rogers v. Colt, 21 N. J. L. 704; Brown v. Hatton, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 319; Mason v. Rowe, 16 Vt. 525; Eaton v. Smith, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 150; Hitchen v. Groom, 5 C. B. 515; Morrell v. Firth, 3 M. & W. 402; Brown v. Orland, 36 Me. 376; Begg v. Forbes, 30 Eng. L. & Eq. 508; Rapp v. Rapp, 6 Pa. St. 45. The case of Lloyd v. Maund, 2 T. R. 760, seems contra, but that case was overruled in Morrell v. Firth, 3 M. & W. 402.

The construction of a contract is for the court. Barton v. Gray, 57 Mich. 623; Arnold v. Bailey, 24 S. Car. 494; State v. Fort, 24 S. Car. 511; Folsom v. Cook, 7 Cent. Rep. (Pa.) 585; Dwight v. Germania Life Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. 341; Brady v. Cassidy, 104 N. Y. 147; Wallingford v. Col. & G. R. Co., 2 S. E. Rep. (S. Car.) 19.

The construction of a written contract is exclusively for the court. But when the making of such contract is in dispute, it is for the jury to say whether it is established. Folsom v. Cook, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 93; s. c., 8 Pittsb. Leg. Journ. 1.

Error in submitting the construction to a jury may be cured by a verdict in accordance with the construction that the court should have declared in the charge. Jones v. Kroll, 7 Cent. Rep. (Pa.) 877.

A contract written in clear and common language should be construed according to the ordinary acceptation of the words. Such construction is for the court, and not for a referee. Gove v. Downer, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Vt.) 463; s. c., 9 East. Rep. 65.

Where the evidence of a contract consists in part of written evidence and in part of oral communications or other unwritten evidence, it is left to the jury to determine upon the whole evidence what the contract is. Edwards v. Goldsmith, 16 Pa. St. 43; Bomeisler v. Dobson, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 398; Morrell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 404.

The construction of a contract, unless there is something peculiar to the words by reason of the custom of the trade to which the contract relates, is for the court. Per Lord Cairns in Bowes v. Shand, 2 App. Cas. 455.

"When a new and unusual word is used in a contract, or when a word is used in a technical or peculiar sense, as applicable to any trade or branch of business or to any particular class of people, it is proper to receive evidence of usage to explain and illustrate it, and that evidence is to be considered by the jury; and the province of the court will then be to instruct the jury what will be the legal effect of the contract or instrument as they shall find the meaning of the word modified and explained by the usage. But where no new word is used, or where an old word having an established place in the language is not apparently used in any technical or peculiar sense, it is the province of the court to put a construction upon the written contracts and agreements of parties according to the established use of language as applied to the subject-matter and modified by the whole instrument or by existing circumstances." Per Shaw, C.J., in Eaton v. Smith, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 150; Brown v. Orland, 36 Me. 376; Burnham v. Allen, 1 Gray (Mass.), 496.

When the terms and language of a contract are ascertained, in the absence of technical phrases whose meaning is obscure, the construction is for the court. Brady v. Cassidy, 6 Cent. Rep. (N.Y.) 76.

Contracts will always be construed reasonably, and in accordance with what the evidence shows the subject-matter to be, and the consequent object of the parties to it. Chamberlain v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 6 Cen. Rep. (Md.) 471;

Hildebrand v. Bloodsworth, 12 Or. 75; Mobile & Mont. R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584.

Construction of written contract should make whole consistent, giving all parts their due weight. Railroad Co. v. Railway Co., 44 Ohio St. 287. And see Bent v. Alexander, 15 Mo. App. 181. In construing a contract all its parts should be considered; and the point to be ascertained is the meaning and understanding of the parties as shown by the language used, applied to the subject-matter. One part of the agreement may be resorted to to explain the meaning of the language or expressions of another part. Pensacola Gas Co. v. Lotzes, 2 South. Rep. (Fla.) 609.

The intention and meaning of parties to a written contract must be ascertained from the terms of the writing, the nature of the transaction, and the surrounding circumstances. Kyle v. Bellenger, 79 Ala. 516.

A contract will have a retroactive effect where, by express words or necessary implication, it appears to be the intention of the parties to embrace past transactions. People v. Lee, 7 Cent. Rep. (N. Y.) 35.

Several agreements or instruments of writing executed on the same day, each as the consideration for the execution of the other, constitute parts of one and the same transaction, and form one and the same contract, and are to be so construed. Carr v. Hays, 25 Cent. L. Jour. (Ind.) 32; Herbst v. Lowe, 65 Wis. 316. And see St. Louis, Iron M., etc., R. Co. v. Beider, 45 Ark. 17.

In the construction of an instrument partly written and partly printed, greater weight is to be attached to the written than to the printed parts, but they must if possible be reconciled. Bolman v. Lohman, 79 Ala. 63.

A prior verbal contract will be merged in a subsequent written one. Carr v. Hays, 9 West. Rep. (Ind.) 183; s. c., 11 N. E. Rep. 25.

Where a written agreement has been signed, the fact that one party has put a wrong construction upon it, and insisted that it included what it did not include, does not prevent there being a contract, nor prevent that party from waiving the question of construction and obtaining specific performance. Preston v. Luck, 27 Ch. D. 497.

The acts of the parties performed under a written contract will be given effect to by the court as placing a construction upon the contract. Lyles v. Lesber, 7 West. Rep. (Ind.) 51.

43. Unlawful Agreements—Agreement Contrary to Positive Law.—

If the subject-matter of an agreement be such that the performance of it would either consist in doing a forbidden act, or be so connected therewith as to be in substance part of the same transaction, the law cannot command the parties to perform that agreement. It will not always command them not to perform it, for there are many cases where the performance of the agreement is not in itself an offence though the complete execution of the object of the agreement is; but at all events it will give no sort of assistance to such a transaction. "If one bind himself to kill a man, burn a house, maintain a suit, or the like, it is void."<sup>1</sup> So a contract may Where language used in a contract is unmeaning and contradictory, it should not be construed so as to negative clearly expressed provisions of the contract. Findley v. Armstrong, 23 W. Va. 113.

Where the language of a contract is ambiguous, the practical interpretation of it by the parties is entitled to great (if not controlling) influence. Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121; citing Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. U. S. 50, 54; Coleman v. Grubb, 23 Pa. St. 393, 409; St. Louis Gas Light Co. v. St. Louis, 46 Mo. 121; Jackson v. Perrine, 35 N. J. L. 137; Stone v. Clarke, 1 Met. (Mass.) 378; Nickerson v. R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.), 155; Gronstadt v. Withoff, 21 Fed. Rep. 253; Forbes v. Watt, L. R. 2 Sc. & D. 214; Butler v. Moses, 43 Ohio St. 166. The error of the parties, however, cannot control the effect of the instrument where its meaning is clear. Railroad Co. v. Trimble, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 367; Ins. Co. v. Doll, 35 Md. 89. And this is true of a possible remote intent of the parties. McConnell v. New Orleans, 35 La. Ann. 373. But if both parties act on a mutual mistake as to the construction, it may amount to a modification of the contract by mutual assent. Midl., etc., R. v. Johnson, 6 H. L. C. 812-3.

A contract susceptible of two constructions will not by preference be given the construction which will make it illegal. Standard Oil Co. v. Scofield, 16 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 372.

To explain an equivocal and obscure expression resort may be had to the well-defined and known usages of trade as an aid in reaching a true interpretation of the contract. South Bend Iron Works v. Cottrell, 31 Fed. Rep. 254.

An obscure and ambiguous oral contract may be interpreted in the light of the conversations of the parties making it. Jennings v. Whitehead & Atherton Machine Co., 138 Mass. 594.

1. Shepp. Touchst. 370; Lord Kenyon once said that he would not sit to take an account between two robbers on Hounslow Heath. See Jessel, M. R., Sykes v. Beadon, 11 Ch. D. 195. See Everet v. Williams, 2 Pothier on Obl. by Evans, p. 3, n. (a), for a curious case where a bill for an account between two highwaymen was actually brought. See also Spalding v. Preston, 21 Vt. 9.

As to bills for partnership account of profits realized from an illegal business, see, on the one hand, Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 70; Pfeuffer v. Maltby, 54 Tex. 454; Cook v. Sherman (C. C. U. S. D. Ia.), 20 Fed. Rep. 167; compare Wann v. Kelly (C. C. U. S. D. Minn.), 5 Fed. Rep. 584; and on the other, Watson v. Fletcher, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 1; Watson v. Murray, 23 N. J. Eq. 257; Todd v. Rafferty's Admr., 30 N. J. Eq. 254; King v. Winants, 71 N. C. 469; Snell v. Dwight, 120 Mass. 9; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346; Northup v. Phillips, 99 Ill. 449; Gould v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 549; Read v. Smith, 60 Tex. 379; Sykes v. Beadon, 11 Ch. D. 170. And see Patterson's App. (S. C. Pa.), 13 W. N. C. 154.

For a case of unlawful agreement see Mayor of Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 E. & B. 397, 441. "Where a contract is capable of two constructions, the one making it valid and the other void, it is clear law the first ought to be adopted." Lorillard v. Clyde, 86 N. Y. 384; Ormes v. Dauchy, 82 N. Y. 443; Curtis v. Gokey, 68 N. Y. 300; Guernsey v. Cook, 120 Mass. 501; Hunt v. Elliott, 80 Ind. 245; Town of Hamden v. Merwin, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Conn.) 534.

A contract valid where it is made is valid and may be enforced anywhere, except when the contract is against good morals or when its enforcement would violate the law of the place of suit. Brown v. Browning, 3 New Eng. Rep. (R. I.) 384.

To the enforcement of a contract tainted with illegality the court will not lend its sanction. Morton v. Timken, 48 N. J. L. 87.

be illegal because an offence is contemplated as its ulterior result or because it invites to the commission of crime.<sup>1</sup>

44. Injury to Third Persons.—An agreement will generally be illegal though the matter of it may not be an indictable offence, and though the formation of it may not amount to the offence of conspiracy if it contemplates any civil injury to third persons. An agreement to divide the profits of a fraudulent scheme, or to carry out some object in itself not unlawful, by means of an apparent trespass, breach of contract, or breach of trust, is unlawful and void.<sup>2</sup>

45. Fraud upon Creditors.—Where there is an arrangement between a debtor and the general body of his creditors, but in order to procure the consent of some particular creditor or for some other reason the debtor or any person on his behalf secretly promises that creditor some advantage over the rest, all such secret agreements are void.<sup>3</sup> Securities given in pursuance of them may be set aside and money paid under them ordered to be repaid.<sup>4</sup> The other creditors who know nothing of the fraud, and enter into the arrangement on the assumption "that they are contracting on terms of equality to each and all," are under such circumstances not bound by any release they give.<sup>5</sup>

A bill in equity will not be maintained to cancel a contract on the ground of illegality, unless it offers to pay what is justly due. Dean v. Robertson, 1 South. Rep. (Miss.) 159.

1. An agreement to pay money to A.'s executors if A. commits suicide would be void. Per Bramwell, L. R., 5 C. P. D. 307. No right of action can arise for work done in printing a criminal libel. Poplett v. Stockdale, 1 R. & M. 337. So an agreement to reprint a literary work in violation of a copyright secured to a third person is void. Nichols v. Ruggles, 3 Day (Conn.), 145.

2. Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Rice v. Wood, 113 Mass. 133; Spinks v. Davis, 32 Miss. 152; Glenn v. Matthews, 44 Tex. 400; Jackson v. Ludeling, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 616; Oscanyon v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261; Foote v. Emerson, 10 Vt. 338; Guernsey v. Cook, 120 Mass. 501; Noel v. Drake, 28 Kan. 265; Woodruff v. Wentworth, 133 Mass. 309; Forbes v. McDonald, 54 Cal. 98. Compare Barnes v. Brown, 80 N. Y. 527.

An agreement to commit a civil injury is a conspiracy in many cases; an agreement to commit a trespass likely to lead to a breach of the peace.—Reg. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671, 686,—or to commit a civil wrong by fraud and false pretences,—Reg. v. Warburton, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 274; compare Reg. v. Aspinall, 2 Q. B. D. 57,—is a conspiracy; an agreement to commit a simple breach of contract is not a conspiracy.

3. Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 178, 199; Bliss v. Matteson, 45 N. Y. 22; Lawrence v. Clark, 36 N. Y. 128; Trumbull v. Tilton, 21 N. H. 128; Winn v. Thomas, 55 N. H. 294; O'Shea v. Collier, etc., Co., 42 Mo. 397; Case v. Gerrish, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 49; Lothrop v. King, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 382; Sternberg v. Bowman, 103 Mass. 325; Harvey v. Hunt, 119 Mass. 279; Patterson v. Boehm, 4 Pa. St. 507; Stuart v. Blum, 28 Pa. St. 225; Lee v. Sellers, 81* Pa. St. 473; Smith v. Owens, 21 Cal. 11; Feldman v. Gamble, 26 N. J. Eq. 494; Huckins v. Hunt, 138 Mass. 366. Where a composition agreement was made, by the terms of which the debtor was to give his notes for a percentage of his indebtedness, and he afterwards voluntarily gave to one of his debtors, party to the composition agreement, notes for the balance of his claim, which by their terms would mature before the composition notes, the notes last given were held void. Way v. Langley, 15 Ohio St. 392.

4. McKuvan v. Sanderson, 15 Eq. 234; Crossley v. Moore, 40 N. J. L. 27; Bean v. Brookmire, 2 Dill. (U. S. C. C.) 108; Bean v. Amsinck, 10 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 361. (not affected as to the general rule by the reversal in 22 Wall. 395).

5. Daughlish v. Tennent, L. R. 2 Q. B. 49, 54. They may sue for and recover the full amount of their original claims.

46. Deals by Agent against Duty.—Where a man is employed as agent for another the law will not permit him to act for himself in the same matter.<sup>1</sup> less the amount received under the composition agreement. Partridge v. Messer, 14 Gray (Mass.), 180; Kahn v. Gumberts, 9 Ind. 430; Woodruff v. Saul, 70 Ga. 271. And it is not essential to the right of action that the creditor should first return the money he has received under the composition agreement. Cobb v. Tirrell, 137 Mass. 143; Hester v. Cohn, 73 Ill. 296; Stuart v. Blum, 28 Pa. St. 225; Bank v. Hoeber, 8 Mo. App. 171. In Bartlett v. Blaine, 83 Ill. 25, it was held that "where a party induced a creditor to sign a composition agreement, whereby he accepted one half of his claim in full upon the representations of his debtor that no person had received any other thing, etc., the fact that the debtor had given his note for $500 to induce another creditor to sign the same agreement, which note upon suit thereon was adjudged void, is not sufficient to avoid the contract of composition, as it worked no injury to the creditor."

Where the preferred creditor becomes surety for the payment of the composition, and the real consideration for this is the debtor's promise to pay his own debt in full, the agreement is void. Wood v. Barker, 1 Eq. 139; Baldwin v. Roseman, 49 Conn. 105. But where one creditor is induced to become surety for an installment of the composition by an agreement of the principal debtor to indemnify him, and a pledge of part of the assets for that purpose, this is valid; for a compounding debtor is master of the assets, and may apply them as he will. Ex parte Burrell, 1 Ch. D. 537. The principle of these rules was stated by Erle, J., in Mallalieu v. Hodgson, 16 Q. B. 689: "Each creditor consents to lose part of his debt in consideration that the others do the same, and each creditor may be considered to stipulate with the others for a release from them to the debtor in consideration of the release by him. Where any creditor in fraud of the agreement to accept the composition stipulates for a preference to himself, his stipulation is altogether void: not only can he take no advantage from it, but he is also to lose the benefit of the composition. Howden v. Haigh, 11 A. & E. 1033; Doughty v. Savage, 28 Conn. 146; Huntington v. Clark, 39 Conn. 540, 554. The requirement of good faith among the creditors and the preventing of gain by agreements for preferences have been uniformly maintained by a series of cases, from Leicester v. Rose, 4

East, 372, to Howden v. Haigh, 11 A. & E. 1033, and Bradshaw v. Bradshaw, 9 M. & W. 29." A composition agreement which one creditor is induced to sign by the promise made by a third person, without the knowledge of the debtor or the other creditors, to pay him an additional sum, is void. Bank v. Hoeber, 11 Mo. App. 475. A compromised with his creditors. B, a creditor, signed the compromise agreement at C's request, and because of C's promise to pay the balance of B's claim. Held, a fraudulent arrangement, which precluded B from recovering against C. Clement's Appeal, 52 Conn. 464. A debtor who has given a fraudulent preference can claim no benefit under the composition, even as against the creditor to whom the preference has been given. Higgins v. Pitt, 4 Ex. 312. Contra, Huckins v. Hunt, 138 Mass. 366. A secret agreement by a creditor to withdraw his opposition to a bankrupt's discharge or to a composition is void. Bankruptcy Act 1867, R. S. U. S. § 5191; Marble v. Grant, 73 Me. 423; Austin v. Markham, 44 Ga. 161; Wiggin v. Bush, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 305; Payne v. Eden, 3 Caines (N. Y.), 213; Yeomans v. Chatterton, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 295; Tuxbury v. Miller, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 311; Bruce v. Lee, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 410; Rice v. Maxwell, 13 S. & M. (Miss.) 289; Blasdell v. Fowle, 120 Mass. 447; Sharp v. Teese, 4 Halst. (N. J.) 352. And it does not matter whether it is made with the debtor himself or with a stranger. Higgins v. Pitt, 4 Ex. 312; Bell v. Leggett, 7 N. Y. 176. Nor whether the consideration offered to the creditor for such withdrawal is to come out of the debtor's assets or not. Hall v. Dyson, 17 Q. B. 785. And this even if it is part of the agreement that the creditor shall not prove against the estate at all. McKewan v. Sanderson, 20 Eq. 65. If a debtor executes an assignment of his estate and effects for the benefit of all his creditors upon a secret agreement with the trustees that part of the assets is to be returned to him, this agreement is void. Blacklock v. Dobie, 1 C. P. D. 265.

1. On this subject see article on Agency. Pollock, 243, β, to 247. An agreement between a director of a corporation and a third party, whereby the former is to use his vote and influence to the disadvantage of the corporation, will not be enforced. Attaway v. Third Nat. Bank, 5 S. W. Rep. (Mo.) 16; s. c., 10 West. Rep. 412.

47. Fraud on Marital Rights.—Where parties who are about to be married clandestinely convey away their property so as to defeat the marital rights and secure to themselves the separate use of it, it is a fraud, and the injured party is entitled to relief.<sup>1</sup>

48. Prohibited Marriages.—Marriage within the prohibited degrees of kindred and affinity are contracts contrary to positive law.<sup>2</sup>

49. Contrary to Statute.—Where a transaction is forbidden by statute, it is void; the grounds of the proposition are immaterial.<sup>3</sup> The imposition of a penalty by the legislature on any specific act or omission is prima facie equivalent to an express prohibition.<sup>4</sup>

1. See article on Marriage, Pollock, 247, γ. to 249.

2. See article on Marriage, Pollock, 249 (4), to 251 (5).

3. Bank v. Owens, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 527, 530; Holt v. Green, 73 Pa. St. 198; White v. Buss, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 448; Greenough v. Balch, 7 Me. 461; Rossman v. McFarland, 9 Ohio St. 369, 379; Downing v. Ringer, 7 Mo. 585; Hill v. Spear, 50 N. H. 253, 277; Melchoir v. McCarty, 31 Wis. 252; Penn v. Bornman, 102 Ill. 523, 530; Marshall v. Cowles, 48 Ark. 362; Lilley v. Rankin, 56 L. J. R. (Q. B. D.) 248; Mellis v. Shirley Local Board, 16 Q. B. D. 446; Smith v. State, 2 South. Rep. (Ala.) 629.

One who makes a sale without complying with the provisions of an act cannot recover in an action on a note given for the price of the goods. Campbell v. Segars, 1 South. Rep. Ala. 714.

A contract between manufacturers of bitters containing intoxicating liquor and a licensed liquor-dealer, whereby the latter is supplied with the bitters, which he sells with a warranty that they may be sold without license, is void as contrary to public policy, the license act prohibiting the sale of such liquors without a license. O'Bryan v. Fitzpatrick, 3 S. W. Rep. (Ark.) 527.

A. subscribed for stock in a corporation, on which he paid nothing in money, but, being assessed on the subscription, gave his note for the amount, and thereupon a certificate of stock was issued to him, to be held by the company until he paid the note. Held, the note was not void as against public policy, under a constitutional provision that no corporation shall issue stock except for money paid, etc.; for if it be conceded that the certificate was improperly issued before actual payment of any money, still that fact does not render the note void. Pac. Trust Co. v. Dorsey, 13 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 148.

See also, in general, McGregor v. Donnelly, 67 Cal. 149; Turnbull v. Farnsworth, 1 Wash. Ter. 444; Macintosh v. Renton, 2 Wash. C. C. 121; Comley v. Sims, 71 Ga. 161.

4. Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 387, 395; Pennsylvania Co. v. Wentz, 37 Ohio St. 333, 338; Cowington v. Threadgill, 88 N. Car. 186; Roby v. West, 4 N. H. 285; Brackett v. Hoyt, 29 N. H. 264; Elkins v. Parkhurst, 17 Vt. 105; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; Clarke v. Insurance Co., 1 Story (U. S.), 109, 122; Dillon v. Allen, 46 Iowa, 299; Gregory v. Wilson, 36 N. J. L. 315; Woods v. Armstrong, 54 Ala. 150; Durgin v. Dyer, 68 Me. 143; Funk v. Gallivan, 49 Conn. 127; Swann v. Swann, 21 Fed. Rep. 299; McConnell v. Kitchens, 20 S. Car. 430; Bensley v. Bignold, 5 B. & Ald. 335; Cope v. Rowlands, 2 M. & W. 149, 157. Compare Chambers v. Manchester & Milford R. Co., 5 B. & S. 588; Re Cork & Loughal R. Co., 4 Ch. 748, 758; Ex parte Neilson, 3 D. M. G. 556, 566; Bank v. Stegall, 41 Miss. 142, 183. The absence of a penalty will not prevent the court from giving effect to a substantive prohibition. Sussex Peerage Co., 11 Cl. & F. 148-9; Melchoir v. McCarty, 31 Wis. 252. What the law forbids to be done directly cannot be made lawful by being done indirectly. Booth v. Bank of England, 7 Cl. & F. 509, 540; Bank of England v. Anderson, 2 Keen, 328; 3 Bing. N. C. 589; Bank of U. S. v. Owens, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 527; Clarke v. Lincoln Lumber Co., 59 Wis. 655; Workingmen's Bkg. Assn. v. Rautenberg, 103 Ill. 460. When conditions are prescribed by statute for the conduct of any particular business or profession, and such conditions are not observed, agreements made in the course of such business or profession are void if it appears by the context that the object of the legislature in imposing the condition was the maintenance of public order or safety, or the protection of the persons dealing with those on whom the condition is imposed. Miller v. Post, 1 Allen (Mass.), 434; Smith v. Arnold, 106 Mass. 269; Prescott v.

50. Wagering Contracts.—In this country generally all wagering contracts are held to be illegal and void, as against public policy.<sup>1</sup>

Battersby, 119 Mass. 285; Woods v. Armstrong, 54 Ala. 150; Buxton v. Hamblen, 32 Me. 448; Dolson v. Hope, 7 Kan. 161; Lewis v. Welch, 14 N. H. 294; Solomon v. Dreschler, 4 Minn. 278; Griffith v. Wells, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 226; Johnson v. Hulings, 103 Pa. St. 498; McConnell v. Kitchens, 20 S. C. 430; Ritchie v. Smith, 6 C. B. 462; Hamilton v. Grainger, 5 H. & N. 40; Taylor v. Crowland Gas Co., 10 Ex. 293. Compare Leman v. Houseley, L. R. 10 Q. B. 66; Ferguson v. Norman, 5 Bing. N. C. 76; Stevens v. Gourley, 7 C. B. N. S. 99; Benton v. Piggott, L. R. 10 Q. B. 86. Are valid if no specific penalty is attached to the specific transaction, and if it appears that the condition was imposed for merely administrative purposes, e.g., the convenient collection of the revenue. Larned v. Andrews, 106 Mass. 435; Corning v. Abbott, 54 N. H. 469; Aiken v. Blaisdell, 41 Vt. 655; Pangborn v. Westlake, 36 Iowa, 546; Ruckman v. Bergholz, 37 N. J. L. 437; Strong v. Darling, 9 Ohio, 201; Favor v. Philbrick, 7 N. H. 326, 340; Lindsey v. Rutherford, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 245; Mandelbaum v. Gregovitch, 17 Nev. 87; Niemeyer v. Wright, 75 Va. 239. Contra, Holt v. Green, 73 Pa. St. 198. Compare Rahter v. Bank, 92 Pa. St. 393. "We have concluded, before the rule can be applied in any case of a statute prohibiting or enjoining things to be done, with a prohibition and a penalty or a penalty only for doing a thing which it forbids, that the statute must be examined as a whole to find out whether or not the makers of it meant that a contract in contravention of it should be void, or that it was not to be so. Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. (U. S.) 79, 84; Pratt v. Short, 79 N. Y. 437; Bailey v. Harris, 12 Q. B. 905; Smith v. Mawhood, 14 M. & W. 452; Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. N. S. 395. Where a statute forbids an agreement, but says that if made it shall not be void, then if made it is a contract which the court must enforce. McMahon v. Borden, 39 Conn. 316; Vining v. Bricker, 14 Ohio St. 331; Pangborn v. Westlake, 36 Iowa, 546; Lewis v. Bright, 4 E. & B. 917. Where no penalty is imposed and the intention of the legislature appears to be simply that the agreement is not to be enforced there, neither the agreement itself nor the performance of it is to be treated as unlawful for any other purpose. Chapman v. County of Douglass, 107 U. S. 348, 356; Johnson v. Meeker, 1 Wis. 436.

A contract to ship goods from one port of the United States to another in a foreign bottom being illegal, does not, as between the parties, become legal because the United States has remitted the forfeiture. Petrel Guano Co. v. Jarnette, 25 Fed. Rep. 675.

1. Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 510; Rice v. Gist, 1 Strobb. L. (S. Car.) 82; Winchester v. Nutter, 52 N. H. 507; Edgell v. McLaughlin, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 176; Collamer v. Day, 2 Vt. 144; Love v. Harvey, 114 Mass. 80. See article on WAGERS AND GAMING.

If money is lent with the mere knowledge or belief on the part of the lender that it is to be used for gambling purposes, and without any participation on his part in the illegal act, an action can be maintained for its recovery; and even if the lender participates in the purposes of the borrower, he may recover the money of the borrower, if demanded before it has been actually used. Tyler v. Carlisle, 9 Atl. Rep. (Me.) 356; s. c., 11 East. Rep. 242; 35 Alb. L. Jour. 504.

An agreement in form of an executory contract for the purchase and sale of property, but upon an understanding between the parties when the contract is made that the property is not to be delivered, but that one will pay and the other receive the difference between the contract price and the market price at the date of performance, is a mere wager, and void. Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499; Sawyer v. Taggart, 14 Bush (Ky.), 727; Gregory v. Wendell, 39 Mich. 337; North v. Phillips, 89 Pa. St. 250; Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 155; Bruce's App., 55 Pa. St. 294; Thompson's Estate, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 532; Pickering v. Case, 79 Ill. 328; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33, 38; Cobb v. Prell (C. C. U. S. D. Kan.) 15 Fed. Rep. 774; Ex parte Young, 6 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 53; In re Green, 7 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 338; Rudolph v. Winters, 7 Neb. 125; Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202; Rumsey v. Berry, 65 Me. 570; Barnard v. Backhaus, 52 Wis. 593; Lowry v. Dillman, 59 Wis. 197; Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219; Hawley v. Bibb, 69 Ala. 52; Lowe v. Young, 59 Iowa, 364; Lyons Bank v. O. Packing Co., 66 Iowa, 41; Melchert v. Telegraph Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.), 521; Cunningham v. Bank, 71 Ga. 400; Seeligson v. Lewis, 65 Tex. 215; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 593; Mut. Life Ins. Co. of N. Y. v. Watson, 2 Railway & Corp. L.

Future illicit cohabitation is an unlawful consideration, and an agreement founded on it is void.<sup>1</sup> No enforceable right can be

J. (U. S. C. Ct. of Ga.) 6; Beadles v. McElrath, 3 S. W. Rep. (Ky.) 152; Heiman v. Hardie & Co., 12 C. of Sess. Cas. (Sc.) 406; Crawford v. Spencer, 4 S. W. Rep. (Mo.) 713; Crawford v. Harlow, 10 West. Rep. (Mo.) 78; Cockrell v. Thompson, 85 Mo. 510.

A bond given for differences in stock-gambling transactions is not "utterly void and of no effect" even in the hands of an innocent holder for value, but the consideration is void. Griffiths v. Sears, 112 Pa. St. 523.

Under a statute giving a right to recover money paid upon gambling and wagering contracts, a recovery may be had for money paid in the settlement of dealings in "grain futures." Dunn v. Bell, 24 Repr. (Tenn.) 20; s. c., 4 S. W. Rep. 41; McGrew v. City Prod. Ex., 4 S. W. Rep. (Tenn.) 38.

If either party intends bona fide to perform the agreement the intention of the other to settle by a payment of differences will not make it void as a wager. Sawyer v. Taggart, 14 Bush (Ky.), 727; Pixley v. Boynton, 79 Ill. 351; Gregory v. Wendell, 40 Mich. 432; Lehmann v. Strassburger, 2 Wood (U. S.), 554; Clarke v. Foss, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 540; Williams v. Carr, 80 N. Car. 294; Murray v. Ochiltree, 59 Iowa, 435; Williams v. Tiedeman, 6 Mo. App. 269; Wall v. Schneider, 59 Wis. 352; Bartlett v. Smith, 4 McCrary (U. S.), 388. A stockbroker agreed to buy and sell stocks for A. as ordered without a margin, and that A. should be liable for differences only. Held, not a wagering contract, and that A. was liable on a note for the differences. Earl v. Howell, 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 474.

Under the Illinois statutes, a simple option, reserved by the seller to himself, as to time of delivery of property with certain limits, and the settlement of differences upon such a contract, does not render the contract void as a gambling transaction. Ward v. Vosburgh, 31 Fed. Rep. 12. An agreement to share in the profits and losses resulting from the sale of stock owned by one of the parties and bought by him through a broker on a margin, held, not a wager contract nor an illegal stock-jobbing contract. Bullard v. Smith, 139 Mass. 492.

A contract for the sale of property which the vendor does not possess, to be delivered in future, is not illegal unless both parties understood it to be a mere speculation in the future price with no intention of delivering or accepting, and the burden of proof is on the party alleging the illegality. Conner v. Robertson, 37 La. Ann. 814; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 521. In an action on a promissory note, defendant pleaded that the note was given for a stock-gambling debt, and was void. It appeared that he ordered the purchase and sale of stocks through a Chicago broker; that he did not intend an actual purchase or sale, but only to speculate on a future rise or fall. It did not appear, however, that a purchase and sale were not in effect made by the broker. The court, upon this evidence, peremptorily instructed the jury to find for plaintiff, as it appeared that there was a gambling intent on one side only, and it is well settled that where such intent exists only on one side, and the other party intends an actual purchase or sale, then the transaction is valid; and from the intent and belief of one party, it is not fair to presume a like intent or belief as to the other. Bangs v. Hornick, 30 Fed. Rep. 97.

1. Walker v. Gregory, 36 Ala. 180; Wallace v. Rappleye, 103 Ill. 229, 249; Wilson v. Ensworth, 85 Ind. 399. A promise of marriage made in consideration of the promisee's surrendering her person to the promisor is void. Baldy v. Stratton, 11 Pa. St. 316; Hanks v. Naglee, 54 Cal. 57; Boigneres v. Boulon, 54 Cal. 146; Goodall v. Thurman, 1 Head (Tenn), 209.

An agreement in consideration of past cohabitation is binding if under seal. Gray v. Mathias, 5 Ves. 286; Brown v. Kinsey, 81 N. Car. 245. If not under seal it is without consideration. Beaumont v. Reeve, 8 Q. B. 483; Singleton v. Bremar, Harper (S. Car.), 201; Drennan v. Douglas, 102 Ill. 341. Contra, Shenk v. Mingle, 13 S. & R. (Pa.), 29; Benyon v. Nettleford, 3 Mac. & G. 94, 100; Kaye v. Moore, 1 Sim. & St. 64; Walker v. Perkins, 3 Burr. 1568; Smyth v. Griffin, 13 Sim. 245; Simpson v. Lord Howden, 3 My. & Cr. 97, 102; Ayerst v. Jenkins, 16 Eq. 275, 282; Batty v. Chester, 5 Beav. 103, 109.

Where a security is given on account of past cohabitation, and the illicit connection is afterwards resumed and is never broken off, the court will not presume from that fact alone that the real consideration was future as well as past, nor therefore treat the deed as invalid. Gray v. Mathias, 5 Ves. 286; Hall v.

acquired by a blasphemous, seditious, or indecent publication; whether in words or writing, or by any contract in relation thereto.<sup>1</sup> The sale of slaves can be made valid only by positive law, and no right of action arising from it can subsist after the determination of that law.<sup>2</sup>

51. Contracts against Public Policy.—Certain contracts are held to be void, as against public policy.<sup>3</sup> Trading with an enemy without Palmer, 3 Ha. 532; Vallance v. Blagden, 26 Ch. D. 353; Brown v. Kinsey, 81 N. C. 245. Compare Trovinger v. McBurney, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 253. It was thought that in some cases the legal personal representative of a party to an immoral agreement might have it set aside though no relief would have been given to the party himself in his lifetime; but this has been pronounced "erroneous and contrary to law." Ayerst v. Jenkins, 16 Eq. 275, 281, 284; Marksbury v. Taylor, 10 Bush (Ky.), 519; Denton v. English, 2 Nott & McC. (S. Car.) 581; Fletcher v. Watson, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 1, 16; White v. Hunter, 23 N. H. 128; Bivans v. Jarnigan, 59 Tenn. 282; Gisuf v. Neval, 81 Pa. St. 354; Hill v. Freeman, 73 Ala. 200. The doctrine of immoral consideration applies to executory agreements only. A completed gift cannot be set aside although made on an immoral consideration. (See cases last cited.) Where parties who have been living together in illicit cohabitation separate, and the man covenants to pay an annuity to the woman, with a proviso that the annuity shall cease or the deed shall be void if the parties live together again, the covenant is valid but the proviso is void. Ex parte Naden, 9 Ch. 670. When the parties are really married such a proviso is usual but superfluous, for the deed is in any case avoided by the parties afterwards living together. Westmeath v. Westmeath, 1 Dow. & Cl. 519; Shethar v. Gregory, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 422; Wells v. Stout, 9 Cal. 479, 498; Chapman v. Gray, 8 Ga. 341, 349; Carson v. Murray, 3 Paige (N. Y.), 483. But not if the agreement for separation itself provides to the contrary. Walker v. Walker, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 743; Walker v. Beal, 3 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 155; Hitner's App., 54 Pa. St. 110. As to agreement for separation, see articles on HUSBAND AND WIFE; MARRIAGE.

1. The question in these cases is not simply whether the publication be immoral, but whether the criminal law would punish it as immoral. Stockdale v. Onwhyn, 5 B. & C. 173.

A trade mark intended to deceive the public will not be protected by a court of equity. Manhattan Medicine Co. v.

Wood, 108 U. S. 218; Buckland v. Rice, 40 Ohio St. 526; Connell v. Reed, 128 Mass. 477; Siegert v. Abbott, 61 Md. 276; Laird v. Wilder, 9 Bush (Ky.), 131; Palmer v. Harris, 60 Pa. St. 156; Seabury v. Grosvenor, 14 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 362.

Under an agreement between A and B, a publisher, for a royalty on sales of a book to which A was to contribute facts, the publication of a book which was a fraud on the public will not prevent a recovery for the royalty reserved by the contract. James v. Chambers, 18 Mo. App. 331.

2. 1 Story on Conts. (5th Ed.) 647; Wainwright v. Bridges, 19 La. Ann. 234; Rodriguez v. Bienvenu, 22 La. Ann. 300; Osborn v. Nicholson, 1 Dill. (U. S. C. C.) 219; Buckner v. Street, 1 Dill. (U. S. C. C.) 248; Shorter v. Cobb, 39 Ga. 285.

Where the highest court of a State so decides, on general principles of public policy or morality the supreme court of the United States has no power of review. Palmer v. Marston, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 10. But it has the power where the decision of the State court is based upon a constitution or legislative enactment passed after the contract was made. Delmas v. Ins. Co., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 661. The supreme court of Louisiana held that contracts for the sale of persons, though made in the State while slavery was lawful, must be treated as void; but the supreme court of the United States refused to adopt this view. Boyce v. Tabb, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 546; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Osborn v. Nicholson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 654; Roundtree v. Baker, 52 Ill. 241; Calhoun v. Calhoun, 2 S. Car. 283; Taylor v. Mayhew, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 596; Bradford v. Jenkins, 41 Miss. 328.

3 On meaning of public policy see Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H. L. C. 1-250. "It must not be forgotten that you are not to extend arbitrarily those rules which say that a given contract is void as being against public policy, because if there is one thing which more than another public policy requires, it is that men of full age and competent under-a license is illegal.<sup>1</sup> An agreement to contravene the laws of a standing shall have the utmost liberty of contracting, and that their contracts, when entered into freely and voluntarily, shall be held sacred, and shall be enforced by courts of justice. Therefore you have this paramount public policy to consider—that you are not lightly to interfere with this freedom of contract.” Sir G. Jessel, M. R., in Printing & Numerical Registering Co. v. Sampson, 19 Eq. 462, 465.

An agreement is void as against public policy which provides that one who is bound to give his best judgment upon a question in which parties adversely interested are concerned, and who does not purport to be the agent of either, shall be paid for his services in proportion to the amount recovered by one from the other. Thomas v. Caulkett, 57 Mich. 392.

Contracts made during the lifetime of a testator, and fairly obtained, by persons living in expectation of receiving benefits under his will, to divide among them any such benefits after his death, if amounting to agreements to use undue influence upon the testator, are bad; but they are good if amounting to agreements to abstain disinterestedly from interfering with the testator, and will be upheld where there is mutuality of consideration. Higgins v. Hill, 56 L. I. N. S. 426.

The liability of railroad companies for injuries caused to their servants by the carelessness of other employees who are placed in authority and control over them is founded upon considerations of public policy, and it is not competent for such companies to stipulate with their employees at the time, and as part of their contract of employment, that such liability shall not attach to them. Railway Co. v. Spangler, 44 Ohio St. 471.

An agreement to build houses on a disused, unconsecrated burial-ground, necessitating the removal of some thousands of corpses, which removal would, of necessity, involve an outrage on public decency, and amount to an indictable offence, is illegal. Gibbons v. Chambers, 1 C. & E. 577.

A contract whereby a person binds himself expressly for a valuable consideration to dispose of his property by will in a particular manner, is not repugnant to public policy, and will be enforced after promisor's decease. Bolman v. Overall, 2 South. Rep. (Ala.) 624.

A promise by A to pay B for services to be rendered in procuring a wife for A is void. Johnson v. Hunt, 81 Ky. 321.

A contract for the sale of domestic sardines, to be put up with labels representing the sardines as foreign sardines, is against public policy. Materne v. Horwitz, 101 N. Y. 469.

Contract founded on illegal transaction, or one contrary to public policy, held void in Hinnen v. Newman, 12 Pac. Rep. (Kan.) 144.

A, in consideration of a fixed sum paid to him by B, agreed to deliver to B certain deeds for real estate, and also to satisfy certain judgments, one in favor of C, a savings-bank, and another in favor of D. Held, in an action brought by B against A to recover for usury paid by A to C on the judgment of C. that the court would not look for usury back of the contract between A and B. Held, also, that as no fraud had been practised upon B, he could not retain the benefits gained by the contract and at the same time recover the money paid or any part of it, as to do this he must restore to A what he received from him. Guilinger v. Zahniser, 11 East. Rep. (Pa.) 376. See, as to usurious contracts, Ormund v. Hobart, 31 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 213. See USURY.

1. Esposito v. Bowden, 7 E. & B. 763, 779.

“The law of nations as judicially declared prohibits all intercourse between citizens of the two belligerents which is inconsistent with the state of war between their countries; and this includes any act of voluntary submission to the enemy or receiving his protection, as well as any act or contract which tends to increase his resources, and every kind of trading or commercial dealing or intercourse, whether by transmission of money or goods or orders for the delivery of either between the two countries, whether directly or indirectly, or through the intervention of third persons or partnerships, or by insurances upon trade with or by the enemy.” Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561, 572-3; Montgomery v. U. S., 15 Wall. (U. S.) 395; Scholfield v. Eichelberger, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 586; U. S. v. Grossmayer, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Cappell v. Hall, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 542, 554; The Rapid, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 155; Perkins v. Rogers, 35 Ind. 124; Shaklett v. Polk, 51 Miss. 378, 391; Rhodes v. Summerhill, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 204; Hill v. Baker, 32 Iowa, 302; Henner v. Gilman, 20 La. Ann. 241; Phillips v. Hatch, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 571; Habricht v. Alexander's Ex'rs, 1 Woods foreign country is in general unlawful.<sup>1</sup> An agreement whose object is to induce any officer of the state to act partially or corruptly is void.<sup>2</sup> The sale of offices is void, as being against (U. S.), 413, 1 Kent, 66. The particular contracts relating to real estate in Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561, and Brown v. Gardner, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 145, were held to be lawful.

Contracts made during the late civil war in one of the Confederate States payable in Confederate money, if not made for the purpose of giving it currency or otherwise aiding the rebellion, are not because thus payable invalid. Thorington v. Smith, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 1; The Confederate Note Case, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 548, 556; Railroad Co. v. King, 91 U. S. 3; Rodes v. Patitto, 5 Bush (Ky.), 271; Rivers v. Moss' Assignee, 6 Bush (Ky.), 600; Rodgers v. Bass, 46 Tex. 505; Naff v. Crawford, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 111; Sherfy v. Argenbright, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 128; Forchheimer v. Holly, 14 Fla. 239; Whitfield v. Riddle, 52 Ala. 467; Green v. Sizer, 40 Miss. 530; Young v. Mitchell, 33 Ark. 222. Contra, Denny v. Johnson, 26 La. Ann. 55. As to revisory power of the supreme court of the United States over the decision of a State court on this question, see Delmas v. Ins. Co., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 661; Dugger v. Bockock, 104 U. S. 596. But bonds issued for the purpose of supporting the war levied by the Confederate States do not constitute a lawful consideration for a promissory note, although they were used as a circulating medium in the common and ordinary business transactions of the people. Hanauer v. Woodruff, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 439. An agreement even at the present time to buy and sell such bonds is void. Branch v. Haas, 16 Fed. Rep. 53.

Where a bill was drawn on England by an English prisoner in a hostile country it was held to be a lawful contract, and by the necessity of the case an indorsement to an alien enemy was held good, so that he might sue on it after the return of peace. Antoine v. Morshead, 6 Taunt. 237. But a bill drawn by an alien enemy on a domiciled British subject residing in the enemy's country was held to give no right of action even after the end of the war, for this is a direct trading with the enemy on the part of the acceptor. Willison v. Patteson, 7 Taunt. 439; Bilgery v. Branch, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 393, 418; Moon v. Foster, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 433, n.; Woods v. Wilder, 43 N. Y. 164; Tarleton v. Bank, 41 Ala. 722; Williams v. Bank, 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 501; Lacy v. Sugarman, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.)

354. Compare U. S. v. Barker, 1 Paine C. C. 156; Haggard v. Conkwright, 7 Bush (Ky.), 16. A bill drawn by an alien enemy upon the subject or citizen of the adverse country, in favor of a neutral, will, if no illegal use of it be intended, be good in favor of the neutral against the drawer, and against the drawee if he become acceptor. Story on Bills, § 104.

During a war, foreign or civil, an action cannot be prosecuted by an enemy residing in the enemy's territory, but must be stayed until the return of peace. Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561, 563; Perkins v. Rogers, 35 Ind. 124; Bell v. Chapman, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 183; Whelan v. Cook, 29 Md. 1; Norris v. Doniphan, 4 Met. (Ky.) 385; Sanderson v. Morgan, 39 N. Y. 231; Lamar v. Micon, 112 U. S. 452, 464. But if sued he may defend in the form in which he is assailed. McVeigh v. U. S., 11 Wall. (U. S.) 259; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 277; Buford v. Speed, 11 Bush (Ky.), 338; Seymour v. Bailey, 66 Ill. 288; Haymond v. Camden, 22 W. Va. 180.

1. It is said that revenue laws are excepted, and that "no country ever takes notice of the revenue laws of another." Lord Mansfield in Holman v. Johnson, 1 Cowp. 341. See Kohn v. Renaissance, 5 La. Ann. 25; Ivey v. Lalland, 42 Miss. 444. This proposition is disapproved by most modern writers as being contrary to reason and justice. 3 Kent Comm. 263-266; Wharton, Conflict of Laws, §§ 484-5; Westlake Private International Law (1880), 231, 238. Where an alien and an American citizen were engaged in a joint enterprise by which merchandise was introduced into the United States in violation of the revenue laws, the former was held not entitled to recover his share of the proceeds from the latter. Cambioso v. Maffitt, 2 Wash. (C. C.) 98.

2. An agreement which has a tendency that way is void. Lucas v. Allen, 80 Ky. 681; Womack v. Loran (Ct. App. Ky.), 8 C. L. J. 332; O'Hara v. Carpenter, 23 Mich. 410; Caton v. Stewart, 76 N. Car. 357. An agreement to pay for services in soliciting and procuring the discharge of one drafted into the army,—Bowman v. Coffroth, 59 Pa. St. 19. Compare O'Hara v. Carpenter, 23 Mich. 410,—or a pardon for a convict, is unlawful and void. Hatzfield v. Gulden, 7 Watts (Pa.), 152; Willey v. Collier, 7 Md. 273; Kribben v. Haycraft, 26 Mo. 396; State v.

Johnson, 52 Ind. 197, 205; Haines v. Lewis, 54 Iowa, 301. Contra, Chadwick v. Knox, 31 N. H. 226; Formby v. Pryor, 15 Ga. 258; Bird v. Breedlove, 24 Ga. 623; Thompson v. Wharton, 7 Bush (Ky.), 563; this last case being put on the ground that the conviction was by a court unauthorized by law. A contract by a city to pay an attorney one third the revenue of a ferry for fifteen years (the annual rental of the ferry being about $10,000), in consideration of his protecting the city's title to some river lots, worth at the date of the contract about $150, is void for unreasonableness in the amount of compensation, and as evidencing an utter disregard on the part of the municipal board of their duty to the public. Waterbury v. City of Laredo, 5 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 81.

An agreement for compensation for procuring by personal influence a contract from the government, our own or that of another country, is against public policy, and void. Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45; Oscanyon v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261; Ashburner v. Parrish, 81 Pa. St. 52; Dist. Winpenny v. French, 18 Ohio St. 469. Contra, Lyon v. Mitchell, 36 N. Y. 235; Cummins v. Barkalow, 1 Abb. App. Dec. 479; Elkhart Co. Lodge v. Cray, 98 Ind. 238; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 746.

The plaintiff, who, by reason of having purchased, enclosed, and cultivated a tract of land within the limits of the Hot Springs reservation, had an equitable claim to a patent likely to be recognized by the United States, executed a deed of conveyance of a subtract to the defendant, who had occupied and built on it with the plaintiff's permission; the defendant at the same time executing an agreement to reconvey an undivided half of the subtract to the plaintiff within thirty days after the title should be acquired by the United States. The deed and agreement were executed in settlement of certain controversies between the parties, and it was agreed that the plaintiff should furnish the evidence necessary to enable the defendant to obtain the title from the United States. This the plaintiff did. Held, in a suit to compel specific performance of agreement to reconvey, that there was neither want nor illegality of consideration, and that plaintiff was entitled to a decree. Gaines v. Molen, 30 Fed. Rep. 27.

An agreement which contemplates the use of underhand means to influence legislation is void. Marshall v. B. & O. R. Co., 16 How. (U. S.) 314; Mills v. Mills, 40 N. Y. 543; Frost v. Belmont, 6 Allen (Mass.), 152; Bryan v. Reynolds, 5 Wis. 200; Usher v. McBratney, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 385; Gil v. Davis, 12 La. Ann. 219; Clippenger v. Hepbaugh, 15 W. & S. (Pa.) 315; Powers v. Skinner, 34 Vt. 274; Wood v. McCann, 6 Dana (Ky.), 366; McBratney v. Chandler, 22 Kan. 692. An agreement among parties petitioning for the improvement of a street by which a few individuals desirous of causing the improvement to be made procure the signatures of others to the petition by promising to pay a consideration therefor, is contrary to public policy. Maguire v. Smock, 42 Ind. 1; Howard v. F. I. Church of Balto., 18 Md. 451. Compare Makemson v. Kauffman, 35 Ohio St. 444, 455. An agreement to prosecute a claim before Congress by means of personal influence and solicitations of the kind known as "lobby service" has been held void. Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 441.

"A promise to pay money to one through whose land a road has been laid out for withdrawing his opposition to opening it is a valid consideration, on which an action may be sustained." Weeks v. Lippencott, 42 Pa. St. 474. Contra, Smith v. Applegate, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 352. And see Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aiken (Vt.), 264. A contract by which the directors of a railroad company agree not to establish a station or freight depot within a certain distance of a point on its line is against public policy and unlawful. Williamson v. Railroad Co., 53 Iowa, 126; Railroad Co. v. Ryan, 11 Kan. 602; Railroad Co. v. Mathers, 71 Ill. 592; s. c., 104 Ill. 257; Marsh v. Railway Co., 64 Ill. 414; Railroad Co. v. Taylor, 6 Col. 1. And so also is an agreement in consideration of money or property paid or given to a shareholder or director to procure the establishment of a station at a particular place. Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Bestor v. Wathen, 60 Ill. 138. Compare Railroad Co. v. Seeley, 45 Mo. 212. A contract by a railroad company to locate and maintain a depot at a certain point is not against public policy, if the company does not restrict itself from locating a depot elsewhere. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Sumner, 106 Ind. 55; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 719. And a promise by the railway company for a benefit conferred upon it to build its line to or through a particular point is not per se unlawful. Band v. Hendrie, 49 Iowa, 402; Berryman v. Trustees, 14 Bush (Ky.), 755; Railroad Co. v. Ralston (S. C. Com. Ohio), 13 Weekly Law Bull. 496. Compare Holladay v. Patterson, 5 Oreg. 177.

public policy.<sup>1</sup> Agreements for the purpose of "stifling criminal prosecution" are void, as tending to obstruct the course of public justice.<sup>2</sup> Agreements relating to proceedings in civil courts

1. Hanington v. Du Chastel, 2 Swanst. 159, n.; Hopkins v. Prescott, 4 C. B. 578; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136; Eddy v. Capron, 4 R. I. 394; Meredith v. Ladd, 2 N. H. 517; Carleton v. Whitcher, 5 N. H. 196; Outen v. Rodes, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 432; Lewis v. Knox, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 453; Filson's Trustees v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; Bowers v. Bowers, 26 Pa. St. 74; Stroud v. Smith, 4 Houst. (Del.) 448; Robertson v. Robinson, 65 Ala. 610; Groton v. Waldborough, 11 Me. 306. An agreement by which a candidate for office receives from another money to aid in securing his election, and in consideration thereof promises to share with him a portion of the emoluments of the office, is against public policy, and void. Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 168; Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; Meguiar v. Corwine, 101 U. S. 108. So also is an agreement between two candidates for the same office, that one shall withdraw, and the other, if successful in the attempt to obtain the office, shall divide the fees with him. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449; Hunter v. Nolf, 71 Pa. St. 282. Where a candidate for public office pledged himself if elected to perform the duties of the office for a sum less than half the fees allowed by law, whereby voters were induced to vote for him and he received a majority of the votes cast, his election was declared invalid, as against public policy. State v. Collier, 72 Mo. 13; State v. Purdy, 36 Wis. 213; Corrothers v. Russell, 53 Iowa, 346; State v. Elting, 29 Kan. 397, 399. A note executed in consideration of the payee's agreement to resign a public office in favor of the maker, and use his influence to secure the latter's appointment as his successor, is void. Meacham v. Dow, 32 Vt. 721. A promise of reward for using influence to procure the promisor's election or appointment to public office is void. Nichols v. Mudgett, 32 Vt. 546; Fawill v. Morin's Syndics, 4 Mart. (La.) 39. A promise to pay for services rendered by another as a canvasser at a primary election to secure the promisor's nomination for an office is unlawful and void. Keating v. Hyde, 23 Mo. App. 555. A claim for "money borrowed at the instance of the defendant, and used for him in paying travelling expenses to elections and for men to leave their work and go to the primary election for defendant, who was a candidate for office," is illegal, and will not be enforced. Howard v. Jacoby, 3 Pac. Co. Ct. Rep. 436. A promise by a shareholder or director of a corporation for a pecuniary consideration to procure one to be appointed an officer of the corporation,—Guernsey v. Cook, 120 Mass. 501; Noll v. Drake, 28 Kan. 265,—or to vote for a particular person as manager,—Woodruff v. Wentworth, 133 Mass. 309,—or a promise to pay a director to resign,—Forbes v. McDonald, 54 Cal. 98,—is void. But see Barnes v. Brown, 80 N. Y. 527. A secret agreement to hand over to another person the profits of a contract made for the public service, such as a post-office contract for the conveyance of mails, is void. Osborne v. Williams, 18 Ves. 379; Ashburner v. Parrish, 81 Pa. St. 52. Compare Gordon v. Dalby, 30 Iowa, 223. The assignment by a public officer of a portion of his salary not yet due is void. Bliss v. Lawrence, 58 N. Y. 442; Beal v. McVicker, 8 Mo. App. 202; Bangs v. Dunn, 18 Rep. 572; Billings v. O'Brien, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 238. And see Field v. Chipley, 79 Ky. 260. Contra, State v. Hastings, 15 Wis. 83.

2. Gorham v. Keyes, 137 Mass. 583; Kimbrough v. Lane, 11 Bush (Ky.), 556; Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. Car. 328; Baker v. Farris, 61 Mo. 389; Shaw v. Reed, 30 Me. 105; Shaw v. Spooner, 9 N. H. 197; Badger v. Williams, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 137; Chandler v. Johnson, 39 Ga. 85; Goodwin v. Crowell, 56 Ga. 566; Snider v. Willey, 33 Mich. 483; Sumner v. Sumner, 54 Mo. 340; Wright v. Rindskopf, 43 Wis. 344; Roll v. Raguet, 4 Ohio, 400; Raguet v. Roll, 7 Ohio (pt. 1), 76; Vanover v. Thompson, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 485; Halthaus v. Kuntz, 17 Ill. App. 434; Henderson v. Palmer, 71 Ill. 579; Ricketts v. Harvey, 106 Ind. 564; Taylor v. Jaques, 106 Mass. 291; Peed v. McKee, 42 Iowa, 689; McMahon v. Smith, 47 Conn. 221; Ex parte Wolverhampton Banking Co., 14 Q. B. D. 32.

A contract to waive all damages for injuries resulting from criminal negligence is void as against public policy. Cook v. West & Atl. R. Co., 72 Ga. 48.

Where a prosecutrix agreed, in compromise and settlement of criminal and civil proceedings for fornication and bastardy, to deliver her child to a third person, to discontinue both actions, and to release the defendant from all claims and demands, in consideration of which he agreed to pay the costs in those cases, "to relieve her from any cost or expense in the support and maintenance of said child, and to see that it was well taken care of;" it was held that this latter agreement was not illegal, but that the contract was a continuing one, binding on the defendant's executors as far as not performed by testator in his lifetime. Stumpf's Appeal, 8 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 866.

A contract between the putative father of a bastard child, and the town where it had a settlement, by which the former made a certain agreement as to the support of the child in consideration that neither the town nor the parents of the mother of the child would "institute any legal proceedings against him of any kind or nature on account of the" mother "being pregnant with an illegitimate child," or for the support of the child or nursing of the mother, was held not to refer to criminal proceedings, and not to be void on that ground. Town of Hamden v. Merwin, 8 Atl. Rep. (Conn.) 670.

A mortgage, the consideration of which is the stifling of a criminal prosecution, is void. Pearce v. Wilson, 111 Pa. St. 14; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 243; Wheaton v. Ansley, 71 Ga. 35. A promise to pay one for using his influence to have criminal proceedings dismissed is void. Ormerod v. Dearman, 100 Pa. St. 561; Rhodes v. Neal, 64 Ga. 704; Averbeck v. Hall, 14 Bush (Ky.), 505; Barron v. Tucker, 53 Vt. 338; Ricketts v. Harvey, 78 Ind. 152. So is an agreement to indemnify another for becoming bail for one arrested for a crime, so as to enable the latter to flee from justice. Baehr v. Wolff, 59 Ill. 470; Dunkin v. Hodge, 46 Ala. 523; Herman v. Jenchner, 15 Q. B. D. 561. Or an agreement by a fugitive from justice about to be surrendered for extradition to pay money in consideration of forbearance to prosecute the proceedings against him. Dixon v. Olmstead, 9 Vt. 310; Fay v. Oatley, 6 Wis. 42. Or a promise to pay money in consideration of not searching the house of a thief for stolen goods until the next day. Merrill v. Carr, 60 N. H. 114. Or in consideration of a promise to sign a petition to the judge for clemency in the sentence of a prisoner. Buck v. Bank, 27 Mich. 293.

"A contract conditioned for the execution and deposit of certain promissory notes by one under sentence for the commission of a crime, to be delivered to the prosecuting witness upon certain conditions, one of which was that the maker should receive a pardon, or be acquitted on a new trial, is illegal and void, as against public policy." Haines v. Lewis, 54 Iowa, 301; and see Comms. of Guilford Co. v. Marsh, 89 N. Car. 268.

A promise to pay one wanted as a witness in a criminal proceeding for keeping out of the jurisdiction of the court, so as to evade service of process upon him, is void. Bierbauer v. Wirth, 10 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 60.

"We shall probably be safe in laying it down that the law will permit a compromise of all offences, though made the subject of criminal prosecution, for which offences the injured party might sue and recover damages in an action." Collins v. Blantern, 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 715, 718; Fisher & Co. v. Apollinaris Co., 10 Ch. 297; Price v. Summers, 2 South. (N. J.) 578; Geier v. Shade (S. C. Pa.), 21 C. L. J. 115-6; Fay v. Oatley, 6 Wis. 42, 59. See, contra, Jones v. Rice, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 440; Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. Car. 328; Gray v. Seigler, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 117; Corley v. Williams, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 588; Vincent v. Groom, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 430; Bowen v. Buck, 28 Vt. 308.

While an agreement made in consideration of stifling a prosecution for a felony is void, yet certain misdemeanors which chiefly affect the individuals aggrieved, and not the public interests, do not come within that rule, and may be settled by private agreement. Geier v. Shade, 109 Pa. St. 180.

That one may adopt and ratify his forged signature, see Bank v. Crafts, 4 Allen (Mass.), 477; Willington v. Jackson, 121 Mass. 157; Bank v. Keene, 53 Me. 103; Fitzpatrick v. School Commrs., 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 224; Bank v. Middlebrook, 33 Conn. 95. See Forsythe v. Bonta, 5 Bush (Ky.), 547. Contra, that ratification of a forged signature is against public policy. Shisler v. Vandike, 92 Pa. St. 447; McHugh v. Co. of Schuylkill, 67 Pa. St. 391; Workman v. Wright, 33 Ohio St. 405; Brook v. Hook, L. R. 6 Ex. 89.

An agreement for the collusive conduct of a divorce suit is void. Hope v. Hope, 8 D. M. G. 731; Stoutenburgh v. Lybrand, 13 Ohio St. 228; Kilborn v. Field, 78 Pa. St. 194; Viser v. Bertrand, 14 Ark. 267; Sayles v. Sayles, 21 N. H. 312; Cross v. Cross, 58 N. H. 373; Goodwin v. Goodwin, 4 Day (Conn.), 343; Stilson v. Stilson, 46 Conn. 15; Belden v. Munger, 5 Minn. 211; Adams v. Adams, 25 Minn. 72; Everhart v. Puckett, 73 Ind. 409; Phillips v. Thorp, 10 Oreg. 494; Beard v. Beard (S. C. Cal.), 19 C. L. J. 78. Where a divorce has been fraudulently obtained, a subsequent involving anything inconsistent with the full and impartial course of justice therein, though not open to the charge of actual corruption, are void.<sup>1</sup> An action may be maintained for the breach of an agreement to refer disputes to arbitration, but such an agreement cannot be set up as a bar to an action brought to determine the dispute which it was agreed to refer.<sup>2</sup> Certain agreements agreement between the parties that it shall not be disturbed, is against public policy and void. Comstock v. Adams, 23 Kan. 513. So also is an agreement between the overseers of the poor and a husband whose wife is supported as a town charge that they will refrain from making opposition to a libel for divorce filed by the husband against the wife. Weeks v. Hill, 38 N. H. 199. But a promise made in consideration of a wife's dismissing a suit for divorce begun by her is lawful. Adams v. Adams, 91 N. Y. 381; Phillips v. Meyers, 82 Ill. 67. Compare Copeland v. Boaz, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 223. "An action may be maintained by a woman upon a promissory note given to her by her former husband after she has obtained a divorce from him, in pursuance of a written agreement made before the divorce, and conditioned upon the divorce being decreed, and which was called to the attention of the court granting the divorce, by the terms of which agreement, which were carried out by each party, she was to convey her land to him, and give a release of all her rights of dower and homestead, and he was to give her a sum of money and the note in suit, which were to be accepted instead of alimony." Chapin v. Chapin, 135 Mass. 393. But as to analogous agreements made before divorce obtained, and not called to the attention of the court, see Speck v. Dausman, 7 Mo. App. 165; Hamilton v. Hamilton, 89 Ill. 349. An agreement not to expose immoral conduct has been held void, as against public policy. Brown v. Brine, 1 Ex. D. 5.

1. An agreement to pay a witness who could not be required by subpoena to attend a trial, a certain sum to be present at the trial, which was to be reduced one half if the party promising lost the case, is void. Dawkins v. Gill, 10 Ala. 206. See Thomas v. Caulkett (S. C. Mich.), 32 Alb. L. J. 82. An agreement to procure witnesses to swear to a certain state of facts is against public policy. Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369.

A contract whereby a justice of the peace agrees to charge smaller fees in suits to be brought before him by a certain corporation than prescribed by statute, and that such fees shall not be collected unless they have been paid over by the defendants to the corporation, is contrary to public policy, and void. Hawkeye Ins. Co. v. Brainard, 33 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 603.

A contract to abandon the prosecution of proceedings for the establishment of a public highway for a money consideration is void. Jacobs v. Tobiason, 65 Iowa, 245; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 9. See Gray v. McReynolds, 65 Iowa, 461; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 16.

2. Wood v. Humphrey, 114 Mass. 185; Pearl v. Harris, 121 Mass. 390; Vass v. Wales, 129 Mass. 38; White v. Railroad Co., 135 Mass. 216; Hill v. More, 40 Me. 515, 523; Gray v. Wilson, 4 Watts (Pa.), 39; Randal v. C. & D. Canal Co., 1 Harr. (Del.) 233, 275; Stone v. Dennis, 3 Porter (Ala.), 231; Haggart v. Morgan, 5 N. Y. 422; Hurst v. Litchfield, 39 N. Y. 377; McGunn v. Hanlin, 29 Mich. 476; March v. Railroad Co., 40 N. H. 548, 571. On this principle it was held that an agreement by a foreign insurance company, in pursuance of a State statute exacting the promise as a condition of the right to do business in the State, that if sued in a State court it would not remove the suit into the Federal court, was void. Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 445. See also Nute v. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.), 174; Hobbs v. Ins. Co., 56 Me. 417; Railroad Co. v. Cary, 28 Ohio St. 208; Quimby v. Ins. Co., 58 N. H. 494. Rea's App. (S. C. Pa.), 13 W. N. C. 546, 16 Rep. 761. Nor could such an agreement be specifically enforced or used as a bar to a suit in equity. Cooke v. Cooke, 4 Eq. 77, 86-7; Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 815, 818; Tobey v. County of Bristol, 3 Story (U. S. C. C.) 800; King v. Howard, 27 Mo. 21; St. Louis v. St. Louis Gaslight Co., 70 Mo. 69, 104; Greason v. Keteltas, 17 N. Y. 497, 496; Smith v. Railroad Co., 36 N. H. 458.

An agreement to submit to arbitration will not be held valid, either in law or equity, when its effect is to oust the court of jurisdiction. Chamberlain v. Conn. Cent. R. Co., 9 Atl. Rep. (Conn.) 244; Dugan v. Thomas, 9 Atl. Rep. (Me.) 354; s. c., 11 East. Rep. 349.

Parties may make arbitration a condition precedent to any right existing at all, as where the contract is to pay such are void, as being in the nature of champerty or maintenance.<sup>1</sup> Agreements by which a father deprives himself of the right to the custody of his children, or of his discretion as to their education, cannot be enforced.<sup>2</sup> Some agreements in restraint of marriage are void.<sup>3</sup>

52. Restraint of Trade.—Contracts in total restraint of trade are void; but where the restraint is partial, reasonable, and founded upon a good consideration, it is valid, and will be enforced.<sup>4</sup> an amount as shall be determined by arbitration, or found due by the certificate of a particular person. Scott v. Avery, 5 H. L. C. 811; Fox v. Railroad Co., 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S. C. C.) 243; Smith v. Railroad Co., 36 N. H. 458, 487; Del. & H. Canal Co. v. Penn. Coal Co., 50 N. Y. 250; Perkins v. Electric Light Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 513; Haley v. Bellamy, 137 Mass. 357; Mentz v. Ins. Co., 79 Pa. St. 478; Trott v. Ins. Co., 1 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 439; Stephenson v. Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55; Rowe v. Williams, 97 Mass. 163; Gauche v. Ins. Co., 10 Fed. Rep. 347. See article on ARBITRATION.

1. See articles on CHAMPERTY; MAINTENANCE.

2. Re Andrews, L. R. 8 Q. B. 153; In re Besant, 11 Ch. D. 508, 519; Johnson v. Terry, 34 Conn. 259, 263; Albert v. Perry, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 540; Gates v. Renfroe, 7 La. Ann. 569; Chapsky v. Wood, 26 Kan. 650; Matter of Scarritt, 76 Mo. 565. See article on PARENT AND CHILD.

3. See HUSBAND AND WIFE; MARRIAGE.

4. Mitchell v. Reynolds, 1 P. Wms. 181; 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 756; Whitney v. Slayton, 40 Me. 224; Perkins v. Clay, 54 N. H. 518; Clark v. Crosby, 37 Vt. 188; Hedge v. Lowe, 47 Iowa, 137; Arnold v. Kreutzer, 67 Iowa, 214; Laubenheimer v. Mann, 17 Wis. 542; Fairbank v. Leary, 40 Wis. 637; Keeler v. Taylor, 53 Pa. St. 467; McClurg's App., 58 Pa. St. 51; Koehler v. Fearbacher, 2 Mo. App. 11; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. C. & A. Railroad Co., 73 Mo. 389; Turner v. Johnson, 7 Dana (Ky.) 435; Stearns v. Barrett, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 443; Linn v. Sigsbee, 67 Ill. 75; Talcott v. Brackett, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 60; Peop. Gasl. & Coke Co. v. Chic. G. & C. Co., 20 Ill. App. 473; Bowser v. Bliss, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 344; Lawrence v. Kidder, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 641; Chappell v. Brockway, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 157; Curtis v. Gokey, 68 N. Y. 300; Hoagland v. Segur, 38 N. J. L. 230; Jenkins v. Temples, 39 Ga. 655; Gireaud v. Daudelet, 32 Md. 561; Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 519; Thomas v. Mills, 3 Ohio St. 274; Hubbard v. Miller, 27 Mich. 15; Lightner v. Menzel, 35 Cal.

468; Boutelle v. Smith, 116 Mass. 111. There are two principal grounds upon which the doctrine that a contract in restraint of trade is void as against public policy, is founded: one is the injury to the public by being deprived of the restricted party's industry; the other is the injury to the party himself by being precluded from pursuing his occupation, and thus being prevented from supporting himself and his family. Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 64. See also Skrainka v. Scharinghausen, 8 Mo. App. 522. There must be a consideration even though the contract is under seal. Gompers v. Rochester, 56 Pa. St. 194. The party setting up the contract must show that it is founded on a good consideration. Weller v. Hersee, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 431. The courts will not inquire into the adequacy of the consideration. Gireraud v. Daudelet, 32 Md. 561; Perkins v. Clay, 54 N. H. 518; McClurg's App., 58 Pa. St. 51; Hall's App., 60 Pa. St. 458; Linn v. Sigsbee, 67 Ill. 75; Pierce v. Fuller, 8 Mass. 223. If the contract be reasonable when made, subsequent circumstances, such as the covenantee ceasing business, so as to no longer need its protection, do not affect its operation. Cook v. Johnson, 47 Conn. 175.

W. entered the service of C. as a shopman at weekly wages, and covenanted not to carry on business within one mile of the shop at any time thereafter. The business was afterwards moved to another shop close by, and sold by C. to J., together with the good-will and beneficial interest thereof. W. then left the shop and set up business within a mile of the old shop. Held, that the covenant was not unreasonable, and endured for the life of W., though the original covenantee should cease to carry on business altogether, and that the covenant was not affected by the removal of the business to another shop near at hand, though it might have been otherwise if the business had been removed to quite a different neighborhood, and also that the covenant passed to J. with the sale of the good-will and beneficial interest, and gave him a right of action. Jacoby v. Whitmore, 49 L. J. N. S. 335; 32 W. R. 18. Compare Mandeville v. Harman, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 37.

What is a reasonable restraint must depend upon the circumstances of each case. The prohibition should not extend any further than will fully protect the party for whose benefit the contract is made in his occupation or business. Long v. Towe, 42 Mo. 545; Pyke v. Thomas, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 486; Grundy v. Edwards, 7 J. J. Mar. (Ky.) 368; Turner v. Johnson, 7 Dana (Ky.), 435. A covenant providing that the covenantor should desist from selling mattresses "in all the territory of the State of New York west of the city of Albany," was held void, as embracing too large a territory. Lawrence v. Kidder, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 641.

A contract not to exercise the trade of making printers' rollers and composition in New York City, or within 250 miles thereof, is void, as being in restraint of trade. Bingham v. Maigne, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 90.

A covenant not to be directly or indirectly interested in any voyage to the northwest coast of America, or in any traffic with the natives of that coast, for seven years, was held valid, because the trade in question had been lately discovered, and could be beneficial only to a small number of adventurers. Perkins v. Lyman, 9 Mass. 522.

An agreement by several commercial firms, by which they bound themselves for the term of three months not to sell any India cotton bagging, except with the consent of a majority of their number, was held unlawful in India Bagging Assoc. v. Kock, 14 La. Ann. 168. And see Stanton v. Allen, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 434; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co., 68 Pa. St. 173; Arnot v. Pittston, etc., Coal Co., 68 N. Y. 558; Central Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 666.

"A contract between the lessor and lessee of a coal-mine, that the lessee shall exercise his influence over his employés to induce them and their families to purchase goods, wares, and merchandise only at the store of the lessor; that the lessee will not accept any order given upon him by any of his employés for goods, etc., purchased of any other person or firm, nor give to any employé an order on any other store, nor any note or other evidence of indebtedness to be transferred to any other store for goods, wares, and merchandise, is unlawful, being in restraint of trade, to the injury of others, and tending to monopoly, extortion, and oppression. Crawford v. Wick, 18 Ohio St. 190.

A contract between a manufacturer and a storekeeper, that the former shall furnish the trade of his workmen to the latter, and that the latter shall pay 8 per cent on all sales, is not against public policy, nor in restraint of trade. George v. E. Tenn. Coal Co., 15 Lea (Tenn.), 455; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 425.

An agreement between several stockholders of a corporation not to sell their stock, nor to give powers to vote, is in restraint of trade and against public policy. Fisher v. Bush, 35 Hun (N. Y.), 641.

A and B were rival manufacturers of washing-machines. Held, that a contract under which A discontinued business and became B's partner for five years, a scale of selling prices being agreed on, was not void as in restraint of trade. Dolph v. Troy Laundry Machinery Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 553.

A covenant in restraint of trade is not necessarily invalid so far as the covenantee has in his own business an interest in enforcing it; and where the business is the selling of liquor, such a condition was held not opposed to public policy. Watrous v. Allen, 57 Mich. 362.

The limitation must not embrace the whole State, a fortiori the United States. Peltz v. Eichell, 62 Mo. 171; Dean v. Emerson, 102 Mass. 480; More v. Bonnett, 40 Cal. 251; Wright v. Ryder, 36 Cal. 242.

An agreement not to manufacture or sell friction-matches anywhere in the United States except in one State and Territory, is not void as in restraint of trade. Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 35 Hun (N. Y.), 421.

The restriction must not go beyond what is necessary for the protection of the other party. Calt v. Tourle, 4 Ch. 659; Leather Cloth Co. v. Lorisont, 9 Eq. 349; Allsopp v. Wheatcroft, 15 Eq. 61; Grasselli v. Lowden, 11 Ohio St. 349; Chappell v. Brockway, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 157; Gilman v. Dwight, 13 Gray (Mass.), 356; Cal. S. N. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258; Dunlop v. Gregory, 10 N. Y. 241; Long v. Towl, 42 Mo. 545; Hubbard v. Miller, 27 Mich. 15; Beard v. Dennis, 6 Ind. 200. In the following cases the agreement was pronounced void as not being limited in space: Alger v. Thacker, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 51; Albright v. Teas, 37 N. J. Eq. 171; Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 520; Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87; Callahan v. Donnolly, 45 Cal. 152; Taylor v. Beauchard, 13 Allen (Mass.), 370;

More v. Bonnett, 40 Cal. 251; Wright v. Ryder, 36 Cal. 342. In the last three cases cited, the restriction extended over the State. In Oregon S. N. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 64, 67, the court say: "This country is substantially one country, especially in all matters of trade and business, and it is manifest that cases may arise in which it would involve too narrow a view of the subject to condemn as invalid a contract not to carry on a particular business within a particular State," and the agreement in that case was held valid, although the restriction extended over all of California and part of Washington Territory. And see Stearns v. Barrett, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 443.

A covenant in restraint of trade which is unlimited in regard to space except by the words "so far as the law allows," is not void either as being against public policy or as being too uncertain in its terms to be capable of being enforced. Such a covenant is to be construed as providing for a restraint to the full extent that the doctrine of law as interpreted by the courts will allow a person to contract himself out of the privilege of trading in a particular business, and will be enforced so as to secure to the covenantee the full benefit of that which he has purchased from the covenantor. Davies Bros. & Co. v. Davies, 56 L. J. R. (Ch.) 481; 35 W. R. 697.

An agreement not to carry on the business of a tailor within a circuit of ten miles from Charing Cross for the period of three years was held not unreasonable either in point of space or in point of time, and therefore valid. Nicoll v. Beere, 53 L. T. N. S. 659.

An agreement not to engage in a particular business in a particular town or city, so long as the person to whom the business was sold should prosecute it there, held, not in restraint of trade. Gill v. Ferris, 82 Mo. 156.

An agreement not to engage in a particular business in a certain town for five years, leaving the party at liberty to engage in any other business in that town, or in that business in any other town, is valid as only a partial or limited restraint upon trade. Washburne v. Dorsch, 32 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 551.

A covenant not to carry on the business of a manufacturer for a period of five years under a particular name or style, is not void as being a covenant in restraint of trade, notwithstanding that it may be unlimited in point of space. Vernon v. Hallam, 35 W. R. 156; 56 L. J. R. (Ch.) 155, in which Labouchere v. Dawson (L.

R. 13 Eq. 322) is said to be no longer a binding authority.

A condition in a sale of a dry-goods business not to engage in that business for five years, with no limitation as to place, was held void. Wiley v. Baumgardner, 97 Ind. 66; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 427.

A, a livery-stable keeper, sold for its value his stock partly to B and partly to C, agreeing not to engage in business in the same stable for five years; held, that the agreement was valid, although in restraint of trade, and was based on a good consideration, and that C having left the business and refusing to sue for the breach, B might sue alone and recover the whole sum named as liquidated damages. Johnson v. Gwinn, 100 Ind. 466. See Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 64; Beal v. Chase, 31 Mich. 490. Where the stipulations in a contract are divisible, and a part impose reasonable and a part unreasonable restraints, the contract is regarded as severable, and effect is given to one part to the exclusion of the other. A contract not to engage in a particular trade for a specified time "in the city of St. Louis or at any other place" was held to be good as to the restriction imposed in St. Louis. Peltz v. Eichell, 62 Mo. 171. A covenant not to be interested in a certain business within a certain county, nor for five years in the United States, was held good as to the county. Dean v. Emerson, 102 Mass. 480. See also Lange v. Werk, 2 Ohio St. 20; Beard v. Dennis, 6 Md. 200. Contra, More v. Bonnet, 40 Cal. 251.

A contract restraining one of the parties from the exercise of a trade within a limited locality, when there is reasonable ground for the restriction, is valid. Where a county or city or borough is named as a limit, and an unreasonable extent of territory in addition is also named, the covenant is divisible, and may be valid as to the particular place which is a reasonable limit. Smith v. Fell, 9 East. Rep. (Pa.) 773.

A for a valuable consideration covenanted with B not to engage in the manufacture of ochre "in the county of Lehigh or elsewhere." He afterwards did engage in said business in said county. B having filed a bill for an injunction, held, that the contract was reasonable, that it was divisible as to place, and that an injunction was the proper remedy to enforce it. Smith's Appeal, 113 Pa. St. 579.

If the contract be good in other respects the mere fact that the restraint is indefinite in point of time does not invalidate it. Bowser v. Bliss, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 344; Goodman v. Henderson, 58 Ga. 567; Cook v. Johnson, 47 Conn. 175.

In New Jersey the rule as to contracts in restraint of trade is that contracts imposing a restraint larger than the necessary protection of a party are void. Hence a covenant that a physician shall not "at any time hereafter" engage in practice at Newark is void, since it would prevent such physician from practising there though the other party to the covenant should die. Mandeville v. Harman, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 37.

If the contract is valid no evasions of it will be tolerated. Whitney v. Slayton, 40 Me. 224; Treat v. Shoninger Melodeon Co., 35 Conn. 543; Richardson v. Peacock, 28 N. J. Eq. 151; Duffy v. Shockey, 11 Ind. 70; Smith v. Martin, 80 Ind. 260. Contracts in restraint of trade if valid at common law will be specifically enforced in equity, and a breach of them be restrained by injunction. Butler v. Burleson, 16 Vt. 176; Angier v. Webber, 14 Allen (Mass.), 211; Cobbs v. Niblo, 6 Brad. (Ill.) 60; Cook v. Johnson, 47 Conn. 175; Baumgarten v. Broadway, 77 N. Car. 8; Beard v. Dennis, 6 Ind. 200; Baker v. Pottmeyer, 75 Ind. 451; Ewing v. Johnson, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 202; Richardson v. Peacock, 36 N. J. Eq. 40; Ellis v. Jones, 56 Ga. 504; Hubbard v. Miller, 27 Mich. 15; Doty v. Martin, 32 Mich. 462; Hale's Appeal, 44 Pa. St. 458; Harkinson's Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 196; Keeler v. Taylor, 53 Pa. St. 467. Agreements in restraint of trade may be assigned, with the business in aid of which the contract was entered into, by the parties thereto. Hedge v. Lowe, 47 Iowa, 137; Gompers v. Rochester, 56 Pa. St. 194; Guerand v. Daudelet, 32 Md. 561; Cal. Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258. Cases have arisen where physicians have sold their good-will and agreed not to practise medicine within certain distances of their former location. See Butler v. Burleson, 16 Vt. 176; Linn v. Sigbee, 67 Ill. 75; Mell v. Mooney, 30 Ga. 413; Doty v. Martin, 32 Mich. 462; Dwight v. Hamilton, 113 Mass. 175; Haldeman v. Simonton, 55 Iowa, 144; Smith v. Smith, 41 Wend. (N. Y.) 468; Amedon v. Gannon, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 384; Spier v. Lambdin, 45 Ga. 319.

Within ten miles of a village means within ten miles in every direction from the centre of the village. Cook v. Johnson, 47 Conn. 175.

One who agrees not to practise as a physician in a certain city "and vicinity," is properly enjoined from practising within ten miles of the city limits. Tim- merman v. Dever, 52 Mich. 34; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 240; 23 Am. L. Reg. 50.

The law as to restraint of trade has never been extended to a business protected by a patent. Morse Twist Drill & Machine Co. v. Morse, 103 Mass. 73. Nor to a business which is a secret and not known to the public, because the public has no rights in the secret. Peabody v. Norfolk, 98 Mass. 452; Jarvis v. Peck, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 118; Hard v. Seeley, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; Vickery v. Welch, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 523.

An agreement between individuals who have formed themselves into a corporation for the purpose of manufacturing and selling a certain patented article, and by the terms of which a uniform price is fixed for the sale of the article by the members of the company, which price could only be charged by the company, but which puts no restraint upon the amount of production or sale of the article by the members of the company, is not void as being in restraint of trade or against public policy. Cent. Roller Shade Co. v. Cushman, 9 East. Rep. (Mass.) 560; s. c., 9 N. E. Rep. 629; 3 New Eng. Rep. 505; 143 Mass. 353.

Restrictions imposed in conveyances that the property conveyed shall not be used for certain purposes fall under the general principles governing contracts in restraint of trade. A restriction that a lot should not be used for a tavern was held valid. Holmes v. Martin, 10 Ga. 503; Loubenheimer v. Mann, 17 Wis. 542. In the following cases the agreements were held void as tending to create a monopoly: Taylor v. Blanchard, 13 Allen (Mass.), 370; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346; Crawford v. Wick, 18 Ohio St. 190; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co., 68 Pa. St. 173; Arnot v. Pittston Coal Co., 68 N. Y. 558.

An agreement between a grocer and a baker, the tendency of which was to enhance the price of bread and create a monopoly, in consideration of a fixed money payment, was held in restraint of trade and invalid on the ground of unreasonableness. Haywards v. Burnell, 83 Law Times, 223.

An agreement made by a drummer with a purchaser not to sell a certain kind of goods to any one else in the same town is not contrary to public policy. Keith v. Hirschberg Optical Co., 2 S. W. Rep. (Ark.) 777.

Contracts between railroad and telegraph companies vesting in the latter the exclusive right to use or occupy the right of way of the former for the erection of telegraph poles and other pur-

53. General Rules Relating to Illegality.—When the immediate object of an agreement is unlawful, the agreement is void. Where there are contained in the same instrument distinct engagements, by which a party binds himself to do certain acts, some of which are legal and some illegal at common law, the performance of poses in connection with their business of transmitting messages, etc., by telegraph, are void, as in general restraint of trade, and tending to create monopolies. W. U. Tel. Co. v. Amer. Union Tel. Co., 65 Ga. 160; W. U. Tel. Co. v. B. & S. W. R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 130; W. U. Tel. Co. v. A. U. Tel. Co., 9 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 72; W. U. Tel. Co. v. Balto., etc., Tel. Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 12; W. U. Tel. Co. v. Nat. Tel. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 660. And see W. Va. Transp. Co. v. Pipe Line Co., 22 W. Va. 600; W. U. Tel. Co. v. B. & O. Tel. Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 12; B. & O. Tel. Co. v. W. U. Tel. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 319. Contract not to run a steamboat on certain waters held void. Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Hale, 1 Wash. 283. See as to agreements to "corner" grain, Raymond v. Leavitt, 46 Mich. 447; and as to stock, Dqs Passos on Stock Brokers and Stock Exchanges, 454.

It is not unlawful for workmen to form themselves into a society and agree not to work for any person who shall employ any journeyman or other person not a member of such society after notice given him to discharge such workman. Commonwealth v. Hunt, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 111. Nor is it illegal for "workmen to form and act as an association for the purpose of protecting themselves against the 'encroachments' of their employers, and to agree in furtherance of such object not to teach others their trade unless by consent of the society." Snow v. Wheeler, 113 Mass. 179. And see Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen (Mass.), 499; Master Stevedores' Assoc. v. Walsh, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 1. For instances of combinations by workmen held to be unlawful at common law, see Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1; State v. Donaldson, 32 N. J. L. 151.

An agreement contained in the rules of a trade-protection society providing that no member should employ any traveller, carman, or outdoor employee who had left the service of another member without his consent in writing, until after the expiration of two years from his leaving such service, was held void as an unreasonable restraint on trade. Mineral Water Bot. Ex. & Tr. Prot. Soc., 31 Solic. Journ. 626. A contract by which the owners of several water-rights in a certain stream agree with each other, under a penalty of $10,000, "agreed and liquidated damages," not to sell to certain parties now or hereafter endeavoring to obtain possession of such rights, and not to make any settlement or compromise with such parties, except by the written consent of the others, no limit of time being set, was held void as against public policy, being analogous to a contract in restraint of trade, and also as imposing a restraint and condition upon compromises or settlements of litigation and disputes, which are favored by law. Ford v. Gregson, 14 Pac. Rep. (Mont.) 659.

An agreement by several that one shall, on behalf of all, bid for a public contract or at a sale by auction, is not unlawful unless entered into for the purpose of stifling competition. Kearney v. Taylor, 15 How. (U. S.) 494, 519; Huntington v. Bardwell, 46 N. H. 492; Bellows v. Russell, 20 N. H. 427; Bank v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 159; Smith v. Greenlee, 2 Dev. L. (N. Car.) 126; Goode v. Hawkins, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 393; McMinn v. Phipps, 3 Sneed (Tenn.), 196; Small v. Jones, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 122; James v. Fulcrod, 5 Tex. 512; Marie v. Garrison, 83 N. Y. 14; Marsh v. Russell, 66 N. Y. 288; Smith v. Ullman, 58 Md. 183; Switzer v. Skiles, 8 Ill. 529; Hunt v. Elliott, 80 Ind. 245; Phippen v. Stickney, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 384; Jenkins v. Frink, 30 Cal. 586; Breslin v. Brown, 24 Ohio St. 565. Compare Atcheson v. Mallon, 43 N. Y. 147; Woodruff v. Berry, 40 Ark. 251. But an agreement not to bid if made for the purpose of stifling competition is unlawful. Hannah v. Fife, 27 Mich. 172; Gibbs v. Smith, 115 Mass. 592; Swan v. Chorpensing, 20 Cal. 182; Wooten v. Hinkle, 20 Mo. 290; Gardiner v. Morse, 25 Me. 140; Ingram v. Ingram, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 188; King v. Winants, 71 N. Car. 469; Gulick v. Ward, 5 Halst. (N. J.) 87; Jones v. Caswell, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 29; Brisbane v. Adams, 3 N. Y. 129.

A contract to prevent competition in bidding for public work is contrary to public policy, and cannot be enforced. Hunter v. Pfeiffer, 9 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 124.

those which are legal may be enforced, though the performance of those which are illegal cannot.<sup>1</sup> Where any part of an entire consideration is unlawful, all promises founded upon it are void.<sup>2</sup> Where the immediate object or consideration of an agreement is not unlawful, but the intention of both parties, at the time of the agreement, is unlawful, or one party's intention is unlawful to the knowledge of the other, the agreement is void. If the unlawful intention of one party is not known to the other at the date of the agreement there is a contract voidable at the option of the innocent party, if he discovers that intention at any time before the contract is executed.<sup>3</sup> An agreement may be made void by its

1. Pigot's Case, 11 Co. Rep. 27, b.; Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moo. P. C. 152, 201; Penna. Co. v. Wentz, 37 Ohio St. 333, 339; Ohio v. Board of Education, 35 Ohio St. 519, 527; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 221; Erie R. Co. v. Union L. & E. Co., 35 N. J. L. 240; Presbury v. Fisher, 18 Mo. 50; Leavitt v. Palmer, 3 N. Y. 19, 37; W. U. Tel. Co. v. B. & S. W. R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 130. Contra, Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. Car. 328.

In the case of an alternative promise, one branch of which is lawful and the other unlawful, the lawful branch can be enforced. Hanauer v. Gray, 25 Ark. 350.

"Where you cannot sever the illegal from the legal part of a covenant the contract is altogether void; but where you can sever them, whether the illegality be created by statute or by the common law, you may reject the bad part and retain the good." Willes, J., Pickering v. Ilfracombe R. Co., L. R. 3 C. P. 250; U. S. v. Bradley, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 343, 360-363; Hynds v. Hays, 25 Ind. 31, 39; State v. Findley, 10 Ohio, 51.

2. Waite v. Jones, 1 Bing. (N. Car.) 656, 662; Carleton v. Whitcher, 5 N. H. 196; Pettit's Adm'r v. Pettit's Distributees, 32 Ala. 288; Collins v. Murrell, 2 Met. (Ky.) 163; Kimbrough v. Lane, 11 Bush (Ky.), 556; Chandler v. Johnson, 39 Ga. 85; Filson's Trustees v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; Bixby v. Moore, 51 N. H. 402; Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87; Foley v. Speir, 100 N. Y. 552; Perkins v. Cummings, 2 Gray (Mass.), 258; Woodruff v. Hinman, 11 Vt. 592; Snider v. Willey, 33 Mich. 483; Covington v. Threadgill, 88 N. Car. 186; Railroad Co. v. Taylor, 6 Col. 1; McQuade v. Rosecrans, 36 Ohio St. 442; James v. Jellison, 94 Ind. 292.

When a note is given in payment of an account, some of the items of which are legal and some illegal, although an action would still lie for so much of the account as is made up of lawful items, the note itself is entirely void. That the plaintiff cannot recover on the note to the extent of the lawful items, although they are distinctly severable from the unlawful, see Widoe v. Webb, 20 Ohio St. 431; Carleton v. Woods, 28 N. H. 290; Deering v. Chapman, 22 Me. 488; Cotton v. McKenzie, 57 Miss. 418; Pacific Guano Co. v. Mullen, 66 Ala. 582. Contra, Shaw v. Carpenter, 54 Vt. 155; Hynds v. Hays, 25 Ind. 31. It is no defence to an action on a note given in part payment of an account that part of the account is for goods sold in violation of law if the items for goods lawfully sold exceed the amount of the note. Warren v. Chapman, 105 Mass. 87.

3. Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 272; Pearce v. Brooks, L. R. 1 Ex. 213. An action will not lie for the price of goods sold which the seller knew were purchased for the purpose of being used in aid of the rebellion. "With whatever impunity a man may lend money or sell goods to another who he knows intends to devote them to a use that is only malum prohibitum or of inferior criminality, he cannot do it without turpitude when he knows or has every reason to believe that such money or goods are to be used for the perpetration of a heinous crime, and that they were procured for that purpose." Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 342, 346; Tatum v. Kelly, 25 Ark. 209; Oxford Iron Co. v. Quinchett, 44 Ala. 487; Milner v. Patton, 49 Ala. 423; Roquemore v. Alloway, 33 Tex. 461; Smitherman v. Sanders, 64 N. Car. 522; Lewis v. Latham, 74 N. Car. 283. Contra, Ruckman v. Lightner's Exrs., 24 Gratt. (Va.) 19; Wallace v. Lark, 12 S. Car. 576; Tedder v. Odom, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 68. The rule generally prevails in America that the bare knowledge of the vendor that the property sold is designed to be applied to a use unlawful, but not amounting to a felony or crime involving great moral turpitude, will not prevent a recovery based on the sale. Tracy v. Talmadge, 14 N. Y. 162; Bickell v. Sheets, 24 Ind. 1; Michael v. Bacon, 49 Mo. 474; Cheney v. Duke, 10 G. & J. (Mod.) 11; Steele v. Curle, 4 Dana (Ky.), 381; Bishop v. Honey, 34 Tex. 252; Armfield v. Tate, 7 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 258; Hubbard v. Moore, 24 La. Ann. 591; McKinney v. Andrews, 41 Tex. 363; Rose v. Mitchell, 6 Col. 102. But see Finch v. Mansfield, 97 Mass. 89; Suit v. Woodhall, 113 Mass. 391; Wilson v. Stratton, 47 Me. 120; Territt v. Bartlett, 21 Vt. 184; McConike v. McMann, 27 Vt. 95. Compare Spurgeon v. McElwain, 6 Ohio, 442. In Ely v. Webster, 102 Mass. 304, and Adams v. Couillard, 102 Mass. 167, it was held that at all events mere reasonable cause of belief without actual knowledge on the part of the seller of the goods that the purchaser buys for an unlawful use does not prevent recovery of the price; and see Brunswick v. Vallean, 50 Iowa, 120. If goods are sold in a State where the sale is lawful, although the vendor knows that the purchaser buys them for the purpose of resale in another State where their sale is unlawful, he may recover their price in the latter State. Hill v. Spear, 50 N. H. 253; Green v. Collins, 3 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 494; Sortwell v. Hughes, 1 Curt. (U. S. C. C.) 244; Tuttle v. Holland, 43 Vt. 542; Smith v. Godfrey, 28 N. H. 379; Webber v. Donnelly, 33 Mich. 469; Jameson v. Gregory's Exrx., 4 Met. (Ky.) 363; McIntyre v. Parks, 3 Met. (Mass.) 207. But if in any case the vendor does anything beyond making the sale to aid the unlawful purpose of the vendee he cannot recover. Arnot v. Pittston, etc., Coal Co., 68 N. Y. 558; Foster v. Thurston, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 322; Skiff v. Johnson, 57 N. H. 475; Aiken v. Blaisdell, 41 Vt. 655; Gaylord v. Soragen, 32 Vt. 110; Bancher v. Mansel, 47 Me. 58.

Money lent to be used in an unlawful manner cannot be recovered. Cannon v. Bryce, 3 B. & Ald. 179; White v. Buss, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 448; Plumer v. Smith, 5 N. H. 553; Cutler v. Welsh, 43 N. H. 497; Ruckman v. Bryan, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 340; Oxford Iron Co. v. Spradley, 46 Ala. 98; Critchter v. Holloway, 64 N. Car. 526. But that mere knowledge by the lender of the borrower's illegal purpose will not prevent a recovery, is held in Jones v. Bank, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 455; McGavock v. Purycar, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 34; Henderson v. Waggoner, 2 Lea (Tenn.), 133; Lewis v. Alexander, 51 Tex. 578; Walker v. Jeffries, 45 Miss. 160; Howell v. Stewart, 54 Mo. 400. If a building be let with an intent that it shall be used for an unlawful purpose the lessor cannot recover the rent. Ralston v. Brady, 20 Ga. 449. See Smith v. White, 1 Eq. 626; Riley v. Jordan, 122 Mass. 231. That bare knowledge by the lessor of the lessee's intended unlawful use of the premises will not prevent his recovering rent. see Udike v. Campbell, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 570. Compare Lyman v. Townsend, 24 La. Ann. 625. An owner of property who has contracted to sell or let it may rescind the contract upon learning that the other party means to use it for an unlawful purpose. Cowan v. Milbourn, L. R. 2 Ex. 230; but see O'Brien v. Brietenbach, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 304. But a completely executed transfer of property, though made on an unlawful consideration, is valid, and cannot afterwards be set aside. Ayerst v. Jenkins, 16 Eq. 257; Moore v. Adams, 8 Ohio, 372; Thomas v. Cronise, 16 Ohio, 54; Railroad Co. v. Mathers, 71 Ill. 592, 598; Levet v. His Creditors, 22 La. Ann. 105; Adams v. Barrett, 5 Ga. 404, 414; Setter v. Alvey, 15 Kan. 157; Dixon v. Olmstead, 9 Vt. 310; Worcester v. Eaton, 11 Mass. 368; Dumont v. Dufore, 27 Ind. 263; Ratcliffe v. Smith, 13 Bush (Ky.), 173. In a series of cases in Ohio growing out of a note secured by mortgage of real estate given to compound a felony the decisions were as follows: In an action on the note the payee was held not entitled to recover, on account of the illegality of the consideration. Roll v. Raguet, 4 Ohio, 400. The same result was reached in a proceeding by scire facias on the mortgage. Raguet v. Roll, 7 Ohio, pt. 1, 76. The mortgagee then brought ejectment on the mortgage, the condition having been broken, and recovered a judgment for possession of the land. Raguet v. Roll, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 70; Acc. Williams v. Englebrecht, 37 Ohio St. 383. Subsequently the mortgagor was allowed to redeem. 14 Ohio, 38. An insurance on a ship or goods is void if the voyage covered by the insurance is, to the knowledge of the owner, unlawful. Wilson v. Rankin, L. R. 1 Q. B. 163; Dudgeon v. Pembroke, L. R. 9 Q. B. 581, 585; 3 Kent Com. 262. And see Kelly v. Ins. Co., 97 Mass. 288; Johnson v. Ins. Co., 127 Mass. 555, cases of contract of insurance against fire. Compare further, on the general head of agreements made with an unlawful purpose, Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 342. In Sprott v. U. S., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 459, it was held that a buyer of cotton from the Confederate Government, knowing that the purchase-money would be applied in support of the rebellion, would connection with an unlawful purpose though subsequent to the execution of it. To have this effect it must be part and parcel of one unlawful scheme.<sup>1</sup> Any security for the payment of money under an unlawful agreement is itself void, even if the giving of the security was not part of the original agreement.<sup>2</sup> If the condition of a bond is unlawful, the whole bond is void.<sup>3</sup>

54. Discharge of Contract—Meaning of Term.—A contract is discharged when the legal relations which it created have ceased to exist.

55. Discharge by Agreement—Express Rescission of Executory Contracts.—An executory contract—that is, one which has not been acted upon—may be discharged by the simple agreement of the parties that it shall no longer bind either of them. The consideration for the promise of each party is the renunciation by the other of his rights under the contract. Each abandons his rights in consideration that the other will do the like. And it must be shown that the agreement was mutual, and not a mere waiver of his rights by one party.<sup>4</sup> not be recognized by the United States courts as owner of the cotton. Field, J., dissented on the grounds that it was a question not of contract but of ownership, and that in deciding on title to personal property the de facto government existing at the time and place of the transaction must be regarded. See also Walker's Exrs. v. U. S., 106 U. S. 413.

1. See Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258, 269; McBlair v. Gibbes, 17 How. (U. S.) 232; Miltenberger v. Cooke, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 421.

2. Fisher v. Bridges, 2 E. & B. 118; Graeme v. Wroughton, 11 Ex. 146; Geere v. Mare, 2 H. & C. 339; Clay v. Ray, 17 C. B. N. S. 188; Edwards v. Skirving, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 548; Coulter v. Robinson, 14 S. & M. (Miss.) 18; Lowe v. Young, 59 Iowa, 364. But see Bly v. Bank, 79 Pa. St. 453; Swan v. Scott, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 155.

3. Co. Litt. 206, b.; Shep. Touchs. 372; Duvergier v. Fellows, 10 B. & C. 826.

A subsequent agreement to vary the performance of a contract in a way that would make it unlawful is merely inoperative, and leaves the original contract in force. City of Memphis v. Brown, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 289.

"When it is sought to avoid an agreement not being in itself unlawful on the ground of its being meant as part of an unlawful scheme or to carry out an unlawful object, it must be shown that such was the intention of the parties at the time of making the agreement." Lord Howden v. Simpson, 10 A. & E. 793, 818; Sawyer v. Taggart, 14 Bush (Ky.), 727, 734; Wall v. Schneider, 59 Wis. 352, 359; Fraser v. Hill, 1 McQu. 392; Clarke v. Foss, 7 Biss. (U. S. C. C.) 540, 558; Lowe v. Young, 59 Iowa, 364, 371; Favor v. Philbrick, 7 N. H. 326.

As to when money paid under an unlawful agreement can be recovered back, see article on ASSUMPSIT.

As to the law by which the legality of a contract is to be determined, see article on CONFLICT OF LAWS.

Extrinsic evidence is admissible to show that the object or consideration of an agreement is in fact illegal. See EVIDENCE.

4. Blood v. Enos, 12 Vermont, 625.

Thus, in an action for breach of promise of marriage, the defendant pleaded that before breach he had been exonerated and discharged by the plaintiff from the performance of his promise. It was objected that the plea was bad, in that it showed a mere waiver by the plaintiff, unsupported by any consideration. The court held that the form of the plea was allowable. "Yet we think," said Alderson, B., "that the defendant will not be able to succeed upon it . . . unless he proves a proposition to exonerate on the part of the plaintiff, acceded to by himself; and this, in effect, will be a rescission of the contract." King v. Gillett, 7 M. & W. 55.

Proof of the rescission by parol of a contract for the sale of land should be clear and convincing in order to entitle a court to act on it. Davis v. Benedict, 4 S. W. Rep. (Ky.) 339.

One who has explicitly abandoned his

56. Rule as to Executed Contracts.—But this rule applies to the contract only so long as it remains executory; for when it has become executed wholly or in part by the passage of a consideration, it cannot be discharged by a simple agreement, but only by performance of its terms, by a release under seal, or by an accord and satisfaction.<sup>1</sup>

57. Negotiable Instruments.—In England promissory notes and bills of exchange may be discharged by express waiver, without any consideration.<sup>2</sup> In America commercial instruments are treated as upon the same footing with ordinary simple contracts.<sup>3</sup>

58. Change of Terms.—As an executory contract may be altogether discharged by mutual agreement, so it may be changed.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, only one side of the agreement is changed, unless the rights under a contract and accepted an alternative is bound by his decision. He cannot again claim under the contract. Kimmerle v. Hass, 53 Mich. 341.

Where two persons enter into a contract, the one to prospect for the discovery of mining claims and the other to furnish the necessary money, provisions, etc., and do the discovery work on claims found, attend to the surveys, sink shafts, etc., such a contract, having been partly performed on both sides, cannot be regarded as rescinded unless the circumstances show an absolute abandonment of the contract as to future enterprises. Proof of negotiations for an abandonment is insufficient to establish a rescission. The parties cannot treat the contract as binding and as rescinded at the same time. Chadbourn v. Davis, 13 Pac. Rep. (Col.) 721.

If one in his contract calls for an article of a particular quality or style of workmanship and elects to accept in lieu of it one of another kind, he discharges the other party from the obligation of furnishing an article which complies with the specifications of the contract, and he becomes bound by a new implied contract to pay for the article he has accepted what it is reasonably worth. Presb. Ch. v. Hoopes Co., 8 Atl. Rep. (Md.) 752.

1. Foster v. Dawber, 6 Ex. 839.

To illustrate: If A, in consideration of certain services to be rendered by B, promises to build a house for B, before the work has begun the parties may release each other from all the obligations which they have incurred by simply agreeing to abandon the contract. But if A entered upon the work and built the house, an agreement to rescind the contract would be without consideration; A would surrender his claim to B's services, but B would give nothing in return. So if the contract were broken one party would become entitled to a right of action against the other, and a mere waiver of the right without any consideration, or the formality of a seal, would not be binding.

2. The reason for this difference is, that bills of exchange are governed by the law merchant, which was imported into England from countries where a debt might be released by express words, unaccompanied by any satisfaction or solemn instrument; and promissory notes, having been put upon the same footing with bills of exchange by statute 3 and 4 Anne, c. 9, are governed by the same rule. Baron Parke in Foster v. Dawber, 6 Ex. 839.

3. Crawford v. Millspaugh, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 87; Seymour v. Minturn, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 169; Bender v. Sampson, 11 Mass. 42; Notes to Cumber v. Wane, 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 667-8.

4. McNish v. Reynolds, 95 Pa. St. 483; Brown v. Everhard, 52 Wis. 205.

If they alter its terms it is equivalent to making a new contract, consisting of the new terms and what remains unchanged of the original contract. The old agreement being incorporated in the new, the latter must be construed with reference to it. Carr v. Wallachian Petroleum Co., L. R. 1 C. P. 636.

The undertaking of each party to do something different from that which he first agreed to do, furnishes a consideration for the promise of the other. A subsequent agreement to vary the performance of a contract in a way that would make it unlawful is merely inoperative, and leaves the original contract in force. City of Memphis v. Brown, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 289.

old contract be rescinded the new agreement will be without consideration.<sup>1</sup>

59. New and Inconsistent Contract.—If a new agreement be made which is inconsistent with the former agreement so that they cannot subsist together, the old one is impliedly discharged by the new one.<sup>2</sup>

1. If A contract to do work for B for one thousand dollars, while the contract is still in force, a subsequent promise by B to pay him fifteen hundred dollars would be a mere gratuitous undertaking, for a promise to pay a man for doing that which he is already bound to do, is obviously as barren of consideration as a promise to pay a man for doing nothing. Seybolt v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 562.

A promise by a lessee to pay rent in advance, when the rights of the parties are already fixed by the lease and there is nothing either of detriment to the promisee or of benefit to the promisor beyond the obligations mutually established in such lease, is nudum pactum. Hasbrouck v. Winkler, 48 N. J. L. 431.

When the old contract has been rescinded the parties are discharged from all their obligations under it, and of course may make a new agreement upon whatever terms they please. Lattimore v. Harsen, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 330; Munroe v. Perkins, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Magarity v. Shipman, 2 Mackey (D. C.), 334.

The case of Holmes v. Doane, 9 Cushing (Mass.), 135, furnishes a good illustration of the practical application of this principle. There, A agreed to carry B in his vessel to California, if B, who was a carpenter, would work in preparing her for sea and during the voyage. Before the vessel was ready for sea A refused to carry B, unless he would sign the shipping papers, and pay twenty-five dollars. B assented to this arrangement, and signed the papers, but failing to pay the amount agreed upon was left on shore by A, against whom he subsequently brought suit. The court held that he could not recover. Dewey J., in delivering the judgment, said: "The defendant might show that, at a period prior to the sailing of the vessel, he gave notice to the plaintiff that he would not comply with his original agreement, and would hold himself responsible for all damages by reason of such breach of contract; and that the plaintiff thereupon elected not to avail himself of his right to recover damages therefor, but chose to make a new contract, giving the defendant more advantageous terms, . . . and such new contract would be a valid contract between the parties."

If A agrees to sell to B goods at a certain price, and then repudiates his agreement, and demands more, and B agrees to pay and does pay more, he cannot maintain an action for breach of the agreement. Rogers v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 440.

A agreed to do certain work, and found the material on which he had to work was not as represented. He then threatened to rescind the contract, and B, the chief contractor, told him to go on, and that A would be compensated for the extra work. A did so. Held, he could recover the additional compensation, and that the promise was not made voluntarily and without consideration. Osborne v. O'Reilly, 10 N. J. Law Jour. (N. J.) 216; s. c., 9 Atl. Rep. 209. See also Cooke v. Murphy, 70 Ill. 96; Coyner v. Lynde, 10 Ind. 282; Lawrence v. Davey, 28 Vt. 264; Bishop v. Busse, 69 Ill. 403; Stewart v. Keteltas, 36 N. Y. 388, 392; Rollins v. Marsh., 128 Mass. 116; Moore v. Detroit Locomotive Works, 14 Mich. 266; Goebel v. Linn, 47 Mich. 489. Compare Endriss v. Belle Isle Ice Co., 49 Mich. 279. Contra, that they hold what one is legally bound to do a consideration for a promise. Ayres v. Railroad Co., 52 Iowa, 478; McCarty v. Hampton Bldg. Ass'n, 61 Iowa, 287; Festerman v. Parker, 10 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 474; Erb v. Brown, 69 Pa. St. 216; Vanderbilt v. Schreyer, 91 N. Y. 392.

2. Where A made an agreement with B for the performance of various literary labors, and subsequently a new agreement was entered into between them by which A agreed to devote his whole time and attention to the editing of a certain newspaper, it was held that the second agreement rescinded the first on the ground of inconsistency. Patmore v. Colburn, 1 C. M. & R. 65. See also Taylor v. Hilary, 1 C. M. & R. 741; Thornhill v. Neats, 8 C. B. N. S. 831; Bacon v. Cobb, 45 Ill. 47; Stow v. Russell, 36 Ill. 18; Chrisman v. Hodges, 75 Mo. 413.

It results from the doctrine that a new and inconsistent agreement will discharge a former contract, that a surety will be:

60. Change of Parties.—A contract may be discharged by an agreement which, while leaving the manner of performance unchanged, substitutes new parties in place of those originally bound.<sup>1</sup>

61. Form of New Agreement.—Contracts under Seal—Statute of Frauds.—It is a maxim of the common law that every contract or agreement ought to be dissolved by matter of as high a nature as that which first made it obligatory—Unumquodque dissolvitur eodem ligamine quo ligatur.<sup>2</sup> Consequently, at the common law a contract under seal could not be discharged or varied by a subsequent parol agreement.<sup>3</sup> In America this doctrine has been somewhat modidischarged if the principals alter the original contract in any material point. As the surety is not a party to the new agreement he is not bound by it, and he is not liable under the original contract, for that has been discharged by the new agreement. Whitcher v. Hall, 5 B. & C. 276; General Steam Navigation Co. v. Rolt, 6 C. B. N. S. 550; Polak v. Everett, L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 669.

"The law requires that if there is any agreement between the principals with reference to a contract to the performance of which another is bound as surety, he ought to be consulted in regard to any proposed alteration, and if he is not, or does not consent to the alteration, he will be no longer bound, and the court will not inquire whether it is or not to his injury." Paine v. Jones, 76 N. Y. 274, 278-9; Rowan v. Sharp's Rifle Mfg. Co., 33 Conn. 1, 23; Bensinger v. Wren, 100 Pa. St. 500. See title PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

1. Inst. Lit., III. xxx, § iii; Mac-kelvey's Roman Law, § 538. Suppose A owes B one hundred dollars, and B owes C one hundred dollars, the three may meet and agree that, instead of A paying B, and B paying C, A shall pay the money directly to C; C accepts A as his debtor and discharges B, and B in his turn discharges A. The consideration for A's promise to pay C is the abandonment by B of his claim against A; for B's release of A, C's release of B; and for C's release of B, A's promise to pay him the one hundred dollars. Thus there is a consideration for the promise of each. Tatlock v. Harris, 3 Term. 180; 1 Pars. on Contrs. *217.

Where H. sold a wagon to A., who afterward sold it to C., and C. agreed to pay H., who consented to accept him as his debtor instead of A., it was held that the debt due by A. to H. was extinguished. Heaton v. Angier, 7 N. H. 397.

The principle is frequently applied when a partnership is changed by the retirement of a partner, or the addition of new members to the firm. When a partner retires from a firm and a new member is taken in to fill his place, the creditors of the old firm may agree to release the retiring partner, and look to the new firm for the payment of their claims. Kountz v. Holthouse, 85 Pa. St. 235; Story on Part., §§ 152, 153. As the new partner is not liable for the debts of the old firm, his assumption of liability is a sufficient consideration for the creditor's promise to release the retiring partner. "I apprehend the law to be now settled," said Parke, B., in Hart v. Alexander, 2 M. & W. 484, 493, "that if one partner goes out of a firm and another comes in, the debts of the old firm may, by the consent of all the three parties,—the creditor, the old firm, and the new firm,—be transferred to the new firm."

2. Broom's Legal Maxims, *877.

3. It was no answer to an action for a breach of covenant, that the defendant had abstained from performing at the request of the plaintiff, although if he had been prevented from performing by the immediate act of the plaintiff he would have been excused. In West v. Blake-way, 2 M. & G. 729, an action of covenant was brought by the executor of a lessor against the lessee, upon a covenant in the lease to yield up the demised premises at the expiration of the term, together with all erections and improvements which should be made during the term. The breach assigned was the removal of a greenhouse. The defendant pleaded, that it was agreed between the lessor and himself that if he would erect a greenhouse upon the demised premises he should be at liberty to pull it down and remove it at the expiration of the term, and that he, confiding in the agreement, did erect such a greenhouse. The court held that the plea was bad. The original contract being under seal, performance of it could not be dispensed with by an agreement not under seal. See also Thompson v. Brown, 7 Taunt. 656; Spence v. Healey, 8 Ex. 668; Cordwent fied, and a parol dispensation of performance is generally held to be a good defence to an action on a sealed instrument, if it is supported by a sufficient consideration, or has caused the breach for which the party who gave it seeks to recover.<sup>1</sup> A simple contract may be discharged by a subsequent parol agreement, whether the original contract were reduced to writing, or consisted simply of spoken words. When, however, the original contract is required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing, the better opinion is that it cannot be varied by a subsequent contract which is not in writing. As the new contract is rendered void by the Statute of Frauds, it ought not to affect the rights acquired under the former agreement.<sup>2</sup> There are cases, however, which decide the other way.<sup>3</sup> And in England it would seem that a contract which is required by the statute to be in writing may be absolutely discharged by an oral agreement, although it cannot be varied without a writing.<sup>4</sup>

62. Provisions for Discharge.—A contract may contain provisions which make it determinable under certain circumstances.

63. Non-fulfilment of a Specified Term.—The parties may introduce into their contract a provision that if one of them fail to fulfil a certain specified term, the other shall be entitled to treat the agreement as at an end.<sup>5</sup>

v. Hunt, 8 Taunt. 596; Mayor of Berwick v. Oswald, 1 E. & B. 295; Woodruff v. Dobbins, 7 Blackford (Ind.), 582; Hogencamp v. Ackerman, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 133.

1. U. S. v. Howell, 4 W. C. C. R. 620; Fleming v. Gilbert, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 528; Le Fevre v. Le Fevre, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 241; Dearborn v. Cross, 7 Cowen (N. Y.), 48; Canal Co. v. Ray, 101 U. S. 522; Esmond v. Van Benschoten, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Notes to Cumber v. Wane, 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 665, 666; 2 Am. L. C. (5th Ed.) 590-594. See also Nash v. Armstrong, 10 C. B. N. S. 259.

In an action upon a contract under seal, which is executory on both sides, the defendant may show, in defence, that before any part of the contract had been executed, and before a breach, the parties agreed to vary its terms, and that he offered to perform as thus varied, but it is necessary to show an assent to the change on the part of the plaintiff, upon a common understanding as to the change. Holdsworth v. Tucker, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 499.

2. Goss v. Lord Nugent, 5 B. & Ad. 58; Noble v. Ward, L. R. 2 Ex. 135; Ogle v. Earl Vane, L. R. 2 Q. B. 275; s. c., L. R. 3 Q. B. 272; Hickman v. Haynes, L. R. 10 C. P. 598; Hasbrouck v. Tappen, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 200; Swain v. Seamans, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Hill v. Blake, 97 N. Y. 216; Notes to Cumber

v. Wane, 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 669.

3. Cummings v. Arnold, 3 Met. (Mass.) 486; Stearns v. Hall, 9 Cushing (Mass.), 31.

4. Willes, J., in Noble v. Ward, L. R. 2 Ex. 135; Lord Denman, C. J., in Goss v. Lord Nugent, 5 B. & Ad. 58.

5. The difference between this mode of discharge and that by breach is this: When the parties have agreed that one of them shall have an option to dissolve the contract if certain of its terms are not observed, upon the non-fulfilment of the specified terms the party may exercise his option, and if he elects to treat the contract as at an end it will be discharged. But when a term of the contract is broken, and there is no agreement that the breach of that term shall operate as a discharge, it is always a question for the courts to determine whether or not the default is in a matter which is vital to the contract; for if it is not, the contract will not be discharged. L. R. 7 Ex. 7.

The case of Head v. Tattersall furnishes an instance of a contract which contained a provision for its discharge. The plaintiff, on Monday, bought a horse of the defendant which was warranted to have been hunted with the Leicester hounds. By a condition of the contract he was to be at liberty, up to the Wed-

64. Occurrence of Particular Event.—The parties may introduce a provision that the contract shall be discharged upon the performance of a condition, or the occurrence of a particular event.<sup>1</sup>

65. Option to Discharge—Domestic Service.—A continuing contract may contain a provision which makes it determinable at the option of either party; and such a provision is sometimes incorporated into it by implication from known usage and custom.<sup>2</sup> A connesday evening following the sale, to return the horse if it did not answer to its description. While it was in his possession, though not through any default or neglect on his part, it met with an accident which depreciated its value. The horse did not answer to the description, and the plaintiff returned it before the Wednesday evening, and brought an action for the price which he had paid. Held, that he was entitled to recover. Cleasby, B., said: "As a time for returning the horse was expressly fixed by the contract, an accident occurring within the time, from a cause beyond the plaintiff's control, ought not to deprive him of his right. . . . The effect of the contract was to vest the property in the buyer, subject to a right of rescission in a particular event, when it would revert in the seller. I think, in such a case, that the person who is eventually entitled to the property in the chattel ought to bear any loss arising from any depreciation in its value, caused by an accident for which nobody is in fault. Here the defendant is the person in whom the property is re-vested, and he must therefore bear the loss." See also Elphick v. Barnes, L. R. 5 C. P. D. 321.

1. Thus, a bond generally contains a condition that if the obligor does some act the obligation shall be void. So it is usual to insert in a charter-party a provision that the ship-owner shall be excused if the performance of the contract be prevented by the occurrence of certain specified events. In Geipel v. Smith, L. R. 7 Q. B. 404, the defendant engaged to load his vessel with a cargo of coals at a spout, as directed by the plaintiff, and, having loaded, to proceed to Hamburg, and there deliver the coals. The charter-party excepted certain risks, one of which was "the restraints of princes and rulers." Before anything had been done by either party in furtherance of the contract, war broke out between France and Germany, and the port of Hamburg was declared to be blockaded. The defendant threw up the charter-party, and refused even to go to the spout and load his cargo. The plaintiff sued him for a breach of contract, claiming that he was bound to load his cargo, that part of the contract not coming within one of the excepted risks; but the court held that he could not recover. "It was an entire contract," said Cockburn, C. J., "and there was an insuperable obstacle to the performance of it in toto; and the defendant was, therefore, justified in not performing that part of it which was possible, but which, without the possibility of performing the other part of it, was useless."

Where a contract for the sale of a quarry provided that the agreement to purchase should be null and void in case no profits were made, or the premises should be abandoned by reason of vendees "believing that the quarry could not be a paying one or a profitable one to them in their estimation," in a suit brought for a balance of the purchase-money, it being shown that vendees made no profit, and believed the quarry unprofitable, held, that vendor was not entitled to recover, and it was error to submit to the jury the question of possible profits. Krum v. Mersher, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 334.

Stipulations that the law imports into a contract become as effectually a part of its terms as though they were expressly written therein. Snow v. Ind., B. & W. R. Co., 7 West. Rep. (Ind.) 264.

It is an implied term in every contract with a carrier, that if a loss is caused "by the act of God, or the public enemy, or a defect inherent in the thing carried," the carrier shall be excused. See Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. D. 423. For meaning of "act of God" see article on ACT OF GOD.

2. Offer and Acceptance—Discharge by Agreement.—Where to either party to a written contract is reserved the option of rescinding it before a certain day, and one party before the day returns the contract, begging for an extension of the time for its performance, this is equivalent to a rescission if the extension is not agreed to. Thayer v. Allison, 109 Ill. 180.

If one man employ another in the capacity of clerk, provided that each shall have a right to put an end to the tract for domestic service may be determined by the servant upon giving the customary notice, and by the master upon giving the customary notice, or paying the servant his wages for the length of time to which he is entitled to notice. The length of the notice is regulated by the custom of the place where the contract is made.<sup>1</sup> When the hiring is for no certain time, and the wages are not paid at fixed periods, the contract may be determined at the will of either party, without giving any notice.<sup>2</sup>

66. Discharge by Performance.—When the terms of a contract have been fulfilled the contract is discharged. In order that performance may work a discharge, both the parties must have done all that the contract required them to do. When one party has performed his part of an agreement he is free from further liability, but the contract is not discharged until the other party also has performed his part of the agreement.<sup>3</sup>

If there be a partial or total failure of performance, the contract is broken.

67. Payment of Less than is Due—By Promissory Note.—It is an old rule of the common law that the payment of a sum less than that which is due cannot operate as a satisfaction of the debt.<sup>4</sup> relation at any time upon giving one month's notice to the other, the employment may be determined by complying with the express terms of the agreement.

Under a contract of employment for a stated term at a sum certain, which gives the employer the right to discharge the employee for "unfitness," and constitutes him sole judge of the sufficiency of reasons for discharge, he has no right to discharge the employee before the expiration of the term because he refuses to consent to a reduction in wages. Winship v. Portland League Base-ball & Athletic Assn., 7 Atl. Rep. (Me.) 706, 78 Me. 571.

1. Parker v. Ibbetson, 4 C. B. N. S. 347; Add. on Confs. 438-9; Whart. on Confs., § 718; Leake, 673.

In England, the hiring of a servant without any engagement as to the duration of the service is construed to be a hiring for a year, determinable by a month's warning, or the payment of a month's wages. Nowlan v. Ablett, 2 C. M. & R. 54. Such an implication does not generally exist in America.

2. Thus in Coffin v. Landis, 46 Pa. St. 426, the defendant employed the plaintiff to sell his lands. Nothing was said in regard to the time during which the agreement should continue. The defendant discharged the plaintiff without previous notice, and the court held that he was justified in doing so, as the agreement was determinable at the will of either party, without warning to the other.

3. The performance of a contract should be a fair and reasonable performance of that which the parties intended should be done—not a performance which merely satisfies the letter of the agreement, but a substantial bona fide compliance with its spirit. When and by whom a contract should be performed, and whether or not certain acts amount to a performance, are questions which can only be answered by referring to the agreement itself.

4. If one man owes another one hundred dollars, and the creditor agrees to accept fifty dollars in satisfaction of his claim, and gives the debtor a receipt in full, he may immediately afterwards sue him for the other fifty dollars. But if the creditor receives some collateral thing in satisfaction, it is a good discharge of the debt. The courts will not inquire into its value. Thus, a horse worth fifty dollars might be received in satisfaction of a debt of one thousand dollars, while a payment in cash of five hundred dollars would leave the debtor liable to a suit for the balance of the debt. The reason for this difference is, that money having a fixed value, a small sum cannot possibly be worth as much as a larger; whereas a collateral thing, for all that appears, may be worth as much as, or more than, the debt. It was accordingly held in the early cases, that a promissory note for a less amount than the debt could not be received in satisfaction. "If £5 be no satisfaction for £15, why is a simple con-

When a creditor accepts a promissory note from his debtor, the question arises whether the note is an absolute extinguishment of the debt, or an extinguishment conditional upon its payment at maturity.

In England, and in most of the United States, in the absence of other evidence, the presumption is that a promissory note was intended as a conditional payment, so that if it be not paid at maturity payment of the debt may be enforced as if the note had not been given.<sup>1</sup> In Massachusetts, Maine, and Vermont the presumption is that it was intended as an absolute payment.<sup>2</sup> The difference, however, is only one of presumption, for it is universally held that if the creditor accepts the note in full satisfaction and discharge of the debt, his only remedy is upon the note.<sup>3</sup>

68. Tender.—As performance will discharge a contract, so in some cases will an attempt to perform, although actual performance be not accomplished.<sup>4</sup> tract to pay £5 a satisfaction of another simple contract of three times the value?" Cumber v. Wane, 1 Strange, 426; s. c., 1 Sm. L. C. 633.

But this doctrine has been overruled by the modern cases, and it is now held that a promissory note may be a good satisfaction, although it be for a less amount than the debt. Goddard v. O'Brien, L. R. 9 Q. B. D. 39; s. c., 21 Amer. L. Reg. N. S. 637; Mechanics' Bank v. Huston, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 389.

If a promissory note may be a satisfaction for a sum greater than its face value, there seems to be no reason why a money payment should not have the same effect, for a promissory note cannot possibly be worth more than its face value in cash. It is probable that the old doctrine of the common law will sooner or later be abandoned, and a creditor who chooses to receive a partial payment in satisfaction of his demands be held to his agreement. See Goddard v. O'Brien, L. R. 9 Q. B. D. 39.

1. Sard v. Rhodes, 1 M. & W. 153; Sayer v. Wagstaff, 5 Beav. 423; Peter v. Beverly, 19 Pet. (U. S.) 532; Robinson v. Read, 9 B. & C. 455; Maillard v. Duke of Argyll, 6 Sc. N. R. 938; In re London, etc., Bank, 34 L. J. Ch. 418; Article on "Payment in Something Else than Money," 11 Cent. L. J. 360; Morriss v. Harveys, 75 Va. 726; Sayre v. King, 17 W. Va. 562; In re Parker, 11 Fed. Rep. 397.

Where the debtor gives a new security which is void and avoided, the creditor may sue him on the original contract. Walker v. Mayo, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 195.

2. 2 Pars. on Contrs. (7th Ed.)* 624, and notes.

3. So, if the creditor is guilty of laches, and omits duly to present the bill or note, and to give notice of its dishonor if not paid, the instrument becomes money in his hands as between him and the person from whom he received it. Peacock v. Pursell, 14 C. B. N. S. 728. So if the note were originally received as cash, as bank bills are usually received, the payment would be absolute. Guardians of the Poor v. Greene, 1 H. & N. 889.

4. Thus, if a vendor tenders goods in pursuance of the terms of a contract, and satisfies all the requirements of the contract with respect to delivery and so forth, but the vendee refuses to accept them, the vendor may successfully maintain or defend an action for the breach of the contract. Startup v. Macdonald, 6 M. & G. 593.

But when performance consists in the payment of money, a tender of payment does not discharge the contract, but rather establishes the liability of him who makes the tender, for, in general, he is liable to pay the sum which he tenders whenever he is called upon to do so. But it puts a stop to accruing damages or interest for delay in payment, and if an action be brought for the debt it entitles the defendant to costs. Cornell v. Green, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 14.

In order that a man may profit by his tender, he must from the time of making it continue ready and willing to carry it into effect. Consequently, if after having made a tender he refuses to pay his debt, he loses the benefit of his tender.

The tender must be an actual production of the money, and a proffer of it to the creditor. The entire sum due must be offered in such a form that the credi-

69. Impossibility.—A contract may be impossible of performance at the time when it is made; or it may become impossible by events happening subsequently to its formation.

70. Known to Both Parties.—A contract to do a thing which both the promisor and promisee know to be physically impossible of performance imposes no obligation upon either party.<sup>1</sup>

71. Legal Impossibility.—A contract to do a thing which is legally impossible is void.<sup>2</sup>

72. Non-existence of Subject-matter.—When a contract is made upon the supposition that a certain thing is in existence, and it turns out that the thing never was in existence, or had been destroyed at the time when the contract was made, the agreement is void as having been made under a mistake.<sup>3</sup> tor may take the exact amount of his debt. The tender must be unconditional. A debtor has no right to annex any conditions to which the creditor has a right to object. For instance, he has no right to demand a receipt in full. But if he merely asks a receipt for the amount which he tenders, the tender will be good. See article on "The Requisites to a Valid Tender," 17 Amer. L. Reg. N. S. 745, where the cases are collected. See title TENDER.

1. No expectation is created in the breast of the promisee, and therefore no wrong is done him if the promise is not fulfilled. It is not so much the impossibility of performance which renders the agreement invalid, as it is the absence of that true consent which is the life of every contract. "I think," said Brett, J., in Clifford v. Watts, L. R. 5 C. P. 588, "it is not competent to a defendant to say that there is no binding contract, merely because he has engaged to do something which is physically impossible. I think it will be found in all the cases where that has been said, that the thing stipulated for was, according to the state of knowledge of the day, so absurd that the parties could not be supposed to have so contracted." Accordingly, if a man should bind himself to do something which may be deemed to be within the range of possibility, but which has never yet been done, and is not even known to be possible, he would be responsible in damages if he failed to perform his agreement. A contract to construct a vessel which should be able to cross the Atlantic in five days would very probably be valid at the present day, although such a thing has never yet been done; while one hundred years ago such a contract would have been thought absurd. "I am not prepared to say," said Willes, J., in the case last cited,

"that there may not be cases in which a man may have contracted to do something which in the present state of scientific knowledge may be utterly impossible, and yet he may have so contracted as to warrant the possibility of its performance by means of some new discovery, or be liable in damages for the non performance, and cannot set up by way of defence that the thing was impossible." The domain of impossibility is being constantly narrowed by the increase of scientific knowledge.

2. Where a servant agreed, in consideration of certain services to be rendered to himself, to discharge a debt due to his master, it was held that the agreement was void, because it was legally impossible for the servant to discharge a debt due to his master. Harvy v. Gibbons, 2 Lev. 161. See also Faulkner v. Lowe, 2 Ex. 595; Stevens v. Coon, 1 Pinney (Wis.), 356.

3. The parties make no contract because the thing which they supposed to exist, and the existence of which was indispensable to the making of their contract had no existence. Gibson v. Pelkie, 37 Mich. 380; Franklin v. Long, 7 Gill & John. (Md.) 407; Strickland v. Turner, 7 Ex. 208.

Where a cargo of corn was sold while on its way by sea to London, and it turned out that prior to the sale the cargo had been destroyed, it was held that the contract of sale was invalid. "It appears to me clearly," said Lord Cranworth, "that what the parties contemplated, those who bought and those who sold, was that there was an existing something to be sold and bought." No such thing existing, the contract was void. Couturier v. Hastie, 5 H. L. C. 673.

So a covenantee was discharged from the performance of his covenant to dig

73. Known to One Party.—When the impossibility of performance is known to the promisor, but not known to the promisee, the former is liable in damages for a failure to perform.<sup>1</sup>

If the possibility is known to the promisee, but not to the promisor, the former cannot sue the latter for a failure to perform.<sup>2</sup>

74. Effect of Change in Law.—Parties must always be considered as contracting with reference to the law as it existed at the time of the contract. If performance of a contract becomes wholly or in part impossible by reason of a change in the law, the contract is to that extent discharged.<sup>3</sup> one thousand tons of potter's clay yearly, upon the discovery that at the time of making the covenant there was not so much as one thousand tons of clay under the land. Clifford v. Watts, L. R. 5 C. P. 577.

Where A by an agreement in writing "leased" to B "all the clay that is good No. 1 fire-clay on his land" described for a term of three years, subject to the condition that B "shall mine or cause to be mined, or pay for, not less than 2000 tons of clay every year, and shall pay therefor twenty-five cents per ton for every ton of clay monthly as it is taken away," it was held that if clay of the quality mentioned and in quantity sufficient to justify its mining could not by the use of due diligence be found on the land, then there was no obligation to pay the amount agreed on in case of failure to mine. Brick Co. v. Pond, 38 Ohio St. 65; Cook v. Andrews, 36 Ohio St. 178.

In an action by one railroad company against another for breach of contract to co-operate in securing such legislation as would result in an appropriation of public lands for the roads, it appearing that all available lands were exhausted, so that the effort would necessarily have been futile, held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Dubuque S. W. R. Co. v. Ced. Rap. & Mo. Riv. R. Co., 66 Iowa, 366.

One who agrees with a mortgagee to pay a mortgage on its assignment to him is released from his promise by a foreclosure and sale by the mortgagee. Un. Sav. Inst. v. Hill, 139 Mass. 47.

Where a contract is entered into upon an assumption of the parties of the existence of a certain fact as to which it afterwards appears that the parties were mutually mistaken, the contract obligation ceases. Muhlenberg v. Henning, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 144.

1. If a married man promises to marry a single woman who does not know that he is already married, he is liable for a breach of his promise. Wild v. Harris, 7 C. B. 999; Millward v. Littlewood, 5 Ex. 775.

2. Leake on Cont. 692.

3. Atkinson v. Ritchie, 10 East. 534; Mayor of Berwick v. Oswald, 3 E. & B. 665; Brown v. Mayor of London, 9 C. B. N. S. 726; s. c., in Ex. Ch. 13 C. B. N. S. 828; Jones v. Judd, 4 N. Y. 412; Brick Presby. Ch. v. N. Y., 5 Cowen (N. Y.), 538.

The laws subsisting at the time of making a contract and where it is to be performed enter into and form a part of it as if they were expressly referred to or incorporated in its terms. Holbrook v. Ives, 7 West. Rep. (Ohio) 201.

In Baily v. De Crespigny, L. R. 4 Q. B. 180, the defendant demised certain premises to the plaintiff, and covenanted that neither he nor his assigns would, during the term, permit any but ornamental buildings to be erected on a certain paddock fronting the demised premises. Subsequently a railroad company took the paddock, under powers given to them by an act of Parliament, and built a railway station upon it. In an action for breach of the covenant it was held that the defendant was discharged from covenant by the act of Parliament, which compelled him to assign to the railway company, and so put it out of his power to perform.

See also Exposito v. Bowden, 7 E. & B. 763, 783. The outbreak of war dissolves a partnership previously existing between subjects of two hostile countries. Griswold v. Waddington, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 57; 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 438; Matthews v. McStea, 91 U. S. 7, 9; The William Baggally, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 377, 407; Taylor v. Hutchinson, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 536; Hubbard v. Matthews, 54 N. Y. 43, 48, 49. If a creditor has an agent in the country of the enemy, payment by the debtor to the agent resident there is lawful. Ward v. Smith, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 447; Buchanan v. Curry, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 137; Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561, 573; Rodgers v. Bass,

75. Temporary Change.—When the impossibility created by the law is only temporary, the contract will be suspended, but will revive again when the impediment is removed.<sup>1</sup>

46 Tex. 505; Hale v. Wall, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 424. And so is the investment there by the agent of money in his hands. Bar-tow Co. Commrs. v. Newell, 64 Ga. 699. A provision in a contract of insurance that no action shall be maintainable on it unless begun within twelve months next after the occurrence of the loss, does not in case of war between the countries of the contracting parties operate like a statute of limitations by letting the term open and expand itself so as to receive within it the term of legal disability created by the war, and then close together at each end of that period, so as to complete itself as though the war had never occurred, but by having become impossible of performance by law is wholly discharged. Semmes v. Ins. Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 158. Where by the terms of a contract for work and labor the full price is not to be paid until the work is completed, and a complete performance becomes impossible by act of the law, the contractor may recover for the work actually done at the full prices agreed upon. Jones v. Judd, 4 N. Y. 411.

To discharge the contract the law must make performance impossible not merely more expensive or burdensome. Baker v. Johnson, 42 N. Y. 126.

1. In one case a vessel was detained in port for two years by an embargo, yet the owners were held responsible for not performing their contract when the embargo was removed. Hadley v. Clarke, 8 T. R. 259; Baylies v. Fettyplace, 7 Mass. 325; Palmer v. Lorillard, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 348; Odlin v. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. C. C. 312; McBride v. Ins. Co., 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 299. In Statham v. Ins. Co., 93 U. S. 24, the court was called upon to pass upon the effect of the non-payment of the stipulated annual premium in a policy of life insurance conditioned to be void on non-payment of the premium, where the failure to pay was caused by the intervention of war between the territories in which the insurance company and the assured respectively resided, which made it unlawful for them to hold intercourse. A majority of the court held: 1. That such a policy "is not an insurance from year to year like a common fire policy, but the premiums constitute an annuity the whole of which is the consideration for the entire insurance for life; and the condition is a condition subsequent, making by its non-performance the policy void." 2. That time is of the essence of the contract, and a failure to pay involves an absolute forfeiture, but that under the circumstances if the company insisted on a forfeiture the assured was entitled to the equitable value of the policy arising from the premiums actually paid, i.e., the difference between the cost of a new policy and the present value of the premiums yet to be paid on the forfeited policy when the forfeiture occurred. Compare Crawford v. Ins. Co., 5 C. L. J. 100; Abell v. Ins. Co., 18 W. Va. 400. 3. That the doctrine of revival of contracts suspended during war "cannot be invoked to revive a contract which it would be unjust or inequitable to revive—as where (as here) time is of the essence of the contract, or the parties cannot be made equal." Waite, C. J., and Strong, J., dissented, holding that failure to pay the annual premium when it matured put an end to the policy, notwithstanding the default was occasioned by the war. Acc., Dillard v. Ins. Co., 44 Ga. 119; Worthington v. Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 372; Tait v. Ins. Co., 1 Flipp. (U. S. C. C.) 288. Clifford and Hunt, JJ., dissenting, held that the contract was only suspended during the war and revived when peace ensued. Acc., Ins. Co. v. Duerson, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 630; Ins. Co. v. Hilliard, 37 N. J. L. 444; Cohen v. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 610; Sands v. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 626; Hamilton v. Ins. Co., 9 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 234; Ins. Co. v. Atwood's Admx., 24 Gratt. (Va.) 497; Ins. Co. v. Warwick, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 614; Stratham v. Ins. Co., 45 Miss. 581; Ins. Co. v. Clopton, 7 Bush (Ky.), 179.

Where the condition is possible at the date of the instrument, and subsequently becomes impossible by the act of God, or of the law, or of the obligee, the obligation and the condition both become void. Co. Litt. 206, a; Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366, 369; Brown v. Dillehanty, 4 S. & M. (Miss.) 713; People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 570; Badlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 284; People v. Manning, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 297; Whitney v. Spencer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 39; Blake v. Niles, 13 N. H. 459; Scully v. Kirkpatrick, 79 Pa. St. 324, 331; Marshall v. Craig, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 386, 390; Hopkins v. Commonwealth, 18 C. L. J. 77; People v. Tubbs, 37 N. Y. 586; Belding v. State, 25 Ark. 315. When a person arrested in one State on a criminal charge,

76. Subsequent Impossibility.—When the performance of a contract, which was possible when made, becomes impossible, the question arises whether the promisor is liable in damages for his failure to perform.

77. Absolute Undertakings.—The general rule is, that when a party has undertaken absolutely to do a thing, he is not excused from liability by the occurrence of events which render the performance of his promise impossible.<sup>1</sup> and released under his own and his bail's recognizance that he will appear on a day fixed, and abide the order and judgment of the court on process from which he has been arrested, goes into another State, and while there is, on the requisition of the governor of a third State, for a crime committed in it, delivered up, and is convicted and imprisoned in such third State, the condition of the recognizance has not become impossible by act of law so as to discharge the bail; "the law which renders the performance impossible, and therefore excuses failure, must be a law operative in the State where the obligation was assumed, and obligatory in its effect upon her authorities." Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 366; s. c., 36 Conn. 242. And see Cain v. State, 55 Ala. 170; U. S. v. Van Fossen, 1 Dill. (U. S. C. C.) 406; Devine v. State, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 623; Withrow v. Commonwealth, 1 Bush (Ky.), 17; State v. Horn, 70 Mo. 466. Arrest and detention of the principal by Federal authority precluding his appearance will discharge the bail. Commonwealth v. Overby, 80 Ky. 208; Commonwealth v. Terry, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 383; Commonwealth v. Webster, 1 Bush (Ky.), 616; Belding v. State, 25 Ark. 315. Compare In re James, 18 Fed. Rep. 853; Shook v. People, 39 Ill. 443. Subsequent arrest and detention under the law of the same State or delivery of the principal by the governor of the same State on requisition of the governor of another State is such an act of the law as discharges the bail from liability. State v. Allen, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 258; Caldwell's Case, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 698; People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 570; State v. Adams, 3 Head (Tenn.), 259; Fuller v. Davis, 1 Gray (Mass.), 612; Way v. Wright, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 380; Medlin v. Commonwealth, 11 Bush (Ky.), 605; Peacock v. State, 44 Tex. 11; Smith v. Kitchens, 51 Ga. 158. Compare Wheeler v. State, 38 Tex. 173; Ingram v. State, 27 Ala. 17; Mix v. People, 26 Ill. 32.

1. School District v. Dauchy, 25 Conn. 535.

"We think it firmly established, both by decided cases and on principle, that where a party has either expressly or impliedly undertaken, without any qualification to do anything, and does not do it, he must make compensation in damages, though the performance was rendered impracticable by some unforeseen cause over which he had no control." Per Blackburn, J., in Ford v. Cotesworth, L. R. 4 Q. B. 134.

Where a charter-party required a ship to be loaded with the usual dispatch, it was held to be no answer to an action for delay in loading that a frost had stopped the navigation of the canal by which the cargo would have been brought to the ship in the ordinary course. Kearon v. Pearson, 7 H. & N. 386; Engster v. West, 35 La. Ann. 119. And an absolute contract to load a full cargo of guano at a certain island was not discharged by there not being enough guano there to make a cargo. Hills v. Sughrue, 15 M. & W. 253. See also Thiis v. Byers, L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 244. So where a contractor undertook to erect a bridge according to certain plans and specifications, he was not excused from performing his contract although he found that it was impossible to execute part of the work in the manner described in the plans. Thorn v. Mayor of London, L. R. 9 Ex. 163; in Ex. Ch. L. R. 10 Ex. 112; Aff'd in H. L. L. R. 1 App. Ca. 120. See also Jones v. St. John's College (Oxford), L. R. 6 Q. B. 115, 124.

A shipbuilder contracted to build, to a model to be approved by the purchaser, a vessel of certain specified dimensions and capacity. The ship, actually built to the approved model and delivered under a reservation of claim of damages, was deficient in carrying capacity to the extent of nearly 200 tons. In an action by the purchaser for damages for breach of contract, held, that it was no defence to show that it was impossible to build a seaworthy ship of the required dimension and carrying capacity according to the model. Gillespie & Co. v. Howden & Co., 12 C. of S. Cas. (Sc.) 800.

If a lessee agrees absolutely to assign

78. Duty Imposed by Law.—Where the duty or charge is imposed upon the party by the law, and not by his own contract, he will be excused from liability if performance of the duty becomes impossible without any default on his part.<sup>1</sup>

79. Destruction of Subject-matter.—Contracts whose performance depends upon the continued existence of a specified thing, are discharged by the destruction of the thing from no default of either party.<sup>2</sup> his lease, the lease containing a covenant not to assign without license, the contract is binding, and he must procure the lessor's consent. Lloyd v. Crispe, 5 Taunt. 247. Compare Canham v. Barry, 15 C. B. 597; Beebe v. Johnson, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 500. Where a railroad company agreed unconditionally to make a connection for the promisee with another railroad company, non-performance was held not excused by the refusal of the latter company to permit the connection to be made. Railroad Co. v. Reichert, 58 Md. 261, 274.

Where one contracts to build a house on the land of another, and performance becomes impracticable either by reason of a latent defect in the soil or the contract being to finish and deliver the house by a day named by reason of the accidental destruction of the building shortly before that day, he is not excused from performance; and performance not being excused, he cannot retain instalments paid on account. Tompkins v. Dudley, 25 N. Y. 272; School Dist. v. Dauchy, 25 Conn. 530; Stees v. Leonard, 20 Minn. 404; School Trustees v. Bennett, 27 N. J. L. 513. See Dermott v. Jones, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 1.

Still less will unexpected difficulty or inconvenience short of impossibility serve as an excuse. Jones v. U. S., 96 U. S. 24, 29; The Harriman, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 161; Harmony v. Bingham, 12 N. Y. 99; Booth v. Spuyten Duyvil R. M. Co., 60 N. Y. 487; Yonqua v. Mixon, 1 Pet. C. C. 221; Dodge v. Van Lear, 5 Cr. C. 278; Eddy v. Clement, 38 Vt. 486; Bacon v. Cobb, 45 Ill. 47; Hand v. Baynes, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 204; Bank v. Bent, 5 Allen (Mass.), 113; Harrison v. Railway Co., 74 Mo. 364; Adams v. Nichols, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 275.

A contract is not to be treated as having become impossible of performance if by any reasonable construction it is still capable in substance of being performed. The Teutonia, L. R. 4 P. C. 182. Compare Jones v. Holm, L. R. 2 Ex. 335; Williams v. Vanderbilt, 28 N. Y. 217; White v. Mann, 26 Me. 361.

1. Paradine v. Jane, Aleyn, 26; Phillips v. Stevens, 16 Mass. 238; 2 Story on Cont. § 1334.

2. Price v. Pepper, 13 Bush (Ky.), 42; Dexter v. Norton, 47 N. Y. 62; School Dist. v. Dauchy, 25 Conn. 530; Wells v. Calman, 107 Mass. 514; Thomas v. Knowles, 128 Mass. 22; Lovering v. Coal Co., 54 Pa. St. 291; Walker v. Tucker, 70 Ill. 527; The Tornado, 108 U. S. 342; Brumby v. Smith, 3 Ala. 123. Contra, Niblo v. Binsse, 3 Abb. App. Dec. 375; Whelan v. Ansonia Clock Co., 97 N. Y. 293; Cook v. McCabe, 53 Wis. 250; Hollis v. Chapman, 36 Tex. 1. Compare Lord v. Wheeler, 1 Gray (Mass.), 282; Rawson v. Clark, 70 Ill. 656.

In Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826, A agreed to give B the use of a music-hall on certain specified days, for the purpose of holding concerts. Before the days for performance arrived the music-hall was destroyed by fire. There was no clause in the contract providing for such a contingency. The court held that both parties were excused from performance of the contract. "Where, from the nature of the contract," said Blackburn, J., "it appears that the parties must from the beginning have known that it could not be fulfilled unless when the time for the fulfilment of the contract arrived some particular specified thing continued to exist, so that, when entering into the contract, they must have contemplated such continuing existence as the foundation of what was to be done; there, in the absence of any express or implied warranty that the thing shall exist, the contract is not to be construed as a positive contract, but as subject to an implied condition that the parties shall be excused in case, before breach, performance becomes impossible from the perishing of the thing without default of the contractor."

A contracted to erect certain houses, and B agreed to pay $2950 for the same, and to advance the money in instalments as the work progressed. After B had advanced $2048 under the contract, and before completion and delivery by A, the houses were destroyed by fire without the fault of either party. Held, in an action by A for the balance of the contract price, that he could not recover. Lawing v. Rintles, 2 S. E. Rep. (N. Car.) 252.

80. Personal Capacity of Parties.—A contract whose performance depends upon the personal capacity of the parties is discharged by their death or incapacitating illness.<sup>1</sup>

If one agrees to buy and another to sell a warehouse which is destroyed by inevitable accident before the contract time arrives, each party is discharged from his obligation. Powell v. Day, Sher., etc., R. Co., 12 Or. 488.

A lessee who had covenanted to work certain coal-mines was held to be excused from further performance of his covenant upon the mines becoming exhausted. Walker v. Tucker, 70 Ill. 527; Dewey v. School District, and note, 19 Amer. L. Reg. N. S. 550. But where the lessee in a mining lease covenants in unqualified terms to pay a fixed minimum rent, he is liable though the mine should turn out to be not worth working. Marquis of Bute v. Thompson, 13 M. & W. 487; McDowell v. Hendrix, 67 Ind. 513; Wharton v. Stoutenburgh, 46 N. J. L. 151.

The accidental destruction of a leasehold building, or the tenant's occupation being otherwise interrupted by inevitable accident, does not determine or suspend the obligation to pay rent. Leeds v. Cheetham, 1 Sim. 146; Lofft v. Dennis, 1 E. & E. 474; Gates v. Green, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 355; Linn v. Ross, 10 Ohio, 412; Hallett v. Wylie, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 44; Peterson v. Edmondson, 5 Harr. (Del.) 378; Niedelet v. Wales, 16 Mo. 214; Fowler v. Bott, 6 Mass. 63; Robinson v. L'Engle, 13 Fla. 482. But a lessee who, during the late civil war, was dispossessed by the military authorities and deprived of the use and control of the demised premises, his lessor having gone within the lines of the enemy, was held to be discharged from liability to the lessor for the rent accruing during the period of such dispossession. Gates v. Goodloe, 101 U. S. 612. And see Harrison v. Myer, 92 U. S. 111; Coogan v. Parker, 2 S. C. 255.

It is held in this country that the lessee of apartments in a building, his lease giving him no interest in the soil upon which the building stands, is released from his covenant to pay rent by the accidental destruction of the edifice. Graves v. Berdan, 26 N. Y. 498; Ainsworth v. Ritt, 38 Cal. 89; McMillan v. Solomon, 42 Ala. 356; Womack v. McQuarry, 28 Ind. 103. And see Winton v. Cornish, 5 Ohio, 477; Kerr v. Merchants' Exchange Co., 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 315; Stockwell v. Hunter, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 448; Bank v. Boston, 118 Mass. 125; Buerger v. Boyd, 25 Ark. 441. Contra, Helburn v. Moffard, 7 Bush (Ky.), 169.

In Whitaker v. Hawley, 25 Kans. 674, it was held that where by a single instrument real and personal property were leased for a gross rental, the personalty being a substantial part of the leased property, upon a total destruction by accident the lessee was entitled to an abatement of the rent equal to the proportionate rental value of the personalty. But see Bussman v. Ganster, 72 Pa. St. 285; Magaw v. Lambert, 3 Pa. St. 444; Sheets v. Selden, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 416, 424.

Where the tenant covenants to keep the building in repair, and at the end of the term to deliver it up in as good condition as when he received it, though the landlord protects himself by an insurance if the building is destroyed by fire, the tenant having rebuilt in performance of his covenant, has no claim upon the insurance money. Ely v. Ely, 80 Ill. 532. But the tenant having repaired, the insurance company can recover from the landlord the insurance which it has paid. Darrell v. Tibbitts, 5 Q. B. 560. In Whitaker v. Hawley, 25 Kans. 674, it was held that a stipulation in the lease that the lessee should insure for the benefit of the lessor "limits and qualifies the promise to pay rent, and that as the former becomes operative, the latter ceases to have force."

1. Hall v. Wright, E. B. & E. (96 E. C. L. R.) 793.

In Robinson v. Davison, L. R. 6 Ex. 269, the defendant agreed to play the piano at a concert to be given by the plaintiff on a specified day. Upon the day in question she was unable to perform, on account of illness. The plaintiff sued her for breach of contract, but failed to recover. "This," said Bramwell, B., "is a contract to perform a service which no deputy could perform. and which, in case of death, could not be performed by the executors of the deceased; and I am of opinion that by virtue of the terms of the original bargain incapacity either of body or mind in the

81. Option to Perform in One of Two Ways.—If a party has an option to perform his contract in one or other of two modes, and one of those modes becomes impossible, he is bound to perform it in the other mode.<sup>1</sup>

82. Impossibility Caused by Party.—When impossibility of performance is caused by the act of one of the parties, it is equivalent to a breach.<sup>2</sup>

83. Discharge of Contract by Breach—Forms of Breach.—A party to a contract may break it in one of three ways: (a) by renouncing his liabilities under it; (b) by rendering performance of his promise performer, without default on his or her part, is an excuse for non-performance. Of course the parties might expressly contract that incapacity should not excuse, and thus preclude the condition of health from being annexed to their agreement. Here they have not done so; and as they have been silent on that point, the contract must in my judgment be taken to have been conditional, and not absolute." See also Spalding v. Rosa, 71 N. Y. 40. "No action lies on an agreement promising to pay for tuition for a specified time, if during the whole of that time the promisor was prevented by illness from attending and receiving the tuition." Stewart v. Loring, 5 Allen (Mass.), 306.

Where a contract of service is terminable on giving a certain number of days' notice, if the servant becomes incapacitated to perform by vi majeure the necessity of notice is dispensed with. Fuller v. Brown, 11 Met. (Mass.) 440; Hughes v. Wamsutta Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.), 201.

A contract to marry is so far personal that executors in the absence of special damage to the personal estate cannot sue upon it. Chamberlain v. Williamson, 2 M. & S. 408; Hovey v. Page, 55 Me. 142. Nor does an action upon it survive against the personal representatives of the promisor. Wade v. Kalbfleisch, 58 N. Y. 282; Stebbins v. Palmer, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 71; Smith v. Sherman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 408; Chase v. Fitz, 132 Mass. 359; Lattimore v. Simmons, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 183; Grubb's Admr. v. Sult, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 203. See also Farrow v. Wilson, L. R. 4 C. P. 744; Scully v. Kirkpatrick, 79 Pa. St. 324; Allen v. Baker, 86 N. Car. 91; Siler v. Gray, 86 N. Car. 566; Yerrington v. Green, 7 R. I. 589. So a contract by a corporation with an individual to employ him for a stipulated time is dissolved by dissolution of the corporation. People v. Ins. Co., 91 N. Y. 174.

Where a contract creates between the parties merely a personal relation, the death of either dissolves it—as, for instance, a contract whereby a party agrees to receive and sell machines for the manufacturer. Howe Sew. Mac. Co. v. Rosensteel, 24 Fed. Rep. 583. Nor can the executor insist that the other party shall accept performance by himself in place of the decedent. Shultz v. Johnson's Admr., 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 497. A check given for a good consideration is not revoked by the death of the drawer before its presentment. Lewis v. International Bk., 13 Mo. App. 202.

1. Barkworth v. Young, 4 Drew. 25; Da Costa v. Davis, 1 B. & P. 242.

The rule of law is, that where the condition of a bond is to do one of two things, if one cannot be performed, unless it has become impossible by the act of the obligee, the obligor is bound to perform the other. Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417, 443.

If the conditions of a bond are impossible when it is made, the bond is single. If of two conditions one is impossible when it is made, the other must be performed. A condition is not impossible if it may be performed by the concurrence of the obligee, and in such case, if the obligee neglect or refuse to act, the condition is waived. Pindar v. Upton, 44 N. H. 358.

Where there is an option to perform in one of two ways and one becomes impossible, the presumption should be that the promisor should lose his election rather than that the promisee should lose the whole benefit of his contract. Jacquinet v. Boutron, 19 La. Ann. 30.

If one thing becomes impossible after the choice is determined, it is the same as if there had been an unconditional contract to do that thing. Brown v. Royal Ins. Co., 1 C. & E. 853.

2. See, infra, BREACH.

impossible; (c) by totally or partially failing to perform what he has undertaken.

84. Breach by Renunciation.—If before the time for performance of a contract has arrived one party announce to the other that he does not intend to perform his promise, the latter may treat the contract as broken, and bring an action immediately against the former for the breach. It is not necessary that he should postpone his suit until the time for performance has arrived.<sup>1</sup>

1. Halloway v. Griffith, 32 Iowa, 409; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 362; Burtis v. Thompson, 42 N. Y. 246; Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Nexsen, 84 Ind. 347; Grau v. McVicker, 8 Biss. C. Ct. 13; Nilson v. Morse, 52 Wis. 240; Zuck v. McClure, 98 Pa. St. 541. Contra in Massachusetts, Daniels v. Newton, 114 Mass. 530.

It might be argued that a contract could not be broken before the time when performance is due, because until then the promisee would not be entitled to performance, and therefore could not be injured by a refusal to perform. But the contractual relation begins immediately upon the making of the contract, and not at the time fixed for performance. Each party has a right to have this relation continued until the contract has been performed. "It is true, . . ." said Cockburn, C. J., in Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Ex. 111, 114, "that there can be no actual breach of a contract by reason of non-performance so long as the time for performance has not yet arrived. But, on the other hand, there is . . . a breach of the contract when the promisor repudiates it and declares he will no longer be bound by it. The promisee has an inchoate right to the performance of the bargain, which becomes complete when the time for performance has arrived. In the mean time he has a right to have the contract kept open as a subsisting and effective contract. Its unimpaired and unimpeached efficacy may be essential to his interests. His rights acquired under it may be dealt with by him in various ways for his benefit and advantage. Of all such advantage the repudiation of the contract by the other party, and the announcement that it never will be fulfilled, must of course deprive him. It is therefore quite right to hold that such an announcement amounts to a violation of the contract in omnibus, and that upon it the promisee, if so minded, may at once treat it as a breach of the entire contract, and bring his action accordingly."

The case of Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 E. & B. 678, is a leading case, and a good illustration of this principle. The defendant, on the 12th of April, agreed to employ the plaintiff as a courier for three months, the employment to begin upon the 1st of June. On the 11th of May the defendant wrote to the plaintiff that he had changed his mind, and declined his services. The plaintiff brought an action for breach of the contract on the 22d of May. The defendant claimed that the action was prematurely brought, as the service was not to begin until the 1st of June. The court, however, held that the refusal of the defendant to perform amounted to a breach, and entitled the plaintiff to bring his action immediately. In the recent case of Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Ex. 111, supra, an action was brought for the breach of a promise of marriage. The promise was to marry the plaintiff on the death of the defendant's father. While the father was still living the defendant announced his intention of not fulfilling his promise on his father's death, and broke off the engagement; whereupon the plaintiff, without waiting for the father's death, at once brought her action, and it was held that she was entitled to recover. See opinion of Cockburn, C. J., in which the law upon this subject is very fully and clearly stated.

In a lease of premises for a term of twenty-one years, determinable by the lessee at the end of the first four years by a six months' notice, the lessor covenanted to rebuild the premises after the expiration of the first four years of the term upon a six months' notice from the lessee requiring him to do so. Before the expiration of the first four years of the term the lessor on many occasions told the lessee that he would be unable to procure the money for rebuilding the premises. The lessee, in consequence of this statement by the lessor, gave the requisite notice, under the provisions of the lease, to determine the term at the end of the first four years. After the determination of the lease he continued to occupy the premises for some months, paying rent to the lessor's mortgagees, on the chance, as he stated, of the lessor's procuring the money to rebuild. The lessor being, however, unable to rebuild the premises, the lessee claimed damages against him for breach of the covenant to do so. Held, that the covenant to rebuild never having been actually broken, because the lessee had before the time for its performance determined the term, he could not recover unless there had been a breach of contract by anticipation within the doctrine of Hochster v. De la Tour, 2 E. & B. 678, and Frost v. Knight, 7 L. R. Ex. 111, by reason of a wrongful repudiation of his covenant by the lessor before the time of performance had arrived; that what had been said by the lessor did not under the circumstances of the case amount to such a repudiation; and that if it did, such repudiation before the time of performance arrived would not amount to a breach of the contract, unless the lessee elected to treat it as putting an end to the contract except for the purposes of an action for such breach, and the lessee had not under the circumstances so elected, and that he could not therefore maintain his claim. Quere, whether the doctrine of Hochster v. De la Tour can be applicable to the case of a lease or other contract containing various stipulations, where the whole contract cannot be treated as put an end to upon the wrongful repudiation of one of the stipulations of the contract by the promisor. Johnstone v. Milling, 16 Q. B. D. 460; 55 L. J. Q. B. 162; 54 L. T. N. S. 629; 34 W. R. 238.

An agent bought real estate in his own name and made a part payment, partly with money furnished by the principal and partly by his own note, giving back a mortgage to secure the note. He afterwards deeded the property to his principal but made a mistake in the name, which he promised to have corrected. The principal went into possession relying on said promise. The deed was returned, but it was shortly afterwards discovered that there was still a mistake in the grantee's name, and when asked to have the deed corrected the agent refused to do anything more about the title. In an action to recover the amount given to the agent by his principal, held, that the agent's refusal to carry out his part of the contract was equivalent to an abandonment on his part, and gave plaintiff the right to rescind and recover back his money. Nothe v. Nomer, 10 East. Rep. (Conn.) 210.

If a contract is wrongfully terminated by one party, the other party is entitled to recover for the breach thereof, without showing that he continued to be ready and willing to perform his part after such termination. Bond v. Carpenter; 8 Atl. Rep. (R. I.) 539.

A agreed to deliver at his convenience 400,000 brick to B. B refused to take more brick after some had been delivered, and A offered to deliver the balance. Held, that A was not obliged to tender all the brick in order to put B in default, and that A's right of action for a breach of contract was not waived by the fact that several times afterwards he offered to deliver the brick. Canda v. Wick, 100 N. Y. 127.

B agreed in writing to purchase from A rails to be rolled by the latter, "and to be drilled as may be directed." He refused to give directions for drilling, and at his request A delayed rolling any of the rails until after the time prescribed for their delivery, and then B advised A that he should decline to take any rails under the contract. Held, that B was liable in damages for the breach of the contract, and also that A was not bound to roll the rails and tender them to B. Hinckley v. Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Co., 121 U. S. 264; s. c., 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875, 17 Fed. Rep. 472. See also Allen v. Pennell, 51 Iowa, 537; Butler v. Butler, 77 N. Y. 472.

Where the defendant agreed to allow the plaintiff to dig sand on the former's land at places to be designated by the defendant, a refusal to designate a place was held to be a breach of the contract. Hurd v. Gill, 45 N. Y. 341; Warner v. Wilson, 4 Cal. 310.

When on the day fixed for the performance of a contract one of the parties refuses to perform unless unreasonable conditions are acceded to, there is a breach, which is not cured by the party changing his mind four hours afterwards and offering to perform. Bell v. Hoffman, 92 N. Car. 273.

A contracted to furnish B with 300 tons of steel, to be delivered as B might designate. A failed, and B going to A's place of business found it closed, but was told that A would open again in about a week. After a week had elapsed he went again, and was again told that A would start up in a short time. In about a month after the failure he called again on A with reference to the steel, and A said the thing was up, and there was no chance of starting again. Held, that this indicated no waiver of the demand, specification or designation necessary of time of delivery requisite to render

The promisee is not bound to treat the renunciation as a breach. He may, if he pleases, treat it as inoperative; but in that case he keeps the contract alive for the benefit of the other party, as well as his own. If the promisor withdraw the notice of his intention not to perform before the promisee has elected to treat it as a breach, the latter loses his right to treat the contract as broken, and the parties are in the same position that they would have been in if the notice had never been given.<sup>1</sup> So if the promisee declines

A liable for a breach of the whole contract. Spratt v. Mer. & Man. Nat. Bk., 7 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 98.

Where one party to a contract has refused to take further steps in its execution, the other need not wait for him to do so, especially if the subject-matter of it is spoiling in consequence of the delay. Hudson v. Feige, 58 Mich. 148.

The rule that one who has done anything that cannot be undone cannot demand a rescission, does not apply to things left undone with knowledge that the contract is repudiated. Metr'n El. R. Co. v. Manh. El. R. Co., 11 Daly (N. Y.), 373; s. c., 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 103.

Default or refusal is a cause of action on which the promisor may recover any loss he has incurred thereby; as in the case of an action for non-acceptance of goods, for not furnishing a cargo, etc. So with a special contract, e.g. Roberts v. Bury Commissioners, L. R. 4 C. P. 755; 5 C. P. 310; Lovell v. Ins. Co., 111 U. S. 264; Black v. Woodrow, 39 Md. 194; Curtis v. Smith, 48 Vt. 116; Hawley v. Smith, 45 Ind. 183, 202; Kugler v. Wiseman, 20 Ohio, 361; Smith v. Railroad Co., 36 N. H. 458, 493. Or he may rescind the contract and recover back any money he has already paid under it. Giles v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 181; U. S. v. Behall, 110 U. S. 338; Seipel v. Ins. Co., 84 Pa. St. 47. He may rescind the contract and recover the value of what he has done for defendant's benefit in performance of it. Chicago v. Tilley, 103 U. S. 146; Greene v. Haley, 5 R. I. 260; Connelly v. Devoe, 37 Conn. 570; Blood v. Enos, 12 Vt. 625; Derby v. Johnson, 21 Vt. 17; Moulton v. Trask, 9 Met. (Mass.) 577; Canada v. Canada, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 15.

Where one party to a contract under seal refuses to perform his part, the other may either sue on the contract for damages for the breach, or rescind the contract and recover in assumpsit the money paid for which he received no benefit. Am. Life Ins. Co. v. McAden, 109 Pa. St. 399.

Where a person on a contract of sale covenants to pay a sum whose amount is to be contingent on certain events, and is to be ascertained by arbitrators to be selected by the parties respectively to the contract, such person if he prevent any arbitration may be sued on a quantum valebat. Humaston v. Tel. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 20.

The mere insolvency of one of the parties to an executory contract of sale is not equivalent either to a rescission or a breach: it simply relieves the vendor from an agreement to give credit. Pardee v. Kenady, 100 N. Y. 121.

Payment for work done under a contract after breach thereof, without deduction for such breach, is not a waiver of the right to terminate the contract. Bond v. Carpenter, 8 Atl. Rep. (R. I.) 539.

The breach may occur after the contract has been partly performed, by a refusal to proceed with performance. In Cort v. Ambergate R. Co., 17 Q. B. 127, the plaintiffs agreed to supply the defendants with 3900 tons of railway chairs, to be delivered in certain quantities at specified dates. After the plaintiffs had delivered 1787 tons, according to the contract, the defendants desired them not to send any more, as they would not be wanted and would not be accepted. The plaintiffs then stopped making the chairs and sued the defendants on the contract: and the court held that they were entitled to recover.

In Massachusetts it is held that a renunciation of the contract before performance is due does not amount to a breach. Daniels v. Newton, 114 Mass. 530. But that an absolute refusal to perform after the time for performance has arrived does amount to a breach, even when the contract is by its terms to continue in the future. Parker v. Russell, 133 Mass. 74.

1. Frost v. Knight, L. R. 7 Ex. 112, 113, supra; Nilson v. Morse, 52 Wis. 240; Zuck v. McClure, 98 Pa. St. 541; Howard v. Daly, 61 N. Y. 375.

Where a plaintiff may elect to avoid or affirm a contract, or to ratify or disown to accept the refusal as a breach and insists that the contract shall continue in force, it enables the other party to take advantage of any supervening circumstances which would justify him in refusing to complete it.<sup>1</sup>

85. Impossibility Created by one Party.—As the renunciation of a contract before performance is due is equivalent to a breach, and entitles the injured party to sue immediately, so if one party by his own act makes the performance of his promise impossible, the other may at once bring an action against him for a breach.<sup>2</sup> an act done on his behalf, the institution of a suit which necessarily implies that the contract is affirmed or the right ratified, if the suit is brought with full knowledge of all material facts, is a waiver of the right to avoid the contract or to disown the act, and defeats an action subsequently brought on that ground. Warren v. Spencer Water Co., 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 112.

1. In Avery v. Bowden, 5 E. & B. 714, the defendant agreed by charter-party to load a cargo on the plaintiff's ship at Odessa. After the ship arrived at Odessa the defendant's agent told the master that he had no cargo for the vessel, and that he had better go away; but the master refused to leave, and continued to demand a cargo. Before the ship's laying days had expired war was declared between Russia and Great Britain, and the vessel was obliged to sail from Odessa in ballast. The plaintiff afterward sued the defendant for a breach of the charter-party; but it was held that, as there had been no actual failure of performance before the war broke out (the days within which the defendant was entitled to load not having then expired), and as the renunciation had not been accepted as a breach by the plaintiff's agent, the defendant was entitled to the discharge of the contract which took place upon the declaration of war, and therefore the plaintiff could not recover.

2. Heard v. Bowers, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 455, 460; Newcomb v. Brackett, 16 Mass. 161; Butrick v. Holden, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 233; James v. Burchell, 82 N. Y. 108; Wolf v. Marsh, 54 Cal. 228; Harris v. Williams, 3 Jones L. (N. Car.) 483; Packer v. Steward, 34 Vt. 127; Dill v. Pope, 29 Kans. 289; Rensens v. Mexican Nat. Construction Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 522; Burton v. Shotwell, 13 Bush (Ky.), 271.

In Planché v. Colburn, 8 Bing. 14, the defendants engaged the plaintiff to write a treatise on Costume and Ancient Armor, for publication in "The Juvenile Library." The plaintiff commenced the work, but before he had completed it the defendants abandoned the publication; and the court held that the plaintiff might treat the contract as broken and bring an action immediately. See also Shaffner v. Killian, 7 Ill. App. 620. And in another case a person agreed to act as the agent of an insurance company for five years. Before the five years were expired the company was wound up voluntarily; and it was held that the agent might sue the company at once and recover his salary for the five years. Ex parte Maclure, L. R. 5 Ch. Ap. 737. See also Seipel v. Ins. Co., 84 Pa. St. 47; Lovell v. Ins. Co., 111 U. S. 264.

A was employed by B, a firm, "to sell goods for them" for one year from January 1, 1884, at a fixed annual salary; about the middle of the year B became insolvent and made an assignment, and later wrote A that his services would not be required after July 1. Held, in an action by A to recover, that as there was nothing in the contract itself, nor in the testimony dehors the instrument, to indicate an implied understanding that the employment was contingent upon the existence of the firm for a year, the fact that B had become insolvent did not absolve him from the obligation to pay A his salary as agreed; further, that the notice that the services of A would not be required after a specified date would not have the effect of rescinding the contract without A's assent. Vanuxem v. Bostwick, 11 East. Rep. (Pa.) 725.

Where a man promised to marry a woman on a future day, and before the day married another woman, it was held that he was instantly liable to an action for breach of his promise. Short v. Stone, 8 Q. B. 358; Sheahan v. Barry, 27 Mich. 218. And where a man contracted to execute a lease on a future day for a certain term, and before the day executed a lease to another for the same term, it was held that he might be sued at once for breaking the contract. Ford v. Tiley, 6.

86. By Non-Performance.—A contract is broken if either party fail to perform any of its terms.

B. & C. 325. And again, where a man contracted to sell and deliver specific goods on a future day, and before the day sold and delivered them to another, he was immediately liable to an action at the suit of the person with whom he had first contracted. Bowdell v. Parsons, 10 East, 359; Crist v. Armour, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 378; Raymond v. Minton, L. R. 1 Ex. 244.

Where, under a building contract, A entered upon performance of the contract, performed a part, and furnished a part of the materials in accordance with the terms of the contract, and was ready to complete the same, when B, the other party, took possession of the building and the materials furnished by A, and completed the work on the building without A's consent, it was held that the latter had a right to treat the contract as rescinded, and to sue and recover for the work, labor, and materials furnished by him at their reasonable market value. Bonnett v. Glatfeldt, 8 West. Rep. (Ill.) 637.

A party who disables himself from performing his contract before default by the other party, thereby waives the performance of acts by the latter which but for the disability he would be bound to perform as conditions precedent to a recovery on the contract. Woolner v. Hill, 93 N. Y. 576; Hawley v. Keeler, 53 N. Y. 114.

One who, by his own fault, has prevented performance by the other party, cannot claim exemption from liability. Smith v. Roe, 7 Col. 95; Sinnott v. Mullin, 82 Pa. St. 333.

A failure of a building contractor to complete the works by a day named, caused by the failure of the other parties to supply plans, etc., the former is excused and the latter cannot take advantage of a provision in the contract making it determinable at their option upon a failure of performance by the contractor. Roberts v. Bury Commissioners, L. R. 5 C. P. 310, 329; McAndrews v. Tippet, 39 N. J. L. 105; Weeks v. Little, 89 N. Y. 566; Van Buren v. Digges, 11 How. (U. S.) 461.

Where a condition can be performed only in the obligee's presence, his absence is an excuse. 1 Rolle Ab. 457, n.; Williams v. Bank, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 96, 102; Majors v. Hickman, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 217. A covenant to make within a year such assurance as the covenantee's counsel shall devise, is discharged if the covenantee does not tender an assurance within the year. 1 Rolle. Abr. 446, pl. 12.

Where a bond is executed with a condition that it shall become absolute in case certain services are performed by the obligee within a specified time, the refusal of the obligor to accept performance will have the effect of actual performance so far as to give the obligee a right of action upon the bond. Boardman v. Keeler, 21 Vt. 77; Tasker v. Bartlett, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 359.

On the other hand, where the promisor is prevented from performing his contract by the default of the promisee, the performance is excused. U. S. v. Peek, 102 U. S. 64; Hammer v. Breidenbach, 31 Mo. 49; Marshall v. Craig, 1 Bibb (Ky.), 379, 386; Stewart v. Keteltas, 36 N. Y. 388; Parker Vein Coal Co. v. O'Hern, 8 Md. 197; Gallagher v. Nichols, 60 N. Y. 438; Wilt v. Ogden, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 56; Fredenburg v. Turner, 37 Mich. 402; Shulte v. Hennessy, 40 Iowa, 352; Sutton v. Tyrell, 12 Vt. 79; Clearwater v. Meredith, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 25, 39; McKee v. Miller, 4 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 222; Ashcraft v. Allen, 4 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 96.

"One who prevents the performance of a condition, or makes it impossible by his own act, cannot take advantage of the non-performance." Nav. Co. v. Wilcox, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 481; Jones v. Walker, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 163; Camp v. Barker, 21 Vt. 469; Ruble v. Massey, 2 Md. 636; Bright v. Taylor, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 159; Jones v. Railroad Co., 14 W. Va. 514.

In an action against a master for not teaching his apprentice, a plea that the latter refused to be taught is good. Raymond v. Minton, L. R. 1 Ex. 244. Where A promised B to pay him $200 annually for C's support and maintenance, and B promised to support and maintain C, but C refused to be supported by B, it was held that no action would lie in favor of B against A for failure to pay. Cornell v. Cornell, 96 N. Y. 108; Ellen v. Topp, 6 Ex. 424, 442; McGrath v. Herndon, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 480.

A contract, the fulfilment of which becomes unreasonable, will not be enforced at the instance of a party who by his own conduct has produced such a result. Duncan v. Cent. Pass. R. Co., 9 Ky. Law Repr. 92.

87. Effect of Breach—Absolute Promises.—When the promises of both parties are absolute and independent of each other, upon a breach of his promise by one party the other may sue him without averring that he has performed his own promise, and it is no defence to such an action for the defendant to plead that the plaintiff has failed to perform his part of the agreement.<sup>1</sup>

88. Conditional Promises.—Conditions, as regards the time when they are to be performed, are either subsequent, concurrent, or precedent.

89. Conditions Subsequent.—A contract may contain a provision that, upon the doing of some act or the happening of some event, the relation of the parties shall come to an end.<sup>2</sup>

1. This may be illustrated by the old case of Ware v. Chappel, Style's Rep. 186, decided in 1649. "Ware brought an action of debt for £500 against Chappel upon an indenture of covenants between them, viz., that Ware should raise five hundred soldiers and bring them to such a port, and that Chappel should find shipping and victuals for them to transport them to Galicia; and for not providing the shipping and victuals at the time appointed was the action brought. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had not raised the soldiers at that time, and to this plea the plaintiff demurs. Roll, C. J., held that there was no condition precedent, but that they are distinct and mutual covenants, and that there may be several actions brought for them; and it is not necessary to give notice of the number of men raised, for the number is known to be five hundred; and the time for the shipping to be ready is also known by the covenants; and you have your remedy against him if he raise not the men as he hath against you for not providing the shipping."

"What is the reason," said Holt, C. J., in Thorp v. Thorp, 12 Mod. 455, 464. "that mutual promises shall bear an action without performance? One's bargain is to be performed according as he makes it. If he make a bargain, and rely on the other's covenant or promise to have what he would have done to him, it is his own fault. If the agreement be that A shall have the horse of B, and A agree that B shall have his money, they may make it so; and then there needs no averment of performance to maintain an action on either side; but if it appear by the agreement that the plain intent of either party was to have the thing to be done to him performed, before his doing what he undertakes of his side, it must be then averred; as where a man agrees to give so much money for a horse, it is plain he meant to have the horse first, and therefore he says the money shall be given for the horse." See Long v. Caffrey, 93 Pa. St. 526; Hard v. Seeley, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 428.

These cases illustrate the character of absolute promises. The consequences which result from their breach are the same to-day as they were when these cases were decided. It must, however, be borne in mind that the rules for determining whether promises are absolute or not have changed very much since the seventeenth century, and that promises which would formerly have been held to be absolute would not be so construed at the present day. In ancient times questions of this kind were decided upon a subtle and technical construction of the words of a contract, and very little regard was paid to the evident sense and intention of the parties. Thus it was said by Fineux, C. J., in 15 H. vii. 10, pl. 17: "If I covenant with a man that I will marry his daughter, and he covenants with me that he will convey an estate to me and his daughter and the heirs of our two bodies begotten, if I afterwards marry another woman, or his daughter another man, still I shall have an action of covenant against him to compel him to convey the estate; but if the covenant were that he should convey an estate to us two for the cause aforesaid, then no action would lie until we were married." At the present day the question is determined "by the intention and meaning of the parties as it appears on the instrument, and by the application of common-sense to each particular case." Tindal, C. J., in Stavers v. Curling, 3 Bing. (N. Cas.) 368.

2. See, ante, PROVISIONS FOR DISCHARGE.

90. Conditions Concurrent.—When we speak of concurrent conditions we mean that each party is to perform his promise at the same time with the other. If, therefore, one party fail to perform at the time, the other is discharged from the performance of his promise. But he cannot sue the party by whom the contract was broken unless he has performed, or was ready and willing to perform, his own part of the agreement.<sup>1</sup>

1. "Where two acts are to be done at the same time, as where A covenants to convey an estate to B on such a day, and in consideration thereof B covenants to pay A a sum of money on the same day, neither can maintain an action without showing performance of or an offer to perform his part, though it is not certain which of them is obliged to do the first act; and this particularly applies to all cases of sale." Mr. Sergeant Williams' 5th rule in notes to Pordage v. Cole, 1 Wms. Saunds. 310. See also Campbell v. Gittings, 19 Ohio, 347; Williams v. Healy, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 363; Gayley v. Price, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 267; Dunham v. Pettee, 4 Seld. (N. Y.) 508; Lester v. Jewett, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 453.

In bringing an action for the breach of a concurrent condition the plaintiff must always aver that he has performed, or was ready and willing to perform, his own promise. A very common example of this kind of condition occurs in the sale of goods. "The general rule in executory agreements for the sale of goods is that the obligation of the vendor to deliver, and that of the buyer to pay, are concurrent conditions, in the nature of mutual conditions precedent, and that neither can enforce the contract against the other without showing performance, or offer to perform, or averring readiness and willingness to perform his own promise." Benj. on Sales, § 592. In Morton v. Lamb, 7 T. R. 125, the plaintiff sued the defendant for not delivering some corn in pursuance of an agreement that the defendant should deliver the corn at a certain place within one month from the time of the sale. The plaintiff averred that he was ready and willing to receive the corn, but that the defendant did not deliver it. At the trial the plaintiff recovered a verdict. The defendant then moved that the judgment should be arrested, because it was not averred that the plaintiff had tendered to him the price of the corn, or was ready to have paid for it on delivery. The court sustained the motion. "Both things," said Lord Kenyon, C. J., "the delivery of the corn by one and the payment by the other, were to be done at the same time; and as the plaintiff has not averred that he was ready to pay for the corn, he cannot maintain this action against the defendant for not delivering it." See Gazley v. Price, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 267; Swan v. Drury, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 485; Benj. on Sales, § 592, where many cases are collected in the notes.

In the case of a contract containing mutual and dependent covenants, either an offer of performance or readiness to perform by one party must be shown, before he can charge the other with a breach. Neis v. Yocum, 9 Sawy. C. Ct. 24; Rappanier v. Bannon, 7 Cent. Rep. (Md.) 420.

In an agreement that a lessee may at any time before the expiration of his term purchase the land for $3250, and that lessee shall have a prior right of purchase at a greater sum, and shall have notice in order to avail himself of the right, the execution of the conveyance, and the payment of the purchase-money, are mutual and dependent covenants. Neither party can put the other in default without a tender of performance, and the lessee must tender the money before he becomes entitled to a conveyance. Heine v. Treadwell, 13 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 503.

Where a party agreed on the payment by another of certain sums of money to a third person to assign certain certificates of sale of land, and it was held that the covenants were independent, and that in a suit by the party bound to assign a general averment of readiness on his part to perform was sufficient. Slocum v. Despard, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 615. See Northrup v. Northrup, 6 Cowen (N. Y.), 296; Champion v. White, 5 Cowen (N. Y.), 509; Robb v. Montgomery, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 15. But see Parker v. Parmele, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 130; Adams v. Williams, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 227; Halloway v. Davis, Wright, 129. Justice would seem to require that such stipulations should be considered as dependent. Leonard v. Bates, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 172, n.; per Shaw, C. J., in Kane v. Hood, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 281.

91. Conditions Precedent.—If one party make the performance of his promise conditional upon a prior performance by the other party, the latter cannot sue the former for a breach of contract without averring that he has performed his part, or was ready and willing to perform it, but was prevented by the act of the promisee. And if the party who is to perform his promise first wholly fail to perform, the other is discharged.<sup>1</sup>

1. People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232.

In the case of a condition precedent in a contract, there must be compliance therewith or an excuse for non-compliance shown, both at law and in equity. Barney v. Giles, 11 N. E. Rep. (Ill.) 206.

Condition in contract must be fulfilled before action lies. Moore v. Campbell, 12 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 495.

Where performance of one act is to precede that of another, the legal obligation to perform the latter is dependent upon the performance of the former as a condition precedent. De Kay v. Bliss, 4 N. Y. St. Repr. 728.

A agreed to sell to B a machine deliverable at a certain point, the freight charges not to exceed a specified sum. Held, the freight charges exceeding that sum, that B was not bound to take it, and claim from A a reduction; he could repudiate the contract. Johnson v. Latimer, 71 Ga. 470.

If one contracts to do work subject to the approval of the agent of the other party to the contract, such approval is an essential prerequisite to the right of action for the price. Denver, S. Park, etc., R. Co. v. Riley, 7 Col. 494.

A lease provided that it should not be binding on the lessee until he should be appointed to a certain office. Held, that there was no binding contract, and that the lessor did not become bound upon the lessee's electing, notwithstanding his failure to obtain the office, to take the lease. King v. Warfield, 9 Atl. Rep. (Md.) 539.

Where an agreement specified that advertisements should be inserted to the value of £90 in part payment of goods to be purchased to the amount of £360, held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover in respect of the £90 worth of advertisements, without taking the £360 worth of goods. Minshull v. Brinsmead, 1 C. & E. 97.

A agreed to and did assign to B a half interest in a lease of a gold and quicksilver mine for "$750 cash and $1250 when 250 flasks of quicksilver should be produced." Held, that in the absence of a showing that 250 flasks had been produced, A could not recover from B the amount stipulated, without proving that B had failed to make reasonable efforts to operate the mine in view of the outlay attending it and the prospects in its development. Ray v. Hodge, 13 Pac. Rep. (Or.) 599.

Where by the terms of an agreement to furnish materials, in which no time of delivery is specified, payments therefor are required to be made from time to time, at times specified, if, upon specific demand of payment, with notice that it will be insisted on as a condition precedent of further delivery of materials, payment is refused, the other party may properly refuse to continue to furnish materials. Palmer v. Breen, 34 Minn. 39.

A proposal was made to an insurance company for an insurance on the life of the proposer, who made, on a form issued by the company, statements as to his state of health and other matters, and a declaration that the statements were true and were to be taken as the basis of the contract. The proposal was accepted at a specified premium, but upon the terms that no insurance should take effect till the premium was paid. Before tender of the premium there was a material alteration in the state of the health of the proposer, and the company refused to accept the premium or to issue a policy. Held, that the nature of the risk having been altered at the time of the tender of the premium there was no contract binding the company to issue a policy. Quare, whether, if there had been no alteration in the risk, the company would have been legally entitled to refuse to accept the premium and to issue a policy. Canning v. Farquhar, 16 Q. B. D. 727.

An action was brought by an architect against a county to recover for the value of services rendered in making certain plans for a jail-building, which plans had been accepted conditionally by the county board of supervisors, provided that a bid should be accepted from some reliable party for the building of the jail. The board of supervisors refused to open any of the bids received and rejected plaintiff's claims on the ground that he had been guilty of improper acts in getting his plans provisionally accepted. Held, that it was within the discretion of the board to refuse to open or accept any of the bids based upon plaintiff's plans, and that the condition upon which plaintiff was entitled to compensation never having happened, he could not recover. Hall v. Co. of Los Angeles, 13 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 854.

Where, in an action for damages for breach of contract, it appears that the performance of their part of the covenant by defendants was a condition precedent to the performance of the contract on the part of the plaintiffs; that plaintiffs were able and willing to do their share, and had done acts preparatory to its performance—the defendants cannot maintain as a defence that there was a want of mutuality in the contract which would excuse a non-performance by them. Jones v. Foster, 30 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 697.

One party to a contract which imposes reciprocal obligations upon both parties may have a right to rescind it by reason of the failure of performance of conditions by the other party, but he must, if he wish to rescind for such cause, return to the other party what he has received, so as to put him in the same condition he was in before. Doughten v. Camden B'g & Loan Ass'n, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 479; 41 N. J. Eq. 556.

A paid B $50 for a lot, agreeing in the deed to erect a house of a certain description thereon. Held, on his failure to do so, that A, after a reasonable time, upon tendering back the money, was entitled to a rescission of the contract. Willard v. Ford, 16 Neb. 543.

It is competent for a party by his contract to make the performance of work and services by him a condition precedent to his right to receive any pay for them, and he cannot, in an action upon the contract, recover without proof of performance, unless the defendant has waived such performance. Keller v. Oberreich, 30 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 524.

Waiver of performance or extension of the time therefor in the case of a condition precedent is equivalent to the performance thereof at the stipulated time, and leaves the original contract intact. Barton v. Gray, 57 Mich. 623.

Money paid towards an unperformed condition precedent may be recovered, if there has been no acceptance or waiver, but not otherwise. Keller v. Oberreich, 67 Wis. 282.

A agreed to build a house for B by a certain time and to pay himself from a mortgage to be negotiated by him. The house was not completed at the time stipulated, but A was allowed to continue work for two months, when B took possession. Held, that B could not defend A's suit in assumpsit for the value of work done and materials furnished, B having waived the stipulation as to time and having prevented A's negotiating a mortgage. Foster v. Worthington, 58 Vt. 65.

Where a party claims to have completed a contract, and the other party, with knowledge of his claim and that the condition of it has not been performed, has made a payment upon it, without any objection or notice of non-acceptance, such payment operates as a waiver of the condition of the contract. Keller v. Oberreich, 30 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 524.

Where one loans money without security to a man of very limited means, stipulating that it shall be repaid in monthly instalments, and upon default in any instalment the whole to become due, it was held that time is of the essence of the contract, and the waiver of forfeiture was not presumed from the lender accepting a payment after default in one of the instalments. Bishop v. Lawrence, 2 S. W. Rep. (Ky.) 499.

Whenever it appears to have been the intention of parties to a contract that the performance of one stipulation should not be a condition precedent to the performance of another, effect will be given to such intention; but where the intention is to rely on previous performance of the stipulation, and not on the remedy for non-performance, performance is a condition precedent. Larimore v. Tyler, 88 Mo. 661.

Where an action was compromised upon terms, one of which was that the defendant should pay the plaintiff £150, and another that the plaintiff should pay a third party's claim against the defendant, held, that the payment of the third party's claim by the plaintiff was not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue for the £150. Lockhart v. Webster, 1 C. & E. 71.

The defendants purchased cotton at L., under price limits designated by plaintiff, and shipped it to the latter at H., it being orally agreed that the plaintiff should report the classification of the contract at H., if there was any falling off, either in grade or quality. Held, in a suit to recover an alleged balance of an account, that the stipulation that the plaintiff should report any falling off in weight or grades not being a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to recover under the agreement, and it not being stated that the report should be made immediately or within from three to five days after classification, that time was not of the essence of the agreement, and that it was error for the court to instruct the jury to the effect that the plaintiff could not recover if he did not make the reports within a reasonable time, and if such failure on his part induced the defendants to continue their shipments to him. Watson v. Walker, 48 W. Rep. (Tenn.) 576.

In Louisiana a contract conditioned upon an event dependent on the will of either party is not dissolved of right upon non-performance of the condition, but the same must be judicially sought. Therefore, under a contract which grants a railway company right of way conditioned upon the completion of the road within a certain time, the company may proceed under the contract until a dissolution is judicially demanded. Gayden v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co., 1 South. Rep. (La.) 792.

The following rules are given by Mr. Sergeant Williams in his notes to Portage v. Cole, 1 Wms. Saund. 319:

"If a day be appointed for the payment of money or part of it, or for doing any other act, and the day is to happen or may happen before the thing which is the consideration of the money or other act is to be performed, an action may be brought for the money or for not doing such other act before performance; for it appears that the party relied upon his remedy, and did not intend to make the performance a condition precedent; and so it is where no time is fixed for performance of that which is the consideration of the money or other act." Thorp v. Thorp, 12 Mod. 460; 1 Salk. 171, per Holt, C. J.; Seeters v. Opie, 2 Saund. 350, per Hale, C. J.; Wilks v. Smith, 10 M. & W. 355; Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Philipson, 16 C. B. 2; Mayor of Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 E. & B. 397; Northampton v. Parnell, 15 C. B. 630; 29 E. B. & E. 220; Underhill v. The Saratoga & W. R. Co., 20 Barb. (N.Y.) 455; Edgar v. Boyes, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 445; Stevenson v. Kleppinger, 5 Watts (Pa.) 420; Lowry v. Mehaffy, 10 Watts (Pa.) 387; Goldsbrough v. Orr, 8 West. 217; Robb v. Montgomery, 20 Johnson (N. Y.), 15.

The principle of this rule has been misapplied in various cases, as in Terry v. Duntze, 2 H. Bl. 389.

In that case A covenanted to build a house for B and finish it on or before a certain day in consideration of a sum of money which B covenanted to pay A by instalments as the building proceeded. Held, that the finishing of the house was not a condition precedent to the payment of the money; that A might maintain an action of debt against B for the whole sum, though the building was not finished at the time appointed, on the ground that part of the money was to be paid before the house could be completed. This case was followed in Seers v. Fowler, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 272, and Havens v. Bush, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 387. But in Cunningham v. Morrell, 10 Johns. (N.Y.) 203, these two cases were overruled, and the authority of Terry v. Duntze repudiated. Cunningham v. Morrell was followed in McLure v. Rush, 9 Dana (Ky.), 64, and in Allen v. Sanders, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 593, overruling the earlier cases of Cradock v. Aldridge, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 15, and Mason v. Chambers, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 253. See, to the same effect, Kettle v. Harvey, 21 U. S. 301; Lord v. Belknap, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 279; Tompkins v. Elliot, 5 Wend. (N.Y.) 496.

In the case of contracts for the purchase and sale of real estate, where the purchaser covenants to pay the purchase money by instalments, and the vendor covenants to convey by deed either on the last day of payment or on some day previous, the covenant to pay the instalments falling due before the day appointed for conveying by deed are independent of the covenant to convey, and an action may be maintained for such instalments without showing any conveyance or offer to convey, but the conveyance and offer to convey is a condition precedent to the right to insist upon the payment of an instalment falling due either on or after the day of conveyance. Grant v. Johnson, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 247. In this case the plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant a piece of land, and covenanted to give possession of the land on the first of November, 1845, and to convey by deed on the first of May, 1846; and the defendant covenanted to pay $950 as follows, viz., $200 on the first of April, 1846; $200 on 1st of April, 1847; $275 on 1st of April, 1848; and $275 on 1st of April, 1849. The plaintiff gave the possession of the premises, and the defendant paid the first instalment according to the terms of the agreement. The action was brought to recover the second instalment, and it was held that the conveyance by deed was a condition precedent to the payment of any instalment after the first, and therefore the plaintiff was not en-

92. Breach in Vital Matter.—If the breach be in a matter which upon a fair and reasonable construction of the contract the parties may be deemed to have considered as vital to its existence, or which they have expressly stated shall be vital, it will discharge the promisee from the performance of his promise.<sup>1</sup> titled to recover without averring a performance or tender of performance of such condition. See also Bland v. Atwater, 4 Conn. 3; Leonard v. Bates, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 172; Kane v. Hood, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 281. But see Weaver v. Childress, 3 Stew. 361.

"When a day is appointed for the payment of money, etc., and the day is to happen after the thing which is the consideration of the money or is to be performed, no notice can be maintained for the money or before performance." Thorp v. Thorp, 12 Mod. 460; 1 Salk. 171; Bland v. Atwater, 4 Conn. 9; Dey v. Dox, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 129; Morris v. Sliter, 1 Denio (N. Y.) 59; Rider v. Pond, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 179.

It may also be laid down as a rule, that stipulations or promises may be dependent upon the nature of the acts to be performed and the order in which they must necessarily precede and follow each other. "Where the act of one party must necessarily precede any act of the other, as where one stipulates to manufacture an article from materials furnished by the other, and the other stipulates to furnish the materials, the act of furnishing the materials necessarily precedes the act of manufacturing, and will constitute a condition precedent without express words." Per Shaw, C. J., in Milldam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 439; Thomas v. Cadwallader, Willes, 496; Knight v. New Eng. Worsted Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 286. In Combe v. Greene, 11 M. & W. 480 the plaintiff demised a dwelling-house and premises to the defendant, and the defendant covenanted that he would expend £100 in improvements and additions to the dwelling-house, under the direction of some competent surveyor to be appointed by the plaintiff. Held, that the appointment of a surveyor was a condition precedent to the defendant's liability to expend the £100. In Miller v. Pittsburg & Cleveland R. Co. 40 Pa. St. 237, there was a subscription to the stock of a railroad company on the express condition that the road should be located and constructed along a prescribed route. The road was so located, and the subscriber paid one or more instalments on his shares, but neglected to pay the balance as the calls were made. Before the construction was completed the company suspended operations. An action was brought by the company for the balance of the subscription. Held, that the road having been located, as stipulated though not completed, the company was entitled to recover. But see Macintosh v. M. C. R. Co. 14 M. & W. 548.

Where a contract for the erection of a mill stipulates that "the whole mill, with all machinery, shall be completed and delivered in perfect running order within four months from date, provided the timber required to be used in constructing the building and placing the machinery therein is delivered on the ground . . . within 40 days after the receipt of the bill for said lumber by the party of the second part," if the party of the second part fails to deliver the lumber as stipulated, the condition as to the four months' time becomes inoperative, and the party of the first part remains bound only to use reasonable diligence. Starr v. Gregory Con. Min. Co., 13 Pac. R. (Mont.) 5.

In an action by A for the breach of a contract by B for the construction and erection of machinery upon a steamboat to be furnished by A, where the work was to be done in 60 days but the boat was not completed in time to enable B to complete its work in that time, the court charged the jury, "If the jury find that after the day named for the completion of the contract, the work not being then completed, the boat was not then in readiness to receive it, yet if the boat was thereafter made ready, and the defendants proceeded under the contract, they were then bound to complete it within the same length of time contemplated by the original agreement, and such additional time as may have been lost in the prosecution of the work, occasioned by delay in the construction of the boat; and failing in this, they are liable for the consequences of such failure and delay." Held, a proper statement of law as applicable to the facts of the case. McGowan v. Am. P'd Tan Bark Co., 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1315.

1. In the absence of an express stipulation, a term is considered of vital importance when it goes to the root of the matter, so that a breach of it would frustrate the main object of the contract. For example, in Poussard v. Spiers, L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 410, it was held that the failure of a singer, who was to take the principal female part in a new opera, to perform in the opening and early performances, went to the root of the matter and discharged the other party. And see Spalding v. Rosa, 71 N. Y. 40.

Where the mutual covenants go to the whole consideration on both sides, they are mutual conditions, and performance must be averred. Mr. Sergeant Williams in notes to Pordage v. Cole, 1 Wms. Saund. 310; Duke of St. Albans v. Shore, 1 H. Bl. 270; Graves v. Legg, 9 Ex. 709; Grey v. Frier, 4 C. & F. 565; Dakin v. Williams, 11 Wend. 67.

The fact that a penalty for non-performance is named in the contract will not operate as a bar to a suit for rescission where the amount of the penalty is insufficient to give adequate damages at law. Wilson v. Roots, 10 N. E. Rep. (Ill.) 204; s. c., 8 West. Rep. 67.

When the contract fixes the time within which it is to be performed, and it appears from its nature, or the circumstances connected with its performance, that the parties intended to make the time an essential element of the agreement, time will be deemed of the essence of the contract, and strict compliance therewith will be compelled. Carter v. Phillips, 10 East. Rep. (Mass.) 561; s. c., 10 N. E. Rep. 500, 3 New Eng. Rep. 907.

A contract was entered into by a skilled machinist and inventor for the establishment and development of a manufacturing enterprise, on a paying basis, within a reasonable time. Held, that time was of the essence of the contract, and that a delay for such a length of time as to render certain stock of the company worthless entitled such company to a rescission. Wilson v. Roots, 10 N. E. Rep. (Ill.) 204.

A contract for carrying on the business of manufacturing, purchasing, and selling cloths provided that it might be terminated by either party on giving 60 days' notice to the other, and that if terminated by one named, the other should have the right to purchase within the said 60 days. Held, that time was of the essence of the contract to purchase. Carter v. Phillips, 10 N. E. Rep. (Mass.) 500; s. c., 3 New Eng. Rep. 907.

A and B made a written agreement whereby A sold to B the product in pig-iron of 14,000 tons of iron ore, to be shipped as rapidly as possible during the season of 1880 to B at Cleveland; such portion of the product as is made after the close of navigation of 1880 to be shipped to Cleveland on the opening of navigation of 1881, or as near the opening as possible. The product was 8000 tons. 3400 tons were shipped in 1880, 3500 were ready at the opening of navigation in May, 1881, and the other 1100 tons were manufactured later. B refused to receive that which was shipped in 1881, and A sued for breach of the contract. Held, that time was of the essence of the contract, and A failing to fulfil its part of the contract, or to tender performance, cannot sue for the breach. Cleveland Rolling Mill Co. v. Rhodes, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 882; s. c., 121 U. S. 255.

The Shippers' Compress Company entered into a contract with the Va. & Tenn. Air Line, an association composed of the N. & W. R. Co. and other corporations, by which the latter agreed to fill with cotton a certain amount of room on board the steamers L. and L. at the port of N. said cotton to be placed on board on October 18 and 19, 1881, on which dates the steamers were to be loaded and made ready to sail for Europe. The cotton was not delivered until several days after the time agreed upon; and in consequence of the delay the Shippers' Compress Co. was, by the terms of its charter-party, compelled to pay a large sum for demurrage, after having given the proper agent of the Va. & Tenn. Air Line repeated and timely notice of the consequences which would result from its failure to deliver the cotton in time. Held, that the subsequent acceptance of the cotton by the Compress Co., was not a waiver of the stipulation as to time, and that it could recover the amount of demurrage so paid in an action against the Air Line. N. & W. R. Co. v. Ship. Comp. Co., 2 S. E. Rep. (Va.) 139.

In general, time is not, unless so declared by the parties, of the essence of the contract; but this rule has exceptions, as if the thing sold be of greater or less value according to the efflux of time, then time is of the essence of the contract. Wilson v. Roots, 8 West. Rep. (Ill.) 67.

In a contract for the sale of land, time is not ordinarily of the essence, unless it is so expressed. Smith's Ex. v. Proffitt's Adm'x, 1 S. E. Rep. (Va.) 67.

Time was held to be of the essence of the contract in Presidio Min. Co. v. Bullis, 4 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 860; and in Ames v. Brooks, 9 East. Rep. (Pa.) 534.

If the parties expressly state that the non-performance of a certain term shall be vital to the existence of their contract, a breach of that term will work a discharge.<sup>1</sup>

93. Entire Contracts.—Sometimes the promise of one party is conditional upon the entire performance of his part of the contract by the other party. When this appears to be the intention of the parties the promisor must perform the whole of his part of the contract before he can recover anything from the other party, and a partial breach will discharge the promisee from the performance of his promise.<sup>2</sup>

1. "Parties may think some matter, apparently of very little importance, essential; and if they sufficiently express an intention to make the literal fulfilment of such a thing a condition precedent, it will be one; or they may think the performance of some matter, apparently of essential importance and prima facie a condition precedent, is not really vital, and may be compensated for in damages, and if they sufficiently express such an intention, it will not be a condition precedent." Blackburn, J., in Bettini v. Gye, L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 187, infra.

It was on this ground that the case of Lowber v. Bangs, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 728, was decided. In that case a vessel named the Mary Bangs, while on a voyage to Melbourne, was chartered at Boston for a voyage from Calcutta to the United States. The charter-party contained a clause that the vessel was to "proceed from Melbourne to Calcutta with all possible despatch." Before the master was advised of this engagement the vessel had sailed to Manila, which is much out of the direct course from Melbourne to Calcutta. She arrived at Calcutta more than three months after the time at which she ought to have arrived if she had gone there directly from Melbourne. Freights in the mean time had largely fallen. After the arrival of the Mary Bangs the charterers engaged another vessel, which they loaded with the cargo intended for the Mary Bangs. The case thus showed that the object of the voyage had not been frustrated. In a suit to recover damages for a breach of the charter-party, the court below held that the charterers were not justified in repudiating the contract. This ruling was reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States, which held, that the parties, when they made their contract, intended that the clause "to proceed with all possible despatch" should be a condition precedent to any liability of the charterer, and that as the plaintiff had broken that clause he was not entitled to recover.

See also Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U. S. 40; Glaholm v. Hays, 2 M. & G. 257.

In Filley v. Pope, S. C. U. S., No. 21, October Term, 1885 (not reported), where the contract was for the sale of five hundred tons of No. 1 pig-iron, "shipment from Glasgow," it was held that the buyer was justified in refusing to accept such iron shipped from Leith. "The term 'shipment from Glasgow,'" said Gray, J., "defines an act to be done by the sellers at the outset, and a condition precedent to any liability of the buyer." The court also said that in a commercial contract a statement descriptive of the subject-matter was ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty or condition precedent upon the failure or non-performance of which the party aggrieved might repudiate the whole contract. In such contracts, therefore, every term is regarded as important, and if one party fail to perform his promise in strict accordance with the agreement, the other is discharged.

A agreed to sell and B to buy iron for shipment in March from Great Britain to New York. A shipped no iron in March, but in April secured the option to purchase an equal quantity of the kind specified shipped by another party in March. B refused to receive this iron because it was not shipped by A. Held, a breach of contract on B's part. Cunneham v. Judson, 100 N. Y. 179, reversing 30 Hun (N. Y.) 63.

2. The leading case upon this point is that of Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320; s. c., 2 Sm. L. C. *1. In that case the defendant, being at Jamaica, delivered to T. Cutter, the intestate, the following note: "Ten days after the ship Governor Parry, myself master, arrives at Liverpool, I promise to pay to Mr. T. Cutter the sum of thirty guineas, provided he proceeds, continues, and does his duty as second mate in the said ship from hence to the port of Liverpool. Kingston, July 31st, 1793." The sum agreed to be paid was larger than the usual wages of a second mate. The ship sailed on the 2d of August, and arrived in Liverpool on the 9th of October. Cutter did his duty as second mate until the 20th of September, when he died. It was held that the intestate's representatives could not recover, either on the express contract or on a quantum meruit. "The agreement is conclusive," said Grose, J.; "the defendant only engaged to pay the intestate on condition of his continuing to do his duty on board during the whole voyage; and the latter was to be entitled either to thirty guineas or to nothing, for such was the contract between the parties. . . . It may fairly be considered that the parties themselves understood that if the whole duty were performed the mate was to receive the whole sum, and that he was not to receive anything unless he did continue on board during the whole voyage." See also Harris v. Liggett, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 301; Martin v. Shoenberger, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 367; Hartley v. Decker, 89 Pa. St. 470; Behn v. Burness, 3 B. & S. (113 E. C. L. R.) 751, and n.; Leonard v. Dyer, 26 Conn. 177.

In this country it is generally held that where one engaged under an entire contract for personal services, after part performance is by sickness disabled from fully performing or dies, an action lies in his favor or his administrator's, as the case may be, to recover on account of the work actually performed, but as to the measure of the recovery the cases are not harmonious. Clarke v. Gilbert, 26 N. Y. 279; Wolfe v. Howes, 20 N. Y. 197; Coe v. Smith, 4 Ind. 79; Hargrave v. Conroy, 19 N. J. Eq. 281; Fenton v. Clark, 11 Vt. 557; Hubbard v. Belden, 27 Vt. 645; Patrick v. Putnam, 27 Vt. 759. And see Lakeman v. Pollard, 43 Me. 463; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188; Green v. Gilbert, 21 Wis. 401. As to sickness, which it was held plaintiff should have foreseen, and which therefore did not excuse non-performance, see Jennings v. Lyon, 39 Wis. 553.

A party to an entire contract who has partly performed it, and subsequently abandons the further performance according to its stipulations voluntarily and without fault on the part of the other, or his consent thereto, can recover nothing for such part performance. Ala. Gold Life Ins. Co. v. Garmany, 74 Ga. 51.

A agreed to build a house for B, subject to inspection and approval by C, payments to be made in instalments on or before a specified day, or as soon thereafter as a specified stage of the work was completed. Seven instalments had been paid, C approving of the work. The eighth instalment was to be paid when the exterior was finished, and one half of the interior wood-work finished, the cooking-range set, and the plumbing done. All but setting the cooking-range was done, but C had not approved when the building was burned. Held, that the contract was entire, and that A was not entitled to the eighth instalment. Newman Lumber Co. v. Purdum, 41 Ohio St. 373.

A agreed to store for B from October until May from 15,000 to 30,000 barrels of lime, and to deliver it at the end of his wharf in May. For this he was to receive fifteen cents per barrel. In November, after 20,000 barrels had been received, they caught fire and the lime was ruined by slaking. A was in no way responsible for the fire. Held, that the contract was an entirety, and that A could recover nothing for storage, and could not retain a sum paid him on account thereof. Archer v. McDonald, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 194.

A contract for the digging of an artesian well, which in express terms provides that the contractor shall be entitled to be paid for work thereunder "only on the completion of the whole work," is an entire contract; and it is not competent for the other contracting party, in a suit to recover for the non-performance of the contract, to allow a credit of $500 for work done, for the purpose of sustaining an attachment on the ground of non-residence. Simonds v. Pearce, 31 Fed. Rep. 137.

If the part to be performed by one party consists of several distinct and separate items, and the price to be paid by the other is apportioned to each item to be performed, or is left to be implied by law, such a contract will generally be held to be severable. See Lucesco Oil Co. v. Brewer, 66 Pa. St. 351; Quigley v. De Haas, 82 Pa. St. 267, 273; Scott v. Kittanning Coal Co., 89 Pa. St. 231. In Johnson v. Johnson, 3 B. & P. 162, the plaintiff had purchased from the same persons two parcels of real estate, the one for £700, the other for £300, and had taken one conveyance for both. After having paid the purchase-money and taken possession, he was evicted from the smaller parcel in consequence of a defect in the title derived under the purchase, and thereupon brought an action for money had and received to recover back the £300, at the same time refusing to give up the parcel of land for which £700 had been paid. Held, that he was entitled to recover. "Although both pieces of ground were bargained for at the same time, we must consider the bargain as consisting of two distinct contracts, and that the one part was sold for £300 and the other for £700." Per Lord Alvanley. See also Mayfield v. Wadswley, 3 B. & C. 357; Robinson v. Green, 3 Met. (Mass.) 159; Mayor v. Pyne, 3 Bing. 285; Perkins v. Hart, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 237, 251; Withers v. Reynolds, 2 B. & Ald. 882; Sickels v. Pattison, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 257; McKnight v. Dunlop, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 36, 47; Snook v. Fries, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 313; Carleton v. Woods, 8 Foster (N. H.), 290; Robinson v. Snyder, 25 Pa. St. 203.

On a certain steamer was shipped by C. & Co. to P. & Co. a lot of iron containing a certain quantity of each of two kinds of iron. The iron of one kind was accepted, but that of the other kind rejected, being of inferior quality. By the agreement these were distinct and separate quantities of iron which C. & Co. agreed to sell and deliver for different prices. Held, that the contract of sale was not entire but severable in its nature, allowing the purchaser to receive that distinct part of the property complying with the terms of the contract, and reject the other distinct part that failed to agree with the description; that by so doing P. & Co. did not rescind the contract, but were entitled to recover from C. & Co. under the contract what they had paid upon the iron not accepted, and for any loss arising from a change in the market price. Pierson v. Crooks, 4 N. Y. St. Repr. 578.

And the rule holds where the price to be paid is clearly and distinctly apportioned to different parts of what is to be performed, although the latter is in its nature single and entire. Thus if a ship is to be built upon a special contract, and it is part of the terms of that contract that given portions of the price shall be paid according to the progress of the work, namely, part when the keel is laid, part when at the light plank, and the remainder when the ship is launched, there arises a separate contract for each instalment; and therefore, when the keel is laid or any other part of the ship for which an instalment is to be paid is completed, it has been held in England, and to some extent here, that an action lies immediately for the one party to recover the instalment, and that part of the ship becomes by the payment the property of the other.

Woods v. Russell, 5 B. & Ald. 942. See also Clarke v. Spence, 4 A. & E. 448; Laidler v. Burlinson, 2 M. & W. 602; Cunningham v. Morrell, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 203. This doctrine is denied in Andrews v. Durant, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 35. See also Wood v. Bell, 5 E. & B. 772; 6 E. & B. 355; Moody v. Brown, 34 Me. 107.

Under a contract for building a State road, warrants were issued for such portion of the work as had up to that time been accepted and not yet paid for. The township resisted the payment of these warrants on the ground that the contract was an entire one, and that a previous suit thereon was a bar to subsequent recovery. Held, that the consideration of the contract was apportioned as to the items covered by the several warrants, and the contract was severable. Township of E. Union v. Comrey, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 290.

A contract to cut, cure, and stack hay on a ranch, at so much per ton, which does not specify what number of tons are to be cut nor any given number of acres to be mown, and under which neither the work to be done nor the amount to be paid is in gross, is a separable and not an entire contract; and when the hay is burned the loss falls on the owner, and the contractor, being innocent, can recover for his labor notwithstanding. Hindrey v. Williams, 12 Pac. Rep. (Colo.) 436.

But the mere fact that the subject of the contract is sold by weight or measure and the value is ascertained by the price affixed to each pound or yard or bushel of the quantity contracted for, will not be sufficient to render the contract severable. Clark v. Baker, 5 Met. (Mass.) 452. In Davis v. Maxwell, 12 Met. (Mass.) 286, the plaintiff agreed with defendant to work on the farm of the latter for the period of "seven months, at $12 per month." Held, that the contract was entire; that eighty-four dollars were to be paid at the end of seven months, and not $12 at the end of each month, and that the plaintiff on leaving the defendant's service without good cause before the seven months expired was not entitled to recover anything of the defendant. See also Baker v. Higgins, 21 N. Y. 397.

The sale of a specific number of packages of an article at a given price a package is an entire contract; a purchaser cannot rescind it as to some packages and affirm it as to others. Mansfield v. Trigg, 113 Mass. 350.

B subscribed for one copy of A's book in ten portfolios of $15 each, the portfolios to be issued at intervals of about two months and payments to be made for each portfolio upon delivery. A delivered to B two portfolios, which were paid for; but B refused to accept or pay for any further deliveries, claiming that his signature to the contract was obtained by fraud. In an action by A to recover the price of the remaining eight numbers, it was held that the contract was one entire agreement, and not a contract containing ten distinct agreements; and that B could not avoid the contract or give evidence tending to show the fraud alleged until he had returned, or offered to return, the two portfolios which he had received and paid for. Barrie v. Earle, 143 Mass. 1.

A contract provided for the delivery of 5000 tons of ore at $10 per ton, the buyer to pay for a certain number of tons per month, but contained no stipulation as to the number of tons to be delivered each month, or when the delivery should be completed. Under the contract the first payment was made before any ore was delivered; and certain future payments were withheld, on the ground that the quality of the ore was inferior, not that the payments had not become due by reason of non-delivery of the ore. Held, by virtue of the terms of the contract and the conduct of the parties, that the contract was entire. W. Rep. Mining Co. v. Jones & Laughlins, 108 Pa. St. 55.

The parties executed through a broker the following contract of sale: "J. H. C., broker in chemicals, dye-stuff, etc. Baltimore, Oct. 8, '83. Sold to Messrs. B., C. & Co. for account of Mr. H. H. S., about 400 to 500 tons raw kainit, German, test not less than 233, for shipment from Germany to Wilmington, N. C., during Oct. or Nov. '83, at $925 per ton, 2240 lbs. invoice weight, ex ship in bulk at Wilmington, payable cash on arrival of vessel; seller has option of shipment from N. Y. out of vessel sailing from Germany not later than Nov. '83, if direct shipment unobtainable; in either case seller to give buyer name of vessel from which he proposes making delivery as soon as received by him. (Signed) J. H. C." The above contract of sale was indorsed "accepted" by both parties to the action. The contract was subsequently modified so as to make the amount sold 575 tons. The goods were subsequently shipped, but owing to the leaky condition of the vessel, a portion of the cargo was left behind and the appellant offered to deliver 508 tons, which the appellees refused to accept, and the goods were thereupon sold on their account. In an action to recover the difference between the amount realized and the contract price, held, that the contract signed by the parties was an agreement to sell upon the conditions therein expressed, and that the buyers were not bound to accept a less quantity than was called for by the agreement. Salmon v. Boykin, Carmer & Co., 10 East. Rep. (Me.) 166.

Where several distinct articles are bought at the same time for different prices, even if of the same general description so that a warranty of quality would apply to each, the contract is not entire, but is in effect a separate contract for each article sold, and a right of rescission exists as to each article if the warranty in regard to it is broken. Young v. Conant Mfg. Co. v. Wakefield, 121 Mass. 91.

If the consideration to be paid is single and entire, the contract must be held to be entire although the subject of the contract may consist of several distinct and wholly independent items. Miner v. Bradley, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 457. In this case the defendant put up at auction a cow and 400 pounds of hay, both of which the plaintiff bid off for $17, which he paid at the time. He received the cow and was refused the hay by the defendant, who had used it. The action was brought to recover the value of the hay. Defendant objected that the contract was entire; the plaintiff could not recover back the price paid or any portion of it without rescinding the whole contract, and that this could not be done without returning the cow. The objection was sustained. "Had the plaintiff bid off the cow at one price and the hay at another, although he had taken one bill of sale for both, it would have come within the principles of the above case [i.e., Johnson v. Johnson, 3 B. & P. 162]; but such was not the fact. And it seems to us very clear that the contract was entire, that it was incapable of severance, that it could not be enforced in part and rescinded in part, and that it could not be rescinded without placing the parties in statu quo. See also Jones v. Dunn, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 109; Biggs v. Wisking, 14 C. B. 195; White v. Brown, 2 Jones (N. Car.), 403; Dula v. Cowles, 2 Jones (N. Car.), 454.

A, for a consideration in gross, was insured against loss by fire to the amount of $2400; viz., $2000 on two connecting dwelling-houses, $1000 on each, and $400

94. Acceptance of Partial Performance.—If, however, the promisee accepts a partial performance of an entire contract, he may in some cases be sued by the promisor upon an implied contract to pay as much as that which he has received is reasonably worth.<sup>1</sup> on a building in the rear of the others. Held, the contract was entire, subject in all its parts to the condition imposed by the insurance company, and that a violation of one of the conditions of the policy as to part of the risk affected the whole risk. Kelly v. Humboldt Fire Ins. Co., 11 East. Rep. (Pa.) 496.

Where the subject of sale is an entire lot of growing timber, and the price is not apportioned, the contract is entire. Alcott v. Hugus, 105 Pa. St. 350.

A contract is said to be apportionable when the amount of consideration to be paid by the one party depends upon the extent of performance by the other. If A and B agree together that A shall enter into the service of B and continue for one year, and that B shall pay him therefor the sum of $100; and A enters the service accordingly and continues half of the year and then leaves, he will not be entitled to recover anything on the contract. Ex parte Smyth, 1 Swanst. 337, n. (a). Contracts have been held apportionable in which the service to be performed was specific and fixed, but the consideration to be paid was left to be implied by law. In Roberts v. Havelock, 3 B. & Ad. 404, a ship belonging to the defendant having come into port in a damaged state, the plaintiff was employed and undertook to put her into thorough repair. Before the work was completed a dispute arose between the parties, and the plaintiff refused to proceed until he was paid for the work already done, for which this action was brought. The defendant objected that the action did not lie, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not completed his contract, and as long as that was the case the work already done was unavailable for the purpose for which it had been required. And the case of Sinclair v. Bowles, 9 B. & C. 92, in which A, having undertaken for a specific sum of money to repair and make perfect a given article, and having repaired it in part, but not made it perfect, it was held he was not entitled to recover for what he had done, was cited as in point. Lord Tenterden said: "There is nothing in the present case amounting to a contract to do the whole repairs, and make no demand until they are completed. The plaintiff was entitled to say that he would proceed no further with the repairs till he was paid what was already due," and the plaintiff recovered. See also Withers v. Reynolds, 2 B. & Ad. 882; Sickels v. Pattison, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 257; Wade v. Haycock, 25 Pa. St. 382.

1. If one party without the fault of the other fails to perform his side of the contract in such a manner as to enable him to sue upon it, still if the other party have derived a benefit from the part performed, it would be unjust to allow him to retain that without paying anything. The law generally therefore implies a promise to pay what it is reasonably worth. The cases may be arranged in three classes: those arising on contracts of sale; those arising on contracts to do some specific labor upon the land of another, as to erect buildings or build roads and bridges; and those arising upon ordinary contracts for service. The leading case of the first class is Oxendale v. Wetherill, 9 B. & C. 386. That was an action to recover the price of 130 bushels of wheat sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant at 8s. per bushel. The defendant claimed that the contract was for 250 bushels, and that as the plaintiff had not fully performed, he was not entitled to recover anything. Held, that he was entitled to recover. "The defendant having retained 130 bushels after the time for completing the contract had expired, was bound by law to pay for the same." Per Bayley, J. See also Reed v. Rann, 10 B. & C. 441; Ship-ton v. Casson, 5 B. & C. 378.

In Massachusetts it has been held that if the vendee of a specific quantity of goods sold under an entire contract receives a part thereof, and retains it after the vendor has refused to deliver the residue, this is a severance of the entirety of the contract, and he becomes liable to the vendor for the price of such part. Bowker v. Hoyt, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 555.

In New York the case of Oxendale v. Wetherill has been entirely repudiated, and it is there held that the vendor in such case is not entitled to any remedy. Champlain v. Rowley, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 258, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 187; Mead v. Degolyer, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 632; McKnight v. Dunlop, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 36; Paige v. Ott, 5 Denio (N. Y.), 406; Oakley v. Morton, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 25. Also

If the party whose performance is a condition precedent be prevented from performing his promise by the act of the other party, he will be discharged from further performance, and may recover damages on a quantum meruit or in an action on the contract if he in Ohio. Witherow v. Witherow, 16 Ohio, 238.

One of the most important cases of the second class is Hayward v. Leonard, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 181. The plaintiff contracted in writing to build a house for the defendant at a certain time and in a certain manner on defendant's land, and afterwards built the house within the time and of the dimensions agreed on, but in workmanship and materials varying from the contract. The defendant was present almost every day during the building, and had an opportunity of seeing all the materials and labor, and objected at times to parts of the materials and work, but continued to give directions about the house, and ordered some variations from the contract. He expressed himself satisfied with a part of the work from time to time, though professing to be no judge of it. Soon after the house was done he refused to accept it, but the plaintiff had no knowledge that he intended to refuse it till after it was finished. Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action against the defendant on a quantum meruit for his labor, and on a quantum valebant for the materials. See Smith v. First Cong. Meeting-house in Lowell, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 178; Taft v. Montague, 14 Mass. 282; Olmstead v. Beale, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 528; Snow v. Ware, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 42; Lord v. Wheeler, 1 Gray (Mass.), 282; Hayden v. Madison, 7 Greene (Me.), 76; Jennings v. Camp, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 94; Kettle v. Harvey, 21 Vt. 301; Burn v. Miller, 4 Taunt. 745; Chapel v. Hickes, 2 C. & M. 214; Thornton v. Place, 1 M. & R. 218. But see Ellis v. Hamlen, 3 Taunt. 52; Sinclair v. Bowles, 9 B. & C. 92; Wooten v. Read, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 585; Hilm v. Wilson, 4 Mo. 41; White v. Oliver, 36 Me. 93. As to the third class, see Britton v. Turner, 6 N. H. 481. Contra, Eldridge v. Rowe, 2 Gil. (Ill.) 91; Miller v. Goddard, 34 Me. 102; Olmstead v. Beale, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 529; Davis v. Maxwell, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 286; Swanzy v. Moore, 22 Ill. 63; Hansell v. Erickson, 28 Ill. 257.

An instruction in an action against a county by a contractor to recover a balance claimed to be due under a contract for putting inside blinds in the courthouse, that if the jury found that the contractor had done the work for the county, and the county had accepted the work, or had gone into possession of, and had used the blinds, they should find for the plaintiff for the reasonable value of the blinds, although they should find that the contract had not been complied with, was held correct as a principle of law, and warranted by the evidence, it appearing that the blinds remained in the courthouse, were used, and not rejected by any formal order of the commissioners' court until after the contractor had sold his claim to bona fide purchasers. Campbell v. Hildebrandt, 3 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 243.

Compensation may be allowed for services rendered and materials furnished under a special contract, but not in entire conformity with it, provided that the deviation from the contract is not wilful, and the other party has availed himself of and been benefited by such labor and materials. Pinches v. Swedish Evan. Luth. Church, 10 Atl. Rep. (Conn.) 264, and cases cited therein.

The party for whom work was contracted to be done is not obliged to accept anything in place of what was contracted for. Where work done upon another's building in no respect fulfils the purpose contracted for, or affords any comfort or gratification to the owner, no acceptance thereof will be implied by law from the fact of its being permitted to remain. Presb. Ch. v. Hoopes Co., 7 Cent. Rep. (Md.) 432; s. c., 10 East. Rep. 815.

Where a builder contracts to do certain repairs on a house for an agreed sum, without stipulating as to when the money shall be payable, and when the repairs have been only partially completed the house is destroyed by fire, the builder is entitled to recover compensation pro rata upon the contract price for the repairs then completed. Weis v. Devlin, 3 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 726.

A contracted to make and put certain fixtures into the defendant's church, by a certain day, for a gross sum, to be paid on completion and acceptance. After the work was partly done and before the appointed day the church was destroyed by fire without the fault of either party. Held, A might recover quantum meruit. Haynes v. Second Bapt. Ch., 88 Md. 285; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 413.

prove that he was ready and willing to perform his promise, but was prevented from doing so by the act of the defendant.<sup>1</sup>

95. Breach in Minor Matter.—When the breach is in a matter which the parties may be deemed to have considered of minor importance, which may be compensated for in damages, the party injured is not discharged from the further performance of his contract. He is bound to proceed with performance as if the breach had not occurred, and seek his remedy in an action for damages for whatever injury he has suffered.<sup>2</sup>

1. Planché v. Colburn, 8 Bing. 14; Goodman v. Pocock, 15 Q. B. 576; Cort v. Ambergate R. Co., 17 Q. B. 127; Hall v. Rupley, 10 Pa. St. 231; Moulton v. Trask, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 577; Hoagland v. Moore, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 167; Woolner v. Hill, 93 N. Y. 576; United States v. Behan, 110 U. S. 339; Bannister v. Read, 1 Gilman (Ill.), 92; Selby v. Hutchinson, 4 Gilman (Ill.), 319; Webster v. Enfield, 5 Gilman (Ill.), 298; Derby v. Johnson, 21 Vt. 17; Clark v. Marsiglia, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 317.

One who has been prevented from executing a contract by the conduct of the other contracting party, may recover a reasonable sum for work and labor done, money expended in the performance of the contract, and materials furnished, and in addition an equivalent sum for the profits which he would have realized from the performance. Kendall Bank Note Co. v. Comm'rs of Sinking Fund, 79 Va. 563; Cent. Lunatic Asylum v. Flanagan, 80 Va. 116.

2. In Bettini v. Gye, L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 183, the plaintiff, a singer, agreed with the director of the Royal Italian Opera that he would undertake the part of first tenor in the theatres, halls, and drawing-rooms in the United Kingdom. The agreement was in writing, and contained this clause: "Mr. Bettini agrees to be in London without fail at least six days before the commencement of his engagement, for the purpose of rehearsals." The plaintiff broke this clause by failing to arrive in London until two days before the opera began. The defendant refused to proceed with the engagement, claiming that the breach discharged him from the further performance of the contract. The plaintiff then sued him for a breach of contract. In delivering the judgment of the court. Blackburn, J., said: "We think that we are to look to the whole contract and . . . see whether the particular stipulation goes to the root of the matter, so that a failure to perform it would render the performance of the rest of the contract by the plaintiff a thing different in substance from what the defendant has stipulated for; or whether it merely partially affects it, and may be compensated for in damages." As the court were of opinion that the stipulation did not go to the root of the matter, the defendant was held to be liable for the breach of contract, and the plaintiff recovered.

In MacAndrew v. Chapple, L. R. 1 C. P. 643, an action was brought against a freighter for not loading a cargo. The charter-party contained a clause that the ship should "with all convenient speed, . . . proceed to Alexandria, . . . and there load a cargo of cotton." The ship deviated from her course, and arrived at Alexandria a few days later than she would have done if she had gone there direct. The ship had not been taken up for any particular cargo, and a small loss in freight was the only result of the delay. The court held that the delay afforded no justification to the freighter for refusing to load a cargo, but that his remedy for any damage that had accrued by reason of the delay was by a cross action. "It seems to be now settled," said Willes, J., ". . . that a delay or deviation which . . . goes to the whole root of the matter deprives the charterer of the whole benefit of the contract, or entirely frustrates the object of the charterer in chartering the ship, is an answer to an action for not loading a cargo; but that loss, delay, or deviation short of that gives an action for damages, but does not defeat the charter." In other words, the breach of a clause which on its face does not go to the root of the matter will nevertheless discharge the contract if it appear that in fact it frustrated the object of the parties.

Another example of a condition which does not go to the root of a contract is a warranty upon an executed sale of goods. "A warranty is an express or implied statement of something which the party undertakes shall be part of a contract; and though part of the contract, yet col-

96. Effect of Accepting Substantial Performance.—The breach of a term which in the first instance would have justified a party in repudiating the contract cannot be taken advantage of as a discharge if the party have received a substantial performance of the contract.<sup>1</sup> lateral to the express object of it." Lord Abinger, C. B., in Chanter v. Hopkins, 4 M. & W. 404. Upon the breach of a warranty the vendee may sue the vendor for damages, but cannot return the goods. If a man sell a horse to another and warrant that he is sound, the purchaser, having accepted the horse, cannot return him upon discovering that he is not sound, unless there be an express condition in the contract which gives him that privilege. His only remedy is an action for damages for the breach of the warranty. Kase v. John, 10 Watts (Pa.), 109; note to Chandelor v. Lopus, 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 353. Or, if he have not paid the price, he may wait until he is sued for the purchase-money, and then take advantage of the breach as a proof of failure of consideration and in mitigation of damages. 1 Sm. L. C. (8th Am. Ed.) 34.

1. Mr. Sergeant Williams, in his notes to Pordage v. Cole, 1 Wms. Saund. 310, lays down the following rule: "Where a covenant goes only to part of the consideration on both sides, and a breach of such covenant may be paid for in damages, it is an independent covenant, and an action may be maintained for a breach of the covenant on the part of the defendant, without averring performance in the declaration."

The leading cases upon this point are Boone v. Eyre, 1 Hy. Bl. 273, note (a); Duke of St. Albans v. Shore, 1 Hy. Bl. 179. See also Fothergill v. Walton, 2 J. B. Moore, 630; Stavers v. Curling, 3 Bing. (N. Cas.) 355; Franklin v. Miller, 4 A. & E. 599; Fishmongers' Co. v. Robinson, 5 M. & G. 131, 198; Storer v. Gordon, 3 M. & S. 308; Ritchie v. Atkinson, 10 East, 295; Havelock v. Geddes, 10 East, 555; Jonassohn v. Great Northern R. Co., 10 Ex. 434; Gould v. Webb, 4 E. & B. 933; Milldam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417; Tileston v. Newell, 13 Mass. 406; Bennet v. Pixley, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 249; Obermyer v. Nichols, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 159; Morrison v. Galloway, 2 Harris & J. (Md.) 461; Todd v. Summers, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 167; Lewis v. Weldon, 3 Rand. (Va.) 71; McCullough v. Cox, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 386; Payne v. Bettisworth, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 427;

Keenan v. Brown, 21 Vt. 86; Tompkins v. Elliot, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 496; Grant v. Johnson, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 337; s.c., 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 337; 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 247; Pepper v. Haight, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 429.

"If a party promise to build a house upon the land of another and to dig a well on the premises and to place a pump in it, and the owner of the land covenants seasonably to supply all materials and furnish a pump, it is very clear that the stipulation to furnish materials is dependent and constitutes a condition, because the builder cannot perform on his part until he has the material; so to put a pump into the well. But the stipulation to dig a well is not conditional, because it goes to a small part only of the consideration, and does not necessarily depend on a prior performance on the part of the owner, and because a failure can be compensated in damages, and the remedy of the owner is by an action on the contract." Shaw, C. J., in Knight v. New England Worsted Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 286.

Obermyer v. Nichols, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 159. Upon a lease of a mill the lessor covenanted to put up improvements. The improvements were not put up. Held, that lessor could recover rent, the failure not going to the whole consideration. The defendant was allowed to set off his loss by the non-erection of the improvements.

In Ligget v. Smith, 3 Watts (Pa.), 331, plaintiff agreed to build a warehouse and use certain mortar in its construction. Mortar was not used according to the contract. Held, that this did not constitute an entire defence to an action on the contract, but that the defendant might set off whatever damage he had sustained.

Thus in Carter v. Scargill, L. R. 10 Q. B. 564, the plaintiff, who was the publisher of a newspaper, sold out his business and plant to the defendant, and, in the event of the business being proved to realize a clear profit of £7 per week, the defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff in several instalments the sum of £400. The defendant entered into possession of the business and afterward sold it. The plaintiff brought an action for the ments, and the defendant set up as a defence that the business was not to be worth £7 clear profit per

The court held that, assuming it would have been a good defence if the contract had remained executory, the defendant, having had a substantial part of the consideration, could not take advantage of it. See also observations of Williams, J., in Behn v. Messers, 3 B. & S. (113 E. C. L. R.) 755; Parke, B., in Graves v. Legg, 9 B. & S. 16-17. In the leading case of Boone v. Eyre, 1 Hy. Bl. 273, n., the defendant covenanted to convey to the plaintiff the equity of redemption of a plantation in the West Indies, together with the stock of negroes upon it, in consideration of £500 and an annuity of £100 per annum for his life. The breach of the contract was the non-payment of the annuity. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not, at the time of the contract, legally possessed of the negroes on the plantation, and so had not a good title to convey. The court held that the plaintiff was not bound, Lord Mansfield observing that the plea were to be allowed, any negro not being the property of the plaintiff would bar the action. See Pustie, 32 L. J. Q. B. 179; 2 Pars. on 530 and n.

It is, however, that the right to rescind the contract as discharged should be limited to a mere right to bring an action for damages, it is necessary that the plaintiff should have received a substantial part of the consideration. If that part remains to be done by the promises to the root of the contract, the contract may be rescinded, although the plaintiff has received a partial performance. The case of Ellen v. Topp, 124, furnishes us with an illustration of this principle. There a master took to teach his apprentice the trades of auctioneer, appraiser, and corn factor. The apprentice was to serve for five years. After three years expired the master abandoned the contract of corn factor. The apprentice presented himself from his master's service. The master sued on the indenture of apprenticeship for the desertion of the apprentice, and claimed that although the undertaking to teach the trade of corn factor might have been a condition precedent in the beginning, yet as the apprentice had received the benefit of three years' instruction, he had received a substantial part of the consideration, and was therefore put to his election for damages. But the court held that he could not recover. "The construction of an instrument," said Pollock, C. B., "may be varied by matter ex post facto; and that which is a condition precedent when the deed is executed may cease to be so by the subsequent conduct of the covenantor in accepting less." Then, referring to Boone v. Eyre, 1 Hy. Bl. 273, n., he went on to say: "The defendant . . . might have objected to the transfer, if the plaintiff had no good title to the negroes and refused to pay. . . But this is no objection to the soundness of the rule, which has been much acted upon. . . It cannot be intended to apply to every case in which a covenant by the plaintiff forms only a part of the consideration, and the residue of the consideration has been had by the defendant. That residue must be the substantial part of the contract; and if, in the case of Boone v. Eyre, two or three negroes had been accepted and the equity of redemption not conveyed, we do not apprehend that the plaintiff could have recovered the whole stipulated price, and left the defendant to recover damages for the non-conveyance of it. . . To this particular covenant to serve, the relative duty to teach seems to us to be directly a condition precedent; and we are not able to distinguish between the three trades of auctioneer, appraiser, and corn factor, so as to say that one is more the substantial part of the contract than another."

Where the matter in controversy in the action had been compromised and settled by a written contract, which was partially performed by the defendant, such partial performance by defendant and the acceptance of its benefits by the plaintiff was held to place it out of the plaintiff's power to abandon the contract and sue for the original consideration: he must resort to his action for damages on the contract, if any he has sustained. Love v. Van Every, 9 West. Rep. (Mo.) 913.

B., a company, in execution of a contract made with C., a company, which contract C. had the privilege of electing to affirm or rescind, assigned to C. $5500 worth of the stock of C. Later, a bill in equity having been filed by B. for a specific execution of the contract, it was held that if a rescission should be elected by C., the bill in equity ought not to be dismissed till the stock assigned by B. was returned. Appeal of Brush Electric Light Co., 11 East. Rep. (Pa.) 648.

If the contract is one of exchange, and

97. Severable Contracts.—When a contract is severable, that is, “when the part to be performed by one party consists of several distinct and independent items, and the price to be paid by the other is apportioned to each item,”<sup>1</sup> upon a breach by one party of any one item, the question arises whether the other party is justified in repudiating the whole contract, or is bound to proceed with performance and seek his remedy in an action for damages for whatever injury he may have sustained by the breach.<sup>2</sup>

The rule in England, as established by the recent cases, is, that a breach of any part of a severable contract will entitle the injured party to a right of action, but will not discharge him from the performance of the remainder of the contract, unless it be equivalent to a refusal to perform the balance of the contract, or be of such a character as to wholly frustrate its object.<sup>3</sup> This rule has one party has parted with the property received, he cannot demand a rescission. Smith v. Prittenham, 109 Ill. 540.

A gave to B 150 bonds of a stock company in consideration that B would perform certain acts, make certain loans and advances of money to the company, for the purpose of carrying out the objects for which it was organized, and also purchase of A certain additional bonds at an agreed price, and loan A a certain sum of money. B performed his part of the contract, except as to the making of the loan to A and the purchase of the last-mentioned bonds, which he fraudulently refrained from performing. Held, in an action of trover by A to recover the value of the 150 bonds, that B was entitled to an instruction in substance “that, if several considerations entered into the contract to induce A to part with the bonds, and three of these had been fully and honestly performed by the loans and advances made by B, A could not rescind the contract and maintain an action for the full value of the bonds, unless upon repayment of the sums which B had lent or advanced; and further, that if it was impossible from the nature of the transaction to restore B to the condition in which he was before the contract, A could not avail himself of the benefit of the loans, advances, services, and other acts rendered either to himself or to the company for whom he acted, and at the same time rescind the contract and recover back the consideration for these loans, etc., but must seek his remedy in damages for the injury he has sustained by the wrongful and fraudulent failure of B to perform the contract for the loan and purchase, which was the fourth consideration. Snow v. Alley, 11 N. E. Rep. (Mass.) 764.

As between vendor and vendee, a court of equity would not deny the vendor rescission of a contract for the reason that the vendor had by his disposition of a part of the property fraudulently purchased, made it impossible for the parties to be placed in statu quo. If the vendee retained all the purchased property rescission must be complete, the rule of law applying; but to the extent the fraudulent party disposed of or incumbered the purchased property to third parties without notice, the vendor, claiming rescission, would be excused from refunding or offering to refund that part of the consideration received, representing or equalling the portion of the property disposed of or incumbered by the vendee. Preston v. Spalding. 8 West. Rep. (Ill.) 481.

In settlement of certain notes and accounts, A paid B $50 in cash and conveyed land for a fixed price equalling the balance of the indebtedness, and received the notes and accounts. Held, that B could not rescind in part by rescinding the conveyance and retaining the $50. Worley v. Moore, 97 Ind. 15.

1. 2 Pars. on Conns. *517.

2. The parties may, of course, insert a provision in their contract that if either of them fail in the performance of any one part, the other may treat the contract as at an end. It is only in the absence of such an express provision that the question we are now considering can arise.

3. In Simpson v. Crippin, L. R. 8 Q. B. 14, the defendants agreed to supply the plaintiffs with from six to eight thousand tons of coal, to be delivered into the plaintiffs' wagons at the defendants' collieries in equal monthly quantities during the period of twelve not been adopted by the supreme court of the United States,<sup>1</sup> months. During the first month the plaintiffs sent wagons to receive only one hundred and fifty-eight tons. Immediately after the first month had expired the defendants informed the plaintiffs that they should treat the contract as at an end. The plaintiffs refused to allow the contract to be annulled, but the defendants declined to deliver any more iron. The court held that the breach by the plaintiffs in taking less than the stipulated quantity during the first month did not entitle the defendants to rescind the contract.

In Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208, the defendant contracted to sell to the plaintiffs two hundred and fifty tons of pig-iron, half to be delivered in two, remainder in four weeks; payment, net cash fourteen days after delivery of each parcel. The delivery of the first one hundred and twenty-five tons was not completed for nearly six months. The plaintiffs refused to pay for this, claiming a right to set off the loss they had sustained from being obliged to procure other iron in consequence of the defendants' default, but they still urged the delivery of the second parcel. The defendant, treating the refusal to pay as a breach of the contract by the plaintiffs, declined to deliver any more iron. Held, that the mere refusal to pay for the first parcel did not warrant the defendant in treating the contract as abandoned, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to damages for the breach. "In cases of this sort," said Lord Coleridge, C. J., at pp. 13, 214, "where the question is whether the one party is set free by the action of the other, the real matter for consideration is whether the acts or conduct of the one do or do not amount to an intimation of an intention to abandon and altogether to refuse performance of the contract."

Where, by the non-delivery of part of the thing contracted for the whole object of the contract is frustrated, the party making default renounces on his part all the obligations of the contract." This is the English rule. See, on this subject, Hoare v. Rennie, 5 H. & N. 19; Monassohn v. Young, 4 B. & S. 296; Simpson v. Crippin, L. R. 8 Q. B. 14, supra; Roper v. Johnson, L. R. 8 C. P. 167; Ex parte Chalmers, L. R. 8 Ch. 289; Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208, supra; Bloomer v. Bernstein, L. R. 9 C. P. 588; Morgan v. Bain, L. R. 10 C. P. 15; Brandt v. Lawrence, L. R. 1 Q. B. D.

344; Reuter v. Sala, L. R. 4 C. P. D. 239; Honck v. Muller, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 103; and Mersey Steel Co. v. Naylor, L. R. 9 Q. B. D. 648; Aff'd in H. L., L. R. 9 App. Cas. 434, where the rule, as stated by Lord Coleridge, in Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208, is quoted with approval by Earl Selborne, L. C., at p. 438.

Payment for a previous delivery under a contract for delivery of goods by instalments held not a condition precedent to the right to claim the next delivery; and also held, that purchasers by postponing payment, under erroneous advice, had not so acted as to show an intention to repudiate the contract, or so as to release the sellers from further performance. Mersey Steel & Iron Co. v. Naylor, Benson & Co., 9 App. Cas. 434; 51 L. T. N. S. 637.

In an agreement for employment as a milk carrier, the servant undertook not to serve or interfere with any customer served or belonging at any time to the master, his successors, or assigns; held, that if, on the construction of the undertaking, it was not limited to interference with persons who were customers during the employment of the servant, the undertaking was severable, and capable of enforcement in respect of persons who were customers during the employment. Baines v. Geary, 35 Ch. D. 154; 56 L. T. N. S. 567.

1. The question arose, and was thoroughly discussed, in the recent case of Norrington v. Wright, 21 Amer. L. Reg. N. S. 395; Aff'd by S. C. of U. S., No. 13, Oct. Term, 1885, 42 Legal Int. (Phila.) 466. In that case the contract was for the sale of five thousand tons of old T. iron rails, to be shipped at the rate of about one thousand tons per month, beginning in February, 1880—the whole to be shipped before August of the same year. Four hundred tons were shipped in February, and eight hundred and eighty-five tons in March. In April the shipments exceeded one thousand tons, and in the succeeding months fell short of that amount. The February shipment was delivered and paid for, but the buyers (the defendants), upon learning the amount shipped in February, March, and April, declined to accept further shipments. The plaintiffs then brought an action against them for their refusal to accept the balance of the iron in compliance with the contract. The court below held that they could not recover, although it has been followed in many of the State courts.<sup>1</sup>

but said that they regarded the point as involved in serious doubt, and hoped that the case might be carried to the supreme court of the United States. Upon an appeal to the supreme court the judgment was affirmed. "The plaintiff," said Gray, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, "instead of shipping about one thousand tons in February and about one thousand tons in March, as stipulated in the contract, shipped only four hundred tons in February, and eight hundred and eighty-five tons in March. His failure to fulfil the contract on his part in respect to these first two instalments justified the defendants in rescinding the whole contract, provided they distinctly and seasonably asserted the right of rescission."

1. The English rule has been followed in Pennsylvania. Some of the following cases may seem to be contrary to the English rule, but they may be distinguished upon the ground that there was a breach of the contract by anticipation—a prospective refusal to perform. Shinn v. Bodine, 60 Pa. St. 182, is an example of this class of cases. Lucesco Oil Co. v. Brewer, 66 Pa. St. 352. In Morgan v. McKee, 77 Pa. St. 228, defendants bought 4000 barrels of oil from plaintiffs, and eight similar papers of the same date were executed to them each for the delivery of 500 barrels a month, cash on delivery. Plaintiffs on demand refused to deliver the oil on one of the appointed days. The defendants, on the next day for delivery, gave notice of rescission on the ground of previous default. Held, that plaintiffs might recover for the refusal of the defendants to accept and pay for the oil subsequently tendered at the appointed times. Scott v. Kittanning Coal Co., 89 Pa. St. 232, 238; Graver v. Scott, 80 Pa. St. 88; Stoddart v. Smith, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 355. In Quigley v. De Haas, 82 Pa. St. 267, it was held that contracts of this nature are prima facie severable, but that where it can be shown that such was not the intention of the parties, they will be construed entire.

A agreed to furnish B with a certain quantity of steel of various specified brands and prices, to be delivered as B should require it. A became insolvent after having failed to respond to B's demand for a partial lot, and his property was sold at sheriff's sale. Held, that, notwithstanding, B should have continued to make demand. Merch. & Man. Bank

v. Spratt, 108 Pa. St. 97. See also, in New York, Snook v. Fries, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 313; Swift v. Opdyke, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; Talmage v. White, 3 Jones & Spencer (N. Y.), 218; Tipton v. Feitner, 20 N. Y. 423; Patridge v. Gildermeister, 1 Keyes (N. Y.), 93; Lee v. Beebe, 13 Hun (N. Y.), 89; Sickels v. Pattison, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 257. In Massachusetts, see Newton v. Winchester, 16 Gray (Mass.), 208; Winchester v. Newton, 2 Allen (Mass.), 492; Miner v. Bradley, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 459, 460. Compare Dwinel v. Howard, 30 Me. 258; Haines v. Tucker, 50 N. H. 309; Tyson v. Doe, 15 Vt. 571; Keenan v. Brown, 21 Vt. 86; Gallup v. Burnell, Brayt. (Vt.) 191; Taylor v. Gallup, 8 Vt. 340; Fletcher v. Cole, 23 Vt. 114; Thompson v. Conover, 3 Vroom (N. J.), 466.

On a contract for sale of goods by successive deliveries and payments, a default in respect to one or more will not discharge the other party unless it is evident that the defaulting party intends no longer to fulfil. Blackburn v. Reilly, 47 N. J. L. 290; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 159; Kirkland v. Oates, 25 Ala. 465; Drake v. Goree, 22 Ala. 409, 415.

If A contracts to deliver 500 tons of coal to B as ordered, in quantities not to exceed 200 tons per month, and less than is ordered is delivered and accepted, B cannot demand the deficiency the following month in addition to the 200 tons for that month. Johnson v. Allen, 78 Ala. 387; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 34. And it was held that A's failure to deliver each month the full quantity ordered was a separate breach accruing at the end of each month.

Where one contract relates to separate matters, a breach as to one matter does not excuse the other party from performance as to the other matter. Tucker v. Billing, 3 Utah, 82; Dunlap v. Petrie, 35 Miss. 590; Trimble v. Green, 3 Dana (Ky.), 357; Hewitt v. Berryman, 5 Dana (Ky.), 165; Dibol v. Minott, 9 Iowa, 403; McDaniels v. Whitney, 38 Iowa, 60; Robson v. Bohn, 27 Minn. 333, 346; Sawyer v. Railroad Co., 22 Wis. 403; Goodwin v. Merrill, 13 Wis. 658; Allen v. McKibbin, 5 Mich. 454; Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 227. It has been held in many cases that a contract of this kind is practically made up of several distinct agreements. Coleman v. Hudson, 2 Sneed (Tenn.), 463; Cole v. Cheovenda, 4 Col. 17; More v. Bonnet, 40 Cal. 251; Purdy v. Bullard, 41 Cal. 444; Lomis v. Bank of Rochester, 10 Ohio St. 327;

Discharge of Right of Action.—The right of action which arises from a breach of contract may be discharged (1) by the act of parties;<sup>1</sup> (2) by the judgment of a court;<sup>2</sup> (3) by lapse of time.<sup>3</sup>

1. Discharge by Operation of Law.—Merger.—The acceptance of a higher security for the payment of a debt is an extinguishment of the lower security for the same debt.<sup>4</sup>

Alteration of Written Instrument.—If a written instrument be altered in a material particular it is thereby discharged.<sup>5</sup>

Appointing Debtor Executor.—At the common law if a creditor appointed his debtor his executor, the debt was thereby extinguished.<sup>6</sup> But at the present day a debtor who has been appointed executor of his creditor is considered as a trustee for creditors and legatees of the amount of the debt.<sup>7</sup>

Marriage.—As a general rule, a contract made between parties who subsequently intermarry is extinguished by the marriage. This results from the principle that husband and wife are one in law.<sup>8</sup>

Kennedy v. Schwartz, 13 Nev. 229; Dugan v. Anderson, 36 Md. 567; Maryland Fertilizing Co. v. Lorentz, 44 Md. 218. Contra, King Philip's Mills v. Slater, 12 R. I. 82. Compare also Bradley v. King, 44 Ill. 339; Catlin v. Tobias, 26 N. Y. 217; Smith v. Lewis, 40 Ind. 98. See article on the Rescission of Divisible Contracts, 15 Amer. Law Rev. 623; and Mr. Landreth's note to the case of Norrington v. Wright, 21 Amer. Law Reg. N.S. 398-408, where the cases, both English and American, are collected and reviewed.

1. See RELEASE; ACCORD AND SATISFACTION; ARBITRATION AND AWARD.

2. See JUDGMENTS.

3. See STATUTES OF LIMITATION.

4. See MERGER.

5. An action cannot be maintained upon a written contract which has been materially altered without the defendant's consent, after being signed by him. Osgood v. Stevenson, 9 East. Rep. (Mass.) 545.

An alteration which only does what the law would do—that is, only expresses what the law implies—is not a material alteration. 2 Pars. on Conts. *720.

It may be laid down as a general rule, that a man is discharged from liability "if the altered instrument, supposing it to be genuine, would operate differently from the original instrument, whether the alteration be or be not to his prejudice. Per Lord Campbell, in Gardner v. Walsh, 5 E. & B. (85 E. C. L. R.) 89.

It was formerly held that an alteration by a mere stranger would discharge an instrument. Pigot's Case, 11 Rep. 27. But it is now held that a spoliation by a stranger, or an accidental alteration through mistake, will not affect the validity of the instrument. Neff v. Horner, 63 Pa. St. 327; United States v. Spalding, 2 Mason (U. S. C. C.), 478. Thus, where the seal was torn off a deed by a stranger the instrument was not avoided. Rees v. Overbaugh, 6 Cowen (N. Y.), 746. And where the indorsements on a bill of exchange were cancelled under a mistake by running a pen through them, it was held not to affect the rights of the parties. Wilkinson v. Johnson, 3 B. & C. 428; Raper v. Birkbeck, 15 East, 17. And see 2 Pars. on Conts. *716 et seq.; Byles on Bills, *323, and notes; 1 Greenleaf on Ev. §§ 564-568.

If an instrument is altered by the consent and agreement of the parties, it amounts to a new contract. Myers v. Nell, 84 Pa. St. 369.

If an instrument be lost or accidentally destroyed, the rights of the parties remain unchanged, but are rendered more difficult of proof. In an action on a negotiable instrument alleged to be lost the defendant may demand an indemnity against possible claims. See Byles on Bills (7th Am. Ed.), *381 et seq., and notes.

6. Co. Litt. 264 b, n. 1 (H. & B's. notes).

7. Ipswich Mfg Co. v. Story, 5 Met. (Mass.) 313; Pusey v. Clemson, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 208; 2 Shars. Blk. 512, n.

8. Phillips v. Barnet, L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 439, 440.

But a covenant or contract by a man with a woman is not destroyed by their marriage where the act to be performed is future, to be done after the marriage is determined.<sup>1</sup>

Arrest for Debt.—Before arrest for debt was abolished, the arrest of a debtor upon a capias ad satisfaciendum amounted to a discharge and satisfaction of the debt.<sup>2</sup>

Bankruptcy.—A bankrupt law provides a statutory mode of discharge. By procuring a discharge in bankruptcy the debtor is released from those debts which are provable under the provisions of the bankrupt law.<sup>3</sup>

100. Rescission for Misrepresentation.—A contract may be rescinded when the entering into the same has been induced by a false representation, fraudulent or otherwise,<sup>4</sup> made by a party

1. If a man in contemplation of marriage executes a bond conditioned for the payment of a sum of money to his intended wife if she survive him, the bond is not released by their marriage. Milbourn v. Ewart, 5 T. R. 381; Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, L. R. 2 P. C. 83.

2. Sharpe v. Speckenagle, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 467; Snevily v. Read, 9 Watts (Pa.), 396; Lathrop v. Briggs, 8 Cowen (N. Y.), 171; Ransom v. Keyes, 9 Cowen (N. Y.), 128; Sm. on Contrs. *109.

3. See BANKRUPTCY.

4. Cohen v. Ellis, 4 N. Y. St. Repr. 721; Optical Co. v. Jackson & Co., 63 Miss. 21; Whitman v. Bowden, 2 S. E. Rep. (S. Car.) 630; Rosenthal v. Mahon, Exr, 65 Md. 418; In re Murray, 21 Ir. L. Times, 358; Rorer Iron Co. v. Trout, 2 S. E. Rep. (Va.) 713.

A contract assented to by one party on the faith of material misrepresentations by the other party will be rescinded at the option of the party injured, although the misrepresentations were made neither fraudulently nor negligently. But until rescission the contract is binding. Yeater v. Hines, 24 Mo. App. 619.

A bill lies in equity to set aside and rescind the exchange of real estate brought about by false representations. Witherwax v. Riddle, 9 West. Rep. (Ill.) 794.

A party who has been induced to buy stock through false representations may rescind his contract and recover back the purchase-money. Bridge v. Penniman, 36 Alb. L. Jour. (N. Y.) 54; Poole v. West Point Butter and Cheese Ass'n, 2 Ry. & Corp. L. J. (Neb.) 63.

Where the owner of stock in a coal company sold 392 shares of the same, through his agent, for $4000, upon false representations as to material facts which, if true, vitally affected the value of the stock, such representations being relied on and inducing the purchase, and the sum paid being out of all proportion to the value of the stock, such sale was held rescissible on the ground of fraud. Booth v. Smith, 117 Ill. 370.

One who is induced to enter into a contract for the purchase of a chattel in payment of a precedent debt, and in reliance upon representations made by the vendor as to the character and quality thereof, which prove false and fraudulent, may rescind the contract and return the chattel, and such rescission may be set up in the reply in an action brought by him to recover the original debt. Johnson v. Hillstrom, 33 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 547.

The obtaining a note from a debtor by getting him intoxicated is not a fraud preventing ratification of the note without a new consideration. Lyon v. Phillips, 106 Pa. St. 57.

Where a person signs an instrument without reading it or, if he cannot read, without asking to have it read to him, the legal effect of the signature cannot be avoided by showing his ignorance of its contents, in the absence of some fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation having been practised upon him. But the rule is otherwise, and the instrument will be held void where its execution is obtained by a misrepresentation of its contents; the party signing a paper which he did not know he was signing and did not really intend to sign. Burroughs v. Pac. Guano Co., 1 South. Rep. (Ala.) 212; Rothschild v. Frensdorf, 21 Mo. App. 318; Smentek v. Cornhauser, 17 Ill. App. 266; McKinney v. Herrick, 66 Iowa, 414; Weller's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 594; Hazard v. Griswold, 21 Fed. Rep. 178; Tufts v. Tufts, 3 Utah, 361. And the general rule does not apply in favor of one who thereto, provided such representation be one of fact [this rule does not apply to cases of actual fraud], as distinguished from either matter of law<sup>1</sup> or mere opinion or intention,<sup>2</sup>—that it be by word or act has induced the omission to read. Palmer v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 4 New Eng. Rep. (Conn.) 470.

When a contract has been reduced to writing, and one of the parties refuses to sign it unless a certain construction, stated by him, should be put upon it, the other party who by his silence and conduct has induced him to sign it will be estopped from claiming a different construction, otherwise it would be a fraud. Flint v. Johnson, 4 New Eng. Rep. (Vt.) 375; s. c., 9 Atl. Rep. 364; 11 East. Rep. 459.

Where circumstances prevent one who by fraud has been induced to enter into a contract from rescinding it, he is not for this reason deprived of a remedy. He may keep what he has received and sue for, damages, or may proceed in equity for relief, offering to restore, etc. Gould v. Cayuga Co. Bk., 99 N. Y. 333.

If a person is induced by the fraudulent representations of the promoter of a corporation to subscribe for shares of stock in the corporation, and pays his subscription to the person holding the office of treasurer, he cannot, by rescinding the contract, maintain an action for money had and received against the other shareholders, even if the corporation is invalid and the shareholders are partners. Perry v. Hale, 143 Mass. 540.

Where a party has been allowed or induced to make a contract perfect in its formal constituents, upon motives different from those which the facts would have offered if known, the contract is never more than voidable. Stiff v. Heith, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 374.

Where A and B entered into an arrangement to organize a gas company, and B informed A that it was necessary to purchase a license which he undertook to do himself, it was held that fraudulent misrepresentations made by B to A as to the price he had paid for the license gave A a right to rescind the contract, and sue for the money paid with interest. Hauk v. Brownell, 9 West. Rep. (Ill.) 165; s. c., 11 N. E. Rep. 416.

A person who has been induced to enter into a contract of partnership by misrepresentations not such as would entitle him to bring an action of deceit for damages, has a right, on the contract being rescinded by the court, to be indemnified against the debts and liabilities of the partnership. This is not giving damages, but is the proper consequence of rescinding the contract. Newbigging v. Adam, 34 Ch. D. 582, where the nature and extent of the right to indemnity on rescission of a contract are considered.

A does not lose his right to bring a suit for the rescission of a contract between B and himself by the bringing of a suit quia timet by B in relation to the same matter. Metrop. El. R. Co. v. Manh. El. R. Co., 11 Daly (N. Y.), 373; s. c., 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 103.

A court of equity will not grant the prayer for a rescission of a contract for the purchase of land because of fraudulent misrepresentations by the vendor as to the character and location of such land, the falsity of which representations the most cursory examination would have disclosed, when it is shown that the vendee sent an agent and afterward went himself to examine the same. Watson v. Austin, 63 Miss. 469.

The right to rescind a contract exists when there has been a material change in the subject-matter, before the final consummation of the agreement, brought about by the act of one of the parties, which the party rescinding did not authorize or assent to. Harris v. Piatt, 31 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 135; s. c., 7 West. Rep. 328.

False and fraudulent representations not relating to the subject-matter of the contract are not a defence to an action on the contract. Blair v. Buttolph, 33 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 349.

1. Martin v. Wharton, 38 Ala. 637; Beall v. McGehee, 57 Ala. 438; Davis v. Betz, 66 Ala. 206; Starr v. Bennett, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 303; People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655; Insurance Co. v. Brehm, 88 Ind. 578; Fish v. Cleland, 33 Ill. 238; Insurance Co. v. Reed, 33 O. St. 283, 293; Thompson v. Ins. Co., 75 Me. 55; Jaggar v. Winslow, 30 Minn. 263; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45, 50; Rashall v. Ford, 2 Eq. 750; Beattie v. Lord Ebury, L. R. 7 H. L. 102, 130; Seeley v. Reed, 25 Fed. Rep. 361.

This does not apply where the misstatement of law is absolutely fraudulent. Townsend v. Cowles, 31 Ala. 428; Berry v. Whitney, 40 Mich. 65; Stumpf v. Stumpf, 7 Mo. App. 272; Cooke v. Nathan, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 342; Moreland v. Atchison, 19 Tex. 303; Hirschfeld v. Lond., Br. & S. C. R. Co., 2 Q. B. D. 1; West Lond. Com. Bank v. Kitson, 13 Q. B. D. 363.

2. Gage v. Lewis, 68 Ill. 604; Perkins such as to induce the contract,<sup>1</sup> and that it is made as part of the same transaction.<sup>2</sup> Such a contract, however, is voidable and not void,<sup>3</sup> and cannot be rescinded if the parties cannot be put in statu quo,<sup>4</sup> nor after third persons have for value acquired rights v. Lougee, 6 Neb. 220; Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 146; Fisher v. N. Y. Com. Pl., 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 608; Long v. Woodman, 58 Me. 49; Hazlett v. Burge, 22 Iowa, 535; Burt v. Bowles, 69 Ind. 1; Vernon v. Keys, 12 East, 632; 4 Taunt. 488; Ex parte Burrell, 1 Ch. D. 552. See also Gordon v. Parmelee, 2 Allen (Mass.), 212; Manning v. Albee, 11 Allen (Mass.), 520; Tucker v. White, 125 Mass. 344; Sherwood v. Salmon, 2 Day (Conn.), 128; Neidefer v. Chastain, 71 Ind. 363; Bishop v. Small, 63 Me. 12; Lyons v. Briggs, 22 A. L. Reg. (R. I.) 619; Davis v. Meeker, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 354; Chrysler v. Canaday, 90 N. Y. 272; Shade v. Creviston, 93 Ind. 591; Saunders v. Hatterman, 2 Fred. L. (N. Car.) 32; Graham v. Pancoast, 30 Pa. St. 89; Gordon v. Butler, 105 U. S. 553.

But where the parties have not equal means of knowledge, or efforts are made to prevent discovery of real value, misstatements as to value may be material. Allen v. Hart, 72 Ill. 104; Griffin v. Farrier, 32 Minn. 474; Simar v. Canaday, 53 N. Y. 298; Bower v. Fenn, 90 Pa. St. 359; Picard v. McCormick, 11 Mich. 68; McClellan v. Scott, 24 Wis. 81.

1. Bowman v. Carithers, 40 Ind. 90; Ely v. Stewart, 2 Md. 408; Foy v. Houghton, 83 N. Car. 467; Anderson v. Burnett, 5 How. (Miss.) 165; Attwood v. Small, 6 Cl. & F. 444; Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. Cas. 775-6.

And mere lack of proper inquiry is no defence where one party has relied on the fraudulent representations or concealment by the other. Cent. R. Co. Venez. v. Kisch, L. R. 2 H. L. 99; David v. Park, 103 Mass. 501; Mead v. Bunn, 32 N. Y. 275, 280; Roberts v. Plaisted, 63 Me. 335; Upton v. Englehart, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 496, 501; Eaton v. Winnie, 20 Mich. 156; Olson v. Orton, 28 Minn. 36; Carmichael v. Vandebur, 50 Iowa, 651; McKee v. Eaton, 26 Kan. 226; Bank v. Hunt, 76 Mo. 439; Risch v. Von Lilienthal, 34 Wis. 250.

But the party claiming relief must have acted on the statement of the other, and not on his own judgment. Hagee v. Grossman, 31 Ind. 223; Hough v. Richardson, 3 Story (U. S.), 659; Slaughter's Adm'r v. Gerson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 379; Phipps v. Buckman, 30 Pa. St. 401; Tuck v. Downing, 76 Ill. 71.

2. Fogg v. Pew, 10 Gray (Mass.), 409;

McCracken v. West, 17 Ohio, 16; Wells v. Cook, 16 Ohio St. 67; West B'k of Scot. v. Addie, L. R. 1 Sc. & D. 145; Way v. Hearn, 13 C. B. N. S. 292; Barnett v. Barnett, 2 S. E. Rep. (Va.) 733.

3. Upton v. Englehart, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 496; Foreman v. Bigelow, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 508; Nealon v. Henry, 131 Mass. 153; Whitcomb v. Denio, 52 Vt. 382; Davis v. Betz, 66 Ala. 206; Baird v. Mayor, 96 N. Y. 597; Oakes v. Turquand, L. R. 2 H. L. 346, 375-6.

4. Newbigging v. Adam, 34 Ch. D. 582; s. c., 55 L. T. N. S. 794; 56 L. J. R. (Ch.) 275; 35 W. R. 597; Smith v. Brittenham, 109 Ill. 540; Stewart v. Houst. & Tex. Cen. R. Co., 62 Tex. 246; Sharp v. Ponce, 76 Me. 350; Vogel v. Demorest, 97 Ind. 440; Cahn v. Reid, 18 Mo. App. 115.

To entitle a party to rescind a contract on the ground that he has been fraudulently betrayed into making it and to part with his property, he must return or offer to return that which he has received and place the other party in the same position, as nearly as may be, that he was in before the contract was made. Snow v. Alley, 11 East. Rep. (Mass.) 750; s. c., 11 N. E. Rep. 764; Willingham v. Hoo-ven, etc., & Co., 74 Ga. 233.

A party who has been fraudulently led into the making of an entire contract must, upon discovering the fraud, with reasonable promptness avoid the contract as a whole; but where no rights have been actually surrendered and no benefits acquired under it, no formal restoration of the status quo is necessary. Higham v. Harris, 108 Ind. 246.

Where a shareholder in a company has sold some of the shares originally taken by him, he is not thereby deprived of his right to have the contract (which is a severable one) rescinded as to the remainder on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation in the company's prospectus, provided that the shares sold were parted with before the fraud was discovered by the shareholder. Re The Mount Morgan (West) Gold Mine, Limited; Ex parte West, 56 L. T. N. S. 622; s. c., 2 Ry. & Corp. L. Journ. 131. Compare Clarke v. Dickson, 27 L. J. Q. B. 223; West Bk. of Scot. v. Addie, L. R. 1 Sc. & D. 145; Francis v. N. Y. & Br. El. R. Co., 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1.

thereunder,<sup>1</sup> and the rescission must take place within a reasonable time,<sup>2</sup> notice of the election to rescind having been communicated to the other party, though this may be done by bringing suit to have the contract set aside. Otherwise the right of rescission will be considered waived by acquiescence.<sup>3</sup> (See also FRAUD; RESCISSION.)

When the other parties to an agreement which is impeached for fraud have put themselves in the position in which they find themselves, with full knowledge that the plaintiff claimed the agreement to be void and fraudulent, and the plaintiff has acted promptly, the rule that he cannot have relief unless he can restore the other parties to the same position which they occupied before they entered into the agreement does not apply. Metrop. El. R. Co. v. Manh. El. R. Co., 11 Daly (N. Y.), 373; s. c., 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 103. See Hammond v. Pennock, 61 N. Y. 145; Hopkins v. Shenader, 71 Ill. 449; Harper v. Ferry, 70 Ind. 264.

Where a person has been induced to take shares in a company by misrepresentation contained in the prospectus, the mere circumstance that the company is insolvent at the time when he takes proceedings to rescind his contract to take shares does not, in the absence of countervailing equities, deprive him of his right to rescind. Carling v. London & Leeds Bank, 56 L. J. R. (Ch.) 321.

An executed contract for the sale and delivery of certain mills then in operation at another place, with all the fixtures and appurtenances, and the material of the building where they then were, cannot be rescinded on the ground of having been induced by fraudulent misrepresentations, as the parties could not be restored to their original status. Stanton v. Hughes, 1 S. E. Rep. (N. Car.) 852.

A contract can only be avoided for fraud in its inception by rescinding it in toto, and by restoring the benefits already received. Barrie v. Earle, 3 New Eng. Rep. (Mass.) 114; s. c., 8 East. Rep. 6; Merrill v. Wilson, 33 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 716; s. c., 10 West. Rep. 161.

A mere fall in the value of property will not interfere with the right of rescission, it being in the same condition as when received. Whitcomb v. Denio, 52 Vt. 382. Compare Waddell v. Blockey, 4 Q. B. D. 678, 683.

One seeking to rescind a contract for fraud need not absolutely tender what he has received if he gives notice of his intention to rescind, and continues in a situation to put the other party in statu quo. That the contract was partly executed at the time of the discovery of the fraud will not in itself prevent a rescission, unless the greater part of the subject-matter thereof has been disposed of. Amer. Wine Co. v. Brasher, 4 McCrary C. Ct. 247.

1. Williamson v. Russell, 39 Conn. 406; Kern v. Thurber, 57 Ga. 172; Mears v. Waples, 3 Houst (Del.) 581; s. c., 4 Houst. (Del.) 62; Titcomb v. Wood, 38 Me. 561; Railroad Co. v. Kerr, 49 Ill. 548; Sinclair v. Healy, 40 Pa. St. 417; Padden v. Taylor, 44 N. Y. 371; Hall v. Hinks, 21 Md. 406; Lee v. Portwood, 41 Miss. 109; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Sammons, 49 Wis. 316; Arnett v. Clondas, 4 Dana (Ky.), 300; Attenborough v. St. Kath. Dock Co., 3 C. P. D. 450; White v. Garden, 10 C. B. 919; Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285, 303.

2. Whether a person acts with reasonable promptness in rescinding a contract induced by fraud is a mixed question of law and fact, proper to be submitted to a jury. Chamberlin v. Fuller, 9 Atl. Rep. (Vt.) 832; s. c., 4 New Eng. Rep. 614.

A vendor must exercise his right of rescission for fraud on the vendee's part within a reasonable time, and he cannot affirm in part and rescind in part. Lapp v. Ryan, 23 Mo. App. 436. See Baird v. Mayor, 96 N. Y. 567, 598; Wingate v. King, 23 Me. 35; Key v. Jennings, 66 Mo. 356, 370; Bradshaw v. Yates, 67 Mo. 221; Estes v. Reynolds, 75 Mo. 563; Campau v. Van Dyke, 15 Mich. 371; Kribbs v. Downing, 25 Pa. St. 399, 404; Davis v. Stuard, 99 Pa. St. 295; Willoughby v. Moulton, 47 N. H. 205; Williamson v. R. Co., 28 N. J. Eq. 277; s. c., 29 N. J. Eq. 311; Clough v. L. & N. W. R. Co., L. R. 7 Ex. 34.

Where an applicant for a benefit certificate has misrepresented his true age, which was unknown to the benefit society, but eighteen months are allowed to elapse between the proof of death showing the true age and the determination of a suit thereon by the beneficiary, without an offer on the part of the society to rescind the contract, or refund the money received thereon, it will be estopped from setting up such a defence. Gray v. Nat. Ben. Ass'n, 11 N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 477.

3. See cases cited in previous note.

101. Mistake—Duress—Undue Influence.—A contract may also be avoided that was entered into through a fundamental mistake,<sup>1</sup> or obtained by duress or undue influence.<sup>2</sup> Where the former is of a kind to exclude real consent, the contract is absolutely void; otherwise only voidable. (See also MISTAKE and DURESS.)

The party defrauded by misrepresentations of the persons with whom he deals, by performing his part of the contract, with a full knowledge of the fraud, is deemed to have ratified it, but is not always barred of a remedy by damages for the fraud. Nauman v. Oberle, 8 West. Rep. (Mo.) 253.

1. Crowe v. Lewin, 95 N. Y. 423.

While equity will rescind a contract induced by fraudulent representations concerning a material matter, it will not act because of a mistake as to the legal effect of known facts, and particularly where no injury can follow from the mistake. Seeley v. Reed, 25 Fed. Rep. 361.

In general, for the mistake of one party only to an instrument relief will not be afforded in equity, as by reformation, so as to subject the other party to obligations or conditions to which he never assented, but relief may be granted when the parties can be placed in their former position. Benson v. Markoe, 33 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 38.

Money voluntarily paid upon a claim of right, with full knowledge of all the facts, cannot be recovered back merely because the party at the time of payment was ignorant of or mistook the law as to its liability. The illegality of the demand paid constitutes of itself no ground for relief, but there must be in addition some compulsion or coercion attending its assertion, which controls the conduct of the party making the payment. Jefferson Co. v. Hawkins, 2 South. Rep. (Fla.) 362.

In Hooper v. Mayor & Corp. of Exeter, 56 L. J. R. (Q. B. D.) 457, it was held that harbor-dues paid for exempted articles, in ignorance of the exemption, could be recovered back.

The conditions in a contract for the sale of land provided, amongst other things, that the purchaser should pay a deposit on the purchase-money, and that if he should fail to comply with the conditions his deposit-money should be forfeited to the vendors, who should be at liberty to resell the property. The purchaser paid the deposit, investigated and accepted the title, but when the time came for completion, being unable to find the balance of the purchase-money, he abandoned the contract. The vendors consequently rescinded the contract and forfeited the deposit. Three years after the purchaser heard that on a resale by the vendors under the same conditions an objection had been taken to the title, which had been held fatal, and thereupon brought an action to recover his deposit, on the ground that there had been a mutual mistake and a total failure of consideration. Held, that he was not entitled to recover his deposit, this being not only an earnest and security for the completion of the purchase, but "something which creates by the fear of its forfeiture a motive in the payor to perform the rest of the contract." Soper v. Arnold, 35 Ch. D. 384.

2. It is not necessary to avoid a contract entered into through fear, that the fear should be such that a person of ordinary courage and resolution would yield to it; but if either party is mentally incompetent to resist pressure improperly brought to bear, there is no consent. Scott v. Sebright, 56 L. J. R. (P. D.) 11.

INDEX.

- Abortion, 229 n.
 Accessories, conflict of laws, 537 n.
 Acknowledgment, 407 n.
 Act of God. See Cas, 20
 Actions, "cash payment," 32
     Words actionable, 163 n.
 Actual change of possession, 90 n.
 Administrators, conflict of laws, 589
 Admiralty, conflict of laws, 526
 Admiralty jurisdiction, 22
 Admissions. See Confessions.
 Adopted children, 232 n.
 Adultery, character, 113
     Complaint, 382 n.
     Confessions, 442
 Advertising cards, copyright, 140
 Agency, charter-party, 148
     Commercial travellers, 315
     Commission merchants, 317
     Confessions, 490
     Contracts, 862
 Aliens. See Citizenship, 242
     Contracts, 877 n.
 Ambassadors, I., 524; III., 274
     Cases affecting, 22
     Conflict of laws, 510 n.
 Amendments to constitution. See Citi-
     Constitutional law, 671 [zenship, 249
 Animals. See Cattle, 43
     Chattels, 169 n.
 Annuities, clear, 281
 Appeal, constitutional law, 682 n.
 Appraisement, certificate of, 59 n.
     Constitutional law, 756 n.
 Arbitration, "two disinterested and competent men," 381 n.
     Contracts, 881
 Arithmetic, 239 n.
 Arms, carrying of, 16
 Assault, special cases, 23
     Character, 113
 Asses, 43 n.
 Assessments, certiorari, 65 n.
 Assignment, choses in action, 236
 Assignment for creditors, conflict of laws,
Assumpsit, jurisdiction, 25 [571, 573
 Attachment, goods in factor's hands, 334
 Attorneys, charge at law, 120
     Contempt of court, 779
     Library, execution, 347 n.
 Auction, catching bargain, 42
     Bids, illegal contracts, 886 n.
     Contracts, 846
 Bail, "special case," 25
 Bank notes as cash, 34
 Bankruptcy, conflict of laws, 579, 613
     Constitutional law, 670
 Banks. See Clearing-house, 282
 Bastards, not children, 230 n.
 Bastardy, character, 114
 Beef steer, 43 n.
 Bees, 169 n.
 Beeves, 43 n.
 Bill of sale. See Chattel mortgage, 175
     Conditional sales, 424 [320 et seq.
 Bills and notes, commission merchants,
     Conflict of laws, 585
 Bill of attainder, 690 n.
 Bill of credit, 690 n.
 Bills of exchange, 591
 Bill of rights. See Constitutional law, 670
 Bounty land, "claims," 275
 Breach of promise, character, 112 n.
 Broker's compensation, 378 n.
 Buffalo, 43 n.
 Building, commencement of, 314
 Burden of proof, catching bargain, 38
     Checks, 216
     Community property, 357 n.
     Concealed weapons, 414 n.
     Confessions, 496
 Business, agreement not to carry on, 18
     Carrying on, 17
     Covenant not to be concerned in, 419 n.
 Capital cases, 28
 Cargo, complete, 383
 Carriage, 19
 Carriers. See Charter-party, 143
 Carriers of live stock, 1
     Actions against carriers, 16*g*
     Burden of proof, 16*g*
     Evidence, 16*h*
     Measure of damages, 16*h*
     Burden of proof, 16*g*
     Connecting carriers, 16*f*
     Contracts limiting liability, 10
         English statutes and their construction, 11
         United States generally, 13
         New York, 15
     Notices of claim for damages, 15
     Drovers' passes, 16
 Damages, 15
 Delays, 16*e*
 Drovers' passes, 16
 Duty to receive, 10

Carriers of live stock—Continued.

- Feed and water, 16*d*
- Injuries arising from intrinsic qualities of stock, 8
- Liability, contracts limiting, 10
- Liability during transit, 16*a*
  - Duty to furnish safe cars and appliances, 16*a*
  - Loading and unloading, 16*b*
  - Duty to feed and water, 16*d*
  - Duty to care for live stock generally, 16*d*
  - Liability for delay, 16*e*
  - Loss of market, 16*f*
- Liability, notices limiting, 10
- Liability when carrier's negligence is primary cause of loss or injury, 9
- Loading and unloading, 16*d*
- Loss of market, 16*f*
- Notices limiting liability, 10
- Statutory regulations as to transportation, 16*g*

Carry, 16

- Arms, 16 n.
- Away, 16 n.
- Off, 16 n.
- Out, 19 n.

Carrying on business, 17

- To sell, 19 n.

Cart, 19

- Taxed, 20 n.

Cartmen, II., 782

Cartways, 20 n.

Cas, 20

Case, 21

- Affecting ambassadors, 22
- Affecting contrasted with "cause affecting," 22
- Arising in a justice's court, I., 717 n.
- Arising in the naval forces, 22
- Arising under a treaty, 21 n.
- Arising under treaties, I., 717 n.
- At law, 26
- Capital, 28
- Civil, 26
- Criminal, 28
- Facts of his, 29
- In each, 29
- In law and equity, 21 n.
- In, of death, 30 n.
- In which the law of U. S. authorizes an oath to be administered, 22
- Of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, 22
- Sit in any, 30 n.
- Special, not case at law, 25
- Stated, 29
- What is special, 23

Cash, 31

- Bank notes as, 34
- Copper cash, 35 n.
- Credit in, 35 n.
- Estimated cash value, 34

Cash—Continued.

- For cash, 35 n.
- Full cash value, 34
- In cash, 35 n.
- Notes, 34
- Payment, 32
- Sale for, 31 n.
- Terms cash, 34
- Treasury notes not, 34
- Cashier, II., 118
  - General Agent, I., 349 n.
  - When agent for third person, I., 342 n.
- Cast, 35
  - Away, 35 n.
- Casting vote, 35 n.
- Casual, 36
  - Poor, 36 n.
- Casualties, inevitable, 37 n.
  - Of war, 37 n.
  - Unavoidable, 37 n.
- Casualty, 37
  - Or necessity, 37 n.
- Catalogue, 37
- Catching bargain, 37
  - Acquiescence, 42
  - Adequacy, 40
  - Ancestor, knowledge of, 41
  - Auction, sale by, 42
  - Burden of proof, 38
  - Confirmation, 42
  - Definition, 37
  - Equitable doctrine, 38
  - Exceptions, 41
  - Expectant heirs, who are, 40
  - Improvements, 39 n.
  - Limitations, 42 n.
  - Specific performance, 39 n.
  - Statutes, 42
  - Sub-purchaser, 39 n.
  - Valuation, 40
- Catchings, 43
- Cattle. See Animals, I., 571
  - Driving or conducting, 43 n.
  - Fodder for, 44 n.
  - Guards, 43 n.
  - Turned loose, 43 n.
  - Working, 44 n.
- Cause, 44
  - Affecting persons who, etc., 47 n.
  - And procure to be administered, 48 n.
  - Any other, 44 n.
  - Any party to a, 47 n.
  - Civil, 47 n.
  - Depending, 47 n.
  - Due, 44 n.
  - Final disposition of, 47 n.
  - For, 44 n.
  - Good, 45
  - Good, of action, 47 n.
  - Irresistible, superhuman, 45
  - Justifiable, 45
  - Legal, 45
  - Nature and, 45

Cause—Continued.

- Of action, 46 n.
- Of action shall have arisen, I., 717 n.
- Of action shall accrue or shall have accrued, I., 142 n.
- Of action synonymous with claim, 275
- Of complaint, 44 n.
- Of removal, 44 n.
- Or matter, 47 n.
- Other, 45
- Probable, 45
- Proximate, 45
- Reasonable, 45
- Remaining untried, 47 n.
- Same, 46 n.
- Satisfactory, 46 n.
- This, 47 n.
- To be taken, 47 n.
- Caveat, 48
- Cease, 48
  - To be operated, 48 n.
  - To be thereon, 48 n.
  - To inhabit, 48 n.
  - To reside, 48 n.
- Ceasing to reside, 48 n.
- Cede, 48
- Cedule, 48
- Celebrate, 48
  - A marriage, 49 n.
- Celebrating a rite, 48 n.
- Cellar, 49
  - Burglary, II., 676 n.
- Cemeteries, 49–58. See also Dead Body.
  - Actions against trespassers, 54
  - Adverse possession, I., 257 n.; III., 51
  - Assessment, 56 n.
  - Attachment for debt, 58
  - Burials, II., 698 n.
  - Burial rights, 50 et seq.
  - Dedication, 51
  - Definition, 49
  - Easements, 49
  - Execution, exemption from, 58
  - Monuments, 51
  - Mortgages void, 55
  - Nuisances, when, 55
  - Removal of bodies, 50
  - Right of burial, 50, 51
  - Right to improve, 51
  - Taxation, exemption from, 56
  - Title of lot owners, 49
  - Trespassers, 53 [etc., 54
  - When equity will prevent desecration,
- Certain, 58
  - Rent, 58 n.
- Certainty, 58
  - Moral, 58 n.
- Certificate, 59
  - Of acknowledgment, I., 147 et seq.
  - Of deposit, II., 322
- Certiorari, 60–67
  - Acts not judicial, 63 n.
  - As an ancillary process, 67
  - Assessments, 65 n.

Certiorari—Continued.

- Assignment of error, 62 n.
- Bill in equity, II., 216
- By what courts granted, 60
- Contested elections, 66 n.
- Costs, 67
- Definition, 60
- Effect of issuing writ, 66
- Elections, 66 n.
- General principles upon which granted or refused, 62
- Habeas corpus, 67
- Highways, 65 n.
- Judgment, 66
- Jurisdictional fact disputed, 62 n.
- Justices, 66 n.
- Motion to quash or supersede, 65 n.
- Municipal courts, 66 n.
- Notice, 65 n.
- Petitioner's interest, 63 n.
- Return, 61
- Streets, 65 n.
- Substantial justice, 63 n.
- Taxes, 65 n.
- What matters reviewed, 62 [63 n.
- Writ directed to one having record,
- Cestui que trust*, adverse possession, I., [240
- Chain, 67
- Chair, 67
- Chairman, 68
- Chambers, 68
- Champagne, 68
- Champerty and Maintenance, 68–88
  - Advancing costs, 79
  - After litigation ended, 79
  - Champerty as a defence, 86
  - Contingent fees, 78
  - Definition, 68
  - Effect of maintenance, 85
  - Existence of the old law in U. S., 73
  - General nature, 68
  - Parol evidence to show, 73
  - Pretended titles and things in litigation, 80
  - Quantum meruit, 86
  - Recognized exceptions, 76
- Chance, 88
  - By, 88 n.
  - Game of, 88 n.
- Chancellor, 89
- Change, 89
  - Bill or ticket, 90 n.
  - In the property, its use or occupation, 89 n.
  - Its original purpose, 89 n.
  - Of grade, 89 n.
  - Of moorings, 89 n.
  - Of possession, 89 n.
  - Of title, 89 n.
  - The form or ground of action, 89 n.
- Change of venue, 90–108
  - Affidavit, 104
  - At what stage of proceedings, 104 n.
  - Constitutional law, 732 n.
  - Corporations, 102

Change of venue—Continued.

County to which cause should be moved, 90
 Definition, 90
 Disqualification of Judge, 93
 Effect of change, 105
 Impartial trial, 96
 Infants, 102
 Jurisdiction, 105
 Local prejudice, 99
 Mandamus, 91
 Non-residence of parties, 100
 Review by court of appeal, 108
 When may be had, 91
 When motion may be made, 102
 Who may apply for, 101
 Witnesses, 95
 Changed, 89 n.
 Channel, 108
 Chapel, 109
 Chapels, private, or free, 109 n.
 Chapter, 109
     Headings, 109 n.
 Character, 110–118
     Adultery, 113
     Assault, 113
     Bastardy, 114
     Breach of promise, 112 n.
     Civil proceedings, 112
     Criminal proceedings, 110
     Definition, 110
     Divorce, 113
     Embezzlement, 113
     Fraud, 113
     How proved, 114
     Libel and slander, 112 n., 114 n.
     Malicious prosecution, 113
     Malpractice, 113
     Negligence, 113
     Parties, of, 112
     Seduction, 113
     Trespass, 113
     Witnesses, of, 116
 Charcoal, 118
     Accession, l., 58 n.
 Charge, 118
     And accuse, l. 143 n.
     And discharge, 119
     Attorney-at-law's, 120
     Declaration of, 120
     Free of, 120
     On holding, 120
     Person in, 121 n.
     Power to, 119
     Priority of, 120
     Registered, 120
     To enter heir, 120
     To jury, 121 n.
 Chargeable, 122
     Actually, 122 n.
     Thereby, 122 n.
 Charged with capital offence, II., 728 n.
     With crime, 121 n.
 Charges, 120

Charging order, 121 n.
     Part of a bill, 119
     The hundred, 121 n.
 Chariot, 122
 Charities—Charitable Trusts, 122–138
     Actions, 135
     Almsgiving, 127
     Animals, protection of, 127 n.
     Application of the law, 123
     Corporation may hold trust, 137 n.
     Cy Pres doctrine, 133
     Definition, 122
     Education, trusts for, 128
     Friendly societies, 127
     General relief, 127
     Incidents of charitable uses, 135
     Jurisdiction over, 124 n.
     Liability of fund for torts, 138 n.
     Origin of the law, 123
     Poor rates, 128 n.
     Public purposes, 131
     Purposes of charitable gifts, 126
     Religious purposes, 130
     Restraints upon donors, 137
     Soliciting, l., 495 n.
     Superstitious uses, 130 n.
     Taxation, 138 n.
     Trustee, who may be, 137 n.
     Trusts for poor, 127
     Trusts not charitable, 132
     Validity, lex loci, 126 n.
     Various charitable purposes, 321
 Chart, 138
     Copyright in, 139
     Title of, 140
 Charter, 141
     Acceptance, 141 n., 142
     Accepting new, from another State, Conditions precedent, 142 [143 n.
     Dissolution, 141 n., 142
     Eminent domain, 141 n.
     Expiration of separate franchise, 142
     Fact of existence, 142
     Foreign corporation, 143 n.
     General statutes, 143 n.
     Prescription, 142
     Private corporations, 141 n.
     Proof of, 141 n., 143 n.
     Repeal, 141 n.
 Charter-party, 143–155
     About to sail, l., 34
     Agency, 148
     Assumpsit, l., 885
     Cesser clause, 148
     Charter to government, 153
     Conditions precedent, 151
     Construction of contract, 150
     Damages for breach of contract, 154
     Definition, 143
     Dissolution of contract, 154
     General nature, 144
     Implied engagements, 149
     Jurisdiction, 155
     Obligations of parties, 152

Charter-party—Continued.

- Remedy, 155
- Special terms construed, 148
- Usage and custom, 150
- Usual contents, 145
- Vessel let on shares, 153
- Who may make, 143
- With the exception of the cabin, II., 712

Chase, 155

Chaste, 156

Chaste Character, abduction, I., 25 n.

Chastity, 158

Presumption as to, 156

Chattels, 163-175

- Absolute possession, 168
- Accession, title by, 174
- Administration, title by, 174
- Animals, 169 n.
- Attachment, title by, 175
- Buildings as fixtures, 166
- Chattel interests in remainder, 170
- Chattels personal, 167
- Chattels real, 164
- Chose in action, 170
- Contract, title by, 173
- Copyright, title by, 174
- Definition, 163
- Easements, 170 n.
- Forfeiture, 171
- Gift, title by, 172
- Heirlooms, 165
- Ice, 166
- In action, 170
- Insolvency, title by, 173
- Intellectual labor, title by, 174
- Joint tenancy, 168
- Judgment, title by, 171
- Marriage, title by, 171
- Movables, 163
- Occupancy, 171
- Oysters, 170 n.
- Partnership, 167
- Patent, title by, 174
- Pews, 165 n.
- Property in, 168
- Qualified property, 169
- Riparian rights, 166
- Severalty, 169
- Stock of corporations, 166
- Succession, title by, 171
- Tenancy in common, 168
- Title to, 171
- Torts, 171
- Trade-mark, title by, 174
- Will, title by, 174

Chattel mortgages, 175-209

- Accession, I., 57 n., 58, 59 n., 60 n.;
- Acknowledgment, 182 [III., 186,
- Acknowledgment before interested party, 182 n.
- Adjournment, 207 n.
- Affidavit, 182
- After default, 189 n.
- Animals, I., 59 n.

Chattel mortgages—Continued.

- Application of proceeds, 208 n.
- Assignee in insolvency, 199 n.
- Assignment of mortgage, 209,
- Attempt to sell, 205 n.
- Bank stock, 183 n.
- Book accounts, 187 n.
- Caveat emptor, 207 n.
- Change of possession, 195,
- Conditional sales, 424
- Conflict of laws, 552
- Confusion of goods, I., 59 n.; III., [186 n.
- Contents, 179
- Contents of bill, 206 n.
- Corporations, 193 n.
- Creditors at large, 198 n.
- Crops, I., 60 n.; III., 185
- Debts, 188
- Definition, 175
- Description of property, 180
- Discharge of mortgage, 201
- Doctrine in equity, 184 n.
- Estoppel, 178 n. [178 n.
- Evidence of extraneous circumstances,
- Excessive sales, 207 n.
- Execution, 179
- Execution purchaser, 198 n.
- Executory interests, 183 n.
- Expenses of sale, 208 n.
- Fixtures, 187 n.
- Foreclosure, 205
- Form, 179
- "Forthwith," 193
- Future advances, 188 n.
- Goods held by bailee, 184
- Heirs, 199 n.
- Invalid at common law, 190 n.
- Joint owners, 193 n.
- "Justly due," 188 n.
- Lex loci, 179 n.
- Lex situs governs, 190 n.
- Lost mortgage, 191 n.
- Measure of damages, 203 n.
- Money debt necessary, 176 n.
- Mortgage changed to pledge, 177 n.
- Mortgage void only in part, 197 n.
- Mortgagee's right to take possession on default, 204
- Natural produce, 184 n.
- Nature of mortgagor's interest, 189
- Nature of mortgagee's title, 200
- Officer levying attachment, 203 n.
- Parol evidence, 177
- Partnership, 193 n.
- Partnership debts, 188 n.
- Plants, I., 60 n.
- Pledge, 176
- Possession, 176 n.
- Present and future debts, 188 n.
- Proceeds of sales to be applied on mortgage debt, 198 n.
- Property not in existence, 184 n.
- Public or private sale, 207 n.
- Purchaser's vendee, 199 n.

Chattel mortgages—Continued.

Redemption, 200
 Refiling, 194, 195 n.
 Registration, 191 [192 n.
 Removal of mortgagor to another town,
 Removal to another county, 193 n.
 Renewal notes, 188 n.
 Repairs, 186 n.
 Replevin against purchaser, 203 n.
 Rights of action in mortgagee, 202
 Rolling-stock, 183 n.
 Roman law, 176 n.
 Sale for breach of condition, 206
 Sale for cash, 207 n.
 Sale with terms of defeasance, 177
 Sales to be for mortgagor's own benefit, 197 n.
 Schedule or inventory, 191 n.
 Seal, 179
 Second mortgagees, rights of, 208
 Statement of consideration, 182 n.
 Stock in trade, 184 n., 186
 Stock of corporation, 179 n.
 Stock of goods, 184 n.
 Stock of goods, mortgagee an agent to sell, I., 340 n., contra, 346 n.
 Storage charges, 203 n.
 Symbolical delivery, 196
 Taking must be peaceable, 204 n.
 Time, calculation of, 195 n.
 Uncertainty, 179
 Undue imposition, proof of, 178 n.
 Validity as against third persons, 198
 Validity, by what law governed, 190
 Verbal, 179
 Vessels, 191 n.
 Violation of statutes, 189 n.
 What may be mortgaged, 183
 What mortgage covers and secures, 186
 Where filed, 192 n.
 Who may mortgage, 182
 Widow, 199 n.

Cheat, 209

Check. See Cheat, 210

Checks, 211-228

Acceptance, implied, 228
 Acceptance, verbal, 220
 Actions, check-holder's right to sue, 226
 Alteration of signature, 225
 Amount, 212 n.
 Antedated, 218 [217
Bona fide holder, rights without notice,
 Burden of proof as to injury to drawer,
 Certification by mistake, 221 [216
 Certification, verbal, 220
 Certification, what it imports, 221
 Certified, 219
 Certifying, I., 341 n.
 Conflict of laws, 591
 Damages for wrongful dishonor, 225
 Date, alteration of, 225
 Delay in presentment and notice, 215
 Definition, 211 [collection, 216
 Drawee bank not suitable agent for Checks—Continued.

Drawer, certification discharges, 220
 Drawer may extend time for present-
 Forged, 222 [ment, 216
 Forged, discovery and notice, 224
 Forged, effect of paying bona fide holder,
 Forged indorsement, 225 n. [222 n.
 Identification, 222 n. [charges, 216
 Indorser, unreasonable delay dis-
 Mail, presentment by, 216
 Memorandum, 219 n.
 Notice, 212
 Order of payment, 218 n.
 Payment by, 218 n.
 Post dated, 218
 Presentment, 212
 Raised, 225 n.
 Reasonable time, what is, 213
 Time for presentment, 213
 Time within which drawee must make payment or refuse, 217
 Unreasonable delay discharges in-
 Verbal acceptance, 220 [dorser, 216
 Verbal agreement not to present, 216
 Withdrawal of deposit before bank [fails, 213 n.
 Chemist, 228
 Cherokee, 228
 Chevisance, 228
 Chicory, 228
 Chief, 229
 Child—Children, 229
 A child's part, 233
 Abuse of, I., 49
 Accessory, I., 62 n., 65 n.
 Adopted children, 232 n.
 Assault on, I., 783, 784 n., 822 n.
 Bastards, 230 n.
 Child or children, 233
 Citizenship, 242
 Comparative negligence, 373
 Confessions, 489
 Defence of, assault, I., 799
 Definition, 417
 Eleven children, 233
 Family of minor children, 233
 Grandchildren, 231 n.
 Our child or children, 233
 Poor children, 229
 Pregnant with child, 233
 Seventh or younger child, 233
 Step-children, 232 n.
 Three children, 233
 Younger children, 234
 Childish, 234
 China, 234
 Chinese, I., 457 n.; III., 234
 Citizenship, 242
 Constitutional law, 691 n.
 Chip, 234
 Chocolate, 234
 Choice, 234
 Choose, 234
 Equivalent to appoint, I., 631 n.
 Chose, 235

Chose in action—chattels, 170
 Chose in possession, 235
 Chose local, 235
 Chose transitory, 235
 Chosen freeholders, 235
 Choses in action, 235
   Assignment, 236
   Basis of the right, 235
   Contract with public officials, 237 n.
   Definition, 235
   Expectancies, 237 n.
   Form of the action, 236
   Future earnings, 237 n.
   Liens, 237 n.
   Part of debt, 237 n. [237 n.
   Trustee's sale, action to set aside,
 Christian, 238
 Christian name, 239
 Chuck-a-luck, 239
 Church, a public building, II., 604 n.
   Arson, I., 763 n.
 Cider, 239
 Cipher, 239
 Circuit, 239
 Circular, 240
 Circular notes, 240 n.
 Circulating medium, 240 n.
 Circumstances, 240
 Citation, 240
 Cite, 241
 Citizenship, 242-256
   Birth, acquired by, 242 [244
   Children born out of U. S., rights of,
   Chinese, 243, 250
   Civil rights act, 249
   See Constitutional law.
   Expatriation, 256 [249
   Fourteenth and fifteenth amendments,
   Indians, 245
   Interstate commerce, 253 n., 254 n.
   Marriage, alien women, 244
   Naturalization, 246
   Property rights, 254
   Rights of citizens of States under U.
   S. constitution in other States than their domicil, 252
   Rights of State to legislate, 250
   Slaves, emancipated, 249
   Thirteenth Amendment, 249
   Treaties, 250
   Voting, 252
 City, 256
 Civil, 256
 Civil action, 257
 Civil cases, 26
 Civil Damage Acts, 257-272
   Action, what bars, 270
   Action, who has right of, 269
   Agent, liability for, 258
   Constitutionality, 257
   Damages, actual and exemplary, 267
   Dealer liable for sales by agent or ser-
   Death, 265 [vant, 258
   Evidence, 271

Civil Damage Acts—Continued.
   Injuries for which damages may be claimed, 261
   Intoxication produced by several sellers, 258
   Liability of owner of premises, 260
   Married women, liability of, 260 n.
   Mitigating circumstances, 268
   Nursing, compensation for, 267
   Person, injuries to, 261
   Property, injuries to, 262
   Servant, liability for, 258
   Statutes, 257
   Support, injury to means of, 262
   Who liable, 258
 Civil Rights Act. See Citizenship, 249;
   Constitutional law, 673
 Civiliter, 273
 Civiliter mortuis, 273
 Civilization, 273
 Claim, 273
   Acts of Congress, 275
   Arbitration of, 274
   Attachment Act, in, 276
   Bank stock, 274
   Bounty land, 275
   Cause of action, synonymous with, 275
   City charter, 275
   Claiming under, 276
   Claims and demands, 274
   Claims and effects, 274
   Constitutions, in, 275
   Contract, 276
   Counter-claim, 274
   Demand, synonymous with, 275
   Indemnity against, 274
   Land and land titles, 276
   Lawful, 274
   Limitation of, 275
   Notes, includes, 274
   Pleading, in, 276
   Public land, 276
   Tort, 276
   Under whom they claim, 276
 Claim of comisance, 277
 Claim of liberty, 277
 Claimant, 277
   Pension acts, 277
   Pre-emptioner not a, 277
 Clandestine, 277
 Class, 278
 Clause, 278
 Clay, 279
 Clay pits and mines, 279 n.
 Cleanse, 279
 Clear, 279
   Annuities, 281
   Contracts, 281
   Days, 282
   Deed, 280
   Fines, 281
   Of all incumbrances, 280
   Of assessments, 280
   Of charge, 280

- Clear—Continued.
 Of expense, 280
 Statute, 282
 Title, 280
 To clear land, 281
 To clear out a highway, 281
 Yearly rent, 280
 Clearance, 282
 Clearing-house, 282
 Clearly convinced, 279 n.
 Clearly established, 279 n.
 Clerical error, 286 n.
 Acknowledgment, I., 152
 Ambiguity, I., 543
 Amendment of, I., 550
 Bail bond, II., 21
 Bills and notes, II., 329
 Bonds, II., 461 n., 462, 466, 466*a*.
 Clerk, I., 342 n., 348
 Close the bargain, II., 124 n.
 Clothes, 286
 Clubs, amotion, I., 560 n., 561 n.
 Coach, 287
 Coal, 287
 Mines, 288 n.
 Privileges, 287 n.
 Seams of, 313 n.
 Wagon, 20 n.
 Workable coal seam, 288 n.
 Worked out, 288 n.
 Coast, 288
 Atlantic, 288 n.
 Plying coastwise, 288 n.
 Coasting trade, 288 n.
 C.O.D., 289
 Definition, I., 17
 Delivery without payment, I., 350 n.
 Code, 290
 Codicils, 291–305
 Confirmation of will by, 301
 Construction of will and, 292
 Definition, 291
 Destruction of will, 299
 Gift of residue, 298
 Power of sale, 299
 Presumptive revocation of, by destruction of will, 299
 Proof of execution, 304
 Republication of will by, 301
 Revocation of will by, 296 [300 n.
 Revocation of will by destruction of, Unattested, 292 n.
 Undue influence, 304
 Codification, 290
 Coffee-house, 305
 Coffin, 305
 Cognate, 306
 Cognizance, 306
 Cognizance and control, 306 n.
 Cognovit, 307
 Cohabit, 308
 Cohabit, I., 211 n.
 Cohabitation, 308
 Contracts, 828 n.
 Coin, 309
 Coins, gold, silver, and copper, 310 n.
 Copper cash, 310
 Instrument adapted to coining, 310 n.
 Money, to coin, 309 n.
 To pay in current coin, 310 n.
 Coinage, 310
 Collar, 310
 Collateral, 310
 Ancestors, 310 n.
 Assurance, 310 n.
 Descent, 310 n.
 Estoppel, 310 n.
 Facts, 310 n.
 Inheritance tax, 310 n.
 Issue, 310 n.
 Kindred, 310 n.
 Limitation, 310 n.
 Promise, 311 n.
 Security, 311 n.
 Warranty, 311 n.
 Collatio Bonorum, 311
 Collation, 311
 Collect, 312
 Collectible, 312
 Collection, 312
 Collections, agent's, I., 355–360
 Banks, II., 111
 Collector, 312
 Colliery, 313
 Collision, bill of lading, II., 235
 Bottomry, II., 493
 Carriers of passengers, II., 764
 Collusion, agent's fraud, I., 423
 Color, 314
 Colored person, II., 423
 Come, 314
 To reside, 314
 To settle, 314
 Comfort, 314
 Coming, 314
 To market, 314 n.
 Commencement of a building, 314
 Commercial travellers, 315
 Commission merchants, 317–346
 Accounting, 332
 Actions, 342
 Attachment, 334
 Authority, cannot delegate, 331
 Average, general, 319 n.
 Bankrupt acts, 339
 Commissions, 339
 Common carriers may be, 318
 Conversion, 333 n.
 Damages, 329
 Definition, 317
 Del credere commissions, 340
 Diligence, 330
 Duties, 325
 Cannot delegate his authority, 331
 May protect his own interests after demand, 327
 Measure of damages, 329

Commission merchants, duties—Cont'd.

- Must account, 332
- Must act in good faith, 330
- Must obey instructions, 325
- Must use reasonable skill and diligence, 330
- Place of sale, 326
- Price, 327
- Ratification, 329
- Time of sale, 327
- Factor's rights, 333
  - Bankrupt acts—fiduciary debts, 339
  - Commissions, 339
  - Del credere* commissions, 340
  - Goods must be in factor's possession, 335
  - How lost, 337
  - Lien, 333
  - Lien of purchasing factor, 335
  - Lien a personal privilege, 339
  - Principal debtor or surety, 340
  - Principal's personal security, 338
  - To be indemnified, 341
  - Waiver, 337
- Fiduciary debts, 339
- Foreign principals, 343
- General agent, 345
- Good faith, 330
- Indemnification, 341
- Indorsement of bills, 333 n.
- Instructions, 325
- Insurance, 324
- Lien, 333
- May protect own interests after demand, 327
- Notes taken by, 320 n.
- Personal security of principal, 338
- Place of sale, 325
- Pledge, cannot, 321
- Powers, 319
  - Cannot barter or pledge, 321
  - Extent defined by usage, 319
  - Factors' acts, 323
  - How conferred, 319
  - May sell in their own name, 320
  - May sell on credit, 320
  - Power to insure, 324
  - Power to warrant, 324
  - Revocation of authority, 324
- Price, 327
- Principal debtor or surety, 340
- Purchasing factor, lien of, 335
- Ratification, 329
- Reasonable skill, 330
- Relation of factor to third parties, 342
  - Factors of foreign principals, 343
  - May sue in his own name, 342
- Revocation of authority, 324
- Rights of principals, 344.
  - Factor is a general agent, 345
  - Factor of several principals, 345
  - Principal may follow his goods as long as they can be distinguished,
- Sales by, 320

Commission merchants—Continued.

- Several principals, 345
- Statutes, 323
- Time of sale, 327
- Usage, 319
- Waiver, 337
- Warehouse receipts, 320 n.
- Warranty, 324
- Common, 346
  - Assurances, 347 n.
  - Labor, 347 n.
  - Law, 347
  - Pleas, 347 n.
  - Proceeding, 347 n.
  - Purpose, I., 66
  - School, 346 n.
  - Sewer, 347 n.
  - Tools, 347 n.
- Communicate, 349
- Communication, 349
- Community, 349
  - Confidence of, 349 n.
  - Property, 350-365
  - Burden of proof, 357 n.
  - Conveyance by husband to wife, 356
  - Creditors, 364
  - Declarations of husband, 356
  - Deeds, recitals in, 356
  - Definition, 350
  - Heirs, 363
  - Intention of parties, 356
  - Liabilities of husband, 357
  - Liabilities of survivor, 361
  - Liabilities of wife, 360
  - Origin and history, 354
  - Powers of husband, 357
  - Powers of survivor, 361
  - Powers of wife, 360
  - Presumptions, 354
  - Property purchase by funds of husband, but in name of wife, 356
  - Rights of creditors, 364
  - Rights of heirs, 363
  - Rights of husband, 357
  - Rights of survivor, 361
  - Rights of wife, 360
  - Separate and common property distinguished, 351
  - Sufficiency of proof, 375 n.
  - What is; what is not, 350 n.
- Commutation, 365
- Compact, 365
- Company, 366
  - Incorporated, 366 n.
  - Joint stock, 366 n.
  - Manufacturing, 366 n.
  - Persons composing the, 366 n.
  - Said, 366 n.
  - Ship's, 366 n.
  - The, 366 n.
  - Trading or other public, 366 n.
  - Transportation, 366 n.
  - Turnpike, 366 n.
- Comparative negligence, 367-375

Comparative negligence—Continued.

- Carrier's, II., 749
- Children; when not applicable to, 373
- Custom, 373
- Definition, 367
- Degrees of negligence, 368
- Failure to use ordinary care, 371
- Origin, 374 [cient, 372]
- Preponderance of negligence insuffi-
- Proximate, 372
- Special rules, 373
- When not applicable to children, 373
- When plaintiff can recover, 369
- When plaintiff cannot recover, 370
- Where it prevails, 375
- Wilful injury, 372
- Comparison of handwriting, 377
- Compelled, 377
- Compensation, 378
  - Broker's, 378 n.
  - Contracts, 379
  - Delay, 380 n. [profits, 380 n.]
  - Distinction between compensation and
  - Executor, 379
  - Guardian, 379
  - In statute, 378 n.
  - Just, 378
  - Officer's, 379
  - Receiver's, 379
  - Servant's, 379
- Competent, 380
  - Authorities, 380 n.
  - Clerk, 380 n.
  - Court, 380 n.
  - Evidence, 380 n.
  - Jurisdiction, 380 n.
  - Oath or other competent proof, 381 n.
  - Party, 381 n.
  - Persons, 381 n.
  - To dispose by will, 381 n.
- Complain, 381.
- Complainant, 381
- Complaint, 381
  - Adultery, 382 n.
  - In writing, 382 n.
  - Neglect to make, 381 n.
  - Of suffering, 382 n.
  - When includes indictment, 382 n.
- Complaints, 381 n.
- Complete, 382
  - Cargo, 383 [382 n.]
  - Completely issued and negotiated,
  - House, 383
  - In statute, 382 n.
  - Inventory, 383 [383]
  - Machinery to be furnished complete,
  - Purchaser, 383
  - Street completed, 384
- Completed, 383-385
- Completion, 382
- Composition with creditors, 385-399.
  - Agreement held not a bar, 388 n.
  - Agreement not to sue, 386 n. [387]
  - Agreement of creditors to join in deed,

Composition with creditors—Continued.

- Assignment of claim, 386 n.
- Authority of partner, 387
- With a portion of creditors, 389
- Counter-claim, 394
- Debtor must act in good faith, 391
- Definition, 385
- Duty of debtor, 395
- Failure to obtain assent of all or a cer-
- tain portion of the creditors, 390
- False representations, 392
- Generally, 386
- How effected, 387
- Liability of debtor, 395
- Liability of sureties, 390
- Mutuality, 386 n.
- New promise, 399
- Secret agreements, 396
- Securities for preference void, 398
- Sureties; retention of, 395
- Variance, 396
- Waiver of forfeiture, 396
- What debts included, 392
- Compounding offences, 399
- Bills and notes, II., 366
- Definition, 399
- Felony, 399
- Illegal contracts, 402
- Information on penal statutes, 402
- Misdemeanor, 400, 406
- Rewards, 406
- Compromise. See Accord and Satisfac-
- tion; Composition with Creditors.
- Compulsion, 407
- Computation of time, I., 267 n.
- Compute, 407
- Conceal, 407
- Concealed weapons, 408-415; also I., 718,
- 735 n.
- Burden of proof, II., 653 n.; III., 414 n.
- Carried about the person, 410
- Intent, 414
- Statutes, 408
- Statutory exemptions, 411
- Traveller's, 411 n.
- What is concealment, 410
- What weapons included, 409
- Concealment, II., 75 n.
- Of birth, 416-419
- Of contemplated felony, I., 67 n.
- Conception, 420
- Concern, 419
- Concerned, 419
- Concerns, 419
- Condemnation, 420
- Condition, 422
- Precedent, 423
- Subsequent, 423
- Conditional contract, 423
- Conditional sales, 424
- Acts to be done after delivery, 428 n.
- Chattel mortgages, when, 437 n.
- Condition partly performed, 428 n.
- Condition precedent, 427, 429

Conditional sales—Continued.

Conflict of laws, 436 n.
 Consignment to sell, 426
 Contract of "Sale and return," 433
 Custom of trade, 435 n.
 Definition, 424
 Delivery, 429 n. 430, 431
 Disguised as leases, 426
 Distinction between absolute and c.
 Instalment sales, 431 [sales, 424 n.
 Intent, 428 n., 430 n.
 Laches, effect of seller's, 436 n.
 Leases, sales called, 426, 437 n.
 Mortgage by vendee, 437 n.
 Partial failure of delivery, 431
 Payment and delivery to be concur-
 Reasonable time, 434 n. [rent, 430
 Remedies of vendor, 434
 Requisites, 424
 Rights of conditional vendee, 430 n.
 Rights of mortgagee, 427 n.
 Right of repurchase, 426 n.
 Rights of third parties, 436
 Right of third purchasers, 427
 Rights of vendor, 434
 "Sale and return," 433
 Sales called leases, 426, 437 n.
 Separation when necessary, 429 n.
 Substitution of goods, 425 n.
 Time fixed by contract, 434 n.
 "To arrive" sales, 432
 Vendee's risk, 433 n.
 Waiver, 429 n., 432, 435
 Warranty, effect of, 425 n.

Conduct, 438

Conducting actions or suits, 438 n.

Coercion, accomplice's, I., 62 n.

Confectionery, 234 n.

Confederacy, 438

Confederate money. See Money.

Bills and notes, II., 366 n., 653 n.

Confession of judgment. Bills and notes,

Confessions, 439-497 [II., 341

Admissibility, ground of, 440

Admissible, examples of, 472

Adultery, 442

Agents, 490

Arrest, c. made under, 470

Artifice in obtaining, 481

Bill in equity, II., 212 n.

Burden of proof, 496

Children, 489

Clergy, to the, 495

Conversation overheard, 447

Copy of, furnishing, 497

Corpus delicti, proof of, 448

Corroboration, 447

Crime charged, must be of, 495

Deception in obtaining, 481

Definition, 439

Degree of credit to be given to, 440

Demeanor, inferred from, 492

Duress, 469

Effect, 445

3 C. of L —60

Confessions—Continued.

Evidence only against party, 482

Examination under oath, 488

Extra-judicial, 445

Free, must be, 449

Inadmissible, 451, 464

Inadmissible, facts ascertained by, 481

Inducement by accepting as state's evidence, 477

Inducement by offer of pardon, 477

Inducement by promise of immunity from prosecution, 477

Inducement held out with reference to a different charge, 456

Inducement, person in authority, 456

Inducement relating to others, 456

Inducement, what is, 452

Inducement, when held not to have ceased, 479

Inducement, when held to have ceased,
Insincere, 442 [477

Interpreter, statement by, 442

Intoxication, 442

Introducing, mode of, 495

Judicial, 445

Legal proceedings, 489

Matters void in law or false in fact,
Misnomer, 494 [492

Mistake, 442

Mobs, 470

Nature of, 445

Pardon, inducement by offer of, 477

Person in authority, inducement by,

Person in authority, who is, 459 [456

Person not in authority, C. to, 463

Police, C. in presence of, 457

Prosecutor, admissions by, 490

Questioning, 484

Silence, 492

Sleep, 442

State's evidence, inducement, 477

Stolen property, declarations accompanying delivery of, 448

Subsequent, 482

Third persons, C. by, 484

Voluntary, must be, 449

Whole C. must be taken, 491

Writing, taken in, 496

Confidence, 407

Confidential communication, attorney's,
Confinement, 497 [I., 601

Confirmation, 498

Confiscation, 421

Conflict of laws, 469-659

Accessories, 537.

Actions against administrators and executors, 646, 649

Actions by administrators, 589

Actions, jurisdiction of, 519

Actions, life insurance, 648

Actions, negligence causing death, 508
n., 521, 648

Actions on foreign statute, 522

Actions pending in foreign state, 535

Conflict of laws—Continued.

- Administrators, 630, 644
- Administrators, actions by, 589
- Admiralty, 526
- Aliens, 343.
- Ambassador, 570 n.
- Army and navy, foreign, 510 n.
- Arrest, 577
- Assignment for creditors, 571, 573, 613 n.
- Assignment of choses in action, 571
- Attachment, 527
- Attainder, disabilities of, 516, 537
- Attempts to commit crime, 538 n.
- Authentication of contracts, 558
- Autre droit*, persons acting, 644
- Bankrupt and insolvent laws, 613
  - Where the parties are all subjects of the State in which the assignment is made, 613
  - Assignment of real estate, 616
  - Choses in action, 616
  - Property in transitu and ships at sea, 616
- Assignments which contravene the law of the situs, 616
- Conveyances under foreign bankrupt and insolvent laws, 618
- Relation of foreign bankrupt to attaching creditors, 618
- Collision with local lien, 620
- Reciprocal relation of creditors, 621
- General rules as to priorities, 621
- Questions between local bankruptcies, 621
- Bankrupt's prior transactions, 621
- Effect of bankruptcy upon subsequent execution, 622
- Effect of foreign bankrupt discharges, 622
  - Participation in bankrupt proceedings, 623
  - Power of States to pass bankrupt laws, 623
  - Foreign discharge no defence against creditor not domiciled in country granting the discharge, 623
  - Contracts made and to be performed in State of discharge, 624
  - Contracts made and to be performed out of State granting discharge, 624
  - Discharge in one State no bar to an action on a contract made in another State, 625
  - Discharge in one State no bar to action in another, 625
  - Discharge no bar to suit by creditor of another State in the Federal courts, 625
  - Where foreign discharge may be pleaded, 626

Conflict of laws, bankrupt and insolvent laws—Continued.

- Effect of foreign discharge on note indorsed to bona fide holder before maturity, 627
- Effect of foreign discharge of person from arrest, 627
- Rights of foreign bankrupt assignee to sue, 627
- The remedy is governed by the forum, 628
- Assignee representative of assignor, 628
- Suit by assignee in his own name, 629
- Substitution of assignee, 629
- Suit against assignee in Federal courts, 629
- Federal bankrupt laws and discharge, 629
- Bankruptcy, 506 n.
- Discharge, 579
- Bills and notes, 585
- Notes, bonds, etc., 585
- Rights of original parties, 585
- Liability of parties, 585
- Interest and usury, 586
- Demand, protest, notice of dishonor and days of grace, 587
- Indorsements, 587
- Assignment, 588
- Notes executed in one State, and made payable or indorsed in another, 588
- Rights of action against maker or acceptor, 588
- Suits by administrators and their assignees, 589
- Defences, 590
- Bill of exchange, drafts, checks, etc., Law governing, 591 [591]
- What a foreign bill, 591
- Bills drawn in one State, and accepted, indorsed, or discounted in another, 591
- Acceptance, 592
- Transfer, 593
- Protest and notice of dishonor, 593
- Days of grace, 593
- Action on, 594
  - Action by indorsee, 594
- Interest, 595
- Damages, 595
- Defences, 596
- Checks, 596
- Letters of credit, 597 [612]
- Collusion in divorce proceedings, Fraud in procuring divorce, 612
- Bills of exchange, 591
- Capacity of persons, 512
- Statutes destroying, 515
- Statutes protecting, 519
- To take real estate, 566

Conflict of laws—Continued.

- Caste, disabilities of, 517
- Charitable trusts, 642
- Charters, foreign, powers under, 511 n.
- Chattel mortgage, 552
- Checks, 591
- Choses in action, assignment of, 571
- Civil death, disabilities of, 516
- Co-conspirators, 537 n.
- Collusion as to divorce, 612
- Comity of nations, 503
- Concurrent jurisdiction, 525
- Conditional sales, 436 n.
- Continuing offences, 538
- Contracts, 542
  - Of lex loci contractus, 542
    - What deemed the place of contract, 546
  - Interest, 549
    - Contract rate, 549
    - Rate after maturity, 550
    - Usury, 550
  - Contracts for the loan of money, 550
  - Contracts for insurance, 551
  - Contracts relating to personal property, 552
    - Mortgage of a vessel, 552
  - Validity of contract where made, 552
  - Contracts injurious to a nation or its subjects, 555
  - Contracts founded on political, etc., interpitute, 556
  - Contracts in fraud, etc., of the laws of another country, 556
    - Contracts for sale of intoxicating liquors, 556
    - Contracts by subjects residing abroad, 558
  - Contracts which are immoral, 558
  - Contracts opposed to national policy, 558
  - Form, proof, and authentication of contracts, 558
  - Nature, obligation, and interpretation of contracts, 559
    - Nature, 559
    - Obligation, 559
    - Interpretation, 559
      - Rules of interpretation, 561
  - Contracts made in one State to be performed in another, 561
- Lex loci rei sitæ*, 563
- Real property, 563
  - Distinctive features of real property, 564
  - Conveyances of real property, 565
    - Nature and extent of interest transferred, 566
    - Capacity to take real estate, 566
    - Real estate acquired by operation of law, 566

Conflict of laws, contracts, lex loci rei sitæ—Continued.

- Immovables not land, 567
- Incumbrances of real property, 567
- Personal property, 567 [567]
  - Sale valid according to lex loci contractus, but invalid according to lex loci rei sitæ, 569
- Assignment of choses in action, 571
  - Foreign assignments for benefit of creditors, 571
- Powers, 573
- Of lex domicilii, 573
- Capacity to contract; personal status, 573
- Assignment for benefit of creditors, 573
- Contract by master of a vessel, 574
- Personal property, 574
- Married women, 575
- Of the lex fori, 575
  - General rules, 575
  - The rule as to remedies upon contracts, 576 [577]
  - As to arrest on foreign contract, 577
  - Form of judgments and executions, 579
  - Defences arising from matters ex post facto, 579
  - Counter-claim, or set-off, 579
  - Discharge, 579
  - Statute of limitations, 583
- Conveyances, 565
- Corporations, 505 n., 532
- Counter-claim, 579
- Courts, decisions of, 504 n., 509
- Coverture, 518
- Creed, disabilities of, 517
- Crime began in one country and terminated in another, 538
  - Committed in one country, when punished in another, 537
- Criminal laws and sentences, territorial limitation of, 536
- Decisions judicial, 504 n., 509
- Definition, 501
- Discharge, 579
- Divorce, 598, 601
- Domicil, 514, 573, 605, 607, 609, 610, 635, 658
- Drafts, 591
- Estates acquired by operation of law, 539 et seq. [566]
- Evidence, 539 et seq. [566]
- Ex post facto, 579
- Expatriation, 513
- Extra-territorial force of laws, 508
  - Supremacy of States, 508
  - Natural allegiance, 511
- Laws relating to the status and capacity of persons, 512
  - Rights of expatriation and naturalization, 513
  - Rights to regulate property, 513

Conflict of Laws extra-territorial—Continued.

Lex loci contractus, 513
 Municipal laws, 514
 Supremacy of domicile, 514
 Statutes destroying capacity, 515
   Disabilities of slaves, 516
   Disabilities of civil death, 516
   Disabilities of infamy and attainder, 516
   Disabilities of creed and caste, 517
   Disabilities of infants, 517
   Disabilities of coverture, 518 [518
   Disabilities of idiocy and lunacy,
   Disabilities of spendthrifts, 518
 Statutes protecting capacity, 519
 Execution, 527, 579
 Executors, 630, 644
 Federal courts, 525
 Foreign assignment for creditors, 571
 Foreign charters, powers under, 511
 Foreign contracts, 506 n.
 Foreign contracts, nature, obligation, and interpretation, 559
 Foreign country, laws of, 504 n.
 Foreign judgments, 527
   Judgments in rem, 528
   Judgments in personam, 530
   Judgments in courts of sister States,
     531
   Pendency of suit in foreign State, 535
 Foreign laws must be plead, 539
 Foreign laws, rules governing recognition of, 507
 Foreign revenue laws, 508 n.
 Foreign statutes, 508 n.
 Form of contracts, 558
 Garnishment of wages, 523, 529
 General principles, 502
 Guardians, foreign, 626
 Habeas corpus, 525 n.
 Idiocy, disabilities of, 518
 Illegal contracts, 556
 Immoral contracts, 558
 Infamy, disabilities of, 516, 537
 Infants, disabilities of, 517
 Injurious contracts, 555
 Insolvent laws, 613
 Insolvents, discharge of, 506 n.
 Insurance, 551
 Interest, 549, 586, 595
 International law, 501
 Interpretation of foreign contracts,
 Interstate law, 501 [559, 561
 Intoxicating liquors, 556
 Judgments, 579
 Judgments in courts of sister State, 531
 Judgments in personam, 530
 Judgments in rem, 528
 Jurisdiction, domicil gives, 605
 Jurisdiction of action, 519
   Want of jurisdiction, 519
   Suits for negligence causing death, 521

Conflict of laws jurisdiction—Continued.

Suits on foreign statute, 522
 Garnishment of wages, 523
 Conflict of jurisdiction, 524
 Concurrent jurisdiction, 525
 Priorities, levies, and attachments,
 Jurisdiction of nations, 502 [527
 Jurisdiction to try offences, 539
 Law of place, 542
 Letters of credit, 597
 Lex domicilii, 573
 Lex fori, 575
Lex fori, proof governed by, 540
 Lex loci contractus, 513, 542
 Lex loci rei sitæ, 563
 Life insurance, actions on, 648
 Loan of money, 550
 Lotteries, 509
 Lunacy, disabilities of, 518
 Lunatics, 659
 Marriage, 598
 Marriage of persons divorced for Married women, 506 n. [adultery, 599
 Married women, domicil, 575
 Master of vessel, contract by, 574
 Mortgage, 567
 Mortgage of vessel, 552
 Municipal laws, 514
 National policy, contracts opposed to,
 Natural allegiance, 511 [558
 Naturalization, 513
 Nature of foreign contracts, 559
 Negligence causing death, 508 n., 521, 648
 Obligation of foreign contracts, 559
 Penal laws and offences, 536
   Territorial limitation of the operation of criminal laws and sentences, 536
   Attainder and infamy, 537
   When crimes committed in one country will be punished in another, 537
   Continuing offences, 538
   Jurisdiction to try offences, 539
 Personal property, 507 n., 552, 567.
 Persons acting in autre droit, 644 [574
   Foreign administrators and executors, 644
   When may act, 644
   Title of administrators and executors, 645
   Suits by and against, 646
   When may maintain action, 647
     Suit by assignee of administrator, 647
     Suit by administrator on policy on his decedent, 648
   Suits by foreign administrator for negligence causing death of his intestate, 648
   Suit against administrator, 649
   Suit by non-resident widow for allowance, 651

Conflict of laws, foreign—Continued.

Primary and ancillary administrations, 651
 Course of distribution in ancillary administrations, 653
 Property in transitu and ships at sea, 654
 Conflict between primary and ancillary administrations, 654
 Payment of debts to foreign administrator, 655
 Foreign guardians, 656
   How constituted, 656
   How administered, 657
     As to person of ward, 657 [658
     Power over domicile of ward,
     As to property of ward, 658
     Personal property, 658
     Immovable property, 658
 Lunatics, 659
 Place of contract, 546
 Pleadings and proofs, 539
   Foreign laws, etc., must be plead,
   Proof governed by lex fori, 540 [539
   Manner of proof, 541
 Pledge, 574
 Prisoners, discharge of, 525 n.
 Proof, manner of, 541
 Proof of contracts, 558
 Property, right to regulate, 513
 Railroads, actions against, 505 n.
 Real property, 563
 Revenue laws, foreign, 508 n.
 Sale valid according to lex loci contractus, but invalid according to lex loci rei sitæ, 569
 Set-off, 579
 Shipping, 574
 Sister State, laws of, 504 n.
 Slaves, disabilities of, 516
 Sovereign—subject, 510 n.
 Sovereignty of nations, 502
 Spendthrifts, disabilities of, 518
 Statute of limitations, 583
 Statutes, construction of, 504 n.
 Statutes, foreign, 508 n.
 Statutes giving action for negligence resulting in death, 508 n.
 Stock, transfer of, 574
 Succession and distribution, 639
   Succession, 639
     Movable property, 639
     Immovable property, 640
     Capacity to take, 642
       Devises to corporations, 642
       Devises for charitable purposes, 642
     Capacity of aliens to inherit, 643
   Distribution, 643
 Transfer of property, 502, 507
 Trusts, 633
 Usury, 550, 586
 Validity of contract where made, 552
 Wages, garnishment of, 523, 529

Conflict of laws—Continued.

Ward, domicile of, 658
 Ward, person of, 657
 Ward, property of, 658
 Wills and testaments, 630
   Personal capacity, 630
     Of movable property, 630
     Of immovable property, 632
   Trusts and execution of powers, 633
 Execution and revocation of wills, 634
   Change of domicile, 635
   Subsequent birth of a child, 635
 Construction of wills, 635
   As to interpretation of words, 635
   Designatio personarum, 637
   As to the effect of particular provisions, 637
   Adjudication by domiciliary courts, 638
 Authentication and proof, 638
   Of personal property, 638
   Of real property, 639
 Confusion of debts, 660
 Confusion of goods. See Accession, I., [50
 Congregation, 660
 Congress, member exempt from arrest, [50
 Conjoint capture, II., 730 n. [I., 727
 Consanguinity, 661
 Conscience, 661
 Conscious, 662
 Consent, 662
   Accessory, 665 n.
   Aider and abettor, I., 64
   Alteration of instruments, I., 503
   Assault, I., 784, 805
   Being put in danger, 667
   Bodily injury short of maim, 666
   Breach of the peace, 667
   Burglary, II., 671
   Death, 666
   Decoys, 665 n.
   Definition, 663
   Excuses only act consented to, 665 n.
   Fraud, 665 n.
   Inevitable accident, 664 n.
   Insane persons, 664 n.
   Intoxicated persons, 665 n.
   Limits of, 663
   Public welfare, 665
   Right to, 666
   Seduction, 156 n.
   Surgical operation, 666
   Volenti non fit injuria, 663
 Consequential damages. See Damages;
   Eminent domain, 667
 Consignation, 667
 Consigned, 667
 Consignor and consignee. See Carriers.
 Consolidate, 668
 Consolidated company, 668 n.
 Consolidation, I., 523 [Vol. IV.
 Conspiracy. See Criminal conspiracy,
   Accomplices, I., 62 n.
   Bail, II., 36

Conspiracy—Continued.
 Burglary, II., 668
 Conflict of laws, 537
 Constitution, 669
 Constitutional amendments, citizenship,
 Constitutional law, 670 [249
 Actions in rem, 715 n.
 Affidavit of defence, 724 n.
 Amendment of constitutions, 671
 Appeal, legislature cannot grant, 682 n.
 Appointment to office, 686 n.
 Appraisement laws, 756
 Arms, right to bear, 726
 Army, 706 n.
 Assessments, 709 n.
 Bankruptcy, 704 n.
 Bible in schools, 725 n.
 Bill of attainder, 690 n.
 Bill of credit, 690 n.
 Bill of rights, 672 n.
 Books and papers, seizure, 719 n.
 Business, State regulation, 727 n.
 Change of venue, 732 n.
 Charter, forfeiture of, 742 n.
 Chinese, 691 n.
 Cities, classification, 696 n.
 Citizens of other States, rights of, 708
 Citizenship, 708 n., 728 n.
 Civil rights act, constitutionality, 728 n.
 Civil rights and their guarantees, 713
 "Due process of law," 714
 Fourteenth and fifteenth amend-jury trial (civil), 719 [ments, 726
 Liberty of conscience, 724
 Right to bear arms, 726
 Right to obtain justice without purchase, 725
 Searches and seizures, 719
 Claims against government, 721 n.
 Class legislation, 695
 Common property of State, 709 n.
 Compacts between States, 690 n.
 Concealment of goods held in violation of law, 719 n.
 Conditional legislation, test of, 700 n.
 Conflict to be avoided, 679 n.
 Congress, powers of, 701 [cases, 729
 Constitutional guarantees in criminal
 Cruel and unusual punishments, 736
Ex post facto laws, 736
 Presentment or indictment, 729
 Right to be present at trial, 735
 Trial by jury, 731
 Witnesses and evidence, 734
 Constitutional rules of State comity, 707
 Rights of citizens of other States, 708
 Sister State judgments, 710
 Constitutions, construction and interpretation, 678
 Construction of constitutions, 678
 Contempt of court, 721 n.
 Contested elections, 721 n.
 Continuances, 732 n.
 Contracts, 741

Constitutional law—Continued.
 Contracts between individuals, legislative interference, 751
 Contracts, discharge of, 752 n.
 Contracts, laws affecting construction of, 752 n. [of, 741
 Contracts, laws impairing obligation
 Contracts, laws impairing validity,
 752 n. [741
 Contracts of State with corporations, Contracts, remedies and remedial process, 753 [lative, 748
 Contracts with private persons, legis-
 Convention called by Congress, 672 n.
 Copyright, 705
 Corporate powers, 742 n. [741
 Corporations, contracts of State with,
 Corporations, national, 706 n.
 Corporations not citizens, 728 n.
 Corporations, power of majority to accept amendment, 744 n.
 Corporations, remedies against, 743 n.
 Corporations subject to general laws,
 Counterfeiting, 705 [743 n.
 County, division of, 699 n.
 County seat, location of, 700 n.
 Coupons, Virginia cases, 749 n.
 Courts, access to, 709 n.
 Courts, legislation regulating, 693
 Courts, State and Federal, 681 n.
 Criminal cases, constitutional guaranties, 729
 Cruel and unusual punishments, 736
 Curative statutes, 715 n.
 Damages, assessment by court, 723 n.
 Debates of convention, 680
 Debt, creation by State, 691 n.
 Delegated powers, right to decide extent, 701 n.
 Delegation of powers, 698
 Departments of government, separate
 Divorce, 761 [provinces of, 681
 Divorce against non-resident, 715 n.
 Divorce proceedings, 721 n.
 Documentary evidence, 735 n.
 Dower, 721 n.
 Due process of law, 714
 Dying declarations, 735 n.
 Election, contested, 721 n.
 Election, corporate, 742 n.
 Election of legislative members, 691
 Embargoes, 703
 Eminent domain, 720 n. [lative, 684
 Encroachments of judicial on legis-Encroachments of legislative on judicial, 681
 Encroachments on execution, 685
 Equal protection of law, 727 n.
 Escheat, 718 n.
 Establishment of constitutions, 671
 Estoppel to deny constitutionality.
 Evidence, 734 [676 n.
Ex post facto laws, 736
 Exclusive privileges, 698

Constitutional law—Continued.

Executive powers, 686
 Expediency, 679 n.
 Extradition, 707 n.
 Fees, regulating, 696 n.
 Fifteenth amendment, 726
 Fourteenth amendment, 726
 Fourth amendment, 719 n.
 Freedom of speech, 713 n.
 Fugitive, who is, 707 n.
 Grant, when revocable, 742 n.
 Habeas corpus, 708 n., 714 n.
Habeas corpus, suspension, 688 n.
 Highway, private bill, 697
 Immigration, 703
 Imports, State taxation, 704 n.
 Imprisonment for debt, 713 n.
 Indictment, 729
 Infamous crime, 729 n.
 Injunctions, legislature cannot dis-insolvent laws, 721 n. [solve, 683 n.
 Interpretation of constitutions, 678
 Interstate commerce, 740 n.
 Interstate travel, 709 n.
 Judges, legislation regulating, 693
 Judgments, legislature cannot open, judgments, sister State, 710 [683 n.
 Judicial power, 704 n.
 Judiciary to determine constitutionality jurisdiction, 715 n. [of statutes, 673
 Jurisdiction, legislation regulating, 693
 Jurors, challenges, 731 n.
 Jury, composition of, 724 n.
 Jury of vicinage, 732 n.
 Jury, service on, 727 n.
 Jury trial, 719
 Jury, trial by, 731 [tracts, 741
 Laws impairing the obligation of contracts of the State with corporations, 741 [persons, 748
 Legislative contracts with private Legislative interference with contracts between individuals, 751
 Remedies and remedial process, 753
 Legal tender, 705
 Legislative intent, 677 [689
 Legislative power, nature and limits,
 Liberty of conscience, 724
 Lis pendens, 711 n.
 Local legislation, 695
 Local option, 700 n.
 Lunacy, inquisition of, 721 n.
 Mandamus, 721 n.
 Mandamus to governor, 685 n.
 Military order, 719 n.
 Ministerial duties, 685 n.
 Miscegenation, 729 n.
 Money, power to borrow, 705
 Municipal aid to railroads, 700 n.
 Municipal corporations, legislative control, 692 [affecting, 696 n.
 Municipal corporations, local laws
 Municipal ordinances, 674 n.
 National corporations, 706 n.

Constitutional law—Continued.

Naturalization, 705 [power, 689
 Nature and boundaries of legislative
 Delegation of powers, 698
 Legislation regulating courts, judges, and jurisdiction, 693
 Legislative control of municipal corporations, 692 [695
 Local, special, and class legislation,
 Navigation, 702 n. [682 n.
 New trial, legislature cannot grant,
 Non-suit, 723
 Non-user, 690 n.
 Oath of allegiance, 714 n. [741
 Obligation of contracts, laws impairing,
 Officers, appointment and removal,
 Officers, protection to, 678 n. [686 n.
 Offices, constitutional, 750 n.
 Ordinance of 1787, 671 n.
 Pardon, delivery of, 687 n.
 Pardon, effect of, 687 n.
 Partition, 715 n.
 Passenger traffic, 703
 Patents, 705
 Pensions, 706 n.
 Petition, right of, 713 n.
 Pilotage, 703
 Plea to the record, 711 n. [683 n.
 Pleading, legislature may regulate,
 Police power, 697 n., 716, 747 n.
 Police power, justification under, 675 n.
 Popular meaning preferred, 679 n.
 Power of the judiciary to determine the constitutionality of statutes, 673 Construction and interpretation of constitutions, 678
 Powers, necessary, 690 n.
 Presumption from lapse of time, 673 n.
 Prohibitions, implied, 690 n.
 Protection of officers, 678 n.
 Public schools, 725 n., 728 n.
 Punishment, cruel and unusual, 736
 Punishment of second offences, 738 n.
 Purchased territory, 706 n.
 Quartering soldiers, 714 n.
 Quo warranto, 721 n., 730 n.
 Railroads, 698 n.
 Recommendation to mercy, 688 n.
 Reconstruction, 672 n.
 Referees, 722
 Regulation of commerce, 704 n.
 Removal from office, 686 n.
 Removal of causes, 704 n.
 Repealing clause, effect of, 678 n.
 Requisitions, 707 n.
 Retroactive laws, 757 [laws, 758
 The invalid classes of retroactive
 The valid classes of retroactive laws,
 Return of bill, 687 n. [760
 Revenue laws, 698 n.
 Searches, 719
 Second offences, punishment, 738
 Seizures, 719 n. [government, 681
 Separate provinces of departments of Constitutional law, separate provinces of departments of government.—Continued.

Encroachments of legislative on judicial, 681

Encroachments of judicial on legislative, 684

Encroachments on executive department, 685

Sickness of prisoners, 735 n.

Soldiers, 698 n., 714 n.

Special legislation, 695

Stare decisis, 678 n.

State comity, 707

Statutes, curative, 715 n., 760 n.

Statutes, determining their constitutionality, 673

Statutes held not local, 696 n.

Statutes, independent provisions, 677

Statutes, legislative intent, 677 [696 n.]

Statutes, local and special distinguished,

Statutes, local and temporary distinguished, 696 n.

Statutes, practice in testing constitutionality, 673

Statutes, preamble, 673 n.

Statute with single object, 677

Stockholders, personal liability, 743 n.

Suffrage, right of, 709 n.

Summary proceedings, 721 n.

Supplementary proceedings, 721 n.

Sureties, remedies against, 721 n.

Tax deeds, 716 n.

Taxation, 705

Taxation, exemption, 747 n. [747 n.]

Taxation, exemption not transferable,

Taxation, rule of construction, 746 n., 747 n.

Taxes, collection of, 720 n.

Taxing power, limitations, 738

Treaties, 688 n.

Trial by jury, 731

Trial, place of, 732 n.

Tonnage duties, 703

Verdict, directing a, 723 n.

Vessels, registration of, 702 n.

Vested rights, what are, 759

Virginia coupon cases, 749 n.

Vote on acceptance of charter, 699 n.

Voting, 709 n.

War, power to declare, 706 n.

Weights and measures, 705

Whole to be considered, 679 n.

Witnesses, 734

Construction of a building, II., 603

Constructive trusts, I., 242

Consular courts, 768

Consuls and ambassadors, 764

Contagious diseases, I., 7 n.

Contained in a barn, II., 127 n.

Contemplation, 776

Contempt, 777

Abatement does not discharge, I.,

13 n., 5

Contempt—Continued.

Any person, by, 785

Attorneys, 782

Cause or matter, 47 n.

Clerks of court, 781

Congress, 778

Constitutional law, 721 n.

Contempt of court, 780 et seq.

Contempt of legislature, 777

Definition, 777

Disrespectful language, 785 n.

England, in, 779

Examiners in election case, 787 n.

Improper practices, 787 n.

Inferior courts, 801

Instances of what are not, 788

Insulting language to a judge, 785 n.

Interference with property over which the court has supervision, 787 n.

Jurymen, 782

Justices of the peace, 781

Legislature, of, 780

Miscellaneous matters, 802

Municipal legislatures, 780

Officers of court, 781

Parties to suit, 784

Penalty for, 795

Power of court to punish, 799

Proceedings in, 790

Publications, 786 n.

Purging, 797

Sheriffs, 781 n.

Unfair practices, 787 n.

Witnesses, 783

Contention, 803

Contents, 803

Contest, 803

Contested elections, 803 n.

Contiguous, 803

Contingency, 804

Continuances, 804

Absence of counsel, 808

Absence of papers, 815

Absence of party, 811

Absence of witnesses, 809

Affidavit for, 806

Agreement of counsel, 815

Application for, 805

Affidavit for, 806

Counter-affidavits, 807

How and when made, 805

Avoiding by admission, 820

Civil cases, 805

Constitutional law, 732 n.

Counter-affidavit, 804

Criminal cases, 805

Death, 810, 811

Definition, 804

Depositions, to await, 815

Determination of other proceedings, 816

Diligence, requisite, 819

Discretion of court, review of, 818

Evidence, newly discovered, 814

Evidence, time to procure, 814

Continuances—Continued.

- Grounds for, 808
  - Absence of counsel, 808
  - Absence of party, 811
  - Absence of witness, 809
  - Agreement of counsel, 815
  - Amendment of pleadings, 816
  - Inability to understand nature of oath, 817
  - Loss or absence of papers, 815
  - Mistake, 817
  - Nearness to time of crime, 813
  - Newly-discovered evidence, 814
  - Popular excitement, 812
  - Public holiday, 813
  - Surprise, 813
  - To await depositions, 815
  - To await termination of other proceedings, 816
  - To enable party to procure depositions, 814
- Holidays, 813
- Loss of papers, 815
- Mistake, 817
- Nearness to time of crime, 813
- New counsel, 809 n.
- Newly-discovered evidence, 814
- Oath, inability of witness to understand nature of, 817 [816]
- Pleadings, alteration or amendment of, [816]
- Popular excitement, 812
- Statutes, 804
- Surprise, 813

Contracts, 823-933

- Abbreviations, I., 16-18
- "About" in quantity, I., 33
- Acceptance, by conduct, 858
- Acceptance, communication of, 856
- Admiralty jurisdiction, I., 197-199
- Agency, 829, 862
- Agent, dealings against duty, 871
- Agent's power to perform, I., 367
- Agreement, acceptance, 842
- Agreement, conditions of proposal, 846
- Agreement contrary to law, 869
- Agreement, discharge by, 889
- Agreement, form of new, 892
- Agreement, new and inconsistent one, [891]
- Agreement, offers of reward, 846
- Agreement, proposal, 842 [891]
- Agreements, express and implied, 842
- Agreements, proposal to unascertained person, 846
- Agreements, unlawful, 869
- Agreement to draw formal writing, 852
- Agreement, what constitutes, 842 [928]
- Aliens, 877 n.
- Alteration of instruments, I., 497; III., [928]
- Ambiguity in, I., 541
- Arbitration, 881
- Assignees, 863
- Auctions, bidding at, 846, 886 n.
- Bankruptcy, discharge by, 929
- Bids for public work, 886 n.
- Boycotts, 886 n.

Contracts—Continued.

- Breach of, 903
- Bribery, 877
- Capacity of parties, 862
- Capacity of parties, personal, 902
- Change in law, effect of, 898
- Classification of common law, 825
- "Cleared," 281
- Cohabitation as a consideration, 828 n.
- "Compelled," 377 n.
- "Complete," "Completed," 383
- Compromise, 831, 837
- Conditions, 909
- Conduct, promise implied from, 860
- Conduct, proposal or acceptance by, [858]
- Conflict of laws, 542
- Consideration, 831
  - Contracts under seal, 827
  - Simple contracts, 830
- Constitutional law, 670
- Construction, 867
- Contracts of record, 830
- Corporations, 862
- Creditors, fraud on, 870
- Criminal prosecution, stifling of, 879
- Custody of children, 882
- Death revokes proposal, 851
- Deed, 826
- Deed cannot be varied or discharged by parol, 829
- Deed, ordinary rules of proposal and acceptance do not apply to, 859
- Definition, II., 124 n.
- Destruction of subject-matter, 901
- Discharge, 889
- Drunkards, 862
- Duress, discharge for, 933
- Duty imposed by law, 901
- Entire contracts, 916
- Estoppel, 828
- Executory, I., 229; III., 825, 846 n.
- Executory, express rescission, 889
- Express agreements, 842
- Forbearance, 831, 836
- Formal, 825
- Fraud on creditors, 870
- Fraud on marital rights, 872
- Good-will, sale of, 18
- Grant, 825
- Illegal contracts, 873 et seq.
- Illegality, general rules, 886
- Illicit cohabitation, 874
- Immoral consideration, 874
- Implied agreements, 842
- Implied promises, 860
- Impossibility of performance, 897
- Infants, 862
- Informal, 825
- Injury to third persons, 870
- Law of place, 856
- Letter, acceptance by, 856
- Letter of credit, 846
- Limitation of actions, 829
- Lunatics, 862

Contracts—Continued.

Mail, acceptance by, 856
 Marital rights, fraud on, 872
 Marriage, discharge by, 928
 Marriage, restraint of, 882
 Marriages, prohibited, 872
 Married women, 862
 Master and servant, 894
 Merger, 829
 Misrepresentation, rescission for, 929
 Mistake, discharge for, 933
 Moral obligation, 838
 Non-performance, 908
 Operation of law, discharge by, 928
 Option to discharge, 894
 Parent and child, no promise implied between, 860
 Partial performance, 920
 Parties, change of, 892
 Past consideration, 838
 Performance, discharge by, 895
 Persons affected by contract, 863
 Prohibited marriages, 872
 Promises, implied, 860
 Proposal, acceptance of, 852
 Proposal by conduct, 858
 Proposal, revocation, 850
 Public policy, 875
 Restraint of trade, 827 n., 882
 Restrictions against carrying on business, 18
 Revenue laws, 877 n.
 Revocation of proposal, 850
 Reward, offers of, 835 n., 846
 Sale of land, agency, I., 338, 343 n.
 Sale of offices, 877
 Seal, under, 825, 827, 829
 Severable, 925
 Simple contracts, 830, 841
 Statute, contrary to, 872
 Stock gambling, 873 n.
 Subsequent promise, 838
 Substantial performance, 923
 Telegraph, acceptance by, 856
 Tender, discharge by, 896
 Third persons, 863
 Third persons, injury to, 870
 Trades union, 886 n.
 Undue influence, discharge for, 933
 Unlawful agreements, 869
 Wagering contracts, 873
 Work done at request, 860
 Conveyances, conflict of laws, 565
 Copper cash, 35 n.
 Copyright, advertising cards, 140
 Charts, 139
 Constitutional law, 705
 Corporations. See Constitutional law.
 Contracts, 862
 Dissolution, reasonable cause, 45
Corpus delicti, confessions, 448
 Costs. certiorari, 67
 Champerty and maintenance, 79
 Counterfeiting, constitutional law, 705
 Counties, constitutional law, 699 n.

Courts. See Constitutional Law.
 Courts, consular, 766
 Coverture, conflict of laws, 518
 Credit in cash, 35 n.
 Criminal cases, 28
 Crops, chattel mortgage, 185
 Curative statutes. See Constitutional law.
 Damages, checks, wrongful dishonor, 225
 Dead body, clothes, 286 n.
 Death, in case of, 30 n.
 Debts and charges, 120
 Decoys, I., 65; II., 671
 Deeds. See Contracts.
 Demand, claim synonymous with, 275
 Devise. See Child, 229
 Divorce, character, 113
 Conflict of laws, 598, 601
 Constitutional law, 721 n.
 Dogs, 43 n., 169 n. [514, 605
 Domicile, conflict of laws, 499 et seq.;
 Dower, constitutional law, 721 n.
 Drafts, conflict of laws, 591
 Drummers, 315
 Drunkards, contracts, 862
 Duress, confessions, 469
 Dying declarations, constitutional law,
 Easements, 170 n. [735 n.
 Cemeteries, 49
 Eating house, 305 n.
 Ejectment, coal mine, 314 n.
 Elections. certiorari, 66 n.
 Contested, 800 n.
 Embezzlement, character, 113 [law.
 Eminent Domain. See Constitutional
 Escheat, constitutional law, 718 n.
 Exchange, 90
 Executions, conflict of laws, 579
 Library of attorney, 347 n. [tion, 379
 Executors and administrators, compensa-Extradition, constitutional law, 707 n.
 Factors, 317
 False news, 210
 False tokens, 210
 Fines, "clear," 281
 Fisheries, 166
 Fixtures, 166
 Fodder for cattle, 44
 Fornication, 161
 Fraud. See Cheat, 209
 Catching bargain, 37
 Character, 113
 Consent, 665 n.
 Free of charge, 120
 Game of chance, 88 n.
 Gaming contracts, 873
 Game of chance, 88 n.
 Geldings, 43 n.
 General average, 319
 Gift, chattels, 172
 Good-will, sale of, 18
 Grandchildren not children, 231 n.
 Grant a contract, 825 n.
 Circumstances raising presumption of,
 240 n.

- Guardian, compensation, 379
   Conflicts of law, 656
 Habeas corpus, certiorari, 67
   Conflict of laws, 525 n.
   Constitutional law, 670
 Heirlooms, chattels, 165
 Highways, cattle in, 43 n.
   Certiorari, 65 n.
   Change of grade, 89 n.
 Hogs, 43 n.
 Holidays, continuances, 813 [37 n.
 Homestead, "casualty or necessity,"
 Homicide. See Chastity, 158
   Character, 111, 112
 Horses, 43 n.
 Husband and wife. See Community property, 350
 Ice, 166
 Immigration, constitutional law, 703
 Imports. See Constitutional law.
 Imprisonment for debt, constitutional law, 713 n.
 In cash, 35 n.
 Indians. See Citizenship, 245
 Inevitable casualties, 37 n.
 Infamous crime, constitutional law, 729 n.
 Infancy, conflict of laws, 517
   Contracts, 862
 Injunctions, 47 n.
   Constitutional law, 683 n.
 Inn, coffee-house not, 305 n.
   Eating-house not, 305 n.
 Insane, conflict of laws, 518
   Consent, 664 n.
 Insolvency, conflict of laws, 613
 Insolvency, contemplation of, 776 n.
 Insolvent circumstances, 240 n.
 Insurance "Atlantic coast," 288 n.
   Change in the property, its use or occupation, 89 n.
   Change of possession, 89 n.
   Change of title, 89 n.
   Conflict of laws, 551
   Consignee, 668 n.
   "Contiguous," 800
 Interest, conflict of laws, 549, 586, 595
 International law, conflict of laws, 501
 Interstate commerce, 253 n., 254 n.
   Constitutional law, 670
 Interstate law, conflict of laws, 501
 Intoxicating liquors, champagne, 68
   Conflict of laws, 556
 Intoxication, confessions, 442
   Consent, 665 n.
 Inventory, complete, 383
 Joint tenancy, 168
 Judicial cognizance, 306 n.
 Jury. See Constitutional law.
   Charge, 121 n.
 Kerosene, 287 n.
 Larceny, wife's clothes, 286 n.
 Lease, "certain," 58 n.
 Legal tender, constitutional law, 705
 Legislature. See Constitutional law.
 Letters, contracts, 856
 Letters of credit, conflict of laws, 597
   Contracts, 846
 Libel, 407 n.
   Character, 112 n.
   Chastity, 162
   Class, 278 n.
 Library of attorney, exemptions, 347 n.
 Lien, coffee-house keeper's, 305 n.
   Commission merchants, 333
 Life insurance, casualties of war, 37 n.
Lis pendens, constitutional law, 711 n.
 Lotteries, conflict of laws, 509
 Lunacy. See Constitutional law.
 Lunatics, contracts, 862
 Malicious prosecution, character, 113
 Malpractice, character, 113
Mandamus, change of venue, 91
   Civil cause not a, 47 n.
   Constitution law, 685 n., 721 n.
 Map. See Chart, 138
 Mares, 43 n.
 Marriage, conflict of laws, 598 [575
 Married women, conflict of laws, 506 n.,
 Master and servant, illegal contracts,
 Masturbation, 163 n. [876 n.
 Miscegenation, constitutional law, 729 n.
 Misnomer, confessions, 494
 Mistake, confessions, 442
   Continuances, 817
 Mobs, 47 n.
   Confessions, 470
 Monkeys, 169 n.
 Mortgages, "clandestine," 277
   Foreclosing, special cases, 23 n.
 Municipal aid bonds, constitutional law,
 Naturalization, citizenship, 246 [700 n.
   Conflict of laws, 513
   Constitutional law, 705
 Naval forces, cases arising in, 22
 Navigable streams, "cleanse," 279 n.
 Navigation, constitutional law, 702 n.
 Negligence, character, 113
   Conflict of laws, 508 n., 521
 New trial, constitutional law, 682 n.
 Notice, certiorari, 65 n.
   Forged check, 224
 Oath, 22
 Officers, compensation, 379
   Constitutional law, 670
 Official bonds, class, 278
 Oxen, 43 n.
 Oysters, 170 n.
 Pardon, constitutional law, 687 n.
 Parent and child, contracts, 860
 Parrots, 169 n.
 Partition, "special cases," 25
 Partnership, composition with creditors,
   Real estate, 167 n. [387
 Patent fuel, 287 n.
 Patents, 48
   Constitutional law, 705
   Pensions, "claimant," 277
   Constitutional law, 706 n.

- Perjury, "certificates," 59 n.
 Personal property. See Chattels, 163
 Pews, 165 n.
 Pigs, 43 n.
 Pilotage, constitutional law, 703
 Pledge, 176
     Conflict of laws, 574
 Police power. See Constitutional law.
 Poor, casual, 36 n.
 Prevention of cruelty to animals, charitable trusts, 127 n.
 Prostitute. See Chastity, 160 Credibility, 163 n.
 Public lands, pre-emptioner not a claimant, 277
 Public policy, contracts, 875
 Quare clausum fregit, 307 n.
 Quo warranto, constitutional law, 721 n.
 Rape. See Chastity, 158
     Character, 112.
 Real property, conflict of laws, 563
 Reasonable time, conditional sales, 434 n.
 Receivers, compensation, 379
 Religious societies, charitable trusts, 122
 Removal of causes, constitutional law, 704 n.
 Rent, certain rent, 58 n.
 Restaurant, 305 n.
 Restraint of trade, contracts, 882
 Revenue law, 17. 877 n.
     Collector's certificate, 59 n.
 Rewards, contracts, 835 n., 846
 Riparian rights, 166
 Sale for cash, 31 n.
 Sales, good-will of business, 18
 Schools, 725 n., 728 n. See also Constitutional law.
     Common school, 346 n.
 Seduction. See Chaste, 156
     Character, 113
 Servants, compensation, 379
 Set-off, conflict of laws, 579
 Sheep, 43 n.
 Shipping. See Charter-party, 143
     Change of moorings, 89 n.
 Ship's husband, 668 n.
 Signature, forged check, 222
 Slander. See Chastity, 160
     Character, 112 n., 114 n.
     Masturbation, 163 n.
 Slaves, citizenship, 249
 Sleep, confessions, 442
 Stage, 287 n. [583
 Statute of Limitations, conflict of laws,
 Statutes. See Constitutional law
     Clause, 278
     Chapter headings, 109 n.
 Steers, 43 n.
 Step-children, 232
 Stocks, "claims," 274
     Chattels, 166
     Wagering contracts, 873 n.
 Summary proceedings, constitutional law, 721 n.
 Supplementary proceedings, constitutional law, 721 n.
 Taxation. See Constitutional law
     Certiorari, 65 n.
     Charities, 138 n.
 Telegraph, contracts, 856
 Tenancy in common, 168
 Travellers, concealed weapons, 411 n.
 Treasury notes not cash, 34
 Treaties. See Constitutional law
 Trespass, character, 113
 Truck wagon, 20 n.
 Trusts for charitable uses, 122
 Unavoidable casualties, 37 n.
 Unchaste. See Chaste, 156 [chants, 319
 Usage and customs, commission-mer-
     Comparative negligence, 373
     Conditional sales, 435 n.
 Usury, conflict of laws, 550, 586
 Virtue, 156 n.
 Vote, casting, 35 n.
 Voters. See Constitutional law
     Citizenship, 252 [523, 529
 Wages, conflict of laws, garnishment,
 Warehouse receipt, commission mer-
 Warrant, certainty, 59 n. [chant, 320 n.
 Weights and measures, constitutional
 Wild animals, 169 n. [law, 705
 Will. See Codicils, 291
     Children, 229
     Annuity "clear," 281
     "Certificates," 60 n.
     Clothes, 286 n.
 Witnesses, character, 116
 Words, actionable words, 163 n.
 Words and Phrases:
     "A certain calf of the neat cattle Accused of crime, 121 n. [kind," 43 n.
     Act complained of, 381 n.
     Actual change of possession, 90 n.
     Actual confinement, 497 n.
     Actually chargeable, 122 n.
     Administer, or cause and procure to be administered, 48 n. [ed, 661 n.
     Affintiy and consanguinity distinguish-
     And there deliver at freighter's risk and expense the same on being paid
     Any other cause, 44 n. [freight, 147
     Any party to a cause, 47 n.
     Arrest, woman, of a, 497 n.
     Asses, 43 n.
     Atlantic coast, 288 n.
     Beef steer, 43 n.
     Beeves, 43 n.
     Brass knucks, 409 n.
     Building, commencement of, 314.
     Business, carrying on, 16
     By chance, 88 n.
     Capital cases, 28
     Care and protection, 157
     Cargo, 147
     Carriage, 19
     Carry, 16
         Arms, 16 n.

Words and Phrases, carry—Continued.

Away, 16 n.
 Off, 16 n.
 Out, 19 n.
 Carrying on business, 17
 To sell, 19 n.
 Cart, 19
 Cartways, 20 n.
 Cas, 20
 Case, 21
 "Case affecting" contrasted with
 "Cause affecting," 22
 Case arising in a justice's court, I., 717 n.
 Case arising in the naval forces, 22
 Case arising under a treaty, 21 n.
 Case arising under treaties, I., 717.
 Case at law, 26
 Case in law and equity, 21 n.
 Case of admiralty and maritime juris-
 Case stated, 29 [diction, 22
 Case, special, defined, 23
 Cases affecting ambassadors, 22
 Cash, 31
 Notes, 34
 Payment, 32
 Value, 34
 Cast, 35
 Away, 35 n.
 Casting vote, 35 n.
 Casual, 36
 Casual poor, 36 n.
 Casualties of war, 37 n.
 Casualty, 37
 Casualty or necessity, 37 n.
 Catalogue, 37
 Catchings, 43
 Cattle, 43
 Cattle guards, 43 n.
 Cattle turned loose, 43 n.
 Cause, 44
 Cause affecting persons who, etc., 47 n.
 Cause of action, 46 n.
 Cause of action shall accrue, or shall have accrued, I., 142 n. [717 n.
 Cause of action shall have arisen, I.,
 Cause of complaint, 44 n.
 Cause of removal, 44 n.
 Cause or matter, 47 n.
 Cause remaining untried, 47 n.
 Cause to be taken, 47 n.
 Causes and suits, 47 n.
 Caveat, 48
 Cease, 48
 Cease to be operated, 48 n.
 Cease to inhabit, 48 n.
 Cease to reside, 48 n.
 Ceased to be thereon, 48 n.
 Ceasing to reside, 48 n.
 Cede, 48
 Cedula, 48
 Celebrate, 48
 Celebrate a marriage, 49 n.
 Celebrating a rite, 48 n.
 Cellar, 49

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Certain, 58
 Rent, 58 n.
 Certainty, 58
 Certificate, 59
 Chain, 67
 Chair, 67
 Chairman, 68
 Chambers, 68
 Champagne, 68
 Chance, 88
 Chancellor, 89
 Change, 89 [occupation, 89 n.
 Change in the property, its use or Change its original purpose, 89 n.
 Change of grade, 89 n.
 Change of possession, 89 n.
 Change of title, 89 n.
 Change of moorings, 89 n.
 Change the form or ground of action,
 Changed, 89 n. [89 n.
 Channel, 108
 Chapel, 109
 Chapter, 109
 Chapter headings, 109 n.
 Charcoal, 118
 Charge, 118
 Charge and accuse, I., 143 n.
 Charge and discharge, 119
 Charge on holding, 120
 Charge to enter heir, 120
 Charge to jury, 121 n.
 Chargeable, 122
 Chargeable thereby, 122 n.
 Charged with capital offence, II., 728 n.
 Charged with crime, 121 n.
 Charges, 120
 Charging order, 121 n.
 Charging the hundred, 121 n.
 Chariot, 122
 Chart, 138
 Charter, 141
 Chase, 155
 Chaste, 156
 Chastity, 158
 Cheat, 209
 Chemist, 228
 Cherokee, 228
 Chevisance, 228
 Chicory, 228
 Chief, 229
 Child, I., 205 n.; III., 239, 417
 Childish, 234
 Children, 229
 China, 234
 Chinese, 234
 Chip, 234
 Chocolate, 234
 Choice, 234
 Choose, I., 631 n.; III., 234
 Chose, 235
 Chose in possession, 235
 Chose local, 235
 Chose transitory, 235

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Chosen freeholders, 235
 Christian, 238
 Christian name, 239
 Chuck-a-luck, 239
 Cider, 239
 Cipher, 239
 Circuit, 239
 Circular, 240
 Circular notes, 240 n.
 Circulating medium, 240 n.
 Circumstances, 240
 Circumstances of terror, 240 n.
 Citation, 240
 Cite, 241
 City, 256
 Civil, 256
 Civil action, 257
 Civil cases, 26
 Civil cause, 47 n.
 Civiliter, 273
 Civilliter mortuis, 273
 Civilization, 273
 Claim, 273
 Claim of comisance, 277
 Claim of liberty, 277
 Claimant, 277
 Claiming under, 276
 Claims and effects, 274
 Clandestine, 277
 Clandestinely provided, 278 n.
 Class, 278
 Clause, 278
 Clay, 279
 Clay pits and mines, 279 n.
 Cleanse, 279 n.
 Clear, 279
 Clear deed, 280
 Clear, in the, 281
 Clear land, to, 281
 Clear of all incumbrances, 280
 Clear of assessments, 280
 Clear of charge, 280
 Clear of expense, 280
 Clear out a highway, 281
 Clear title, 280
 Clear yearly rent, 280
 Clearance, 282
 Clearly convinced, 279 n.
 Clearly established, 279 n.
 Clerical, 286
 Close the bargain, II., 124 n.
 Clothes, 286
 Co., 287
 Coach, 287
 Coal, 287
 Coal mines, 288 n.
 Coal privileges, 287 n.
 Coal wagon, 20 n.
 Coals worked out, 288 n.
 Coast, 288
 Coasting trade, 288 n.
 C. O. D., 289
 Code, 290

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Codification, 290
 Coffee-house, 305
 Coffe, 305
 Cognate, 306
 Cognizance, 306
 Cognizance and control, 306 n.
 Cognovit, 307
 Cohabit, I., 211 n.; III., 308
 Cohabitation, 308
 Coin, 309
 Coin money, to, 309 n.
 Coinage, 310
 Coins, gold, silver, and copper, 310 n.
 Collar, 310
 Collateral, 310
 Collation, 311
 Collatio bonorum, 311
 Collect, 312
 Collectable, 312
 Collected, 312 n.
 Collection, 312
 Collector, 312
 Colliery, 313
 Color, 314
 Come, 314
 Comfort, 314
 Coming, 314
 Commencement of a building, 314
 Common, 346
 Common assurances, 347
 Common labor, 347 n.
 Common law, 347
 Common pleas, 347 n.
 Common proceeding, 347 n.
 Common school, 346 n.
 Common sewer, 347 n.
 Communicate, 349
 Communication, 349
 Community, 349
 Commutation, 36
 Compact, 365
 Company, 366
 Compelled, 377
 Compensation, 378
 Competency, 380
 Competent, 380
 Competent authorities, 380 n.
 Competent clerk, 380 n.
 Competent court, 380 n.
 Competent evidence, 380 n.
 Competent party, 381 n.
 Competent persons, 381 n.
 Competent to dispose by will, 381 n.
 Complain, 381
 Complainant, 381
 Complaint, 381
 Complaints, 381 n.
 Complete, 382
 Complete cargo, 383
 Complete purchaser, 383
 Completed, 383, 384
 Completing, 382
 Completion, 382

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Completely issued and negotiated, 382
 Compulsion, 407
 Compute, 407
 Conceal, 407
 Concealed, 408 n.
 Concealment, 416
 Concealment, II., 75 n.
 Conception, 420
 Concern, 419
 Concerned, 419
 Concerned in the loss, 420 n.
 Concerns, 419
 Condemnation, 420
 Condition, 422
 Condition precedent, 423
 Condition subsequent, 423
 Conditional contract, 423
 Conduct, 438 [heretofore been, 438 n.
 Conducted, rights of fishery as it has Conducting actions or suits, 438 n.
 Confectionery, 234 n.
 Confederacy, 438
 Confidence, 497
   Game, 497 n.
 Confidence of the community, 349 n.
 Confinement, 497
 Confirmation, 498
 Confiscation, 421
 Confusion of debt, 660
 Congregation, 660
 Conjunct capture, II., 730 n.
 Consanguinity, 661 [guished, 661 n.
 Consanguinity and affinity distin
 Consistence, 661
 Conscious, 662
   Of what he is doing, 662 n.
 Consent, 663
 Consignation, 667
 Consigned, 667
 Consolidate, 668
 Consolidated company, 668
 Constitution, 669
 Construction of a building, II., 603
 Contained in a barn, II., 127 n.
 Contemplation, 776
 Contemplation of bankruptcy, 776 n.
 Contemplation of insolvency, 776 n.
 Contempt of court, 777 n.
 Contention, 800
 Contents, 800
 Contest, 800
 Contested elections, 800 n.
 Contiguous, I., 190 n., 191; III., 800
 Contiguous proprietors, 800 n.
 Contingency, 804
 Contracts, bargains and agreements, II.,
 Copper cash, 35 n., 310 [124 n.
 Credit in cash, 35 n.
 Criminal cases, 28
 Counter-claim, 274
 Court of competent jurisdiction, 381 n.
 Customary dispatch, 149
 Dangers of seas excepted, 148

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Deadly weapons, 409 n.
 Dean and Chapter, 110 n.
 Debts and charges, 120
 Despatch in discharging, 149
 Directly, 146 n.
 Dogs, 43 n.
 Driving or conducting cattle, 43 n.
 Due, 188 n.
 Due cause, 44 n.
 Due cause shown, 44 n.
 Empty, 148
 Estimated cash value, 34
 Exchange, 90
 Ex post facto, 737 n.
 Facts of his case, 29
 Final disposition of a cause, 47 n.
 Fodder for cattle, 44 n.
 For cash, 35 n.
 For cause, 44 n.
 Forthwith, 146, 193
 For whom it may concern, 420
 Free chapel, 109 n.
 Free of charge, 120
 Freight on right delivery, 147 n.
 Full cash value, 34
 Full and complete cargo, 147 n.
 Game of chance, 88 n.
 Geldings, 43 n.
 General rules of arithmetic, 239 n.
 Good cause, 45
 Good cause of action, 47 n.
 Good cause shown, 45
 Hogs, 43 n.
 Horn chains, 67 n.
 Horses, 43 n.
 Immediately, 146 n.
 In case of death, 30 n.
 In cash, 35 n.
 In each case, 29
 In the clear, 281
 Incident to the navigation of the river,
 Incorporated company, 366 n. [148
 Inevitable casualties, 37 n.
 Insolvent circumstances, 240 n.
 Instrument adapted to coining, 310 n.
 Irresistible superhuman cause, 45
 Joint-stock company, 366 n.
 Just compensation, 378 n.
 Justifiable cause, 45
 Justly due, 188 n.
 Kerosene, 287 n.
 Legal cause, 45 [696 n.
 Local and temporary distinguished,
 Lying in wait, 407 n.
 Manufacturing company, 366 n.
 Mares, 43 n.
 Moral certainty, 58 n.
 Nature and cause, 45
 Oath or other competent proof, 381 n.
 On arrival, 432
 Other cause, 45
 Other lawful merchandise, 147
 Owing, 188 n.

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Oxen, 43 n.
 Person in charge, 121 n.
   Composing the company, 366 n.
 Pigs, 43 n.
 Plying coastwise, 288 n.
 Previous chaste character, 157
 Priority of charge, 120
 Private chapels, 109 n.
 Probable cause, 45
 Proximate cause, 45
 Reasonable cause, 45
 Reputation, 156
 Said company, 366 n.
 Sale for cash, 31 n.
 Same cause, 46 n.
 Satisfactory cause, 46 n.
 Seams of coal, 313 n.
 Sheep, 43 n.
 Ship's company, 366 n.
 Ship's husband, 668
 Sit in any case, 30 n.
 Special cases, 23 n.
 Stage, 287 n.
 Steal, 16 n.
 Steer, 43 n.
 Suit, controversy, matter or cause depending 47 n.

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Taxed cart, 20 n.
 Terms cash, 34
 The company, 366 n.
 This cause, 47 n.
 To arrive, 432
 To be employed, 148
 To clear land, 281
 To "clear out," 281
 To load a full and complete cargo, 147
 To pay in current coin, 310 n. [366 n.
 Trading or other public company,
 Transportation company, 366 n.
 Truck wagon, 20 n.
 Turnpike, 366 n.
 Twelve months certain, 58 n.
 "Two cattle," 43 n.
 Two disinterested and competent men,
   381 n.
 Unavoidable casualties, 37 n.
 Virtue, 156 n.
 When house is completed, 383
 With all convenient speed, 146
 With all possible despatch, 148
 Workable coal seam, 288 n.
 Working cattle, 44 n.
 Working days, 149
 Written statement or certificate, 60 n.

Stanford Law Library

3 6105 063 660 125

